Now, I submit to my friend who has charge of this bill that statistics which take more than two years to gather and an indefinite time to tabulate and formulate are statistics of no value or of comparatively little value. Especially is that true when we now have a bureau in the Department which furnishes the statistics and prints a volume called the Mineral Resources of the United States, which volume not only comprehends gold and silver, but comprehends in ample degree all the minerals in the United States, such as coal, iron, petroleum, copper, and everything else that can be gathered within its folds as representing the mineral resources of our country.

These statistics have been thus gathered and are being now gathered by a corps, which I undertake to say is a trained force, of competent and intelligent men in this city and in this country, who produce an annual volume of immense value to the people of the United States, and at a total expenditure of $50,000.

It is here suggested that we shall have statistics gathered, allowing two years and four months to gather them, when we will have laid upon our tables at least two volumes of statistics covering the whole question within the period in which those statistics are to be gathered. If we are not to have these volumes, and thus a duplication, then in our next appropriation bill we will be obliged, if this prevails and supersedes the other inquiry, to dismiss the force, which is ample and competent and which is now doing exactly what is proposed here to be done in two years and four months.

Mr. McCUMBER. I should like to ask the Senator where they will get the data in order to give us annually the records of our mines and mining and all that he has spoken of, unless they get it through the Census Office or some officers authorized to get definite information of it?

Mr. ALLISON. The census law which this amends provided that precisely this information should be gathered and that it should be published on the 1st of July, 1903. Now, if I understand the object of a decennial census, aside from the question of population and direct taxes, it is that we may compare decennially the growth and development of our country; and therefore we have hitherto gone into these elaborate schedules, requiring very exact information for the decennial period. This inquiry will be of value if it shall be carried out as section 8 of the original law requires it shall be and a report be made in 1903, because under this provision this information, if it shall be given at all, will be given in such way as to run it very nearly into the thirteenth decennial census.

That is why I object to that. But I merely call attention to it now with a view of saying that, unless we are to have duplication, we will find ourselves in a position where we will have a long list of competent and intelligent and trained clerks put out of the civil service in order to put others into it; and if that is not the effect, we will have a large number of competent people who must be discharged entirely from the service, and who, under the law of 1893 and the rules made under it, can only get in by applying within a year.

Now, it goes without saying that all those who are thus turned out will be seeking an opportunity to reenter the service within a year. That opportunity may come to them if they can find favorably disposed a Secretary of the Treasury, or a Secretary of War, or a Secretary of the Navy—not a Secretary of the Interior, because I understand, unless I misinterpret the wishes and desires of the committee, that this Bureau is to continue, until we pass the commerce department law, in the Interior Department, and therefore if it is a bureau in the Interior Department, I take it at least that these clerks could take vacancies in other bureaus of the Interior Department.

But it seems to me, and I mention it now with a view to expressing my own opinion, that as this bill now stands it establishes a separate and distinct department in this Government. We have just within a month created a new department; and now we are called upon by this bill, unless it is amended, and I suppose it is perhaps intended to amend it, or, if it is not, we are called upon here now to make another department of Government; for under this bill as it stands the Census Office is a distinct and separate department of this Government, and is made so by the measure before us.

I will be glad to have the Senator from Wisconsin tell me whether that is or is not the purpose.

Mr. QUARLES. The purpose and the only purpose of this bill, as I understand it, is to change the character of the Census Office from a temporary, peripatetic affair into a permanent office. The destiny of this office will be determined of course by the fate of a bill which is now being considered or about to be considered in another place. If the other House shall agree with us, then this permanent bureau takes itself under the new department. If not, it remains as a bureau in the Interior Department, and I can not understand by what process of reasoning my distinguished friend would exaggerate it into a separate department by itself.

Mr. ALLISON. I am very glad to have that explanation. The bill provides:

That the Census Office temporarily established in the Department of the Interior in accordance with an act entitled "An act to provide for taking the Twelfth and subsequent censuses," approved March 3, 1899, is hereby made a permanent office.

This bill goes on in every feature of it to provide that the Director of the Census shall appoint all the officers and all the persons who are to engage in the work. That is manifestly unconstitutional and needs amendment so as to put these officers within the purview of appointment by a head of a department. I see the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] is looking at the Constitution. I hope he will quote that clause. If that is the purpose, then this bill will have to be amended in a great many parts. The Constitution says the President shall have power to appoint—all other officers of the United States whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for, and which shall be established by law; but the Congress may by law vest the appointment of such inferior officers, as they think proper, in the President alone, in the courts of law, or in the heads of Departments.

Mr. MCCUMBER. What section is that?

Mr. ALLISON. I read from section 2 of article 2, respecting the powers of the President.

Mr. QUARLES. If the Senator——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BURTON in the chair). Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. ALLISON. Certainly.

Mr. QUARLES. I would venture to call the distinguished Senator's attention to section 5, where there is a specific method pointed out for the selection of every one of those so-called officers and employees, namely, the method prescribed by the civil-service act, so called.

Mr. ALLISON. That applies——

Mr. LODGE. That covers the clerical force, if the Senator will allow me to say so.

Mr. ALLISON. I know, and that is the very thing I am criticising.

Mr. LODGE. But it leaves the skilled laborers and the whole body of lower appointments subject to the objection of the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. ALLISON. Yes, but I am now making a criticism upon all of the provisions of this statute, which provides that the Director of the Census shall employ all the clerks, all the statisticians, all the experts. He can only do that under the Constitution if the Director of the Census is the head of a department. That is the criticism I make. Therefore while the Senator from Wisconsin thinks I have an extraordinary view, I merely express a view which I find on the face of these papers and documents, which gives to the Director of the Census the power and the authority of the head of a department.

Then I will call his attention to another thing which gave me some trouble when I looked at it casually, and that is, the bill says the Census Office "is hereby made a permanent office," without saying that it is an office under the Interior Department, as all bureaus must be, if they are under that Department, or if they are under any other department, it must be so stated. Now, it is not sufficient, I submit to the Senator, that we shall hang this Department or Bureau in the air—suspend it, as somebody's coffin was said to have been suspended—until we see the end of the commerce department bill, which is now pending in another body; and if this is an independent department, as I undertake to say it is, judging from the whole scope and range of its provisions, then what becomes of the bill we passed the other day creating a department of commerce and industry, which provided that the Census Bureau should be transferred from the Department of the Interior to the department of commerce, which would be an impossibility if in the meantime by law it has been made an independent department of the Government? Of course, I understand that the statute may be amended in the processes that bills go through here so as to avoid that difficulty.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator a question for information. The Senator has quoted the Constitution of the United States, and it interested me. Does the Senator now contend that, inasmuch as the Director of the Census appointed all the officials who are now serving, he did it in violation of the Constitution of the United States?

Mr. ALLISON. I will answer the Senator.

Mr. GALLINGER. That is, under the existing statute?

Mr. ALLISON. Of course, this is to continue the existing statute, but I undertake to say that if we had put into play some of the provisions of the original law of 1900, wherein it is made a penal offense to refuse to give an appointee of the Director information which he is authorized to require, it would have been an answer in a criminal procedure to have said that this man was not an officer of the United States. Whether these appointments have been made directly or actually, whether formally or informally, by the Secretary of the Interior, I do not know. But I know how that statute was passed. The Senator will probably recollect. At least, it is my recollection——

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

Mr. ALLISON. If the Senator will allow me just a moment——

Mr. GALLINGER. Certainly.

Mr. ALLISON. It is my recollection that it was sought then to make it an independent department and segregate it from the Secretary of the Interior, and we had here, if I remember rightly, a considerable debate upon that subject, and finally upon a yea and nay vote we inserted "the Secretary of the Interior" about the close of the discussion of the bill, and it passed in that form. That was a temporary bill, and if there was in a fair degree a violation of this declaration of the Constitution it was overlooked and never corrected. But now we are to make here an office which is to be eternal, we hope.

Mr. GALLINGER. Now, if the Senator will permit me just a word, of course I am not going to undertake to controvert his construction of the Constitution, it seems to be pretty explicit, but it does seem to me extraordinary that Congress passed a law vesting in the Director of the Census the power of appointing some 3,000 clerks who have been in office two or three years without question, and that now the Constitution is invoked to prohibit that same officer from doing the very thing he did under the act which was passed here, and I think without the Senator's opposition in that particular.

Mr. ALLISON. Undoubtedly in that particular, and I have explained what I remember as to the fact that there was then a condition, as I am glad there is not now, for I understand this now is within the purview of the bureau.

Mr. GALLINGER. I want to add, if the Senator will permit me, that I feel very sure the Secretary of the Interior was never consulted about these appointees. A document which came to me showed conclusively that, in certain cases, the Director of the Census had appointed them on his own volition entirely.

Mr. ALLISON. Very likely; and I want to say for the Director of the Census that so far as I know—and I think I know much of the subject—I believe he has been wise in the selection he has made. I know a great many of the people who are in important positions; I will say that none of them are from my own State, but they are gentlemen who are highly qualified for the work assigned to them severally. I mention Mr. North, of New England, who has charge of the manufacturing branch, who is certainly one of the best men who could possibly be assigned to that duty. So of Mr. Powers.

Mr. GALLINGER. And Mr. Wines.

Mr. ALLISON. So of Mr. Powers, in charge of agricultural statistics, and Mr. Wines, who is the assistant director, which I see has been omitted here in this bill. Mr. Wines is certainly a most competent person.

So I am not criticising the Director of the Census at all. I think he has done wisely and well as respects the organization and the methods used and the materials gathered together for the purpose of taking the census.

Mr. President, when I speak of this I speak of it because it has been my fortune in some other instances to know that the rule in regard to the Constitution is imperative. We thought in the organization of the Library of Congress to in some way arrange as respects the employees of that great department, and we found that there was no way constitutionally whereby we could do it except to put the Librarian at the head of it and create it a department of the Government in order that he might have the power of making appointments; and thereby we put him in a position where he is now absolute in his power as to all the persons employed in his service, and he has to report to no one except to Congress. That is true as to the Library.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

Mr. ALLISON. In a moment. If it had been possible to have arranged that otherwise, it would have been so arranged when the Library provisions were adopted.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. ALLISON. Certainly.

Mr. TILLMAN. I have listened with a great deal of interest to the Senator's exposition of the Constitution.

Mr. ALLISON. I am not explaining it. I merely read it.

Mr. TILLMAN. Well, the Senator seems to have discovered a vice.

Mr. ALLISON. Oh, no.

Mr. TILLMAN. Then the mention of the fact that the Constitution vests the appointments of officers in the heads of departments and that the Director of the Census is not the head of a department was a mere academic discussion on the part of the Senator.

Mr. ALLISON. It was not. I was clearly stating——

Mr. TILLMAN. I thought the Senator was endeavoring to point out a provision of the Constitution which makes it obligatory upon Congress not to vest such an appointment in anyone except the heads of departments.

Mr. ALLISON. No; and I——

Mr. TILLMAN. And as the Director of the Census is a subordinate officer in the Interior Department, we, to that extent, as pointed out by the Senator from New Hampshire, have been guilty of a lapsus, so to speak.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not so consider it. It was in the original Census act of 1899, and therefore in the provisions for the temporary census.

Mr. TILLMAN. It does not follow that we might not have forgotten the Constitution away back yonder. I suppose the time-honored breach of this proposition may have given it the sanction of constitutional law.

Mr. ALLISON. I raised the question. I understand that——

Mr. TILLMAN. I am going to ask the Senator's attention to another extraordinary provision, which the Senator from Texas called attention to yesterday, but as he is out of the Chamber I will ask him to give his opinion on it, and that is in regard to the permanency of the appointments.

In section 3 it is provided that the permanent Census Office shall be in charge of a Director of the Census appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and so on. It does not state the length of time for which he shall be appointed. Is he to be appointed during good behavior or, like the judges of the Supreme Court, is he to be appointed for life? That appears to me to be a provision that ought to be amended by fixing some time, four years, eight years, ten years, twenty years, or any other time you want, but still there should be some limitation somewhere.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. Will the Senator allow me to introduce a couple of bills for reference?

Mr. TILLMAN. Certainly. I am just asking the Senator from Iowa to give us the benefit of his opinion and long experience here. I have found him possibly the best-equipped man in this Chamber, and I always listen to him with a great deal of interest. I learn a great deal every time he speaks.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. ALLISON. I yield to the Senator from Indiana.

[The bills introduced by Mr. FAIRBANKS appear under their appropriate heading.]

Mr. TILLMAN. Now, if the Senator will permit me a little further, I will call attention to the fact that the previous censuses have been considered temporary. I mean the working machinery particularly. The provision that the appointment of the subordinates in taking the census shall be in the power or gift of the Director will not obtain hereafter if we are going to make this a permanent part of the department, and therefore the Senator's constitutional objection must lie, I should think.

Mr. ALLISON. I have no doubt about it, but I only suggest that. Now, as to the office itself. As I understand the bill now, as it appears, the office comes under the usual range of offices not having a fixed term. Of course there are a number of such.

Mr. TILLMAN. We have none except the judges, have we?

Mr. ALLISON. I should think that probably we have. I am not quite sure, but I do not think our ministers abroad——

Mr. TILLMAN. They are largely matters of change of party.

Mr. GALLINGER. Collectors of internal revenue have no fixed term. National-bank examiners have no fixed term, and there are other such officers.

Mr. ALLISON. There are a great many who have not a fixed term. The consuls are appointed without a definite term. I do not know of any bureau officer or any departmental officer here who has not a fixed term.

Mr. TILLMAN. That is what I was calling attention to. The Senator from Texas yesterday mentioned it. He is not now here.

Mr. TELLER. I should like to ask the Senator from Iowa if he does not think that there should be a fixed term for this office? Of course, heretofore, when the Director was appointed to complete a census it was not necessary to make a fixed term, but it seems to me that when it becomes a permanent bureau the term should be fixed.

Mr. ALLISON. I should hope the committee would consider that, if they have not considered it.

Mr. TILLMAN. Of course if it is a department of the Government you would not expect to have a fixed term. We do not have a fixed term for the Secretary of the Interior or the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. ALLISON. They are Cabinet officers.

Mr. TILLMAN. They come in with a party and they go out with a party. When the President goes out they generally go out, too. I do not know, but I suppose the President would have the right to remove this man at any time.

Mr. ALLISON. I suppose he would have that right.

Mr. TILLMAN. But I should think it would be well to fix a term, say, of four years, which is the custom.

Mr. ALLISON. That is a matter of detail which I think the committee will present.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me, before he passes from this constitutional question that, as a layman, somewhat interests me, let me ask him if he is clear that when the Constitution speaks of officers, or even inferior officers, it means clerks and messengers and the army of census enumerators who must necessarily be employed by the Director of the Census? Does the Senator mean to argue that these small positions must necessarily, because of the constitutional provision, come under the head of a department?

Mr. ALLISON. I do not mean that as to enumerators. Enumerators may be employed, and that is the usual way. The Secretary of the Interior employs agents. The Commissioner of Indian Affairs makes employment. But I submit to the Senator, as I do to the lawyers of the Senate—I believe I am not regarded as one of the fraternity, especially——

Mr. TELLER. I thought you were.

Mr. ALLISON. Especially on matters of constitutional law.

Mr. SPOONER. You are mistaken about that.

Mr. ALLISON. I thank the Senator. But wherever we have a secretary, wherever there is a salary attached, I take it that that is a minor office; I take it that these gentlemen who so well dispose of our business here in various methods and ways are all officers of this Government. They are officers of the Senate, and under the Constitution they are provided for in that way. So I think there can be no question about it. However, I did not mean to argue that question. Of course that does not apply to enumerators. It depends upon the statute whether it would apply to supervisors. If they were employed at so much a head or so much a day, I should think they would not come within the purview of the Constitution.

I drifted away by accident or incident from what I was trying to say about this provision. I think the amendment suggested by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] might be a wise one, although I am not sure but that if a Secretary of the Treasury would want to take an accomplished young man or woman from the Census Office to do some work in the Treasury Department he might designate her for that work and go through the processes—because there are processes—necessary to enable him to secure the services of that young man or young lady. But that I have found is a vain hope. In two or three instances people have come to me and said, "I should like to get into the Treasury," or in some other Department. I would ask, "How do you expect to get there?" They would say to me—and I will state that this happened before the present Secretary came in, I have had no such application since—"If you will get the Secretary of the Treasury to call for me, then I can easily get the Postmaster-General to assent to my transfer."

Mr. GALLINGER. On that point, if the Senator will permit me, I should like to ask him what the modus is whereby the Civil Service Commission draw clerks from the several departments to aid them in their work, which is being constantly done, increasing their own force at the expense of the departments?

Mr. ALLISON. Well, that is another circuitous method whereby some people seem to be able to do what they wish to do.

Mr. GALLINGER. Exactly.

Mr. ALLISON. And some other people have not that opportunity. I understand that the Commission have the right under the law to ask for clerks. I think, in fact, there was a provision in the original statute of 1883 that the Commission might draw upon the various departments for service and have clerks assigned. It would be, I think, rather rare when a Secretary of the Treasury would refuse such a request from the Commissioners. He would take care, I think, to send the poorest clerk to serve the Commission. I think that would be the rule, although I do not know. He might send his best one. But what I wanted to say as respects the section is that, when it is finally disposed of, it will result in many people being disappointed, and when they are disappointed they will, of course, find fault with somebody, and perhaps properly.

But there is another thing I should like to ask the Senator from New Hampshire, who is familiar with this whole business, as he is with everything connected with our Government, and I want to ask him that in order that I may answer the suggestion made by the Senator from South Carolina. The Senator from South Carolina said it was probable that after we extended this blanket of protection over these people, who are now numbering 1,800, or whatever the number may be, and when it became necessary that of that number 800 should be picked up and discharged with a proper certificate of merit and there were no charges of any kind as to their record, in the struggle that will come between Senators from different States and Representatives from different States and from the same State as to who shall be picked out for slaughter and who shall be retained for three months longer, I might not fare as well in the dismissals as the Senator from South Carolina, and there would be favoritism.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, I hope the Senator——

Mr. ALLISON. I want to say to the Senator, if he will allow me just a moment, and then I will yield, that there is a provision in the law of 1883, and I have it here before me, which I want to call the attention of the Senate to, which I fear may not be sufficiently guarded in this fifth section.

3.—

These are the duties of the Commissioners—

Appointments to the public service aforesaid in the Departments at Washington shall be apportioned among the several States and Territories and the District of Columbia upon the basis of population as ascertained by the last preceding census.

Mr. TILLMAN. Right there will the Senator permit me?

Mr. ALLISON. Certainly.

Mr. TILLMAN. I had the temerity to make inquiry the other day of the Civil Service Commission to know how South Carolina stood, and I was informed that she had only 71 per cent of her quota of appointees in the departments at Washington, showing that some other States have more than their quota; and yet the representatives of South Carolina here, at least this one, can not get anybody by the civil-service barrier or get the just proportion of appointments which the State is entitled to.

Mr. ALLISON. If South Carolina has only 70 per cent of her quota some other State must have 110 per cent possibly.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me, I will state that the trouble comes from the District of Columbia and two or three States adjoining.

Mr. TILLMAN. But how does it come, if the law is obeyed?

Mr. GALLINGER. The law is not obeyed. That is the point.

Mr. TILLMAN. Very well. Then, it seems to me, if the Senator from Iowa will permit me, that we ought to put some kind of a leverage somewhere to screw down or screw up this machine. I hope the Senator from New Hampshire will join in helping to screw it up.

Mr. ALLISON. I have no doubt he will. As I see it here, I presume the Senator from New Hampshire is ready to say that his State is credited with very few people.

Mr. TILLMAN. It is a very small State, you know.

Mr. ALLISON. It is small as compared with Texas or New York.

Mr. TILLMAN. Or Nevada.

Mr. ALLISON. Now, Mr. President, if these people are to be covered in as a body (and I am not criticising the action of the committee in proposing to do this), we should so cover them in as to do justice under the civil-service law which protects them or is to protect them. So, if it shall turn out that this blanket is spread over them, it ought to turn out also that there should be a provision here that in minimizing the number from 1,800 to 700 or 800, removals or discharges should follow the second section of the civil-service law, so that the States under the civil service shall, in the spirit and essence of the law itself, be protected in this blanket covering.

Mr. TILLMAN. Do I understand the Senator to suggest that we incorporate a provision here which would require the Director of the Census in selecting persons for retention that they shall be pro rata among the States?

Mr. ALLISON. No, sir; not exactly that. We can not do that here.

Mr. TILLMAN. If we simply have it understood that that is the opinion of the Senate I think we can safely leave it to the Director, if we do not tie him up so tight that his natural fairness and desire to be regardful of the rights of even the minority will be overcome by the pressure from his own party.

Mr. ALLISON. I should say, "Having due regard for the second section of the act approved January 16, 1883," so that by some statutory provision we shall call his attention to it; that is all. I think that would be sufficient.

Mr. TILLMAN. I desire to say here, since I have mentioned it, if the Senator will permit me, that, so far as I have seen and experienced the workings of the Census Bureau, the Director has been absolutely fair and even generous toward the minority. So I am not criticising in any degree his action, if we do not pass some act here in making the Bureau permanent that will tie his hands.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, that is all I desire to say upon this particular point.

Mr. STEWART. Mr. President, while this matter of putting clerks who have been in the service under the protection of the civil service is before the Senate, I desire to put myself on record as being totally opposed to the present method of securing service in the departments. It has an element in it which in all ages, so far as we have any record, has led to unfair means and, perhaps, corruption. It has the element of secrecy about it. The public at large, although a few people may know it, do not know how a person gets into office through the civil service. They do not know upon what basis they are marked; they do not know how they are selected, and how it is all done. This undoubtedly could be explained if the people had access to the information, but they have not. It is all much of a mystery. Thousands of people have made trial to get in, have been examined, and they are now on the waiting list.

I do not believe that this is the best way to select men for office. I think we should bring to bear some of the practical experience that great corporations—the railroad companies, who are so successful in the management of their affairs—use in selecting their employees. There should be more attention paid to the effectiveness of the parties in the particular line. Six months or a year of service is a great deal better test than any casual examination. There are a great many questions which are entirely irrelevant. Some persons can not get in who make the best and most efficient clerks. They can not answer these far-fetched questions; they are not right from school.

As I said, we have thousands of people on the waiting list. I do not believe in the system at all. The great objection to the system is that the people do not know how it is done.

I believe that every man is naturally honest; but he can only be kept so by publicity. Where there is secrecy, there is always a chance for fraud and an opportunity to go into fraud. There is undoubtedly favoritism. We hear of it every day. The people are constantly talking about this service. It is a mystery to them. I believe in that portion of the civil service which retains competent and meritorious officials. I do not believe in them being turned out every time a new Administration comes into power.

The mode of selecting these officials is, I think, entirely defective. The old mode, which was called "the spoils system," had some defects, but it was better in many respects than the present, and secured for the Government better clerks. Before the civil service was inaugurated there was a chance for the departments to secure good clerks, for the reason that the heads of the departments had more discretion in the selection; but it was defective by reason of the fact that it permitted Senators and Representatives to make their recommendations orally. If the old system could be corrected and its defects cured by securing publicity, it would give us a most efficient service.

If Senators and members of the House of Representatives were allowed to nominate the clerks in the departments on receiving notices that vacancies existed—if they had to make the appointments from their States or their districts—and the names of the nominees had to he posted up in the departments for sixty days, if there was anything wrong about them, if they were deficient in character or in ability, the searchlight of public opinion would be turned on them, and the people in the respective districts would make objections. Then, at the end of the sixty days, if the nominee was not suitable, the head of the department would be informed, and the nominee would be rejected. That would also be a check on Senators and members and would keep them straight.

Mr. SPOONER. Would not that give to Senators and Members more trouble than they have now?

Mr. STEWART. No; the trouble would not be so great as it is now, because each Senator and Representative would have so many appointments allotted to him, and he would only make nominations as vacancies occurred. It would not be difficult for a Senator or a member of the House of Representatives to nominate six or eight or ten clerks a year from his State or his district, and the people of the State or the district would keep him informed as to the character of the persons to be nominated. This would prevent the appointment of unworthy persons.

But, as I have said, the great objection to the old system was that Senators and Representatives suggested appointments orally and secretly. The oral and secret recommendations should be done away with. There would then be much more responsibilities and much more care exercised in making nominations. No trouble occurs about the nominations at West Point and Annapolis. The greatest care is maintained in the selections of proper persons to pass the competitive examinations. There is seldom any scandal in relation to those appointments, because they are public, and the responsibility is somewhere; but where is the responsibility as to appointments now? Who knows who is responsible for the way people are selected and how they get into the public service?

I am opposed to the present system, and I want to go on record to that effect, because the time will come when the people will rise up against it and overthrow it. It puts all the power of appointment in a few hands, and we do not know and can not know how it is exercised.

Mr. TILLMAN. Will the Senator allow me a question?

Mr. STEWART. Any question.

Mr. TILLMAN. I do not think that examinations, so far as I have been able to discover, display favoritism or any lack of fairness; but it is the appointments from the list of eligibles that appear to me to be fundamentally wrong, because the officials are allowed to select them from three on the list, instead of having the matter arbitrary and forcing the appointing officer who has a vacancy in his department to take the highest man or the highest woman, the one who has won it, under the rule which they themselves have established.

As it is now, he is given an option. He may reject all three if he wishes and call for a fourth, and if the fourth person on the list is the one whose pull with the department officer is greater than that of the others he will get the appointment. You see the unfairness that exists in that feature; but the Senator and I, of course, are absolutely interdicted from doing anything toward improving the civil-service system. I do not want to do anything toward tearing it down, because it is the only barrier that Senators and Members of the House of Representatives have between them and the insane asylum, I think, from the importunities of the officeholders. [Laughter.]

Mr. STEWART. I do not believe there would be much importunity if we merely had the nomination of the persons to be appointed. There has been very little importunity in regard to the appointment of cadets to West Point and Annapolis, because members have to select from their own districts and select upon their responsibility. I do not know but that the examinations are fair; I do not charge that they are not; but they might not be fair and the world would not know it. That is my objection to the present system. I do not know that the selections from the list of eligibles are unfair; they may not be fair; but the world will not know whether they are fair or not. The fact is, I do not like the present system because we do not understand the machinery, and we can not see it. The people of this country want to know how they are governed; and this is a system of government they do not understand and can not understand. I confess I do not understand how it is done. It may be done fairly, but the public does not know whether it is or not. Let the system be simplified, and let us understand how it is done, and then the people will be better satisfied.

Senators talk about importunity. There would be less importunity if the appointments were made upon the responsibility of Senators and Members of the House of Representatives having the appointment of five, six, or ten appointees in the course of a year, or one, two, or three, as the case might be, as vacancies occur. Then there would be no importunity. As to the people around here who are impecunious, who excite so much sympathy, and who want us to help them, if the proper system were inaugurated, we should be relieved from their importunity, because they would see that it was useless, and Senators and Members would select people with a view to their ability to properly perform the functions of the office.

Mr. TILLMAN. Will the Senator from Nevada pardon a suggestion?

Mr. STEWART. Yes.

Mr. TILLMAN. The Senator is so far away from his constituency and it is so numerous that of course he does not really understand the situation.

Mr. STEWART. Oh, that is an intimation that Nevada is not as thickly populated as South Carolina. The Senator is very much mistaken as to that. The population of Nevada is periodically quite large.

Mr. TILLMAN. The Senator is aware that the usual test is the number of people to the square mile. I think Nevada has less population now than in 1868, when she was admitted into the Union.

Mr. STEWART. Oh, no; let me tell the Senator that Nevada has increased in population 10,000 in the last year. There have been discoveries of mines there in the last year which surpass the discoveries made in any State in the last twenty years; and Nevada will have by the time of the next census a good population. Nevada is all right.

Mr. TILLMAN. I am not casting any reflections on Nevada. I merely suggest to the Senator that he is relieved of the importunities from which the rest of us suffer. Even I, from South Carolina, with only 1,340,000 population, am pestered, although I am in the minority and have absolutely no influence or pull anywhere.

Mr. STEWART. I have been here a long time and know a great many people, and if the Senator does not think that applicants come to me from all parts of the country as often as to other Senators he is very much mistaken. I have been importuned as much as anybody, and I know the inconvenience of being importuned when you can do nothing for the people who apply to you. I want to put a certain responsibility on each Senator and Representative, so as to secure the best appointments, and when they have discharged that responsibility that will be the end of it. They will soon learn that there will be less importunity and less scandal than there is now.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will ask the Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART], and, if he will permit me, at the same time the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN], if the importunity that now comes to public men is not very largely from people who are already in the civil service asking for promotions, for transfers, and all that sort of thing? On one occasion in this Chamber I said I thought the civil-service law ought to be amended so that when people were put in the civil service they would not be permitted to importune members of the House and members of this body to secure promotions for them or transfers for them. That is the class of importunity that comes to me.

Mr. STEWART. I will say that I was here two terms before the civil-service law was passed, and we had then as good service in the departments as we now have, and I must say that I had less importunity then than I now have, because then they saw there was but very little to be done, and now almost all of them want something done, and but very little can be done.

So far as this bill is concerned, I have no doubt that the employees who have had experience in the Census Office have been much more fairly examined and have proved their efficiency in a much more satisfactory way than those who have been appointed after examinations which have very little to do with the particular work to which they are to be assigned. If the census clerks should be transferred to other departments, we should get a better class of clerks than we now get under the mysterious system which prevails, for many of the civil-service questions are abstract and mysterious and can only be answered by those who have just come from colleges and schools. An ordinary man can not answer such questions as are propounded. I do not suppose that five members of the Senate could go through a civil-service examination for a clerkship in any department. That does not prove the fact that Senators would not make fair clerks—that is, those of them who can write well enough—but still they could not pass the civil-service examinations. Such examinations, as I have said, can only be passed by those who are fresh from schools and colleges, who have had no experience in clerical work, and who have had no trained habits of work or industry, but who have the education which enables them to answer these conundrums.

I do not believe that is the way to get an efficient service. I do not believe there is any railroad company desirous of employing a conductor, for instance, who would examine him in astronomy or in botany or in a great many of the things that the Civil Service Commissioners require. No railroad company would subject a conductor or anybody who was to be placed in an important position on the railroad to any such examination. I think most of the questions asked in these examinations are entirely irrelevant and relate to matters with which persons will have nothing to do in the event of their appointment, but the persons who have been in the Census Bureau and have proved their efficiency will make the best clerks that can be obtained for the departments. There is no doubt about that, because they have had the experience and have already undergone such an examination as tended to develop their capacity for this kind of work. The civil-service examinations as they are conducted are of no consequence, and great harm has been done by the thousands who are now on the waiting list being kept out of other employment. This is doing injury to the country. I think we should try some other mode of putting men in office.

I like that part of the civil-service law which keeps men in office when they are there and are useful and valuable, but the wholesale changing of clerks and employees whenever there was a change of Administration did incalculable damage.

As I have said, we can secure competent clerks and employees without all this mysterious machinery we have, which nobody understands, but which keeps thousands on the waiting list, to the injury of the industries of the country, and under which we do not get as good service as we should otherwise get.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment submitted by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE].

Mr. GALLINGER. I send to the desk, and ask to have read, a proposed amendment to the bill, which at the proper time I shall offer.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment intended to be proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire will be read.

The SECRETARY. In line 18, on page 3, section 5, after the word "thereunder," it is proposed to insert:

And persons who have served as soldiers in any war in which the United States may have been engaged, and the widows of soldiers, shall have preference in the matter of certification.

Mr. DUBOIS. Mr. President, I send to the desk——

Mr. GALLINGER. Does the Senator desire to go on now?

Mr. DUBOIS. I send to the desk an amendment to the pending bill.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let it be read.

Mr. DUBOIS. Yes; let it be read. I give notice that I shall offer it at the proper time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment intended to be proposed by the Senator from Idaho will be read.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to amend by adding at the end of section 9 the following:

To enable the Director of the Census to perform the duties prescribed by this section, true and accurate reports shall be made to him annually by all corporations engaged in manufacturing, which reports shall state in detail the nature of the business or different lines of business, if there be more than one conducted by such corporation; the number of factories or establishments owned or controlled by it; the precise character of the business conducted at each factory or establishment and the gross receipts of such business; the amount of the capital stock and the proportion of which has been fully paid up; the surplus, the operating expenses, wages, taxes, both national and State, together with detailed statements as to the quantity of its product or products sold for export; the prices per unit obtained therefor; the rebates, if any, allowed upon products sold for export and the prices charged to dealers in the United States; any and all agreements with other corporations, companies, or individuals engaged in manufacturing the same or similar products for the maintenance of uniform prices; the limiting of production or with reference to the wages of labor, and all arrangements with transportation companies for specially advantageous freight rates.

Such reports shall be verified by the president, manager, or chief officer of the corporation, who, upon the demand of the Director, shall furnish such additional details as said Director may deem necessary to apprise him fully of the nature and extent of the business and the methods applied in its management. The failure by the president, manager, or chief officer of any manufacturing corporation to make the reports herein provided for, or any intentionally false statements concerning any matter set forth in a report which he does make, shall, for every such offense, be punished by a fine of not less than $1,000 or more than $5,000, or imprisonment for not less than one month or more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

All information thus obtained by the Director of the Census shall be permanently filed in his office, in convenient and accessible form, be classified, and published annually.

Mr. QUARLES. Now, Mr. President, I hope we may have a vote on the pending amendment.

Mr. GALLINGER. A word before the vote is taken. I do not think it necessary for me to say anything in advocacy of the amendment I have sent to the desk. I feel sure that the Senator in charge of the bill will agree that that amendment is a proper one to be made. It simply gives under this bill the same preference to soldiers and the widows of soldiers that will be found in most of our statutes where appointments are made to public office. I want to say, however, a few words about the pending matter in a general way.

Mr. President, perhaps I may be pardoned for suggesting that my intimate relations with the Civil Service Commission on a certain memorable occasion warrant me in having opinions. The total number of persons in the Census Office at the present time, as is shown by a document on our desks, outside of certain technical and special employees, is 2,217. Of these, 159 were appointed in 1899, 1,890 in 1900, 151 in 1901, and 17 in 1902. The figures may not be absolutely exact, but they are very nearly exact.

So that from this it appears, Mr. President, that there are now in that office 159 persons who have been there approximately three years, 1,890 who have been there approximately two years, and only 168 who have been appointed during the years 1901 and 1902; so that these persons have had a large experience and, beyond a question, are competent to discharge the duties that they will be called upon to discharge in any department of the Government.

It must be borne in mind, Mr. President, that all of these clerks had a severe ordeal to pass before they received appointments in the Census Office. Many of the clerks who have passed the civil-service examination successfully have told me that the examination they were obliged to undergo to enter the work of the Census Office was even more severe than it was under the Civil Service Commission.

The original civil-service act was passed in 1883. That act I have no disposition to find fault with. It protects the clerical force of the Government and prevents them from being discharged promiscuously upon the change of an Administration. I think in that respect it is a very desirable statute. There is one feature of it, however, that I as a layman have never been able to quite grasp. I have been taught that legislative bodies can not delegate legislative power. I think that is a general proposition; and yet, Mr. President, under the provisions of some act—I think not this civil-service act, but under some other statute—by Executive order the civil service has been extended so as to sweep into it tens of thousands of people who were not included in the original act. They have been taken from above, and they have been taken from below.

They have taken watchmen, laborers, and those who are higher in position than the ordinary clerks. I have always doubted whether that was a proper thing to do; and yet it has been done, and is being done. In view of that fact, Mr. President, it seems to me that the opposition that is made to putting these few hundred clerks, who have had from two to three years' experience and have passed a very rigid examination, into the classified service has not much force.

Mr. CULLOM. Will the Senator allow me to make a brief statement?

Mr. GALLINGER. Certainly.

Mr. CULLOM. I was told that over 600 of these people passed the civil-service examination before they got into the Census Bureau.

Mr. GALLINGER. I have no doubt of it. As I have said, Presidents by simple Executive order, by a scratch of the pen, have swept into the classified service tens of thousands of men and women who could no more have passed a civil-service examination than the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN] could run the dirigible balloon of Santos-Dumont; and I know some of them.

Mr. TILLMAN. He has not been able to run it himself so far, has he? [Laughter.]

Mr. GALLINGER. No; not very well.

Only a few days ago, Mr. President, the President of the United States, at the suggestion, I suppose, of somebody, discovered that there were several hundred—I do not know how many; I do not know but that there were a thousand—people in the rural free-delivery service in this country. I happen to know one of those clerks who tried the civil-service examination twice, but did not succeed in passing, and yet by a scratch of the pen of the President of the United States those hundreds of people are in the classified service to-day, and but a very small proportion of them could possibly have passed the civil-service examination.

A few years ago the force outside the civil service in what was then the Second Auditor's Office, now known as the Auditor for the War Department, was put into the civil service by Executive order.

Mr. STEWART. And in the Government Printing Office also.

Mr. GALLINGER. Exactly. I will get to that in a moment. And yet, Mr. President, we are told here, with apparent seriousness, that great danger is going to come to the public service if we take six or seven or eight hundred clerks who have had two or three years' service under a man who has demonstrated his capacity for managing men and women, who passed a very severe examination when they entered the service, and put them in the classified service. I do not think there is any danger about it at all, and I think, Mr. President, that we ought not to hesitate about passing that feature of the bill.

Mr. CULLOM. If the Senator will allow me, I missed the figure by over 100; it is over 700, instead of 600.

Mr. GALLINGER. Over 700, instead of 600, Mr. President.

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART] asks me if that does not apply to the Government Printing Office. It does. The Government Printing Office is in the classified service to-day, in my opinion, without any authority of law.

I do not think I violate any secret when I say that there is in the Government Printing Office, in stereotyped plates, an opinion of an Attorney-General of the United States saying that, under the statute, that workshop was not properly included in the classified service. It is true that that opinion has not been promulgated, but I understand that the opinion was written and was put in type, and beyond all question it states the precise legal aspect of that case.

Mr. TILLMAN. Will the Senator tell us what Attorney-General was so cowardly that he did not have manhood enough to promulgate his own opinion?

Mr. GALLINGER. I think the Attorney-General could not have promulgated his own opinion.

Mr. TILLMAN. Without being removed himself?

Mr. GALLINGER. No; I think not. I think he was asked to give an opinion, and that opinion was written, and the party to whom it was rendered might or might not have promulgated it.

Mr. LODGE. The Senator does not mean to say that the Civil Service Commission put the Government Printing Office under the civil-service law?

Mr. GALLINGER. Of course not; but the Civil Service Commission, Mr. President, has been reaching out and grasping power every day of its life. It is here to-day, and it is everywhere where there is anything that it can grasp. The President of the United States has recently issued an order that the postal clerks of this country and the post-office clerks of this country must not ask a member of Congress to vote for a bill that would give them a fair salary. If they ask it, it is at their peril. Yet this Civil Service Commission is here, and it is everywhere, grasping power and exerting more power than the President of the United States, his Cabinet, and both Houses of Congress combined. There is no doubt about it.

But I am not going to make an attack upon the Civil Service Commissioners. They are like all the rest of us; they are human, and they want more power than they have got to-day if they can get it, and as long as Congress continues to allow them to grasp power they will continue to grasp it. There is no doubt about that.

I wish that the question as to whether, by Executive order, a statute such as is before me now can be extended so as to include 50,000 people or more who are not included in that statute is a constitutional statute? The test never has been made. I wish that it had been made.

Mr. SPOONER. Whether it was a valid order?

Mr. GALLINGER. Yes.

Mr. CULLOM. It does not give him power to make the order.

Mr. GALLINGER. It does not. It is claimed there is another statute that does; but it is a very vague and indefinite statute under which this thing is done.

Now, Mr. President, a few words more and I am done. I do not care to discuss this matter very much. I am going to vote for this bill. I am going to vote for any reasonable amendment that is offered to it, of course, because I do not imagine it is a perfect bill. I think very likely it is an imperfect bill in many of its features. The Senator from Massachusetts says that there are hundreds of young men who ask to be appointed to consular places, and who do not get appointments, and thereby they are disappointed, and he uses that as an illustration to show that if these six or seven hundred young men and young women are put in the classified service they may not get appointments, and we ought to save them from that disappointment.

If it could be known—and no one can furnish that information but the Civil Service Commission, and I think I shall ask for it some of these days—how many young men and young women who have left their homes have gone to the cities and spent from $5 to $10 on each pilgrimage to take the civil-service examination, who have passed the examination and have been put on the eligible list, have waited for one year and been dropped from it, and have gone again and been examined and been dropped from it, and have gone again and been examined and dropped from it—if the truth could be known and the expense it has been to the young men and the young women of this country could be aggregated, I think it would appall the Congress of the United States, and we can all imagine the disappointments it has brought to these young people.

I have in my mind a young lady who passed three examinations, a year apart, in this city, and she passed at a very high rate. She is from my own State. She did not get an appointment. She left in despair and is doing other work; and all over our country this condition of things exists, and yet the Commission are holding examinations all the time. One is scheduled for my city in the near future, and yet the eligible list is loaded down with hundreds and thousands of names that never will be reached for certification, and these young men and women are destined to disappointment.

Not only that, Mr. President, but the young man who takes the civil-service examination and passes it nine times out of ten is not worth anything for business purposes. He expects to get a Government job, as he calls it, and he waits a year and he takes the examination again, and he waits another year, and he is enervated. I have a pathetic letter in my desk in the committee room from the father of a young boy who took the examination two years ago. He tells me that the boy is not worth anything because he expects to get Government employment, and he appeals to me to get him something to do in the Government service. I have known many and many such cases.

So far as my State is concerned I do not know whether it is properly cared for in the Departments or not. I know it to be true that the rolls of every Department of this Government, so far as appointments from New Hampshire are concerned, are loaded down with people who never have been heard of in the State of New Hampshire for the last twenty-five years. The son of a dead Senator from a Western State is on the rolls at a high salary credited to the State of New Hampshire, and the only claim he has upon the State is that his mother was born in New Hampshire. I do not know who put him there. Such men, even if they once belonged to the State, do not come home to vote. They do not contribute for political purposes. They are of no earthly account to the State, and do not belong to the State, and there ought to be some way of weeding them out. But there is not. The Civil Service Commission say they are there and they have to stay there until they die, and I presume that is a fact.

The distinguished Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON], who always instructs us, and who is usually correct, says that these people, if they get into the civil service, can not be transferred. I do not think that is true.

Mr. ALLISON. Can not be transferred?

Mr. GALLINGER. Can not be transferred. That is what I understood the Senator to say.

Mr. ALLISON. They may be transferred under rule 10, I understand.

Mr. GALLINGER. Did not the Senator argue that they could not be transferred?

Mr. ALLISON. I think in the beginning of my observations I did say that this statute was not quite so clear upon that subject as I wish it were, but I said I believed, and so I believe, that their chance of being transferred is very limited.

Mr. GALLINGER. I know that transfers are going on all the time. There is no question about that, and I have no doubt that these young people will have a chance to be transferred if they get into the service as the bill proposes.

Mr. President, I of course am very modest about making a suggestion on a constitutional or a law question since the lecture I got from the distinguished senior Senator from Alabama once because I suggested that I did not pretend to know any law, and I repeat now that I do not pretend to know any law, except I believe law has been defined as common sense, and I believe I possess a trifle of common sense.

The Senator from Iowa has cited the Constitution to show that the power of appointment can not be lodged in the Director of the Census, and he says an office is any place that has a salary attached to it. If that be so, we have been violating in our legislation the Constitution of the United States ever since the Senator from Iowa has been a member of this body, and that is a great many years. Turn to the very act creating the Civil Service Commission itself, which is the most powerful organization in the world, according to my judgment, and you will find that—

Said Commission is authorized to employ a chief examiner, at $3,000 a year.

And they may employ a stenographer and a messenger—$1,600 for the former and the latter at $600 a year—and, as I said a moment ago, the Director of the Census for three years has been employing this large force of clerks, and he was given authority to do it in the statute that created the Census Office, and nobody has found fault, and I think it is a trifle late to raise a constitutional argument in opposition to the passage of that feature of this bill. We are certainly doing it and have been doing it, and nobody has raised a question as to its constitutionality or unconstitutionality, and I have no fear it will attach if this bill becomes a law.

Just one word more and I am done. New Hampshire has not fared very well in the Census Office, but that does not make any difference to me. I turn to this document again and I find that the State of Maryland has a percentage as between the clerks and the number of gentlemen who represent her in the two Houses of 11⅝ per cent.

Mr. TELLER. How much?

Mr. GALLINGER. Eleven and five-eighths. New Hampshire has 3½, and the civil-service State of Massachusetts has nearly 5. The District of Columbia has a very large representation. I think the District has the greatest pull there is on earth. Some people talk about a political pull, but when it comes to a social pull we politicians are not in. And recently three very competent clerks from New Hampshire have been dropped from the roll of the Census Office, while this tremendous preponderance in favor of the District of Columbia and two or three States near Washington continues.

Mr. McCOMAS. Will the Senator from New Hampshire permit me for a moment?

Mr. GALLINGER. Certainly.

Mr. McCOMAS. He spoke a while ago of the persons whose parents lived in New Hampshire years ago and settled here and who had been appointed from New Hampshire. An immense number of persons have been appointed from Maryland and Virginia who have not been in those States for many years.

Mr. GALLINGER. I presume that is true.

Mr. McCOMAS. Then other persons come here from distant States, and they go out in the suburbs and get a home, and when they are promoted or transferred they are registered as from Maryland, and thus Wisconsin and Iowa and New Hampshire and all the other great States are represented, while a million and a quarter of people in Maryland have for some years been excluded from any appointments under the civil service.

Mr. GALLINGER. I think likely there is a good deal in that. I simply know that when you come to look up the number of appointments made in any of the departments or the Printing Office, and see the number of appointments from the State the Senator represents in part, it is something appalling to those of us who get scant courtesy if we chance to ask for the appointment even of a person outside of the civil service. There are a few places still outside of the civil service, but they are almost all taken by the most earnest and radical advocates of that fetich. They get almost all these outside places. We so-called spoilsmen do not get many of them.

I meant to make some other comparisons, but I will not, because I know the Senator from Wisconsin is anxious to get a vote on the pending amendment, and I very likely ought not to have taken a single moment of time. I have opinions about this matter, and I shall continue to hold those opinions, whether they are correct or otherwise, and I will simply content myself now by saying that in my judgment no harm will come to the classified service by putting into it these few hundred clerks, who have been trained in the performance of clerical work, and who beyond a question are competent to take any clerical position in any Department of the Government of the United States. So far as concerns the few temporary clerks in the War Department and the Treasury Department, to whom the Senator from Iowa referred, I think they ought to be put into the classified service, and I have wondered how it has happened that these Executive orders have swept into the service clerks who have not had any experience whatever and who never were examined and who could not pass a civil-service examination, and these clerks, who have rendered such satisfactory service as temporary clerks in the War Department and the Treasury Department, have been neglected. It ought not to be so.

That is all I care to say. I think this is a good bill; I think it will secure good service for the Government, but very likely it needs amendment. But we ought not to be too critical and too technical about it. We ought to approach the subject in the spirit of liberality, and we ought, so far as we can, properly to take care of these young men and young women who have given so satisfactory service and who ought not, in my opinion, to be taken out of the service at present for the sake of making way for people who are simply on the eligible list and who are not in the city of Washington and who will not suffer very great loss if they are not certified for appointment.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President. I shall detain the Senate only a moment. I fully agree with all that my friend the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] has said with regard to this matter, and having once occupied a position in Washington in one of the departments, I think I can speak from experience on some of the questions which have been raised here to-day.

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] undertook to say that you can not transfer those who are eligible to and from the States; that those people, I understood him to say, could only be transferred to the different departments here. As Commissioner of Internal Revenue I transferred people from the States who were acting under collectors and brought them to Washington. On the other hand, I sent them from here or from the States into different States, so that they were in the classified service.

The main thing, though, I rose to say is that I am opposed to civil service from the beginning. It is an outrage on the American people, and it will soon be that we will not need the services of Congress at all. The Civil Service Commissioners will be the people who will run this country.

The people appointed under the civil service are not to be compared with the temporary people, and whenever you have clerks on a permanent roll, where you must prefer charges in order to get rid of an incompetent clerk, you are in a position where you do not get half the service that you get out of a clerk when he knows that upon his efficiency depends his retention.

I tell you the whole system is wrong. This country once rebelled against England partly for the holding of office for life, and we are creating a civil pension list here that is astounding. Here is a poor old soldier trying to get his pension increased from $6 a month to $8 or $12 and we higgle over it. It goes before a committee and we come before the Senate and we are afraid we can not get the amount increased $1 or $2 a month. Here are persons who have been in these departments from twenty-five to thirty years, who are drawing anywhere from $1,400 to $1,800, who are not competent to earn $500 and who neither you nor I would use in our business at all; and yet we are paying them a pension and nothing else. Keeping them in office is a pension, and I protest against this thing being carried on as it is, and I will vote for this bill because it will prevent the civil-service people, if possible, from getting these people in off the civil-service list, where they stand eligible.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. GALLINGER. I ask that my amendment may be submitted, if it is in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire will be stated.

Mr. QUARLES. I am willing to accept the amendment.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let it be stated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 3, section 5, line 18, after the word "thereunder," it is proposed to insert:

> And persons who have served as soldiers in any war in which the United States may have been engaged, and the widows of soldiers, shall have preference in the matter of certification.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LODGE. I move to strike out the words "above the grade of skilled laborer." A great many of these skilled laborers are clerks, doing clerical work. They have been there just as long as the others, and I see no possible reason for making the distinction. If we are going to retain them all, and I believe in retaining part, I see no reason for making that distinction. I think the skilled laborers who are performing clerical work are entitled to just as good treatment as the rest of the force.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Massachusetts will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 3, section 5, line 13, it is proposed to strike out the words "above the grade of skilled laborer."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Massachusetts. [Putting the question.] The noes appear to have it.

Mr. LODGE. I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. TELLER. Will the Senator from Massachusetts tell us what will be the effect of the amendment?

Mr. LODGE. Simply to give to the skilled laborers, many of whom, if not most of whom, are performing clerical work, the same privileges accorded all the others, and I do not see why they should not have it.

Mr. TELLER. They are now excepted from that privilege?

Mr. MCCUMBER. Have they been examined?

Mr. LODGE. They have all been examined.

Mr. QUARLES. The trouble with that amendment is that it covers laborers who are not under the classified service at all.

Mr. LODGE. But the skilled laborers are under the classified service in the other departments.

Mr. QUARLES. But your amendment will cover every charwoman.

Mr. FORAKER. I do not so understand it. Is not the Senator in charge of the bill mistaken in that interpretation?

Mr. LODGE. Certainly.

Mr. FORAKER. It seems to me that the Senator from Massachusetts is right. The text of the bill makes it applicable only to those above the grade of skilled laborer.

Mr. LODGE. The law now excludes certain classes.

Mr. FORAKER. I voted for the amendment a moment ago, and shall vote for it again, just for that reason. I do not see why this should be made applicable only to those who are above grade of skilled laborer.

Mr. LODGE. Neither do I.

Mr. FORAKER. Skilled laborers ought certainly to be allowed to have the benefit of this provision.

Mr. QUARLES. The Senator will see by looking at section 5 the langnage is, "All employees now in the Census Office." That includes laborers of every grade, and will put into the classified service everyone.

Mr. LODGE. I will modify my amendment. I move to strike out the word "skilled."

Mr. FORAKER. There can not be any such interpretation——

Mr. LODGE. I do not think there can be any such interpretation——

Mr. FORAKER. As the Senator in charge of the bill gives to the language, in view of the punctuation. I wish the Senator would read it carefully again. It reads as follows:

> That all employees of the Twelfth Census Office at the date of the passage of this act above the grade of skilled laborer shall be, and they are hereby, placed without further examination under the provisions of the civil-service act.

In other words, anybody above that grade will receive the benefit of this provision.

Mr. QUARLES. It is proposed to strike out "above the grade," etc., and that leaves it where I say it will be left; that every laborer will be put under the civil service.

Mr. LODGE. Then I will modify my amendment so as to strike out the word "skilled."

Mr. FORAKER. Why not put it "below the grade of skilled laborer?" Then you will accomplish the purpose exactly.

Mr. QUARLES. I have no objection to the amendment as modified by the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. GALLINGER. I suggest "including skilled laborers."

Mr. LODGE. "Including skilled laborers."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts modifies his amendment, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 13, section 5, after the word "act," it is proposed to strike out the words "above the grade of skilled laborer" and insert "including skilled laborers."

Mr. BACON. That will not do.

Mr. LODGE. That is correct, if the Senator from Georgia will allow me. The Senator from New Hampshire is right. There are certain classes who are not in the classified service and can not be transferred there because no classified service exists for them.

Mr. BATE. Where will the line be drawn? "Skilled laborer" must have a technical meaning. Does it include watchmen, laborers, etc.?

Mr. QUARLES. Strike out the word "skilled" and you will have it right.

Mr. LODGE. Very well. My object will be attained, as the chairman says, by my own amendment, which is to strike out the word "skilled."

Mr. MALLORY. I call the attention of the Senator from Massachusetts to the list of the classes of laborers furnished by the Director of the Census in response to his request, and there is no such classification as skilled laborer among them. There is a classification of laborer, charwomen, and messenger boys, but there seems to be no such designation as "skilled laborer" in the classes of employees of the Census Department.

Mr. LODGE. There is a grade of skilled laborer. It is a recognized grade and within the classified service.

Mr. MALLORY. In the classified service?

Mr. LODGE. Yes.

Mr. MALLORY. But I understand this bill refers to the employees of the Census Office.

Mr. LODGE. Many of those who are put down as laborers are skilled laborers.

Mr. MALLORY. Many of them no doubt do clerical work.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts moves to strike out the word "skilled."

Mr. ALLISON. I want to ask the Senator from Massachusetts if he means to include all laborers in the Census Office?

Mr. CULLOM. No.

Mr. LODGE. No. I mean to include skilled laborers.

Mr. ALLISON. Then I think the amendment suggested by the Senator from New Hampshire is the true one—"including skilled laborers."

I desire to give another reason why I think the word "above" should not be used. At present the messengers and assistant messengers are under the civil service.

Mr. LODGE. Yes.

Mr. ALLISON. That service would include also these boys who are assistant messengers, in a sense; and, according to my experience and observation, they are a valuable set of young men. Should not the clause read, "including skilled laborers, messengers," etc., because as it is I fear it will only apply to the clerical force, unless you include specifically the messengers and assistant messengers.

Mr. LODGE. If my original amendment is accepted, leaving out that qualification, all persons who are now in the classified service in other departments will be retained under this bill, and those who are not within the classified service, like charwomen, etc., will not be under this, because you can not put in the classified service employments which are not classified.

Mr. ALLISON. You still use the word "above."

Mr. LODGE. You strike out the limitation——

Mr. ALLISON. You want to strike out "above" as well.

Mr. LODGE. My original proposition was to strike out the words "above the grade of skilled laborer," and that transfers all who are properly within the classified service to the classified service.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not quite understand why the words "above the grade of skilled laborer" are used. I do not know that a messenger is either above or below the grade of skilled laborer, or whether he is on a par with a skilled laborer. I suppose it is the intent and purpose of this section to put within the civil service all that class of persons who are now, in other departments, included in the civil service.

Mr. LODGE. That is the purpose of it, and that is why I object to that limitation.

Mr. ALLISON. I object to it also.

Mr. LODGE. If we are going to take this body of persons and transfer them to the classified service I do not see why we should exclude the watchmen and messengers and skilled laborers, many of whom are clerks. It seems to me a gross injustice. I do not see any reason for it at all, or any good reason that can be given for excluding one class of employees and including another. My original amendment can not possibly hurt anything, and it does bring them all in.

Mr. FORAKER. I think the Senator has it in better shape now, if he will allow me to suggest it, than he had before. There are two ways, I understand, of accomplishing what he desires. He desires that the skilled laborers shall be put into the classified service.

Mr. LODGE. Certainly.

Mr. FORAKER. That can be done by striking out the word "skilled," as now proposed. Then, I understand, it would have that effect. Or he can do it by inserting, after the word "above," the words "and including;" so that it would read:

Above and including the grade of skilled laborer.

Mr. ALLISON. Where would that leave messengers?

Mr. FORAKER. I am assuming in what I am saying that messengers belong in the class of skilled laborers, from what was said by the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. TILLMAN. I suggest to the Senator from Ohio that if he will leave out the word "skilled" he will accomplish what the Senator from Iowa desires, and then you will include laborers. You will pretty well include everybody. I do not see why we do not take in the whole kit and boodle.

Mr. LODGE. Precisely.

Mr. TILLMAN. Simply say all employees.

Mr. LODGE. Precisely; that is exactly what I want. The Senator from South Carolina has put it in his usual clear manner. That is exactly what I am trying to obtain.

Mr. FORAKER. As I understand the present amendment, as made by the Senator from Massachusetts, it is to strike out the word "skilled."

Mr. LODGE. No; I think that the true amendment here is my original amendment, to strike out the words "above the grade of skilled laborer." Then everybody who is in the classified service in other departments can be transferred, and those who are not in the classified service can not be transferred. I mean, for instance, the charwomen, who are not classified. This does not transfer them, because their employment is not a classified employment.

Mr. FORAKER. It seems to me that would be the effect of the proposed law. We do not refer to the classifications here at all, but describe them as—

All employees of the Census Office at the date of the passage of this act, above the grade of skilled laborer, shall be, and they are hereby, placed without further examination under the provisions of the civil-service act.

So it seems to me the true way to amend it is to strike out the word "skilled."

Mr. LODGE. Very well.

Mr. ALLISON. And "above."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts now moves to strike out the word "skilled."

Mr. COCKRELL obtained the floor.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. President——

Mr. COCKRELL. I yield to the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. BURTON. I simply desire to call attention to the fact that what is known as skilled laborers are not classified at all.

Mr. LODGE. I beg the Senator's pardon. There are certain skilled laborers in the classified service.

Mr. BURTON. I think the Senator from Massachusetts is mistaken.

Mr. LODGE. If they are not classified, this will not take them in.

Mr. COCKRELL. I suggest to the Senator from Massachusetts that the best way to settle this is to declare what classes shall be taken under the civil-service law—that all employees occupying positions within the civil-service law and rules—and then strike out "above the grade," and you have it; all those there in the office occupying positions under the civil-service law are by this amendment placed under it.

Mr. LODGE. The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] has drafted an amendment which meets that exactly, and I think that is a proper way to get at it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Massachusetts withdraw his amendment?

Mr. LODGE. I withdraw it for the time being.

Mr. SPOONER. I move to amend section 5, lines 13 and 14, by striking out the words "above the grade of skilled laborer" and inserting in lieu thereof, after the word "act," in line 13, the words "except those not eligible to appointment in the classified service under existing law and rules."

Mr. LODGE. That is right.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Wisconsin moves an amendment, which will be read.

Mr. MALLORY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Florida will allow the amendment to be read to the Senate.

Mr. ALDRICH. Let the amendment be read.

Mr. MALLORY. Certainly.

The SECRETARY. In line 13, page 3, after the word "act," strike out the words "above the grade of skilled laborer" and insert "except those not eligible to appointment in the classified service under existing law and rules."

Mr. MALLORY. I understand that there are a number of employees of the Census Bureau who are classed as laborers but who are doing clerical duty. I gathered that from the remark made by the Senator from Massachusetts, and also from other sources of information. If that is true, it seems to me that injustice to some extent would be done them by the adoption of the amendment of the Senator from Wisconsin in the shape in which it is now, unless it could be determined that the duty which is to be performed shall be the criterion as to whether they are eligible under the ordinary civil-service rules.

Mr. SPOONER. If the positions are not in the classified service, of course they would not be eligible under the civil-service rules.

Mr. MALLORY. A laborer under the Census Bureau is not within the classified service, but that very laborer might be performing duties and has been probably for a year or two performing duties which come under the classified service. I think that is a fact, and if that is the case, then the Senator's amendment does not cover such exceptional cases. It is true they are exceptional, and there are such cases undoubtedly.

Mr. GALLINGER. If the Senator will permit me, I think that the Civil Service Commission has recently issued a manifesto calling attention to that and forbidding its continuance, and that very few such people are now employed as skilled laborers doing clerical work. There have been a good many in the past.

Mr. MALLORY. I will state to the Senator from New Hampshire that it does not affect at all the Census Office force which goes under the civil service, as I understand it; but they are still in that service, and there are quite a number who are classed as laborers who are receiving only $600 a year, but who, nevertheless, perform clerical duty.

Mr. BATE. It is an undeniable fact that there are numerous persons, especially ladies, in the Treasury Department, in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and in the Interior Department who are doing what is called skilled laborers' work. They are getting, say, $50 a month, or something like that, and some of them have been in the Department for a year. They are not strictly in the civil service or under it. This would cut them out altogether.

Mr. LODGE. I want to include them.

Mr. BATE. And I want to help you to do it; but it does not seem to me this accomplishes that purpose.

Mr. LODGE. I think the amendment of the Senator from Wisconsin will have to be modified. As it reads now it refers to the person. It ought to refer to the position.

Mr. SPOONER. That is what I was about to propose. I ask leave to withdraw the amendment and offer another.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection the amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. SPOONER. I move to amend section 5, in line 13, by striking out the words "above the grade of skilled laborer" and inserting in lieu the words "except those holding positions not now in the classified service."

Mr. BACON. That would not do it.

Mr. FORAKER. It would take in charwomen, surely.

Mr. LODGE. That is a right exception. It excepts the positions not now in the classified service.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] offers an amendment, which will be read.

The SECRETARY. On page 3, line 13, after the word "act," strike out the words "above the grade of skilled laborer" and insert "except those holding positions not now in the classified service."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Wisconsin.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill is in Committee of the Whole and still open to amendment.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I offer an amendment, to come in at the end of line 20, on page 3.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 3, at the end of section 5, line 20, insert:

Provided, That the persons who are placed under the operation of the said civil-service act by the provisions of this section shall be apportioned by States and Territories, and at their own option shall be added to the respective lists of persons who are eligible to appointment under existing law.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. QUARLES. I desire to offer an amendment to come in on page 4, line 7.

Mr. McCOMAS. If the Senator in charge of the bill will permit me, I should like to know in respect of the last amendment, that the employees of the Twelfth Census Office, "except those not now in the classified service," if it is not a definition of all the employees who are now in the service? None of them are now in the classified service; none of them hold positions in the classified service, and if you say that all the employees——

Mr. ALDRICH. Except——

Mr. McCOMAS. Except those holding positions not in the classified service, you carefully exclude all the employees in the service.

Mr. TILLMAN. "Except those of the grade of," etc., I thought the Senator put in.

Mr. McCOMAS. It seems to me that the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts, concurred in by the Senator from Ohio, simply omitting the word "skilled," effectuates the purpose. I submit, with deference to the clearer mind of the two Senators from Wisconsin, that we have now by a very apt term excluded everybody in the Census Office, because every one of them is a person who does not hold a position now in the classified service.

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. QUARLES] offers an amendment, which will be read.

The SECRETARY. On page 4, line 7, section 7, after the word "authorized" insert the word "decennial."

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Are there further amendments?

Mr. QUARLES. I should like to have the amendment to section 5 fixed so that there could be no possible question about it.

Mr. BATE. Let the section be read as amended.

Mr. QUARLES. It occurs to me that there is point in the suggestion of the Senator from Maryland [Mr. McCOMAS].

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read section 5 as amended.

The Secretary read as follows:

SEC. 5. That all employees of the Twelfth Census Office at the date of the passage of this act, except those holding positions not now in the classified service, shall be, and they are hereby, placed without further examination under the provisions of the civil-service act of January 16, 1883, and the amendments thereto and the rules established thereunder; and persons who have served as soldiers in any war in which the United States may have been engaged and the widows of soldiers shall have preference in the matter of certification, and all new appointments to the clerical force in the Census Office hereby created shall be made in accordance with the requirements of the civil-service act above referred to.

Mr. SPOONER. I am frank to admit that that amendment is not exactly right——

Mr. LODGE. Now, Mr. President——

Mr. SPOONER. Allow me; I am not through. I further admit that my mind is not entirely clear about it. I further admit that in that particular I am on a par with the balance of my colleagues in the Senate. [Laughter.]

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I have yielded to a great many suggestions, and I am going to try my hand. I do not know whether I shall be more fortunate than others in making an amendment which will attain to the object which I think we all desire. I want to suggest this amendment. I will ask the Clerk to read it, and then the Senate can see what it is.

SEC. 5. That all employees of the Twelfth Census Office holding positions which are classified in other departments of the Government at the date of the passage of this act—shall be, and they are hereby, placed, etc.

Striking out the words "above the grade of skilled laborer"—

Mr. SPOONER. That is right.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator desire that the vote by which the last amendment was adopted shall be reconsidered?

Mr. LODGE. I do.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent that the vote by which the amendment offered by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] was agreed to shall be reconsidered. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is reconsidered.

Now, the Senator from Massachusetts moves an amendment, which will be read.

Mr. LODGE. I move to amend so as to read:

That all employees of the Twelfth Census Office holding positions which are classified in other departments of the Government at the date of the passage of this act—shall be, etc.

Striking out the words "above the grade of skilled laborer"—

Mr. ALDRICH. Will the Senator tell us what that means?

Mr. LODGE. It means that everybody in the Census Bureau who holds a position which in any other department of the Government is a classified position is transferred to the classified service of the Government; and those who hold a position which would not be classified in the Treasury or War Department, of course are not transferred, because there is no classification to transfer them to.

Mr. McCUMBER. The Senator says it includes all of those already in other departments who are holding classified positions.

Mr. LODGE. No; I did not.

Mr. McCUMBER. But the amendment as it reads does not go so far as the explanation. It means those who are employees in the Census Office, who are now holding positions, which positions they now hold are classified in other departments. Now, they are not classified in other departments. [Laughter.] That is really the meaning of it.

Mr. LODGE. The Senator will notice that I use the words "which would be classified."

Mr. McCUMBER. I can not see why striking out the word "skilled," as was suggested by the Senator from Massachusetts, is not sufficient. We all know what labor is. I do not think a messenger is declared or known to be a laborer in any of the departments. Therefore, striking out the word "skilled" would take in messengers and everyone above the class of simple laborers. Why would not that be sufficient?

Mr. LODGE. I thought it was sufficient in the beginning, but I have been somewhat confused since, and I will return to my original, plain, simple amendment, to strike out the word "skilled."

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President——

Mr. LODGE. Others will have objection to it.

Mr. ALLISON. I have this objection to it, that it excludes all laborers, skilled and unskilled, and I do not think that ought to be done. Now, a skilled laborer is a laborer.

Mr. MALLORY. I suggest to the Senator, in view of the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts, that it be adopted so that it will read as follows:

That all employees of the Twelfth Census Office at the date of the passage of this act performing duties that are classified in the other departments within the civil service are hereby placed, without further examination, etc.

Mr. McCOMAS. Mr. President——

Mr. MALLORY. Mr. President, I believe I have the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Florida has the floor.

Mr. MALLORY. My purpose in pressing this amendment is to make the character of duty that is being performed the test of the advisability of being placed under the classified service. Referring to what I have already said on the subject, some of the employees of the Census Bureau who are classed as laborers are performing clerical duties which, if they were under the civil service, would be within the civil-service rules. It seems to me that this suggestion would cover the object that is sought by the various amendments.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Massachusetts withdraw his amendment?

Mr. LODGE. There seems so much dissatisfaction with the amendment to which I have returned, and as it must be perfectly evident to the Senate that I have no pride of opinion in the form of amendment, I will withdraw it and allow the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. McCOMAS] and the Senator from Florida [Mr. MALLORY] to offer suggestions.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Florida proposes an amendment which will be read.

Mr. MALLORY. I will read that portion which applies to this particular point:

That all employees of the Twelfth Census Office at the date of the passage of this act performing duties that are classified in the other Departments within the civil service are hereby placed, without further examination, etc.

Mr. McCOMAS. Will the Senator from Massachusetts and the Senator from Florida accept a suggestion, which reverses the order of language in this controversy about language, to make the section read:

That all employees of the Twelfth Census Office except unskilled laborers be, and they are hereby, placed, etc.

Every other class is classified now in some degree—clerk, messenger, watchman, and skilled laborer. So if you make it read that all the employees of the Census Office except unskilled laborers shall be transferred you attain, I submit respectfully and confidently, the object so much desired.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Florida [Mr. MALLORY] offers an amendment, which will be read to the Senate. The clerks have not been able to get it all.

Mr. MALLORY. Let me state it again:

That all employees of the Twelfth Census Office at the date of the passage of this act performing duties that are classified in the other departments as under the civil service are hereby placed, without further examination, etc.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, the duties are not classified.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, I humbly put the inquiry to the Chair whether this body is not so muddled that it had better adjourn, else we would never pass a civil-service examination, and not one of us could hope to be eligible to reelection. [Laughter.]

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is in doubt, but will be obliged to submit it to the Senate. [Laughter.]

Mr. TILLMAN. Then, if the Senator in charge of the bill will consent, let the matter stand and fix it in conference, because it is absolutely in his power after his head gets clear. We can leave it alone and the conferees at the other end will help him straighten it out, so that we can accomplish the result aimed at.

Mr. LODGE. We can straighten it out.

Mr. TILLMAN. There are so many innumerable efforts here that I feel absolutely hopeless that we shall ever get it straight.

Mr. QUARLES. Mr. President, I think there is an objection to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Florida [Mr. MALLORY]. It may be considered technical, but there is certainly an objection to it. The duties are not strictly classified; a position is classified, and when you say that a duty is classified, technically it is incorrect.

I submit that the amendment proposed by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. McCOMAS], which excludes only unskilled laborers, will accurately meet exactly what we all desire.

Mr. BURTON. May I ask the chairman of the committee if that would not include the chief statistician?

Mr. McCOMAS. He is not classified now.

Mr. FORAKER. It would not, I think, because that is otherwise provided for. It is provided that the chief statistician shall be selected in a particular way, namely, by the appointment of the Director. One who is specifically provided for would not fall under any general provision.

Mr. McCOMAS. I renew the amendment I moved.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is an amendment pending offered by the Senator from Florida [Mr. MALLORY]. The question is on agreeing to that amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maryland offers an amendment which will be stated.

Mr. McCOMAS. In section 5, line 13, page 3, I move to strike out the words "above the grade of skilled laborer" and insert the words "except unskilled laborers."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Maryland.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Are there further amendments?

Mr. QUARLES. To obviate the objection raised by the Senator from Iowa, I desire to offer an amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Wisconsin offers an amendment which will be read.

Mr. GALLINGER. While the clerks are preparing the amendment, I wish to suggest an amendment which I think the chairman of the committee will agree to. The words "Census Office" occur in the bill fifteen or twenty times, but in section 5 it speaks of the "Twelfth Census Office." I want the word "Twelfth" to come out. It is an incongruity, and I move to strike it out.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is an amendment pending. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. QUARLES] will be read.

The Secretary. On page 5, line 5, section 7, strike out the words "Director of the Census," and insert in lieu thereof the words "head of said department."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER. Now I move to strike out the word "Twelfth," in line 12, of page 3, section 5.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 3, line 12, before the word "Census" strike out the word "Twelfth."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. QUARLES. To complete the amendment which has just been passed, I ask the Senate to amend the printed bill on page 2, line 9, by striking out the words "Director thereof" and inserting in lieu "head of the department to which said bureau shall be attached," so that the appointment may be made by the head of the department.

Mr. GALLINGER. That is right.

Mr. ALLISON. Before that is agreed to I should be glad to know which department the Senator intends it to be attached to. It is to be attached to some department.

Mr. QUARLES. The sense of the Senate has once been taken on that proposition.

Mr. ALLISON. And therefore probably it will not be changed; but in the meantime if these amendments are to be adopted it should be attached somewhere, because the bill now pending elsewhere may not become a law in its present shape.

Mr. GALLINGER. Temporarily established in the Interior Department.

Mr. QUARLES. If attached to the Interior Department, I suppose the amendment would be equally effectual.

Mr. ALLISON. The phrase "head of the department" is very good, but it seems to me that the first section should be amended so as to attach it to the Department of the Interior, and then the legislation already had when finally passed will transfer it.

Mr. GALLINGER. It does say "the Census Office temporarily established in the Department of the Interior."

Mr. ALLISON. Where is that?

Mr. GALLINGER. In the very first line.

Mr. ALDRICH. That does not permanently attach it.

Mr. ALLISON. That does not cover the point I make.

Mr. GALLINGER. Oh, I see.

Mr. TELLER. Is there any amendment pending?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is one amendment pending.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not object to the amendment, but I trust that it may be followed by amendment so that it will be material to the general scope of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. QUARLES] offers an amendment, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 2, line 9, section 4, strike out the words "Director thereof" and insert "head of the department to which the said bureau may be attached."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. TELLER. I desire to offer an amendment, to come in on page 2, after the word "law," in line 7, at the end of section 3, which I will send to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. At the end of section 3, on page 2, it is proposed to insert:

There shall also be an assistant director of the Census, to be appointed in like manner, who shall be an experienced statistician, and shall receive an annual salary of $4,000; and during the absence of the Director of the Census, or when the office of Director shall be vacant, the assistant director shall perform the duties of the Director.

Mr. QUARLES. Mr. President——

Mr. TELLER. I do not know but the Senator is going to accept the amendment. If he is, I do not want to say anything regarding it. The amendment that I have offered is in the language of the present law. The House sent us a provision for three statisticians and the Senate has increased the number to four. I think it would be much better to have an assistant director who shall be a statistician.

Mr. QUARLES. I will accept the amendment of the Senator.

Mr. TELLER. All right. If the Senator accepts the amendment, I do not wish to make any further remarks regarding it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment submitted by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER].

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will now be necessary to have another amendment in section 4, line 12, on page 2, where provision is made for "a chief clerk, at an annual salary of $2,800, who in the absence of the Director shall serve as acting director."

Mr. TELLER. That is what I propose to do, but that is simply a pro forma amendment.

Mr. QUARLES. I move an amendment, on page 2, lines 13 and 14 of the printed bill, by striking out the words "who in the absence of the Director shall serve as acting director."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. TELLER. I desire to offer another amendment simply to conform to what the practice of the Government has been with reference to officers of this grade:

The Director of the Census and the assistant shall be appointed for a period of four years, but shall be removable at pleasure.

That is the form that is used in appointing most of the public officers in reference to their term of office.

Mr. BATE. I think that does not apply to the Department of Labor.

Mr. TELLER. It does not apply to all officers, but it applies to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and to officers of that class. The Department of Labor may be an exception.

Mr. ALLISON. It is not an exception. It does apply to the Department of Labor, and the head of that Department is appointed for four years.

Mr. TELLER. I think there may be some officers as to which that is not the case.

Mr. QUARLES. I will accept the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER] will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add to the bill the following:

The Director of the Census and assistant shall be appointed for a period of four years, but shall be removable at pleasure.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. TELLER. I believe that amendment ought to come in after section 3, and the subsequent sections be renumbered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It can come in as section 3½.

Mr. TELLER. On page 2, after line 7.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. ALLISON. I call the attention of the Senator in charge of the bill to the language in line 7, on page 1, section 1, "is hereby made a permanent office." Should not the words "in the Department of the Interior" be inserted there?

Mr. QUARLES. I understand that is a matter of law without any amendment.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not think it is; but the amendment will do no harm even if it is a matter of law.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 1, on page 1, line 7, after the word "office," it is proposed to insert "in the Department of the Interior."

Mr. ALLISON. I desire to state to the Senator from Wisconsin that if the bill which we passed the other day shall become a law in the form which it passed the Senate, and this bill passes before that time, it will be transferred to that department.

Mr. COCKRELL. There is no doubt about that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment submitted by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BACON. I want to call the attention of the Senator from Colorado to what possibly may have been an inadvertence in the amendment offered by him, which was adopted a while ago. There is no provision, as I understand, that the assistant director shall be appointed by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

Mr. TELLER. It says "in like manner."

Mr. BACON. I beg the Senator's pardon. I did not notice that.

Mr. TELLER. The amendment says "in like manner," and the Director is appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Those words appear in the amendment.

Mr. BACON. I was mistaken. The amendment was verbally reported, and I did not catch those words.

Mr. ALLISON. I want to ask the attention of the Senator in charge of the bill to page 4, lines 15, 16, etc.

To mines, mining, quarries and minerals, and the production and value thereof, including gold in divisions of placer and vein, and silver mines, and the number of men employed, etc.

Is it proposed that there shall be anything more than a ten-year report on matters of that kind?

Mr. QUARLES. Mr. President, the Senator has failed to notice one of the amendments which I proposed, to insert the word "decennially" after the word "authorized," in line 7.

Mr. ALLISON. I had not observed that.

Mr. QUARLES. There would be no doubt of the intent, I think, even without that word.

Mr. ALLISON. Very well; that answers the purpose.

Mr. President, I desire to attract the attention of the Senate for a moment. I move to strike out section 8 of the bill, and I will explain to the Senate the object I have in making the motion.

As I understand, section 8 proposes to enlarge—how greatly I do not know—the statistics of births and deaths by providing that hereafter they are to be taken annually. Section 8 of this bill is to some extent a reenactment of section 8 of the existing law. That section is reenacted with certain things omitted, and one provision is inserted in a modified form. I will say to the Senator that I had some trouble in discovering the real intent and object of segregating these statistics from section 8 until I found that certain things applying to those statistics as found in the original section 8 are removed or omitted. The original section respecting vital statistics, or statistics of births and deaths, provides, among other things, for statistics in relation to—to crime, pauperism, and benevolence, including prisoners, paupers, juvenile delinquents, and inmates of benevolent and reformatory institutions; to deaths and births in registration areas.

The statistics as to deaths and births in registration areas, found in section 8 of the original law, are eliminated from section 7 and 8 of the pending bill, as contained in section 8 of the original act, which reads:

The statistics of deaths and births provided for in this section shall be obtained from and restricted to the registration records of such States and municipalities as possess records affording satisfactory data in necessary detail, in the discretion of the Director.

That is omitted from the new method proposed. It certainly ought not to be omitted if it is intended to take the census of births and deaths annually. I can see that it will be a comparatively easy thing to take the census of births and deaths in registered areas from the records kept in those areas; but if we are now to enlarge this provision whereby deaths and births are to be ascertained by registered areas outside of the registration in those areas, not to regard that registration, but to take those statistics independent of or subsidiary to them, it will be a very expensive luxury to the people of the United States. I do not object, and I shall not object, to taking this census of births and deaths annually in registered areas and in the form and method prescribed in the original law, but if we are to take a census of births and deaths in the manner provided in section 8 of this bill it will lead to a great expenditure of money, and I do not believe it is wise to do it.

Even under the provision of the section of the original law it would cost a considerable sum, probably $75,000 annually, to take such a census; but if you are to go outside of that, and send agents and other people to make investigations of births and deaths, the expenditure for this purpose may be far beyond anything that Congress would naturally contemplate. Therefore this careful limitation in the original census law, which was surely prepared after great consideration, I think ought to be retained, and I think the new sections 7 and 8 of this bill should be stricken out, because that is the only material thing that is changed, as I understand, except the procuring of annual statistics.

Mr. QUARLES. Mr. President, I think a careful reading of section 8 of the bill answers the objection made by the Senator from Iowa. The only collection of statistics of births and deaths that is authorized by section 8 is within registered areas. It is expressly provided that—the data for which shall be obtained from such registration records of such States and municipalities as in the discretion of the Director possess records affording satisfactory data in necessary detail.

There is all the power given.

Mr. ALLISON. There is no other power given in that section, but there is a general sweeping power found in other sections.

Mr. QUARLES. Mr. President——

Mr. ALLISON. If the Senator will allow me to propose an amendment to that eighth section, to insert the restriction provided in the old law, I shall not object, but I want to call the Senator's attention to the phraseology of the bill, which is that—the data for which shall be obtained from such registration records of such States and municipalities as in the discretion of the Director possess records affording satisfactory data in necessary detail—

But suppose they do not, what then?

Mr. QUARLES. Then those statistics are not taken.

Mr. ALLISON. Then let us make sure that they will not be taken. The Director of the Census is first required to make "a collection of the statistics of the births and deaths in registration areas for the year 1902, and annually thereafter." Those registration areas comprise a large number of cities and several States. I believe the State of New Hampshire, the State of Massachusetts, and perhaps some other New England States are involved in those registration areas. The whole State of Illinois has been recently brought within the registration areas.

So far as the records are concerned, they are easily obtainable by written communications to the proper officers and securing the data by paying 2 cents for the name of each person, which is ample compensation, and which will cost, in my judgment, $75,000 annually if confined to those records; but it may be increased from year to year, I will say to the Senator, to $200,000 or $300,000 if we are to roam over the country with special agents and all sorts of people, gathering statistics of births and deaths, which is more difficult, and we will find that we are involving the Government annually in a very great expenditure.

Mr. QUARLES. If the Senator will listen, I will suggest an amendment which, I think, will cover this point, and I am perfectly willing to concede that. On page 5, section 8, line 11, of the printed bill, after the word "from," insert the words "and restricted to," so that it shall read:

The data for which shall be obtained from, and restricted to, such registration records, etc.

Mr. ALLISON. With one amendment I shall agree to that—"which shall be obtained only from, and restricted to." It is the same thing practically; but I want to put it so that there will be no mistake about the question that these annual statistics shall be gathered by correspondence and not special agents.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] offers an amendment, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. After the word "obtained," on page 5, section 8, line 11, it is proposed to insert "only," and in the same line, after the word "from," to insert "and restricted to," so as to read:

The data for which shall be obtained only from and restricted to such registration records, etc.

Mr. ALLISON. I think that will cover it.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DUBOIS. I now offer the amendment which has heretofore been read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Idaho offers an amendment, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to amend section 9 by adding thereto the following:

To enable the Director of the Census to perform the duties prescribed by this section, true and accurate reports shall be made to him annually by all corporations engaged in manufacturing, which reports shall state in detail the nature of the business or different lines of business, if there be more than one conducted by such corporation; the number of factories or establishments owned or controlled by it, the precise character of the business conducted at each factory or establishment, and the gross receipts of such business; the amount of the capital stock, and the proportion of which has been fully paid up; the surplus, the operating expenses, wages, taxes, both national and State, together with detailed statements as to the quantity of its product or products sold for export, the prices per unit obtained therefor, the rebates, if any, allowed upon products sold for export, and the prices charged to dealers in the United States; any and all agreements with other corporations, companies, or individuals engaged in manufacturing the same or similar products for the maintenance of uniform prices, the limiting of production, or with reference to the wages of labor, and all arrangements with transportation companies for specially advantageous freight rates.

Such reports shall be verified by the president, manager, or chief officer of the corporation, who, upon the demand of the Director, shall furnish such additional details as said Director may deem necessary to apprise him fully of the nature and extent of the business and the methods applied in its management. The failure by the president, manager, or chief officer of any manufacturing corporation to make the reports herein provided for, or any intentionally false statements concerning any matters set forth in a report which he does make, shall for every such offense be punished by a fine of not less than $1,000 or more than $5,000, or imprisonment for not less than one month or more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

All information thus obtained by the Director of the Census shall be permanently filed in his office in convenient and accessible form, be classified, and published annually.

Mr. DUBOIS. I trust the Senator from Wisconsin will accept the amendment which I have offered. I will ask the Secretary to read what President Roosevelt said to us in his message to this Congress on this very subject, the subject of my amendment.

The Secretary read as follows:

TREATMENT OF TRUSTS.

The first essential in determining how to deal with the great industrial combinations is knowledge of the facts—publicity. In the interest of the public, the Government should have the right to inspect and examine the workings of the great corporations engaged in interstate business. Publicity is the only sure remedy which we can now invoke. What further remedies are needed in the way of governmental regulation, or taxation, can only be determined after publicity has been obtained by process of law and in the course of administration. The first requisite is knowledge, full and complete—knowledge which may be made public to the world.

Artificial bodies, such as corporations and joint stock or other associations, depending upon any statutory law for their existence or privileges, should be subject to proper governmental supervision, and full and accurate information as to their operations should be made public regularly at reasonable intervals.

The large corporations, commonly called trusts, though organized in one State, always do business in many States, often doing very little business in the State where they are incorporated.

Mr. DUBOIS. Mr. President, I am not making any indiscriminate attack on the trusts, but it is a subject that is attracting the attention of the country, and some time in the future, and I think in the not very distant future, we shall be compelled to legislate in regard to them.

My amendment simply carries out fully the suggestion of President Roosevelt, which is that the utmost publicity shall be given to the transactions of the great trusts.

We are establishing a census bureau which is to be permanent, and it occurs to me that there is no better time or place in which to start this machinery which will make public the transactions of the great trusts than in this bill.

I will say to the Senator that I believe it will be of advantage all round if this amendment shall be adopted.

Mr. QUARLES. Mr. President, I appeal to the friends of the measure suggested by the distinguished Senator not to load this bill down with that subject-matter at this time, because it will imperil the bill. A subsequent bill, an independent bill, can be framed at any time by the Senator, which will stand upon its own merits, and will lead, of course, to great discussion. If it is desired that that result shall be accomplished, I submit, Mr. President, it can be done far better in an independent measure than it can be by putting it into this bill. I hope, therefore, that the amendment will not prevail, no matter how much we may sympathize with the purposes which the distinguished Senator has at heart. I know it will imperil this bill and delay it indefinitely if the amendment is pressed, and there are peculiar reasons why the bill should receive prompt consideration. I therefore appeal to the Senator to withdraw the amendment at this time, and to present his measure in the form of an independent bill.

Mr. DUBOIS. Mr. President, it can not be in the form of an independent bill. I simply ask by my amendment, following section 9, that the statistics be collected by the simplest means. The amendment is perfectly germane. The duties prescribed should not be provided for in a separate bill appointing somebody or some commission to make these investigations, which properly belong to the bureau which is being created. I can not concede and I will not concede that the Republican party does not wish to lay bare the transactions of these trusts.

The Senator intimates that by putting this provision in the bill it will beat the bill. I am not satisfied as to that. I should think, if anything, it would help the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment submitted by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. DUBOIS]. [Putting the question.] By the sound, the "noes" have it.

Mr. TELLER. Let us have the yeas and nays, Mr. President.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Kansas [Mr. HARRIS]; but I transfer my pair to the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. DIETRICH], and vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. CULLOM (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Virginia [Mr. MARTIN]. He does not appear to be present, and I therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. HANNA (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Utah [Mr. RAWLINS], but I will transfer that pair to the Senator from New York [Mr. DEPEW], and vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. HANSBROUGH (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL]. I will transfer that pair to the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. DRYDEN], and vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. HEITFELD (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from New York [Mr. PLATT], but I have made arrangements with the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. MCMILLAN], who is paired with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN], to transfer our pairs, so that the Senator from New York will stand paired with the junior Senator from Kentucky, and the Senator from Michigan and I can vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. BERRY (when the name of Mr. JONES of Arkansas was called). My colleague [Mr. JONES of Arkansas] is paired with the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE]. If my colleague were present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. MONEY (when the name of Mr. MCLAURIN of Mississippi was called). My colleague [Mr. MCLAURIN of Mississippi] is unavoidably absent on account of sickness in his family. If my colleague were here, he would vote "yea." He is paired with the Senator from Washington [Mr. FOSTER].

Mr. MONEY (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Iowa [Mr. DOLLIVER]. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. QUARLES (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON]. I will transfer that pair to the absent Senator from Maryland [Mr. WELLINGTON] and vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. TALIAFERRO (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. SCOTT]. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. MCMILLAN (after having voted in the negative). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN]. I will transfer that pair to the Senator from Nevada [Mr. JONES], and allow my vote to stand.

Mr. CULLOM. I will take the liberty of transferring my pair with the junior Senator from Virginia [Mr. MARTIN] to my colleague [Mr. MASON] and vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. DUBOIS (after having voted in the affirmative). I inquire if the junior Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL] has voted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is informed that he has not voted.

Mr. DUBOIS. It is quite evident to me that this is a political proposition, and therefore I withdraw my vote.

Mr. CARMACK (after having voted in the affirmative). I desire to inquire if the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] has voted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is informed that he has not voted.

Mr. CARMACK. Then I beg leave to withdraw my vote, as I am paired with that Senator.

Mr. MONEY. In order to make a quorum, I will vote, unless my pair with the Senator from Iowa [Mr. DOLLIVER] can be transferred. I vote "yea."

Mr. DUBOIS. I should like to vote to make a quorum.

Mr. ALDRICH. I think the Senator from Idaho is justified in voting to make a quorum.

Mr. DUBOIS. Very well; I ask to have my vote recorded. I vote "yea."

Mr. CARMACK. In order to make a quorum, I will vote. I vote "yea." It will not change the result.

The result was announced—yeas 17, nays 31; as follows:

YEAS—17.

Bacon,	Cockrell,	Mallory.	Tillman,
Bate,	Dubois,	Money,	Vest.
Berry,	Foster, La.	Patterson,
Carmack,	Gibson,	Simmons,
Clay,	Heitfeld,	Teller,

NAYS—31.

Aldrich,	Fairbanks,	Kearns,	Penrose,
Allison,	Foraker,	Kittredge,	Perkins,
Bard,	Frye,	Lodge,	Platt, N. Y.
Burton,	Gallinger,	McComas,	Proctor,
Clapp,	Gamble,	McEnery,	Quarles,
Clark, Wyo.	Hanna,	McMillan,	Stewart,
Cullom,	Hansbrough,	Mitchell,	Wetmore.
Dillingham,	Hawley,	Nelson,

NOT VOTING—40.

Bailey,	Dietrich,	Kean,	Pritchard,
Beveridge,	Dolliver,	McCumber,	Quay,
Blackburn,	Dryden,	McLaurin, Miss.	Rawlins,
Burnham,	Elkins,	McLaurin, S. C.	Scott,
Burrows,	Foster, Wash.	Martin,	Simon,
Clark, Mont.	Hale,	Mason,	Spooner,
Culberson,	Harris,	Millard,	Taliaferro,
Daniel,	Hoar,	Morgan,	Turner,
Deboe,	Jones, Ark.	Pettus,	Warren,
Depew,	Jones, Nev.	Platt, Conn.	Wellington.

So the amendment of Mr. DUBOIS was rejected.

Mr. ALLISON. I wish to move an amendment, on page 5, after line 7, to insert:

Provided, That the statistics of special classes and of crime, pauperism, and benevolence specified in this section shall be restricted to institutions containing such classes.

I appeal to the Senator from Wisconsin to allow this amendment to be inserted. It was inserted and is in the law as it stands now.

Mr. QUARLES. Does that include the deaf and dumb?

Mr. ALLISON. It does not include the deaf and dumb.

Mr. QUARLES. Very well.

Mr. ALLISON. I want to say something about the deaf and dumb, however.

Mr. QUARLES. That was the subject of a special act?

Mr. ALLISON. That was the subject of a special act.

Mr. QUARLES. I have no objection to the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa will be agreed to.

Mr. MALLORY. Let it be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be read.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add the following at the end of line 7, on page 5:

Provided, That the statistics of special classes and of crime, pauperism, and benevolence specified in this section shall be restricted to institutions containing such classes.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. I should like to ask the Senator from Wisconsin why it is that in this amended provision he has not reinserted the provision respecting the deaf and dumb, which was found to be so important in connection with the taking of the Twelfth Census that it was dealt with specifically by a statute passed on the 1st of February, 1900?

Mr. QUARLES. If the Senator will look at line 9, page 4, he will find "feeble-minded, deaf, dumb, and blind."

Mr. ALLISON. I am aware of that. What I want to do is to insert what I do not see here.

Mr. QUARLES. What is that?

Mr. ALLISON. Namely:

Provided, That in taking the census of said classes the inquiries shall be confined to the following four questions, namely: Name, age, sex, and post-office address.

I will read the whole of this deaf and dumb provision.

And the Director of the Census is authorized and directed to collect statistics relating to all of the deaf, dumb, and blind, notwithstanding the restrictions and limitations contained in section 8 of said act entitled "An act to provide for taking the Twelfth and subsequent censuses."

I do not know, and I will ask the Senator whether under this eighth section as amended it will be possible for the Director of the Census to go beyond the spirit of the amendment of the act of February 1, 1900, because that was intended to restrict inquiries respecting the deaf and dumb. Now, if the Department of the Census will feel itself under constraint to follow that law, which is now to be repealed, perhaps it will not be necessary to reenact it; but it seems to me that is an important provision as to the deaf and dumb.

I should be glad to add another proviso with respect to the deaf and dumb, unless I can have some assurance that it is already provided for in some way.

Mr. QUARLES. In the opinion of the committee it was; but I do not feel so certain now, in looking at it, but that the Senator is right in his criticism. I have no objection to making it more definite, so as to prevent any possibility of what the Senator suggests.

Mr. ALLISON. Very well. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa presents an amendment, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 5, after the amendment already adopted, it is proposed to insert:

And provided further, That in taking the census of said classes of deaf, dumb, and blind the inquiries shall be confined to the following four questions, namely, name, age, sex, and post-office address.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. I ought to ask pardon of the chairman for proposing so many amendments.

Mr. QUARLES. On the other hand, I am obliged to the Senator for his suggestions.

Mr. ALLISON. I wish to offer another amendment to section 9, to strike out a part beginning with the word "and," in line 24:

And that the Director of the Census shall annually collect the statistics of the cotton production of the country as returned by the ginners.

I make that motion.

Mr. TILLMAN. Will the Senator allow an expert to talk a little on that subject before he presents his amendment?

Mr. ALLISON. I offer the amendment with the view of hearing experts, and I will yield to the Senator in a moment. I offer it because I understand that the statistics of cotton production are now gathered at very little expense in the Department of Agriculture and are taken with great precision and accuracy, and I do not think we ought to duplicate that work.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, there are two instrumentalities which deal with cotton statistics. One is the cotton exchanges and boards of trade of various cities; the other is the Department of Agriculture. The Department of Agriculture has an organized force of statistical correspondents, several thousand in number, about one, I will say, in each county in the cotton belt. The information of the Department is derived from this source only. The correspondents are usually men of intelligence and reputation, who are very good guessers, but the work of the Agricultural Department in dealing with the cotton crop is pure guesswork from start to finish, and the cotton exchanges and cotton buyers and those who deal in the article are also engaged in the business of guessing, basing their estimates, of course, upon private letters from their correspondents and commission merchants and others engaged in the business.

The result is that very often the guessing is very wide of the mark, and we who engage in the cultivation and growth of cotton have found the price run down unduly and held down by the estimates of this man and that man and the other man, and even the Agricultural Department has been charged with indulging in guesswork which was somewhat wild in the interest of a certain speculative tendency. I never have believed that this charge had any foundation. I believe that the present Secretary of Agriculture and his officials have strenuously endeavored to obtain correct information as far as it was practicable, but still they have missed the mark very widely sometimes.

Now, the proposal here is that the Director of the Census shall organize a system of collecting information in regard to the size of the cotton crop through officials who are paid, not through persons who are given a few packages of seed and some bulletins and who are more or less indifferent or ignorant; and if the cotton farmers—the men who grow cotton—are allowed to obtain definite information from the ginneries, it will be very valuable.

I will state here that the ginning is now done almost entirely by steam, and in localities where a gin is established there will be a circle of 3 or 4 miles, sometimes 8, in which the cotton is hauled to one establishment. Anyway, we could find out through the Director of the Census and the instrumentalities which he could put to work very fully and completely just what amount of cotton was being ginned, and the amount of cotton that is being ginned every year is relatively the same percentage of a given crop. In other words, it is almost as regular in its performance as the ebb and flow of the tide.

I have prepared an amendment which simply provides for the publication of monthly bulletins, beginning with October and ending with the 1st of March, so that the crop will have been ginned and reported, and practically by Christmas it will be known of all men who want to know what the crop is through this instrumentality, whereas through the present instrumentalities of the Agricultural Department and the cotton exchanges and cotton factors and speculators the cotton planters are left to the mercy of the speculators who bull or bear the market.

Now, as I said, I do not include the Agricultural Department in that, other than that its guesswork does not allow its reports to have that weight which this report from the Director of the Census as to the actual amount ginned would have.

This is very much in the line of reports from the thrashers, who make reports voluntarily, although I think in some States it may be by law, as to the outturn per acre of the wheat crop in the West; and I suggest to the Senator from Iowa that this is not money wasted at all; that it will be the source of valuable information to those of us who are engaged in growing cotton. If the amendment which I propose to offer is accepted, the cotton planters and the manufacturers and everybody engaged in the business of handling cotton in any shape, form, or fashion will be benefited by it.

So I hope he will withdraw his objection to this clause, because it in no wise conflicts with the present work of the Department of Agriculture, which is valuable; but, as I said a moment ago, although I did not elaborate it, it deals largely with the growing crop, the crop from the time of its planting up to the time of its maturity, because the rainfall, the heat, the condition of the weather, and everything, the presence of the boll weevil and caterpillars and other things which go to reduce the crop, the amount of fertilizers used—all those things are factors in determining or in guessing, for it is purely guesswork, what the amount of the crop will be.

Last July, owing to the extreme amount of moisture, cold rain, the cotton crop in the South was more backward up to the 1st of July, and its promise was of a worse character as to outturn than any crop of which I have any recollection during my entire experience, and yet from the 10th of July until September the weather was so favorable and everything was in the direction of helping to make the cotton grow and to mature that we made a fairly good crop of cotton in the South. So I think the Senator can well afford to leave this item in, because there is no conflict. The statistics of the Department of Agriculture, as I said, are based entirely upon the voluntary information of, say, one man in a community, whereas this proposal here is to get the returns from every gin, and do it by telegraph, if necessary, and have a tabulated statement published for the information of the country the 1st of every month from October to March.

Mr. McCOMAS. I call the Senator's attention to the fact that the Director of the Census, before our committee, said that these returns would not only be accurate, but very inexpensive in their collection.

Mr. TILLMAN. I understand it will be very inexpensive. All that is necessary is first to get in touch with the ginners, and then some little compensation to them for making the return, and to pay one or two clerks here in the Bureau, and you will have an absolutely accurate report of the progress of the ginning of the crop and its preparation for market.

Mr. McCOMAS. It was proposed to include domestic animals on farms and the like, but the Director of the Census said that the cotton matter would be very inexpensive, while the other would require a large expenditure.

Mr. TILLMAN. And a lot of guesswork, too.

Mr. ALLISON. I agree with the Senator from South Carolina that it is important to those who produce cotton that they should be in possession of early and accurate information respecting the cotton crop of the current year. It is also important that those who produce cotton fabrics in our own country and elsewhere should also be aware of the condition of the cotton crop from time to time.

Now, my objection to this amendment is that it provides that the extent of the crop shall be ascertained from the ginners, if that is the proper term.

Mr. TILLMAN. That is the proper term.

Mr. ALLISON. That is, I agree, a method of getting a statement of the crop each year, but there are other things which must be as important to the cotton grower as even an accurate report from the ginners. I know it is so in the region of country where I live. We watch always and carefully the weekly report of the Agricultural Department as respects the rains, the storms, and the conditions of the soil, not only in our own State, but in the States that produce crops similar to our own.

I am sure that the cotton producers of the country must welcome the most careful and accurate information respecting the cotton crop from the time the seed is put in the ground until it is matured, and even before it is put into the ground, for it is important to them that they should know the condition of the ground even before the cotton is planted.

Mr. TILLMAN. Will the Senator from Iowa allow me to suggest a compromise here?

Mr. ALLISON. Certainly.

Mr. TILLMAN. If the Senator wishes to have the Government engage in protecting the producers of cotton from the speculators who lie us out of 1 or 2 cents every year, and sometimes 3, by their bearish reports, which they manipulate and control, I will make a suggestion. For instance, we have sold the bulk of the present crop at 7½ cents, and it is now 8½, and we have always contended that it was not a big crop. But these fellows who have the manipulation of figures, not the Department of Agriculture especially, but others, reduced the price of cotton simply by declaring that we had a bigger crop than we made.

If the Senator wants to transfer the collection of all statistics in regard to farm products from the Census Office to the Agricultural Department, and will give Secretary Wilson money to do it in the way that it is proposed the Census Bureau shall do it, I will welcome the change. But what do we see? Every time any proposition is made here to make the Agricultural Department respectable, or to give to it any consideration commensurate with its importance, somebody who never saw a plow handle, except perhaps in the distance, and who does not know anything about agriculture—some lawyer, for instance, as we have in the other end of Capitol, who is chairman of the committee—objects to giving out any seeds and wants to reduce the money for bulletins, and all that kind of thing, and they grow niggardly and economical and critical, and every other thing except hypocritical. They do not grow hypocritical except when they go home and go to shaking the horny hand of the farmers for votes. Whenever we come here for a decent appropriation for agriculture we are sneered out of court.

If the Senator proposes, when the agricultural appropriation bill comes here, to help me to induct into that some amendments that I would suggest possibly, I am willing to let this go out if the chairman is. Of course the Senate will do as it pleases anyway. But I give notice here that if this goes out, I want it and everything pertaining to statistics, honest, trustworthy statistics, in regard to cotton, to go to the Agricultural Department, and to give the Department money enough to collect them.

Mr. ALLISON. That is a compromise to which I can easily accede.

Mr. BERRY. Will the Senator from Iowa permit me for a moment? I should like to know what is the proposition now before the Senate.

Mr. ALLISON. My proposition is to strike out the provision respecting the annual collection of cotton statistics.

Mr. BERRY. Does that provision interfere in any way with what the Secretary of Agriculture is doing? Does it restrict him in any way or take away any of his power?

Mr. ALLISON. I should like to explain, if I can have the opportunity, just the situation. Of course, if it takes nothing away from the valuable work of the Secretary of Agriculture, then there would be no harm in doing this through the Census Office, unless we wanted in some way to economize, so far as practicable, in our general expenditures.

I was amazed, I will say now to the Senator from South Carolina, to find in some discussions that I recently read in the public prints, not discussions in this Chamber, but outside of it, that nothing was being done practically in the Agriculture Department as respects the statistics of cotton production; and feeling interested in that subject, desiring, as I do very much, to have a full report annually of cotton production, I addressed a letter to the Secretary of Agriculture. It is not necessary for me to ask the Secretary to read it, but I will ask permission to have it put in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the letter will be printed in the RECORD.

The letter is as follows:

UNITED STATES SENATE, COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS,
Washington, February 3, 1902.

Hon. JAMES WILSON,
Secretary of Agriculture.

DEAR MR. SECRETARY: I notice in the census bill which passed the House on the 30th ultimo section 9 provides that the "Director of the Census shall annually collect the statistics of the cotton production of the country as returned by the ginners," and also "shall make any additional special collections of statistics relating to any branch of agriculture as may be required of him by Congress."

I have noted that these statistics respecting cotton production have been gathered annually for some time in the Department of Agriculture. Will you kindly inform me when the Department of Agriculture commenced gathering annual statistics of the cotton production of the country, and under what statute, if any; also inform me, in as much detail as practicable, the methods adopted by the Department to secure accurate or approximate statistics of such production; also the cost of collecting these statistics, in the manner to be described by you, by persons employed by the Department, or otherwise secured, gathering them outside of the city of Washington; also the cost, as near as may be, of collating these statistics in the proper bureau in your Department.

I would also be glad to have you make me a separate statement of the method whereby you gather annual statistics of the cereal productions of our country, including wheat, corn, barley, etc., and the cost thereof, and the annual appropriation for all these purposes for each year, segregating these appropriations for the different productions, stating separately as for corn, wheat, cotton, etc., for each year. I would also be glad to have you send me a table of these estimates of production for each year, at least during your administration, or as far back as practicable; also the statistics of actual production, as shown by sale or consumption of crops or otherwise, in order that a comparison may be made between your estimates of production and the actual production, as near as may be, as disclosed afterwards.

I would like also to know how soon after these statistics are gathered and tabulated in your Department they are published, and how they are published, and whether or not at any time any advance information is given to special persons as to the result of these investigations.

I will also thank you to send me any other information that will be of value as respects the methods now pursued to secure the information indicated above.

Very truly, yours, W. B. ALLISON.

Mr. ALLISON. I received an answer from the Secretary of Agriculture upon this subject. My question in substance was whether or not there was in the Agricultural Department now ample provision for taking the statistics of cotton production annually, and the answer of the Secretary I propose to insert in the RECORD. I will not take the time to read it, unless someone wants to have it read. I will merely state the substance of it. In this letter the Secretary says that his Department takes now from the cotton gins of the country an accurate statement of every bale of cotton produced. I agree that if you have many methods, that is probably the very best. He states that that is being done, and that they have a list of the ginneries, which they add to and subtract from as ginneries change. They not only do that, but they have methods and systems whereby they verify the productions of cotton from these estimates and statements, including the cotton gins, by following the cotton, as far as practicable, during the entire year.

Now, from reading this lettter and from my own observation, I feel very sure that, whatever we may do here, we ought not in the slightest degree to interfere with or impair what I believe to be the efficient statistics annually coming from the Secretary of Agriculture.

Mr. BERRY. Will the Senator permit me a minute?

Mr. ALLISON. Certainly.

Mr. BERRY. Mr. President, I thoroughly and entirely agree with the Senator from Iowa, that no power now possessed by the Secretary of Agriculture to acquire this information should be taken away from him. I want to say for myself that I think the Secretary of Agriculture is one of the most efficient men I have ever known. I believe absolutely in his ability and in his integrity in every way. I think if we had all Cabinet officers like him it would be well for the country. There is nothing the Senator can say on behalf of Secretary Wilson that I will not indorse.

But it is a matter of the greatest importance to the people of the Southern country, to the cotton-growing region, that we shall have at all times, when it is possible to obtain it, the most accurate information as to the probable amount of the crop which is going to be produced.

If the pending bill adds to or makes another department where additional information can be obtained, I do not think we ought to hesitate for one moment on account of the expense. I would like to have the provision remain in the bill; and if it in any way interferes with the power or the duties of the Secretary of Agriculture in what is now being done by his Department, I want it amended so that it will not have that effect. But I think the question of expense should not stand in the way of getting the fullest information possible. If we get it from two sources and it corresponds in any way approximately, it will give the greatest confidence in the information to the people of the country, and will thereby protect the cotton raisers from the imposition that has so frequently been placed upon them by persons running the price of cotton down and buying it, by which they lose what they are entitled to receive.

Mr. ALLISON. I have entire sympathy with the suggestions of the Senator from Arkansas. We ought to avail ourselves of every possible method whereby we can secure early and as accurate information as practicable about a crop that enters so largely into our own production, and which enters so largely into our exports. But I want the Senator to understand, as I understand, that in view of the fact that the other bureau, which is now a bureau in the Agricultural Department, has a complete range of the entire cotton region and not only ascertains from day to day the exact condition of the crops and the soils and production—I see the Senator from South Carolina smiles at that; it may be that it is not true?

Mr. TILLMAN. If the Senator will permit me to smile I will also smile, and then answer him.

Mr. ALLISON. I understand that it is true. It may be that I am wholly mistaken in supposing that the rainfall is gathered every day at a single hour, and that the temperature is taken at a single hour over great areas. There is the place outside the Chamber here to which we all go every morning to ascertain whether in our States the temperature is above or below zero, or whether it rains or snows, or whether there is a blasting cyclone, or what not. If that is not information, then we do not have it.

But I understand that the information, as respects agriculture, taken by the Weather Bureau goes all over our own country and elsewhere.

If that be true, then it certainly must be worth while for a cotton grower in Texas, for instance, if there is a heavy storm in that State, to know what is happening on the same day in South Carolina or Tennessee. It seems to me that that would furnish some information as to the condition of the crops. That runs along every day of the year. Now, I may be mistaken, but I understand that is furnished weekly, at least, to all the people in the country so far as it is possible to furnish it through the means of the mail.

The Secretary of Agriculture informs me that that is a very important element in ascertaining the crop. He states in this letter that when the time arrives for harvesting the crop, if I may call it a harvest, or at least transporting the cotton to the ginneries, then he has accurate data from day to day of the number of bales of cotton ginned. I take it that there is an average number of pounds in each bale.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. ALLISON. Certainly.

Mr. TILLMAN. Will the Senator point out in the agricultural appropriation bill the fund from which the Department of Agriculture gathers this information?

Mr. ALLISON. I can do so very easily.

Mr. TILLMAN. I think the Senator is very much mistaken as to any such fund being there. There is a little fund there for contingencies and one thing or another. From my own personal observation and knowledge the number of weather observers, voluntary and all of them, doing the work of taking the rainfall, the direction of the wind, the temperature, and all that kind of thing, and sending it in, are so few that that information is mainly used for the generalization as to the climatic conditions over an area of two or three States, such as we get outside of the Chamber here. For instance, the weather man here told me that we had 12 inches of snow in South Carolina last night. I presume that snow is rather a general thing when it starts in, and that we have it. He said it was at Charlotte and at Augusta. Those two towns, however, happen to be one in North Carolina and the other in Georgia, and there is no report from my own State, because there is no peg out there to represent it.

Mr. ALLISON. Is there no peg for South Carolina?

Mr. TILLMAN. I do not think there is.

Mr. ALLISON. I am very sure there ought to be.

Mr. TILLMAN. There ought to be three or four. But I will state the object I seek to accomplish. I join the Senator from Arkansas in giving all the credit possible to the present efficient Secretary of Agriculture in his efforts to give us correct information and to subserve the best interests of the farmers of the United States. No man has any higher admiration for him than I have. But I want to serve notice that you can not get this information in any degree that will be of value, beyond a kind of intelligent guessing, except in the way proposed here.

Now, we should give the Secretary of Agriculture enough money, and I warn you it is not going to take any ten or twenty thousand dollars. I am not going to be satisfied with any postage stamps. When you come to make that appropriation I am going to ask you for a considerable sum. But if you will let this go in here, then we will give the Secretary of Agriculture something, and we will have a check. We will have two departments of the Government not conflicting, but cooperating, in obtaining information in regard to this great interest which involves, you might say, the prosperity and happiness of the entire Southern agricultural region, 25,000,000 of our people or something like that number—20,000,000 anyhow. I am not counting those in towns, engaged in other occupations.

Mr. ALLISON. I will say to the Senator that there is a general appropriation for gathering agricultural statistics which not only includes cotton, but corn and everything else.

Mr. TILLMAN. How much is that?

Mr. ALLISON. It is $150,000.

Mr. TILLMAN. That is a sweet sum to reach out over the entire United States from one end of it to the other. I said "sweet." No, it is but pitiful and contemptible to be appropriated at all. It amounts simply to giving a lot of people some circulars, and you do not recompense them for their work. You do not do anything that is at all adequate and commensurate with the interests involved; and yet everybody sneers at the Secretary of Agriculture because he can not do any better.

Mr. ALLISON. The appropriation was $130,000 in one case. What I desire to state is that there is ample authority in the existing law for the Secretary of Agriculture to take these statistics, and he has certainly had all the money he wants or all the money he has asked for. I know there has been no deficiency in the last two years.

Mr. MONEY. Will the Senator allow me to interrupt him right there? The Secretary of Agriculture has not had all the money he has wanted.

Mr. TILLMAN. Indeed he has not.

Mr. MONEY. He has made a very moderate estimate all the time. His administration has been exceedingly intelligent and efficient, but he has not had all the money he wanted. I know that a lack of sufficient appropriation caused a certain fund to be diverted from its purpose to consider questions affecting the wheat region in the Northwest.

Mr. ALLISON. That is a mere question of appropriation. I have no doubt that an ample fund will be provided for taking this census annually, as it has been taken, either in the Agricultural Department or here, or by both. It is here proposed to take it from the gins and in no other way, and the Census Office can not take it in any other way, because it does not have the machinery that the Agricultural Department has.

Mr. TILLMAM. Right there—will the Senator allow me?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. ALLISON. Certainly.

Mr. TILLMAN. After, we will say, March, the cotton of the country is practically in the hands of third parties, not in the hands of the men who grow it. It is in the hands of second parties, anyway. The price from then until September does not interest the average farmer, because he has none. Therefore, the period during which the Agricultural Department's interest and information are looked forward to—in other words, the growing period and the planting period, and all that kind of thing—is dependent upon the conditions of which I have spoken, and which involve the rise or fall of cotton in the hands of somebody other than the man who grows it; whereas in the fall, from September until Christmas, the returns from the gins of the actual out turn of a given crop, of the amount pro rata grown or returned in any given area, indicate very clearly what the final round up or summing up of the crop will be.

Mr. ALLISON. I agree to that. That is all covered now.

Mr. TILLMAN. I do not want to have any duplication of work between the Agricultural Department and the Census Bureau, and I do not want to belittle the Agricultural Department in any way, but I do declare here, now, that I am going to fight for more liberal appropriations for that Department, and I do not want anybody here to get up and sneer at it. Not only that, but I do not want those who are on the Agriculture Committee—I am not a member of the committee—to go to the other end of the Capitol and give away in conference the amendment that we may put on here.

Mr. BACON. I should like to ask the Senator from Iowa a question, with his permission. Does the Senator propose to strike out the remaining part of the paragraph; and if not, why does he propose to strike out this one provision in the paragraph and leave all the others?

Mr. ALLISON. What part?

Mr. BACON. At the bottom of page 5 is the provision the Senator proposes to strike out, and the remaining portion of the paragraph to which I refer is on page 6.

Mr. ALLISON. I will answer the Senator. The bill as it comes to us from the House proposes to collect annual statistics of the cotton production of the country as returned by the ginneries. Now, then, that confines the Director of the Census to securing certain people at the ginneries to report to him the number of bales ginned, which I agree is very valuable information. But the Secretary of Agriculture now takes it. I should be in favor of so modifying the following phrases as certainly to include cotton in the various collections that are proposed in a general way following on page 6.

Mr. BACON. Will the Senator permit me to make a suggestion as to why the present language should be retained? I do not wish to repeat what has been so well said by the Senator from South Carolina and the Senator from Arkansas as to the necessity of this provision or the desirability of it, nor as to the satisfactory manner in which the Secretary of Agriculture has performed this as well as all other duties. But the Senator from South Carolina pointed out a distinctive advantage in having this particular piece of information in addition to all the information which can be gathered from the sources indicated by the Senator from Iowa, the character of the soil, the date of the planting, the temperature, the fall of rain. All those are general, from which, as the Senator from South Carolina correctly says, an approximate guess is made. But when you get from the ginneries the number of bales or the number of pounds which have been ginned you have one criterion which the planter would peculiarly rely upon, because he could then form a very much better estimate for himself than he could get from anybody else as to all these other conditions.

Mr. ALLISON. I agree to that.

Mr. BACON. If the Senator will pardon me just a minute longer; as I understand the purpose of this bill it is that the Secretary of Agriculture shall continue in the work which he is now doing and from which there will be this general estimate made for the benefit of all parties in the country who desire to avail themselves of it, but that there shall be this particular piece of information given in order that those who are most interested in it may avail themselves of it and govern themselves thereby.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, I agree that this information is not only important, but essential. However, I must differ from my friends from Georgia and South Carolina in their suggestion that it is additional information. If they want duplicate information, then this provision ought to remain, because the Secretary of Agriculture now does state the identical information.

Mr. BACON. Will the Senator pardon me for a moment? The Senator, I think, is mistaken in that statement. The Secretary of Agriculture from this source of information and from all other sources of information publishes an estimate as to the amount of the crop.

Mr. ALLISON. He does.

Mr. BACON. But, so far as I know, he does not publish separately and periodically the amount of cotton that has been ginned in the country. That is what we want by this provision. Then he can make his other estimates.

Mr. ALLISON. Of course I can not answer especially as to that.

Mr. BACON. I am quite sure he does not, and that is the information we want.

Mr. ALLISON. I understand that he does do it.

Mr. BERRY. Mr. President——

Mr. ALLISON. If the Senator will allow me just one moment, what I desire is that there shall not be duplicate work; but if those who are so largely interested in the production of cotton desire a verification of the information furnished by the Secretary of Agriculture not only from the ginneries, but from everywhere else as respects the cotton crop, then the amount proposed to be expended may be justified.

Mr. President, I now ask to have inserted in the RECORD the letter of the Secretary of Agriculture addressed to me, because in it he states that he takes this information from the ginneries.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection to printing the letter in the RECORD.

The letter referred to is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,
Washington, February 7, 1902.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 3d instant, relative to the statistical work of this Department and more particularly to its investigations of the subject of cotton production in the United States.

This work had its beginning in the year 1840, an appropriation of $1,000 having been made by Congress the preceding year "to be expended by the Commissioner of Patents for the collection of agricultural statistics and for other agricultural purposes." During the twenty-two years that the future Department of Agriculture was merely the agricultural section of the Patent Office its statistical work was for various reasons intermittent and desultory, but since the passage of the act of May 15, 1862, establishing a separate Department of Agriculture, its continuity has been practically unbroken.

In the act in question provision was made for the employment of a statistician, and the Commissioner was required to "procure and preserve all information concerning agriculture which he can obtain * * * by the collection of statistics * * *." Thus for forty years the Division or Bureau of Statistics, as it has at different times been designated, has reported annually on agricultural production in the United States, increasing from time to time the number of products separately reported upon, successively bringing within the scope of its investigations the number and value of farm animals, the value of the more important products of the soil on the farm and in the principal markets, the cost of production, the cost of transportation, the wages of farm labor, and other proper subjects of statistical inquiry connected with the agricultural industry.

Up to 1899 the Department's statistical reports were based entirely upon returns from voluntary correspondents, reporting either directly to the Department at Washington or through its statistical agents in the several States. Crop estimates based exclusively upon these returns have, however, frequently and sometimes signally failed to keep pace with the astonishingly rapid development of our American agriculture, correspondents being insensibly biased in their statement toward an acreage and a production somewhat less than were warranted by actual conditions. For two years after his appointment the present Statistician had no official sources of information open to him other than the reports of these voluntary correspondents, and, as a result, the production in consecutive years of two unprecedentedly large cotton crops was not foreshadowed in the Department's preliminary estimates with the accuracy that has since been made obtainable by other methods.

In October, 1899, however, two special field agents (a number subsequently increased to four) were appointed and various new sources of information were made available, it being the duty of such field agents to watch carefully the development of each important crop thoughout the entire period of its growth, and to keep in close touch with the best-informed opinion in regard to conditions and prospects. The result of this addition to the Department's crop-reporting service was quickly seen in its preliminary estimate of the cotton crop of the year 1899-1900, which, though made as early as December 1, 1899, proved to be within 1 per cent of the actual crop, as determined by its subsequent movement.

The following year the Department began the collection of cotton statistics from ginners, making up for that purpose, through its various agencies, the most complete list of ginneries that is to-day in existence. Then followed the Department's preliminary estimate of the cotton crop of 1900-1901, which, like its immediate predecessor, was subsequently demonstrated to have been within one or two bales in each hundred of the crop actually produced.

In this connection I desire to invite your attention to certain statements that have been made in justification, as is alleged, of the continued collection of cotton statistics from ginners by another office of the Government. It is stated in the report of the Census Committee of the House of Representatives on the bill for the organization of a permanent census bureau that an annual census of cotton production, to be obtained from the reports of cotton ginners, would be a "continuance of work already twice done by the temporary Census Office with results of the most gratifying character, enabling the country to know at an early date the exact dimensions of the annual cotton crop with a greater accuracy than has been possible heretofore," and during the discussion of the census bill in the House of Representatives, on Thursday, January 30, 1902, Representative KLUTZ, a member of the committee, said:

"There has never been for the Southern cotton planter—and I represent in part at least a cotton-growing constituency—anything worth so many million dollars to the Southern planter as the cotton statistics which have been taken by the Census Bureau." (See CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, p. 1151.)

Now, as a matter of fact, neither of the census reports in question added a single dollar to the value of the crop to which it related or was of the slightest benefit either to the actual producer or to Southern commercial interests in general. Neither of them was issued until the crop reported upon had been sold, two-thirds of it was in the hands of European manufacturers, and the interest of the producer was wholly transferred to the crop of the succeeding year.

The first of these two census reports was for the cotton year 1899-1900, and it was not issued until March 5, 1901, six months after the completion of the commercial year and fifteen months after the Department of Agriculture had published an estimate of the same crop, demonstrated, as already stated, to have been within 1 per cent of the actual production.

The second of the two reports was for the cotton year 1900-1901. This was issued September 28, 1901, nine and one-half months after the Department of Agriculture had issued for the same crop an estimate so accurate that its subsequently ascertained close agreement with the actual production was commented upon throughout the entire cotton world as a marvel of statistical forecasting.

It is the reports of this Department, not those of the Census, that have been of value to the South the last two years. The investigations carried on simultaneously by the two officers have not, however, always been clearly differentiated even by the ginners themselves, and it is perhaps scarcely to be wondered at that there should have been some inequitable distribution of whatever credit attaches to the work.

In one important particular the Department of Agriculture has a great advantage over the Census Office as regards the collection of statistics from ginners. This consists in the fact that the Department is not exclusively dependent upon such statistics, but utilizes them in connection with reports from other agencies. It is always difficult, and in most cases impossible, to obtain by correspondence complete statistics concerning the operations of any industry so extensive as that of cotton ginning; and the department that can utilize such statistics as may be obtainable in connection with statistical data received from other sources and can compile and publish them promptly is surely the one that can use them to the best advantage.

In the preparation of his cotton report of December 3 last the Statistician of the Department had returns from: (1) Correspondents reporting each for his county on information systematically collected; (2) correspondents reporting each for his own precinct; (3) correspondents reporting through a salaried representative of the Department, known as a State statistical agent, who analyzes and coordinates their work; (4) correspondents consisting exclusively of planters and reporting only as to their own plantations; (5) correspondents consisting exclusively of ginners, and not only reporting the number of bales ginned between August 15 and November 20, in 1901 and 1900, with the average gross weight per bale and the average weight of bagging and ties, but also reporting as to the average yield of cotton per acre in their respective localities; (6) correspondents consisting exclusively of bankers and merchants; and, lastly, (7) the Department's special field agents, absolutely unrestricted, as I have said, as to the sources of information obtained by them for the official use of the Department.

These are the agencies that enable the Department to make accurate estimates of the cotton production of the South when such estimates are of value to the planter. The reports received from them, numbering many thousands for each estimate, are not dealt with in mass, but those of each class are separately tabulated with a view to the determination, for the Department's future guidance, of their respective approximations to accuracy.

Various improvements have been made during the last two years in the Department's methods of estimating the acreage and production of wheat, corn, and other principal crops, and it is my confident expectation that its estimates of every important product of the soil, as well as of live stock and animal products, will, in the very near future, be found to be as close approximations to the actual production as are now its estimates of the cotton crop.

The total appropriation for the statistical work of the Department for the last completed fiscal year was $149,160, of which $15,000, approximately, was used, as provided in the appropriation bill, in investigations concerning the feasibility of extending the demands of foreign markets for the agricultural products of the United States, leaving $134,160 for the general statistical work of the Department. Of this amount $35,000, approximately, was paid for work done outside of Washington by State statistical agents, cotton agents, and special field agents, and $87,000, approximately, was expended for the tabulation of the 2,500,000 reports received during the year and in the preparation of the various statistical publications issued by the Department.

It is impossible to determine the separate cost either of collecting or tabulating the statistics of any particular product, but I may state that during the calendar year 1901 cotton was reported upon seven times, wheat eight times, corn and oats each six times, and barley, rye, buckwheat, hay and grass, potatoes, tobacco, fruit, rice, and other products from two to eight times each.

I wish to say to you, in conclusion, that the labor involved in the making of crop estimates is very greatly increased by the extreme precautions that are taken to render impossible the premature disclosure of official information. For many years past, if not throughout the entire period during which the Department has been issuing these estimates, there have been allegations at more or less frequent intervals that such improper disclosures had occurred, and while such charges are now much less frequent than in former years and rarely fail to carry with them their own refutation, they still recur at intervals and will probably continue to do so.

Occasionally there are offered for sale on one or another of the exchanges figures alleged by their possessors to have been privately secured from some employee of the Department. A claim of this sort put forth in December, 1900, was urged with such vehemence and persistency that I deemed it proper to have it investigated by officers of the Secret Service, who found it to be without a shadow of foundation. On other occasions the object aimed at is a temporary disturbance of prices, of which advantage can be taken by those engineering it. A conspicuous illustration of this particular form of the evil occurred on October 3 last, when a rumor was circulated on the New York Cotton Exchange that the Government report on cotton, to be issued at 12 o'clock at noon, would indicate a crop 67 per cent of the normal.

The industrious spreading abroad of this rumor, with a certain affectation of confidence in its authenticity, caused a fall of 55 cents per bale in the price of cotton. When the official report was published it was found to indicate only 61 per cent of a normal crop, and not only was the decline in price at once overcome, but cotton advanced $1 per bale from the opening quotations of the day. On still other occasions the allegation that certain persons received the Department's estimate in advance of its regular publication has been part of a systematic effort to weaken the effect of the official report on the market. This was resorted to in December last with great boldness and persistency. At that time unusually wide differences of opinion existed in the commercial world as to the size of the cotton crop. There were persons who believed that the crop was one of the largest ever grown and others who placed it at considerably below the world's estimated requirements.

The information received by this Department from a great variety of sources was such as to leave absolutely no room for doubt that the crop was a very short one, and on the publication of the official report the price of cotton advanced rapidly. The accuracy of the Department's last two annual estimates rendering it impossible to discredit its figures by any legitimate methods, recourse was had by persons interested in keeping down the price of cotton to the most frivolous and contemptible of devices, culminating only a few days ago in the cabling to Liverpool of a statement so utterly false and malicious as to have excited universal reprobation. The position of the Department, however, is absolutely unassailable, since with regard to the more important crops no approach to a definite estimate can possibly be made until within one or two hours of the time fixed for its publication. The final computations are made by the Statistician personally, even when, as on several occasions, including December 2-3 last, this precaution involves an entire sacrifice of rest on his part for the thirty-six hours preceding the publication of the report.

The manner in which such publication is effected is as follows: At 12 o'clock at noon on the third day of each month during the growing season of cotton and at 4 o'clock in the afternoon on the tenth day of each month during the growing season of other principal crops there is simultaneously handed to all applicants and to the Western Union Telegraph Company and the Postal Telegraph-Cable Company, for transmission to the exchanges and the press, a mimeographed statement containing such estimates of conditions, prospects, or actual production as may be proper at that particular season of the year, together with the corresponding estimates of former years for comparative purposes. The same afternoon, in the case of cotton, a printed card containing the most important points of the report is mailed to 24,000 post-offices in the Southern States for public display, and within twenty-four hours, in the case of products other than cotton, a similar card is mailed to every post-office in the country, thus placing the latest available information within the farmers' immediate reach.

Very respectfully,

JAMES WILSON,
Secretary.

Hon. W. B. ALLISON,
United States Senate.

Mr. BERRY. Now, will the Senator from Iowa permit me?

Mr. BACON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. ALLISON. I yield to the Senator from Arkansas, and then I will yield to the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. BERRY. I wish to ask the Senator from Iowa not to insist on striking out this clause. It is admitted that the cost will not be great. I wish to make this suggestion: It is not only important that we shall have accurate information, but it is important that when that information is given out the whole country will believe it is true information.

The Senator will understand that while nobody who is acquainted with the Agricultural Department doubts the entire honesty and integrity of it, yet if that information could be supplemented by this additional information, and it should correspond and produce the results probably as estimated by the Secretary of Agriculture, it would tend largely to fix in the minds of all the people, both the farmers and the speculators, the probable amount of the crop, and would thereby, I think, be of great benefit to the planters in the South. It is admitted that the cost will not be much, and I hope that the Senator will not insist on striking it out of the bill.

Mr. QUARLES. Mr. President, I wish to put before the Senate in a very few words this whole matter in a nut shell. It is a matter concerning which I have no personal feeling whatever, and I concede that gentleman upon the other side of the Chamber ought practically to settle this question; but it ought to be settled in the light of the facts.

I am not willing that my distinguished friend from Iowa and the Senator from South Carolina should enter into a stipulation here to take away from the Census Bureau its legitimate work and transfer it to the Agricultural Department. I hold in my hand the two publications, the last publications, one by the Agricultural Department and the other by the Census Office. They convey the very information that the Senate desire.

Mr. ALLISON. What are the dates of each?

Mr. QUARLES. They are for the same year.

Mr. ALLISON. I mean the dates of the publication.

Mr. QUARLES. I will give the date. The work that the Census Office does is an enumeration pure and simple. That is the legitimate business of the Census Bureau. The work that the Agricultural Department does is an estimate. I call attention to the statement made by the Secretary of Agriculture in this last publication. He says:

> In estimating the crop of the States and Territories, the Department has followed its usual method, the statistical data used being furnished by the officials of the rail and water lines that have transported cotton from the States of production, by the officials of the mills located in those States, and by special agents of the Department at the Southern ports and important receiving points in the interior.

Then if you look at the reports from the mills——

Mr. ALLISON. Will the Senator give me the date of that report, if he can.

Mr. QUARLES. I will, sir. It was printed in 1901, and it is entitled the "Cotton Crop of 1899 and 1900."

Mr. ALLISON. I know, but what is the date of the statement?

Mr. QUARLES. The date of this paper is January 31, 1901. Now, when you look to the mills you will find that each one of those cotton mills manufactures cotton from various States, so that in order to get this estimate they have to separate the cotton that comes from Georgia, for instance, from the cotton that the Georgia mills derive from other States. So it is an estimate pure and simple.

On the other hand, the Census Bureau sends enumerators to the cotton gin and they get the actual weight in pounds of the cotton. While the Agricultural Department deals with States alone, the Census Bureau deals with counties, so that the Census Bureau furnishes the number of pounds, not the number of bales, because a cotton bale is an uncertain thing now. Here you have the number of pounds from each county in the State. There is no estimate of it, because, as everyone knows, cotton is ginned the same year that it is grown, whereas in the estimate made by the Agricultural Department at the mills and at the wharves there may be some of the last year's crop which has been held over.

Inasmuch, Mr. President, as this work is strictly enumeration, it belongs to the Census Bureau; that is its function, and I think that the statistics the Census Bureau gives are much more accurate. My friend says that the Census Bureau confines itself to the gins. That is true. Why? Because the Census Bureau went one year to the plantations by enumerators, and found out from each plantation in each one of the Southern States exactly the amount of cotton that was raised. Then it took the reports of the ginneries, and it found out by that method that the reports of the ginneries were absolutely accurate. For that reason it is that the Census Bureau has confined itself to the gins, because by experience that method has been found to be entirely accurate. I am told by the Director that with the permanent census force he will be able to give to the country in May or June of each year full statistics of the preceding year, whereas by the process of estimation there is no basis for estimation until the end of the fiscal year, which is the 31st of August or the 1st of September.

Mr. TILLMAN. Will the Senator allow me to correct him there?

Mr. QUARLES. Certainly.

Mr. TILLMAN. As I stated a moment ago, the cotton crop matures and is practically through with any process of growth by the middle of October. Of course, the frost sometimes will cut a figure in the yield, because the late bolls which are frost-bitten will not open; but ordinarily the cotton crop is done its growth, is ready to be gathered, and is largely already in the ginhouses or other receptacles by the last of October.

Any data coming from any source whatsoever as to the amount of cotton raised in this last year, for instance, that does not reach the cotton planter when the cotton is being ginned and marketed are no good. What we want is correct information in the months of September, October, November, and December as to the probable outturn of a given crop, because upon that will depend the price which we can command.

If we have made eleven and one-half million bales, we will expect to get a low price, but if we have made but 10,000,000 bales, we will demand and receive, when we know we have got no higher yield than that, a fair price, a remunerative price, and it is to obtain this information in time to be of use to us that I am anxious. It would be absolutely useless, it would be stale and dead, and of no earthly value to anybody if obtained in May. I have an amendment here, which I propose to offer, requiring the Census Bureau to issue monthly bulletins, commencing with the 1st of October, when we will have ginned, you may say, the cotton picked in the month of September and the last of August, and then on down every thirty days, so that when we have had the returns from some authentic source as to the amount of cotton ginned, we can determine by percentages just about what the crop is going to be; for, as I said, that amount is about as regular every year as the ebb and flow of the tide in the ocean.

We have no use for any statistics in May or April. There are very few people who have any cotton in May, except the speculators—those who bought it in the fall and in the early winter at a reduced price, which they brought about by declaring a large crop had been raised and manipulating the sources of information. I am not, of course, including the Agricultural Department in this. But the necessity for accurate information, or of forbidding speculating in futures, which this Senate has refused to do, though the other House passed such a bill some years ago, but through influences in New York, which were then dominant, and seem to be dominant still, forbidding any legislation to prohibit anyone selling ahead agricultural products—I say, unless you can do one or the other the farmers will be absolutely at the mercy of these sharks.

Mr. QUARLES. Mr. President, I was about to suggest that I fully concur in all that has been said as to the great value and efficiency of the work of the Agricultural Department under its present management, and while I do not know enough about the cotton crop or its production to give an intelligent opinion, it has seemed to me that there was room for the work both of the Census and the Agricultural Department.

Mr. TILLMAN. That is exactly what I want, so that they will be a check on each other.

Mr. QUARLES. Mr. President, let the Agricultural Department get these statistics from month to month and apprise the planters and dealers of the conditions and the best estimates that can be given; then let the Census Bureau supplement that by an actual enumeration, and get those schedules out as quickly as possible. Then, I think, you will have exactly what you want, and everybody will be satisfied.

Mr. TILLMAN. That is right.

Mr. QUARLES. What I am tenacious of is the prerogative of the Census Bureau. Enumeration belongs to it, and when anyone seeks to take away from it and to deposit in another bureau strictly enumeration work I feel bound, as chairman of the Committee on the Census, to object to it; but let the two be harmonious and work together, and you will not get any more statistics than you want, and each will help the other.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, what I object to in this matter is that the provision here is not enumeration work. The Senator from Wisconsin read from a bulletin of the Agricultural Department of January 31, 1901, and then he read a statement from the Census Office, saying that one method was accurate and the other was not. The bulletin of January 31 was a bulletin which has engaged the attention of the Bureau having that matter in charge respecting a very different thing than the production of cotton. That bulletin, at the time when it was issued, was intended to show how the cotton crop was moving which had already been produced, and all these statements were taken for the purpose of verification.

What the Senator from South Carolina says is exactly true—that in May, or even in April, of this year information as to the crop of last year is of no more value to the producers or to the merchants in any of the Southern States than is last year's almanac, and not so much.

If I understand the movement of the cotton market, practically all the cotton is marketed, either in our own country or in Europe, before April of the year following its production; and what is not marketed is held for speculation or held for contingencies as to the crop that is to come.

Mr. TILLMAN. That is right.

Mr. ALLISON. Therefore, no information that comes in April or in May, such as the Director of the Census said he would furnish, will be of any value whatever to anybody. What is wanted is a quick statement from the cotton gins; and I venture to say—and the Senator from South Carolina will correct me, if am mistaken—that practically every bale of cotton grown in 1901 was baled prior to the middle of January, 1902, at the cotton gins, or probably before the middle of December. Am I right about that?

Mr. TILLMAN. Cotton ginning is nearly always completed by Christmas. There may be some little delay somewhere in the Mississippi Valley. On those rich Western lands they can not get through picking until away along toward the end of February.

Mr. ALLISON. The minute the last bale of cotton is ginned, the bureau having such subjects in charge should be able to show the result of that ginning, and it should be done by the 1st of January.

The Secretary of Agriculture shows in a letter, which I asked to have printed, and which ought to be printed, that by the middle of December, or about that time, he has all the returns from all the ginneries, and therefore he gives that information in his bulletins. Then he goes on after that and ascertains from boards of trade and from the great markets where cotton is bought and sold how much of that estimated production from the ginneries is being marketed, so that when May or June comes he will be able also to verify the amount produced as shown by the ginneries, and will be able also to make an estimate of what cotton will be carried over from one year into the next year, and thus affect the price of the product that is grown during the succeeding year.

The Senator must not accept a statement from the report which he has taken as an illustration of what is now proposed by this bill. That statement as respects cotton was taken by the enumerators in 1900 going from farm to farm and from house to house; of course they finally did the same thing with the ginneries. I have the statement here somewhere, taken from one of the reports of the Secretary of Agriculture, that he delayed his report of 1901 as to the final estimate of the amount of cotton produced in that year in order that he might receive from the Census Bureau the report of the Director, who had made a farm-to-farm canvass.

Unless you make such a canvass, you must rely upon the ginneries; and if you rely upon them, you get accurate information by a very cheap method. That is what the Secretary of Agriculture is now doing. To say that this is an enumeration and therefore applies to the Census Bureau, I submit to my friend from Wisconsin, is far from what are the facts in the case. We are not enumerating. There is not a line in this bill, except as to other classes of statistics, which is an enumeration.

I suppose the next step will be to have the Census Office make an enumeration of the production of corn, as well as of cotton. When I first saw this bill I wondered why it was that cotton should be included and corn and wheat omitted——

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

Mr. ALLISON. The Senator will pardon me. I like him very well, perhaps too much, but I want to go on and finish my sentence.

I very soon saw the reason was that cotton, unlike corn, unlike wheat, and unlike almost any other farm product, had to be used up in factories, and therefore, in the nature of its production and use, it always finds a quick market; so that the cotton produced last year is practically all now in the course of being sold or practically has all been sold by the people who grew it.

Mr. TILLMAN. Will the Senator allow me a word there? It is so very seldom that I can get an opportunity to give information to my wonderful friend from Iowa that I am very proud when the opportunity offers.

Mr. ALLISON. I am very glad to have the Senator give me information.

Mr. TILLMAN. It is this, that cotton as it comes from the field in its first stage has to go through another manipulation before it is marketable, whereas corn does not—at least, you begin at once to use the corn by feeding it to your hogs, your horses, your beef cattle, and your other live stock about the farm, and you may not sell a pound of it; but every pound of cotton has to be ginned before it can be used at all.

Mr. ALLISON. I knew that.

Mr. TILLMAN. I beg his pardon—of course the Senator knew it, but he did not state it a moment ago.

Mr. QUARLES. I ask unanimous consent that the pending bill may be considered by the Senate immediately after the executive session on Monday; and that in the meantime the bill be reprinted with all the amendments that have been adopted.

Mr. TILLMAN. I should like to offer an amendment.

Mr. QUARLES. This does not cut off any amendment.

Mr. TILLMAN. I know, but my amendment is to perfect the bill; otherwise I have got to vote against it, and I want to help the Senator to get the ginning business straight.

Mr. CLAY. I hope the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. QUARLES] will accept the amendment of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN], which covers the very objection made, and which has been very forcibly stated by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON].

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GALLINGER in the chair). The Chair will state that there is one amendment pending.

Mr. CLAY. Cotton does not begin to mature until about the first of September. We begin picking and ginning it in the latter part of September, and continue picking and ginning during September, October, November, and December. So any report in May afterwards would be of no service; but if this bill should provide for a monthly report during the ginning seasons of the year it would be of great value.

Mr. QUARLES. I will be pleased to accept the amendment.

Mr. CLAY. I am sure the Senator from Wisconsin is exceedingly anxious to perfect this feature of the bill. I will say just a word. One year there was a mistake made in estimating the crop by Mr. Neil of 1,500,000 bales more than we made. He estimated entirely too large a crop. Cotton went down nearly 2 cents per pound. So soon as the real facts were ascertained it immediately advanced, but the farmers of the South lost a great deal by reason of that miscalculation.

Mr. TILLMAN. If the Senator in charge of the bill will permit, I will offer my amendment as a substitute for the amendment offered by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON]. My amendment is to perfect the text of the bill, and his amendment is to strike out.

Mr. ALLISON. My amendment is to strike out.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN] will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 9, on page 6, line 1, after the word "ginners," it is proposed to insert:

And bulletins giving the results of the same shall be issued monthly, beginning October 1 of each year and continued till March 1 following.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Iowa withdraw his amendment temporarily in order to enable the Senator from South Carolina to propose his amendment?

Mr. COCKRELL. The amendment is in order. It is intended to perfect the text.

Mr. ALLISON. I will withdraw my amendment with great pleasure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is to amend the text, the Chair understands.

Mr. BERRY. The Senator from Wisconsin agreed to accept the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin may agree to accept the amendment, but the Senate will have to vote upon it.

Mr. BERRY. He asked unanimous consent.

Mr. QUARLES. I asked unanimous consent that the bill might be considered after the executive session on Monday.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair has not yet put the request. The Senator from South Carolina, as the Chair understands, desires a vote on his amendment.

Mr. TILLMAN. No; the amendment is accepted by the chairman of the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It can not be accepted. The amendment can not be acted on without a vote.

Mr. QUARLES. Let it be printed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will put to the Senate the request of the Senator from Wisconsin, if he will restate it.

Mr. QUARLES. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill known as the permanent census bill immediately after the executive session shall be concluded on Monday, and that in the meantime the bill, with all pending amendments and all amendments which have been adopted, shall be printed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request made by the Senator from Wisconsin? The Chair hears none, and that order is made.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I wish to offer an amendment simply for the purpose of having it printed. The amendment has heretofore been read. I ask that it be printed and be pending.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH] will be ordered to be printed in the absence of objection.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on the 11th instant approved and signed the act (S. 74) to authorize the Southern Missouri and Arkansas Railroad Company to build a bridge across the Current River in Arkansas.

The message also announced that the President had on the 14th instant approved and signed the act (S. 1747) to prevent the sale of firearms, opium, and intoxicating liquors in certain islands of the Pacific.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (H. R. 307) granting an increase of pension to John L. Branson;

A bill (H. R. 366) granting an increase of pension to Edward M. Kannouse;

A bill (H. R. 597) granting a pension to Adella C. Chandler;

A bill (H. R. 668) granting an increase of pension to Henry N. Tracy;

A bill (H. R. 898) granting an increase of pension to Alfred Bolton;

A bill (H. R. 969) granting a pension to Silas H. Cronk;

A bill (H. R. 1018) granting an increase of pension to George C. Leighton;

A bill (H. R. 1280) granting a pension to Lizzie A. Campbell;

A bill (H. R. 1350) granting an increase of pension to Joseph W. Grant;

A bill (H. R. 1529) granting an increase of pension to John G. Brower;

A bill (H. R. 1796) for the relief of Hiram Cronk;

A bill (H. R. 1808) granting an increase of pension to William M. Strope;

A bill (H. R. 1852) granting an increase of pension to James A. Edmonds;

A bill (H. R. 2124) granting an increase of pension to Dewit C. McCoy;

A bill (H. R. 2175) granting an increase of pension to Kephart Wallace;

A bill (H. R. 2219) granting an increase of pension to Francis M. Gilman;

A bill (H. R. 2225) granting an increase of pension to James Morris;

A bill (H. R. 2273) granting a pension to Martha A. De Lamater;

A bill (H. R. 2465) granting an increase of pension to James F. Charlesworth;

A bill (H. R. 2547) granting an increase of pension to William M. Guy;

A bill (H. R. 2609) granting a pension to Lizzie C. Young;

A bill (H. R. 2673) granting an increase of pension to John Vale;

A bill (H. R. 2786) granting an increase of pension to William K. Hoffman;

A bill (H. R. 3272) granting an increase of pension to Israel P. Covey;

A bill (H. R. 3412) granting an increase of pension to William H. Pierce;

A bill (H. R. 3422) granting an increase of pension to James D. Elderkin;

A bill (H. R. 3515) granting a pension to Mary A. House;

A bill (H. R. 3688) granting an increase of pension to John Gagan;

A bill (H. R. 3694) granting a pension to Benjamin Wylie;

A bill (H. R. 3747) granting an increase of pension to William R. Underwood;

A bill (H. R. 3769) granting a pension to Susan Terry;

A bill (H. R. 4035) granting an increase of pension to Elias Longman;

A bill (H. R. 4084) granting an increase of pension to Charles H. Wickham;

A bill (H. R. 4115) granting an increase of pension to William Eugas;

A bill (H. R. 4209) granting a pension to Thomas Butler;

A bill (H. R. 4488) granting an increase of pension to Selden E. Whitcher;

A bill (H. R. 4827) granting an increase of pension to Charles H. Baker;

A bill (H. R. 5073) granting a pension to Christina Daniels;

A bill (H. R. 5160) granting an increase of pension to James Harper;

A bill (H. R. 5218) granting an increase of pension to Joel Metz;

A bill (H. R. 5247) granting an increase of pension to Richard Fristoe;

A bill (H. R. 5261) granting an increase of pension to John H. Coates;

A bill (H. R. 5289) granting a pension to Malvina C. Stith;

A bill (H. R. 5521) granting a pension to Abbie E. Webster;

A bill (H. R. 5714) granting an increase of pension to Lucy B. Bevis;

A bill (H. R. 5862) granting an increase of pension to Rollin Tyler;

A bill (H. R. 5863) granting an increase of pension to Benjamin Brittingham;

A bill (H. R. 5957) granting an increase of pension to Wright H. Auchmoody;

A bill (H. R. 5959) granting an increase of pension to Francis Pearson, alias James F. Pearston;

A bill (H. R. 6014) granting an increase of pension to William Rheuby;

A bill (H. R. 6018) granting a pension to Lue Emma McJunkin;

A bill (H. R. 6487) granting a pension to Kazier Washburn;

A bill (H. R. 6515) granting an increase of pension to Carleton A. Trundy;

A bill (H. R. 6861) granting an increase of pension to Joseph K. Ashby;

A bill (H. R. 6869) granting a pension to M. Callie Glover;

A bill (H. R. 6873) granting an increase of pension to Sarah Maley;

A bill (H. R. 7074) granting a pension to Benjamin F. Draper;

A bill (H. R. 7144) granting an increase of pension to John L. Smith;

A bill (H. R. 7237) granting an increase of pension to Eva H. McColley;

A bill (H. R. 7308) granting an increase of pension to Mary Morley;

A bill (H. R. 7341) granting a pension to Elizabeth W. Simmons;

A bill (H. R. 7432) granting a pension to Charles A. Sheafe;

A bill (H. R. 7823) granting an increase of pension to Jacob D. Caldwell;

A bill (H. R. 7907) granting an increase of pension to Alice M. Ballou;

A bill (H. R. 7968) granting a pension to Norris L. Lungren;

A bill (H. R. 7997) granting an increase of pension to Henry Burns;

A bill (H. R. 8269) granting an increase of pension to James R. McClellan;

A bill (H. R. 8293) granting a pension to Amanda Jacko;

A bill (H. R. 8304) granting an increase of pension to Angeline Murray;

A bill (H. R. 8306) granting an increase of pension to Thomas W. Robinson;

A bill (H. R. 8486) granting a pension to Annie S. Hummel;

A bill (H. R. 8493) granting a pension to Harry H. Sieg;

A bill (H. R. 8541) granting an increase of pension to Mahlon C. Moores;

A bill (H. R. 8620) granting a pension to Thomas Hall;

A bill (H. R. 8954) granting an increase of pension to Alfred N. Mosier;

A bill (H. R. 9161) granting an increase of pension to John W. Taylor;

A bill (H. R. 9220) granting an increase of pension to John S. Hunter;

A bill (H. R. 9227) granting an increase of pension to Frederick Shafer;

A bill (H. R. 9383) granting a pension to Narcissa Tait; and

A bill (H. R. 9670) granting an increase of pension to Aaron C. Badger.

AMENDMENT TO LEGISLATIVE, ETC., APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. NELSON. I submit an amendment intended to be proposed by me to the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill, which I move be referred to the Committee on Appropriations and printed.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 27 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, February 17, 1902, at 12 o'clock meridian.

SENATE.

MONDAY, February 17, 1902.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of the proceedings of Saturday last, when, on request of Mr. FOSTER of Washington, and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the Journal will stand approved.

EDWARD A. M'ILHENNY.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, in response to a resolution of March 1, 1901, a letter from First Lieut. D. H. Jarvis, Revenue-Cutter Service, relative to the petition, account, and evidence of Edward A. McIlhenny, in which he recommends that the sum of $4,785.55 be paid Mr. McIlhenny for his expenses and services in caring for shipwrecked sailors in the Arctic Ocean in the years 1897 and 1898; which, on motion of Mr. MCENERY, was ordered to lie on the table, and be printed.

TERMS OF MEMBERS OF THE HAWAIIAN SENATE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a letter from the acting governor of the Territory of Hawaii, together with a letter from the governor of that Territory, both relating to the manner of determining who of the 15 members of the senate of that Territory and elected at the first election shall hold office for the term of two years and who for the term of four years; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Pacific Islands and Porto Rico, and ordered to be printed.

BRIG MERCURY.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting the conclusions of fact and of law filed under the act of January 20, 1885, in the French spoliation claims, set out in the findings by the court relating to the vessel brig Mercury, George Lee, master; which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

MABEL H. LAZEAR.

The bill (H, R. 6926) granting a pension to Mabel H. Lazear was read twice by its title.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, the Senate passed a bill in identical terms with that bill, and I ask unanimous consent that it be put upon its passage. I shall then ask that the Senate bill be reconsidered and indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Hampshire asks that the bill receive present consideration, a bill of the same tenor having already passed the Senate. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Mabel H. Lazear, widow of Jesse W. Lazear, late acting assistant and contract surgeon, United States Army, and to pay her a pension at the rate of $17 per month and $2 additional for each of the minor children of the said Jesse W. Lazear until they shall have reached the age of 16 years.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. GALLINGER. I move to reconsider the votes by which the bill (S. 358) granting a pension to Mabel H. Lazear was ordered to a third reading and passed.

The motion to reconsider was agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER. I move that the bill be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

KATE VIRGINIA DEWEY CUSHING.

The bill (H. R. 9312) granting an increase of pension to Kate Virginia Dewey Cushing was read twice by its title.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, this bill is in precisely the same condition as the bill which has just been acted upon. The Senate has passed a bill in identical terms, carrying the same rate of pension. I ask for the present consideration of the House bill.

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Kate Virginia Dewey Cushing, widow of Samuel T. Cushing, late brigadier-general, United States Army, and to pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that which she is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. GALLINGER. I move to reconsider the votes by which the bill (S. 2502) granting an increase of pension to Kate Virginia Dewey Cushing was ordered to a third reading and passed.

The motion to reconsider was agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER. I move that the bill be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. PLATT of New York. I present a petition of the Chamber of Commerce of New York, in which they represent "that the conditions at present existing upon the island of Cuba are such that unless some prompt measures of economic relief shall be applied distress and suffering among a large part of the population of the island will inevitably follow, leading to increased disaffection, political dissension, and general lawlessness." The petition makes various other representations. I move that it be referred to the Committee on Finance.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. PROCTOR presented petitions of Jarvis Post, No. 43, of Springfield; of Isaac Blake Post, No. 104, of West Charleston, and of J. J. Hale Post, No. 66, of Ripton, all of the Department of Vermont, Grand Army of the Republic, in the State of Vermont, praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. BURNHAM presented petitions of the Woman's Christian Temperance unions of Portsmouth, Lakeport, Dover, Gonic, Derry, and of John B. Pike and 33 other citizens of Lebanon, all in the State of New Hampshire, praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. NELSON presented sundry affidavits in support of the bill (S. 2505) granting an increase of pension to John Barnard; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a petition of Flour City Division, No. 494, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, of Minneapolis, Minn., and a petition of Division No. 395, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, of Duluth, Minn., praying for the passage of the so-called Hoar anti-injunction bill to limit the meaning of the word "conspiracy" and the use of "restraining orders and injunctions" in certain cases; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also present a petition of the Commercial Club of Minneapolis, Minn., praying for the appointment of a commission to ascertain what products of our farms, mills, and workshops may be sold in China and Japan, with a view to increasing the use and consumption of American products in those countries; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented a memorial of the Jobbers' Union, American Federation of Labor, of St. Paul, Minn., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation enlarging the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission; which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented the petition of W. H. Pierce and 147 other citizens of St. Paul, Minn., praving for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. FOSTER of Washington presented a petition of the Western Central Labor Union, of Seattle, Wash., praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. CULLOM. I present a series of resolutions adopted by the American Chamber of Commerce of Paris, France, at its annual meeting held in Paris January 18, 1902, signed by the president and secretary thereof, favoring the ratification of the pending reciprocity treaty between the United States and France. As the resolutions are brief, I ask that they may be read and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

There being no objection, the resolutions were read, and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, as follows:

Resolutions adopted by the American Chamber of Commerce of Paris at its annual meeting January 18, 1902.

Whereas the American Chamber of Commerce of Paris did, at its annual meetings of 1900 and 1901, adopt resolutions expressing its appreciation of the advantages of a reciprocity treaty between France and the United States; and

Whereas after careful investigation and mature consideration it is more than ever convinced that a reciprocity treaty as proposed would surely tend to largely develop and increase the commercial relations and exchanges between France and the United States, and would prove most beneficial to the industries of the United States: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Chamber of Commerce of Paris, in general meeting assembled on January 18, 1902, again calls attention to the supreme importance it attaches to the ratification of the proposed treaty and expresses its most earnest hope that the Governments of both France and the United States, in order to thus foster the development of the commercial relations between the two countries, will now promptly ratify the reciprocity treaty, as signed by their representatives June 24, 1899; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of the above resolution be sent to the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations of the United States Senate.

Paris, February 7, 1902.

[SEAL.]

FRANCIS KIMBEL, President.
WILLIAM S. DALLIBA, Secretary.

Mr. CULLOM. I present a petition, signed by a large number of distinguished citizens of Chicago, in my State, praying that such provision be made for the collection of statistics of and relating to marriage and divorce as shall bring the report on the subject by the Department of Labor down to the latest practicable date. I move that the petition lie on the table, the provision referred to having been incorporated in the pending bill to provide for a permanent Census Office.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. LODGE presented a petition of 100 citizens of Attleboro, Mass., praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. McMILLAN presented a petition of the State Farmers' Institute of Monroe County, Mich., praying for the retention of the duty on sugar imported from Cuba; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented petitions of V. O. Bretz Post, No. 382, of Lake Odessa, and of O. D. Jackson Post, No. 326, of Potterville, Department of Michigan, Grand Army of the Republic; of Tobacco

Workers' International Union No. 13, of Detroit; of Typographical Union No. 186, of Muskegon; of International Longshoremen's Local Union No. 53, of Traverse City, and of Longshoremen's Local Union No. 130, of Mackinac Island, all of the American Federation of Labor, in the State of Michigan, praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented petitions of Shingle Weavers' Union No. 7099, of Menominee; of Federal Labor Union No. 8250, of Port Huron, and of Mine Workers' Union No. 7, of National Mine, all of the American Federation of Labor, in the State of Michigan, praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. KEAN presented a memorial of the Presbytery of New Brunswick, N. J., remonstrating against the repeal of the anti-canteen law; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a petition of Local Grange No. 9, Patrons of Husbandry, of Woodstown, N. J., praying for the passage of the so-called Grout bill, to regulate the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented a petition of the Iron Molders' Union No. 267, American Federation of Labor, of Trenton, N. J., praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Madison, N. J., praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented memorials of the Woman's Christian Temperance Unions of Hancocks Bridge, Plainfield, and Moorestown, and of Andrew J. Garrett, of Plainfield, all in the State of New Jersey, remonstrating against the regulation and control of vice by the board of health of Manila, P. I.; which were referred to the Committee on the Philippines.

He also presented petitions of Washington Camp, No. 7, Patriotic Order of Sons of America, of Trenton; of Coopers' Union No. 40, American Federation of Labor, of Jersey City; of Car Workers' Union No. 8, American Federation of Labor, of Dover; of Hiawatha Council, No. 110, of East Millstone; of Olympia Council, No. 269, of Berlin, and of Council No. 220, of Jacobstown, all of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, in the State of New Jersey, praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. CLAY presented a petition of Local Union No. 82, Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employees, of Atlanta, Ga., praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. GALLINGER presented petitions of the Woman's Christian Temperance unions of Lakeport, Dover, Greenville, Gonic, Nashua, and Portsmouth, all in the State of New Hampshire, praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. CLARK of Montana presented a petition of Federal Labor Union, No. 175, Western Labor Union, of Kalispell, Mont., praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the exclusion of all Asiatic labor in general from the United States; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration,

Mr. DOLLIVER presented a memorial of the Retail Grocers' Association, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and a memorial of the Retail Grocers' Association, of Osage, Iowa. remonstrating against the passage of the so-called parcels-post bill; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of Fort Dodge and Fayette County, in the State of Iowa, praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of Bricklayers' Local Union No. 2, American Federation of Labor, of Des Moines, Iowa, praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented petitions of J. P. Sapley Post, No. 125, of Traer; of Ed Hamlin Post, No. 112, of Wellman; of Jefferson C. Davis Post, No. 44, of Carroll; of Colonel Hughes Post, No. 168, of Decorah, all of the Department of Iowa, Grand Army of the Republic; of Machinists' Local Union No. 219, of Fort Madison; of Retail Clerks' International Union No. 395, of Centerville, and of Labor Protective Union No. 9145, of Burlington, all of the American Federation of Labor, in the State of Iowa, praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented sundry papers to accompany the bill (S. 2399) granting an increase of pension to William H. Ijams; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented the affidavit of John T. Alexander, of Rock Rapids, Iowa, to accompany the bill (S. 3264) granting an increase of pension to John T. Alexander; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented the affidavit of Nelson Wells, of Mount Pleasant, Iowa, to accompany the bill (S. 3265) granting an increase of pension to Nelson Wells; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented the affidavit of John M. Box, of Floris, Iowa, to accompany the bill (S. 1260) granting an increase of pension to John M. Box; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented the affidavit of Thomas Glynn, of Keokuk, Iowa, to accompany the bill (S. 1644) granting a pension to Thomas Glynn; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented the affidavit of Nathan L. Faulkner, of Fairfield, Iowa, to accompany the bill (S. 1261) granting a pension to Nathan L. Faulkner; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented the affidavit of Anna H. B. Lewis, of Ottumwa, Iowa, to accompany the bill (S. 1262) granting an increase of pension to Anna H. B. Lewis; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented the affidavit of Ellen J. Clark, of Bailey, Iowa, to accompany the bill (S. 1643) granting an increase of pension to Ellen J. Clark; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented sundry papers to accompany the bill (S. 3263) granting an increase of pension to Martin B. Fitch; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a petition of the Trades and Labor Congress of Dubuque, Iowa, praying for the repeal of the desert-land act and the commutation clause of the homestead act; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

He also presented a petition of the legislative board of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers of Lake City, Iowa, and a petition of Division No. 6, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, of Boone, Iowa, praying for the passage of the so-called Hoar anti-injunction bill to limit the meaning of the word "conspiracy" and the use of "restraining orders and injunctions" in certain cases; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of the Franklin Club, of Des Moines, Iowa, praying for the establishment of reciprocal trade relations with Cuba; which was referred to the Committee on Relations with Cuba.

He also presented a petition of the Monthly Meeting of Friends, of Bangor, Iowa, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors, firearms, and opium to the inhabitants of the island possessions of the United States; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of the Farmers' Institute, of Sioux County, Iowa, praying for the establishment of the proposed national park in Minnesota; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

He also presented a petition of the Trades and Labor Union, American Federation of Labor, of Dubuque, Iowa, praying for the enactment of legislation to enable the United States officials to treat with official labor committees; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a petition of Local Union No. 55, United Iron Workers of America, of Des Moines, Iowa, and a petition of Local Union No. 43, Coopers' International Union, of Sioux City, Iowa, praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a memorial of the congregation of the Reformed Presbyterian Church of Wyman, Iowa, remonstrating against the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a petition of the Western Grocer Company, of Chicago, Ill., praying for the repeal of the present bankruptcy law; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. BERRY presented the petition of James T. Pomeroy and sundry other citizens of Eureka Springs, Ark., praying for the passage of the so-called Grout bill to regulate the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut presented a petition of the Union League Club, of New York City, praying for the establishment of reciprocal trade relations with Cuba; which was referred to the Committee on Relations with Cuba.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Watertown, Conn., praying for the ratification of the reciprocity treaties with foreign countries; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Watertown,

Conn., praying for the enactment of legislation to carry out the recommendations of the President to the end that the islands of Cuba and the Philippines may receive generous treatment at the hands of this Government; which was referred to the Committee on the Philippines.

Mr. ELKINS presented a petition of Local Union No. 883, American Federation of Labor, of Wellsburg, W. Va., praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. HANSBROUGH presented a petition of the congregation of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Drayton, S. Dak., praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of Typographical Union No. 311, American Federation of Labor, of Grand Forks, S. Dak., praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. FRYE presented a petition of Portland Typographical Union No. 66, American Federation of Labor, of Portland, Me., praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented a petition of Grateful Lodge, No. 494, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, of Lexington, Ky., praying for the passage of the so-called Hoar anti-injunction bill to limit the meaning of the word "conspiracy" and the use of "restraining orders and injunctions" in certain cases; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PROTECTION OF NATIVE RACES AGAINST INTOXICANTS.

Mr. MONEY. I ask consent to have published as a document Senate Document No. 200, Fifty-sixth Congress, second session, with additions thereto from ex-Presidents Harrison and Cleveland, Mr. Chamberlain, of the Royal Committee of the British Humane Society, and others, concerning the protection of the native races against intoxicants.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Mississippi? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. BERRY, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was recommitted the bill (H. R. 5801) to authorize the St. Clair Terminal Railroad Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Monongahela River, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was recommitted the bill (S. 2804) to authorize the St. Clair Terminal Railroad Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Monongahela River, reported adversely thereon; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. GIBSON, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1198) granting a pension to Josiah H. Buckingham, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 7623) granting a pension to Aaron M. Applegate;
A bill (H. R. 2561) granting a pension to Sarah O. Fields; and
A bill (S. 3660) granting a pension to Mary Sweeney.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them each with an amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 3704) granting an increase of pension to Frederick E. Rogers; and

A bill (S. 3187) granting an increase of pension to Leroy S. Smith.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2287) granting an increase of pension to Georgie Josephine Walcott, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3577) granting an increase of pension to Mary V. Walker, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. SCOTT, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 106) authorizing the Secretary of War to loan to the Pennsylvania Society of the Sons of the American Revolution certain revolutionary trophies at Allegheny Arsenal, Pittsburg, Pa., reported it without amendment.

He also, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1939) granting an increase of pension to Penrose W. Reagan, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PRITCHARD, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them each with an amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 3518) granting a pension to Nodine A. Turchin; and
A bill (H. R. 428) granting a pension to Sarah Bowers.

REPORTS BY COMMITTEE ON INTEROCEANIC CANALS.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred the resolution submitted by Mr. HARRIS on the 15th instant, reported it without amendment, and it was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the expenses incurred by the Committee on Interoceanic Canals in having prepared an analytical index of Senate Report No. 1337, Fifty-sixth Congress, and Senate Report No. 1, Fifty-seventh Congress, authorized by resolution of the Senate of January 30, 1902, be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers approved by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. SCOTT introduced a bill (S. 3941) for the relief of the Winchester and Potomac Railroad Company; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. CULLOM introduced a bill (S. 3942) granting an increase of pension to Jesse W. Bice; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. DEBOE introduced a bill (S. 3943) to establish a university of the United States; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee to Establish the University of the United States.

Mr. DOLLIVER introduced a bill (S. 3944) to remove the charge of desertion against James Boyle; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3945) granting an increase of pension to James B. McNett; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3946) granting a pension to Joseph Grade; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3947) providing for the manner of payment of postage on books, catalogues, and other printed matter; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. BLACKBURN introduced a bill (S. 3948) for the relief of the estate of E. R. Gordon, deceased; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. MORGAN introduced a bill (S. 3949) for the relief of James R. Nance; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3950) for the relief of the estate of Marius B. Cawthon, deceased; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. McLAURIN of South Carolina introduced a bill (S. 3951) for the relief of Mrs. Jane A. Sanders; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. TURNER introduced a bill (S. 3952) for the relief of the Lower Band of the Chinook Indians of the State of Washington; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. GIBSON introduced a bill (S. 3953) granting additional lands adjacent to its site to the University of Montana; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. FOSTER of Louisiana, introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Claims:

A bill (S. 3954) for the relief of the estates of Francis A. Gonzales and Antonio Gonzales;

A bill (S. 3955) for the relief of the estate of Appoline Fournier, deceased;

A bill (S. 3956) for the relief of the estate of Desire Le Blanc, deceased;

A bill (S. 3957) for the relief of Samuel E. Loeb;

A bill (S. 3958) for the relief of Miss Virginia McLaughlin;

A bill (S. 3959) for the relief of Mrs. Emily C. McIntyre;

A bill (S. 3960) for the relief of the estate of Mrs. Ellen Morrissey, deceased;

A bill (S. 3961) for the relief of the estate of Marcelin Lafleur, deceased;

A bill (S. 3962) for the relief of the estate of Hyacinth Alliene Morgan, deceased;

A bill (S. 3963) for the relief of the estate of Joseph Mensman, deceased;

A bill (S. 3964) for the relief of Valerien Martin;

A bill (S. 3965) for the relief of the estate of Adelon Vignes, deceased; and

A bill (S. 3966) for the relief of the estate of Mrs. Celestine Vavasseur, deceased.

Mr. CLAY introduced a bill (S. 3967) for the relief of Raymon O. Williams and Joseph A. Springer; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. HANSBROUGH introduced a bill (S. 3968) to prevent the sale of intoxicating liquors in immigrant stations and other public buildings; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. PRITCHARD introduced a bill (S. 3969) for the relief of O. F. Adams; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. SIMON introduced a bill (S. 3970) granting an increase of pension to Mary Elizabeth Fales; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. FOSTER of Washington (by request) introduced a bill (S. 3971) to prevent the filling of street cars beyond their seating capacity within the District of Columbia; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. McMILLAN introduced a bill (S. 3972) granting an increase of pension to Antonette Stewart; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. NELSON (by request) introduced a bill (S. 3973) for the relief of certain occupants or claimants or owners of property at Nogales, Ariz.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. BURROWS introduced a bill (S. 3974) granting an increase of pension to Martin Justice; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut (by request) introduced a bill (S. 3975) to refund internal-revenue taxes paid by owners of private dies; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. ELKINS introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 3976) granting a pension to Martin Brown;

A bill (S. 3977) granting a pension to Margaret P. Smith;

A bill (S. 3978) granting a pension to William H. Winans; and

A bill (S. 3979) granting a pension to Rosaline V. Campbell.

Mr. ELKINS introduced a bill (S. 3980) for the relief of S. T. Knott and E. M. Knott, executors of estate of Samuel Knott, deceased; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. McCOMAS introduced a bill (S. 3981) to carry into effect the finding of the Court of Claims in behalf of Peter Targarona; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. SCOTT introduced a bill (S. 3982) for the relief of the personal representatives of the late John M. Doddridge; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

AMENDMENTS TO BILLS.

Mr. McENERY submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 8587) for the allowance of certain claims for stores and supplies reported by the Court of Claims under the provisions of the act approved March 3, 1883, and commonly known as the Bowman Act; which was referred to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. FOSTER of Washington submitted an amendment proposing to increase the salary of the chief clerk, office of the First Assistant Postmaster-General, from $2,500 to $3,000 per annum, intended to be proposed by him to the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MITCHELL submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $20,000 for additions and improvements to the Columbia River Quarantine Station, near Astoria, Oreg., intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted the following amendments intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which were referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed:

An amendment proposing an appropriation for improving the mouth of the Columbia River, Oregon;

An amendment proposing an appropriation for improving the Lower Willamette and Columbia rivers below Portland, Oreg.;

An amendment proposing an appropriation for improving the Columbia River between the mouth of the Willamette River and the city of Vancouver, Wash.;

An amendment proposing an appropriation for improving the Columbia River at the Cascades, Oreg.;

An amendment proposing an appropriation for improving the Upper Columbia and Snake rivers, Oregon and Washington;

An amendment proposing an appropriation for procuring a right of way for a canal at The Dalles of the Columbia River, between the foot of The Dalles Rapids and the head of Celilo Falls, Oregon;

An amendment proposing an appropriation for improving the Clatskanie River, Oregon;

An amendment proposing an appropriation for improving the Willamette River above Portland and the Yamhill River, Oregon;

An amendment proposing an appropriation for improving the Willamette River, Oregon;

An amendment proposing an appropriation for improving the Long Tom River, Oregon;

An amendment proposing an appropriation for improving the mouth of the Siuslaw River, Oregon;

An amendment proposing an appropriation for improving the Coquille River, Oregon;

An amendment proposing an appropriation for improving the Coquille River between Myrtle Point and Coquille City, Oreg.;

An amendment proposing an appropriation for improving Coos River, Oregon;

An amendment proposing an appropriation for improving the entrance to Coos Bay and Harbor, Oregon;

An amendment proposing an appropriation for improving Yaquina Bay, Oregon;

An amendment proposing an appropriation for improving Tillamook Bay, Oregon;

An amendment providing for a survey and estimate for further improvement at Tillamook Bar, Oregon;

An amendment providing for a survey and estimate for the improvement of the Yaquina River, Oregon, between Toledo and its mouth; and

An amendment providing for a survey and estimate for the improvement of the bar at the mouth of the Umpqua River, Oregon.

Mr. LODGE submitted an amendment proposing to increase the salary of the Chief of the Division of Bibliography, Library of Congress, from $2,500 to $3,000 per annum, intended to be proposed by him to the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill; which was ordered to be printed, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. McCUMBER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 8587) for the allowance of certain claims for stores and supplies reported by the Court of Claims under the provisions of the act approved March 3, 1883, and commonly known as the Bowman Act, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. KITTREDGE submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $22,000 for survey of lands in the Pine Ridge and Standing Rock Indian reservations in South Dakota, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $20,000 for improving the Missouri River at Evarts, S. Dak., intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $60,000 for improving the Missouri River at Pierre, S. Dak., intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $60,000 for improving the Missouri River at Elk Point, S. Dak., intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $52,500 for building dams and constructing reservoirs at Lake Kampeska, Lake Poinsett, and on the Sioux River, in South Dakota, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. GALLINGER submitted an amendment proposing to increase the salary of the consul at Saltillo, Mexico, from $1,000 to $1,500, intended to be proposed by him to the consular and diplomatic appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed.

INVESTIGATION OF INDIAN SCHOOLS.

Mr. TURNER. Mr. President, by request I offer the resolution which I send to the desk. I also present certain papers tending to support the statements of fact contained in the resolution, certainly to the extent of requiring a careful investigation by the proper organ of this body. I ask that the resolution, after having been read, may be referred, with the accompanying papers, to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and printed.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Whereas it appears upon creditable information that the schools established in many of the Indian reservations in this country, as well as many nonreservation schools, are conducted loosely and without proper supervision; that tuberculous pupils and pupils suffering from other contagious diseases, and received in such schools, and housed in dormatories with other children without and attempt to segregate them or protect the healthy children from contagion; that there is a system in vogue in the Indian service whereby Indian children are forcibly taken from their own reservations and sent to far-distant schools, which system has resulted in an appalling mortality among such children by reason of changes of climate, want of proper attention, absence of friends and familiar surroundings, and other causes incident to such a system; that there is intermixture of the two sexes in such schools, without proper supervision in many cases, with the result that many of the female children are debauched, and the morals of the children of both sexes perverted and destroyed; and

Whereas it appears that the unwisdom of said system, and the gross abuses practiced under it and inseparable from it, have been brought to the attention of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs through official reports from subordinates, and notwithstanding the same that official persists in continuing and still further extending the system: Therefore, be it

Resolved, That for the information of the Senate and Congress the Committee on Indian Affairs be, and it hereby is, directed to investigate the subject of the management of the Indian schools and reservations, and to report the result of such investigation to the Senate at the earliest practicable moment; and to that end said committee is authorized to summon and examine witnesses, and to report their testimony along with its findings to the Senate; and the expenses of such investigation shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be printed and referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I beg to say that I think the resolution ought to go first to the Committee on Indian Affairs. It contemplates an investigation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there is no objection, the resolution and the accompanying papers will be printed and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. TURNER. That course is very satisfactory to me, Mr. President.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. CULLOM. If there is no further morning business, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After one hour and thirty-five minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on the 15th instant approved and signed the act (S. 946) to amend section 4400 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to a reciprocal recognition of boiler-inspection certificates between the several maritime nations having marine-inspection laws.

ASSAY OFFICE AT PROVO CITY, UTAH.

Mr. RAWLINS. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 150) for the establishment of an assay office at Provo City, Utah.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be read to the Senate for its information.

The Secretary read the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. ALDRICH. Mr. President, I object. I wish to ask what committee the bill came from?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. From the Committee on Mines and Mining.

Mr. ALDRICH. All bills of this kind go to the Committee on Finance. We have a half dozen bills of this character now pending before that committee. This bill should have been referred to the Committee on Finance originally. I object to its present consideration, and at the proper time I shall move that it be referred to the Committee on Finance.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Rhode Island objects to the present consideration of the bill. It will retain, without prejudice, its place on the Calendar, the Chair assumes.

Mr. ALDRICH. Yes.

MISSOURI AND MERAMEC WATER COMPANY.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate consider a little bill of only a page and a half. It will take just a moment. It is Senate bill 2977.

Mr. QUARLES. I shall not object to the consideration of this bill, but by virtue of the unanimous consent on Saturday, immediately after it is disposed of I shall ask the Senate to take up the permanent Census Office bill.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 2977) authorizing the Missouri and Meramec Water Company to take water from the Missouri River, and to construct and maintain a dam or other devices for that purpose. It is a bill favorably reported from the Committee on Commerce.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be read.

The Secretary read the bill, and, by unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Commerce with an amendment, to add the following additional section:

SEC. 3. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. Now, I wish to offer one or two little amendments, just to perfect the bill and to remove possibility of criticism.

On page 1, line 10, after the word "to," I move to insert the words "conduct and," and in line 11, after the word "water," to insert "not otherwise used;" so that it will read:

such supply of water as may be necessary or required for the purposes of said corporation, and to conduct and discharge said water not otherwise used at a point on the Meramec River in the neighborhood of Meramec Highlands, in the county of St. Louis and State of Missouri.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. On page 2, at the beginning of line 7, after the word "discharge," I move to insert "at any time;" so as to make the proviso read:

That such withdrawal and discharge, at any time, of water shall not be so great as to interfere with the navigation of said Missouri or Meramec River.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. In line 10, after the word "said," I move to insert the words "dam devices, lock, and other structures, and;" so as to read:

That said corporation shall submit detailed plans showing the location and method of constructing said dam devices, lock and other structures, and canal to the Secretary of War for approval.

That will give them the right to examine the plans for the dam as well as the canal. I want them to examine as to the kind of a wing dam that shall be constructed to draw the water out.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. After the word "for," in line 11, and before the word "approval," I move to insert "for his consideration and;" so as to read:

That said corporation shall submit detailed plans showing the location and method of constructing said dam devices, lock and other structures, and canal to the Secretary of War for his consideration and approval.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PERMANENT CENSUS OFFICE.

Mr. QUARLES. Pursuant to the unanimous agreement of Saturday, I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 10308) to provide for a permanent census office.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays the bill before the Senate.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The pending amendment was offered by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN] and will be read to the Senate.

The SECRETARY. On page 7, line 1, after the word "ginners" at the end of the line, insert:

And bulletins giving the results of the same shall be issued monthly, beginning October 1 of each year and continued till March 1 following.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. QUARLES. Mr. President, as I announced to the Senate on Saturday before the adjournment, I shall not oppose this amendment. I can understand from the discussion we then had how important it may be. I hope, therefore, the amendment of the Senator from South Carolina may be adopted.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, I am sorry the Senator from South Carolina is not in his seat. On Saturday, when the amendment was read at the desk, it struck me that it would be perhaps a wise one to make; but on further investigation I am sure that the amendment ought not to be agreed to for the reason that, so far as I can see, there is no advantage to be gained by bulletins during the period indicated.

As I understand the idea of the Senator from South Carolina, it was that there should be monthly bulletins from the beginning of the period of ginning cotton to the end of it. I do not see of what value they could be to the producer of cotton, especially as there are already bulletins issued by the Agricultural Department, not only beginning with July, or whatever the date is——

Mr. GALLINGER. Between October and May.

Mr. BERRY. The amendment of the Senator from South Carolina provides for monthly bulletins between October and March.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask that the amendment may be again read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be again stated.

The Secretary again read the amendment of Mr. TILLMAN.

Mr. ALLISON. As I understand, the ginning of cotton begins early in September.

Mr. BERRY. Yes.

Mr. ALLISON. And it is practically concluded by the 1st of January. Therefore bulletins issued upon that subject between January and March would be of no value.

I made inquiry this morning at the Department of Agriculture with a view of obtaining information for myself and contributing that information so far as I could to others, as to the exact method pursued by the Secretary of Agriculture respecting the subject of cotton.

I put into the RECORD of Saturday last a letter from the Secretary of Agriculture; I do not know that Senators have had time to read that letter, but if they have they will have found that it gives in a general way the methods pursued by the Department of Agriculture respecting the cotton crop, and I wish now to briefly state what is done regarding that crop each year. I have before me copies of bulletins issued monthly by the Secretary of Agriculture respecting the cotton and other crops in our own country and elsewhere. I read from the June report:

The Statistician estimates the total area planted in cotton—

This is for the year 1901—

at 27,532,000 acres, an increase of 2,111,000 acres, or 8.3 per cent over the acreage planted last year, and of 2,498,000 acres, or 10 per cent, over the acreage actually picked. The increase in States where the area planted and that picked last year were practically the same is 10 per cent in North Carolina, Florida, and Arkansas, 9 in Georgia and Louisiana, 7 in South Carolina, 14 in Tennessee, 25 in Oklahoma, 20 in Indian Territory, 18 in Virginia, and 12 in Missouri. In Alabama the increase is estimated at 9 per cent over the acreage planted last year and 12 per cent over that picked, in Mississippi at 2 per cent over that planted and 7.9 per cent over that picked, and in Texas at 8 per cent over that planted and 10 per cent over that picked.

The average condition of the growing crop—is 81.5 as compared with 82.5 on June 1 of last year, 85.7 at the corresponding date in 1899, and 86.4, the mean of the June averages of the last ten years. A condition of 81.5 is, with one exception, the lowest June condition in twenty years.

This is in June—

The condition by States is as follows:

North Carolina	87	Louisiana	80
South Carolina	80	Texas	84
Georgia	80	Arkansas	81
Florida	88	Tennessee	78
Alabama	76	Oklahoma	88
Mississippi	82	Indian Territory	85

The foregoing estimates are based on schedules returnable from all classes of correspondents on May 20, somewhat modified by subsequent reports from State and traveling agents of the Department.

That was the first bulletin issued for the year 1901 relative to the cotton crop, and this is certainly most valuable information to every grower of cotton, because it gives in brief a comparison of the acreage and a comparison of the situation of the crop on the day of the issuance of the bulletin.

I find the bulletin of July, 1901, gives the condition of the cotton crop on July 1 of that same year:

The monthly report of the statistician of the Department of Agriculture shows the average condition of cotton on June 25 to have been 81.1, as compared with 81.5 on the 20th of the preceding month.

It seems that these conditions are taken on the 20th of each month.

Then follows along the situation respecting the cotton crop on the 20th of June. I will only read the closing paragraph:

Excessive rain, followed by a heavy growth of grass and weeds, have caused much damage in Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, and North Carolina, while in Louisiana and Texas the growth has been retarded by drought. The gravity of the situation is greatly increased in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and to some extent in other States, by a scarcity of labor.

That was the condition on the 20th of June.

The next bulletin we have is dated the 20th of September. I will not read it, but will state that it shows the condition of the cotton crop at that time, taking into account the returns of the Department of Agriculture during the two preceding months.

The monthly report of the statistician for September shows the average condition of cotton on August 24 to have been 71.4, as compared with 71.2 on the 25th of the preceding month.

There was an impairment of condition during August amounting to 18 points in Texas, 10 in Oklahoma, 8 in Arkansas, 7 in Alabama, 4 in Virginia, 2 in Louisiana, and 1 point in North Carolina and Florida. On the other hand, there was an improvement during the month in Georgia, South Carolina, and Tennessee, etc.

I do not read that in detail because I do not wish to take up the time of the Senate.

I omitted the August report, which report is also stated in some detail. Then I have the condition of the crop on the 20th day of September, as shown by the October bulletin, as compared with other years. I shall not stop to read that statement.

Then comes the report of the cotton crop in December, which is the preliminary report, showing the situation of that crop on the 20th of November. This report gives, or attempts to give, a full account of the cotton ginned between August 15—I believe I previously said the last of August—but it is "between August 15," when the ginning begins, "and November 20, this year and last year, with the average gross weight per bale, and the average weight of bagging and ties. This has enabled the statistician to determine the average net weight of bales for each separate State and for the entire cotton belt, and these weights have been used in estimating the total number of bales produced," etc.

Then it gives the average cost of picking.

The first question which occurred to me in looking over these bulletins was to ascertain how this information was gathered, because it seemed to me most important information to the producers of cotton. I find that the cotton belt is especially distinguished by a map, which I hold in my hand, which contains certain centers of cotton production—Oklahoma, Galveston, Vicksburg, New Orleans, Atlanta, Augusta, Memphis, Little Rock, Charleston, Savannah, etc.

The condition of the cotton from week to week is found by means of telegraphic reports in detail from the cotton-producing regions to these central places. I have here somewhere a complete analysis of this statement, but perhaps it is not necessary to go into it.

On the morning of every day there are observers who, about 10 o'clock, telegraph the conditions regarding the cotton crop during the preceding twenty-four hours to these central places; and at the end of the week in these central places, which are indicated on this map, the man in charge of the weather service there makes up a total, and that total respecting the cotton crop throughout the entire area is distributed to the people each week. When he makes up his statement of the conditions at his particular station, he telegraphs that particular information to all the other stations; each of them telegraphs to the Agricultural Department the situation of the cotton crop on each of these days; and this information is printed at Montgomery, Ala., for instance, where one of these central stations is located.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. ALLISON. Yes, sir.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Those are crop reports?

Mr. ALLISON. Those are crop reports.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. While the crop is being grown?

Mr. ALLISON. Yes; while the crop is being grown.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Does the Agricultural Department follow the cotton after ginning commences so as to render reports such as are contemplated by this amendment?

Mr. ALLISON. It does.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. That is what I wanted to know.

Mr. ALLISON. And therefore the condition of the progress of the ginning is carried every week to the Agricultural Department through the reports of the ginners.

Mr. CLAY. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question? I know he wants to be perfectly fair.

Mr. ALLISON. I am stating what I get from the record.

Mr. CLAY. I wish to say that there is quite a difference between these estimates and the census reports. The estimates to which the Senator refers simply give information from the central stations, located in different sections of the South, and are simply guesswork to a large extent.

As I understand, as to the entire reports of the Agricultural Department in regard to the growth of the crop and in regard to the number of bales ginned, the information is furnished in this way, but this amendment, if I understand it, simply authorizes the census reports to be made from the gins each month during the ginning season, so as to ascertain how much the crop is and how much we make each year in comparison with the previous year, so as to enable us to ascertain the number of bales of cotton that will probably be made in the year.

Mr. ALLISON. That is exactly what this amendment contemplates, and it is exactly what is being done now with absolute accuracy, so far as accuracy can be secured through human agencies.

Mr. QUARLES. Will the Senator permit me to ask him a question, if it will not interrupt him?

Mr. ALLISON. It will not interrupt me.

Mr. QUARLES. I will ask whether there is not this radical difference between the information furnished from these two sources, whether the Agricultural Department in any of its reports or estimates deals with anything less than the States, while the Census Bureau deals with each county in the State?

Mr. CLAY. I will say to the Senator that this amendment provides that the Census Bureau shall deal with each ginner in every State in the South.

Mr. QUARLES. Yes; the information is prepared with reference to each county in the State, so that you can compare its production for a long line of years.

Mr. CLAY. That is correct.

Mr. QUARLES. And it is done by enumeration. We send an enumerator to the ginnery.

Mr. ALLISON. Very well. That is a proposition which I now hear for the first time—that we are to select cotton and send special agents from here, I suppose, who shall go into every county, stand by the side of every ginnery, and see how many bales are ginned on a particular day.

There are engaged in this work in the cotton States, exclusive of the ginners, 63,795 people, who are selected in every county of every State and who are supposed to be reliable men located in that county, familiar with the production and with the progress and development of the cotton from week to week. There are 65,674 ginners in the cotton belt, every one of whom reports to the Agricultural Department with absolute accuracy, because he has no reason to do otherwise, the number of bales of cotton ginned at his ginnery.

That is the method, and that is what I am trying to show. I am endeavoring to do this in order that the Senator from Georgia may not be misled into the idea that by this proposition he is likely to get any additional information or as accurate information as is now given to every cotton producer in the Southern States.

It is not a central estimate. It is an estimate, as a matter of course, but it is an estimate gathered from the people who reside in the county—six, eight, or ten of them, we will say, in various portions of a county where cotton is grown—and that information is telegraphed to one of these central places, tabulated there, and then published, not only in that locality, but it is sent to all the other localities and there published, so that, if I am a producer of cotton in South Carolina, I can know on a particular day in June, July, August, September, October, November, or December not only what is being done in my county and in my State, but I can know also the condition of the crop in every other cotton State in the Union.

These estimates are sent broadcast everywhere from these central places—I have simply illustrated with Montgomery, Ala.—so that they may be reviewed by the daily and weekly newspapers and by the men who are interested in the production of cotton. They are sent to boards of trade in New Orleans, in Memphis, in Savannah, or wherever there is a board of trade dealing in cotton, and every producer, every dealer in cotton, and every newspaper that has enterprise enough to publish this information where cotton is grown has an opportunity of knowing every month, indeed every week, the situation of the cotton crop. That is the position.

Mr. CLAY. I desire to ask the Senator if I correctly understood him to say—for I want to get it correctly——

Mr. ALLISON. That is what I desire.

Mr. CLAY. Do I understand the Senator to say that the ginners in the various counties of the different States where cotton is produced now make monthly reports to the Agricultural Department as to the number of bales of cotton that are ginned each month?

Mr. ALLISON. They do.

Mr. CLAY. Where is the law for doing that?

Mr. ALLISON. There is no law for doing it, except that law which authorizes and directs the Secretary of Agriculture to gather statistics of the products of the field and the farm. In order to be able to do that intelligently, he has organized and erected a complete machinery of people who are interested in this business, whereby they give him, from month to month and from week to week, every detail which the cotton producer ought to have.

Mr. CLAY. I will say to the Senator that I have no idea that one-half of the ginneries in the South report at all to the Agricultural Department. Many of them are located far off from railroads, and this information, according to my understanding, is largely guesswork; it is simply an estimate.

Mr. ALLISON. How can it be guesswork when the information is reported by the men who own the ginneries and who gin the cotton?

Mr. CLAY. The reports have been found in several instances to be incorrect. It has been found in several instances that the crop was short of the estimates by a million or a million and a half bales. I do not mean to say that the reports of the Departpartment of Agriculture are incorrect. Cotton firms often overestimate the crop, reduce prices, and we want every possible effort to get correct estimates.

Mr. ALLISON. I shall say a word about that presently; but what I am trying to show now is that the proposition which is before the Senate is wholly unnecessary, because all the details are now given whereby a just and accurate estimate may be made of the cotton crop.

I live in a State where we produce large quantities of corn. Does anyone suppose that I should wait, if I am a farmer, to know how many bushels of corn have been put in my bin or in my barn before I wake up to the question of what the price of corn is in Chicago? Suppose I have some old corn lying in my crib and I am watching the progress and development of the crop of corn in my State, is it of no value for me to know that in southwestern Iowa and in Nebraska there has been a great drought, and that therefore the corn, which looked well in July, was drooping and wilting in August or September, and probably that the corn crop was to be a failure in a portion of my State and in other surrounding States known as the corn belt?

I should welcome any man with open arms who had the facilities to give me the information, week by week at least, as respects the situation of the corn crop, so that I might know what my opportunities were in relation to that crop. That is what we ought to have in respect to the cotton crop. That is what all Senators want and what they now have as respects the cotton crop with greater particularity than with any other crop, as I have discovered since this debate on Saturday.

Mr. CULBERSON. May I ask the Senator a question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. ALLISON. I do.

Mr. CULBERSON. I should like to ask the Senator if his proposition is that the Department of Agriculture shall report monthly the condition of the crop of the United States, with a view of giving the people notice as to the probable yield each year or by months. Is that the proposition of the Senator?

Mr. ALLISON. That is what is being done now by the Agricultural Department in order that the public—not A, B, and C, but the public—shall have as accurate information as is attainable with respect to the growth, development, and progress of the cotton crop.

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. ALLISON. Certainly.

Mr. CULBERSON. I call the attention of the Senator from Iowa to what I understand to be the facts about this matter during the last three or four months. The price of cotton continually declined for months preceding the month of November. It was due to the estimates of the yield of cotton throughout the world, and especially in the United States, made by other parties, and it was due in part, perhaps, to a failure to report accurately by the Agricultural Department, and during the month of November—I think it was November; I am sure it was during that month—the Department of Agriculture made an estimate of the yield of cotton in the United States, and it was to such effect that instantly the price of cotton went up $2 a bale, or about that.

I ask the Senator if that does not indicate a lack of proper information furnished the people by the Agricultural Department from week to week and from month to month up to that time? In other words, it would seem that the information up to that time was so inaccurate or imperfect that the estimates of the yield of cotton were such that they did not give the people a fair opportunity to judge properly as to what the yield would be, and consequently it furnished the speculators in cotton throughout the United States with an opportunity to reduce the price of cotton. In other words, does not this go to show the inaccuracy or insufficiency of the estimates furnished by the Agricultural Department up to that time?

Mr. ALLISON. It gives me pleasure to answer the question of the Senator from Texas. I have before me a report, known as the final report on the cotton crop of 1899–1900, issued on the 31st day of January, 1901, which, of course, was within a short time after the final crop had been gathered, and it was a short crop, I understand, in 1900. Now, I wish to read from this report in explanation of the criticism that the Senator from Texas has made.

During the first half of the year the New Orleans representative of a well-known European cotton firm was predicting one of the largest crops on record.

What was that for? Was that with a view to increasing the price of cotton?

Notwithstanding that, the Department's monthly reports indicated a production of only 9,000,000 to 9,500,000 bales. On September 10—the Department's report stated that the condition of the cotton crop on September 1 was the lowest, with one exception, in twenty-five years. Yet only two days later the firm in question issued a circular in which the statement was made that the conditions were favorable to as large a crop as that of the preceding year, which they estimated at 12,000,000 bales, actual growth.

In one of these monthly bulletins—

On October 10 a further marked decline in condition was reported by the statistician of the Department, and the very same day, as if to break the force of such announcement, the New Orleans representative above referred to stated that the crop would be "at least 11,000,000 bales certain," and that such a prediction was his "minimum estimate."

On November 10 the statistician issued his first estimate in bales—

He was then getting these monthly reports from the ginneries, and from what had already been baled, and knowing the course of the picking of cotton and knowing how much had reached the ginneries and how much was still in the field, he was able to make a reasonably accurate guess as to the total crop of the year 1900. I read:

On November 10 the Statistician issued his first estimate in bales, placing the crop at a "maximum of 9,500,000 bales."

"At a maximum of 9,500,000 bales."

On December 10 the Statistician reported—

That was the last estimate. That was after the ginning had all, or practically all, been done, because the ginning of cotton is all completed by the middle of December. After having received reports from these ginneries, on December 10——

Mr. McLAURIN of Mississippi. Will the Senator allow me to correct him?

Mr. ALLISON. Certainly.

Mr. McLAURIN of Mississippi. The cotton is not all ginned in many instances until way in March.

Mr. ALLISON. Of course I appreciate the value of the information of the Senator, because he knows better than I do. I understand it is not all ginned, but the great bulk of it is ginned, and what is not ginned is estimated, of course. But it is of sufficient accuracy to give the men who owned the cotton knowledge of what the crop was.

What good does it do a man who sells his cotton on the 1st day of February to know what the total product of the ginneries is on the 1st of March? It is of no value to him to await the 1st of March to know what the practical result of the crop is. A man would be unwise indeed, to say the least of it, who would delay giving a report of the cotton crop until he got reports from all the ginneries that no more cotton was to be put in the ginneries or ginned.

Mr. BERRY. Will the Senator yield to me to make a short statement?

Mr. ALLISON. Certainly.

Mr. BERRY. It is not a question, but a short statement.

Mr. ALLISON. That is all right.

Mr. BERRY. I understand the precise question before the Senate is the amendment offered by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN] to the text of the bill. The amendment provides that the ginnery reports shall be made monthly, beginning with the 1st of October and ending with the 1st of March. Now, I think I agree with the Senator from Iowa in one thing, and that is that the House provision in this bill without amendment is worthless. It simply gives the amount of last year's cotton crop, which is not valuable, I concede. I agree to that. Therefore if that provision is to stand, I think the Senator from Iowa will probably agree that the amendment ought to be adopted.

Mr. ALLISON. Yes; but it ought to be modified if it is to be adopted.

Mr. BERRY. The only question before the Senate, as I conceive, is whether or not it is important, in addition to these very valuable reports that are furnished by the Secretary of Agriculture, that this new bureau, which is to be created and with respect to which I am informed there is some difficulty in finding sufficient business for it to do, shall undertake to furnish the service provided in this bill.

Mr. ALLISON. That is all.

Mr. BERRY. It is a provision which looks to getting the same information, it is true, that is furnished by the Secretary of Agriculture. Now, in estimating the cotton crop, if I am correctly informed, and Senators from the Southern States will know, you begin the 1st of September. The cotton year is from September to September. That is how they make the estimate as to the amount raised during the year. The important time when accurate information should be had, the important time when there should be reports that all the country knows are correct reports, is from September until the 1st of March, and it is more important in October, November, and December than at any other time.

The Senator from Iowa is absolutely correct when he says that it has been the habit and the practice of certain dealers in cotton in Europe and in New Orleans, and in many other points, to overestimate the supposed yield for that cotton year, to give it out certainly that there will be 11,000,000 or 12,000,000 bales, for the sole purpose of running down cotton to the lowest price possible in order that they may buy. There is no doubt about that. It has been done again and again.

The object which we from the South have is to offset that by getting accurate information which the people will believe and from sources that the people will believe are absolutely certain, so that they may not be led to sell their cotton by reason of overestimates made by dealers from time to time in order to reduce the price.

I have no criticism to offer upon the Agricultural Department. I think they have given the information as they have acquired it from time to time under the present Administration honestly. I think they have sought in every way to get accurate information; but, according to what the Senator from Iowa has just stated, while those reports were given out showing that the cotton crop for the year would not amount to more than 9,000,000 or 9,500,000 bales, these other parties issued estimates and said it would amount to eleven or twelve million bales, and thousands upon thousands of men sold their cotton at a reduced price because of the estimates made by the New Orleans speculators. There is no doubt about it.

Now, I desire to ask the Senator from Iowa a question. This new bureau, as I said, is not going to be overworked in the interval. If we had additional reports, from information taken by enumerators, beginning with the 1st of October, as to the number of bales ginned during the month of September, and so during October, November, and December, then you could compare those gin reports with the amount ginned in those localities and at those gins the preceding year, and you could tell, not with absolute certainty, but approximately, the amount of the cotton crop. Does not the Senator think that such reports, from information taken under the law, compelled to be accurate, sworn to, if necessary, by the parties that furnish it, would be of sufficient importance, as adding to and supplementing the report of the Secretary of Agriculture, to justify the small expense that the Senator from Wisconsin says this would entail?

Then if the gin reports correspond with the reports that are being made by the Secretary of Agriculture—the two departments being separate—I think it would tend to give great confidence throughout the entire country in the statements as to the probable amount of cotton produced during the year.

Mr. ALLISON. I agree, of course, with most of what the Senator from Arkansas has said; but what I am trying to show by this quotation is that the reports made by the Agricultural Department are accurate, and have been accurate, while interested parties issued statements in order to buy the cotton from the farmer or the local factor, if you please, at a reduced price, and to sell it at an increased price.

I appeal now to Senators from the cotton States whether I am correct or incorrect when I say that the great body of the cotton crop in each year has passed from the local factor and the producer into the hands of those men, small in number, who are seeking to buy the cotton for the New England and other mills in our own country and for the mills in other countries that buy more than half of it and which have their agents here.

It is stated here, in the beginning of this paragraph which I read, that this estimate was thrown out by a perfectly competent person, I have no doubt, and probably by a person having the confidence of local producers of cotton; and therefore, although the Agricultural Department put up a warning signal to every producer of cotton not to be misled, because there was a short crop and hence the price of cotton would inevitably rise, they listened probably to this local agent in New Orleans rather than to the Agricultural Department.

Mr. BERRY. Will the Senator from Iowa permit me? I agree with him entirely, but if we had this additional census report they would listen to the Secretary of Agriculture and a report of the Director of the Census rather than to the local man. That is the point I make.

Mr. ALLISON. That is probably true; but if we could have four or five additional statements from other departments it would with doubting Thomases still add to the verity of the report.

I wish to proceed, and I do not desire to occupy unnecessarily the time of the Senate.

On November 10——

Mr. QUARLES. From what document does the Senator read?

Mr. ALLISON. The Cotton Crop Report for 1899–1900, page 99.

On November 10 the Statistician issued his first estimate in bales, placing the crop at a "maximum of 9,500,000 bales."

Mr. CLAY. I desire to ask the Senator whether November 10 was not the first time when the Agricultural Department estimated in bales the amount of the crop?

Mr. ALLISON. It may not be mentioned elsewhere, but I desire to say to the Senator that the Department had obtained reports from the ginneries from the time they began operations, and therefore, although it may not be stated in the report before this one I have named, it was an element that entered into the monthly estimate of the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. CLAY. I think the Senator will find I am correct; that November 10 was the first time when the report was made giving number of bales.

Now, I do not want to be misunderstood. I believe that the Agricultural Department is properly conducted, and I have no complaint to make of it. It might have been inferred a while ago that I said the Department had made a mistake of a million and a half bales. I did not mean that. The Department has not made any such mistake. The firms referred to did make the mistakes. Whether they did it purposely or not I do not know.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not know.

Mr. CLAY. But they did make it, and cotton went down, and the estimate in bales from the Agricultural Department was not received in time to correct the mistake. The Agricultural Department has generally been found to be correct.

Mr. ALLISON. This is the first estimate in bales, I agree.

Mr. QUARLES. May I ask the distinguished Senator from Iowa a question?

Mr. ALLISON. Certainly.

Mr. QUARLES. What is the weight of a bale as the Agricultural Department reports it? I understand there are various bales and various weights, so that a report in bales does not indicate anything accurate. I do not know whether I am wrong about it.

Mr. ALLISON. The Senator from Wisconsin is probably right.

Mr. McLAURIN of Mississippi. Five hundred pounds is the Southern bale.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask the Senator from Mississippi to repeat his statement.

Mr. McLAURIN of Mississippi. Five hundred pounds is a bale of cotton.

Mr. QUARLES. I notice by the report of the census that the bales vary very considerably in weight. I simply wanted to call attention to that fact.

Mr. ALLISON. The bales do vary in weight; and it of course is not to be expected——

Mr. McLAURIN of Mississippi. There is a difference between the ordinary bale of cotton and the box bale. A box bale is the amount put in at the gin at the box, but when we speak of a bale of cotton we mean 500 pounds.

Mr. ALLISON. That is what is understood in a commercial sense.

Mr. McLAURIN of Mississippi. Yes, sir.

Mr. ALLISON. Therefore everyone knows that the estimate was based upon that. I have not the document here, but I know I have read that the bales vary in weight somewhat, and of course in estimating, as you would be obliged to estimate, you would estimate the average weight of the bales.

But what, I will ask Senators, is the object of this information? It is not to learn whether there are 500 pounds in one bale and 499 in another, but it is so to gather from every source possible information of what the cotton crop is to-day or this year as compared with the cotton crop of last year, and that, I agree, is the most valuable information, in an agricultural sense, because this crop is an agricultural crop, that can be given to the people, and not only to those who produce cotton, but to those who consume it or use it in the various forms in which it is used.

I wish to proceed. On November 10 the Agricultural Department, for the first time, made its estimate in bales. Prior to that time it made its estimates in percentages as compared with the former crop—that is to say, the former crop being 85 per cent, this year's compared with it is 81 per cent, we will say, showing whether the crop was running up or running down.

Mr. CULBERSON. That is exactly the point which I undertook a while ago to call to the attention of the Senator from Iowa. The information furnished by the Department of Agriculture up to November 10 was so indefinite that the price of cotton went down, and during the intervening months it was gathered and ginned and sold by the producers at the low prices. Then, on November 10, and thereafter, after a large part of the cotton crop had passed into the hands of speculators, came this general estimate in bales, and instantly the value of cotton went up $2 a bale or thereabouts. That is the point to which I intended to invite the attention of the Senator a while ago.

Mr. ALLISON. I will try, if Senators will permit me, to unfold that situation, and I will take this in the concrete as an illustration. On November 10 the Department estimated the maximum crop to be 9,500,000 bales. It did not take an algebraic formula to reduce that to what the crop was.

Now, four days after that estimate it was announced in New Orleans by this expert that he had not reduced his estimate below 11,000,000 bales.

Now we come to December 10, when most of the ginning reports were in. Then the Secretary of Agriculture, through his machinery, having in his hands an estimate of a great portion of the cotton already ginned, and comparing it with all the estimates he had made before and all the sources he had utilized before, estimated the cotton crop of that year at 8,900,000 bales. He did that as soon as he had within his possession the elements and all the elements that would enable him to make an accurate estimate.

And yet only two days later—

I am still reading—

And yet only two days later the firm in question stated that its New Orleans representative "makes no change in his figures" and "does not abandon his hopes of 11,000,000 bales."

From September to December the Secretary of Agriculture warned all the producers of cotton that there was a short crop of cotton during that year.

On January 17, 1900, when a point had been reached where estimates of anything like 11,000,000 bales would only have excited ridicule and the greater part of the crop had been sold—

I appeal to Senators from the cotton States whether or not the Secretary of Agriculture is right when he says that on January 17 of a given year the greater portion of the cotton crop is sold. I ask the Senator from Mississippi whether or not that is true, or at what time the greater portion of the cotton crop is sold and passes from the community where it was grown?

Mr. McLAURIN of Mississippi. The great portion of the cotton crop in our State is sold by the farmers who produce it by the 1st of December. There is a good deal of cotton, though, that is held until January, and a great deal there is not picked out until January and sometimes until February, especially in the river section of our State.

Mr. ALLISON. I have no doubt that is true, and it is only a verification of what I was stating and what appears everywhere.

Mr. McLAURIN of Mississippi. The farmers generally sell their cotton as fast as they can pick it out. They need the money. The trouble with us and the trouble with the farmer in our section of the country—in the cotton belt—is due to the reports made by the firm you speak of in New Orleans and such firms as that. They want to bear the market. They make a large estimate of the crop that is produced during the year. What we want is to get some official report, something definite, from a bureau such as this, having the time and having better opportunities under the law to furnish a definite estimate in the matter, and report from the 1st of September, when the crop is being marketed or commences to be marketed, and the cotton season begins. Then the farmer and the people who deal in cotton can know something of the probable yield of that year, and, knowing it, can have a better idea of the price of cotton and the price cotton will be, and the farmer will know whether to hold his cotton or to sell it.

Besides that, if he is compelled to sell, the market will be better if the purchaser knows that there is a small yield than if the purchaser supposes that there is a large yield. The purchasers are influenced by that a great deal in the price they give for cotton, as well as the seller in the price at which he sells his cotton.

Mr. ALLISON. I inquired of the Senator because I knew he is familiar with the market of cotton, as are other Senators who reside in the cotton region. What he wants and what other Senators want I also desire. But I am utterly failing in what I am trying to say if I do not convince all Senators that this work is being done, and accurately done, in the Agricultural Department.

I will omit some portion of this report and ask that the paragraph may be inserted entire in what I am saying.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

Mr. ALLISON. I have read and shall read most of it. I only want to put it in connectedly.

The matter referred to is as follows:

During the first half of the year the New Orleans representative of a well-known European cotton firm was predicting one of the largest crops on record, notwithstanding that the Department's monthly reports indicated a production of only 9,000,000 to 9,500,000 bales. On September 10 the Department's report stated that the condition of the cotton crop on September 1 was the lowest, with one exception, in twenty-five years; yet only two days later the firm in question issued a circular in which the statement was made that the conditions were favorable to as large a crop as that of the preceding year, which they estimated at 12,000,000 bales actual growth. On October 10 a further marked decline in condition was reported by the statistician of the Department, and the very same day, as if to break the force of such announcement, the New Orleans representative above referred to stated that the crop would be "at least 11,000,000 bales certain" and that such a prediction was his "minimum estimate."

On November 10 the statistician issued his first estimate on bales, placing the crop at a "maximum of 9,500,000 bales." Four days later the European firm announced that its New Orleans representative had "not reduced his former minimum estimte of 11,000,000 by a single bale." On December 10 the statistician reported that the indications pointed to a crop not exceeding 8,900,000 bales; and yet only two days later the firm in question stated that its New Orleans representative "makes no change in his figures" and "does not abandon his hopes of 11,000,000 bales." On January 17, 1900, when a point had been reached where estimates of anything like 11,000,000 bales would only have excited ridicule and the greater part of the crop had been sold—even then this New Orleans representative contended that the "Interior holdings" were "immense," and his firm figured out a crop exceeding 10,000,000 bales. It is not too much to say that had the carefully collected information published by the Department during this period had the influence on prices that it should have had, the planter would have received from 2 to 3 cents per pound more than he actually received, the effect of the high private estimates above quoted, and especially of the presistency with which they were adhered to by their author, being to check any advance of prices in Liverpool, the market that has always regulated prices in this country.

Mr. ALLISON. The following appears in this paragraph of the report:

It is not too much to say that had the carefully collected information published by the Department during this period had the influence on prices that it should have had, the planter would have received from 2 to 3 cents per pound more than he actually received.

Mr. McLAURIN of Mississippi. If the Senator will allow me, that is just what we want to do. We want to get an estimate.

Mr. ALLISON. So I understand.

Mr. McLAURIN of Mississippi. And we want to get it as accurately as possible and as soon as possible, so that the people who produce the cotton will get the benefit of the increased market. Generally after the cotton gets out of the hands of those who produce it the price goes up, because it is found that then there is less cotton made than had been estimated, and probably estimated by companies like the one in New Orleans to which the Senator referred.

Mr. ALLISON. That I understand, and that the Secretary of Agriculture understands. That is the reason why the Secretary takes the pains he does take to furnish accurate and complete information from every source as to the growth, production, area, and quantity of cotton produced from year to year. I repeat what is here stated, if the planter had taken the estimates and statements of the Department of Agriculture he—would have received from 2 to 3 cents per pound more than he actually received, the effect of the high private estimates above quoted, and especially of the persistency with which they were adhered to by their author, being no check to any advance of prices in Liverpool, the market that has always regulated prices in this country.

The estimate was made for the people who bought cotton in European markets, and therefore they held back or at least helped to depress the price of cotton during those months.

Mr. McLAURIN of Mississippi. Will the Senator allow me?

Mr. ALLISON. Certainly.

Mr. McLAURIN of Mississippi. The planter could not be benefited by taking the estimate of the Agricultural Department. The price of cotton is fixed by the amount of the crop that is produced. When the planter goes to sell his cotton he is compelled to sell at the price it is then bringing. You have a company in New Orleans or a company anywhere else estimating largely for a crop with a view to bearing the market, and then you have the Agricultural Department. Those who sell and those who buy judge of the future price of cotton by the number of bales likely to be produced or that likely have been produced.

If they have two sources of information—one the Agricultural Department and the other the estimate made by certain companies—they must judge from those two; but if you have the Agricultural Department and then a report from the Census Office, under the authority of law requiring them to investigate this matter, the planter, who is the seller, and the purchaser will have a better opportunity to judge of the amount of the cotton that has been produced during the year and a better opportunity to judge whether cotton will go up in price or whether it will fall.

Mr. ALLISON. That is said much better than I could have said it, and it lies at the foundation of this proceeding. If the planter chooses to derive no value from the knowledge that we propose to impart to him, if he pays more regard to an expert in New Orleans or New York as to the estimate of the crop than to the official whose duty it is to make the estimate and return and who does it, as I have shown, in the utmost detail, from the planting of the seed until the crop is harvested and ginned, then of course we can be of no advantage to him.

But now I wish to answer the Senator from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON] a little further. He says that these reports are estimates and guesses. That may be true. Everything is an estimate in a degree, although it would seem that every pound of cotton which comes from a cotton gin, for it is all sound cotton, would be an accurate statement of the product, because no cotton can be thrown into market until it is ginned.

I find in this same report a statement of the cotton crop as derived from another source, which it is not proposed in this bill to invoke the Census Bureau for. This report shows the commercial crop. What is the commercial crop? It is the crop sold in the year 1900—that is, the crop of 1899 and 1900—and the crop was 9,142,838 bales. The estimate made in December by these statisticians, taken from the ginneries and all other sources combined, was 8,952,234 bales, or a difference in estimate in a crop of 10,000,000 bales of a little less than 100,000 bales. I submit to the Senator from Texas that that is about as accurate, it seems to me, as we can have it.

Mr. President, I wish to have it understood, in the first place, that whatever is required to be done here is already being carefully done in the Department of Agriculture by people who know about it as well as from the ginneries themselves, and whatever information may be gathered under this limited provision by the Director of the Census will be practically no guide to the farmer or producer of cotton until the bulk of the cotton crop has passed to New England or to the factories in the South or to Liverpool, because the only thing that is done here, even with the amendment of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN] is to take the monthly product of the ginneries. That is of no value to the producer of cotton in and of itself. There must be in addition to it that intelligent following and gathering up of all the information that is obtainable which is now being done by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Mr. BERRY. Will the Senator from Iowa permit me right there one moment?

Mr. ALLISON. Certainly.

Mr. BERRY. I think the Senator is mistaken if he states that a report given out on the 1st day of October as to the number of bales ginned throughout the United States during the month of September would not be of very great value, because by comparing the amount ginned in 1902 in September with the amount ginned in 1901 in the same month a basis would be given for an estimate as to the probable outcome of the crop.

Mr. ALLISON. It would give a basis.

Mr. BERRY. It is in September, October, and November when the planter sells his cotton. If he, on the 1st of October, finds what was ginned in September and compares that with the year previous, could he not form an estimate of the probable crop of the coming year?

Mr. ALLISON. It would be but a very narrow and incomplete basis. That is the argument that I make.

Mr. BACON. Will the Senator permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. ALLISON. Certainly.

Mr. BACON. I wish to ask the Senator a question in all candor. Of course we understand that he looks to economy of expenditure in this matter.

Mr. ALLISON. That is all. I have no other motive.

Mr. BACON. I wish to ask the Senator whether in the presentation which he is making of this most remarkable, large, and extravagant expenditure he is influenced by a desire to save the small amount that will be required to take the statistics or by a desire to postpone the passage of the census bill to a remote time, when necessarily the number of those who may be included in the civil service will have been greatly reduced by that fact?

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, the latter part of the question propounded by the Senator from Georgia is unkind.

Mr. BACON. Well, Mr. President——

Mr. ALLISON. And it is untrue.

Mr. BACON. I hope the Senator will allow me to disclaim any purpose to do anything more than submit a matter of pleasantry.

Mr. ALLISON. That is not a matter of pleasantry, I will say to the Senator.

Mr. BACON. I certainly in my service in this Chamber have never given the Senator any reason to believe——

Mr. ALLISON. Certainly; not hitherto.

Mr. BACON. That I would give offense in any way.

Mr. ALLISON. The suggestion of the Senator that I am trying to prolong the debate and postpone the passage of this bill is also a gratuitous statement.

Mr. BACON. I have, I thought, disclaimed that it was anything more than a pleasantry.

Mr. ALLISON. Very well; I accept the disclaimer.

Mr. BACON. But the Senator insists on it.

Mr. ALLISON. I accept it, if it included that. I have occupied, perhaps, more time than I ought to have occupied, but I have thrown no impediment in the pathway of this bill. The Senator truthfully says that when I have made objections to the provision respecting cotton, I have made them practically for two reasons: First, that all the information sought is already provided for by law; and secondly, that I will be confronted, as I think other Senators may be confronted, with the idea, sooner or later, that we had better expand this Bureau to the taking of an estimate of the corn and wheat and other products of the farm and the factory annually.

Mr. GALLINGER. Do not leave out hay, which is very important.

Mr. ALLISON. And hay also. Hay is the most important crop of all.

Mr. President, I would not for a moment put in the pathway of this provision an impediment if I did not believe that the work is wisely and well done.

Now, as to the expense. If the Senator from Georgia will give me his attention I want to impart to him a little information on another branch. I understood him to say that he thought this work was being extravagantly done.

Mr. BACON. Oh, I beg the Senator's pardon.

Mr. ALLISON. You did not?

Mr. BACON. If the Senator will permit me, I was speaking of the proposed expenditure as one which will not be a very great extravagance.

Mr. ALLISON. No, it will not be; at least I hope not.

Now, the expenditure in obtaining this information in the Agricultural Department, not only as to the cotton crop, but all the crops of agriculture, amounts, in round numbers, to $150,000 per annum. The machinery, which I have described imperfectly, and which ramifies and permeates the entire cotton region, is one which has grown up practically out of the Weather Bureau. That Bureau has its trained observers and trained men at all the central stations I have named and the auxiliary and subsidiary stations running around through the region from which this information is gathered. This machinery for securing accurate local information lies directly in the Agricultural Department. Therefore I entered into a description of it for the purpose of showing, among other things, that the Department of Agriculture, cotton being an agricultural product, is the natural and proper place for getting this information, and especially so when it has, without any additional, or material additional, expense, all the elements which it can utilize to aid in securing the information.

Now, unless the Census Bureau shall also ask that the Weather Bureau shall be transferred to it, it can never have the opportunities of providing information for the benefit of the farmers of the United States as the Agricultural Department has now. Therefore it is that I wished to vindicate, so far as I could, the Agricultural Department from the aspersion that it is not diligently and constantly doing the things which are now proposed to be done by the Census Bureau.

I will say to Senators that unless this inexpensive machinery, which is directly accurate and adequate, and which is in play every day of the year and every week of the year, furnishing this information is utilized, the expense of gathering this information will naturally be greatly increased.

If it is only the purpose of this bill (the Senator having charge of the bill will explain it), as now appears, to obtain the amount of cotton baled at the ginneries and to take the men who do the baling as the source of information (and I know of no better sources), it is an inexpensive affair. I can see no reason why a man who gins cotton should have a motive to say that he ginned 8 bales when be actually ginned 20, or that he should say he had actually ginned 20 bales when he had ginned only 8. The best sources of that class of information are the ginners of cotton, and I assume that they would uniformly make correct returns of the product of their ginneries.

If that be true and that be all that this proposes it is, as I said, an inexpensive affair, because all the Director of the Census has to do is to take his own showing of the number of ginneries in the United States in 1900 and their names and then take from them or add to them, as the Secretary of Agriculture has already done and has in his possession, the ginneries that are out of use and the new ginneries that have come in since the 1st day of June, 1900, when the census was taken. It will be easy enough for the Director of the Census to go to the Department of Agriculture and get the names of those ginneries and write to their owners or whoever carries them on to furnish to him at the end of each week, as I believe they do now to the Secretary of Agriculture, the amount of cotton ginned during that week, and when a month is reached multiply those weeks into months and find how much has been ginned during the month of September, for instance, and then publish a bulletin stating that fact. That bulletin, of course, would be brief. If he wants to go further and estimate from the amount of ginning done in that particular month the probable cotton crop, it will be a mere guess, unless he has also in his possession the information which now is being gathered by the Secretary of Agriculture and must be gathered by him.

When I first began to examine this matter and when I saw in this bill a provision which I have never seen in any other for a permanent bureau of the United States, a proposition whereby any number of special agents may be created, I got the idea (and if it was an erroneous one I am ready to be corrected) that it was the purpose to employ special agents to do this work. If that is done it will be at a very great expense.

I do not wish in anything I have said or that I may do to, for a moment, minimize the importance of absolutely accurate information from month to month as respects cotton, nor would I be willing to spare a large amount of money. I would think as insignificant any large amount of money which is ordinarily expended in these matters to furnish to the producers of cotton at the very earliest practicable moment accurate and full information in regard to the cotton crop of the year.

So when I am saying what I do say I am not doing it in hostility even to this bill. I am only doing it for the purpose of showing, as imperfectly as I have shown, the fact that in the Department of Agriculture we have the machinery, the methods, whereby this is done.

I want to say another thing. I am not doing this at the request of anybody, nor I am I doing it because the Secretary of Agriculture happens to be from my State. I believe in him thoroughly, and in his ability and industry and intelligence in the discharge of his public duties there. I mistake him if I can not also say that he is as much devoted to the cotton producers of the United States as he is to the corn producers, and that he is striving with all the instrumentalities in his power to give to all the farmers of the United States every opportunity and facility possible in his Department to have the information, which it is necessary and essential for them to have, if they are intelligently to carry on the business of producing cotton, or corn, or wheat.

Mr. BACON. Will the Senator permit me a moment?

Mr. ALLISON. Certainly.

Mr. BACON. The Senator says if this is important, he does not think any prospective expense too great to accomplish it.

Mr. ALLISON. Any necessary expense.

Mr. BACON. It is not to be presumed that it will be any greater than it is in the Agricultural Department.

The Senator is from a corn country, and I desire to ask him a question. He has stated an exceptional proposition. As I say, the Senator is himself from a corn country, and every Senator here representing the cotton-producing States thinks this information is important to the cotton producers. The Senator from Iowa, from a corn-producing State, does not think it important to the cotton producers, and therefore opposes it. Now, which is the more reasonable, that the opinion of the Senator from Iowa should be taken as to what is important to the producers of cotton, or the opinion of all the Senators, without exception, from every cotton State who think to the contrary?

Mr. ALLISON. Well, Mr. President, I am not in the position of the twelfth juryman; and I think the 11 jurors might be able to persuade the twelfth.

Mr. BACON. I hope they will.

Mr. ALLISON. I am not trying to delay this bill; I am not trying to impede its progress, and I have not done so. When the bill was under consideration on Saturday and the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. QUARLES] asked unanimous consent that it might be considered to-day I did not object. I am certainly as much interested in this bill as are most of the Senators. I believe we ought to have a permanent census office. I am for it and expect to vote for this bill; but I trust it is not a subject-matter of proper criticism for me to express my views and to array, as best I can, imperfectly though it may be, the facts respecting this matter; and then if the 11 jurors are successful, I shall be as content as possible with the result.

I only want, so far as I am concerned, to show to the Senators who seem to have the idea, and who here and elsewhere have stated that there was no such information, that there is already absolutely accurate information furnished; and when I have done that I have discharged my duty.

I will say to the Senator from Wisconsin, after having said thus much on the subject, that I shall interpose no further impediment in the pathway of his bill; and I hope nobody has been disturbed because I have spoken a half hour or longer.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NELSON in the chair). The question is on the amendment submitted by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN].

Mr. ALLISON. I ask that the amendment may be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 7, section 9, line 1, of the last print of the bill, after the word "ginneries," it is proposed to insert:

And bulletins giving the results of the same shall be issued monthly, beginning October 1 of each year and continued till March 1 following.

Mr. MONEY. Mr. President, I want to offer three little amendments to the amendment of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN], and I send them to the Secretary's desk all in one copy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will state the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. MONEY] to the amendment of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN].

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to amend the amendment of Mr. TILLMAN, so as to make it read as follows:

And bulletins giving the results of the same shall be issued weekly, beginning September 1 of each year and continued till February 1 following.

Mr. MONEY Mr. President, I offer these three little amendments to the amendment offered by the Senator from South Carolina because I think they will serve more effectively the interests of the farmers in the cotton belt.

In the State of Texas, which is now making about one-third of the cotton crop, or a little over, they begin picking cotton as early as the 1st of July. It very frequently happens that cotton picking begins the 1st of August in Mississippi and other States; and I think it necessary that these reports should begin in September instead of October. A great deal of the cotton is sold during that time.

I also think that these reports should terminate on the 1st of February, because by that time all the field cotton is out, or all that amounts to anything, and nothing that is picked after that time amounts to anything in quantity or quality.

I also desire that the reports shall be made weekly instead of monthly. There will be very little more cost added, because you have already got the whole machinery in operation; the same number of clerks will answer, and only a little more correspondence will be required. Weekly reports will make a very material difference in the sale of the product. Everybody who lives in the cotton country knows how anxiously the 10th of the month is looked for to get the reports from the Department of Agriculture. Those reports are telegraphed all over the country and the price responds to it, going either up or down, and whether in Liverpool or the smallest cotton-selling depot in the cotton States, the effect is felt just the same. The price goes down in Liverpool and here if the reports show a heavy crop, and it goes up if the reports show a short crop. It is everything to the farmer that he should have prompt, accurate, and correct information.

It is unfortunate that it is the case that the buying public depend very largely upon men who are sent out by the great cotton firms in Savannah, New Orleans, Houston, New York, Liverpool, and other cities. These men travel over every section of the country. Besides that, they correspond with reliable people, as they consider them, everywhere. It is almost universally the case that these agents are bears. They are all the time predicting an immense crop. The authority read by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] himself admitted that he had overestimated the crop of two years ago about 2,000,000 bales. These predictions go on to the end of the crop year, until the crop has been harvested, and has really gone to market and nearly all of it has passed out of the hands of the farmer. Then comes the annual rise in the price of cotton, in which the farmer does not participate one single particle.

I agree with the Senator from Iowa in a great deal that he has said. The Secretary of Agriculture has done what he could do with the limited means at his disposal; but it sometimes happens, when a fund is placed at the disposal of the head of a department, which embraces a number of items, that one is neglected because of the superior demands made by another. Only the other day I heard that a certain fund, devoted to the collection of information regarding the life of plants and trees, had been in part diverted from its original design on account of its being required to inquire into the wheat weevil somewhere in the Northwest, and so it will continue.

The Secretary of Agriculture does not have, perhaps, as much money as he should have for effective working machinery; but I do not see how any harm can be done if we have a double lot of investigations going on. It is not going to cost a great deal to either department, and we will have the assurance of the corroboration of the reports made by the two departments. There need not be any conflict whatever. I know that in some Government work it will be like a repetition of labor, going over the same ground; but it is not in work of this sort, which is largely based upon estimates. The estimates are based upon immense correspondence and in some cases on personal supervision of the cotton district and its local market by people employed for that purpose. They are generally men of great ability, who receive high salaries, much higher than this Government will ever pay anybody for any such work; but nevertheless you will have men in this department quite capable of doing this work. If we should happen in both of these departments to have reports contemporaneously, we could make an average between the two estimates, and thereby would have a proper guard. We should not then be left to the estimates of one department only.

I conceive, therefore, that the amendment of the Senator from South Carolina has a proper place in this bill, but I think the amendment which I have proposed should be adopted. It is intended to afford protection to the cotton producer and to enable him to get the benefit of a rising market, or a falling market, so far as that is concerned. These reports should be issued weekly. That can be done just as well and almost as cheaply as the work is done now, and it should begin as early as September. I do not think there is any good reason for continuing the reports beyond the 1st of February.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. MONEY] to the amendment of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN].

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now recurs upon the amendment of the Senator from South Carolina as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. I move to strike out that portion of the bill relating to the collection of cotton statistics by the Director of the Census.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 9, on page 6, line 23, after the word "section," it is proposed to strike out:

> And that the Director of the Census shall annually collect the statistics of the cotton production of the country as returned by the ginners; and bulletins giving the results of the same shall be issued weekly, beginning September 1 of each year and continued till February 1 following.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The proposition is to strike out the words which have been read, which include the amendment which the Senate has just adopted.

Mr. ALLISON. I only wish to strike out the portion relating to cotton. I think the words "the Director of the Census" ought to remain in the bill. If those words are stricken out the bill may need other modifications.

Mr. BACON. The words are repeated.

Mr. ALLISON. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. MCCOMAS. I want to call the attention of the Senator from Wisconsin in charge of the bill to a suggestion which I shall not urge as an amendment, but I want to bring it to his attention that it may be considered in conference.

The Constitution authorizes Congress to vest the appointment of inferior officers "in the President alone, in the courts of law, or in the heads of departments." The Supreme Court has decided in the Hartwell case that a permanent clerk is an inferior officer, and in the Germaine case that the Commissioner of Pensions and the heads of bureaus are not heads of departments within that clause of section 2 of Article II of the Constitution. These employees are sought, by the fifth section of this bill, to be put directly into appointive places as inferior officers, I apprehend, by the action of Congress itself. It is within the power of Congress, through the heads of departments and the Executive, to appoint these inferior officers so long as they are employed in the taking of the Twelfth Census. I am convinced that under that decision of the Supreme Court they are still employees and not inferior officers.

As a remedy I am not at all sure that it is an effective way to dispose of the apprehension that I suggest to the Senator from Wisconsin, but it seems to me that in section 5, page 4, line 8, after the word "thereunder," if the words were added "until after the taking of the Thirteenth Census," perhaps they might yet remain as employees and might not come within the prohibition, if they are inferior officers under that provision of the Constitution. I am not at all sure that that would work the whole of this problem which that section intends to perform, but it does seem to me that that amendment would at least put the matter into conference, so that the conferees might be able by some even more apt term to remove the objection, which I seriously apprehend will arise from an effort by a direct act of Congress to appoint inferior officers, which Congress can not do directly.

I make the suggestion that it may go into conference, but I shall not urge the amendment against the wishes of the chairman of the committee.

Mr. GALLINGER. On Saturday, at my instance, an amendment was adopted which will be found in section 5, page 4, lines 8, 9, 10, and 11. I desire to ask unanimous consent to change the last word in that amendment from "certification" to "employment."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Hampshire asks leave to change an amendment which was adopted at his suggestion on Saturday last.

Mr. GALLINGER. Simply as to one word.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 5, on page 4, after the words "in the matter of," at the end of line 4, it is proposed to strike out the word "certification" and insert "employment;" so as to read:

> And persons who have served as soldiers in any war in which the United States may have been engaged, and the widows of soldiers, shall have preference in the matter of employment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there are no further amendments as in Committee of the Whole, the bill will be reported to the Senate.

Mr. ALLISON. Before that is done, I want to offer an amendment, on page 6, section 9, line 23, after the word "that," to insert, "in addition to the statistics now provided for by law."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 9, on page 6, line 23, after the word "that," it is proposed to insert "in addition to the statistics now provided for by law;" so as to read:

> And that in addition to the statistics now provided for by law, the Director of the Census shall annually collect the statistics of the cotton production of the country as returned by the ginners, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. I now desire to ask the Senator from Wisconsin a question, and then to suggest to him whether it is worth while to amend the provision to which I am about to refer. Section 12 of this bill provides specifically for the repeal of "the supplemental acts amendatory of the act of March 3, 1898, approved Feburary 1, 1900," etc., and then it adds:

> And all provisions of the act of March 3, 1899, inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

As I understand, the act of 1899 is intended to stand as the law, except where it is specifically modified by the provisions of this bill.

Mr. QUARLES. Certainly.

Mr. ALLISON. I see in the committee report that certain sections of the act of 1899 are repealed under the provisions of this bill, but the committee do not include the repeal of the seventh section of the law of 1899. The law of 1899 states that "the Twelfth Census shall be restricted to inquiries relating to population," etc. I shall not read the whole section.

Taking that section and one or two other provisions I have noticed, it would seem that this bill does not quite provide for what I think it was intended to provide, namely, the taking of the Thirteenth Census; that is to say, will not further legislation be necessary for the taking of the Thirteenth Census, and when the Twelfth Census shall have been completed will not the seventh section be inoperative? I have not examined the question with care, but it occurs to me that such may be the case.

Mr. QUARLES. Mr. President, the inquiry of the Senator from Iowa raises only an academic question, for the reason that, in my judgment, when we approach the next decennial period additional legislation will be required, and I have no doubt the whole subject will be gone over again in the light of the experience of the Bureau between this time and then. I have no doubt that that will be so. If there were time I could suggest the reasons which support this opinion, but I shall not do so at this late hour.

Mr. ALLISON. I have only called attention to it.

Mr. MALLORY. I desire to call the attention of the Senator from Wisconsin who has charge of the bill to the amendment which, after very considerable effort, was inserted in the fifth section on last Saturday, and ask the Senator if the amendment in the reprint of the bill, with which we have been furnished this morning, is correctly printed? Before the Senator answers I will call his attention to the amendment as it appears in the reprint of the bill which was placed on our desks to-day:

SEC. 5. That all employees of the Census Office at the date of the passage of this act, except unskilled laborers, holding positions which are classified in other departments of the Government shall be, and they are hereby, placed, etc.

Referring to the RECORD of Saturday, I find that the Senator from Maryland [Mr. MCCOMAS] offered an amendment, which, so far as I can discover in the RECORD, is the amendment which prevailed. At the bottom of page 1812 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, containing the proceedings of Saturday, I find the following:

Mr. MCCOMAS. In section 5, line 13, page 3, I move to strike out the words "above the grade of skilled laborer" and insert the words "except unskilled laborers."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Maryland.

The amendment was agreed to.

That appears to be the end of the proceeding. Now, in addition to that, by this amendment it appears that we also adopted the words "holding positions which are classified in other departments of the Government."

It strikes me, Mr. President, that there is an error here; and if there is, it ought to be corrected before we pass the bill.

Mr. QUARLES. I am thankful to the Senator from Florida for calling my attention to the matter. I had myself intended to call attention to that inaccuracy. It seems to be a mistake of the printer. The words which appear in the reprint of the bill "holding positions which are classified in other departments of the Government" are not properly and legitimately there.

Mr. MALLORY. And the amendment as it appears in the bill does not conform at all with the proceedings as indicated in the RECORD.

Mr. QUARLES. I move to strike out from the last print of the bill, in section 5, on page 4, line 2, after the words "unskilled laborers," the words "holding positions which are classified in other departments of the Government," in order to correct a mistake in the printing of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the amendment of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. QUARLES]? The Chair hears none, and the words are stricken out.

Mr. MCCOMAS. The Senator from Florida has corrected one error in the print of the bill, and I call the attention of the Senator from Wisconsin to section 4 of the reprint, and ask him whether that is accurate? I apprehend—but I am not sure that I am right—that the language of the amendment adopted was "that there shall be in the Census Office, to be appointed by the Director thereof, with the approval of the head of the department to which the said Bureau shall be attached."

I may be mistaken as to the proceedings, but that was my own apprehension of what the amendment was to be. I make the suggestion that it should read:

That there shall be in the Census Office, to be appointed by the Director thereof, with the approval of the head of the department to which the said bureau shall be attached, etc.

Mr. ALLISON. I suggest to the Senator from Maryland that the appointing power is now with the head of the department, with the approval of the Director of the Census.

Mr. MCCOMAS. With the approval of the head of the department. I am quite confident the words I have suggested will meet the difficulty, because in the Hartwell case it was stated that the appointment was made by the subtreasurer of the United States, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, and that that was a sufficient compliance with the constitutional direction that the appointment should be made by the head of a department. I therefore beg to ask the Senator in charge of the bill to accept that amendment.

Mr. QUARLES. I will do so with great pleasure.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senator from Maryland state the amendment he desires to offer?

Mr. MCCOMAS. In the present print of the bill, in section 4, on page 2, line 21, after the words "by the," I move to insert "Director thereof, with the approval of the;" so as to read:

That there shall be in the Census Office, to be appointed by the Director thereof, with the approval of the head of the department to which the said Bureau shall be attached.

Mr. ALLISON. I suggest that the word "is" be used instead of the words "shall be."

Mr. MCCOMAS. Very well.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. As proposed to be amended, the first part of section 4 would read:

That there shall be in the Census Office, to be appointed by the Director thereof, with the approval of the head of the Department to which the said Bureau is attached, etc.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the correction? The Chair hears none, and the correction will be made.

Mr. MCCOMAS. On page 5, section 7, line 22, after the word "the"—I ask the Senator in charge of the bill to accept the amendment which has just been stated—after the word "the" to insert "Director of the Census, with the approval of;" so that it will read:

The Director of the Census, with the approval of the head of said department, may appoint special agents, etc.

Mr. QUARLES. I am very glad to accept the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Maryland.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3104) to grant the right of way through the Oklahoma Territory and Indian Territory to the Enid and Anadarko Railway Company, and for other purposes; asks a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. LACEY, Mr. SHELDEN, and Mr. STEPHENS of Texas managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message also returned to the Senate, in compliance with its request, the following bills:

A bill (S. 3509) to transfer the county of Carroll from the northwestern division of the northern district of Georgia back to the northern district of Georgia of the United States district and circuit courts; and

A bill (S. 3654) to vest in the Spanish Treaty Claims Commission certain powers possessed by circuit and district courts of the United States.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills, and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (S. 73) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Arkansas River near Fort Gibson, Ind. T.;

A bill (S. 88) for the relief of the parties for the property taken from them by military forces of the United States;

A bill (S. 650) granting to the White River Railway Company the right to construct, maintain, and operate a single-track railway across the lands of the United States in the south half of the southwest quarter of section 22, township 14 north, range 8 west of the fifth principal meridian, in the county of Independence, in the State of Arkansas, reserved for use in connection with the construction of Lock No. 3, Upper White River, Arkansas;

A bill (S. 651) extending the time within which the Mississippi River, Hamburg and Western Railway Company is authorized to construct a bridge across the Bayou Bartholomew, in Arkansas;

A bill (S. 910) to extend the time for the completion of a bridge across the Missouri River;

A bill (S. 1165) to authorize the construction of a bridge over the Missouri River at or near the city of St. Joseph, Mo.;

A bill (S. 1838) authorizing the Memphis, Helena and Louisiana Railway Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Arkansas River, in the State of Arkansas;

A bill (S. 1839) authorizing the Memphis, Helena and Louisiana Railway Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the White River, in the State of Arkansas;

A bill (S. 1970) to provide an American register for the barkentine Hawaii; and

A bill (H. R. 4842) for the relief of the trustees of Carson and Newman College, at Jefferson City, Tenn.

NAVAL CONSTRUCTOR RICHMOND P. HOBSON.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

In June, 1900, Naval Constructor Richmond P. Hobson, then on duty at the naval station, Cavite, P. I., was found to be suffering from "compound hypermetropic astigmatism, retinal hyperæmia, and trachoma," and an operation was performed for the latter. On the 28th of June, 1900, he was admitted to the naval hospital, Yokohama, Japan, the hospital ticket stating: "Retinitis. There is good evidence it was in line of duty. While on duty at Hongkong, during the past year, he suffered from weakness of eyes, particularly after exposure to glare of sun, or while subject to the irregularities of light on board the ships under repairs." On September 7, 1900, he was discharged from the naval hospital at Yokohama and ordered to the United States, and was subsequently granted six months' leave of absence on account of continued "irritation of retinæ."

In January, 1902, Naval Constructor Hobson appeared before a retiring board, the medical members of which, after an examination of his case, made the following certificate:

"At present there is apparently only a slight retinal irritation, but by the exercise of reasonable care it should not give great trouble.

"An opthalmoscopic examination not made and deemed not essential.

"We believe, therefore, that Mr. Hobson is fit for active duty."

Upon this state of facts the retiring board decided "that Naval Constructor Richmond P. Hobson, United States Navy, is fit for active duty."

Without suggesting that any injustice has been done by this finding, and while in effect pronouncing it correct, Mr. Hobson states, in a letter addressed to the Secretary of the Navy, February 5, 1902, that "the duty required in the construction corps in connection with plans and blue prints, and in connection with inspection and supervision in the glare at shipyards and navy-yards, requires just the kind of use of the eyes that is painful and injurious and would tend to thwart their recovery;" that the condition of his eyes has improved since his return to the United States, while on special duty not in the usual line of work of the construction corps; but that "under these favorable conditions the irritation and sensitiveness continue and show that" he "should not undertake work that taxes the eyes in the future." He accordingly asks special legislation authorizing his retirement as for disabilities incurred in the line of duty. This request is approved by the chief constructor and by the Secretary of the Navy.

In consideration of the foregoing, but especially of the gallant service rendered by Mr. Hobson in the sinking of the Merrimac in the harbor of Santiago during the recent war with Spain, I recommend the enactment of a suitable measure for his relief.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

WHITE HOUSE, February 17, 1902.

Mr. GALLINGER. I ask unanimous consent, out of order, to introduce a bill for the retirement of Richmond P. Hobson.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask that it be read.

The bill (S. 3983) authorizing the transfer to the retired list of the Navy of Naval Constructor Richmond P. Hobson, United States Navy, was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to transfer to the retired list of the Navy, as for disabilities incurred in the line of duty, Naval Constructor Richmond P. Hobson, United States Navy, at the rate of pay provided by section 1588 of the Revised Statutes in the case of officers retired on account of incapacity resulting from long and faithful service.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

ENID AND ANADARKO RAILWAY COMPANY.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives, disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3104) to grant the right of way through Oklahoma Territory and the Indian Territory to the Enid and Anadarko Railway Company, and for other purposes, and asking a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. COCKRELL. I do not see the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs present, and I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments and accede to the request for a conference.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. QUARLES, Mr. HARRIS, and Mr. RAWLINS were appointed.

CARROLL COUNTY, GA.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the bill (S. 3509) to transfer the county of Carroll from the northwestern division of the northern district of Georgia back to the northern district of Georgia of the United States district and circuit courts, returned by the House of Representatives in compliance with the request of the Senate.

Mr. CLAY. I move to reconsider the votes by which the bill was ordered to a third reading and passed.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CLAY. I move that the bill be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

SPANISH TREATY CLAIMS COMMISSION.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate the bill (S. 3654) to vest in the Spanish Treaty Claims Commission certain powers possessed by circuit and district courts of the United States. The bill was recalled from the House of Representatives on motion of the Senator from Illinois [Mr. CULLOM].

Mr. LODGE. I understand we have passed the House bill. I therefore move that the bill be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. CULLOM. The Senate amended the House bill, and as I have heard nothing from the House with respect to the bill as amended, I suggest that perhaps it would be well for the bill to lie on the table for a short while.

Mr. LODGE. Let it lie on the table then.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will lie on the table.

CONSIDERATION OF UNOBJECTED BILLS ON THE CALENDAR.

Mr. LODGE. I ask unanimous consent that we may take up the Calendar and proceed with unobjected bills.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of unobjected cases on the Calendar. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. The first bill on the Calendar will be stated.

BILLS PASSED OVER.

The bill (S. 493) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a code of laws for the District of Columbia" was announced as the first case in order on the Calendar.

Mr. LODGE and Mr. ALDRICH. Let the bill go over.

The bill (S. 451) to provide for acquiring the rights necessary for the construction of a canal connecting the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans was announced as the next business in order on the Calendar.

Mr. LODGE. Let the bill go over.

The bill (S. 911) authorizing the Federal Railroad Company to construct a combined railroad, wagon, and foot-passenger bridge across the Missouri River at or near the village of Oacoma, Lyman County, S. Dak., was announced as the next business in order on the Calendar.

Mr. ALDRICH. The bill had better go over.

Mr. GAMBLE. I ask that the bill may go over without prejudice.

The bill (S. 1104) providing for the use by the United States of devices invented by its naval officers while engaged in its service and covered by letters patent was announced as the next business in order on the Calendar.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the bill go over.

REVENUE-CUTTER SERVICE.

The bill (S. 1025) to promote the efficiency of the Revenue-Cutter Service was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments.

The first amendment was in section 1, line 6, page 1, before the words "of engineers," to strike out "captain" and insert "captains."

Mr. GALLINGER. The amendment is incorrect. The word "captain," in line 5, should be "captains," and in line 6 it should remain "captain." It was a mistake in the print.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment as proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire will be stated:

The SECRETARY. In line 5, section 1, page 1, it is proposed to strike out "captain" and insert "captains;" and in line 6 to allow the word "captain" to remain; so as to read:

That on and after the passage of this act the commissioned officers of the Revenue-Cutter Service shall be as follows: Captains, first lieutenants, second lieutenants, third lieutenants, captain of engineers, chief engineers, first assistant engineers, second assistant engineers, and constructor; and the captain of engineers, chief engineers, first assistant engineers, second assistant engineers shall have the rank of captain, first, second, and third lieutenants, respectively; and the constructor shall have the rank of first lieutenant.

The next amendment of the Committee on Commerce was, in section 2, page 2, line 1, after the word "follows," to strike out the word "captain" and insert "captains;" so as to read:

SEC. 2. That the said commissioned officers shall rank as follows: Captains with majors in the Army and lieutenant-commanders in the Navy; first lieutenants with captains in the Army and lieutenants in the Navy.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 5, page 4, line 1, after the word "be," to strike out "submitted" and insert "transmitted;" in line 2, after the word "and," to strike out "if he approve;" and in line 3, after the word "for," to insert "his approval or disapproval and;" so as to read:

The proceedings and decisions of the board shall be transmitted to the Secretary of the Treasury, and shall by him be laid before the President for his approval or disapproval and his orders in the case.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 6, page 4, line 7, after the word "of," to strike out "no vicious habits of his own, but is" and insert "an incident of service, or is;" and in line 9, after the word "disability," to insert "and not his own vicious habits;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 6. That when a board finds that an officer is incapacitated for active service, and that his incapacity is the result of an incident of service, or is due to the infirmities of age, or physical or mental disability, and not his own vicious habits, and such decision is approved by the President, he shall be retired from active service and placed upon a retired waiting-orders list. Officers thus retired may be assigned to such duties as they may be able to perform, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in section 8, page 4, line 22, before the word "according," to strike out "in his place;" so as to read:

SEC. 8. That when any commissioned officer is retired from active service, the next officer in rank shall be promoted according to the established rules of the service, and the same rule of promotion shall be applied successively to the vacancies consequent upon such retirement.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 9, page 5, line 9, after the word "list," to insert "at the date of the passage of this act, or hereafter;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 9. That all officers borne upon the retired or permanent waiting-orders list at the date of the passage of this act, or hereafter, shall receive 75 per cent of the duty pay, salary, and increase of the rank upon which they have been or may be retired.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The junior Senator from Maine would like to have printed in the RECORD, in connection with the bill just passed, a statement by Admiral Melville, and also a statement of what the Revenue-Cutter Service has done in the last four years toward the preservation of life and property.

The papers referred to are as follows:

Admiral Melville's remarks before the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, February 4, 1902, in favor of House bill No. ——.

The bill promoting the efficiency of the Revenue-Cutter Service is one that meets with my earnest approval. It is a measure that has been advocated for many years, and the more study that has been given to the matter the more meritorious does the purport of the bill appear. The measure is of import to the 215 officers who comprise the commissioned personnel of the Revenue-Cutter Service. It is of greater import, however, to the merchant marine of this country, for any law that will promote the efficiency of the Revenue-Cutter Service will be of great resulting advantage to the merchant shipping of the several ports.

Probably the greatest argument that can be advanced in support of the bill is to tell of the people and the influences that are in favor of enacting it into law. The successive Secretaries of the Treasury since 1872 have urged the Congress of the United States to afford relief to the officers of this organization. Presidents Arthur and McKinley have cordially indorsed the proposition to enact legislation that will substantially improve the condition of the officers. Both the crews and owners of the whaling fleet know of the work and perils of the Revenue-Cutter Service and urge favorable action. The National Association of Marine Engineers, in convention assembled, earnestly urged Congress to recognize the worth and work of the excellent Revenue-Marine Service. During the past twenty years various commercial and maritime organizations have petitioned the Congress to enact substantially the legislation that is asked for in this bill.

Although the Cutter Service is, under existing law, under the cognizance of the Treasury Department, yet it is, always has been, and must necessarily be a military maritime organization. The service by law is made to enforce every statute that pertains to the protection of the country.

It is strikingly significant that just as soon as war is declared the service is practically drafted into the Navy and incurs every danger and peril that the regular men-of-war are subjected to. Does it not seem paradoxical that the men and ships of this organization are presumed to be in condition to be drafted at immediate call to the work of war and yet be not disciplined enough to fulfill the duties of the Navy in time of peace? The ships that have been constructed during the past five years for this service will compare very favorably, in speed and armament, with the best of the Navy gunboats.

For over forty years I have seen the ships and known the men of the Revenue-Cutter Service. I have watched these vessels leave port upon the approach of a gale to patrol the coast in the hope of rendering assistance to any ships that might have been unfortunate enough to have been cast on the beach. I have seen these revenue ships in the Artic Ocean hanging close to the ice pack, so as to afford immediate relief in case any of the whalers should be nipped in the floe. It is because I have seen this heroic work done that I have carefully studied the work of the organization. For over fifteen years I have had personal conferences with the Superintendent and engineer-in-chief of the service, and I know of the efforts that have been made by these executive heads to only take into the commissioned personnel young men of character, professional efficiency, and high integrity.

As for the engineers of the organization, their professional training and education have been of such nature that in short time I would have no hesitation in intrusting to their charge the care and management of the machinery of our best war ships. I believe that the percentage of men and officers who meet violent deaths in line of duty is greater in the Revenue-Cutter Service than it is in the Navy. The officers and men of this service have made sled journeys of hundreds of miles over the roughest kind of country in their attempt to carry relief to the shipwrecked whalers.

Both officers and men are proud of their organization. The cleanliness of the ships and the general discipline maintained show that all hands are imbued with the best traditions and customs of efficient military service.

The work of the Revenue Marine is a more dangerous occupation than that of the Navy, because the duty of the first organization is to police the coast, while the Navy really polices the ocean. It is seldom that a ship is now lost at sea. It is cruising along the coast that is dangerous, and this is the special province of the Revenue Marine.

Every reason that can be given for the creation of a retired list for the Army and Navy is applicable to that of the Revenue-Cutter Service. There is not a day when every man in all three organizations is not subject to call for perilous duty. The personnel of all three bodies is subject to military as well as to civil trial for various offenses. In entering all three services the civil rights of the individual are abridged and military responsibilities assumed.

The pay received by the officers of the Revenue Marine is not at all commensurate with the service rendered. The uniform of these officers differs but little from that of officers of the Navy. As the work of the service is in tropical, as well as in arctic, waters, the officers are obliged to keep on hand clothing of all descriptions. Since the only allowance given the personnel of the organization is a "ration" amounting to about 30 cents a day, it is necessary for all the married officers to practically keep up their individual homes, as well as to contribute a share of the mess expenses on board ship.

I know of no stronger words that could be said in advocacy of the bill than the report submitted by Senator GALLINGER from the Committee on Commerce. This report shows the character and work of the Revenue-Cutter organization as gathered from official reports. One can not read of the military work done by the ships of the Cutter Service during the Spanish-American war without coming to the conclusion that except in name the organization is as much of a military body as either the Army or the Navy. The injustice which has been suffered by the Cutter Service is told in this report, and the fact that no minority report was submitted by any member of the Committee on Commerce conclusively shows that the bill is a meritorious one, and that there is need for the enactment of this legislation.

The officers of the Revenue-Cutter organization neither possess wealth nor political power. No social forces are arrayed in favor of this bill. The measure is presented on its merits, and it seems to me if ever there was a time when immediate relief should be granted by legislation this measure presents an opportunity for such action.

Exhibit of services performed by vessels of the Revenue-Cutter Service during the fiscal years 1898, 1899, 1900, and 1901, and cost of their maintenance.

Year.	Distance covered in nautical miles.	Lives actually saved.	Vessels boarded and papers examined.	Vessels seized and reported for violation of law.	Fines and penalties incurred for violation of law.
1898	280,110	222	23,172	548	$242,695
1899	239,061	31	18,039	142	28,970
1900	312,091	55	20,089	309	54,860
1901	297,810	178	22,563	178	29,285
Total	1,129,072	556	83,863	1,177	355,810

Year.	Vessels in distress assisted.	Value of vessels assisted and their cargoes.	Persons on board vessels assisted.	Persons in distress taken on board and cared for.	Amount of annual appropriation for maintenance of the service.
1898	92	$1,640,280	679	329	$1,100,000
1899	111	1,752,667	1,465	86	1,100,000
1900	77	4,923,095	3,520	201	1,100,000
1901	107	5,197,825	1,581	101	*1,200,000
Total	387	13,513,867	7,245	717	4,500,000

*$40,000 additional subsequently appropriated to cover a probable deficiency.

NOTE.—Exclusive of the cost of maintaining and the work performed by 12 vessels which were cooperating with the Navy in the war with Spain from March 24 to August 17, 1898, and 1 from April 2 to November 2, 1898.

Recapitulation for the four years.

Distance covered, in nautical miles	1,129,072
Lives saved (actually rescued) from drowning	556
Vessels boarded and papers examined	83,863
Vessels seized and reported for violation of law	1,177
Fines and penalties incurred by vessels reported	$355,810
Vessels in distress assisted	387
Value of vessels assisted and their cargoes	$13,513,867
Persons on board vessels assisted	7,245
Persons in distress taken on board and cared for	717
Cost of maintaining service	$4,540,000

BILLS PASSED OVER.

The bill (S. 1348) to provide for ocean-mail service between the United States and foreign ports, and the common defense; to promote commerce, and to encourage deep-sea fisheries was announced as the next business in order on the Calendar.

Mr. LODGE and Mr. ALDRICH. Let the bill go over.

The bill (S. 2479) to facilitate the procurement of statistics of trade between the United States and contiguous territory over which it exercises control was announced as the next business in order on the Calendar.

Mr. ALDRICH. Let the bill go over.

The bill (S. 640) to extend the provisions, limitations, and benefits of an act entitled "An act granting pensions to the survivors of the Indian wars of 1832 to 1842, inclusive, known as the Black Hawk war, Creek war, Cherokee disturbances, and the Seminole war," approved July 27, 1892, was announced as the next business in order on the Calendar.

Mr. LODGE. Let the bill go over.

The joint resolution (S. R. 42) providing for the introduction of testimony in behalf of the defendant in all preliminary hearings of a criminal nature was announced as the next business in order on the Calendar.

Mr. ALDRICH. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. All these bills go over without prejudice, the Chair understands.

Mr. LODGE. Certainly.

HARVARD UNIVERSITY.

The bill (S. 1099) authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to return to Harvard University certain colors, silver cup, and Nordenfeldt gun was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Naval Affairs with an amendment, in line 8, after the word "returned," to insert "in like order as when received;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy is hereby authorized to give to Harvard University the 6-pounder Nordenfeldt gun, the set of colors, including ensign, jack, and pennant, and the silver loving cup presented by Harvard graduates to the auxiliary cruiser Harvard at the opening of the war with Spain: Provided, however, That said gun shall be returned, in like order as when received, to the Government at any time when it may be required for use.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM H. CRAWFORD.

The bill (S. 1563) for the relief of William H. Crawford was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Naval Affairs with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, William H. Crawford, of Philadelphia, Pa., an assistant engineer, with rank of lieutenant, junior grade, on the retired list of the Navy, as for disabilities incurred in the line of duty, to take effect upon the date of appointment.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move to amend the amendment by inserting at the end the words "under this act."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RETIREMENT OF PETTY NAVAL OFFICERS AND ENLISTED MEN.

The bill (S. 65) providing for the retirement of petty officers and enlisted men of the Navy was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

It provides that in computing the necessary thirty years' time for the retirement of petty officers and enlisted men of the Navy all service in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps shall be credited.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXTENSION OF NATIONAL-BANK CHARTERS.

The bill (S. 176) to provide for the extension of the charters of national banks was announced as the next business in order, and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller of the Currency is hereby authorized, in the manner provided by, and under the conditions and limitations of, the act of July 12, 1882, to extend for a further period of twenty years the charter of any national banking association extended under said act which shall desire to continue its existence after the expiration of its charter.

Mr. COCKRELL. I simply wish to enter on record the fact that I shall vote "no" on the passage of the bill.

Mr. CULBERSON. I should like to have the bill read again.

Mr. ALDRICH. I appeal to the Senator from Texas to allow the bill to pass. It is a simple bill for the extension of the charters of existing national banks, a large number of which will expire in a very short time, within the next three or four months, and it is absolutely necessary that the bill should pass. It extends no new privileges and changes in no manner whatever the status of banks as they now exist. There is nothing whatever in it except to allow them to renew their charters for twenty years. I assume that there can be no objection on anybody's part to this simple extension.

Mr. CULBERSON. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] has already entered his objection. A great many of us, particularly on this side of the Chamber, are opposed to the present system of national banks, especially that feature allowing them to issue money; and it seems to me that this measure is of such general consequence that it had better go over.

Mr. ALDRICH. The question as to what banking system should be adopted in the United States is undoubtedly very important, but I assume that neither the Senator from Texas nor the Senator from Missouri would desire to have those banks go out of existence by refusing to extend their charters. That would certainly bring about a condition of affairs in this country which I presume neither of those Senators would desire to establish. If there were any new questions involved in the bill or any new privileges extended, I should not make this appeal.

Mr. CULBERSON. I want the RECORD to show, so far as I am concerned at least, that I am opposed to the measure.

Mr. CULLOM. The RECORD will show that.

By unanimous consent, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RETURN OF BANK CHECKS, ETC.

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 88) authorizing the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to return bank checks, drafts, certificates of deposit, and orders for the payment of money, having imprinted stamps thereon, to the owners thereof, and for other purposes, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. COCKRELL. I should like to ask the Senator from Rhode Island if that covers all the checks which the Commissioner of Internal Revenue decided that he had not the right to return?

Mr. ALDRICH. Yes; that is just what occurred. They sent the checks here for redemption. There was no question about the desirability under the law of redemption, but there was no method under the law by which the checks themselves could be returned to the owners after the redemption had taken place. Therefore the Treasury Department is filled up with a great mass of checks.

Mr. COCKRELL. I know. They will just stamp these same checks and return them?

Mr. ALDRICH. They will cancel the stamps by some process. The Comptroller says it can be done without injury to the checks themselves. They will then return them to the owners. This is simply a provision for that purpose.

Mr. COCKRELL. That is what I supposed, but I wanted to know whether it would cover all the cases.

Mr. ALDRICH. It covers all the cases.

Mr. COCKRELL. There will be no other cases coming in?

Mr. ALDRICH. No.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

INTERNAL-REVENUE STAMPS.

The bill (H. R. 6570) to amend the act of May 12, 1900, authorizing the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to redeem or make allowance for internal-revenue stamps, was next in order on the Calendar.

Mr. ALDRICH. The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT] desires that the bill may go over, and therefore I make that request.

Mr. LODGE. Let it go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over without prejudice.

HENRY BIEDERBICK AND OTHERS.

The bill (S. 2921) to place Henry Biederbick, Julius R. Frederick, Francis Long, and Maurice Connell on the retired list of enlisted men of the Army was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It authorizes the President to cause Henry Biederbick, Julius R. Frederick, Francis Long, and Maurice Connell, survivors of the Lady Franklin Bay expedition, to be enlisted as first-class sergeants of the Signal Corps of the Army and to place them on the retired list of the Army, with the pay and allowances of first-class sergeants of the Signal Corps who have been retired after continuous active service of fifteen years.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. CULLOM. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After eight minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 4 o'clock and 56 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, February 18, 1902, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate February 17, 1902.

RECEIVERS OF PUBLIC MONEYS.

Henry G. McCrossen, of Wisconsin, to be receiver of public moneys at Wausau, Wis., his term having expired. (Reappointment.)

George A. Smith, of Utah, to be receiver of public moneys at Salt Lake City, Utah, his term having expired. (Reappointment.)

C. Frost Liggett, of Colorado, to be receiver of public moneys at Lamar, Colo., his term having expired. (Reappointment.)

SURVEYOR-GENERAL.

Alpheus P. Hanson, of Wyoming, to be surveyor-general of Wyoming, his term having expired. (Reappointment.)

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

Lieut. Commander Henry McCrea, to be a commander in the Navy, from the 9th day of February, 1902, vice Commander William Swift, promoted.

Mr. Walter E. Griffin, a citizen of Michigan, to be an assistant surgeon in the Navy, with the rank of lieutenant (junior grade), to fill a vacancy existing in that grade.

PROMOTION IN THE ARMY.

Cavalry Arm.

First Lieut. Le Roy Eltinge, Sixth Cavalry, to be captain, February 6, 1902, vice Batson, Fifteenth Cavalry, retired from active service.

APPOINTMENTS AS MEDICAL OFFICERS OF VOLUNTEERS.

James E. Mead, of Michigan, contract surgeon, United States Army, to be assistant surgeon, United States Volunteers, with the rank of captain, February 10, 1902, vice Slayter, resigned.

Herbert M. McConathy, of Kentucky, contract surgeon, United States Army, to be assistant surgeon, United States Volunteers, with the rank of captain, February 12, 1902, vice Griffith, appointed surgeon.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE ARMY.

ARTILLERY CORPS.

Joseph E. Myers, at large, to be second lieutenant, February 4, 1902.

INFANTRY ARM.

Edwin P. Thompson, at large, to be second lieutenant, February 8, 1902.

James W. Everington, of Minnesota, to be second lieutenant, February 2, 1901.

Andrew J. Lindsay, of Missouri, to be second lieutenant, February 2, 1901.

Walter C. Short, of Illinois, to be second lieutenant, February 2, 1901.

Sergt. Sam P. Herren, Company H, Eighteenth Infantry, United States Army, to be second lieutenant, February 2, 1901, to fill an original vacancy.

Corpl. Otho E. Michaelis, Company H, Ninth Infantry, United States Army, to be second lieutenant, February 2, 1901, to fill an original vacancy.

TO BE FIRST LIEUTENANTS.

Artillery Corps.

Clarence G. Bunker, of Minnesota, late captain, Thirteenth Minnesota Volunteers, September 23, 1901, to fill an original vacancy.

Hiram E. Mitchell, at large, late captain and assistant quartermaster, United States Volunteers, September 23, 1901, to fill an original vacancy.

Leonard T. Waldron, of New York, late first lieutenant, Twenty-eighth Infantry, United States Volunteers, September 23, 1901, to fill an original vacancy.

Philip Yost, of Ohio, late first lieutenant, Forty-seventh Infantry, United States Volunteers, September 23, 1901, to fill an original vacancy.

TO BE SECOND LIEUTENANTS.

Cavalry Arm.

Edgar N. Coffey, of Mississippi, late first lieutenant, Thirty-third Infantry, United States Volunteers, February 2, 1901, to fill an original vacancy.

Raymond S. Enslow, of Kansas, late first lieutenant, Eleventh Cavalry, United States Volunteers, February 2, 1901, to fill an original vacancy.

Artillery Corps.

Le Roy C. Bunker, of California, late private, Company L, First California Volunteers, May 8, 1901, to fill an original vacancy.

John B. W. Corey, of Minnesota, late sergeant, Company B, Thirteenth Minnesota Volunteers, May 8, 1901, to fill an original vacancy.

William E. De Sombre, of Wisconsin, late corporal, Company E, Second Wisconsin Volunteers, July 1, 1901, to fill an original vacancy.

Ralph E. Herring, of Minnesota, late private, Company A, Thirteenth Minnesota Volunteers, July 1, 1901, to fill on original vacancy.

John Philbrick, of New Hampshire, late private, Company C, Twenty-sixth Infantry, United States Volunteers, July 1, 1901, to fill an original vacancy.

Rex Van Den Corput, of Georgia, late captain, Third United States Volunteer Infantry, August 22, 1901, to fill an original vacancy.

Laurin L. Lawson, at large, late first lieutenant, Thirty-ninth Infantry, United States Volunteers, August 22, 1901, to fill an original vacancy.

Infantry Arm.

Louis B. Chandler, at large, late second lieutenant, Forty-third Infantry, United States Volunteers, February 2, 1901, to fill an original vacancy.

Martin Novak, at large, late second lieutenant, Forty-second Infantry, United States Volunteers, February 2, 1901, to fill an original vacancy.

Sydney Smith, of Louisiana, late first lieutenant, Second United States Volunteer Infantry, February 2, 1901, to fill an original vacancy.

John W. Ward, of Arkansas, late first lieutenant, Thirty-third Infantry, United States Volunteers, February 2, 1901, to fill an original vacancy.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

INFANTRY ARM.

First Lieut. William D. Conrad, Twenty-third Infantry, to be captain, November 7, 1901, vice Anderson, Ninth Infantry, deceased.

First Lieut. Paul Giddings, Third Infantry, to be captain, November 8, 1901, vice Torrey, Seventh Infantry, promoted.

First Lieut. Edward S. Walton, Eighteenth Infantry, to be captain, November 11, 1901, vice Jackson, Seventh Infantry, promoted.

First Lieut. Alfred T. Smith, Twelfth Infantry, to be captain, December 17, 1901, vice Wittenmyer, Fifteenth Infantry, detailed as paymaster.

First. Lieut. Bert H. Merchant, Eighth Infantry, to be captain, December 17, 1901, vice Dove, Twelfth Infantry, retired from active service.

First Lieut. Fred L. Munson, Ninth Infantry, to be captain, January 2, 1902, vice Hartshorne, Seventh Infantry, killed in action.

First Lieut. Thomas M. Anderson, jr., Thirteenth Infantry, to be captain, January 11, 1902, vice Batchelor, Twenty-fourth Infantry, retired from active service.

First Lieut. John E. Hunt, Twenty-fifth Infantry, to be captain, January 14, 1902, vice Gurovits, Eleventh Infantry, deceased.

First Lieut. Charles D. Roberts, Seventeenth Infantry, to be captain, January 31, 1902, vice Frederick, Seventh Infantry, promoted.

POSTMASTERS.

J. N. Newkirk, to be postmaster at San Diego, in the county of San Diego and State of California, in place of Moses A. Luce. Incumbent's commission expired February 11, 1902.

W. E. Cooper, to be postmaster at Las Animas, in the county of Bent and State of Colorado, in place of Francis M. Tague. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1902.

B. A. Lifsey, to be postmaster at Barnesville, in the county of Pike and State of Georgia, in place of Joshua G. Harris. Incumbent's commission expired January 31, 1902.

James A. Cummins, to be postmaster at Aledo, in the county of Mercer and State of Illinois, in place of James A. Cummins. Incumbent's commission expires February 23, 1902.

Frank Yeager, to be postmaster at Lanark, in the county of Carroll and State of Illinois, in place of Frank Yeager. Incumbent's commission expired February 11, 1902.

Sherman F. Myers, to be postmaster at Anita, in the county of Cass and State of Iowa, in place of Sherman F. Myers. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1902.

Henry L. Chesley, to be postmaster at Sutherland, in the county of O'Brien and State of Iowa, in place of Henry L. Chesley. Incumbent's commission expired May 12, 1901.

Clarence Mathews, to be postmaster at Maysville, in the county of Mason and State of Kentucky, in place of Clarence Mathews. Incumbent's commission expired February 16, 1902.

Samuel T. Moore, to be postmaster at Princeton, in the county of Caldwell and State of Kentucky, in place of Samuel T. Moore. Incumbent's commission expired February 16, 1902.

Jacob B. Coffman, to be postmaster at Russellville, in the county of Logan and State of Kentucky, in place of Jacob B. Coffman. Incumbent's commission expires February 25, 1902.

Woodbury Marson, to be postmaster at Booth Bay Harbor, in the county of Lincoln and State of Maine, in place of Woodbury Marson. Incumbent's commission expired May 12, 1901.

Edwin D. Goodell, to be postmaster at Brookfield, in the county of Worcester and State of Massachusetts, in place of Edwin D. Goodell. Incumbent's commission expired January 19, 1902.

Joseph C. Bartlett, to be postmaster at Lake City, in the county of Wabasha and State of Minnesota, in place of Joseph C. Bartlett. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1902.

James H. Roberts, to be postmaster at Binghamton, in the county of Broome and State of New York, in place of James H. Roberts. Incumbent's commission expires February 23, 1902.

Edwin B. Hard, to be postmaster at Cobleskill, in the county of Schoharie and State of New York, in place of Edwin B. Hard. Incumbent's commission expires February 25, 1902.

William A. Boyd, to be postmaster at Mamaroneck, in the county of Westchester and State of New York, in place of William A. Boyd. Incumbent's commission expired February 4, 1902.

Frank W. James, to be postmaster at Naples, in the county of Ontario and State of New York, in place of Frank W. James. Incumbent's commission expires February 22, 1902.

Prine Riggs, to be postmaster at Sodus, in the county of Wayne and State of New York, in place of Prine Riggs. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1902.

Henry B. Rollinson, to be postmaster at Rahway, in the county of Union and State of New Jersey, in place of Henry B. Rollinson. Incumbent's commission expires February 18, 1902.

Alfred R. Messler, to be postmaster at Upper Montclair, in the county of Essex and State of New Jersey, in place of Alfred R. Messler. Incumbent's commission expires February 18, 1902.

James R. Carley, to be postmaster at Hillsboro, in the county of Traill and State of North Dakota, in place of Ole Howard. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1902.

Ernest A. Hempstead, to be postmaster at Meadville, in the county of Crawford and State of Pennsylvania, in place of Ernest A. Hempstead. Incumbent's commission expired May 12, 1901.

Solomon S. Ketcham, to be postmaster at Overbrook, in the county of Montgomery and State of Pennsylvania, in place of Solomon S. Ketcham. Incumbent's commission expired January 31, 1902.

Frank J. Cory, to be postmaster at Watertown, in the county of Codington and State of South Dakota, in place of Frank J. Cory. Incumbent's commission expired February 8, 1902.

William L. Trent, to be postmaster at Knoxville, in the county of Knox and State of Tennessee, in place of William L. Trent. Incumbent's commission expires February 23, 1902.

John C. Williams, to be postmaster at South Milwaukee, in the county of Milwaukee and State of Wisconsin, in place of John C. Williams. Incumbent's commission expired February 15, 1902.

John A. Gilbreath, to be postmaster at Appleton City, in the county of St. Clair and State of Missouri, in place of Columbia Drew, removed.

Job Thompson, to be postmaster at Townsend, in the county of Broadwater and State of Montana. Office became Presidential January 1, 1902.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate February 17, 1902.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE ARMY.

TO BE FIRST LIEUTENANTS.

Artillery Corps.

Richard K. Cravens, of the Indian Territory, late first lieutenant, Fortieth Infantry, United States Volunteers, September 23, 1901.

Harry J. Watson, of Pennsylvania, late captain, Tenth Pennsylvania Volunteers, September 23, 1901.

TO BE SECOND LIEUTENANTS.

Cavalry Arm.

Thomas P. Bernard, of the District of Columbia, late sergeant, Company B, Forty-seventh Infantry, United States Volunteers, February 2, 1901.

Thomas A. Rothwell, of New York, late hospital steward Twenty-second New York Volunteers, February 2, 1901.

Artillery Corps.

Charles J. Ferris, of the District of Columbia, late corporal, Company G, Thirty-first Infantry, United States Volunteers, August 22, 1901.

Guilford S. Garber, of Indiana, late first lieutenant, Thirtieth Infantry, United States Volunteers, August 22, 1901.

Charles G. Mortimer, of the District of Columbia, late quartermaster-sergeant, First District of Columbia Volunteers, August 22, 1901.

Charles E. Wheatley, of Vermont, February 1, 1902.

Brainard Taylor, of Massachusetts, late private, Company A, Sixth Massachusetts Volunteers, August 22, 1901.

James B. Taylor, of Pennsylvania, late sergeant, Company H, Forty-second Infantry, United States Volunteers, August 22, 1901.

Infantry Arm.

Robert L. Meador, of Georgia, late sergeant, Company A, Third Georgia Volunteers, February 2, 1901.

Charles M. Blackford, of Virginia, February 2, 1901.

Fay W. Brabson, of Tennessee, February 2, 1901.

Leighton Powell, of Illinois, February 2, 1901.

TO BE ASSISTANT SURGEON.

Edward A. Romig, of Michigan, late surgeon Fortieth Infantry, United States Volunteers, to be assistant surgeon, United States Volunteers, with the rank of captain, February 5, 1902.

POSTMASTERS.

Andrew W. Wills, to be postmaster at Nashville, in the county of Davidson and State of Tennessee.

John W. Stuart, to be postmaster at State College, in the county of Center and State of Pennsylvania.

Daniel S. Knox, to be postmaster at Tionesta, in the county of Forest and State of Pennsylvania.

George W. Best, to be postmaster at East Brady, in the county of Clarion and State of Pennsylvania.

REMOVAL OF INJUNCTION OF SECRECY.

The injunction of secrecy was removed from the following treaty and convention February 17, 1902:

A treaty between the United States and Denmark providing for the cession to the United States of St. Thomas, St. John, and St. Croix islands, in the West Indies.

A supplementary convention between the United States and Great Britain, extending for a period of twelve months from July 28, 1901, the time within which British colonies or foreign possessions may give their adhesion to the convention for the tenure and disposition of real and personal property, signed at Washington on March 2, 1899.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, February 17, 1902.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN, D. D.

The Journal of Friday's proceedings was read and approved.

RECALL OF A BILL.

Mr. JENKINS. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the President be requested to return to the House of Representatives the bill (H. R. 5814) to provide for the execution in the Philippine Islands and in Porto Rico of deeds for land situate in the District of Columbia.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. My attention was momentarily diverted, and I did not catch the purport of this resolution.

Mr. JENKINS. It provides for recalling a bill from the President.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. What is the trouble?

Mr. JENKINS. The Attorney-General telegraphed to Manila on Saturday, and upon learning the condition of the law there with reference to the appointment of notaries it was deemed advisable to have this bill recalled. The ten days will expire to-morrow.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I have no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

REPRINT OF A BILL.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for a reprint of House bill 10530, being the bill to repeal war-revenue taxation. I am informed that the print is entirely exhausted.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York? The Chair hears none; and the order for the reprint will be made.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. EDDY, for thirty days, on account of important business.

To Mr. MCCLEARY, for one day, on account of sickness.

To Mr. SHEPPARD, for ten days, on account of sickness.

WAR-REVENUE TAXATION.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I submit the following privileged report from the Committee on Rules.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania makes a privileged report. The Clerk will read the same.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Committee on Rules, to whom was referred House resolution No. 135, have had the same under consideration and report the following in lieu thereof:

"Resolved, That immediately on the adoption of this rule, and immediately after the reading of the Journal on each day thereafter until the bill hereinafter mentioned shall have been disposed of, the House shall resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for consideration of the bill (H. R. 10530) to repeal war-revenue taxation, and for other purposes; that on February 18, at 4 o'clock p. m., general debate shall be closed in Committee of the Whole, when the committee shall rise and report the bill with such amendments as have been recommended by the Committee on Ways and Means; and immediately the House shall vote without debate or intervening motions on the several amendments reported from the Committee of the Whole on the engrossment and third reading, and (if the bill shall have passed to be engrossed and read a third time) on the final passage. General leave to print is granted for ten days from February 18 on the bill H. R. 10530."

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, the effect of this resolution, if it shall pass, will be to bring before the House for consideration the bill (H. R. 10530), which repeals all of the war-revenue taxation. The rule provides for the discussion of that measure until 4 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. It excludes all amendments, except those that have been recommended by the Committee on Ways and Means, and these are merely formal.

This measure is the redemption of a pledge made by the Republican majority at the time that the war-revenue measure was passed. It was then said that when the necessity that called for the passage of that act ceased to exist the taxes would be repealed. In pursuance of that pledge, in the last Congress a portion of those taxes were repealed, and now, in entire fulfillment of the pledge, all the war taxes are to be repealed.

It is a measure about which I take it there is a unanimity of opinion in this House, and there is therefore little necessity for any protracted debate. It is a simple repeal measure, and therefore it has been thought wise that it should be submitted to the House in the shape in which it comes from the committee, and so that its success may not be hazarded by any extraneous matter. I now yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. How much time? I promised to yield to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] fifteen minutes. Give our side thirty minutes.

Mr. DALZELL. Thirty minutes, if that is agreeable to the gentleman. I reserve the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL] reserves the balance of his time. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. RICHARDSON] is recognized for thirty minutes.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD], my colleague on the committee, desires fifteen minutes, half the time, and I yield to him.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, the resolution of the Rules Committee is objectionable to many of us on this side of the House, not because it brings a bill for the reduction of taxation before the House, but because it prevents the individual members of the House from exercising their own judgment and the wishes of their constituency as to how the present excessive taxes shall be reduced. It is true that at the time of the adoption of what is known as the war-revenue bill, the Congress and the members of Congress pledged the country that when the expenditures of the war were over we would repeal these taxes. I believed more than a year ago that the time had arrived when it was no longer necessary to keep on the statute books the bill known as the war-revenue bill or to collect from the people the hundred million dollars raised under its provisions and so voted; but because we are collecting very much larger revenues than are necessary for the current expenditures, it does not mean that it is necessary for us to reduce those revenues along a straight line, on one particular bill; if it is advantageous to the country, make the reduction in some other way.

There are some of these war-revenue taxes that reach citizens and classes of property that are not taxed by the Federal Government in any other way. The inheritance tax is levied on a class of wealth, a class of property, and a class of citizens that do not otherwise pay their fair share of the burdens of the Government. Under this rule we are required to vote for a repeal of all the provisions of the war-revenue bill, if we propose to repeal any, and as we can not afford to continue to pile up in the Treasury a hundred millions of surplus revenue, taking it from the natural channels of trade and endangering the prosperity of the country—if this rule is adopted, we are compelled to vote for the bill as a whole rather than get no relief at all. That is my objection to this ironclad rule. I believe the country is now facing a situation where Congress should act wisely and discreetly in reducing the revenues of the country, but I believe that there are some taxes in the war-revenue bill that should remain as they are, that there are other taxes levied under the Dingley tariff act that should be reduced and the revenues cut down thereby.

Now, I know, and I agree with the gentlemen on that side of the House, that were we to engage to-day in a general revision of all the tariff laws of the United States it might have a very disastrous effect on the country, irrespective of whether the legislation proposed was good or bad, because when you enter upon a general tariff-revision bill, whether it is on the part of the Republican party or on the part of the Democratic party, when you announce to the country that you are going to change the tariff regulations and the tariff taxes on the business interests of the country the announcement of such a policy affects the business of every man who is engaged in importation or in manufacturing. He does not know what will be the result of the legislation until Congress has acted. Necessarily he draws himself into his shell in a business way and stops all business until the law has been passed. This has always been the case.

When the Democratic party undertook the enactment of what has been known as the Wilson bill, the business interests of the country stood still until that law was put on the statute books. When Mr. McKinley was elected President of the United States, and the announcement was given out to the country that we would have an entire revision of the tariff laws of the United States, the manufacturing and business interests of the country were stagnated for the time being, and the business of the country did not go on and prosper until that legislation had been enacted.

So that I say, that as far as I am concerned, if I had the opportunity to amend this bill as I saw fit, although I believe entirely in a reduction of the tariff duties in the United States, I would not think it advisable and at this time and in this way to take up a general revision of the tariff laws. I think it should be done gradually; I think the time has come in this country when the tariff duties are so related to the business interests and prosperity of the United States that Congress should look at it from a business standpoint, and make such changes as the country desires, in a way that will not stagnate or jeopardize the present trade relations of the country.

Now, I know that for many years, or in recent years, I might say, my party has not been in favor of reciprocity. There was good reason for their taking that position. I myself am not in favor of a reciprocity treaty made by the President of the United States and submitted to the Senate of the United States for its revision. The people of the United States pay their taxes into the Federal Treasury in proportion to the number of people or the wealth of the country. They are not represented in the Senate of the United States in that way. In this House we have a representation based on population, and in that way, based on wealth, business enterprise, and tax-paying capacity of the country. In the Senate representation is based on States. There are 16 States in the Union having 32 Senators in the United States Senate, composed of only 90 Senators, and having only 27 Representatives in the popular branch of Congress out of a total representation at this time in the House of Representatives of 357.

In other words, these 16 States have, under the census of 1900, a population of 5,565,367, as against a total population of 74,565,906 in the 45 States in the Union, and represented in Congress they represent only about 7½ per cent of the people of the United States and not quite 8 per cent of the membership of the House of Representatives, but more than one-third of the United States Senate. Under the Constitution of the United States it requires a two-thirds vote to ratify a treaty; in other words, 60 Senators must vote for the treaty in a full Senate to secure its ratification; therefore it rests in the power of 31 Senators to defeat any treaty or dictate on what terms they will agree to ratify it. When you give the Senate the power to make commercial treaties affecting the tariff schedules, they have the power to regulate taxation, and we find ourselves in the anomalous position where it is possible for 7 per cent of our population to dictate terms for the other 93 per cent, not only as to taxation, but as to our commercial prosperity and development.

Therefore, as to this great public question, if we leave it to the President to make reciprocity treaties with foreign nations and submit them for the ratification of the Senate, one vote over one-third of the United States Senate can dictate to the balance of the country what the tariff laws shall be made and what our trade relations shall be. The gentlemen representing these small States are very able men. They have many times demonstrated that. But the far Western States are not in touch with the South or the East in business or their manufacturing interests; and I believe it would be unwise to leave such arrangement to the Senate of the United States. On the other hand, the condition of trade in Europe is such to-day that we can not deal with it as our fathers have dealt with it in the past.

There was a time when the Democratic party was in favor of absolute free trade, reaching out for the markets of the world, and there was no check to their entering the markets of the world except that they must make the best goods at the lowest price. To-day the countries of Europe where our best market for export trade is found are working on an entirely different business basis. Every nation on the Continent of Europe is reaching out for foreign trade, and they are attempting to get that trade by making reciprocal trade contracts with other nations. The nations of the world to-day stand in the same attitude of two business men in a trade. If anyone desires to make a trade with you, there must be something in the trade that you think will be of benefit to you before you will make the trade with him. It is a purely business proposition of reciprocity in the trade contracts.

Now, I say the time has come in the history of this country when Congress intends to modify or change tariff rates or reduce the tariff duties, as I believe we ought to do; that we ought to make the changes desired so as to receive for our people all the benefits that can accrue to us from the proposed concessions; this is what our competitors in Europe are doing, and unless we meet them in their practical methods to secure trade and commerce the people we represent will be the sufferers. And I do not see but one way in which that can be done. As I stated in the beginning, I am opposed to this being done by what is known as a reciprocity treaty, negotiated by the President and confirmed by the Senate, because, outside of all constitutional questions involved in the matter, I do not believe that the Senate of the United States as constituted fairly represents the business interests of this country. Therefore, if I had an opportunity to amend this bill and opportunity to offer an amendment, which this rule will cut out, I would offer a proposition such as I send to the desk and ask to have read in my time.

The Clerk read as follows:

That for the purpose of readjusting the present duties on importations into the United States, so as to raise sufficient revenues to support the Government economically administered, and at the same time to encourage the export trade of this country, the President of the United States is authorized and empowered to negotiate trade contracts with foreign nations wherein mutual concessions are made, looking to the expansion of our foreign trade: Provided, however, That said trade contracts, before becoming operative shall be submitted to the Congress of the United States, for ratification, amendment, or rejection.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. There may be some members of the Democratic party who believe that Congress in adjusting the tariff duties should look solely to the question of revenue, but in my opinion, in the necessary readjustment of the present tariff laws of this country, it is our duty to take advantage of existing conditions wherever we can for the benefit of our home people. We have on the statute books to-day the highest ad valorem protective tariff that the country has ever known, the average rate of duties running between 49 and 50 per cent ad valorem on the value of the goods imported.

The tariff rates collected under the existing law in many instances are no longer necessary for the protection of the home manufacturer, but most of them would produce a greater revenue if the tariff rates were lowered. The question, then, for the Democrats and the Republicans alike, irrespective of the theories advanced by either as to the proper mode of arranging tariff taxation, is how can these duties be best reduced so as to work the greatest benefit to the people of the United States. Some may say, on the Democratic side, that we should reduce them irrespective of the benefits received from such reduction by the people, merely looking to placing the tariff rates on a revenue basis. This might be maintained as sound Democratic doctrine were there no laws on the books, no changes to be made; but I maintain that there is nothing un-Democratic in our securing all the benefits that we can for our people through a reduction of the present existing tax rates.

There is sound Democratic authority for this position. When Mr. Jefferson was the Secretary of State in President Washington's Cabinet, Congress asked his advice as to the best means for promoting commerce of the United States with foreign countries. In his report Mr. Jefferson said:

As to commerce, two methods occur—first, by the friendly arrangements with the several nations with whom these restrictions exist, or, second, by the separate act of our own legislative for countervailing their efforts. There can be no doubt but that of these two, friendly arrangements is the most eligible.

He also said:

Some nations not yet ripe for free commerce in all its extent might still be willing to modify its restrictions and regulations for us in proportion to the advantages which an intercourse with us might offer. Particularly, they may concur with us in reciprocating the duties to be levied on each side, or in compensating any excess of duty by equivalent advantages of another nature.

There may be Republicans in this House who are unwilling to tear down the "Chinese wall of protection" that the Dingley bill has built about the commerce of the country, but I call their attention to the prophetic and fateful words uttered by President McKinley in his address at Buffalo a few hours before he was stricken down by an assassin. He said:

The period of exclusiveness is past. The expansion of our trade and commerce is the pressing problem. Commercial wars are unprofitable. A policy of good will and friendly trade relations will prevent reprisals. Reciprocity treaties are in harmony with the spirit of the times; measures of retaliation are not.

These words express the true sentiment of the business interests of the country. The people of the United States realize that, were it not for the foreign trade that takes our surplus agricultural products, prices would become demoralized and farming become unprofitable.

For many years after the civil war, when the great West was developing and thousands of immigrants coming into this country and building new homes, our manufacturing interests found a ready market for all their products at home. It was neither wise nor profitable to ship their goods abroad, but in the intervening thirty years our manufacturing interests have outgrown the home market. There are no new markets developing at home. Unless we can find markets beyond the seas in which to dispose of our surplus products, idle factories, mills, and foundries will be the result. It is true that we yet consume in this country the greater proportion of our agricultural products and find a home market for the greater proportion of our manufactured goods, but it must be borne in mind that the price is largely fixed by the surplus products. If a cotton crop is 10 per cent in excess of the normal demand, the price of cotton falls far below 10 per cent of the normal price. On the other hand, if the cotton crop is 10 per cent less than the normal crop, the price advances far in excess of the usual price.

The same is true of all other products of the soil and of the output of our manufacturing establishments. With a ready demand in foreign countries for our surplus products, prices will be maintained and prosperity will be found at home. With no markets for our surplus products abroad, falling prices must necessarily result and stagnation in business follow with the distress at home. A few illustrations of what we can accomplish in foreign markets by entering into trade contracts with foreign nations may not be out of place. In the first place, the world's imports for 1900 were, approximately, $10,398,189,000. Of this amount this country only supplied $1,468,373,470, or barely 14 per cent. More than two-thirds of this small share of the world's commerce was made up by our exports of food stuffs, so that we secured less than 5 per cent of the world's trade in manufactured goods.

In 1897 the importations into France amounted to $117,000,000. Of this amount $34,000,000 is credited to Great Britain, $31,000,000 to Germany, and our share amounted to only $4,000,000. Why does this condition exist? Neither Germany nor Great Britain can raise food products as cheaply as they can be raised in America. We are shipping from this country into both England and Germany pig iron, steel rails, engines, iron pipes, and a vast number of other products of our manufactures that are absolutely excluded from the French markets, because the Republic of France is levying a discriminating duty against us. To illustrate, steel rails manufactured in this country are required to pay a discriminating duty of $11.50 more than steel rails manufactured in either Germany or Great Britain; pig iron manufactured in this country is required to pay a like discriminating duty of $1.60 per ton, and so on through the entire iron and steel schedule and on many other articles.

The reason for this discrimination against our country is that we are levying an average ad valorem duty on French importations into this country of 49 per cent, and the Government of France is retaliating against us for excessive tariff rates, with the result that a vast market for the sale of our wheat, corn, pork, and cotton, and the products of our factories, foundries, and mills is practically closed to us.

In 1893 we had a reciprocal trade agreement with the Kingdom of Spain for the islands of Cuba and Porto Rico. Our total exports to Cuba for that year amounted to $24,157,698. This arrangement was annulled in 1894, and by 1896 our export trade to Cuba had fallen off to $7,530,880.

We have demonstrated that by fair concessions there is a splendid market for our surplus products in Cuba if we will but give them a chance to trade, but the present position taken by this Government with Cuba, so far as its trade is concerned, is more despotic than that ever exercised by the Kings of Spain. We have destroyed their trade with other nations, and on account of our high protective tariff absolutely refused to allow them to trade with us. We announced to the world that we proposed to assume the guardianship of Cuba from philanthropic motives, and yet in the face of the world we are proceeding to strangle the child of our adoption to death, and not only to the hurt of the child, but to our own injury as well.

On account of our high discriminating duties against German products, the Empire of Germany has declared a commercial war against us, not only against our manufactured products, but against our agricultural exports as well. They have very recently increased their tariff rates per 100 kilos ($220\frac{46}{100}$ pounds) on wheat from 83 cents to $1.55; on rye, from 83 cents to $1.43; on barley, from 48 cents to 95 cents; on oats, from 86 cents to $1.48; on flour, from $1.74 to $3.20; on corn, from 38 cents to 95 cents; on hogs, from $1.19 to $2.38; on meats, from $4.04 to $8.33.

This is an example of what the American farmer is receiving in exchange for his present folly in maintaining an unjust and unnecessary tariff discrimination. But Germany has also made a like discrimination against our manufactures. She has raised the rate on bicycles from $5.75 to $35.70; on shoes, from $11.90 to $20.23; on tools, from $1.90 to $4.76; on lumber, from 19 cents to 30 cents, and so on through almost all the entire schedule. Some time ago our country became involved in a controversy with Russia over the importation into this country of a small amount of sugar. Under the Dingley law it was discriminated against with what result? We practically excluded the importation into this country of $250,000 worth of Russian sugar. Russia has excluded the importation into that country in retaliation of $6,000,000 worth of American machinery. She has advanced her tariff rates on almost all manufactures. But a few illustrations will serve to illustrate the result. On boilers, tanks, and other articles of sheet iron and steel, from $1.078 to $1.708; on cast iron, water, or sewer pipes, from $1.078 to $1.707; on all iron and steel used in buildings for furniture, from $1.694 to $4.017, etc.

A writer in a recent magazine article says:

Russia, on a small scale, by her prompt acceptance of Mr. Gage's challenge, has thrown a useful light on the precariousness of being an enormous seller and a small buyer. In German hands the lesson could and as it seems will be brought home yet more unmistakably, for Germany's exports to the United States are worth only about half as much as American exports to Germany—$97,374,700 to $184,048,094. Germans believe and, as the new provisional tariff bill shows, are ready to act on their belief that America has better reasons to keep on good commercial terms with them than they with America, and they are therefore using their advantage to force Congress to choose between an equitable reciprocity treaty and the loss or partial loss of the German trade.

The commercial relations among the leading nations of the world has rapidly been approaching the relations that exist among individuals in trade and commerce. Business men do not make the same price to all customers in all places and at all times. A customer who buys in large quantities usually receives a better price than one whose trade is small or uncertain. A purchaser who pays cash or has good credit receives advantages that are not given to one who has not.

In adjusting our foreign trade relations with other countries we can not take advantage of the ordinary business methods that would be exercised by two individuals if we continue to have the uniform tariff rates against different countries irrespective of the benefits we may receive from them.

In my judgment, wise diplomacy and wise legislation for the benefit of our people would be to give those foreign nations advantage of tariff reductions that would return like advantages to us, and not to give them to those nations that can not or will not aid us in return. What I have thus said is not out of harmony with the doctrines that the Democratic party has always maintained. We must raise a revenue by levying tariff duties, and in raising it there is nothing inappropriate or indefensible in making it act most severely against those who discriminate against us and work most advantageous to those nations that maintain friendly trade relations with us.

The present commercial treaties existing between the United States and foreign nations generally expire about 1902 and 1903. I believe under these circumstances it would be wise at this time to place the power in the President's hands to protect our foreign commerce by making trade contracts with other nations. I believe that the only way that this can be properly done is by enacting a law such as I desire to offer as an amendment to this bill. I see no reason or excuse why the members of this House should refuse at this time to allow such a proposition to be voted upon, and if they do so by adopting the rule that will prevent all amendments to the pending bill, they will maintain the present Chinese wall of tariff exclusion to the serious injury of our export trade, and in the end will bring disaster to our business interests and distress to the constituencies they represent. [Loud applause.]

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I yield to the gentleman from Texas for five minutes.

Mr. BALL of Texas. Mr. Speaker, the effect of this drastic rule if adopted will be not only to cut off all amendments to this bill, but to prevent even a motion to recommit with instructions in order that the will of this House may be ascertained. This is but another step in the parliamentary evolution which has effaced individualism in this House and enthroned with autocratic power a few men who dominate not only the legislation which is passed, but that which is suppressed. It is but another step in the backward path which has caused the popular branch of the National Legislature to abdicate its functions as a deliberative body. It is but another step in seeking yet a lower depth in public opinion, if it is possible to find a depth which the House of Representatives has not already reached.

It is but another step in bringing us into contempt with the body at the other end of the Capitol, which has no respect for the membership of this House as a whole, not individually, because in patriotism, legislative ability, and fidelity to duty we are the equal of the members there, but disdain for a legislative body whose individual members are without power to obtain recognition except by the grace of one man and without the power to offer an amendment to pending legislation except by the grace of three men.

Now, Mr. Speaker, if this rule is adopted, $75,000,000 of taxes will be removed at one swoop. Nobody believes that the Senate of the United States is going to permit this to become a law without proper consideration. Everybody who is informed knows that the reason why this rule has been adopted is to gag two Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee, to gag a number of Republicans on that side of the Chamber and all of the Democratic members of this House. Everyone who is informed knows that the object of this rule is to prevent the hand of taxation from being laid upon the sugar trust, the steel trust, and other bloated corporations.

The action of Mr. Reed in counting a quorum was to dispatch public business. The object of this rule is to prevent a fair and proper consideration by the House of Representatives of pending legislation. I see by the papers that the coterie of distinguished gentlemen who dominate this House have persuaded the President of the United States that the "iron hand" is necessary in order to prevent wholesale tariff revision. But, Mr. Speaker, this rule is not intended for that purpose. It is intended to prevent what every member of this House knows, viz, if we are allowed to offer the amendments offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BABCOCK] in the Ways and Means Committee it is beyond the power of any three men to prevent their passage in this House. If this rule should pass, as I anticipate it will, if you succeed in wiping off all the war taxes and in preventing the adoption of amendments—the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] may laugh, but the gentleman knows I am speaking the truth—it will be because you dare not permit this House to vote on proper amendments.

The Republican party is driven to desperate straits when it dare not trust the members of that party to express their will. Allow the amendments presented by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BABCOCK] to be presented here and you know they will pass the House and be sustained in the Senate. As you refuse to allow any amendments by the proposed rule, we will appeal to the House to vote down the rule. If the House fails us, we will appeal to the Senate to give this great measure proper consideration. If the Senate fails us, we will appeal to the country to defeat a party so tyrannical and hurl from power in this House the few men who now absolutely dominate its deliberations and prevent a fair expression of its legislative will. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I now yield three minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HAY].

Mr. DALZELL. If the gentleman from Tennessee will pardon me, I would like at this point to yield three minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BABCOCK].

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Very well.

Mr. DALZELL. Then, Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BABCOCK].

Mr. BABCOCK. Mr. Speaker, I want to say in reference to the rule that is presented here this morning that I shall not offer any opposition to it. I believe there are other matters that should have been considered at this time, and especially those relating to the maintenance of tariff duties on sugar and the reduction of duties on iron and steel. But after consultation with the members who were in sympathy with me on this proposition I find the sentiment is that nothing should be done that would in any way hazard the passage of the war-revenue repeal bill; that they believe it to be their duty to their constituents to vote for this repeal and not jeopardize its passage by presenting other legislation in the shape of amendments; and further, that Congress is under moral obligation to pass this bill at the earliest date possible and relieve the country from this burdensome tax. For these reasons, Mr. Speaker, I shall vote for the rule; but I wish to say at this time that I shall take the first opportunity that presents itself after the passage of this bill to press for consideration House bill 9056, amending the iron and steel schedule.

Mr. THAYER. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee and the gentleman from Pennsylvania control the time.

Mr. THAYER. I wish to ask the gentleman from Wisconsin a question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin has taken his seat.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I now yield three minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HAY].

Mr. HAY. Mr. Speaker, the adoption of this rule means the humiliation of every member on this floor. Under its provisions are to be considered great measures which affect the business interests of the entire country, and under it no amendments can be offered; not even a motion to recommit can be entertained. Such a display of political cowardice has never before been witnessed in this country. [Applause on the Democratic side.] Will the majority of the members on this floor sustain the action of the Committee on Rules, or will they repudiate a proposition which degrades the popular branch of this Government? Everybody knows that when this bill goes to the Senate it will be amended, it will be discussed, it will be debated for days, if not for weeks.

By this rule we take away from this House its rightful functions and its constitutional power. Will the direct representatives of the people abdicate their rights? Are we to give color and emphasis to the opinion of the country that the House of Representatives is a machine to register the decrees of arbitrary power? When every other country in the world is giving more power to its representatives, this Republic, the mother of popular governments, is relegating every question of importance to the upper branch of the legislature. We are bound and gagged and forced into accepting the action of a bare majority of one of a committee upon a question of vital import to this country.

We are told that we are to have general debate. "General debate" when the result is predetermined! Why talk of debate, when debate is vain and useless?

Every man on this floor who respects the dignity of this House, who respects his constituents, who has any self-respect, who is an advocate of freedom of speech and liberty of action, will vote against this rule, which degrades this House and takes from it those rights which the people have conferred upon it and which they expect it to maintain and to exercise. [Loud applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, about one-half of the fifteen minutes assigned to me has now been occupied. I ask that the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL] now occupy a portion of his time. We have only about seven minutes left.

Mr. DALZELL. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON].

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I recollect well when the legislation was enacted which the House of Representatives will, I trust, so far as it can, in the next two days repeal. War had been declared with Spain. It was necessary to have additional revenues collected from the people. The Republican party, then in power as now in this House, under the leadership of the late distinguished Representative from Maine, Mr. Dingley, passed the law which we now propose to repeal, with certain statements and pledges. One was that it was apparent that the enactment was necessary, and the other, in which we all on the Republican side participated by vote, and many by voice, was that when the war closed and these revenues were no longer necessary the Republican party, if in power, would see to it that they were repealed.

I recollect quite well the debates that occurred. On the other side of the House there were various propositions. The most statesmanlike of all was that we should pay the expenses of that war by coining all the silver bullion in the Treasury, etc. When the vote came, in the face of denunciations on the other side of the House that we were enacting that legislation with a high hand and that the House was lowering its dignity, the Republican party passed a bill and, with a few honorable exceptions, the gentlemen on the other side of the Chamber voted "no."

Now, those revenues are no longer necessary; and a party or administration that collects from its citizens more than enough to carry on the Government is derelict, and if they should continue to do so they ought to and would lose power.

Again, unnecessary revenues in the Treasury and coming into the Treasury are but a prize, which, I started to say, adventurers, but perhaps that is too strong a term, all over the country organize themselves to get out from the Treasury as industriously as the busy bees organize themselves to get the sweets in the pursuit of their legitimate calling. What do we hear from the other side? "Arbitrary use of power!" It is for the majority to declare by voice and vote whether this rule shall be adopted and whether these revenues shall be reduced. If the rule is adopted and the revenues are reduced, it will be because of Republican votes and because of Republican policy. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Some gentlemen complain because we do not revise the tariff. No revenue measure that was ever made is perfect or can be. All legislation is the result of compromise. If any one intelligent man had supreme power and would take the time, I think he could amend any revenue legislation that has ever been enacted, and within the lines of justice and wisdom. But this is a representative Government, in which we all figure and all the people are heard. The matter now in front of us is to repeal this revenue bill, as we propose to do.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. CANNON. One minute more, if you please.

Mr. DALZELL. I yield to the gentleman another minute.

Mr. CANNON. I was glad to hear the eminent gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] state that he did not believe an attempted revision of the tariff schedule to be wise at this time. I am of that opinion, first, because the country is not demanding it, and, second, our industries, the farm and the factory everywhere, are in a better condition than they ever were before in the history of our country or in the tide of time in any country. I am not here to answer to the demands of the enemy to begin to revise these tariff schedules, because the moment that you do our constituents and theirs alike will throw up their hands and say, "We will wait," and production and consumption would halt or crawl. No wise policy asks it.

But even if it were necessary, it should not stand in the way of this war-revenue reduction bill, because the war revenues have now become useless money, I say again, gathered from the people, a prize placed in the Treasury for improper exploitation. I trust we will take the responsibility of passing the rule, and then take the responsibility of repealing the law, as we took the responsibility of its enactment when it was necessary. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I wish to make a parliamentary inquiry. How much time is left on the other side?

The SPEAKER. There is seven minutes remaining on the gentleman's side.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. How much time on the other side?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL] has twenty minutes remaining.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I wish that the gentleman would use part of it.

Mr. DALZELL. I will say to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. RICHARDSON], there is nobody over here that I know of who wants to speak, and I shall close in probably less time than I have remaining.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. With only one speech, then?

Mr. DALZELL. Yes.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Now, Mr. Speaker, the brief time that I have I will divide with any gentleman on the Republican side of the House, if there be one, who is opposed to this rule. I wait for a reply.

Mr. TAWNEY. You will have a good time waiting.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I take it, then, that no gentleman on that side intends to vote against this rule. Of course, if that is true, with your majority of 40 you can pass the rule; but, Mr. Speaker, with a majority of 40 is it not exceedingly strange that that side of the House will not permit a great tariff bill such as this to be considered in Committee of the Whole, where it can be amended, under the five-minute rule? I venture to say it is unusual to take the action contemplated. This is a great tariff bill, and at the beginning of the session. This is a tax bill, or a tariff bill, and because it is a tariff bill, any amendment to the tariff schedules would be in order under the five-minute debate in Committee of the Whole, with this bill pending.

Now, with 40 majority the gentlemen on that side dare not consent to go into the Committee of the Whole and have this bill properly discussed and the opportunity given to amend it. They give us two days, they say, for "general debate," but not one solitary moment to offer an amendment to the bill. Gentlemen on that side of the House have been restless; some on that side of the House under the pressure of their constituents at home, because of the onerous burden resting upon the people and restraining trade, have presented petitions and have presented measures to this House asking that Congress relieve them from some of the burdens of taxation. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BABCOCK] presented a bill to take some of the tariff off the iron and steel schedule.

Other gentlemen have presented measures of relief; but now, when the only opportunity comes that is to be presented during this session, they dare not vote for the very proposition which will enable them to present their bills to this House and have them voted on. [Applause on the Democratic side.] Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BABCOCK], in order to go back to his people with some kind of an excuse, gets up here and says that he will not oppose this rule, but that he will do something else later; that he wants early action, etc.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH rose.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. RICHARDSON] yield to the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. No; my time is too short.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee declines to yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Let me say to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BABCOCK] this is the last opportunity, and he knows it. He knows there will be no other opportunity given during this Congress to get a vote upon his proposition to give the people of Wisconsin, and of the great Northwest and other sections, some relief from the onerous burdens they bear. He can not go home and fool them, and tell them that under the rules he could not offer his relief measure to the House of Representatives. If he seeks to do it, let some intelligent constituent say: "Why did you vote for that rule in the House of Representatives?"

Now, if you want to afford your constituents some relief, if you want an opportunity to give your people a chance to have relief from high taxation on any one of the 4,000 articles now upon the tariff schedules, many of which are paying a tax of from 50 to 100 and even 150 per cent, this is the opportunity. [Applause.] You gentlemen will go back to your people and some of you will tell them that under the rule you could not offer a relief measure. I wish to tell them you could have done so by voting down this rule. You are willing to vote to take all the tax off of inheritances under this bill. You are willing to take all of the tax off of "bucket-shops." You are willing to take the tax off of corporations which are now taxed, which you do in this bill, and all the other war taxes, including tax on beer, tea, tobacco, etc., but you leave the tariff, averaging more than 50 per cent, on over 4,000 articles, many of them of prime necessity to the people of this country. You have an opportunity now to give them some relief; but instead of voting against the rule, instead of speaking against the rule, which you refuse to do, you come up voluntarily and vote for it, and so tie your hands that you can not offer amendments reducing taxes, etc., and have them considered. Then you purpose to go home to your people, who are crying for relief, with the statement that "the House of Representatives tied our hands and would not permit us to offer an amendment." [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Now, gentlemen on the other side, there is no escape from the result of your vote here. If you desire to offer any amendments to any one of the tariff schedules, reducing taxes on any one of the 4,000 articles now taxed, you have the opportunity by voting down this rule. You bring 21 of your 200 members on that side of the House against this rule, and we will vote it down. We will give you 150 or 160 votes from this side of the House. We will vote down the rule; and then what would be the situation? We would go into the Committee of the Whole under the five-minute rule, and you, my friend from Wisconsin [Mr. BABCOCK], could tender your relief measure.

Other gentlemen, on both sides of the House, who have relief measures in which their people are vitally concerned, could tender them, and after reasonable debate we would have a vote upon them. But, instead of that, you come up voluntarily and surrender your prerogatives to represent the 180,000 or 200,000 free people whom you each represent, and tie your own hands so that you can offer no measure of relief and no amendment of any kind.

I know gentlemen on the other side will come forward and say this thing has been done heretofore. I remember very well, in the Fifty-third Congress, when something like this rule was reported, but the conditions were widely different. The vote was taken upon a motion to concur in the Senate amendments to the Wilson tariff bill. I am sure gentlemen on the other side will quote that precedent. But, Mr. Speaker, that bill had been before the country, and had been discussed in the House and the Senate for seven long months. That rule to concur was reported on the 13th day of August, 1894, at the close of a long session of Congress.

The bill had been before this body and had been debated and amended in Committee of the Whole for six or seven weeks. But here, at the beginning of a session, with nothing to engage our attention, you come in and ask us to vote to repeal this bill without an opportunity to offer a solitary amendment; and this, too, upon a bill which has not been debated and to which no amendments are allowed to be offered.

Mr. Speaker, we on this side of the House intend to vote for this bill and for the repeal of the war taxes. We only regret that we did not have that opportunity two years ago, before $500,000,000 were taken from the people by the temporary war measure. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, in view of the solicitude expressed by the gentleman from Texas and the gentleman from Virginia as to the prerogatives of this House, I would like to recur to some history—some of it recent, some of it not quite so recent.

It was only a few days ago that the Committee on Ways and Means reported to this House a tariff bill, a bill dealing with the Philippine tariff question. The chairman of that committee rose and asked unanimous consent that debate on the bill should close within a certain time and that the bill should be discussed in such a way as not to permit of an amendment, and every man on that side of the Chamber sat dumb in his chair. That was as drastic a rule as this, assented to, unanimously assented to, by the Democratic party at that time.

But I recall another occasion. I want to tell a little historical story that I have told several times before in this House. The time was August, 1894. The Democratic party were in control in this House. A Democratic Speaker sat in that chair, and the majority of the Committee on Rules were Democrats. The Committee on Ways and Means, under the leadership of that distinguished West Virginian, Mr. Wilson, had reported a tariff bill. It had passed the House. It had gone to the Senate. The Senate had mutilated it so that its mother would not have known it if she had met it in the road. Six hundred and forty-nine amendments were put on that bill. Day after day indignant Democrats arose in this House and insisted that they would never agree to any such propositions as the Senate's.

A committee of conference was appointed. The conferees met. The Senate insisted, the House insisted, and finally it became apparent that the Senate was about to prevail; and then what was done? Let me read you. The leading member of the Committee on Rules came into this House with this resolution. Recollect, now, that this committee of conference was in session; recollect that the papers, the bill with the amendments, was in the custody, not of this House, but in the custody of the Senate. Mr. Catchings reported this resolution:

Resolved, That after the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order in the House to move that the order heretofore made requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on H. R. 4864 be rescinded; that the conferees heretofore appointed on the part of the House be discharged from further duty in that behalf, and that the House recede from its disagreement to the Senate amendments to said bill in gross, and agree to the same. That after two hours' debate on said motion (which shall be indivisible) the vote shall be taken without delay or other motion; general leave to print is hereby granted for ten days.

Six hundred and forty-nine amendments, no one of which was ever read in this House; no one of which was acceptable to the members on that side of the Chamber. Six hundred and forty-nine amendments adopted in gross by a gag law by the gentlemen who are here to-day vindicating the dignity of the members of this House! [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. McRAE. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman yield to the gentleman from Arkansas?

Mr. DALZELL. Yes.

Mr. McRAE. I want to inquire of the gentleman from Pennsylvania if he would give us an assurance that he will follow this bill, as that was followed, by bills proposing to put on the free list sugar, iron ore, coal, and wire?

Mr. DALZELL. I was just coming to that question now. In addition to this infernal outrage, an additional resolution was passed. The gentleman from Arkansas has anticipated me.

Resolved, second, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to present for consideration, without reference to a committee, separate bills placing upon the free list sugar in all its forms, coal, iron ore, and barbed wire. Each of said bills when presented shall be considered in the House. Thirty minutes' debate shall be allowed on each bill, and at the end of such debate the previous question shall be considered as ordered thereon, and without delay or other motion the vote shall be taken.

The great sugar industry of this country, the great coal industry of this country, the great metal industry of this country were to be put upon the free list after fifteen minutes' debate on bills that had never seen a committee; and yet gentlemen are here in this House, with that record, vindicating the dignity of the House! Gentlemen of the minority, the dignity of the House is safe, as is legislation of the House, in the hands of the Republican party. [Loud applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. Speaker, I demand the previous question.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, pending that, I would like to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I desire to offer a motion to recommit this rule. I would like to inquire of the Chair if I can offer it before the previous question is ordered.

The SPEAKER. You can not. The gentleman from Pennsylvania has the floor, and the gentleman from Tennessee has not the floor to offer any motion.

The question was taken, and the previous question was ordered.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I desire to move to recommit the rule to the Committee on Rules.

Mr. DALZELL. I make a point of order against that motion.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I would like to have my motion to recommit read.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Recommit rule to Committee on Rules with instructions to report an amendment to the pending resolution, providing that after H. R. 10590 has been debated in Committee of the Whole for four hours in general debate the general debate shall close, and that the bill shall then be read under the five-minute rule, and shall be open for debate and amendment under the latter rule until its reading shall have been completed, whereupon it will be reported, with amendments, to the House, etc.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order against that.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. May I be heard upon the point of order, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER. The Chair is prepared to rule, and, as the Chair has stated before, debate is not necessary where the Chair is ready to rule. All debate on a point of order is for the information of the Chair, and there is no necessity for it now, because the Chair has twice ruled upon the question.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I myself have never debated this proposition.

The SPEAKER. The matter was twice decided by the Chair in the last Congress and once decided by Speaker Crisp, with great emphasis, which ruling the present occupant of the chair has followed.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. But Speaker Reed has twice since then overruled that decision.

The SPEAKER. What decision?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The decision of Speaker Crisp.

The SPEAKER. Speaker Reed has not ruled upon the question since the present occupant of the chair has ruled.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. But Speaker Crisp——

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not desire to argue with any member on the floor, because it has already been decided three times.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. If the Chair has seen the rulings by Speaker Reed——

The SPEAKER. The Chair has read every ruling on this question.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Does the Chair decline to be governed by the ruling of Speaker Reed?

The SPEAKER. The Chair has stated distinctly that he would not follow the ruling of Speaker Reed, but would follow the ruling of Speaker Crisp, and twice during the last Congress the Chair followed that ruling. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I respectfully appeal from the decision of the Chair, and would like to be heard on my appeal.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I move to lay the appeal on the table.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I have the floor, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The Chair calls the attention of the gentleman from Tennessee to the fact that the previous question has been ordered, and that no debate is permissible. The question is on laying the appeal on the table.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee) there were—ayes 144, noes 120.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I ask for tellers, Mr. Speaker, the vote is so close.

Mr. DALZELL. I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania that the appeal by the gentleman from Tennessee be laid on the table.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 166, nays 123, answered "present" 13, not voting 54; as follows:

YEAS—166.

Adams,	Driscoll,	Knox,	Rumple,
Alexander,	Emerson,	Kyle,	Russell,
Allen, Me.	Esch,	Lacey,	Schirm,
Aplin,	Evans,	Landis,	Scott,
Babcock,	Fletcher,	Lawrence,	Shattuc,
Bartholdt,	Foerderer,	Lessler,	Shelden,
Bates,	Fordney,	Lewis, Pa.	Sherman,
Bishop,	Foss,	Littlefield,	Showalter,
Blackburn,	Foster, Vt.	Long,	Sibley,
Blakeney,	Fowler,	Loud,	Skiles,
Boutell,	Gaines, W. Va.	Lovering,	Smith, Ill.
Bowersock,	Gardner, Mich.	McCall,	Smith, Iowa
Bristow,	Gardner, N. J.	McLachlan,	Smith, H. C.
Bromwell,	Gibson,	Mahon,	Smith, S. W.
Brown,	Gill,	Mann,	Smith, Wm. Alden
Burk, Pa.	Gillet, N. Y.	Marshall,	Southard,
Burke, S. Dak.	Gillett, Mass.	Martin,	Southwick,
Burleigh,	Graff,	Mercer,	Sperry,
Butler, Pa.	Graham,	Metcalf,	Steele,
Calderhead,	Greene, Mass.	Miller,	Stewart, N. J.
Cannon,	Grosvenor,	Minor,	Stewart, N. Y.
Capron,	Grow,	Mondell,	Storm,
Cassel,	Hamilton,	Moody, Mass.	Sulloway,
Conner,	Hanbury,	Moody, Oreg.	Sutherland,
Coombs,	Haskins,	Morgan,	Tawney,
Cooper, Wis.	Haugen,	Morris,	Tayler, Ohio
Corliss,	Hedge,	Mudd,	Thomas, Iowa
Cousins,	Hemenway,	Needham,	Tirrell,
Crumpacker,	Henry, Conn.	Nevin,	Tompkins, N. Y.
Currier,	Hepburn,	Olmsted,	Tompkins, Ohio
Curtis,	Hildebrant,	Otjen,	Tongue,
Cushman,	Hill,	Overstreet,	Van Voorhis,
Dahle,	Hitt,	Palmer,	Vreeland,
Dalzell,	Howell,	Parker,	Wadsworth,
Darragh,	Hughes,	Patterson, Pa.	Wanger,
Davidson,	Irwin,	Payne,	Warnock,
Dayton,	Jack,	Pearre,	Watson,
Deemer,	Jenkins,	Perkins,	Weeks,
Dick,	Jones, Wash.	Prince,	Woods,
Douglas,	Kahn,	Reeder,	Young.
Dovener,	Ketcham,	Reeves,
Draper,	Knapp,	Roberts,

NAYS—123.

Adamson,	Davey, La.	Kitchin, Wm. W.	Padgett,
Ball, Tex.	Davis, Fla.	Kleberg,	Patterson, Tenn.
Bankhead,	De Armond,	Kluttz,	Pierce,
Bartlett,	Dougherty,	Lanham,	Polk,
Bellamy,	Elliott,	Lassiter,	Pou,
Belmont,	Feely,	Lester,	Pugsley,
Benton,	Finley,	Lever,	Reid,
Bowie,	Fitzgerald,	Lewis, Ga.	Rhea, Ky.
Brantley,	Fleming,	Lindsay,	Rhea, Va.
Breazeale,	Flood,	Little,	Richardson, Ala.
Broussard,	Fox,	Livingston,	Richardson, Tenn.
Brundidge,	Gaines, Tenn.	Lloyd,	Rixey,
Burgess,	Gilbert,	McAndrews,	Robb,
Burleson,	Goldfogle,	McClellan,	Robertson, La.
Burnett,	Gooch,	McCulloch,	Robinson, Ind.
Butler, Mo.	Gordon,	McLain,	Robinson, Nebr.
Candler,	Griggs,	Maddox,	Rucker,
Cassingham,	Hay,	Mahoney,	Ruppert,
Clark,	Henry, Miss.	Maynard,	Ryan,
Clayton,	Hooker,	Meyer, La.	Salmon,
Cochran,	Howard,	Mickey,	Scarborough,
Cooney,	Jackson, Kans.	Moon,	Selby,
Cooper, Tex.	Jett,	Naphen,	Shackleford,
Cowherd,	Johnson,	Newlands,	Shafroth,
Creamer,	Jones, Va.	Norton,	Sims,
Cummings,	Kern,	Otey,	Slayden,
Smith, Ky.	Sulzer,	Thomas, N. C.	White,
Snook,	Swanson,	Thompson,	Williams, Ill.
Spight,	Talbert,	Underwood,	Williams, Miss.
Stark,	Taylor, Ala.	Vandiver,	Wooten.
Stephens, Tex.	Thayer,	Wheeler,

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—13.

Brownlow,	Griffith,	Morrell,	Zenor.
Bull,	Hall,	Randell, Tex.
Conry,	McRae,	Shallenberger,
De Graffenreid,	Miers, Ind.	Tate,

NOT VOTING—54.

Atcheson,	Crowley,	Kehoe,	Ray, N. Y.
Allen, Ky.	Dinsmore,	Kitchin, Claude	Sheppard,
Ball, Del.	Eddy,	Lamb,	Small,
Barney,	Edwards,	Latimer,	Snodgrass,
Beidler,	Foster, Ill.	Littauer,	Sparkman,
Bell,	Glenn,	Loudenslager,	Stevens, Minn.
Bingham,	Green, Pa.	McCleary,	Trimble,
Boreing,	Heatwole,	McDermott,	Wachter,
Brick,	Henry, Tex.	Moody, N. C.	Warner,
Burkett,	Holliday,	Mutchler,	Wiley,
Burton,	Hopkins,	Neville,	Wilson,
Caldwell,	Hull,	Powers, Me.	Wright.
Connell,	Jackson, Md.	Powers, Mass.
Cromer,	Joy,	Ransdell, La.

So the motion to lay the appeal on the table was agreed to.

The following pairs were announced:

On this vote:

Mr. RAY of New York with Mr. MUTCHLER.

Mr. JOY with Mr. MCDERMOTT.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota with Mr. DINSMORE.

For this day:

Mr. MCCLEARY with Mr. GLENN.

Mr. HOLLIDAY with Mr. CALDWELL.

Mr. BALL of Delaware with Mr. CLAUDE KITCHIN.

Mr. WARNER with Mr. WILEY.

Mr. LITTAUER with Mr. LATIMER.

Mr. JACKSON of Maryland with Mr. EDWARDS.

Mr. CONNELL with Mr. BURGESS.

Mr. ACHESON with Mr. WILSON.

Mr. GRAFF with Mr. HENRY of Texas.

Mr. POWERS of Massachusetts with Mr. ALLEN of Kentucky.

Until February 20:

Mr. BROWNLOW with Mr. SNODGRASS.

Until February 21:

Mr. WACHTER with Mr. SMALL.

Until February 22:

Mr. MOODY of North Carolina with Mr. RANDELL of Texas.

Until further notice:

Mr. BINGHAM with Mr. NEVILLE.

Mr. BURTON with Mr. SPARKMAN.

Mr. BURKETT with Mr. SHALLENBERGER.

Mr. KYLE with Mr. LAMB.

Mr. BARNEY with Mr. MCRAE.

Mr. BEIDLER with Mr. FOSTER of Illinois.

Mr. HOPKINS with Mr. GRIFFITH.

Mr. HULL with Mr. KEHOE.

Mr. EDDY with Mr. SHEPPARD.

Mr. BRICK with Mr. ZENOR.

Mr. POWERS of Maine with Mr. CONRY.

Mr. CROMER with Mr. MIERS of Indiana.

For this session:

Mr. WRIGHT with Mr. HALL.

Mr. HEATWOLE with Mr. TATE.

Mr. BULL with Mr. CROWLEY.

Mr. LOUDENSLAGER with Mr. DE GRAFFENREID.

Mr. MORRELL with Mr. GREEN of Pennsylvania.

Mr. BOREING with Mr. TRIMBLE.

Mr. LANHAM. My colleague, Mr. SHEPPARD, is absent on account of serious personal illness; and my collegue, Mr. HENRY, is absent on account of sickness in his family. If these gentlemen were present, they would vote "no" on this question.

The SPEAKER. The last statement of the gentleman is not in order.

Mr. ZENOR. I voted "no;" but I discover that I am paired with my colleague, Mr. BRICK. I desire to withdraw my vote, and be recorded "present."

Mr. NORTON. I was paired with the gentleman from Wisconsin, Mr. JENKINS, but I understand he has returned to the House and voted. I therefore desire to change my vote from "present" to "no."

Mr. MORRELL. Mr. Speaker, I voted "aye," but, having been announced as paired with the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GREEN], I would like to withdraw my vote and be marked "present."

The result of the vote was announced as above stated.

The SPEAKER. The question is now on agreeing to the resolution?

The question having been put,

The SPEAKER. The ayes appear to have it.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I call for a division.

The House again divided; and there were—ayes 98.

Before the count of the negative vote,

Mr. DALZELL called for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 158, nays 121, answering "present" 9, not voting 68; as follows:

YEAS—158.

Adams,	Draper,	Ketcham,	Prince,
Alexander,	Driscoll,	Knapp,	Reeder,
Allen, Me.	Emerson,	Knox,	Reeves,
Aplin,	Esch,	Kyle,	Roberts,
Babcock,	Evans,	Lacey,	Rumple,
Bartholdt,	Foerderer,	Landis,	Russell,
Bates,	Fordney,	Lawrence,	Schirm,
Bishop,	Foss,	Lessler,	Shattuc,
Blackburn,	Foster, Ill.	Lewis, Pa.	Shelden,
Boutell,	Fowler,	Littlefield,	Sherman,
Bowersock,	Gaines, W. Va.	Long,	Showalter,
Bristow,	Gardner, Mich.	Loud,	Skiles,
Bromwell,	Gardner, N. J.	Lovering,	Smith, Ill.
Brown,	Gibson,	McCall,	Smith, Iowa
Burk, Pa.	Gill,	McLachlan,	Smith, H. C.
Burke, S. Dak.	Gillet, N. Y.	Mahon,	Smith, S. W.
Burleigh,	Gillett, Mass.	Mann,	Southwick,
Butler, Pa.	Graff,	Marshall,	Steele,
Calderhead,	Graham,	Martin,	Stewart, N. J.
Cannon,	Greene, Mass.	Mercer,	Stewart, N. Y.
Capron,	Grosvenor,	Metcalf,	Storm,
Cassel,	Grow,	Miller,	Sulloway,
Conner,	Hamilton,	Minor,	Sutherland,
Coombs,	Hanbury,	Moody, Mass.	Tawney,
Cooper, Wis.	Haskins,	Moody, Oreg.	Tayler, Ohio
Corliss,	Haugen,	Morgan,	Thomas, Iowa
Cousins,	Hedge,	Morrell,	Tompkins, N. Y.
Crumpacker,	Hemenway,	Morris,	Tompkins, Ohio
Currier,	Henry, Conn.	Mudd,	Tongue,
Curtis,	Hepburn,	Needham,	Van Voorhis,
Cushman,	Hildebrant,	Nevin,	Vreeland.
Dahle,	Hill,	Olmsted,	Wadsworth,
Dalzell,	Hitt,	Otjen,	Wanger,
Darragh,	Howell,	Overstreet,	Warnock,
Davidson,	Hughes,	Palmer,	Watson,
Dayton,	Irwin,	Patterson, Pa.	Weeks,
Deemer,	Jack,	Payne,	Woods,
Dick,	Jackson, Md.	Pearre,	Young.
Douglas,	Jones, Wash.	Perkins,
Dovener,	Kahn,	Powers, Mass.

NAYS—121.

Adamson,	Feely,	Little,	Robinson, Ind.
Ball, Tex.	Finley,	Lloyd,	Robinson, Nebr.
Bankhead,	Fitzgerald,	McAndrews,	Rucker,
Bartlett,	Fleming,	McClellan,	Ruppert,
Bell,	Flood,	McCulloch,	Ryan,
Bellamy,	Fox,	McLain,	Scarborough,
Belmont,	Gaines, Tenn.	McRae,	Selby,
Benton,	Gilbert,	Maddox,	Shackleford,
Bowie,	Goldfogle,	Mahoney,	Sims,
Brantley,	Gooch,	Maynard,	Slayden,
Breazeale,	Gordon,	Meyer, La.	Smith, Ky.
Broussard,	Griggs,	Mickey,	Snook,
Brundidge,	Hay,	Moon,	Spight,
Burgess,	Henry, Miss.	Naphen,	Stark,
Burleson,	Hooker,	Newlands,	Stephens, Tex.
Candler,	Howard,	Norton,	Sulzer,
Cassingham,	Jackson, Kans.	Otey,	Swanson,
Clark,	Jett,	Padgett,	Talbert,
Clayton,	Johnson,	Patterson, Tenn.	Taylor, Ala.
Cochran,	Jones, Va.	Pierce,	Thayer,
Cooney,	Kern,	Polk,	Thomas, N. C.
Cooper, Tex.	Kitchin, Wm. W.	Pou,	Thompson,
Cowherd,	Kleberg,	Ransdell, La.	Underwood,
Creamer,	Kluttz,	Reid,	Vandiver,
Cummings,	Lanham,	Rhea, Ky.	White,
Davey, La.	Lassiter,	Rhea, Va.	Williams, Ill.
Davis, Fla.	Latimer,	Richardson, Ala.	Williams, Miss.
De Armond,	Lester,	Richardson, Tenn.	Wooten.
Dinsmore,	Lever,	Rixey,
Dougherty,	Lewis, Ga.	Robb,
Elliott,	Lindsay,	Robertson, La.

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—9.

Boreing,	Hall,	Randell, Tex.	Tate,
Brownlow,	Miers, Ind.	Shallenberger,	Zenor.
De Graffenreid,

NOT VOTING—68.

Acheson,	Crowley,	Lamb,	Sheppard,
Allen, Ky.	Eddy,	Littauer,	Sibley,
Ball, Del.	Edwards,	Livingston,	Small,
Barney,	Fletcher,	Loudenslager,	Smith, Wm. Alden
Beidler,	Foster, Vt.	McCleary,	Snodgrass,
Bingham,	Glenn,	McDermott,	Southard,
Blakeney,	Green, Pa.	Mondell,	Sparkman,
Brick,	Griffith,	Moody, N. C.	Sperry,
Bull,	Heatwole,	Mutchler,	Stevens, Minn.
Burkett,	Henry, Tex.	Neville,	Tirrell,
Burnett,	Holliday,	Parker,	Trimble,
Burton,	Hopkins,	Powers, Me.	Wachter,
Butler, Mo.	Hull,	Pugsley,	Warner,
Caldwell,	Jenkins,	Ray, N. Y.	Wheeler,
Connell,	Joy,	Salmon,	Wiley,
Conry,	Kehoe,	Scott,	Wilson,
Cromer,	Kitchin, Claude,	Shafroth,	Wright.

So the resolution was adopted.

The Clerk announced the following pairs.

On this vote:

Mr. PARKER with Mr. SALMON.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH with Mr. LIVINGSTON.

Mr. DE GRAFFENREID. Mr. Speaker, I voted "no." I desire to change my vote and to be recorded as present. I am paired.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call the gentleman's name.

The Clerk called Mr. DE GRAFFENREID, and he voted "present."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I rise to make a request for unanimous consent. In view of the fact that we are not permitted to amend the pending bill, and in view of the fact that two days' debate is absolutely fruitless under this rule, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be put upon its passage now.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee asks unanimous consent that the bill be put upon its passage.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. We are all for it.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the bill.

The Clerk read the bill (H. R. 10530) to repeal war-revenue taxation, and for other purposes, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 1 of the act entitled "An act to provide ways and means to meet war expenditures, and for other purposes," approved June 13, 1898, as amended by the act of March 2, 1901, entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to provide ways and means to meet war expenditures, and for other purposes,' approved June 13, 1898, and to reduce taxation thereunder," be, and is hereby, further amended so as to read as follows:

"SECTION 1. That there shall be paid on all beer, lager beer, ale, porter, and other similar fermented liquor, brewed or manufactured and sold, or stored in warehouse, or removed for consumption or sale, within the United States, by whatever name such liquors may be called, in lieu of the tax of $1.60 now imposed thereon, a tax of $1 for every barrel containing not more than 31 gallons; and at a like rate for any other quantity or for any fractional part of a barrel: Provided, That in lieu of or in addition to the present requirements of law in that respect all stamps used for denoting the tax upon fermented liquors or other taxes may, in the discretion of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, be canceled by perforations to be made in such manner and form as the Commissioner may, by regulations, prescribe."

SEC. 2. That section 2 of said act of June 13, 1898, and all amendments thereof, are hereby repealed.

SEC. 3. That section 3 of said act and amendments thereof be amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 3. That upon tobacco and snuff manufactured and sold, or removed for consumption or use, there shall be levied and collected, in lieu of the tax now imposed by law of 12 cents per pound, the following taxes:

"On snuff, manufactured of tobacco or any substitute for tobacco, ground, dry, damp, pickled, scented, or otherwise, of all descriptions, when prepared for use, a tax of 6 cents per pound. And snuff-flour, when sold, or removed for use or consumption, shall be taxed as snuff, and shall be put up in packages and stamped in the same manner as snuff.

"On all chewing and smoking tobacco, fine cut, cavendish, plug, or twist, cut or granulated, of every description; on tobacco twisted by hand or reduced into a condition to be consumed, or in any manner other than the ordinary mode of drying and curing, prepared for sale or consumption, even if prepared without the use of any machine or instrument, and without being pressed or sweetened; and on all fine-cut shorts and refuse scraps, clippings, cuttings, and sweepings of tobacco, a tax of 6 cents per pound.

"That the internal-revenue tax on cigars or cigarettes weighing more than 3 pounds per 1,000 shall be $3 per 1,000; and the tax on cigars weighing not more than 3 pounds per 1,000 shall be 18 cents per pound, and on cigarettes weighing not more than 3 pounds per 1,000 and of a wholesale value or price of not more than $2 per 1,000 shall be 18 cents per pound; and the tax on cigarettes weighing not more than 3 pounds per 1,000 and of a wholesale value or price of more than $2 per 1,000 shall be 36 cents per pound; and all such cigars and cigarettes weighing not more than 3 pounds per 1,000 shall, for purposes of taxation, be held and considered as weighing 3 pounds.

"That in addition to the packages of smoking tobacco now authorized by law there shall be packages of 1½ ounces, 2 ounces, 2½ ounces, 3 ounces, 3½ ounces, and 4 ounces; and there may be a package containing 1 ounce of smoking tobacco. And provided further, That on all original and unbroken factory packages of smoking and manufactured tobacco and snuff held by manufacturers or dealers at the time such reduction of tax shall go into effect, upon which the tax has been paid, there shall be allowed a drawback or rebate of the full amount of such reduction of tax, but the same shall not apply in any case where the claim has not been presented within sixty days following the date of the reduction; and no claim shall be allowed or drawback paid for a less amount than $10. It shall be the duty of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, to adopt such rules and regulations and to prescribe and furnish such blanks and forms as may be necessary to carry this section into effect.

"And the Commissioner of Internal Revenue is authorized to employ 10 agents, to be known and designated as internal-revenue agents, in addition to the number now authorized in section 3152 of the Revised Statutes as amended, and the existing provisions of law in all other respects shall apply to the duties, compensation, and expenses of such agents."

SEC. 4. That section 4 of the act of June 13, 1898, is hereby repealed.

SEC. 5. That section 5 of the act of June 13, 1898, be amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 5. That until appropriate stamps are prepared and furnished, the stamps heretofore used to denote the payment of the internal-revenue tax on fermented liquors, tobacco, and snuff may be stamped or imprinted with a suitable device to denote the new rate of tax, and shall be affixed to all packages containing such articles on which the tax imposed by this act is paid. And any person having possession of unaffixed stamps heretofore issued for the payment of the tax upon fermented liquors, tobacco, and snuff shall present the same to the collector of the district, who shall receive them at the price paid for such stamps by the purchasers and issue in lieu thereof new or imprinted stamps at the rate provided by this act."

SEC. 6. That sections 6, 12, 18, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, Schedule A, Schedule B, sections 27, 28, and 29 of the act of June 13, 1898, and all amendments of said sections and schedules be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

SEC. 7. That section 30 of said act of June 13, 1898, and amendments thereof, be amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 30. That the tax or duty imposed by section 29 of the act of June 13, 1898, above referred to, shall be due and payable in one year after the death of the testator and shall be a lien and charge upon the property of every person who may die before this act shall take effect for twenty years or until the same shall within that period be fully paid to and discharged by the United States; and every executor, administrator, or trustee having in charge or trust any legacy or distributive share, as aforesaid, shall give notice thereof in writing to the collector or deputy collector of the district where the deceased grantor or bargainer last resided within thirty days after he shall have taken charge of such trust, and every executor, administrator, or trustee, before payment and distribution to the legatees, or any parties entitled to beneficial interest therein, shall pay to the collector or deputy collector of the district of which the deceased person was a resident, or in which the property was located in case of nonresidents, the amount of the duty or tax assessed upon such legacy or distributive share, and shall also make and render to the said collector or deputy collector a schedule, list, or statement, in duplicate, of the amount of such legacy or distributive share, together with the amount of duty which has accrued, or shall accrue thereon, verified by his oath or affirmation, to be administered and certified thereon by some magistrate or officer having lawful power to administer such oaths, in such form and manner as may be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, which schedule, list, or statement shall contain the names of each and every person entitled to any beneficial interest therein, together with the clear value of such interest, the duplicate of which schedule, list, or statement shall be by him immediately delivered, and the tax thereon paid to such collector; and upon such payment and delivery of such schedule, list, or statement said collector or deputy collector shall grant to such person paying such duty or tax a receipt or receipts for the same in duplicate, which shall be prepared as hereinafter provided. Such receipt or receipts, duly signed and delivered by such collector or deputy collector, shall be sufficient evidence to entitle such executor, administrator, or trustee to be credited and allowed such payment by every tribunal which, by the laws of any State or Territory, is, or may be, empowered to decide upon and settle the accounts of executors and administrators. And in case such executor, administrator, or trustee shall refuse or neglect to pay the aforesaid duty or tax to the collector or deputy collector, as aforesaid, within the time hereinbefore provided, or shall neglect or refuse to deliver to said collector or deputy collector the duplicate of the schedule, list, or statement of such legacies, property, or personal estate, under oath, as aforesaid, or shall neglect or refuse to deliver the schedule, list, or statement of such legacies, property, or personal estate, under oath, as aforesaid, or shall deliver to said collector or deputy collector a false schedule or statement of such legacies, property, or personal estate, or give the names or relationship of the persons entitled to beneficial interests therein untruly, or shall not truly and correctly set forth and state therein the clear value of such beneficial interest, or where no administration upon such property or personal estate shall have been granted or allowed under existing laws, the collector or deputy collector shall make out such lists and valuation as in other cases of neglect or refusal, and shall assess the duty thereon; and the collector shall commence appropriate proceedings before any court of the United States, in the name of the United States, against such person or persons as may have the actual or constructive custody or possession of such property or personal estate, or any part thereof, and shall subject such property or personal estate, or any portion of the same, to be sold upon the judgment or decree of such court, and from the proceeds of such sale the amount of such tax or duty, together with all costs and expenses of every description to be allowed by such court, shall be first paid, and the balance, if any, deposited according to the order of such court, to be paid under its direction to such person or persons as shall establish title to the same. The deed or deeds, or any proper conveyance of such property or personal estate, or any portion thereof, so sold under such judgment or decree, executed by the officer lawfully charged with carrying the same into effect, shall vest in the purchaser thereof all the title of the delinquent to the property or personal estate sold under and by virtue of such judgment or decree, and shall release every other portion of such property or personal estate from the lien or charge thereon created by this act. And every person or persons who shall have in his possession, charge, or custody any record, file, or paper containing, or supposed to contain, any information concerning such property or personal estate, as aforesaid, passing from any person who may die, as aforesaid, shall exhibit the same at the request of the collector or deputy collector of the district, and to any law officer of the United States in the performance of his duty under this act, his deputy or agent, who may desire to examine the same. And if any such person, having in his possession, charge, or custody any such records, files, or papers, shall refuse or neglect to exhibit the same on request, as aforesaid, he shall forfeit and pay the sum of $500: Provided, That in all legal controversies where such deed or title shall be the subject of judicial investigation the recital in such deed shall be prima facie evidence of its truth, and that the requirements of the law had been complied with by the officers of the Government: And provided further, That in case of willful neglect, refusal, or false statement by such executor, administrator, or trustee, as aforesaid, he shall be liable to a penalty of not exceeding $1,000, to be recovered with costs of suit. Any tax paid under the provisions of sections 29 and 30 shall be deducted from the particular legacy or distributive share on account of which the same is charged."

The following amendments, recommended by the committee, were read:

Page 3, line 21, strike out the word "not."
Page 6, line 7, after "die," insert "before this act shall take effect."
Page 6, line 7, strike out "as aforesaid."
Page 6, line 25, strike out "or shall accrue thereon."
Page 10, after line 9, insert a new section, as follows:
"SEC. 8. That section 35 of said act of June 13, 1898, and the amendments thereof, be amended so as to read as follows:
"'SEC. 35. That for the purposes of this act, the words "mixed flour" shall be taken and construed to mean the food product resulting from the grinding or mixing together of wheat, or wheat flour, as the principal constituent in quantity, with any other grain, or the product of any other grain, or other material, except such material, and not the product of any grain, as is commonly used for baking purposes: Provided, That when the product resulting from the grinding or mixing together of wheat or wheat flour with any other grain, or the product of any other grain, of which wheat or wheat flour is not the principal constituent as specified in the foregoing definition, is intended for sale, or is sold, or offered for sale as wheat flour, such product shall be held to be mixed flour within the meaning of this act.'"
Page 10, line 10, strike out "8" and insert "9."
Page 10, line 13, strike out "9" and insert "10."

The SPEAKER. Without objection, these amendments will be submitted to the House in gross.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question now is on the passage of the bill.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays on the passage.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 288, nays 0, answered "present" 1, not voting 67; as follows:

YEAS—288.

Adams,	Driscoll,	Latimer,	Robb,
Adamson,	Elliott,	Lawrence,	Roberts,
Alexander,	Emerson,	Lessler,	Robertson, La.
Allen, Me.	Esch,	Lester,	Robinson, Ind.
Aplin,	Evans,	Lever,	Robinson, Nebr.
Babcock,	Feely,	Lewis, Ga.	Rucker,
Ball, Tex.	Finley,	Lewis, Pa.	Rumple,
Bankhead,	Fitzgerald,	Lindsay,	Ruppert,
Bartlett,	Fleming,	Little,	Russell,
Bates,	Fletcher,	Littlefield,	Ryan,
Bell,	Flood,	Lloyd,	Scarborough,
Bellamy,	Foerderer,	Long,	Schirm,
Belmont,	Fordney,	Loud,	Scott,
Benton,	Foss,	Lovering,	Selby,
Bishop,	Foster, Vt.	McAndrews,	Shackleford,
Blackburn,	Fowler,	McCall,	Shafroth,
Blakeney,	Fox,	McClellan,	Shallenberger,
Boutell,	Gaines, Tenn.	McCulloch,	Shattuc,
Bowersock,	Gaines, W. Va.	McLachlan,	Shelden,
Bowie,	Gardner, Mich.	McLain,	Sherman,
Brantley,	Gardner, N. J.	McRae,	Showalter,
Breazeale,	Gibson,	Maddox,	Sibley,
Bristow,	Gilbert,	Mahon,	Sims,
Bromwell,	Gill,	Mahoney,	Skiles,
Broussard,	Gillet, N. Y.	Mann,	Slayden,
Brown,	Gillett, Mass.	Marshall,	Smith, Ill.
Brundidge,	Goldfogle,	Martin,	Smith, Iowa
Burgess,	Gooch,	Maynard,	Smith, Ky.
Burk, Pa.	Gordon,	Mercer,	Smith, H. C.
Burke, S. Dak.	Graff,	Metcalf,	Smith, S. W.
Burleigh,	Graham,	Meyer, La.	Smith, Wm. Alden
Burleson,	Greene, Mass.	Mickey,	Snook,
Burnett,	Griffith,	Miers, Ind.	Southard,
Butler, Mo.	Griggs,	Miller,	Southwick,
Butler, Pa.	Grosvenor,	Minor,	Sperry,
Calderhead,	Grow,	Moody, Mass.	Spight,
Candler,	Hall,	Moody, Oreg.	Stark,
Cannon,	Hamilton,	Moon,	Stephens, Tex.
Capron,	Hanbury,	Morgan,	Stevens, Minn.
Cassel,	Haskins,	Morrell,	Stewart, N. J.
Cassingham,	Haugen,	Morris,	Stewart, N. Y.
Clark,	Hay,	Mudd,	Storm,
Clayton,	Hedge,	Needham,	Sulloway,
Cochran,	Hemenway,	Nevin,	Sulzer,
Conner,	Henry, Conn.	Newlands,	Sutherland,
Coombs,	Henry, Miss.	Norton,	Swanson,
Cooper, Tex.	Hildebrant,	Olmsted,	Tate,
Cooper, Wis.	Hitt,	Otey,	Tawney,
Corliss,	Hooker,	Otjen,	Tayler, Ohio
Cousins,	Howard,	Overstreet,	Taylor, Ala.
Cowherd,	Howell,	Padgett,	Thomas, Iowa
Creamer,	Irwin,	Palmer,	Thomas, N. C.
Crumpacker,	Jack,	Patterson, Pa.	Thompson,
Cummings,	Jackson, Kans.	Patterson, Tenn.	Tirrell,
Currier,	Jenkins,	Payne,	Tompkins, N. Y.
Curtis,	Jett,	Pearre,	Tompkins, Ohio
Cushman,	Johnson,	Perkins,	Underwood,
Dahle,	Jones, Va.	Pierce,	Vandiver,
Dalzell,	Jones, Wash.	Polk,	Van Voorhis,
Darragh,	Joy,	Pou,	Vreeland,
Davey, La.	Kahn,	Prince,	Wadsworth,
Davidson,	Kern,	Pugsley,	Wanger,
Davis, Fla.	Ketcham,	Randell, Tex.	Warnock,
Dayton,	Kitchin, Wm. W.	Ransdell, La.	Watson,
De Armond,	Kleberg,	Reeder,	Weeks,
De Graffenreid,	Kluttz,	Reeves,	White,
Deemer,	Knapp,	Reid,	Williams, Ill.
Dick,	Knox,	Rhea, Ky.	Williams, Miss.
Dougherty,	Kyle,	Rhea, Va.	Woods,
Douglas,	Lacey,	Richardson, Ala.	Wooten,
Dovener,	Landis,	Richardson, Tenn.	Young,
Draper,	Lanham,	Rixey,	Zenor.

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1.

Boreing.

NOT VOTING—67.

Acheson,	Crowley,	Kitchin, Claude	Salmon,
Allen, Ky.	Dinsmore,	Lamb,	Sheppard,
Ball, Del.	Eddy,	Lassiter,	Small,
Barney,	Edwards,	Littauer,	Snodgrass,
Bartholdt,	Foster, Ill.	Livingston,	Sparkman,
Beidler,	Glenn,	Loudenslager,	Steele,
Bingham,	Green, Pa.	McCleary,	Talbert,
Brick,	Heatwole,	McDermott,	Thayer,
Brownlow,	Henry, Tex.	Mondell,	Tongue,
Bull,	Hepburn,	Moody, N. C.	Trimble,
Burkett,	Hill,	Mutchler,	Wachter,
Burton,	Holliday,	Naphen,	Warner,
Caldwell,	Hopkins,	Neville,	Wheeler,
Connell,	Hughes,	Parker,	Wiley,
Conry,	Hull,	Powers, Me.	Wilson,
Cooney,	Jackson, Md.	Powers, Mass.	Wright.
Cromer,	Kehoe,	Ray, N. Y.

So the bill was passed.

Mr. TATE. Mr. Speaker, I am paired with the gentleman from Minnesota, Mr. HEATWOLE. If present, he would vote for this bill; and therefore I have voted "aye."

Mr. RANDELL of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I am paired with the gentleman from North Carolina, Mr. MOODY. I understand, however, from good authority that he is in favor of this bill, and I have felt justified in voting "aye."

Mr. DE GRAFFENREID. Mr. Speaker, I am reliably informed that the gentleman from New Jersey, Mr. LOUDENSLAGER, with whom I am paired, would have voted "aye" if present; and I voted "aye" on that information.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

On motion of Mr. PAYNE, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PARKINSON, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 2947. An act granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth A. Shaw;

S. 577. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph W. Burch;

S. 3522. An act to increase the pension of certain Mexican war pensioners to $12 per month;

S. 3388. An act granting an increase of pension to John L. Peterson;

S. 1942. An act granting an increase of pension to Kate H. Clements;

S. 3553. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary A. Van Wormer;

S. 2508. An act granting an increase of pension to Pauline Lowe Murphy;

S. 450. An act for the erection of a public building at Selma, Ala.;

S. 3204. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary T. Bruce;

S. 1800. An act granting an increase of pension to Jennie C. Ruckle;

S. 721. An act granting an increase of pension to Lavalette D. Dickey;

S. 469. An act granting an increase of pension to Hiram H. Kingsbury;

S. 3064. An act granting an increase of pension to Emma Sophia Harper Cilley;

S. 3424. An act granting an increase of Pension to Minnie E. King;

S. 2100. An act granting an increase of pension to John McGrath;

S. 3393. An act granting a pension to William P. Arble;

S. 3482. An act granting an increase of pension to Ida C. Emery;

S. 2643. An act granting an increase of pension to Peter C. Cleek;

S. 2815. An act granting an increase of pension to William S. Derby;

S. 2422. An act granting an increase of pension to John W. Burnham;

S. 1933. An act granting a pension to Ella Bailey;

S. 2398. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. Myers;

S. 8. An act granting a pension to Mrs. George Leonard Andrews;

S. 1748. An act granting an increase of pension to Williamanna E. Lynde;

S. 3036. An act granting an increase of pension to Jason L. Leighton;

S. 1041. An act granting a pension to Abbie M. Packard;

S. 2867. An act granting an increase of pension to John A. Hazelton;

S. 1135. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas J. Stowers;

S. 2930. An act granting an increase of pension to Franklin B. Delaney;

S. 2013. An act granting an increase of pension to Sidney Leland;

S. 3559. An act granting an increase of pension to George E. Houghton;

S. 2923. An act granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth Floyd Sicard;

S. 3284. An act granting a pension to Gilbert P. Howe;

S. 2767. An act granting an increase of pension to Albert D. Scovell;

S. 2049. An act granting an increase of pension to Franklin Taylor;

S. 2394. An act granting an increase of pension to Sybil F. Hall;

S. 3269. An act granting an increase of pension to Jane E. Tompkins;

S. 3328. An act granting an increase of pension to Heber C. Griffin;

S. 1967. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Freeman;

S. 3054. An act granting an increase of pension to Alice De K. Shattuck;

S. 3322. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph M. Clough;

S. 3329. An act granting an increase of pension to Annie McElheney;

S. 3257. An act granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth K. Prescott;

S. 3258. An act granting a pension to Simon Partridge;

S. 3072. An act granting a pension to Oliver Gisborne;

S. 1641. An act granting an increase of pension to Frank J. Clark;

S. 3097. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph A. Nunez;

S. 2929. An act granting an increase of pension to Jacob Barton;

S. 3213. An act granting a pension to Anna J. Thomas;

S. 2802. An act granting a pension to Martha R. Osbourn;

S. 623. An act granting a pension to Annie E. Taggart;

S. 502. An act granting a pension to Alexander Beachboard;

S. 1139. An act granting a pension to Abby Clark McNett;

S. 1331. An act granting a pension to Ann Eliza Trout;

S. 1626. An act granting an increase of pension to Michael Samelsberger;

S. 508. An act granting an increase of pension to Adelaide Worth Bagley;

S. 3157. An act granting an increase of pension to Rhody Ann Bradshaw;

S. 462. An act granting an increase of pension to Sallie Demonbrun;

S. 2531. An act granting an increase of pension to William H. H. Scott;

S. 1467. An act granting an increase of pension to Cynthia A. McKenny;

S. 713. An act granting a pension to Frances E. Stebbins;

S. 3026. An act granting an increase of pension to Marie U. Nordstrom;

S. 1289. An act granting an increase of pension to Julius W. Clark;

S. 2732. An act granting an increase of pension to Marie J. Smyth;

S. 2692. An act granting an increase of pension to Lucy W. Smith;

S. 3403. An act granting an increase of pension to George M. Emery;

S. 3320. An act granting an increase of pension to Warren B. Nudd;

S. 1453. An act authorizing the appointment and retirement of William B. Franklin with the rank of colonel, United States Army;

S. 2877. An act to remove the charge of desertion standing against the record of Thomas Blackburn;

S. 1256. An act to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Stephen A. Toops;

S. 636. An act to remove the charge of desertion against David A. Lane;

S. 690. An act to correct the military record of Talton T. Davis;

S. 1681. An act granting an increase of pension to Maria Louisa Michie; and

S. 2867. An act granting an increase of pension to John A. Hazelton.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the following titles:

H. R. 5860. An act granting an increase of pension to Edward B. Scott;

H. R. 2321. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph R. Martin;

H. R. 5259. An act granting an increase of pension to Gustav Schwartz;

H. R. 3240. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph Church;

H. R. 2429. An act granting an increase of pension to John C. Morrison;

H. R. 5147. An act granting an increase of pension to Theodore Lane;

H. R. 2617. An act granting an increase of pension to John Rapple;

H. R. 3024. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas V. Stran;

H. R. 5162. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew H. Gifford;

H. R. 1374. An act granting an increase of pension to James Willard;

H. R. 6720. An act granting an increase of pension to George Patterson;

H. R. 2628. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew Mulholland;

H. R. 2265. An act granting an increase of pension to Martin V. Hathaway;

H. R. 1728. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. Thompson;

H. R. 2412. An act granting a pension to Helen L. Pepper;
H. R. 4268. An act granting an increase of pension to James D. Woodward;
H. R. 2607. An act granting an increase of pension to Uriah S. Karmany;
H. R. 286. An act granting an increase of pension to Lawrentus Lane;
H. R. 5753. An act granting an increase of pension to Emil Frank;
H. R. 3511. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary C. Newcomb;
H. R. 4037. An act granting a pension to Julia Maher;
H. R. 2455. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. McClure;
H. R. 1285. An act granting an increase of pension to Cyrus Odell;
H. R. 2193. An act granting an increase of pension to David A. Ireland;
H. R. 3413. An act granting an increase of pension to Jedediah S. Vallet;
H. R. 4208. An act granting an increase of pension to Susan M. Pardee;
H. R. 287. An act granting an increase of pension to Leighton J. Folsom;
H. R. 1017. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary Tripp;
H. R. 3230. An act granting a pension to Catherine Pflueger;
H. R. 2528. An act granting a pension to Helen M. Evans;
H. R. 6459. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary F. Hooper;
H. R. 7408. An act granting an increase of pension to Levi Cross;
H. R. 5149. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles E. Bachelder;
H. R. 6684. An act granting an increase of pension to Marshal Bachelder;
H. R. 3184. An act granting an increase of pension to David Petee;
H. R. 2502. An act granting an increase of pension to Ambrose Burton;
H. R. 5002. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas H. McConnaughey;
H. R. 4182. An act granting an increase of pension to David Cupps;
H. R. 815. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry S. Comer;
H. R. 2484. An act granting an increase of pension to Jeremiah Evans;
H. R. 2416. An act granting an increase of pension to John B. Wilcox;
H. R. 3300. An act granting an increase of pension to George B. Boyd;
H. R. 6465. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel Briscoe;
H. R. 5108. An act granting an increase of pension to Elisha B. Taylor, alias Elisha T. Bisbee;
H. R. 2983. An act to amend an act entitled "An act granting an increase of pension to Francis M. Thompson," approved March 3, 1901;
H. R. 5169. An act granting an increase of pension to Hiram S. Kingsley;
H. R. 6926. An act granting a pension to Mabel H. Lazear;
H. R. 9312. An act granting an increase of pension to Kate Virginia Dewey Cushing; and
H. R. 10780. An act to transfer the county of Carroll from the northwestern division of the northern district of Georgia to the northern district of Georgia of the United States district and circuit courts, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments bills of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

H. R. 1200. An act granting an increase of pension to Oliver P. Goodwin;
H. R. 7343. An act granting an increase of pension to Martha V. Keenan;
H. R. 1324. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles N. Lee;
H. R. 8652. An act granting an increase of pension to Virginia Terrill;
H. R. 6453. An act granting an increase of pension to Ida R. Siegfried;
H. R. 2620. An act granting a pension to Jennie A. McKinley;
H. R. 1484. An act granting an increase of pension to Robert M. Scott;
H. R. 3229. An act granting a pension to Katherine R. A. Ogden; and
H. R. 3104. An act to grant the right of way through the Oklahoma Territory and the Indian Territory to the Enid and Anadarko Railway Company, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments the bill (H. R. 8586) amending the act of March 2, 1901, entitled "An act to carry into effect the stipulations of article 7 of the treaty between the United States and Spain, concluded on the 10th day of December, 1898," asked a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendments, and had appointed Mr. CULLOM, Mr. LODGE, and Mr. MORGAN as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment the following resolution:

House concurrent resolution 31.

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the President be requested to return to the House of Representatives the bill (H. R. 5814) to provide for the execution in the Philippine Islands and in Porto Rico of deeds for land situate in the District of Columbia.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with profound sorrow the announcement of the death of the Hon. MARRIOTT BROSIUS, late a Representative from the State of Pennsylvania.

Resolved, That the business of the Senate be now suspended in order that fitting tribute may be paid to his private and public virtues.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect the Senate at the conclusion of these ceremonies do adjourn.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives.

Also:

Resolved, That the Secretary be directed to request the House of Representatives to return to the Senate the bill (S. 3654) to vest in the Spanish Treaty Claims Commission certain powers possessed by circuit and district courts of the United States.

Also:

Resolved, That the Secretary be directed to request the House of Representatives to return to the Senate the bill (S. 8509) to transfer the county of Carroll from the northwestern division of the northern district of Georgia of the United States district and circuit courts.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution; in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

Senate concurrent resolution 24.

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed and bound in cloth the usual number of volume 19, of the report of the Industrial Commission, being the final report of said Commission for the use of Congress.

Senate concurrent resolution 19.

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed the number of copies hereinafter stated of the following monographs prepared by the Bureau of Statistics of the Treasury Department: Commercial China in 1900, 10,000 copies; Commercial Japan in 1900, 10,000 copies; Commercial Australia in 1900, 10,000 copies; Commercial Africa in 1900, 10,000 copies; Commerce of South America, Central America, Mexico, and West Indies, 10,000 copies; The Russian Empire and the Trans-Siberian Railway, 10,000 copies; Colonial Administration, 1800 to 1900, 20,000 copies; Great Canals of the World in 1900, 20,000 copies; Submarine and Land Telegraphs of the World, 10,000 copies; Maximum and Minimum and Conventional Tariffs, 1900, 10,000 copies; National Debts of the World, 1800 to 1900, 10,000 copies; Sugar Production of World, 1850 to 1900, 10,000 copies; Territorial Expansion of the United States, 1783 to 1900, 10,000 copies; Porto Rico, Hawaii, Philippine Islands, Guam, Samoan Islands, and Cuba, 20,000 copies; Progress of the United States in its Material Industries, 1800 to 1900, 20,000 copies; Banks of the United States, 1789 to 1900, 10,000 copies; Shipping Industry of the United States, 1769 to 1900, 10,000 copies; Reciprocity Treaties of the United States, 1850 to 1900, 20,000 copies; Movement of Prices in the United States, 1840 to 1899, 10,000 copies; Grain Trade of the United States, 10,000 copies; Provision Trade of the United States, 10,000 copies; Cotton Trade of the United States, 10,000 copies; Coal Trade of the United States, 10,000 copies; Iron and Steel Trade of the United States, 10,000 copies; Lumber Trade of the United States, 10,000 copies; Exports of Domestic Manufactures, 20,000 copies; Internal Commerce of the United States, 1900, 10,000 copies. One-fourth of the number designated in each case to be for the use of the Senate, one-half for the use of the House of Representatives, and one-fourth for the Bureau of Statistics of the Treasury Department. Said reprints to be separately bound in paper, and, wherever practicable, printed from plates in possession of the Public Printer.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 88) for the relief of parties for property taken from them by military forces of the United States.

SENATE RESOLUTIONS REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following resolutions were taken from the Speaker's table and referred to their appropriate committees, as indicated below:

Senate concurrent resolution 19:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed the number of copies hereinafter stated of the following monographs prepared by the Bureau of Statistics of the Treasury Department: Commercial China in 1900, 10,000 copies; Commercial Japan in 1900, 10,000 copies; Commercial Australia in 1900, 10,000 copies; Commercial Africa in 1900, 10,000 copies; Commerce of South America, Central America, Mexico, and West Indies, 10,000 copies; The Russian Empire and the Trans-Siberian Railway, 10,000 copies; Colonial Administration, 1800 to 1900, 20,000 copies; Great Canals of the World in 1900, 20,000 copies; Submarine and Land Telegraphs of the World, 10,000 copies; Maximum and Minimum and Conventional Tariffs, 1900, 10,000 copies; National Debts of the World, 1800 to 1900, 10,000 copies; Sugar Production of the World, 1850 to 1900, 10,000 copies; Territorial Expansion of the United States, 1783 to 1900, 20,000 copies; Porto Rico, Hawaii, Philippine Islands, Guam, Samoan Islands, and Cuba, 20,000 copies; Progress of the United States in its Material Industries, 1800 to 1900, 20,000 copies; Banks of the United States, 1789 to 1900, 10,000 copies; Shipping Industry of the United States, 1769 to 1900, 10,000 copies; Reciprocity Treaties of the United States, 1850 to 1900, 20,000 copies; Movement of Prices in the United States, 1840 to 1899, 10,000 copies; Grain Trade of the United States, 10,000 copies; Provision Trade of the United States, 10,000 copies; Cotton Trade of the United States, 10,000 copies; Coal Trade of the United States, 10,000 copies; Iron and Steel Trade of the United States, 10,000 copies; Lumber Trade of the United States, 10,000 copies; Exports of Domestic Manufactures, 20,000 copies; Internal Commerce of the United States, 1900, 10,000 copies. One-fourth of the number designated in each case to be for the use of the Senate, one-half for the use of the House of Representatives, and one-fourth for the Bureau of Statistics of the Treasury Department. Said reprints to be separately bound in paper, and, wherever practicable, printed from plates in possession of the Public Printer—

to the Committee on Printing.

Senate concurrent resolution 24:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed and bound in cloth the usual number of volume 19 of the report of the Industrial Commission, being the final report of said Commission, for the use of Congress—

to the Committee on Printing.

CLEARING THE POTOMAC RIVER OF ICE.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill which I have sent to the Clerk's desk.

The bill was read, as follows:

A bill (H. R. 11470) making an appropriation for clearing the Potomac River of ice.

Be it enacted, etc., That to enable the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to meet expenses that may be necessary for the purpose of clearing the Potomac River of ice, within the District of Columbia, there is hereby appropriated, payable from any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and from the revenues of the District of Columbia, in equal parts, and to be immediately available, the sum of $5,000.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, just a word in explanation. In the year 1881 a part of the Potomac River, by reason of accumulation of ice in the river, caused very serious damage to property in the lower parts of the city. The flood came about by damming the river by an accumulation of ice at the junction of the Eastern Branch and the Potomac. The conditions at present threaten a repetition of that disaster, and therefore immediate action is required. There is no money available under any existing appropriation law for this purpose; and this appropriation has been made in 1893, 1895, and 1897. The subject has been brought to the attention of the subcommittees on the District appropriation bill, and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BENTON], the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. PIERCE], with myself, heard representatives of the Commissioners, and agree that this bill should pass.

I think there is no occasion for any further debate upon it, and I ask for a vote.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

ENID AND ANADARKO RAILROAD COMPANY.

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the bil (H. R. 3104) to grant a right of way through Oklahoma Territory and the Indian Territory to the Enid and Anadarko Railroad Company, and for other purposes, with Senate amendment. The Clerk proceeded to read the Senate amendment.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the amendment, and move to nonconcur and ask for a conference.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Kansas asks unanimous cousent to dispense with the reading of the Senate amendment. Is there objection. [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The gentleman from Kansas moves to nonconcur in the Senate amendment, and to ask the Senate for a conference.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair appoints the following conferees: Mr. LACEY, Mr. SHELDEN, and Mr. STEPHENS of Texas.

RETURN OF BILLS TO THE SENATE.

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following resolutions of the Senate; which were severally read, considered, and agreed to:

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES, February 14, 1902.

Resolved, That the Secretary be directed to request the House of Representatives to return to the Senate the bill (S. 3654) to vest in the Spanish Treaty Claims Commission certain powers possessed by circuit and district courts of the United States.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES, February 15, 1902.

Resolved, That the Secretary be directed to request the House of Representatives to return to the Senate the bill (S. 3509) to transfer the county of Carroll from the northwestern division of the northern district of Georgia back to the northern district of Georgia of the United States district and circuit courts.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted, as follows:

To Mr. PATTERSON of Pennsylvania, until Monday, on account of important business.

To Mr. SALMON, for one week, on account of important business.

To Mr. CALDWELL, for to-day, on account of sickness.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. WACHTER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bill of the following title; when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 4842. An act for the relief of the trustees of Carson and Newman College, at Jefferson City, Tenn.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the following titles:

S. 650. An act granting to the White River Railway Company the right to construct, maintain, and operate a single-track railway across the lands of the United States in the south half of the southwest quarter of section 22, township 14 north, range 8 west of the fifth principal meridian, in the county of Independence, in the State of Arkansas, reserved for use in connection with the construction of Lock Numbered Three, Upper White River, Arkansas;

S. 1838. An act authorizing the Memphis, Helena and Louisiana Railway Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Arkansas River, in the State of Arkansas;

S. 1839. An act authorizing the Memphis, Helena and Louisiana Railway Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the White River in the State of Arkansas;

S. 1970. An act to provide an American register for the barkentine Hawaii;

S. 88. An act for the relief of parties for property taken from them by the military forces of the United States;

S. 651. An act extending the time within which the Mississippi River, Hamburg and Western Railway Company is authorized to construct a bridge across the Bayou Bartholomew in Arkansas;

S. 910. An act to extend the time for the completion of a bridge across the Missouri River;

S. 1165. An act to authorize the construction of a bridge over the Missouri River at or near the city of St. Joseph, Miss.; and

S. 73. An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Arkansas River near Fort Gibson, Ind. T.

WAR-REVENUE REPEAL BILL.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, this morning the House made an order to reprint the war-revenue repeal bill. Of course it is hardly necessary now to have it reprinted, and I ask that that order be annulled.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to annul the order for the reprint of the war-revenue repeal bill. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. It was so ordered.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at 2 o'clock and 50 minutes) the House adjourned.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a copy of a communication from the governor of Hawaii relating to the apportionment of members of the legislature—to the Committee on Territories, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution submitting an estimate of increased appropriation for international exchanges—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the conclusions of fact and law in the French spoliation cases relating to the brig Louisa, Benjamin Wheeler, master, against the United States—to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Commissioners of the District of Columbia submitting an estimate of appropriations for public schools and the Washington Asylum—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Secretary of War submitting an estimate of appropriation for the purchase of a target range at Des Moines, Iowa—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the conclusions of fact and law in the French spoliation cases relating to the brig Patty, Josiah Hempstead, master, against the United States—to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the conclusions of fact and law in the French spoliation cases relating to the brig Mercury, George Lee, master, against the United States—to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings of fact in the case of Jesse Keys against the United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Secretary of War submitting an estimate of appropriation for a military post at Skagway, Alaska—to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Secretary of War submitting an estimate of appropriation for road to Fort Mott, N. J.—to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a reply to the inquiry of the House in relation to the issuing to or withholding rations from Indians—to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several Calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. JENKINS, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to which was referred House bills 9863 and 11002, reported in lieu thereof a bill (H. R. 11400) to amend an act entitled "An act in relation to taxes and tax sales in the District of Columbia," approved February 28, 1898, accompanied by a report (No. 551); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. CORLISS, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 1964) to provide for a light-house keeper's dwelling, Ecorse range light station, Detroit River, in the State of Michigan, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 552); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. HAUGEN, from the Committee on Agriculture, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 10999) to provide rules and regulations governing the importation of trees, plants, shrubs, vines, grafts, cuttings, and buds, commonly known as nursery stock, and fruits into the United States, and rules and regulations for the inspection of trees, plants, shrubs, vines, grafts, cuttings, and buds, commonly known as nursery stock, grown within the United States, which become subjects of interstate commerce or exportation, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 557); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

Mr. OTEY, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 989) to authorize the Light-House Board to pay to Chamblin, Delaney & Scott the sum of $2,125, reported the same with amendments, accompanied by a report (No. 553); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. GOLDFOGLE, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 10279) to pay the claim of Stephen B. Halsey, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 554); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SCHIRM, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 5124) for the relief of the owners of the British ship Foscolia and cargo, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 555); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, the Committee on Invalid Pensions was discharged from the consideration of the bill (H. R. 691) granting a pension to Jerome M. White, and the same was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

PUBLIC BILLS, MEMORIALS, AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. JENKINS, from the Committee on the District of Columbia: A bill (H. R. 11400) to amend an act entitled "An act in relation to taxes and tax sales in the District of Columbia," approved February 28, 1898—to the House Calendar.

By Mr. HENRY C. SMITH: A bill (H. R. 11401) to amend an act entitled "An act to provide revenue for the Government and to encourage the industries of the United States," approved July 24, 1897—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BABCOCK: A bill (H. R. 11402) to amend section 7 of "An act to establish a code of law for the District of Columbia," approved March 3, 1901—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11403) to amend section 172 of "An act to establish a code of law for the District of Columbia," approved March 3, 1901—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. BLACKBURN (by request): A bill (H. R. 11404) to provide pensions for freedmen, and so forth—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. FLYNN: A bill (H. R. 11405) to amend section 2 of an act entitled "An act concerning the practice in Territorial courts and appeals therefrom," approved April 7, 1874—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HEDGE: A bill (H. R. 11406) granting an appropriation for the enlargement of the public building at Burlington, Iowa—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. COOPER of Texas: A bill (H. R. 11407) to repeal section 3480 of the Revised Statutes of the United States—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BLAKENEY: A bill (H. R. 11408) to prevent the filling of street cars beyond their seating capacity within the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. LESTER: A bill (H. R. 11409) to authorize the construction of a traffic bridge across the Savannah River from the mainland within the corporate limits of the city of Savannah to Hutchinsons Island, in the county of Chatham, State of Georgia—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. NAPHEN: A bill (H. R. 11410) for the improvement of Weymouth (Fore) River in Quincy, Mass.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11411) for the improvement of Neponset River at Neponset, Mass.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. RAY of New York: A bill (H. R. 11412) for the suppression of train robberies in the Territories of the United States and other places, and for other purposes—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. JENKINS: A bill (R. R. 11413) for the purchase of land in Fort Reno subdivision northwest as a site for a colored school building—to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. CREAMER: A joint resolution (H. J. Res. 152) proposing an amendment to the Constitution relating to the veto power of the President—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HOOKER: Memorial memorializing the Representatives and Senators of Mississippi in Congress to prepare and urge the passage of a bill refunding to the cotton-growing States the cotton tax collected from said States immediately after the war—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a concurrent resolution memorializing the Representatives and Senators of Mississippi in Congress to prepare and urge the passage of a bill refunding to the cotton-growing States the cotton tax collected from said States immediately after the war—to the Committee on War Claims.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills of the following titles were presented and referred as follows:

By Mr. BLAKENEY: A bill (H. R. 11414) for the relief of the heirs and legal representatives of William G. Burke, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BROWNLOW: A bill (H. R. 11415) granting a pension to M. J. Burton, widow of Thomas Burton—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BULL: A bill (H. R. 11416) granting an increase of pension to Esther Brown—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11417) granting an increase of pension to Julia Anglada—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BURK of Pennsylvania: A bill (H. R. 11418) granting an increase of pension to Hannah T. Knowles—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CASSINGHAM: A bill (H. R. 11419) to correct the military record of Andrew J. Dingman—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. COONEY: A bill (H. R. 11420) to pay the claim of Edward Hurley for paving Second street in front of the United States post-office building in the city of Sedalia, Mo.—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CORLISS: A bill (H. R. 11421) granting an increase of pension to Alfred Rauland—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. COWHERD: A bill (H. R. 11422) for the relief of P. J. Kennedy—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11423) granting a pension to Richard H. Askew—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11424) granting a pension to Mrs. Elizabeth Christmas—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. FLOOD: A bill (H. R. 11425) to aid and encourage military training and instruction by donation of public lands—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. GRIFFITH: A bill (H. R. 11426) to correct the military record of Alonzo Carter—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HENDERSON: A bill (H. R. 11427) granting an increase of pension to Charles P. Tripp—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. IRWIN: A bill (H. R. 11428) granting an increase of pension to Plummer Lewis—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11429) granting an increase of pension to Jennie T. Cardwell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11430) to correct the military record of George Johnson—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. JONES of Washington: A bill (H. R. 11431) for the relief of S. C. Henton—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. KERN: A bill (H. R. 11432) for the relief of Adam Eigner—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. KNAPP: A bill (H. R. 11433) to pay Orville J. Jennings, of Fulton, N. Y., for work done under contract of March 25, 1889—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. KYLE: A bill (H. R. 11434) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Joseph B. Colbert—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11435) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Andrew Campbell—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. LACEY: A bill (H. R. 11436) granting an increase of of pension to James H. McKnight—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LITTAUER: A bill (H. R. 11437) granting a pension to Mrs. Maria Olmsted Eldred—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11438) to correct the military record of Seneca S. Van Ness—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. LONG: A bill (H. R. 11439) for the relief of Martin Hoover—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11440) granting an increase of pension to Samuel F. Leard—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11441) granting a pension to Elizabeth Wiatt—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11442) granting a pension to Ephraim L. Powers—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11443) granting a pension to James L. Dyer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11444) granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Freeman—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11445) granting an increase of pension to James Gray—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts: A bill (H. R. 11446) to remove the charge of desertion standing against the name of Augustus Caldwell—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11447) granting a pension to Emela H. Parker—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MOON: A bill (H. R. 11448) for the relief of Nancy Edwards, widow of John B. Edwards—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11449) granting an increase of pension to Otto Haltnorth—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. MORRELL: A bill (H. R. 11450) to correct military record of Bryan Healey—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. NAPHEN: A bill (H. R. 11451) to correct the military record of Herman Wenige—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. PADGETT: A bill (H. R. 11452) for the relief of the estate of D. S. Phelan—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. PATTERSON of Pennsylvania: A bill (H. R. 11453) granting a pension to Catharine Freeman—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PRINCE: A bill (H. R. 11454) granting an increase of pension to George P. Conyers—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RICHARDSON of Alabama: A bill (H. R. 11455) for the relief of Benjamin S. Harper—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. RODEY: A bill (H. R. 11456) for the relief of James P. Chase—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. SCHIRM: A bill (H. R. 11457) providing for the reinstatement in and retirement from the Navy of Frank A. R. George—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11458) granting an increase of pension to William H. Ash—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11459) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Gustavus L. Ford—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SMITH of Kentucky (by request): A bill (H. R. 11460) granting a pension to William T. Gorr—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SULLOWAY: A bill (H. R. 11461) granting an increase of pension to John R. Moulton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TRIMBLE: A bill (H. R. 11462) granting a pension to William G. Mandeville—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11463) authorizing and directing the repayment to George W. Jordon, of Skinnersburg, Scott County, Ky., the sum of $1,000 that he paid to avoid the draft in 1864—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. YOUNG: A bill (H. R. 11464) granting a pension to Marion L. Wilson—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11465) to remove the charge of desertion from George W. Smith—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11466) granting a discharge to John B. Rhine—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. ZENOR: A bill (H. R. 11467) granting a pension to Susan Sutcliff—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11468) granting a pension to Thomas Howard—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McCALL: A bill (H. R. 11469) granting an increase of pension to Mary A. Craigue—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. ADAMS: Resolution of the Grocers and Importers' Exchange of Philadelphia, Pa., urging the creation of a department of commerce and industries—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, resolution of the Grocers and Importers' Exchange of Philadelphia, Pa., urging reciprocal relations with Cuba—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ALEXANDER: Resolutions of Liberty Lodge, No. 2, and Trunk and Bag Workers' Union No. 4, of Buffalo, N. Y., and National Building Trades Council of America, concerning the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of National Building Trades Council of America, in relation to the arid-land measure—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

By Mr. BARTLETT: Resolutions of the mayor and council of the city of Macon, Ga., asking for the erection of a new public building in that city—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. BELL: Resolutions of Typographical Union No. 82, of Colorado Springs, Colo., and E. M. Stanton Post, No. 37, of Salida, Colo., Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Colorado, favoring the construction of war ships at the navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, petition of the Board of Trade of Durango, Colo., favoring rights of way over public lands and Indian allotments—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. BOWERSOCK: Resolutions adopted by the New York Retail Grocers' Union, protesting against the repeal of the duty on tea—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolution of the National Trades Council of America, favoring irrigation by the General Government—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

Also, resolutions of the National Trades Council of America, favoring restriction of Chinese immigration—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of Tobacco Workers' National Union of Detroit, Mich., favoring the construction of war vessels in the Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. BROWN: Resolution of Lake Seamen's Union of Milwaukee, Wis., favoring an educational test in the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolution of Wisconsin National Guard, urging the passage of House bill 9972, to increase the efficiency of the militia—to the Committee on Militia.

Also, resolution of Lake Seamen's Union of Milwaukee, in opposition to the passage of House bill 9685—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, resolutions of the Wisconsin Experiment Association and Wisconsin State Horticultural Society, in support of House bill 8735, favoring the sale of public lands for the maintenance of agricultural and mechanical colleges—to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

Also, resolution of the Lake Seamen's Union, against Chinese labor—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of the Lake Seamen's Union, in opposition to House bill 7189, changing the name of the United States Marine Hospital Service—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. BULL: Resolution of Rhode Island Chapter, American Institute of Architects, urging the continuation of the office of Architect of the Capitol—to the Committee on Appropriations.

Also, resolutions of Steam Fitters' Union No. 31, Coopers' Union No. 51, of Providence, R. I.; Carpenters and Joiners' Union No. 194, of Newport, R. I., and Cigar Makers' Union No. 94, of Pawtucket, R. I., favoring the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of Providence, R. I., Branch Seamen's Union, relative to seamen's clause in proposed bill for exclusion of Chinese laborers—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of the Board of Trade of Providence, R. I., urging reciprocal relations with Cuba—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolution of Steam Fitters' Union No. 31, of Providence, R. I., and petition of Farragut Post, No. 4, Grand Army of the Republic, Vallejo, Cal., favoring the construction of war vessels in Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. BURK of Pennsylvania: Petition of the Central Tea Growers and Traders' Association of Japan, for repeal of the duty on tea—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolutions of the New York Retail Grocers' Union, against the repeal of the duty on tea—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolutions of the National Building Trades Council of America, favoring an appropriation for irrigating purposes—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

Also, resolutions of the New Orleans Progressive Union, protesting against reduction in sugar tariff—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Grocers and Importers' Exchange of Philadelphia, favoring a reciprocity treaty with Cuba—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolution of the National Building Trades Councils of America, favoring the reenactment of a Chinese-exclusion law—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of the Grocers and Importers' Exchange of Philadelphia, favoring the establishment of a department of commerce—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. CALDERHEAD: Resolutions of the United Retail Grocers' Association of Brooklyn, and New York Retail Grocers' Union, of New York City, in relation to the duty on tea—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolutions of the Commercial Club of Topeka, Kans., condemning the proposed Bowersock land-grazing bill—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, resolution of National Building Trades Council of America, favoring the passage of the Chinese-exclusion law—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of National Building Trades Council of America, in relation to the arid-land measure—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

By Mr. CAPRON: Resolution of Rhode Island Chapter, American Institute of Architects, against change of title of Architect of the Capitol—to the Committee on Appropriations.

Also, resolutions of the Board of Trade of Providence, R. I., urging reciprocal relations with Cuba—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolution of Farragut Post, No. 4, Grand Army of the Republic, of Vallejo, Cal., urging that the navy-yards be utilized for the construction of war vessels—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolutions of Cigar Makers' Union No. 94, of Pawtucket, R. I., and Coopers' Union No. 51, of Providence, R. I., advocating the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. CASSEL: Resolution of Cigar Makers' Union No. 257, of Lancaster, Pa., praying for the further restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolution of General Welsh Post, No. 118, of Columbia, Pa., concerning the construction of Government vessels in navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. CASSINGHAM: Petition of Rev. L. S. Boyce and 105 other citizens of Licking County, Ohio, for an amendment to the National Constitution defining legal marriage to be monogamic—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, resolution of Milk Drivers' Union No. 320, of Newark, Ohio, for the exclusion of Asiatics from the United States—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, paper to accompany House bill 2242, for the relief of Isaac Dewitt—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, papers to accompany House bill 4551, for the relief of Mrs. Ellen Allen—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. COONEY: Statement to accompany House bill 11420, relating to the claim of Edward Hurley—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin: Resolution of Metal Polishers and Brass Workers' Union No. 89, of Racine, Wis., American Federation of Labor, relative to the construction of vessels in Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolution of the National Building Trades Council of America, in relation to the reclamation and irrigation of arid lands—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

Also, resolution of National Building Trades Council of America, favoring the continuation of the exclusion law against Chinese laborers—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. COWHERD: Petition of P. J. Kennedy in behalf of his claim for rebate of taxes paid on tobacco and cigars—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, papers in support of House bill 11423, granting an increase of pension to Richard H. Askew—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CURRIER: Petitions of the Women's Christian Temperance Unions of Dover, Lakeport, Portsmouth, Derry, Nashua, and Gonic, and of John B. Pike and others and Solon A. Peck and others, of Lebanon, all of New Hampshire, favoring the adoption of an antipolygamy amendment to the Constitution—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, resolutions adopted by the Oliver W. Lull Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of New Hampshire, favoring the construction of naval vessels at the Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. DAHLE: Resolution of the Wisconsin Experimental Association, Madison, Wis., and the Wisconsin State Horticultural Society, favoring a bill for the establishment and maintenance of schools of mines and mining—to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

Also, resolution of Christian Endeavor Society of Moriah, Wis., against the repeal of the anticanteen law—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, resolutions of Cigar Makers' Union No. 182, of Madison, Wis., concerning the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of Wisconsin National Guard, Madison, Wis., urging the passage of House bill No. 9972, increasing the efficiency of the militia—to the Committee on Militia.

By Mr. DRAPER: Resolution of the New York Retail Grocers' Union, against the repeal of the duty on teas—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ESCH: Resolution of the La Crosse (Wis.) Board of Trade in opposition to the Morris bill, and favoring a national park at the headwaters of the Mississippi River—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, resolution of the Oklahoma City Commercial Club, in favor of single statehood for Oklahoma and Indian Territories—to the Committee on the Territories.

Also, resolutions of the New York Retail Grocers' Union, in relation to the removal of the duty on teas—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolution of the Wisconsin National Guard, favoring House bill 9972, increasing the efficiency of the militia—to the Committee on Militia.

Also, resolutions of Wisconsin Agricultural Experimental Association and Wisconsin State Horticultural Society, in support of House bill 8735, favoring the sale of public lands for the maintenance of agricultural and mechanical colleges—to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

By Mr. FITZGERALD: Memorial of the Merchants' Association of New York, for reciprocal trade relations with Cuba—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolutions of United Garment Makers of America, Local Union No. 5, of Brooklyn, urging legislation to exclude the Chinese from this country—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of National Building Trades Council of America, favoring the irrigation of the arid lands of the United States—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

By Mr. GRAHAM: Resolutions of Typographical Union No. 7,

Pittsburg, Pa., and National Building Trades Council of America, favoring the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of Gen. Thomas A. Rowley Post, No. 495, Grand Army of the Republic, of Natrona, Pa., favoring construction of war vessels in United States navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolution of the National Building Trades Council, for national irrigation of arid lands—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

Also, petition of Jefferson Memorial Association, of Charlottesville, Va., for a memorial of Thomas Jefferson by the construction of Memorial avenue near Charlottesville, Va.—to the Committee on the Library.

Also, petition of Mrs. M. K. Salsbury and others, of Allegheny County, Pa., for legislation to punish polygamy—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. HAMILTON: Resolutions of Cigar Makers' Union No. 457, of Benton Harbor, Mich., and United Garment Workers' No. 5, of Brooklyn, N. Y., in favor of the exclusion of Chinese laborers—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of Memphis Cotton Exchange, Memphis, Tenn., favoring improvement of rivers and harbors—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. HANBURY: Petition of United Garment Workers Union No. 5 of Brooklyn, N. Y., for the enactment of the Chinese-exclusion law—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, papers to accompany House bill 8022 granting a pension to Prudentia L. D. Nugent—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of J. C. Kerr and others, of the Fifth Congressional district of New York, for an amendment to the National Constitution defining legal marriage to be monogamic—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, papers to accompany House bill 8642 for the relief of Steward J. Donnelly—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HASKINS: Petition of Jarvis Post, No. 43, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Vermont, for investigation of the administration of the Bureau of Pensions—to the Committee on Rules.

Also, petition of Jarvis Post, No. 43, of Springfield, Vt., favoring the construction of war ships at the navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. HILDEBRANT: Petition of the Wilmington Yearly Meeting of Friends, and Wilmington (Ohio) Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Hardens Creek, favoring the exclusion of intoxicants from all countries inhabited chiefly by native races—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. JACKSON of Kansas: Resolution of Western Retail Implement and Vehicle Dealers' Association, held in Kansas City, Mo., against House bill 6578, known as the parcels-post bill—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, resolution of the Topeka (Kans.) Commercial Club, condemning the proposed Bowersock land-grazing bill—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, petition of the Federal Labor Union of Independence, Kans., for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. KAHN: Resolutions of the Pile Drivers and Bridge Builders' Union No. 9078, of National Union of United Brewery Workmen of the United States, Local Union No. 7 of the San Francisco Labor Council, and of Local Union No. 104, Amalgamated Steel Metal Workers' International Association, of San Francisco, Cal., favoring the exclusion of Chinese—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. KETCHAM: Petition of the Allied Metal Mechanics' Union No. 106, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. W. W. KITCHIN: Petition of J. Bryan Grimes and other State officers of North Carolina, urging a reduction of the taxes on the various forms of tobacco and tobacco dealers—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LACEY: Resolutions of National Building Trades Council of St. Louis, Mo., favoring irrigation of arid lands—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

Also, resolutions of Grand Army of the Republic post at Wellman, Iowa, favoring the building of war vessels in the navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, petition of citizens of Blakesburg, Iowa, favoring the election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people—to the Committee on Election of President, Vice-President, and Representatives in Congress.

Also, resolutions of the National Building Trades Council of St. Louis, Mo., and of Local Union No. 114, of Ottumwa, Iowa, favoring the exclusion of the Chinese—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. LINDSAY: Resolutions of Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen (New York State legislative board), favoring bill to limit the power of Federal courts in granting injunctions in trades disputes—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. LITTAUER: Papers to accompany House bill 11437, granting a pension to Maria Olmsted Eldred—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LONG: Petition of Harper Post, No. 251; McGovney Post, No. 356; Eldred Post, No. 174, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Kansas, for investigation of the administration of the Bureau of Pensions—to the Committee on Rules.

Also, resolution of the Western Retail Implement and Vehicle Dealers' Association, against House bill 6578, known as the parcels-post bill—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, resolutions of Plasterers' Union No. 199, Cigar Makers' Union No. 286, of Wichita, Kans., and Kansas State Society of Labor and Industry, favoring the continuation of the exclusion law against Chinese laborers—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of the Commercial Club of Topeka, Kans., condemning the proposed Bowersock land-grazing bill—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, resolution of the Chamber of Commerce of Topeka, Kans., asking that the interstate-commerce law be strengthened—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, resolutions of Post No. 384, Eggleson Post, No. 244, and General George Crook Post, No. 337, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Kansas, for the building of war vessels in United States navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, papers to accompany House bill 8040, for the relief of Edward L. Hall—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, papers to accompany House bill 10440, for the relief of William C. Read—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, papers to accompany House bill 7824, for the relief of Levi M. Hall—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, papers to accompany House bill 1071, for the relief of Adam Kelman—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, papers to accompany House bill 1062, for the relief of Dr. E. P. Stearns—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, papers to accompany House bill 6088, for the relief of Levi Fellers—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MARTIN: Resolutions of Farragut Post, No. 52, of Spearfish, S. Dak., and Strickland Post, No. 127, of Hot Springs, S. Dak., concerning the construction of Government vessels in navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolution of the National Building Trades Council for national irrigation of arid lands—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

By Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts: Resolutions of the Board of Trade of Lynn, Mass., urging the appointment of a commission to study and report upon the industrial and commercial conditions in China—to the Committee on ———.

Also, resolution of the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy, favoring House bill 7189 and Senate bill 2162, relating to the United States Marine-Hospital Service—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, resolution of Carpenters' District Council, of Boston, Mass., favoring the repeal of the desert-land act and in support of an appropriation for irrigation surveys—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, resolutions of Bay State Lodge, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, favoring the anti-injunction bill (S. 1118)—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MOON: Resolution of Iron Molders' Union No. 53, of Chattanooga, Tenn., favoring restriction of undesirable immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of Nancy Edwards, of the State of Tennessee, for reference of war claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MORRELL: Petition of Farragut Post, No. 4, Grand Army of the Republic, of California, in regard to employees in navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, petition of Citizens' Republican Club of Philadelphia, urging the passage of bills abolishing "Jim Crow" cars—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of National Building Trades Council of America, concerning the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of New York Retail Grocers' Union, protesting against the removal of the duty on teas—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Grocers and Importers' Exchange of Philadelphia, favoring the creation of a department of commerce—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Grocers and Importers' Exchange of Philadelphia, for the establishment of reciprocal relations with Cuba—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. NAPHEN: Petition of Paul Revere Post, No. 88, Grand

Army of the Republic, of Quincy, Mass., urging that the navy-yards be utilized for the construction of war vessels—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, petition of National Tea Duty Repeal Association, in relation to the removal of the duty on teas—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolution of the National Building Trades Council of America, favoring the national irrigation of arid lands, etc.—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

Also, resolution of Horse Nail Makers' Union No. 6313, Boston, Mass., in favor of the construction of war vessels in Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, petition of Massachusetts College of Pharmacy, regarding House bill 7189 and Senate bill 2162, relating to the United States Marine-Hospital Service—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, resolution of the National Building Trades Council of America and Carpenters' District Council of Boston, Mass., in favor of the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of Bay State Lodge No. 88, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, in support of Senate bill 1118, limiting the meaning of the word "conspiracy," etc.—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. OTJEN: Resolution of Lake Seamen's Union, of Milwaukee, Wis., favoring an educational test in the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolution of Lake Seamen's Union, of Milwaukee, Wis., favoring extension of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of Lake Seamen's Union, of Milwaukee, Wis., against the passage of House bill 7189—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, resolution of Lake Seamen's Union, of Milwaukee, Wis., against the passage of House bill 9685—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. PADGETT: Petition of D. C. Phelan in relation to a claim for services—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. PERKINS: Petition of Bavarian Society, of Rochester, N. Y., in relation to the Boer war—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. RICHARDSON of Alabama: Papers to accompany House bill 11455 for the relief of Benj. S. Harper—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana: Petition of Robert S. Smith, of Peru, Ind., in favor of the higher education of the blind—to the Committee on Education.

By Mr. RYAN: Resolutions of Carpenters and Joiners' Union No. 9, and of Marine Corps Association No. 54, of Buffalo, N. Y., favoring reenactment of Chinese-exclusion law—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of New York Retail Grocers' Union against repeal of duty on tea—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SHALLENBERGER: Petition of M. J. Munday and 3 other citizens of Edison, Nebr., and J. A. Dunham and 30 other merchants of Beaver City, Nebr., against House bill 6578, known as the parcels-post bill—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. SELBY: Resolution of National Building Trades Council, favoring the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolution of Cigar Makers' Union of Jacksonville, Ill., for an educational test in the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolution of the National Building Trades Council, in relation to the sale of public lands and the irrigation of arid lands—to the Committee on Arid Lands.

By Mr. SIBLEY: Petitions of Lehr Fenders and Shove Boys' Union No. 7583, of Kane, Pa., and Union No. 54, Oil and Gas Well Workers, of Gifford, Pa., urging the passage of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of Lehr Fenders and Shove Boys' Union No. 7583, of Kane, Pa., favoring the construction of Government vessels in navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. SMITH of Kentucky: Petition of citizens of Bullitt County, Ky., asking that a pension be granted William T. Garr—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SPERRY: Resolutions of Brewers' Union No. 126, Carpenters' Union No. 260, of Waterbury, Conn., and Iron Molders' Union No. 71, of Ansonia, Derby, and Shelton, Conn., favoring restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolutions of Brewers' Union No. 126, of Waterbury, Conn., favoring the building of war ships in the navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolution of citizens of New Haven, Conn., relative to the collection of statistics of marriage and divorce—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. STARK: Petition of city and county directors of the city of York and York County, Nebr., to accompany House bill No. 3081, being a bill for the erection of a public building in the city of York, Nebr.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, protests of Miller & Ro e and 27 other citizens of Fairmont, Nebr., and T. F. Scott & Son and 12 others, of Swanton, Nebr., against House bill 6578, known as the parcels-post bill—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, resolution of Farnsworth Post, No. 73, Ulysses, Nebr., and Stanton Post, No. 20, of Rising City, Nebr., Grand Army of the Republic, favoring the building of vessels in the United States navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. SULLOWAY: Petitions of the Woman's Christian Temperance Unions of Dover, Greenville, Lakeport, Portsmouth, Gonic, Derry, and Somersworth, N. H., praying for the enactment of a law against polygamy—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SULZER: Resolution of the National Building Trades Council of America, in favor of the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of the National Building Trades Council of America, favoring the national irrigation of arid lands, etc.—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

Also, protest of the New York Retail Grocers' Union, against the repeal of the duty on tea—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Farragut Post, No. 4, of Vallejo, Cal.. for the employment of veterans of the war in the navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. WANGER: Petition of Marion Circle, No. 16, Brotherhood of the Union, of Quakertown, Pa., in favor of the purchase of Valley Forge Encampment Grounds as a national park—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WOODS: Resolution of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce and the board of directors of the San Francisco Merchants' Exchange and National Building Trades Council of America, favoring the passage of the Chinese-exclusion law—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of National Building Trades Council of America, favoring Government reclamation of arid lands—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

SENATE.

TUESDAY, February 18, 1902.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when, on request of Mr. GALLINGER, and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the Journal will stand approved. It is approved.

SIGNING OF LETTERS PATENT.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a draft of a proposed bill to amend section 4883 of the Revised Statutes relating to the signing of letters patent for inventions; which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Patents, and ordered to be printed.

RICHARD P. BLACKISTONE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a certified copy of the findings filed by the court in the cause of Richard P. Blackistone v. The United States; which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 10530) to repeal the war-revenue taxation, and for other purposes; and

A bill (H. R. 11470) making an appropriation for clearing the Potomac River of ice.

The message also announced that the House had passed a concurrent resolution requesting the President to return to the House of Representatives the bill (H. R. 5814) to provide for the execution in the Philippine Islands and in Porto Rico of deeds for land situate in the District of Columbia; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. SCOTT presented a petition of sundry citizens of Lewisburg, W. Va., praying for the passage of the so-called Grout bill, to regulate the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented a petition of Painters and Decorators' Local Union No. 43, American Federation of Labor, of Wheeling, W. Va., praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. GALLINGER presented a petition of comrades of Grant Post, No. 91, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of New Hampshire, of Glen, N. H., praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented petitions of the Woman's Christian Temperance Unions of Sanbornville, Northwood, Tilton, Water Village, Manchester, and Nottingham, all in the State of New Hampshire, praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. FAIRBANKS presented a petition of the Lawrenceburg Roller Mills Company, of Lawrenceburg, Ind., praying for the adoption of an amendment to the so-called Harter Act relating to bills of lading; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented petitions of Camden Post No. 485, of Camden; of George W. Lennard Post, No. 148, of New Castle; of Willis Hubbard Post, No. 574, of Cataract; of U. S. Grant Post, No. 72, of Washington, all of the Department of Indiana, Grand Army of the Republic, and of Typographical Union No. 97, American Federation of Labor, of Peru, in the State of Indiana, praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented petitions of Stony Point Grange, No. 1733, Patrons of Husbandry, of Stony Point; of Lyman B. Voyles, of Crandall, and of the Union County Farmers' Institute, of Liberty, all in the State of Indiana, praying for the passage of the so-called Grout bill to regulate the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented petitions of the Central Labor Union, American Federation of Labor, of Elkhart; of Local Union No. 23, American Flint Glass Workers, of Muncie, and of Cigar Makers' Local Union No. 379, of Rochester, all in the State of Indiana, praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a petition of the Board of Trade, of Indianapolis, Ind., praying for the construction by the Government of a cable connecting the Hawaiian and Philippine islands; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. GAMBLE presented a petition of the National Building Trades Council of America, praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the construction of storage reservoirs and for the irrigation of the arid lands; which was referred to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation of Arid Lands.

He also presented a petition of the Jobbers and Manufacturers' Association of Sioux Falls, S. Dak., praying for the passage of the so-called Grout bill to regulate the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented a petition of the Synod of the Presbyterian Church of South Dakota, praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of Silas A. Strickland Post, No. 127. Grand Army of the Republic, Department of South Dakota, of Hot Springs, S. Dak., praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. KEAN presented a memorial of Local Grange No. 8, Patrons of Husbandry, of Moorestown, N. J., remonstrating against the irrigation of the arid lands at public expense; which was referred to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation of Arid Lands.

He also presented a petition of Federal Labor Union, No. 7211, American Federation of Labor, of Dover, N. J., praying for the repeal of the so-called desert-land act, for an appropriation for the construction of irrigating reservoirs, and remonstrating against granting State control to Government lands; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

He also presented a petition of Local Branch No. 14, Glass Bottle Blowers' Association, of Woodbury, N. J., praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a petition of Independent Council, No. 131, Daughters of Liberty, of New Gretna, N. J., and a petition of Englewood Council, No. 7, Daughters of Liberty, of Englewood, N. J., praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law, for the restriction of immigration, and to suppress anarchy; which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. DRYDEN presented a petition of Winona Council, No. 149, Junior Order of United American Mechanics, of Chews Landing, N. J., praying for the enactment of legislation to suppress anarchy; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of the Presbytery of New Brunswick and of the congregations of the Presbyterian churches of Trenton, all in the State of New Jersey, praying for a continuance of the present anticanteen law; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented petitions of Glass Bottle Blowers' Union No. 7, of Millville; of Iron Molders' Union No. 267, of Trenton; of Glass Bottle Blowers' Local Union No. 8, of Bridgeton; of Glass Bottle Blowers' Local Union No. 14, of Woodbury, and of United Garment Workers' Local Union No. 91, of Morris, all of the American Federation of Labor, in the State of New Jersey, praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented petitions of Washington Camp, No. 7, Patriotic Order Sons of America, of Trenton; of Olympia Council, No. 269, Junior Order United American Mechanics, of Berlin; of Wire Weavers' Protective Association of Belleville; of Clothing Cutters' Local Union No. 28, of Newark; of Local Council No. 132, Junior Order of United American Mechanics, of Hohndel; of the board of chosen freeholders of Jersey City; of Local Council No. 61, Daughters of Liberty, of Newark; of Local Council No. 78, Daughters of Liberty, of Jamesburg; of Chain Makers' Local Union of Trenton; of Cigar Makers' Local Union No. 138, of Newark, and of Cigar Makers' Local Union No. 230, of Millville, all in the State of New Jersey, praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of Princeton, Boonton, Flemington, Camden, Woodstown, Palmyra, Haddonfield, Merchantville, Collingswood, Westfield, Ridgewood, Hopewell, and East Orange, all in the State of New Jersey, praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. COCKRELL presented a petition of sundry citizens of Miami, Mo., praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the election of United States Senators by a direct vote of the people; which was referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

He also presented a petition of sundry implement, vehicle, and hardware dealers of Kansas, Missouri, Colorado, and of Oklahoma and the Indian Territories, praying for the ratification of the French reciprocity treaty now pending before the Senate; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a memorial of the Western Retail Implement and Vehicle Dealers' Association, of Kansas City, Mo., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called parcels post bill; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented a petition of Andy Smith Post, No. 243, Department of Missouri, Grand Army of the Republic, of Willow Springs, Mo., praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. BEVERIDGE presented a petition of the Commercial Club, of Muncie, Ind., praying for the establishment of reciprocal trade relations with Cuba; which was referred to the Committee on Relations with Cuba.

He also presented petitions of Friendship Lodge, No. 70, American Federation of Labor, of Fort Wayne; of Iron Molders' Local Union No. 357, of Montpelier; of Journeymen Horseshoers' Local Union No. 81, of Fort Wayne, and of Hackelman Post, No. 64, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Indiana, of Brookville, all in the State of Indiana, praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented petitions of Cigar Makers' Local Union No. 300, of Michigan City; of American Glass Workers' Local Union No. 6, of Marion; of Cigar Makers' Local Union No. 221, of South Bend; of Glass Bottle Blowers' Local Union No. 61, of Gas City; of Boiler Makers' Local Union of Fort Wayne, and of American Flint Glass Workers' Union No. 45, of Marion, all in the State of Indiana, praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a petition of Indianapolis Division No. 11, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, of Indianapolis, Ind., praying for the passage of the so-called Hoar anti-injunction bill, to limit the meaning of the word "conspiracy" and the use of "restraining orders and injunctions" in certain cases; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of Local Union No. 652, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, of Elwood, Ind., praying for the repeal of the so-called desert-land act, for the commutation of the homestead act, and that an appropriation of $250,000 be made for irrigation surveys, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

He also presented petitions of General Steele Post, No. 7, of Rockville; of U. S. Grant Post, No. 72, of Washington, and of Basil B. Decker Post, No. 334, of French Lick, all of the Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Indiana, in the State of Indiana, praying that preference be given to veterans in the employment of mechanics and laborers in the navy-yards of the country; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. SPOONER presented a memorial of Lake Seamen's Union, International Seamen's Union, of Milwaukee, Wis., remonstrating against the adoption of an amendment to House bill 9685, relating to desertions by American seamen; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented a memorial of the Lake Seamen's Union, International Seamen's Union, of Milwaukee, Wis., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation to change the name of the United States Marine-Hospital Service to that of the United States Health Service; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented a petition of the State horticultural society of Wisconsin, praying for the enactment of legislation granting the proceeds of the sales of public lands to the endowment of agricultural and mechanical colleges; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

He also presented a petition of 16 Christian Endeavor societies of Moriah and Columbus, in the State of Wisconsin, praying for the continuance of the present anti-canteen law, and for the enactment of a similar law to apply to the Soldiers' Homes of the country; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented petitions of Cigar Makers' Local Union No. 182, American Federation of Labor, of Madison; of George D. Eggleston Post, No. 133, of Appleton; of J. B. Reynolds Post, No. 205, of Chilton; of G. W. Bell Post, No. 53, of Wonewec; of G. H. Irwin Post, No. 25, of Lodi; of A. Lincoln Post, No. 3, of Darien, and of Will Hickok Post, No. 134, of Bloomington, all of the Department of Wisconsin, Grand Army of the Republic, in the State of Wisconsin, praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented petitions of Lake Seamen's Union, International Seamen's Union, of Milwaukee; of Marine Cooks' Association No. 52, of Milwaukee; of Cigar Makers' Local Union No. 182, of Madison; of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Local Union No. 170, of Milwaukee; of Wood Workers' Local Union No. 53, of Sheboygan, and of Cigar Makers' Local Union No. 212, of West Superior, all of the American Federation of Labor, in the State of Wisconsin, praying for the reenactment of the Chinese exclusion law; which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. HANSBROUGH presented a petition of James B. McPherson Post, No. 2, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of North Dakota, of Bismarck, N. Dak., and a petition of Winfield Scott Post, No. 4, Grand Army of the Republic, of Steele, N. Dak., praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. PATTERSON. I present a concurrent resolution of the legislature of Colorado, in favor of the establishment of a governmental department of mines and mining. I ask that the concurrent resolution be printed in the RECORD, and referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

There being no objection, the concurrent resolution was referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House concurrent resolution No. 7.

[By Mr. Montgomery, of Teller.]

Whereas the session of the Trans-Mississippi Commercial Congress held in Cripple Creek, Colo., in 1901, unanimously adopted a resolution declaring in favor of a governmental department of mines, with a secretary in charge thereof, who shall be a member of the Cabinet; and

Whereas each of the Senators and Representatives in Congress from the State of Colorado are in favor of such department; and

Whereas bills have been introduced in Congress for the purpose of creating such department; and

Whereas the State of Colorado has as much, if not greater, interest in the promotion of the mining industry than any other State: Therefore,

Resolved, That this house (the senate concurring therein) commend the action of our Senators and Representatives in supporting such measure, and respectfully urge them to use all honorable means to procure the enactment of a law providing for such department, and elevating the great mineral industry from the subordinate place in which it has so long been kept to the commanding position to which it is entitled.

Resolved, That an authenticated copy of these resolutions, when passed, be forwarded by the governor of the State to each of our Senators and Representatives.

B. F. MONTGOMERY,
Speaker of the House.
DAVID C. COATES,
President of the Senate.

Approved this 14th day of February, A. D. 1902, at 9.45 o'clock a. m.

JAMES B. OSMAN,
Governor of the State.
W. H. KELLEY,
Secretary of the Senate.
WILLIAM J. HAMILTON,
Clerk of the House.

Mr. PATTERSON presented a petition of the State Board of Horticulture of Colorado, praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the protection of useful birds of our country; which was referred to the Committee on Forest Reservations and the Protection of Game.

He also presented a petition of Local Miners' Union No. 32, Western Federation of Miners, of Victor, Colo., and a petition of Cigar Makers' Local Union No. 49, of Denver, Colo., praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. FRYE presented a petition of Colonel L. H. Kendall Command, No. 106, Spanish War Veterans, of Biddeford, Me., praying Congress to recognize the services of Clara A. Barton; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

ARMY POST EXCHANGE.

Mr. GALLINGER. I present a brief paper on the social features of the post exchange, together with copies of the British army regulations. I move that the paper be printed as a document.

The motion was agreed to.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. SCOTT, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3585) granting an increase of pension to Mary Wolcott Kilburn, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (S. 76) to provide for a public building at New Orleans, La., reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4115) granting an increase of pension to William Eugas, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3320) granting an increase of pension to Adelaide G. Hatch, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3743) granting an increase of pension to Frances Gurley Elderkin, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. McCUMBER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1264) granting an increase of pension to Torgus Haraldson, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PATTERSON, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3021) granting a pension to India Stewart, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them each with an amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 2327) granting an increase of pension to William Hoag; and

A bill (S. 2938) granting an increase of pension to Margaret Dunn.

FREDERICK E. ROGERS.

Mr. GALLINGER. I move that the bill (S. 3704) granting an increase of pension to Frederick E. Rogers be taken from the Calendar and recommitted to the Committee on Pensions.

The motion was agreed to.

OMNIBUS CLAIMS BILL.

Mr. WARREN. I am directed by the Committee on Claims to report back with sundry amendments the bill (H. R. 8587) for the allowance of certain claims for stores and supplies reported by the Court of Claims under the provisions of the act approved March 3, 1883, and commonly known as the Bowman Act, and I submit a report thereon.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, the bill just sent to the desk is the omnibus claims bill, so called. It will soon be printed and laid on the desks of Senators with the report thereon. I wish to give notice that I shall move to take it up immediately on the completion of the unfinished business, or at such time before that as there may seem to be any lull or gap in the consideration of the unfinished business.

The bill provides for some 400 claims bills, representing about 600 claimants. The Senate Committee on Claims has stricken out of the House bill a few items and offers a number of additional claims in its amendment. The intent of the committee is to present to the Senate a bill every item of which is of recognized merit, so that the only reasonable criticism will be that it does not contain all of the meritorious bills or claims before the Congress.

It is therefore believed that it will only take long enough to read the bill to obtain its passage in the Senate.

The bill is made up of unquestionably good Court of Claims findings under Bowman and Tucker acts, French spoliation findings, Selfridge board, etc., findings, and a considerable number of miscellaneous claims which have heretofore passed either the Senate or the House, or both.

I ask that an order may be made to print 500 extra copies of the bill and the report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Wyoming asks unanimous consent that there be 500 additional copies of the bill and report printed. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

TRANSFER OF LIBRARY OF STATE REPORTS, ETC.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. On behalf of the Committee on the Library I report back favorably, without amendment, the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 131) authorizing the transfer to the Library of Congress of the library of State reports, etc., and I ask for its present consideration.

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate, etc., That all volumes and pamphlets published by the several States and Territories and collected by the Industrial Commission, also official minutes of the Commission and files of correspondence, are hereby directed to be turned over by the Industrial Commission to the Librarian of Congress, subject to the further orders of Congress.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the joint resolution was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INTEROCEANIC CANAL.

Mr. MITCHELL. I am directed by the Committee on Interoceanic Canals to ask to have printed as appendixes to the report of the Isthmian Canal Commission certain papers, being historical notes relative to the Universal Interoceanic Canal Company, 1880–1894, prior to the organization of the new company, and the reports, surveys, contracts, and treaties made in connection with this canal. They are set out fully in the paper I hold in my hand, and I ask that they be printed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Has the Senator any idea of what the cost of the printing will be?

Mr. MITCHELL. I have not the slightest idea, but the papers are contained in the report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair was not aware of that. The Senator from Oregon asks unanimous consent for the printing of the papers which he has presented to the Senate. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and that order is made.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. KEARNS introduced a bill (S. 3984) granting land for a miners' home; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. DILLINGHAM introduced a bill (S. 3985) for the relief of Joel L. Griffin; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. BARD introduced a bill (S. 3986) for the relief of the American Surety Company of New York; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. FAIRBANKS introduced a bill (S. 3987) granting a pension to Alma Dubois; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3988) to correct the military record of John M. Congdon; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. BERRY introduced a bill (S. 3989) to establish a fish-cultural station at or near the town of Mammoth Spring, in the State of Arkansas; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Fisheries.

Mr. GAMBLE introduced a bill (S. 3990) authorizing the use, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, of certain moneys in the Treasury to the credit of the Sioux Indians of the Crow Creek Reservation in South Dakota, under the act of March 2, 1895, and for other purposes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. DIETRICH introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 3991) granting a pension to Waity West (with accompanying papers); and

A bill (S. 3992) granting an increase of pension to David M. McKnight (with accompanying papers).

Mr. DIETRICH introduced a bill (S. 3993) granting an increase of pension to Granville R. Turner; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. BEVERIDGE introduced a bill (S. 3994) for the relief of William Taylor; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 3995) granting a pension to Susan E. Clark (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 3996) granting an increase of pension to Serena J. Washburn (with an accompanying paper);

A bill (S. 3997) granting an increase of pension to Otis A. Barlow (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 3998) granting an increase of pension to Emma L. Kimble (with an accompanying paper); and

A bill (S. 3999) granting an increase of pension to Emma S. Hanna (with an accompanying paper).

Mr. BEVERIDGE introduced a bill (S. 4000) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Jacob L. Stough; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. DEBOE (by request) introduced a bill (S. 4001) authorizing and directing the purchase of Gen. S. W. Price's life-size portrait of Gen. George H. Thomas, deceased; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Library.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4002) for the relief of Joseph Wilson, deceased; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. CLAY introduced a bill (S. 4003) to authorize the construction of a traffic bridge across the Savannah River from the mainland within the corporate limits of the city of Savannah to Hutchinsons Island, in the county of Chatham, State of Georgia; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. SPOONER introduced a bill (S. 4004) granting an increase of pension to Thomas L. Nelson; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PLATT of New York introduced a bill (S. 4005) for the relief of the Brooklyn Ferry Company, of New York; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. LODGE introduced a bill (S. 4006) for the relief of certain claimants under the Geneva award; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. PATTERSON introduced a bill (S. 4007) granting an increase of pension to William H. Fletcher; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4008) granting a pension to Thomas Perkins; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4009) granting an increase of pension to Ernest Pitschner; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. HEITFELD introduced a bill (S. 4010) for the relief of the legal representatives of Gilman Sawtelle; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. MALLORY introduced a bill (S. 4011) for the relief of the legal representatives of Joseph Sierra, deceased; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

AMENDMENT TO APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. GAMBLE submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $60,000 for improving the Missouri River at Yankton, S. Dak., intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

HARBOR IMPROVEMENT ON COAST OF WASHINGTON.

Mr. TURNER submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, directed to cause an examination to be made of the coast of Washington in the vicinity of the mouth of the Hoh River, with a view to the establishment of a harbor, and to submit an estimate therefor.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 10530) to repeal war-revenue taxation, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Finance.

REMOVAL OF ICE FROM THE POTOMAC RIVER.

The bill (H. R. 11470) making an appropriation for clearing the Potomac River of ice was read twice by its title.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, this is an emergency bill. If it should be referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia, it would be reported back favorably, as all such bills are. So I ask unanimous consent that it be considered now without reference to the committee.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to appropriate $5,000 to enable the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to meet expenses that may be necessary for the purpose of clearing the Potomac River of ice within the District of Columbia, payable from any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated and from the revenues of the District of Columbia in equal parts, and to be immediately available.

Mr. BURROWS. I should like to inquire of the Senator whether or not, if this bill is referred to the committee, it can not be so amended as to provide for clearing the ice from the streets and sidewalks of the city, which we travel more than we do the river at this time of the year.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I think that the object the Senator has in view is a very good one, and I trust he will introduce a bill for that purpose. This bill is to prevent a threatened inundation of a portion of the city, which has occurred several times in the past, because of the obstruction of the stream by the accumulated ice. It simply intends to accomplish one good result, and the Senator from Michigan certainly will have my hearty concurrence if he moves in the other direction. I hope the bill will pass without amendment.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXECUTION OF LEGAL INSTRUMENTS IN THE PHILIPPINES, ETC.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives; which was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the President be requested to return to the House of Representatives the bill (H. R. 5814) to provide for the execution in the Philippine Islands and in Porto Rico of deeds for land situate in the District of Columbia.

PHILIPPINE TARIFF BILL.

Mr. LODGE. I move to take up House bill 5833.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5833) temporarily to provide revenue for the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes.

Mr. WELLINGTON. Mr. President, I gave notice on Thursday that at the close of the routine business this morning I would address the Senate on the pending bill.

Mr. LODGE. Will the Senator from Maryland permit me?

Mr. WELLINGTON. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. LODGE. I should like to ask the Senators on the other side, and especially the Senator from Utah [Mr. RAWLINS], who has charge of the bill of the minority, if it would not be possible, as was suggested on Thursday, when the pending bill was laid aside, for us to make some agreement as to the time for taking a vote? I should be glad to make any reasonable agreement that would meet the views of the Senator from Utah and the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL], who have had this matter under consideration.

Mr. RAWLINS. Mr. President, the minority, I think, have no disposition to delay the voting on this measure. I should like to ask the Senator from Massachusetts, however, whether the debate is closed upon his side of the question?

Mr. LODGE. I have received no notice of any speeches on this side except, as I mentioned the other day, the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] told me he might desire to make a speech before the vote is taken on the bill, but he left it uncertain. The Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART] said he would like to speak for ten minutes. Those are the notices I have had of speeches on this side, and I think I can say that no one on this side would be desirous of detaining the Senate by postponing the vote.

Mr. RAWLINS. I will make this suggestion: There may be additional speeches upon the other side and there may be also additional speeches upon this side. In view of the situation which may develop as the discussion proceeds, I suggest that we fix next Monday.

Mr. LODGE. Next Monday?

Mr. RAWLINS. Next Monday at, say, 4 o'clock, and that the last day, after the routine morning business, be devoted to fifteen-minute speeches.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. RAWLINS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. BACON. I have no disposition to defer the time of voting, but I wish to make one suggestion.

I understand from what the Senator from Massachusetts has said, and also from what I have heard personally from the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER], that he and perhaps some others on the other side will desire to be heard. I think it might be well to hear the speeches of those Senators before a time is fixed.

But if that suggestion is not carried out, I would suggest Wednesday in place of Monday, for this reason: I understand from the Senator from Wisconsin that it is possible he will not be ready to speak before Thursday. He will doubtless occupy all of the part of that day which will be devoted to speaking, and possibly there will be some interruptions that may run it over into the next day. Senators well recognize the fact that unforeseen influences sometimes contribute to that result.

Mr. SPOONER entered the Chamber.

Mr. BACON. As I was saying, the Senator will recognize that sometimes, without anticipating that such will be the case, it does eventuate in that way. I am sure the Senator recalls the fact that once before, when he spoke on this same subject, he himself stated that certain influences caused him to run over into the third day, not occupying, however, all the time. The Senator became a little unwell, I recollect.

Mr. SPOONER. I was constantly interrupted and my speech was prolonged.

Mr. BACON. Of course we can not anticipate to what extent that will be the case. So the point I was coming to was that if the Senator from Wisconsin does not speak until Thursday and probably does not finish until Friday, there may not be a full opportunity of reply on the other side by Monday, and therefore——

Mr. LODGE. I do hope the Senator from Georgia will not prevent some agreement.

Mr. BACON. I am not preventing it.

Mr. LODGE. I am anxious to make some agreement. I am willing to make it as liberal as possible. I am perfectly certain the Senator from Wisconsin does not wish to delay a vote on the bill.

Mr. BACON. I had not finished what I had to say, and I think the Senator misrepresents me unintentionally in making that point.

Mr. LODGE. I only meant to appeal to the Senator to allow the agreement to be made as the Senator from Utah had proposed it, that is all.

Mr. BACON. The Senator appeals that I should agree to some day, and I had previously suggested Wednesday. I did not indicate that I was unwilling to have a day fixed.

Mr. LODGE. Oh, I beg the Senator's pardon. I did not understand that he proposed that we should put it off until Wednesday. What date is Wednesday?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The 26th.

Mr. LODGE. It is the 26th. Of course I should not allow any personal matter of my own to interfere with agreeing to a day, but it is impossible for me to be here on the 25th or the 26th. The 27th is the day set for delivering the eulogy in the House. The Senator from Utah suggested the 24th. It seemed to me that the 24th, in the afternoon, would be a fair date and it would be agreeable to all on our side. But I do not want to allow the fact that I am obliged to be away to stand in the way of an agreement.

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President, I am utterly unwilling to have the vote on the bill postponed for an hour on my account. Perhaps the Senators on the other side would be willing that there should be an earlier day for a vote than Monday. I intend to submit some observations to the Senate on this subject, but I can do it just as well after the vote on the bill as before.

Mr. DUBOIS. Mr. President, I think the minority are ready to vote at any time. What we want to find out is whether the gentlemen on the other side of the Chamber desire to discuss the bill further. If they do, it is quite likely that we will join in the debate. But as I understand it—I think we are in perfect agreement—the minority of the committee are ready to vote at any time.

Mr. LODGE. I am perfectly ready to vote when the Senator from Maryland [Mr. WELLINGTON], who has the floor, concludes, without any further speeches, and I am sure Senators on this side will be glad to vote at that time, as far as that is concerned.

Mr. DUBOIS. I beg pardon; I did not hear the Senator.

Mr. LODGE. I say, as far as that is concerned, we can have a vote when the Senator from Maryland, who has the floor, has concluded. I am sure the Senators on this side will forego speeches if they can have a vote.

Mr. ALDRICH. That seems to be the unanimous opinion of both sides of the Chamber. I can not see any better way out of the difficulty than that.

Mr. DUBOIS. There does not seem to be any difficulty on this side. We have completed our argument, if you have done so.

Mr. LODGE. Very well; then I ask unanimous consent that the vote be taken at 4 o'clock this afternoon on the bill and all amendments pending.

Mr. ALDRICH. At half past 3.

Mr. LODGE. At half past 3, the Senator from Rhode Island suggests.

Mr. MALLORY. I should like to make an inquiry of the Senator. There are some amendments pending, and there is one that I have offered.

Mr. DUBOIS. Then I suggest to the Senator——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Florida has the floor.

Mr. MALLORY. There is one amendment which I have offered, and I should like to have a few minutes at least to explain the purpose of it.

Mr. LODGE. I do not know how long the Senator from Maryland is going to occupy. Perhaps——

Mr. WELLINGTON. I shall not take, I think, with my speech over two hours; possibly not so long a time.

Mr. DUBOIS. Will the Senator from Massachusetts pardon me? We all seem to be agreed, and willing to vote, and we will accept the proposition of the Senator from Utah to fix Monday as the time.

Mr. LODGE. On Monday at 4 o'clock; and on each day it is understood I am to call the bill up immediately after the routine morning business, and on Monday speeches are to be limited to fifteen minutes.

Mr. DUBOIS. Yes.

Mr. RAWLINS. And let the recognition be alternative.

Mr. LODGE. Certainly; the time to be divided equally between the two sides of the Chamber.

Mr. MALLORY. I desire to make some remarks on the amendment I have offered. To-morrow will suit me well enough. I do not care to impose upon the patience of the Senate to-day. The Senator from Maryland is, I understand, going to address the Senate to-day. I shall not occupy, I think, more than fifteen or twenty minutes, and with the understanding that I shall have an opportunity to-morrow to submit views on my amendment, I will consent to the agreement. Otherwise I will not.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President, I was absent from the Chamber unavoidably when the Senator made his request for a unanimous agreement. I presume it is the usual one. I wish only to make an inquiry as to the vote. It is that the vote shall be taken at 4 o'clock on Monday upon all amendments——

Mr. LODGE. Upon all amendments.

Mr. FORAKER. That may be up to that time offered?

Mr. LODGE. All amendments pending or which may be offered.

Mr. FORAKER. Up to that time?

Mr. LODGE. It is the usual request.

Mr. FORAKER. I wish to offer an amendment, and I shall want to make some remarks upon it prior to that time, if there is time for it, but I do not want any delay on that account.

Mr. BACON. Do I understand the Senator from Massachusetts that no amendment can be offered after 4 o'clock? Is that the agreement?

Mr. LODGE. All amendments that may be now pending, that are to be offered, or are offered at the time.

Mr. BACON. Up to the time of voting?

Mr. LODGE. Certainly.

Mr. CARMACK. It does not cut off amendments?

Mr. LODGE. Not at all.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Now, will the Senator from Massachusetts restate his request?

Mr. LODGE. I ask unanimous consent that the vote on this bill may be taken on Monday next at 4 o'clock, it being understood that the bill is to be called up on each legislative day immediately after the routine morning business, and that on Monday the speeches shall be limited to fifteen minutes, the time to be divided equally between the two sides.

Mr. RAWLINS. No Senator to speak more than once.

Mr. TELLER. I understand the Senator means that we shall commence voting at 4 o'clock, not that we shall vote on the bill, but vote on the amendments.

Mr. LODGE. Certainly; we are to begin voting at 4 o'clock.

Mr. BATE. I have just come into the Hall. I wish to say that I have no desire to stop this agreement, but it seems to me that if we would vote on Tuesday instead of Monday it would be better. I hope it can be so arranged. I do not want to delay the vote in any way myself.

Mr. LODGE. I stated before that it would be impossible for me to be in the Senate on Tuesday, and the Senator from Utah and the Senator from Idaho were kind enough to agree to Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock. I do not wish to allow my personal convenience to interfere, and of course I should not, but I think the general wishes of the Senate are met by the proposition I have made.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent that this bill (it being understood that it is to be taken up after the routine morning business of each day) shall be voted on, together with all pending amendments and all amendments then proposed, on Monday, the voting to commence at 4 o'clock, and that for the last day, Monday, the debate shall be limited to fifteen minutes to each Senator, the time to be equally divided between the two sides. Is there objection to the request?

Mr. CARMACK. I just wish to ask a question. That secures a separate vote on all amendments, does it not?

Mr. LODGE. Absolutely.

Mr. TELLER. Made and to be made?

Mr. LODGE. Made and to be made.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair so understands—made and to be made.

Mr. BURROWS. It prevents all debate after the hour of 4 o'clock, either on the bill or any amendment?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is so understood.

Mr. BATE. Do I understand that we are to commence voting at 4 o'clock on amendments?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. To commence at 4 o'clock voting on all amendments, and after, of course, the amendments are disposed of, to vote on the bill.

Mr. BATE. We do not vote on the bill, then, at 4 o'clock?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. We do not vote on the bill until the amendments are disposed of. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. WELLINGTON. Mr. President, I enter upon this debate with extreme reluctance and deep regret. As the debate has progressed I have changed my original resolution not to say anything upon the pending measure. I feel that I owe it to myself that I should state the reasons, as briefly as I may, of my disagreement with the party of which I have been a member upon the subject-matter which is handled in the bill.

I have been a Republican all my life, and I grew up in a section where the atmosphere was not congenial to that party. I have given the best years of my life to the service of that party, and I believe I can say to-day, without extreme self-laudation, that I have rendered the State from which I come and the party of which I have been a member some service in the past.

Sir, I was a Republican because I believed that that party stood for the largest measure of liberty and for the elevation of men. I was and am a Republican because I believed in the great American doctrine of protection as it was contended for by Henry Clay and transferred to and inherited by the Republican party. I believed that in the warp and woof of this doctrine was bound up the prosperity, the advancement, and the progress of my country. I believed in a sound system of money, and I believed, and now believe, in the gold standard of value.

All these reasons contributed to make me a Republican, and I have marched in the ranks of that party ever since my early youth. But, sir, I do not look to a party as a fetich before which I must bow and humbly respect every command that it issues, even if it be against my own firmly founded opinion, against my deep conviction, and against the conscience which I have.

Up to the Spanish war the principles which I have stated were the foundation stones of the Republican party. But there came new events, and with those new events there came new burdens. When I found that the Republican party was about to take up a policy of what I undertake to say is imperialism, I then determined that I could not follow it so far, and that I would support the candidate and the party that stood against that doctrine.

The Spanish war was the beginning of this difference. The Spanish war was the beginning of a new policy in this country. I was opposed to that war. Upon the day on which the declaration was passed in the Senate I stood alone upon the Republican side and declared that I was opposed to the war, not for the reason that I was antagonistic to Cuban independence, but for the reason that I believed Cuban independence could be brought about without a war and by diplomatic negotiation.

I do not believe there is a Senator on this floor who will contend that any country in this era of Christianity, advanced as it is, should go into any war if the purposes for which it is contending can be obtained by peaceful measures and by diplomatic negotiation. I felt then that the Cuban people, who were struggling for liberty, could obtain that liberty by the good word of the American people. I remember very well that every diplomatic request which was made by our Government of the Spanish court concerning the war and insurrection in Cuba were met and we were satisfied. Our great contention was that the methods adopted by Weyler in his attempt to subdue the revolution or the rebellion were wrong; that they were opposed to the methods of Christian warfare, and that we could not longer stand by and see them carried on at our own door.

Sir, it was for this reason that the agitation for war began. But after the unfortunate incident of the Maine there came, as it appeared, the war spirit upon the American people. They no longer desired negotiations. They no longer were intent to bring about a peaceful solution. They demanded war upon Spain, and war came.

I, as I have said, opposed that war, because in my own mind I was convinced that without the firing of a gun, without the sacrifice of a single life, without the expenditure of a single dollar, Cuba could and would be to-day free of Spanish mastership. Spain had agreed that concentration should cease. Spain had removed Weyler. Spain had done everything in her power under the humane administration of Blanco to undo the wrongs which she had inflicted. Still we were not satisfied, and as the days went along we said Cuba "must have entire freedom; she must have self-government;" and it was upon that proposition that the American people went to war with Spain.

I believed then, and I believe now, that without that war Cuba would to-day have a larger measure of freedom than she is enjoying. The war is over. The troops of Spain have been withdrawn. Spanish sovereignty has ceased; but Cuba is not free. Cuba has obtained a change of masters and nothing more. Our military government still exists there, and though the solemn promise of the Senate of the United States at least was registered upon that day that Cuba should have self-government and freedom, we have unto this day not allowed her to have it.

What has been the excuse? Sir, that she was not well qualified to have self-government; that we must teach her the lesson of governing herself. We have attempted that, and with what success?

I remember upon one occasion in the Senate Chamber when the junior Senator from Indiana [Mr. BEVERIDGE], the first to rise in the Republican party and advocate the programme of imperialism, rose here and said that the mission of America in the second century of her existence as a nation was not the advancement and progress that she had had in the first, but that she must go out to the islands of the sea and to the other nations of the world and carry to them American ideas and American government and administration; and it seemed to me upon that occasion, as he drew the picture of the ideal American statesman, he turned his face to the west and looked upon the State of Indiana as though he would find him there. He drew a noble picture of an ideal American, incorruptible, well equipped for government, who would go out to the islands of the sea and there impart American government. But what was the result of that attempt? Indiana did furnish a gentleman who went to Cuba to teach the Cuban people how to conduct postal affairs, and, lo and behold, in the first year of his administration he taught them how one man could embezzle a half million dollars of the postal revenues of that country.

Mr. President, as a part and parcel of this policy, the Committee on the Philippines, through its chairman, has presented an amended House bill to the Senate, the title of which is to temporarily provide revenue for the Philippine Islands. It is a part and parcel of that self-same policy, and for that reason I can not give it my support.

I will vote against the bill, not upon the ground that its schedules are not justly formed, not upon the ground that there are inequalities in the taxation, not upon the ground that here and there there may be some mistake in the bill, or that it has not been carefully considered by the committee, but I oppose it upon the broad ground set forth in the dissenting opinion of the minority that there is no right here, and there should be no right here, to enact any such legislation.

Now, sir, why is it necessary, in the opinion of the majority, to enact this legislation? The report upon the bill shows why they esteem that it is necessary.

> This bill is designed to raise revenue for the government and benefit of the Philippine Archipelago. It is intended to restore the status which existed prior to the late decision of the Supreme Court in the case of "the diamond rings," rendered on the 2d day of December. Prior to that decision the Government had been collecting duties on goods coming into the United States from the Philippine Archipelago at the same rates as those provided in our tariff laws for like articles imported from "foreign countries." The court holds that the Philippine Archipelago is not a foreign country, and therefore the general tariff law does not apply. This bill extends the rate now existing upon imports from foreign countries to articles brought in from the Philippine Islands.

The contention is made that the decision of the Supreme Court made it necessary to do this. Why? Because the Supreme Court decided that the Philippine Islands were not foreign territory. I am not convinced that the Supreme Court has decided anything, because in reading that opinion it seems to me that it would do credit to an aggregation of Jack Bunsbys, who always gave "an opinion as was an opinion"—an opinion which might mean anything or nothing at all.

It is not well, I believe, to criticise the Supreme Court, but I do say that in this decision there is no claim laid down of any doctrine, except they seem to agree that the Philippine Islands are not foreign country. If they are not foreign territory, what are they? I contend that under the laws of nations as we understand them; according to the Golden Rule laid down by the great Master; according to the Declaration of Independence, upon which this nation was founded; according to the Constitution, and according to the history of this country in the first century of its existence under a constitutional government there is no right in the Congress of the United States to pass any bill of this nature.

Sir, I will read the views of the minority in their report upon the Philippine tariff bill, and I desire to say that I agree with the contention therein made. Their report reads:

> The Constitution provides that "all duties, imposts, and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States;" and the Supreme Court, in a learned opinion delivered by Chief Justice Marshall, decided that the term "United States," as used in this connection, was intended to embrace the whole "American empire, composed of States and Territories." To the uttermost limits of the territorial empire of the United States, to whatever place, however distant, its sovereignty may go, this constitutional rule of uniformity in the levy of duties, imposts, and excises extends. The opinion of Chief Justice Marshall above referred to, as it was the natural construction of the language, so it was a just interpretation of the spirit of the Constitution. The men who framed our system of government were impelled not alone by a desire to secure the blessings of liberty for themselves and their children. They evolved our Constitution out of a broad and generous conception of rights common to all mankind. They had themselves passed through a bitter experience as colonial dependencies, and they knew what it was to be the victims of arbitrary power at the hands of a master beyond the sea. It is inconceivable that they ever intended that the Government they established should wield a like arbitrary power over the lives and fortunes of a subject people.

I believe it to be the duty of the American people to avoid such legislation, and when the question is asked what must we do instead, I take up the substitute of the minority and read briefly its simple language in the first section:

> Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That subject to the provisions hereinafter set forth, the United States of America hereby relinquish all claim of sovereignty over and title to the archipelago known as the Philippine Islands.

Deception is a great fault, but the worst form of deception is to deceive ourselves. An individual or a nation that enters upon such a career will find that difficulties and troubles will multiply. The Scottish poet well said:

> Oh, what a tangled web we weave
> When first we practice to deceive.

This nation of ours has been deceiving itself since the beginning of the Spanish war.

What was the object of that war? It was to make Cuba free; it was that there should pass away from our Western Continent the colonial power of Spain, and the infamous war which she was waging against her people who were then insurgents upon the islands. I again declare that, in my opinion, that war could well have been avoided; and I see now that the declaration I made upon that day is most true. I then said that the Spanish war would bring upon us a very Pandora's box of dangers, of evils, and of difficulties.

What is the Cuban situation to-day? As I said, Cuba is not free; it has not been free; and the question is, When will the party in power grant freedom, as it was promised by the solemn resolution of the Senate? When in the future is this day that the Cubans fought so long and looked forward to so hopefully to come? Has there not been always opposed in the way of Cuban independence everything that could be?

Why is not Cuba free to-day according to our promise? I will tell you why. For one thing, it had been determined by the aggregations of capital, by the amalgamation of those great monopolistic corporations who desire great franchises in Cuba, that Cuba must first be robbed of those franchises under a military government, and that they should be extended for a century beyond the time of her freedom. Sir, if you remember, that would have perhaps occurred had it not been for the manly courage of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER], who upon that occasion rose above party, rose to the heights of statesmanship, and said, though the commissioners may agree to it, the Senate of the United States will not agree to the robbery of Cuba under military rule for a hundred years in the future.

But when it was found that this could not obtain, from that very moment there was a change in policy; there was a change in conditions; and to-day Cuba is as far removed from self-government, a government of her own choosing, as she was two years ago.

But the greatest trouble which arose out of the declaration of war with Spain was not as to Cuba, which was the original bone of contention; it was in the Orient that our greatest problem developed. Let loose the dogs of war and you know not where they will first attack or where their chase will end. We declared war against Spain upon the proposition that Cuba should be free, and yet the first blow was struck, not at our own door, but away beyond the seas, in the Orient. By the power in him vested as Commander in Chief of the armies and navies of the United States, the President of the United States sent the order to Captain Dewey, commanding our fleet in Eastern waters, that he should gather his forces, proceed to Manila, and there attack the Spanish power.

He determined that he would attack Spain through her colonies. That was right perhaps; that was, according to the idea of war, the thing that should have been done. But let us look for a moment how unexpectedly all this occurred and what unexpected results followed. Captain Dewey, with a celerity and dispatch unequaled in naval history, gathered that fleet together, provided himself with pilotage and such information as was necessary, went to the harbor of Manila, found the Spanish fleet, attacked it, and in a battle which is a marvel in history, without appreciable loss, destroyed the whole navy of Spain in the Orient. From that moment Spain's power in the East was over. He had stricken down Spanish power in the harbor of Manila, but he had no troops; he had no soldiers to advance upon that city and demand its capitulation.

What happened then, and what happened previous to that battle? When war had been declared through the agents of the American Government, through Captain Dewey, and through our consuls in the East, the expatriated people of Luzon and all of the various other Philippine Islands who had engaged previously in revolution were called upon to return to their native land to again stir up what would now be called sedition, to again place themselves at the head of the army and help the Americans subdue the Spanish power in the Philippine Islands. Was not that true? Can any Senator or any man who defends the Administration say that it was not true? We asked those people to come, and when they came they came upon our ships, came with our money, came invested with arms and munitions of war, and organized an army. They were our allies. There is no way that you can make them otherwise, unless you deceive yourselves and endeavor to deceive others. Aguinaldo returned. Aguinaldo, under the patronage of the commander of the American fleet and under the patronage of our civil officers, then began the organization of a new army.

It was contended but the other day that the Filipinos were not fighting for independence, that they were fighting for reform in the government. That was true of the revolution which preceded our appearance upon the scene, but it was not true of the revolution that was begun at the instance of the American people. Revolutions do not always begin as they end. Did the American Revolution begin upon the proposition of an entire severance from Great Britain? No; a thousand times no. Humble petitions for reform were even sent after the Continental Congress had assembled and an alliance of the colonies had been made, to King George, which were not granted; but as time marched along the Continental Congress marched with it. One event came and passed after another until after a while petitions for reform ceased and there came instead the immortal Declaration that we were free and independent States.

Such was the progress of the revolution in this country and such was the progress of the revolution in the Philippine Islands. They began first to contend for reform; they began to contend that the friars should be stripped of their power, and that men should have more safeguards in their liberties; but when they came the second time to gather an army under Aguinaldo's chieftainship, there was quite a different declaration.

It is not my purpose now to go into details and give the proclamations which were issued at that time, because they have already been placed in the RECORD by the Senator from Washington [Mr. TURNER], by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. MONEY], and by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER]; but I will say that from the beginning to the end, when Aguinaldo gathered his army it was for the purpose of conquering the territory they occupied from the Kingdom of Spain, and by one military operation after another they did conquer that territory from Spain from water to water in the island of Luzon, until they came to the cordon of 8 miles outside of the city of Manila.

Our allies, the Filipinos, under the command of Aguinaldo and his lieutenants, did that; but when the American army appeared upon the scene, when the surrender of Manila was to be made, what was our duty then? Should we not have marched together, Filipino and American, both having contributed to the success of the cause, and have had the city of Manila surrender to both armies together? There is the first step that our nation took which put the Filipino upon the footing of distrusting us and put into his heart the anger which has since shown itself. We should have stood as allies then, and the city of Manila should have been surrendered to both armies, but it was not. The Spaniard did not desire to surrender to his former subject; he preferred to surrender to the American army. Then there was a movement beyond the walls of Manila and the two armies came together, the American army and the army of the Filipinos.

Mr. President, it is not my intention to discuss at this moment who fired the first shot. I do not know; I can not tell, and I doubt whether anybody can tell. I know this, however, that history has proven that you can not bring two allied armies together, even when they are upon a friendly footing—one here and another there, confronting each other—without great danger that at some time the prejudice of nationality or the passion of war will break out in some marauding party. I say I do not care who fired the first shot. It was not done by any responsible party, in my judgment, whether it was fired by the American troops or by the Filipinos; but the result that followed was most unfortunate.

These men were our allies. Even if the shot came from the Filipino camp—and I do not believe it did—after those men had been driven back to their barracks there should have been a consultation between the generals of the two armies; there should at least have been given to our allies the time and the opportunity to disprove any intention of attacking us. Was that done? No. The moment that shot was fired firing began all along the line, and has continued ever since. The declaration of the American general was that firing had begun and the war must continue to the bitter end. What did that "bitter end" mean? Why, sir, it meant that the American general, either by himself or backed by his Government, intended to see that this war should continue until the Filipino was either ready for abject submission or had been exterminated.

The war began. Sir, after Manila had fallen it was then that we began the war in Cuba. Our military forces had been landed, but the engagements in which they had taken part were not of such a character as to add great laurels to the American Army. It was not until the naval part arrived; it was not until the fleet, which was ostensibly commanded by Captain Sampson, but which was led in the great victory of Santiago by the Maryland hero, Admiral Schley [manifestations of applause in the galleries]—this was the engagement, Mr. President, that brought about a change in Cuban affairs, and from that moment the end was won. Admiral Schley commanded the vessels in that engagement; Admiral Schley gave the orders, and he stood in the midst of that battle and won it as no battle had ever been won before. But, sir, the Administration has even been unjust to him, as it has been to the Cuban and to the Filipino. He has not received that due meed of praise and credit that belongs to him; but he has been assaulted upon every side, and attempts have even been made to besmirch his character for courage and loyalty.

But when this battle had been fought, when Cervera had surrendered, then, sir, came the armistice. After that Spain sued for peace, and we sent our commissioners to Paris to bring about peace. The treaty there negotiated was to end the war. It was made by our commissioners, I doubt not with great circumspection and with every sentiment of loyalty to their country; but, sir, when it came to the Senate of the United States for ratification there was great doubt as to whether it would be ratified; and why? Because at that time the policy of robbing a weaker people of their liberty had not been fully formulated; it had not gone out that such was the purpose; and there was in this Senate a decided feeling that the treaty of Paris should be amended; and why? Because in it there began to appear the difficulties and the evils that had been prophesied of this war. We had gone out into the Orient; we had placed our troops upon the Philippine Islands; and, according to the stipulations of this treaty, we were to pay Spain $20,000,000 for what we called the sovereignty of those islands.

What did we pay that $20,000,000 for? As I understand it, not for the land of the Filipinos or their persons or their liberty, but for governmental property and the Crown lands that were in the Philippine Islands under Spanish dominion. But, notwithstanding that, so far as I was personaally concerned, I felt an opposition to the ratification of that treaty, and I determined that I would cast my vote against it. You remember every vote was needed. It was then that a consultation took place with the President of the United States, and I laid down to him my opinion upon this subject and the only conditions upon which I would vote for the ratification of that treaty. Now, what were those opinions? They were, first, that there should be no permanent occupation of the Philippine Islands, either as a dependency or a colony, or by an incorporation as a Territory or a State; and I remember very well, when in that hour I discussed the whole situation, I was determined that, so far as I was concerned, I would vote for no treaty that would bring into the United States of America—incorporate into it—10,000,000 Filipinos, who from the moment they were thus incorporated would have all the rights of trade and of manufacture and of labor enjoyed by citizens of all of our Territories and all of our States.

But, further, I saw that if this treaty were thus adopted and we incorporated the islands, we would not only have to give these trade privileges to the Filipino, but by stipulation of the treaty for ten years we must admit to Manila—and how easy from thence to the United States—all of the Spanish ships and products and manufactures that they should see fit to send there.

For these reasons I did not desire incorporation. Then I said: "I do not believe that it lies within our power as a Government, I do not believe that it is agreeable to the principles upon which this Government is founded, that we can take the Philippine Islands and control them by force of arms against the will of their people as a dependency." The President of the United States then replied to each and every one of these propositions that it was not his intention, so far as his Administration was concerned, to permanently occupy the Philippine Islands either in one way or in the other. Upon that assurance I voted for the treaty.

Was that promise kept? Was the policy as outlined before I voted for the treaty carried out after the treaty had been ratified? Why, sir, look around about you, and there need be no answer to the question. There was an entire deviation from that policy. A new policy was enacted. It has been one of no especial account, but one of drifting, drifting, ever drifting day after day in the same direction.

Porto Rico was ceded to us under the treaty of Paris. I saw no great objection to receiving Porto Rico into the United States as a Territory if her people were agreed, if her people consented, and they did consent. There was not in all the island of Porto Rico a single citizen who objected to American rule. But I did believe when we accepted Porto Rico that the moment Congressional action went out to her she was under the American flag and under the American Constitution, for, to my mind, it is indeed a peculiar transaction if the Congress of the United States can legislate for any people without the Constitution. What power gave birth to Congress? The Constitution. By what power does it make laws? By the power of the Constitution. The Congress of the United States can do nothing outside of the Constitution.

I believed then that there should be no tariff bill for Porto Rico, that she was in the Union and had the same right to the Dingley tariff act as had Arizona or New York, and, whatever the Supreme Court may have decided, I notice that the Administration was very hasty in its action and did that which we contended over a year ago should have been done—established free trade—and to-day Porto Rico is practically a Territory of the United States, and it is the only way that you can hold it.

But let us return to the Philippines. The war had begun. We had been notified by those eminent Americans who had negotiated the treaty of Paris that any revolution or opposition that might arise in the Philippine Islands against American authority could be put down by five regiments of American troops in six weeks.

You began your war. You prosecuted one campaign, and at the end of it you were not 15 miles beyond the city of Manila. You prosecuted another campaign, and at the end of it you had not done much more, saving and alone that you had allowed a military officer to make an agreement or a treaty, if you please, with the Sultan of Sulu or Jolo, take whichever pronunciation you wish. When our Army came to this sultanate, this magnificent and delectable land which lies at the very outposts of the Philippine Archipelago, what did we do? What did we do when we came to these savages? Did we say to them "It must be submission unconditional or extirpation of your race?" We allowed the general commanding there to make an agreement or a treaty, after we had purchased, as you contend, the sovereignty of the Philippine Islands, to pay this sultan $6,000 for the sovereignty—$6,000 which we took good care to pay not in money of the gold standard, but in Mexican silver dollars. And then we took him into our service, paying him month by month a salary, and we took with him the slavery that exists upon the island, the polygamy that is practiced upon those islands, and we put our flag above to protect them from the world.

I for one do not agree to the proposition that whenever the American flag is raised, it must stay there. If the American flag waves over one slave or waves over one family where polygamy is practiced, I say, take down the flag and free the man and extirpate the polygamy. And yet, we are responsible for that condition.

You talk of the American flag. I love the flag, and I love my country as much as any other American who dwells within the confines of our country. Sir, I can not forget the words of the great American poet describing the birth of the American flag. What does he say?

> When Freedom from her mountain height
> Unfurled her standard to the air,
> She tore the azure robe of night,
> And set the stars of glory there.
> She mingled with its gorgeous dyes
> The milky baldric of the skies,
> And striped its pure celestial white,
> With streakings of the morning light.
> Then, from his mansion in the sun,
> She called her eagle bearer down,
> And gave into his mighty hand
> The symbol of her chosen land.

Aye, when the American flag was born, it was to wave over the chosen land of liberty, and it did so wave for a century and a quarter of years. From the dark days of the Revolution, when Washington was at Valley Forge, surrounded by his ragged Continentals, which had melted away to 600, up to the midday of that glory at Yorktown, when he received the sword of captive Lord Cornwallis, it floated above us as our emblem. In the war of 1812 it was carried by the volunteers upon land and upon sea. When Mexico was invaded it waved from the towers of Chapultepec; but it was not there by conquest, although we had worsted Mexico. We went there for one purpose only, to give permanency to freedom and independence and self-government in Texas, and while the flag waved in the City of Mexico, it was only as a military occupation, and then we withdrew it.

Then came the great civil war. One part of our country carried it; the other opposed it. We were then in a crisis such as comes to all nations. We had to demonstrate to the world whether we had in us that strength of backbone to stand up as a nation, and we did demonstrate it, and the North and the South were reunited and under one flag. At the beginning of the Spanish war we rested in peace, 75,000,000 Americans having one country, one God, and one aspiration.

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT] spoke of the flag and spoke of the magnificent service it was rendering. It has, indeed, performed wonders. It has, within the century and a quarter since the Declaration of Independence, transformed thirteen sparsely settled colonies into five and forty great republics, and has bound them together for what was esteemed one purpose—that of maintaining liberty among ourselves and sending it out to all the weaker people of the earth. That, to my mind, was the mission of the American people.

But, sir, there was a reversal of this policy when we were victorious in the Cuban war and our friends from across the ocean whispered, "You are becoming a world power." Vainglorious of our victories, determined upon further expansion, we forgot the underlying principle upon which we are founded and neglected all the history of our past.

You remember the attempt to tax Porto Rico. It was the same as the attempt to tax the Philippines now. Why should you not tax the Philippines? You remember, as I do, the origin of the American Revolution. What was at the bottom of that struggle? What was the first idea upon which the Americans stood fast? It was this, that there should be no taxation without representation.

The learned Senators who have spoken upon this question have read and inserted in the RECORD extracts from many speeches by eminent Englishmen during the period of the Revolution expressing this idea, standing upon this doctrine. William Pitt has been heard. Remarks of Wilkes, almost a Radical, have been inserted into the RECORD. Edmund Burke, the great Irish orator, has also borne his testimony, but among them all there is nothing, to my mind, so direct, nothing so strong, nothing so incontrovertible as a portion of the speech made by Lord Chief Justice Camden upon the occasion of the repeal of the stamp act. Let me read it to you, Mr. President. This is a part of the speech of Lord Chief Justice Camden, of England, in the English Parliament:

> My position is this—I repeat it; I will maintain to my last hour—taxation and representation are inseparable. This position is founded on the laws of nature. It is more, it is itself an eternal law of nature; for whatever is a man's own is absolutely his own. No man hath a right to take it from him without his consent, either expressed by himself or representative. Whoever attempts to do it, attempts an injury; whoever does it, commits a robbery; he throws down and destroys the distinction between liberty and slavery.

This is from the speech of Lord Chief Justice Camden, who stood up in the British Parliament and there announced a doctrine which you must not forget to-day. You have no right to tax anybody without consent or without representation. And you have further no right to establish one rate of taxation for one part of the land of the United States and another for a more fortunate part. For these reasons I oppose this bill.

Now, sir, we have pursued the Philippine situation to the end of the second campaign, when we had sent over 100,000 troops and had been two years engaged in a work which we had been told would take six weeks for five regiments of American soldiers. At the end of those two years you had not succeeded, and then what took place? By a stratagem, in my opinion unworthy of the American Army, but be that as it will, by secret information given as to the whereabouts of Aguinaldo, the chieftain of the insurrection, the American Army surrounded and took him captive; and under duress they had him issue a proclamation, calling upon his fellow-countrymen, upon those who had engaged with him in the insurrection, to abandon their cause and lay down their arms.

Sir, if in the American Revolution Providence had not interfered; if there had not been a capture of the dispatches which the traitor Benedict Arnold sent to the British spy, Major Andre; if American soldiers had not seized that correspondence, you might have seen, and I believe you would have seen, the capture of the whole Army on the Hudson, with its general, George Washington. Would that have ended the Revolution? No. The Revolution would have gone on, as did the Philippine revolution after the capture of Aguinaldo and after the issuance of his pronunciamento.

Then, after Aguinaldo had been captured, what further in the way of military operations? Then came the attempts to disarm, and that was proper under the laws of war; but the method of disarmament is one that will stand as a lasting shame to the American Government and its Army. It might have done for Spain in the sixteenth century under the tortures of the Inquisition to force from an unwilling subject information by what is called the "water cure." When an American army, the army of a free people, believing in self-government and liberty the world over, resorts to such a practice as that, then I say it is time to call a halt, pull down the flag, and make retreat. You may say it is not true. I did not believe it until it was admitted by Governor Taft himself and came from a thousand sources of acknowledged good information.

But what more? Not satisfied with this, by the very irony of fate, to-day the American nation finds itself, perhaps at the ending of a war, perpetrating the same outrages for which it began a war against Spain. Who has authorized camps of concentration in the Philippine Islands? Is it not a subject of inquiry, when the American nation stood horror stricken at Weyler's camps of concentration, which brought famine, disaster, ruin, death to hundreds of thousands of Cubans? How in the name of God did we ever come to seize upon that policy ourselves?

It has been contended that in the American camps of concentration there is not the amount of starvation and disease that we found in Cuba. Aye, not to-day perhaps, or next month, but if you continue this policy, if you continue this method of conquest, it will arise in the Philippines, and you will stand convicted of as great a crime as the man whom you dubbed Butcher Weyler.

But, sir; this was not enough. A Commission which has no right to exist, except by appointment of the President of the United States as Commander in Chief of its Army and Navy—I repeat it, outside of that power it has no right to exist—has taken upon itself to make laws for the islands, and in these laws we find the articles against treason, misprision of treason, and sedition. And, sir, to my wonder and astonishment, in the Senate of the United States there have been men who have risen to apologize for, and aye, even to defend those laws. How do they do this? They do it in this manner: They say that in Connecticut there is a severe law against treason, and that the Senator from that State is willing to defend that law; and then they say there is a strong law in Tennessee; and then they turn to the laws of my own State, Maryland, and say there is a strong law there against treason. Aye, there is, and do you know the reason why?

Do you remember the great civil war, when in the North there was one opinion and in the South another; when the one stood for strong Federal Government and the other for the sovereignty of the States? Sir, these two great divisions of opinion met and clashed upon that narrow strip of border land called Maryland. We were divided there. It was indeed friend parting from friend. It was indeed brother standing against brother and father against son, and, sir, there was great danger that that State would be lost to the Union, for I believe that the preponderance of sympathy was with the Southern Confederacy. But by the exertions of President Lincoln, by the exertions of Thomas Hollyday Hicks, the Union war governor of Maryland, that State remained in the Union.

But, sir, its sons were divided. Regiment after regiment marched under the Confederate flag. Regiment after regiment stood loyal and true to the flag. We were on the border. We were in the midst of the struggle. Throughout the whole four years of the civil war the banks of the Potomac were either occupied by a great Confederate army or by some guerrilla chieftain who stood in their stead. Invasion swept over us again and again, and the young men who had left the State very frequently were drawn to their homes to see their families, their fathers and mothers, brothers, sisters, and sweethearts, and more or less every man who came within the lines took with him some information to the Confederate army. It was then that these drastic laws were enacted, but, to the honor of our State be it said, I do not believe that at any time there was a prosecution under those laws. But, after all, what of these laws? They were Maryland laws. They were made by the lawmaking power of Maryland. The legislature of the State enacted them, and beyond and above all before there could be a conviction under the statute the man must be tried by a jury of his peers.

But, sir, in all those drastic laws there is nothing to approach the laws which we without authority are by this Commission making in the Philippine Islands for the purpose of suppressing the rebellion, as we call it. I tell you, my friends, it is most difficult to say whether it is a rebellion or a revolution, for remember, a revolution becomes a rebellion if the people engaging in it are beaten and a rebellion becomes a revolution if they are victorious.

Sir, in all the Maryland law, in all the laws of all the States of the Union, and in the statutes of the United States themselves, there are no such enactments as we have here by this Commission against these people over whom we have, according to the principles of our Government, no authority whatever. Sections 9 and 10 have been read to the Senate. The Senate and the people know and understand them. There is no special use to read them again, and yet, perhaps, it would be well. The American Senate and the American people can not too often hear of the outrages which are being committed in their name and under their supposed sanction in the far-off islands of the sea.

You remember when the other day in this Chamber the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] announced that under the laws against sedition as made by the Philippine Commission no man was safe from imprisonment if he attempted to express any political opinion whatever; and, sir, those laws are plain upon that subject. But it appears that those laws are made for only one part of the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands. They are not made to apply to those who favor our Government. And why? The discussion upon the ninth and tenth sections, which had been defended by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT], were not well over when there was presented from the President's desk a petition of the Federal party of the Philippine Islands.

The Federal party is composed first of three Filipino commissioners upon the Commission that makes these laws. Then they have gathered around them many other persons of influence. Why? Because there is a semigovernmental countenance to this party by reason of the fact that three Filipinos in the employ of the American Government are its leaders.

Now, what does the Federal Party of the Philippine Islands promise? What does it petition for? What does it ask from Congress? Let me read you what it says of the conditions in the Philippine Islands:

> To make of the Philippines a colony of the United States or to grant independence to the Philippines would be to hand the islands over to disorder and to anarchy, to destruction and to chaos.

Now, mark you, that is the starting point. Now, what further?

> In effect the colonial system involves the principles of difference of citizenship, inequality of rights, and other consequent abuses and injustices, of all of which we Filipinos were surfeited under the Spanish Government, and for this reason we reject everything which tends toward a colony.
>
> Philippine independence, with or without a protectorate, means the holding of power by all the terrible elements of the sects which predominate, and would predominate still for some years, until the anger of Filipinos toward Filipinos shall have been completely calmed, education become more general, and the fanaticism we have inherited from Spain exiled.

Now comes their proposition as to what they would have.

> Federation of annexation would settle all these difficulties by concentrating the interest of the Filipino people upon education and labor—the most efficient means for bringing about a prompt uplifting.

Now, sir, this Federal party, having the impress of governmental consent, has brought to its standard many Filipinos upon the promise that you would give them that for which they petition. They say you must not make them a colony. You are making them a colony by this bill. They say you must not give them entire independence. I do not agree with them upon this proposition, but hear what they say. They say that if either of these two things is done there will be anarchy and destruction of government and property and people. Can the situation in the Philippines be so extremely roseate in its hues if because this is not done there will be such an uprising as is feared by them?

But, further, they do say what in their judgment will bring peace, prosperity, progress, advancement, and love of the American Government, and what is that? Why, sir, they demand that you give them a local State government, that you let them build up their own government, free and independent, as one of our States, sovereign in itself, and then under the protection of the American flag let them become a State in this Union. That is what has been promised by this party under color of consent by our Government itself. But, sir, is the majority party, is the Administration, willing to concede to the Filipinos this sort of a government? They dare not avow it. They can not do so. There would be an uprising against them from every end of this country.

Sir, the people are demanding a more drastic Chinese-exclusion act. You have a drastic law now upon your books. It was made in contravention of a treaty, and yet it stands there, and before it expires there comes up the voice of our people saying, "Make this law still more drastic." Why? To prevent the tide of Chinese immigration that is coming into the great Western States and the East. Is not that true?

But, not satisfied with that, every Congress has before it bills which would make it the harder for any European, no matter of what nationality, to come into the American land. He must be removed from pauperism. He must have money in his pocket. He must be able to procure for himself a living. He must be able to read and write and have all the various other requisites.

Sir, the German, the Frenchman, the Scot, the Irishman, the Spaniard, the Hungarian, the Swede, the Italian, and all the other nationalities each and all come under this ban, and why? Because, in addition to the tariff laws of the United States, American labor demands that its elevated station be protected by these laws, that there shall be no contract labor, no pauper labor, no incursions of the mighty hordes of the East. Why, then, will you at one fell stroke, by the incorporation of the Philippine Islands into the United States, bring in 10,000,000 Filipinos, some of them educated, some of them practical workmen, but others below the lowest grade of labor that has ever been found in the United States? Yet, sir, you would bring them in if you agree to the proposition made by this Federal party. I, for one, oppose it. I am in opposition to taking these islands by force and holding them against their own consent, because it is against the spirit of our institutions and our laws; and I oppose taking them as a Territory or a State because I am not willing that we should take ten million of what would be to us undesirable population.

I have nothing to say against the civilized Filipino. He, in his own way, in his own country, is working out as he deems best the problems which we have worked out for ourselves. But he is an Oriental. He lives in an oriental country, and he is different from us in physical, mental, moral, and religious conditions. He is not such a citizen as we should acquire. What, then, should we do? Sir, let me draw you two pictures and see if you recognize them and can tell me which demands most the admiration of the world. When the adventurous spirits of Spain, Portugal, Genoa, England, and France started out upon the search for the Eldorado and for the passage to the Indies, Columbus found our land. They found not what they sought, but the hardy band found the land, and the land that they found is ours.

After a century of adventure and attempts at settlement it was found that the great English nation had succeeded in making itself master of that portion of the North American Continent known as the United States of America. It was peopled principally by English people, and the Germans, Dutch, French, Spaniards, and Swedes that had been incorporated with them soon learned the English language and the English spirit. They grew apace and there came a time when England attempted to tax them, as I have shown to-day, unjustly. Then these men rose up in their might and declared that there could be no government unless it was founded upon the consent of the governed; that there could be no taxation unless there was representation or consent: that they were free and independent States.

After that came the great Revolutionary war. It was contended here the other day by the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] that the war was closed and that England agreed to our freedom and independence because of the efforts of New England men upon the high seas. I do not believe that that hasty exclamation by the Senator can be verified in history. I believe it took much more. I know that they contributed much. You must remember that the population of New England was upon the seacoast and naturally it drifted to the sea. But there was one other thing to be considered—that the inhabitant of New England, no matter what cause he may be engaged in, whether it be the highest cause of patriotism, whether it be for freedom and the establishment of government, still has with him the one overpowering idea that he must add to his own financial good.

Sir, by going to sea and arming privateers great prizes fell into their hands, but the militia men who fought upon American soil had nothing but the promised pay of the Continental Congress, which at the end of the Revolution amounted to 1 cent on the dollar. Not that alone, not the great spirit that had inspired the Declaration, and that was willing to give life, fortune, and honor for the preservation of that principle, not all the troops that engaged in the struggle under the American flag, not all the navy commanded by Paul Jones and his compeers—not all that accomplished American independence. There was something in addition to it that achieved it.

When the American colonies entered upon the Revolution, England was at war with other countries. She was at war with France, and the French King was the first to accord recognition to the American colonies. He said, "I will strike England through her colonies." He sent men and ships and money. Sir, Yorktown would have been impossible, Washington would never have conquered there, but that by his side stood Rochambeau with the French army and upon the waters was De Grasse with the navy of France. All these facts worked together. The American and French were allies in that struggle.

What came of it? At the end of the Revolution we had freedom, but the American nation lay powerless; she was ready either for anarchy or monarchy. Any enterprising spirit could have seized upon it, and it was the greatest achievement of Washington to refuse the crown which had been offered him and prevent a kingdom or an empire in this country.

But there was another influence that was not as noble as Washington, and that was the French King, the master of our allies. What of him? Do you not know that Talleyrand, the minister, told him: "You are not bound to give independence to the American colonies; you have struck England by striking through them; you should, as the fruits of victory, appropriate the British colonies to yourself and hold them for France." To the glory of the Bourbon King be it said he refused and said the Americans had fought nobly and courageously for their liberty and independence and that, so far as he was concerned, he would lay nothing in their way.

That is the first picture. But, sir, a little over a century and ten years later this very same young nation, as it was then weak but rising up like a young giant, having grown strong, believing itself a world power, when by the fortune of war it had gone to the East and into the Philippine Islands, when it had called upon the people of the Philippines to become its allies in fighting Spain, when that war was over and Spain had departed and the Filipino stood there, the ally of the American, and demanded independence, what was our answer? Sir, to the shame of the Republic be it spoken, an American Administration, at the beginning of the twentieth century, had less appreciation of liberty, had less of true liberty in its composition than had the Bourbon King of France in the latter years of the eighteenth century. It is a humiliating spectacle to a liberty-loving people.

After the adoption of the Paris treaty there was no well-defined policy of government by the American Administration. We have been drifting day by day, letting to-day take care of itself and looking not on the morrow. The Senator having this bill in charge in his opening statement gives a true picture of the whole situation. He said in his opening statement when he presented this bill:

> There seems to me but one fair and intelligent way of dealing with the islands, and that is to deal with them as they are now; to deal with all questions as they arise. When they are ready to take the government of the islands into their own hands, we shall know it, and we can then turn the islands over to them. But let us keep clear of vague words and still vaguer promises. Let us do all that we can to advance the prosperity of the Filipinos—to educate them, to improve them, and to uplift them; but do not let us make promises to them about a future as to which neither we nor they can tell.
>
> Let us deal with the questions of the day as they arise, one after another.

That is a repetition of what he had said. He wished to emphasize it.

> Then, indeed, it will be difficult enough, trying to the utmost the best statesmanship and the most honest purposes that this country can produce. But do not let us enter upon a plan of offering to them fine words and loose language and specious promises, which deceive them and deceive us and deceive the whole world; which may be what we mean or may not be what we mean; which convey no assurance to anyone as to what the future will really bring.

Then he goes on to say:

> I believe this bill to be a wise and sensible method of dealing with the existing question. If the next six months shall produce to us a wiser and better, I shall be happy to join in it.

But does he not know and understand when once the Congress of the United States goes out under the power of the Constitution and taxes the people, you can not retreat unless you undo the whole of the miserable business? Be right at the start if you can, and if you are wrong reverse as soon as you find it and try to get back on the right road.

> But whatever we do, whether we give them free trade, as the minority propose, or a tariff such as we propose, let us give it to them without a promise; let us do what we have to do as we stand, and not attempt to put mortgages upon an unknown future.

He says make no legislative promises. Have we indeed sunk so low that we can not keep any legislative promise? If we have, indeed the ebb is low, and morals have come to a pretty pass nationally.

Sir, two years ago I defined my attitude on this question when I introduced a joint resolution into the Senate outlining the plan word for word and in the spirit of a conversation I had had with the President of the United States. That joint resolution read as follows:

> A joint resolution declaring the purpose of the Government of the United States with reference to the Philippine Islands.
>
> Resolved, etc. First. That the Government of the United States does not consider the payment of the $20,000,000 to the Government of the Kingdom of Spain, stipulated by the treaty of Paris and made in accordance with the same, as a purchase either of lands, persons, or privileges of the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands, but that such payment was made with the friendly purpose of abrogating any claim of sovereignty that was then lodged in the Spanish Government, and to prevent the intervention of other foreign powers in Philippine affairs.

These were the two great purposes that I had in mind when I voted for the treaty:

> Second. That it is not the purpose of the Government or the people of the United States to deprive the people of the Philippine Islands of their right of self-government, and the war now being waged is not for conquest or for the permanent possession of the islands, but for the establishment of law and order, and shall cease when the Filipinos now under arms make overtures for peace, upon the condition that after the establishment of law and order the people of the islands, or such islands as may desire, shall have the privilege, under the protection of the United States, of establishing a republic in which the principle of "a government of the people, by the people, and for the people" shall be absolutely preserved.

Sir, if that joint resolution had been adopted two years ago there would have been Philippine submission. There would have been the establishment of a Philippine government. To-day the Filipinos would be enjoying local self-government; they would be flying their own flag; they would have their own constitution; they would be friendly with the United States, and they would look to us as the fathers of the liberty that had come to them.

But instead of that the joint resolution was ignored. It was buried in the archives of the committee into whose charge it was put, and it was never heard of afterwards. There was no declaration of purpose. You could not get a declaration of purpose from anyone representing the Administration, but every action of the Administration, every action of its agents and the Army, tended in the direction of the direct opposite to what was conveyed by this joint resolution.

We would have saved 10,000 American lives. We would have saved at least $400,000,000, because, according to the statements in the documents from the various departments having the expenditures of our Army and Navy in charge in the Philippines, we find that according to their own figures over $350,000,000 had been expended by the middle of the last year. We would have saved over $400,000,000, and we would be in a better position in the Philippine Islands than we are to-day.

Sir, it was alleged that we must hold the Philippines on account of the trade that might come from them; that we must hold them because Germany or Great Britain or some other power would come and take them if we left them to themselves. Did Germany endeavor to do anything of that kind? Did England endeavor to do it? No; they have a different policy. They say: "Let America expend her money; let America deviate from her principles; let her sacrifice American lives for imagined trade, if she will, we will have nothing to do with the war; but, in the meanwhile, while the war is going on, we will take the trade," as they have done.

In $53.000,000 of trade, America last year had but $4,000,000, and, as was said by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER], one-half of that was in questionable products. England does not need the Philippines under her protection or under her colonization to have the majority of trade with them, nor does Germany. Germany's trade is over four times as large with the Philippines as is ours. She has never attempted to seize a foot of the Philippines, and never will.

But, more than that, there was still another proposition. We had the suggestion that we should hold the Philippine Islands as an open door to China; that great possibilities of trade are there; that we have the home market and are acquiring the markets of Europe, and we must also go to the Orient for the increase of trade, and the Philippine Islands offered to us in themselves and as a gateway to the East magnificent possibilities.

Sir, even if there were commercial advantages to be obtained by seizing and forcibly holding these islands, I for one would be against it. I do not believe any commercial advantage will justify the American people in taking one tittle or iota from the liberty or the freedom of the feeblest people that may inhabit the smallest island of the sea.

But, sir, is there an advantage? There will be in China a great struggle for supremacy. Already the Muscovite and Britain are arming for the fray. Already every effort of diplomacy is being exerted to hold for one or the other powers the advantage of trade and the occupation of territory. And latter days have brought to us the news of an agreement and a compact between Great Britain and Japan, as against the interests of Russia in Manchuria, and I understand an effort is being made to have our Government join with Britain in this agreement.

Sir, the voice of Washington, as he was about departing from the active duties of government, gave a warning, and he expressed in the most solemn way that we should avoid European and foreign entanglements. Listen to a part of Washington's Farewell Address:

> Against the insidious wiles of foreign influence (I conjure you to believe me, fellow-citizens) the jealousy of a free people ought to be constantly awake, since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of republican government. But that jealousy, to be useful, must be impartial, else it becomes the instrument of the very influence to be avoided, instead of a defense against it. Excessive partiality for one foreign nation and excessive dislike for another cause those whom they actuate to see danger on one side and serve to veil and even second the arts of influence on the other. Real patriots, who may resist the intrigues of the favorite, are liable to become suspected and odious, while its tools and dupes usurp the applause and confidence of the people to surrender their interests.

Such was the voice of Washington as he retired from active life, and I think that the history of this country for the century that has gone and made itself a part of the annals of peoples has demonstrated that he was wise indeed in making this observation. He tells us to resist foreign influence; to be neither too partial nor too jealous; and that if we stay upon this golden way we will be successful. Unfortunately we have not altogether taken his advice.

We have already been too much influenced by British diplomacy and the artful wiles of the English ruling classes. Let us hesitate in going further into the entanglements of the East; let us abstain from becoming a party to the great contest of robbery which is about to take place.

Sir, one of the principal material benefits that can come to us by the evacuation of the Philippine Islands by our forces is that we shall then escape the possibility of becoming involved in this most dangerous and corrupt quarrel. Let the robber nations of Europe fight among themselves, and like the cats of Kilkenny, eat one another up, if they will.

I do not believe we are called upon to array ourselves upon either side. We owe Britain no friendship more than we do Russia. We can not prefer France to Germany or Italy to Spain. Let us avoid these, and instead use the power, physically and mentally, that the growing generation has for the development of our own great internal resources, and while the battle for supremacy goes on among them we may rest in peace, raise bountiful harvests, manufacture, produce, and legitimately sell to all the nations of the world without opposing any.

Sir, I have not spoken for the Filipinos, but for my own country. I have more interest in the American than I have in the Filipino. My first consideration is to save the American name and fame from being bespattered by the blood of men who die for the sake of the country and to achieve the high measure of liberty which we ourselves enjoy.

We have already lost our right to raise our voice against oppression, against iniquitous war. While there seems to be preparations for war, the world is at peace, save two nations—our own and Great Britain.

You know of the war Great Britain is waging, and, sir, had our own skirts been clean, had our hands been guiltless of Filipino blood, there would have been now, as there has been in the past, sympathy for the noblest nation that has ever fought for freedom. Sir, when we were not a world power, we sympathized with the South American dependencies of Spain, as, when one after the other, they broke the bonds and attempted statehood.

Their government may seem to be a failure, having one revolution after another, but after all, they have achieved liberty and improved their conditions, and have a government they themselves choose. The noblest speeches ever delivered by Henry Clay were for South American independence and when he expressed sympathy with Greece. The splendid effort of Webster which obtained sympathetic expression for the struggling patriots of Hungary, was not excelled by any speech he ever made in the Senate Chamber, even his speeches upon the constitutional questions brought here by the resolution of Hayne of South Carolina.

Sumner's great speech was that in which he pictured the peaceful influence of the American spirit of universal liberty and general peace. But, sir, who can rise to-day and express sympathy with the Boers, fighting for life and liberty, in their own home, in the state of their own creation, bought by their blood and money. Why dare we not do so? Sir, we know full well that in the moment of our expression of sympathy Great Britain could hurl back at us the taunt that we too are engaged in the selfsame war and for the selfsame purpose.

"Base and ignoble is the war no poet sings." Have you heard of an Englishman who has dared prostitute immortal verse in praise of Britain's effort in South Africa? Even the poet laureate himself dares not trust to the fervor of poetic genius to praise British arms, which seek to subdue a liberty-loving and courageous people; but, sir, there have been Britons who, in the divine fervor aroused within them by admiration of the Boer struggle, have broken forth in song. There is no American I know of who, during the war in the Philippines, has dared to raise his voice in praise of that flag and that Army which in the past has been the emblem and the strength of liberty.

Why should we hold the Filipinos longer? It has been asserted that we could educate them, that we could Christianize them. You seem to forget that the Filipino who is not a savage has been Christianized. His faith is the original faith of the Christian Church—that of the Church of Rome. I do not believe in its doctrines; I am the farthest removed from them; but it is that faith which he believes in and that faith which he will stand by, and you can not Christianize him to the contrary.

You wish to educate the Filipino. He has better sources of education than some of the Americans. Do you know that the University of Manila was founded before you had any institution of learning in this country? It was founded in 1619, and its learning is as great as that of any university in Europe or in this country; and you would educate the Filipinos!

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT] spoke with great unction the other day of private soldiers of the United States Army who had become pedagogues in the Philippine Islands and who had taught the children there. It was a good thing to do, doubtless, but there are other agencies to teach the children of the Filipino, and the Connecticut soldier belongs to America. Let him come home; let him go to Connecticut, and let him teach there or engage in some other occupation that will assist in the development of our own natural resources.

It is asserted that the Filipinos do not desire independence, and we have had brought here reports of governors of sundry provinces to give proof of the feeling that the Filipino has seen the error of his ways; that he loves the American Government and desires to become embodied with it. We have all that before us. But, sir, may not those governors be mistaken? You remember in the American Revolution the loyalist governor of South Carolina said vauntingly: "There is not a single arm raised in resistance toward the royal government."

Oh, yes, probably he spoke truly; but it was not six months after that when Marion had gathered his men, when Washington and Sumpter and Moultrie had gathered their bands, and when they marched upon the foe who thought that they had departed, and the British general who six months previously had said that the revolution in South Carolina was over was a prisoner in the hands of bands of these brave South Carolinians. So it was in every State of the Union. At times our soldiers were beaten down; at times they retired to their homes; and you know that Washington in the winter he spent at Valley Forge had not 600 men in the whole Revolutionary army, but when the time for fighting came they were there. So it will be with the Filipinos, unless I am mistaken in them.

But, sir, there is another argument that is used to hold the Filipinos. What is that? It is said "we must teach them government, and when we have given them lesson after lesson we will give them so much of liberty and so much of self-government as we think they are fit to enjoy."

Mr. President, I desire to read upon this subject the opinion of the greatest American who has ever lived. It was said the other day to Senators sitting upon the other side of the Chamber that they had no right to quote Abraham Lincoln now, when they refused to give him honor in the time when he dwelt in this land. You can not say that of me. I have been a Republican ever since I can remember; I have knelt at the shrine of the memory of Abraham Lincoln; I have given him hero worship; and to-day I believe no more in his words than I did a quarter of a century ago, when I first took upon myself the duties of American citizenship.

Abraham Lincoln, to my mind, was the greatest American who has lived. He was the product of the common, plain people of this country, but he ascended to the chief place in the nation. He was greater than a man of ability, he was greater than a man of genius. I believe that Abraham Lincoln was commissioned and inspired by God to do the work which he accomplished. What does Abraham Lincoln say concerning this plea? In the place, he says:

> No nation can long live and enjoy liberty that it is engaged in robbing a weaker people of.

He says further:

> Those arguments that are made that the inferior race are to be treated with as much allowance as they are capable of enjoying; that as much is to be done for them as their condition will allow; what are these arguments? They are the arguments that kings have made for enslaving the people in all ages of the world. You will note that all the arguments of kingcraft were always of this class. They always bestrode the necks of the people, not that they wanted to do it, but because the people were better off for being ridden. * * * Turn it every way you will, whether it comes from the mouth of a king as an excuse for enslaving the people of his country, or from the mouth of one race as a reason for enslaving the men of another race, it is all the same old serpent.—Lincoln's Complete Works, Vol. I, page 259.

So spoke Abraham Lincoln.

It is often said, "You object to the policy that has been pursued, but you can not suggest any other policy to take its place. We are in the Philippines; how can we in honor escape from there?" I defined and outlined in the resolution I offered two years ago my ideas upon this subject, and I wish to say further that I would to-day follow the programme announced in that resolution offered by me; I would have the American Government declare an armistice; I would have a cessation of hostilities; I would have a proclamation of amnesty; I would have a call for a national convention of the Filipino leaders and give them an opportunity to establish a confederation of the islands, to adopt a constitution and organize a government, giving them our protection so long as it is needed and then withdraw the American troops; let the Filipino, according to the dictates of his conscience, according to the aspiration of his mind and soul, according to the conditions which environ him, work out his salvation in a government he wants to establish and for which he will be responsible. I would have the wrong we have done cease now and not continue. I believe that it would be successful. We need no longer urge that there is danger of intervention.

Mr. President, I have already spoken longer than I intended to upon this subject. I leave it reluctantly as I entered upon it. I believe that we stand at the parting of the ways. I believe that this Congress, the Senate and the House of Representatives, must lay down some principle upon which it will work. We can not drift forever and go into dangerous seas we know not of. We must do something to outline what we intend to do. If it has been determined that the principle of the past is to be ostracized, driven out, and forgotten, then do it in a manly way, make a declaration of it, and tell the Filipino that you have conquered his country and intend to hold him as a subject and a slave.

But, sir, I hope that our people will listen to the words of warning that have been uttered. I do not believe that they have yet decided this question. I believe in appealing to them once more, and I will stand by the side of that party that declares, as has been the policy of the country, that there can be no government anywhere under the American idea except by the consent of the governed, and that the Filipinos are entitled to their own government by their own people.

A British pessimist has asked the question, "Is life worth living?" I answer, yes, if it be lived in a republic where liberty is safeguarded by law. This we have here. Will you deny it to the Filipino? I hope and pray not. My appeal has been not for the Filipino, but for the honor of the American people. [Applause in the galleries.]

Mr. STEWART. Mr. President, I do not wish to occupy time to the exclusion of others, but I would like at this time or at some other to make a few suggestions with regard to the Philippine question. I am induced to make these suggestions at this time on account of the perusal of what purports to be a statement made by Governor Taft before the Philippine Committee on yesterday. I think the suggestions made by him are so eminently wise and appropriate that they deserve especial consideration. He is reported to have recommended the following:

> First. A qualified suffrage for the Filipinos, with a gradual growth in popular government, which should be enlarged through education in the English language and in American institutions.
>
> Second. Institute within a reasonably short time a local legislature to consist of two bodies, one to be chosen by vote and the other to be appointive.
>
> Third. Permit the islands to send two or three representatives to Washington.

Our situation with regard to the Philippines is not new or anomalous. It is entirely similar to our situation with regard to all other territory heretofore acquired. No territory has been acquired that was not already inhabited. No territory has been acquired with the consent of its inhabitants. The Louisiana purchase involved a hundred years of war, which is not yet entirely ended. If our institutions are to grow and expand, we must gather into the great Republic other peoples who will not come by their own consent, for they know nothing of our institutions and are hostile to foreign rule.

That is the case with all countries where we have gone or where civilization has gone; that has been the case since the first landing in this country, and it always will be. We have been opposed from time to time by violent speeches and harangues about liberty—wild, extravagant, and unreasonable. They are no more so than they have always been. The speech of the Senator from Maryland [Mr. WELLINGTON] is the mere reecho of the diatribes of the discontented with expansion and progress since the foundation of our Government. The intimation that we intend to enslave people, that we intend to institute a colonial system of despotism, is out of place; it is untrue. Nothing of the kind is intended.

I am glad that Governor Taft comprehended the situation. In order that these people may become attached to our institutions, in order that they may enjoy liberty regulated by law, they must learn to exercise the functions of government. They must have a sort of kindergarten government in the beginning, as all our Territories have had. I remember visiting the legislature of New Mexico some forty-five years ago, when the people were beginning to exercise the functions of self-government. Their opportunities had been more limited than the Filipinos have enjoyed; they had very little education; they had no knowledge of our institutions, but they were allowed to legislate; they were allowed to learn to make laws.

I again visited the legislature of New Mexico after a period of forty years and found the native Mexicans discussing important problems of finance, commerce, and constitutional law as intelligently and as forcibly as you hear in any legislature of native-born Americans. They had learned by experience the principles of our institutions.

I would allow the Filipinos to send delegates here as soon as possible, that they may come in contact with us and understand our institutions, and I would also have a legislature there under a Territorial form of government.

Our Territorial form of government as established is amply sufficient for any condition of affairs. It retains in the General Government sufficient control. It gives to the Territories such a degree of liberty as they can enjoy and such a part in the exercise of the functions of government as they are capable of performing. Territorial governments have been the schools wherein new peoples have learned the principles of our institutions. The people in all the territory acquired from Mexico are now educated, so that they can come here without regard to whether they were Mexicans originally or whether they were Americans originally. The benign process of allowing them to participate in government has been the means by which we have extended to them freedom and independence.

Is there any doubt that the people of the Philippines after a few years of practice in making laws will understand our system of government and will love the freedom of our flag? There are no more loyal citizens than the inhabitants of New Mexico and California, who came under the jurisdiction of the United States by conquest and by purchase. They were made so by the glorious privilege of participating with us in making and enforcing laws.

It is impossible for the people of the Philippines to establish a free government. They have never tasted the sweets of liberty; they have never enjoyed the blessings of freedom regulated by law. Anarchy and despotism are the only examples they have ever had of governmental authority? How can they establish a stable government?

But the report of the minority proposes to hold the islands until the people thereof establish a stable government which can protect life, liberty, and property, and carry out our treaty obligations with Spain. With no conception of such a government, is it reasonable to suppose that the people of the Philippines could accomplish the requirements of the minority of the committee in a thousand years? The proposition of the minority means holding the Philippines indefinitely. The promise of independence when they have established a stable government which will protect life and property and preserve inviolate the obligations of our treaty with Spain is no promise at all. They can never establish a stable government until they learn from us what free government limited by law means. When they have learned that, they will have learned to love the flag which is the only emblem of freedom and equality before the law which the world has ever known.

The proposition of the report of the minority means holding the islands perpetually. Proclaiming to these people that we will hold them until they have established a government which will protect life, liberty, and property means we will never let them go. Such a promise is a deception and a fraud.

We must consider the situation as it exists, and no picture of fancied conditions should have place in our deliberations. What has been done? The United States by conquest and by purchase has acquired the Philippines and has acquired with them the obligation to maintain law and order, to protect life and property of the subjects of Spain who may be there and of the citizens of all other countries.

The United States has spent hundreds of millions of dollars and sacrificed thousands of lives in the performance of the obligations of the treaty of Paris. The honor of the nation is involved. The obligations the United States has assumed can not be discharged by offering independence to the Filipinos under impossible conditions—conditions with which they can not comply.

It is a mockery to tell the Filipinos that when they have organized and established a government capable of protecting life and property and discharging all the obligations we assumed to Spain in the Paris treaty they shall have their independence, when they have no conception of such a government or of such obligations and no ability to perform the conditions in hundreds of years.

We might as well offer them an empire in the moon if they would occupy the same in a reasonable time.

We have no right to deceive the Filipinos, but it is our duty to do by them as we have done by all other people who have been brought within the jurisdiction of the United States. Let them know once for all that the United States never has and never will surrender territory once acquired, and that this Government never has and never will hold any people as a conquered province by despotic power, but will extend to all the privileges of the free institutions which we enjoy. Ignorance and barbarism, anarchy and despotism melt away and disappear under the benign influence of our Territorial form of government, under which the people learn to make and enforce laws for the government of themselves. Compare the freedom enjoyed by the Mexicans in Arizona and New Mexico with the imperial despotism of Egypt and India and learn that American sovereignty does not mean colonial dependence, but freedom and independence.

I have lived in Territories many, many years. I know that the people are as free there as here. Look at Utah. Do you remember the conditions there? We passed laws to regulate the elections, to disfranchise those who were still in polygamy. We appointed election officers from abroad. We regulated the whole matter. You can, under a Territorial form of government, do anything of that kind which may be necessary. Finally Utah reorganized. She abandoned the objectionable institution, and she is to-day one of the best States in the Union, with as good a population as you can find anywhere.

Was that done through despotism? No. It was done by recognizing the principles of the Constitution. It was done by giving the people all the freedom they could enjoy. It was done by that kindergarten system of Territorial form of government by which they learned the machinery, and they come forward here, the peers of any of us in the Senate or in the House.

Look at New Mexico. Forty years ago nobody would have thought of making a State of New Mexico. Go there now and you find her people the peers of any State almost—coming right up to it.

When I first went to California it was under military rule, but the people were allowed to elect their alcaldes and went on participating in government until the old Californians, the Mexicans there, became as loyal Americans as any we had. The most difficult problem we have had is with the Indians. But we have gone on the best we could to civilize them. We did not ask their consent. If the Filipinos have the education that is claimed for them, and I believe they have a large educated class there, they will soon see the advantages of our institutions. Let them participate as they may. Follow the advice of Governor Taft, and I will say all honor to a man who can in these uncertain times blaze out the path that will lead to peace and prosperity.

No man can judge of the value of the Philippine Islands. They have been styled, and I am told very properly, the gems of the Orient. They are in the gateway of all the commerce of Europe that goes to the Orient. They are rich in production. They are as healthful as any tropical climate. The inhabitants are vigorous and strong. The production of the islands is immense. They will give us commerce all over the world. We are not involving the country in any entanglements with other nations. On the contrary, we will have an outpost in the East which will give us the commerce of the Pacific which this great country demands and must have.

San Francisco has largely increased in population in the last three years. California is especially prosperous, and all the Pacific coast is inspired with new hope in consequence of the trade with the Orient, occasioned by the acquisition of the Sandwich Islands and the Philippines. The whole country is inspired and its business revived by the expansion of its trade and commerce. The American people believe in growth and progress, and the man who sets himself up against expansion will be overwhelmed.

I tell my Democratic friends, do not take an untenable issue if you want success. Devote your attention to the best mode of extending to the Philippines the blessings of our institutions. Let them participate as soon as possible. Criticise if you will any defects in the system that we are adopting. Follow the road blazed by Jefferson, Jackson, Monroe, and all these great leaders of your party who have added empires and empires to this Republic. Do not attempt to take the other side. It means destruction to the party that takes it.

The Democratic party ought not to be destroyed by this as the old Federal party was by its opposition to the Jeffersonian purchase, and as the Whig party was by its opposition to the purchase of California and Texas. We have need for an opposition party. The country ought not to have only one party. But I warn you if you fight the retention of these great acquisitions that have come as the result of the shedding of the common blood of all classes, the American people will repudiate you.

I say to my Republican friends, do not think of colonies. Do not be jealous of the people of our new acquisitions. Do not be afraid of what may happen in the future. Do not fear that the islands will become States. They can not become States until the Congress of the United States shall decide that they are fit to become States. If you fear statehood in the islands, remember that Congress alone can make States. No States will be made by this Congress. If the people of any of our new acquisitions become capable of statehood, there will be a Congress to decide as to their qualifications. If you can not trust the Congresses of the future to decide such a question, you have little faith in the permanency of our institutions.

What reason have we to suppose that Congress fifty years from now will not be as wise and patriotic as the Congress now in session? New Mexico and Arizona have been in the primary school of Territorial government for half a century with profit to themselves and no detriment to the people of the United States. Who can say that the same preparatory Territorial form of government which has secured freedom and independence to New Mexico and Arizona and added 32 new States to the original 13 may not operate beneficially in our new acquisitions?

Our duty to the Filipinos is plain. We must commence without delay and extend to them the right to vote, to legislate, and to send delegates to Congress under such restrictions and limitations as may be necessary to protect life and property and secure freedom to all. Let them participate in legislation. If their laws do not suit us, they need not go into effect, Congress having perfect control. Let them be educated in free institutions.

The talk about the right of self-government is idle when applied to a people who do not understand the first principle of liberty regulated by law. The knowledge of self-government is of slow growth. It is Anglo-Saxon in origin. The parliamentary struggles in England were the primary school in which our race first learned the rights of man. The struggles of the colonies against oppression was another step in the education of our people. Administration of our Government under the Constitution has made freedom regulated by law our political religion. The Government of the United States is the greatest success achieved by man. The Republic has not been and will not be injured by receiving within the jurisdiction of the United States new countries and new peoples to be educated in the principles of free institutions. The people of the United States have received no detriment from the citizens of Spain and Mexico who have been brought without their will under the jurisdiction of the Republic and educated until they are in the full enjoyment of the blessings of free institutions.

The Philippines are rich. Their trade advantages are invaluable. The fortunes of war have brought us into possession of the keys to oriental trade. These islands not only make the American people the greatest commercial nation of the world, but furnish the means of encouraging by our example the millions of the Orient to strive for a higher civilization. We are but following in the steps of our ancestors in the acquisition of territory.

The old Territorial system is ample for all. We can spread that over any country. It can not hurt us, and it will give the people in the country over which it is spread the opportunity to learn the principles of free government. And whatever may be done, however much fault-finding there may be, the interest in those islands will increase every day. American citizens will go there and build up industries; trade will be predicated upon their acquisition; commerce will be promoted, and it will be harder and harder to tear down the fabric of industry and commerce which we are building up in these islands.

The commerce of the world, the aspirations of the American people, the desire of all patriots to extend our institutions, forbid the base surrender of those islands, acquired, as they have been, by the blood and treasure of the American people. Where the flag of my country is placed by honorable war or by purchase it will be defended by the American people; and he who thinks it will be otherwise will be sorely disappointed. I can point you to many instances of men, prominent and of the brightest intellects in our land, who set their faces against progress, against the acquisition of territory, and who went down to their graves in sorrow.

Now, I appeal to my friends on the other side—because I regard them all as my friends—do not undertake an impossibility. Criticise the opposition where criticism is available. Criticise the management. Criticise the laws, and by criticism we will get better men and better laws. I think it needs some criticism. It may be some people are afraid that the islands will become States. I do not think we have done quite right by Porto Rico. I think Porto Rico ought to have delegates here. But I do not ask everything to be done in a day. I know it is coming to that. I was delighted to learn that Governor Taft was realizing the real situation, and that his sentiments were in accordance with the teachings of a hundred years of free government, extended under our territorial system; otherwise I should not have made this talk.

I commend him as an advanced leader in the line of an established policy. Our territorial policy is broad enough. Nothing can be done under it to injure the United States. No representation can be had here to affect our legislation. The delegates who come here have no vote, but they have the opportunity of learning how we vote and how a free country is governed. The result of that carried home will soon enable them to establish similar institutions. When they see the blessings of liberty they will aspire to liberty and independence.

What is independence to them now? The right to be shot down; the right of a usurper; the right of a despot, to govern and to enslave. Is that right worth anything to them? Turn them over to independence, and you turn them over to war, and the great masses of people there must suffer the direst oppression and robbery. Turn them over to independence, and you turn them over to despotism and cruelty. You break the pledge we made with Spain to establish law and order and to secure property.

You dare not turn them over to anarchy, and independence for them is nothing else. But free government under our Territorial system means everything that an American holds dear. We will give them free government. We will go on in the way that the United States has been going on in this matter for a hundred years. We will not turn back. Those who turn back will lose their way. They will be overwhelmed. We will have them here with their Delegates. We will have local legislatures there. We will have in a few years a sentiment of love and respect for the institutions of America that could be inspired in no other way.

I repudiate what is known as the colonial system, where the people have no part in the government. I repudiate despotism. I repudiate governing a people without allowing them to participate in that government. Our system of government means that all the people shall participate. They will participate. If they ever become sufficiently advanced to send their Senators here—and I hope they may—that will be for some future Congress to decide.

I can trust future Congresses. Our boasted institutions do not amount to much if future Congresses can not be trusted, because we will be here but a very short time. We can trust them, and they will bless us as we bless the fathers of the Republic who carried the flag from the Missouri River to the Pacific, who acquired that vast country, who made this a great Republic, against the protests of many prominent men. We bless them and their names, and now we are to have a centennial in St. Louis to glorify the acquisition and government of that country. The same will be true fifty years from now in regard to the Philippines. There will be a celebration of that acquisition, which is the key to the commerce of the great Pacific. Those who participate in the acquisition of the Philippines will receive the blessings of posterity. Those who oppose it and hang behind will be in the same position that all other laggards have been since the foundation of this Government.

I am for retaining the Philippines. I am for retaining every foot of territory we have. I am not in favor of the extreme taxation in this bill. I believe the Senator from Ohio has an amendment to reduce the amount. I shall vote for that, and I hope it will be reduced. In fact, I would not object to free trade with the Philippines. I would not object to anything that would add to their prosperity. At all events, I believe in taking as advanced ground as possible in reducing the tariff and in doing everything we can to encourage their prosperity. They are not fools; they will know when they are prosperous and how they are benefited; they will understand it, and be grateful.

I remember the Mexican population in New Mexico, a population that hated the American flag worse than the Filipinos do. They were as sullen and revengeful as possible. Now they are patriotic. They now celebrate the Fourth of July as devotedly as the Sons of the American Revolution. Liberty and participation in free government transform the savage into a patriot. They transform him from an anarchist into a good citizen. They make all people love the country which bestows upon them such blessings.

The United States will redeem the Philippines, and in redeeming them will add vastly to the power, the growth, and prosperity of the whole country.

Mr. PERKINS. I desire to offer an amendment to the pending bill, which I ask may be read, printed, and lie on the table.

The amendment was read, and ordered to lie on the table and be printed, as follows:

Provided further, That on and after the 1st day of January, 1904, the coasting trade between the Philippine Archipelago and the United States shall be regulated, except as provided by treaty, in accordance with the provisions of law applicable to such trade between any two great coasting districts of the United States.

CONSIDERATION OF UNOBJECTED CASES ON THE CALENDAR.

Mr. LODGE. I do not know whether there is any other Senator who desires to continue this afternoon on the Philippine bill. If there is not, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of unobjected cases on the Calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Massachusetts? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. GAMBLE. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of a bill to provide for a public building at Deadwood, S. Dak.

Mr. LODGE. I will yield to the request of the Senator from South Dakota, but after that I shall ask for the regular order.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT DEADWOOD, S. DAK.

Mr. GAMBLE. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 592) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Deadwood, in the State of South Dakota.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to acquire a site and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building for the use of the United States Government offices in Deadwood, S. Dak., the cost of the site and building not to exceed $200,000, which sum is hereby appropriated for that purpose.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LEGATION BUILDING AT TOKYO, JAPAN.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On the last day that the Calendar was under consideration, Order of Business 287, Senate bill 2311 was reached. The other bills before that order were objected to and went over without prejudice. Is there any objection to the Secretary commencing now at Order of Business 287?

Mr. LODGE. That course will be best.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If any Senator desires to take one of the other bills it can be done; otherwise the Secretary will commence with Order of Business 287.

The bill (S. 2311) making appropriation for the improvement of the legation building owned by the United States at Tokyo, Japan, was read; and, by unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration. It proposes to appropriate $5.700 for the purpose of providing a new system of heating for the legation building of the United States at Tokyo, Japan, and for a fireproof vault for the preservation of the records and archives of the legation, and for other needed improvements of the legation premises.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DECORATIONS TENDERED BY FRENCH REPUBLIC.

The bill (S. 3357) to authorize Lieut. Commander Asher C. Baker, United States Navy; Frank W. Clarke, curator, United States National Museum, and Henry E. Alvord, William A. Taylor, H. W. Wiley, M. A. Carleton, and John I. Schulte, of the Department of Agriculture, to accept decorations tendered to them, respectively, by the Government of the French Republic was announced as next in order on the Calendar; and, by unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, where did we commence today on the Calendar?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. At Order of Business 287.

Mr. MITCHELL. Why did we commence there? Why not commence at the beginning?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The other cases were objected to. Unanimous consent was given to commence at Order of Business 287 with the understanding that if any Senator desired an order of business prior to that number to be taken up it should be done.

Mr. MITCHELL. All right.

AGREEMENT WITH LOWER BRULÉ BAND OF SIOUX INDIANS.

The bill (S. 2513) to ratify an agreement with the Lower Brulé band of the Sioux tribe of Indians in South Dakota, and making appropriation to carry the same into effect was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

AMERICAN REGISTER FOR BARGE ADMIRAL TROMP.

The bill (S. 2705) to provide an American register for the barge Admiral Tromp was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INDIAN LIQUOR TRAFFIC IN MINNESOTA.

The bill (S. 2736) to provide for the service of warrants issued by the United States commissioners in the district of Minnesota, and for the summary disposition by such commissioners of certain cases connected with Indian liquor traffic, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. CULLOM. This seems to be a pretty long bill and it is somewhat complicated, apparently. It applies, I believe, simply to Minnesota. I should like to have the bill explained, if the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. CLAPP], who reported it, will be kind enough to give an explanation of the measure.

Mr. CLAPP. The bill is framed to meet two difficulties up there. The necessity for appointing court commissioners to take homestead entries requires that a great many should be appointed who have no capacity for trying cases.

Judge Lochren, the United States district judge of that district, who has all these Indian offenses before him, drew this bill himself, and it was upon his suggestion that it was introduced. It is to avoid the necessity of always taking a case to the nearest commissioner. The old internal-revenue law, adopted more for the border States, perhaps, requires that the offender shall be taken to the nearest commissioner. Up there it is desirable sometimes to take the offender to some other commissioner, and that is one phase of this bill.

Another phase of the bill is to cure this evil: Often men who are charged with selling liquor to Indians are taken to Fergus Falls or to Duluth, a distance of 100, or 150, or 200 miles. They are kept there at a great expense. Witnesses are taken from the Indian reservations to those cities; and while the law of the United States prohibits the sale of liquor to Indians, every time there are cases of this kind the witnesses present the spectacle of intoxication in the cities where they are taken as witnesses.

It was Judge Lochren's idea, and I can not help but think it a good one, that where the offender was willing to plead guilty the expense of the prosecution, the delay, and the spectacle of Indians drunk in the towns where the courts are held could all be avoided by accepting the plea of guilty.

It is a matter that was before the Committee on Indian Affairs. There was no objection in the committee to it, and I certainly hope the Senate will allow the bill to pass. It is purely a local measure. It applies only to Minnesota, and it has the sanction of Judge Lochren, who has had a great deal of experience in these matters, especially in that section.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time.

LIMITATION OF "CONSPIRACY."

The bill (S. 1118) to limit the meaning of the word "conspiracy" and the use of "restraining orders and injunctions" in certain cases was announced as next in order on the Calendar.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Let the bill go over; it can not be considered now.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will go over without prejudice?

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Yes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill goes over without prejudice.

MARY E. PARKER.

The bill (S. 1153) for the relief of Mary E. Parker was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill was reported adversely.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Let it be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES] asked that it might be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. All right.

Mr. ALLISON. Let it remain on the Calendar then.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will remain on the Calendar if there be no objection.

CONVENTION OF PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

The bill (S. 1845) to amend section 2 of an act entitled "An act to incorporate the Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Diocese of Washington" was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PENSIONS TO SURVIVORS OF INDIAN WARS.

Mr. MITCHELL. A few days since, when Senate bill 640 was reached on the Calendar, the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] objected to its consideration and desired to look into it. I have his consent now to withdraw his objection, and I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be read.

Mr. MITCHELL. The bill has been read heretofore.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. What is the bill.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 640) to extend the provisions, limitations, and benefits of an act entitled "An act granting pensions to the survivors of the Indian wars of 1832 to 1842, inclusive, known as the Black Hawk war, Creek war, Cherokee disturbances, and the Seminole war," approved July 27, 1892.

Mr. KEAN. I think that is the bill to which the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] objected the other day.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oregon has just informed the Senate that the Senator from Rhode Island has withdrawn his objection.

Mr. MITCHELL. I communicated a few moments ago with the Senator from Rhode Island, who is at the Arlington Hotel, and he has authorized me to state to the Senate that he withdraws his objection, although he said he is personally opposed to the bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, on page 2, line 4, after the word "days," to insert "or more and were honorably discharged under the United States military, State, Territorial, or provisional authorities;" in line 10, after the word "Indian," to strike out "disturbance" and insert "disturbances," and, on page 3, line 4, after the word "service," to insert:

And provided further, That all contracts heretofore made between the beneficiaries under this act and pension attorneys and claim agents are hereby declared null and void.

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the provisions, limitations, and benefits of the act entitled "An act granting pensions to survivors of the Indian wars of 1832 to 1842, inclusive, known as the Black Hawk war, Creek war, Cherokee disturbances, and the Seminole war," approved July 27, 1892, be, and the same are hereby, extended, from the date of the passage of this act, to the surviving officers and enlisted men, including marines, militia, and volunteers of the military and naval service of the United States who served for thirty days or more and were honorably discharged under the United States military,

State, Territorial, and provisional authorities in the Florida and Georgia Seminole Indian war of 1817 and 1818; the Fevre Indian war of Illinois of 1827; the Sac and Fox Indian war of 1831; the Sabine Indian disturbances of 1836 and 1837; the Cayuse Indian war of 1847 and 1848, on the Pacific coast; the Florida wars with the Seminole Indians, from 1842 to 1858, inclusive; the Texas and New Mexico Indian war of 1849 to 1856; the California Indian disturbances of 1851 and 1852; the Utah Indian disturbances of 1850 to 1853, inclusive, and the Oregon and Washington Territory Indian wars from 1851 to 1856, inclusive; and also to include the surviving widows of such officers and enlisted men: Provided, That such widows have not remarried: And provided further, That where there is no record of enlistment or muster into service in any of the wars mentioned in this act the record of pay by the United States shall be accepted as full and satisfactory proof of such enlistment and service: And provided further, That all contracts heretofore made between the beneficiaries under this act and pension attorneys and claim agents are hereby declared null and void.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TESTIMONY IN CRIMINAL PRELIMINARY HEARINGS.

Mr. PETTUS. I desire to call the attention of the Presiding Officer to Order of Business 265, being Senate joint resolution 42, which has been passed over in some way while I was not in the Chamber.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, the Chair will lay the joint resolution before the Senate.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. R. 42) providing for the introduction of testimony in behalf of the defendant in all preliminary hearings of a criminal nature, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That any defendant who shall be brought or summoned to appear before any court or tribunal of the United States, or any Territory thereof, or of the District of Columbia, on any criminal charge shall have the right to be heard and to testify in his own behalf and to call witnesses upon the question whether he shall be held for further proceedings.

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FORT PHIL KEARNY MONUMENT.

The bill (S. 305) providing for a monument to mark the site of the Fort Phil Kearny massacre was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of War to mark the site of the Fort Phil Kearny massacre, that occurred on the 21st of December, 1866, by erecting a monument of rough masonry and an historical tablet; but that the site of the proposed monument, of not less than one-fourth of an acre in area, situated upon the most sightly portion of Massacre Hill, shall be donated to the United States; and appropriates, for the purpose of carrying this act into effect, $500, to be expended under direction of the Secretary of War.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ADDITIONAL CIRCUIT JUDGE IN SECOND CIRCUIT.

Mr. PLATT of New York. I ask unanimous consent for consideration at this time of the bill (S. 1178) providing for an additional judge in the second judicial district.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SOUTHERN APPALACHIAN MOUNTAIN RESERVE.

The bill (S. 492) for the purchase of a national forest reserve in the Southern Appalachian Mountains was announced as next in order.

Mr. CLAY. I expect that bill had better go over until the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. PRITCHARD], who reported it, comes in.

Mr. LODGE. Let it go over, retaining its place.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over, retaining its place on the Calendar.

MILLE LAC CHIPPEWA INDIANS IN MINNESOTA.

The bill (S. 590) for the relief of the Mille Lac Chippewa Indians in the State of Minnesota was announced as next in order.

Mr. NELSON. The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT] desires that that bill shall go over for the present.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. A bill on this subject was reported last year, but I have not seen this bill, and I merely ask that it go over until the next time we go to the Calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over without prejudice.

REIMBURSEMENT OF THE STATE OF WYOMING.

The bill (S. 308) to reimburse the State of Wyoming for money expended by the Territory of Wyoming in protecting and preserving the Yellowstone National Park during the years 1884, 1885, and 1886 was announced as next in order.

Mr. LODGE. Let that bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

ALBERT C. BROWN.

The bill (S. 1920) for the relief of Albert C. Brown was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to Capt. Albert C. Brown, master of the schooner Alexandra, $1,000 in full compensation for fitting out his vessel and rescuing and transporting from the southwest end of the island of Kadiak, Alaska, to Wood Island, Alaska, the crew of the American schooner C. G. White, which was wrecked on Kadiak Island April 13, 1895.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BRITISH SHIP FOSCOLIA.

The bill (S. 173) for the relief of the owners of the British ship Foscolia and cargo was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes that the claim of the owners of the British steamship Foscolia, sunk by collision with the U. S. S. Columbia on the evening on May 28, 1898, near Fire Island light-ship, for and on account of the loss of the vessel and cargo, may be submitted to the United States district court for the southern district of New York, under and in compliance with the rules of the court sitting as a court of admiralty; and the court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine and to render judgment thereupon; but the investigation of the claim shall be made upon the following basis: First, the said court shall find the facts attending the loss of the said steamship Foscolia and her cargo; and, second, if it shall appear that the responsibility therefor rests with the U. S. S. Columbia, the court shall then ascertain and determine the amounts which should be paid to the owners, respectively, of the Foscolia and her cargo, in order to reimburse them for the losses so sustained, and shall render a decree accordingly; and the amounts of the losses sustained by the master, officers, and crew of the Foscolia may be included in such decree.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CLAIMS OF CITIZENS OF NEVADA.

The bill (S. 165) to reimburse certain persons who expended moneys and furnished services and supplies in repelling invasions and suppressing Indian hostilities within the Territorial limits of the present State of Nevada was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. CULBERSON. I desire to ask the Senator from Nevada what is the aggregate amount carried by that bill?

Mr. STEWART. I have not figured it up, but it is not a large amount.

In 1860 there was an Indian war in Nevada, when the first volunteers went out, and some 60 or 70 of our men were called on. They were shut in by a storm in the mountain. Captain Stewart, with a company of the Regular Army, and Jack Hayes, with volunteers, got over there. It was impossible to bring any supplies over the mountains, and the people there furnished supplies to the Army. Under the rules which have been adopted where a volunteer force cooperates with a regular force the supplies are paid for. These supplies were taken. The claims have been investigated very particularly. The State authorized a board of examiners to examine all of these claims. They were some time in completing the examination, and when some of the claims were sent here a bill had passed as to others. They were all, including these, agreed to in the last omnibus claims bill which was passed, but the clerk in enrolling the bill took the first list which had been sent and left out those which are provided for in this bill. The bill has passed the Senate four or five times. There is no dispute about the supplies having been furnished or as to the justice of the claim. There has been no controversy about it.

Mr. CULBERSON. Is the Senator able to state about how much of an appropriation the bill carries?

Mr. STEWART. I have not footed it up, but it is about $25,000.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ROBERT D. M'AFEE AND JOHN CHIATOVICH.

The bill (S. 169) for the relief of Robert D. McAfee and John Chiatovich was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to release and discharge Robert D. McAfee and John Chiatovich from all obligation to the United States on account of the official bond executed by them on the 14th of February, 1890, as sureties for the late Elias B. Zabriskie, as melter and refiner of the United States mint at Carson City, Nev.

Mr. PETTUS. I should be obliged to the Senator from Nevada if he would explain the reason why these sureties ought to be relieved.

Mr. STEWART. I can do it in a moment. Zabriskie was a reputable citizen who was appointed melter and refiner of the United States mint at Carson City, Nev. His accounts were accepted, everything accounted for, and he was discharged from all liability. About ten days afterwards he died. About six months subsequent to that it was discovered that his assistant had been a defaulter, running back even to the time that Zabriskie was in office. The assistant was convicted and sent to the penitentiary. One of the sureties on the bond is insolvent, and the other is practically so. They are both really practically insolvent. One of them has some property, but it is very heavily mortgaged, and it will be impossible for the Government to obtain anything. Besides, the matter had run six months before there was an examination by the Government. There was no suspicion cast upon the character of Zabriskie, and there is no suspicion now that he was responsible for the defalcation. It was therefore thought by the committee to be a case where relief should be afforded. I think it is a very strong case, if we are to give relief in cases of this kind, and we do relieve many.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8586) amending the act of March 2, 1901, entitled "An act to carry into effect the stipulations of article 7 of the treaty between the United States and Spain concluded on the 10th day of December, 1898," agrees to the conference asked for by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. RAY, Mr. JENKINS, and Mr. LANHAM managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills:

A bill (H. R. 1200) granting an increase of pension to Oliver P. Goodwin;

A bill (H. R. 1324) granting an increase of pension to Charles N. Lee;

A bill (H. R. 1484) granting an increase of pension to Robert M. Scott;

A bill (H. R. 2620) granting a pension to Jennie A. McKinley;

A bill (H. R. 3229) granting a pension to Katherine R. A. Ogden;

A bill (H. R. 3266) granting an increase of pension to James Smith;

A bill (H. R. 6453) granting an increase of pension to Ida R. Siegfried;

A bill (H. R. 7343) granting an increase of pension to Martha V. Keenan; and

A bill (H. R. 8652) granting an increase of pension to Virginia Terrill.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After eight minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 4 o'clock and 5 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, February 19, 1902, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate February 18, 1902.

THIRD SECRETARY OF EMBASSY.

George Barclay Rives, of New Jersey, to be third secretary of the embassy of the United States at Berlin, to take effect March 13, 1902, vice Samuel Morrill, resigned.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS.

Thomas V. McAllister, of Mississippi, to be collector of customs for the district of Vicksburg, in the State of Mississippi, to succeed Joseph H. Short, whose term of office will expire by limitation February 25, 1902.

REGISTER OF LAND OFFICE.

Frank D. Hobbs, of Utah, to be register of the land office at Salt Lake City, Utah, to take effect April 21, 1902, at expiration of his present term. (Reappointment.)

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE.

James P. Platt, of Connecticut, to be United States district judge for the district of Connecticut, vice William K. Townsend, promoted to be circuit judge for the second judicial circuit.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE ARMY.

To be brigadier-general.

Col. Francis L. Guenther, Artillery Corps, February 13, 1902, vice Merriam, retired from active service.

Artillery Corps.

James M. Fulton, at large, to be second lieutenant, January 24, 1902.

NOTE.—Mr. Fulton was nominated to the Senate February 3, 1902, for appointment as second lieutenant in the Infantry Arm, with rank from February 2, 1901, and was confirmed February 7, 1902.

This message is submitted for the purpose of renominating Mr. Fulton for appointment in the Artillery Corps, with rank from January 24, 1902.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate February 18, 1902.

POSTMASTERS.

William L. Trent, to be postmaster at Knoxville, in the county of Knox and State of Tennessee.

Charles S. French, to be postmaster at Lake Geneva, in the county of Walworth and State of Wisconsin.

Jorgen C. Jacobson, to be postmaster at Elroy, in the county of Juneau and State of Wisconsin.

James F. Wray, to be postmaster at Reidsville, in the county of Rockingham and State of North Carolina.

John W. C. Long, to be postmaster at Statesville, in the county of Iredell and State of North Carolina.

Edwin L. Ware, to be postmaster at Kings Mountain, in the county of Cleveland and State of North Carolina.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, February 18, 1902.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

CONSULAR AND DIPLOMATIC APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HITT, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported the bill (H. R. 11471) making appropriations for the diplomatic and consular service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903; which was ordered printed, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee reserved all points of order on the bill.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

Sundry messages, in writing, from the President of the United States were communicated to the House of Representatives by Mr. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, who also informed the House of Representatives that the President had approved and signed bills of the following titles:

On January 31, 1902:

H. R. 9342. An act to amend the code of law for the District of Columbia, approved March 3, 1901; and

H. R. 10368. An act to provide for the removal of snow and ice from cross walks and gutters in the city of Washington, D. C.

On February 4, 1902:

H. R. 8759. An act to require cases of typhoid fever occurring in the District of Columbia to be reported to the health department of said District.

On February 7, 1902:

H. R. 3008. An act to authorize the city of Duluth, Minn., to construct and maintain, or cause to be constructed and maintained, a car transfer over the Duluth Canal, and for that purpose to occupy certain lands of the United States.

On February 14, 1902:

H. R. 8761. An act to declare the international railway bridge over the St. Lawrence River, near Hogansburg, N. Y., a lawful structure;

H. R. 4988. An act for the relief of Mary E. McDonald;

H. R. 4372. An act to regulate the collection of taxes in the District of Columbia; and

H. R. 9315. An act making appropriation to supply urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and for prior years, and for other purposes.

On February 15, 1902:

H. R. 10076. An act to receive arrearages of taxes due the District of Columbia to July 1, 1900, at 6 per cent per annum, in lieu of penalties and costs.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate bills of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and referred to their appropriate committees, as indicated below:

S. 2947. An act granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth A. Shaw—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 577. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph W. Burch—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 3522. An act to increase the pension of certain Mexican war pensioners to $12 per month—to the Committee on Pensions.

S. 3388. An act granting an increase of pension to John L. Peterson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 1942. An act granting an increase of pension to Kate H. Clements—to the Committee on Pensions.

S. 3553. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary A. Van Wormer—to the Committee on Pensions.

S. 2508. An act granting an increase of pension to Pauline Lowe Murphy—to the Committee on Pensions.

S. 450. An act for the erection of a public building at Selma, Ala.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

S. 3204. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary T. Bruce—to the Committee on Pensions.

S. 1800. An act granting an increase of pension to Jennie C. Ruckle—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 721. An act granting an increase of pension to Lavalette D. Dickey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 3064. An act granting an increase of pension to Emma Sophia Harper Cilley—to the Committee on Pensions.

S. 3424. An act granting an increase of pension to Minnie E. King—to the Committee on Pensions.

S. 2100. An act granting an increase of pension to John McGrath—to the Committee on Pensions.

S. 3393. An act granting a pension to William P. Arble—to the Committee on Pensions.

S. 3482. An act granting an increase of pension to Ida C. Emery—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 2643. An act granting an increase of pension to Peter C. Cleek—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 2815. An act granting an increase of pension to William S. Derby—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 2422. An act granting an increase of pension to John W. Burnham—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 1933. An act granting a pension to Ella Bailey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 2398. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. Myers—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 8. An act granting a pension to Mrs. George Leonard Andrews—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 3036. An act granting an increase of pension to Jason L. Leighton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 1041. An act granting a pension to Abbie M. Packard—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 2867. An act granting an increase of pension to John A. Hazelton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 1135. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas J. Stowers—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 2930. An act granting an increase of pension to Franklin B. Delaney—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 2013. An act granting an increase of pension to Sidney Leland—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 3559. An act granting an increase of pension to George E. Houghton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 2923. An act granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth Floyd Sicard—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 3284. An act granting a pension to Gilbert P. Howe—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 2767. An act granting an increase of pension to Albert D. Scovell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 2049. An act granting an increase of pension to Franklin Taylor—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 2394. An act granting an increase of pension to Sybil F. Hall—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 3269. An act granting an increase of pension to Jane E. Tompkins—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 3328. An act granting an increase of pension to Heber C. Griffin—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 1967. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Freeman—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 3054. An act granting an increase of pension to Alice De K. Shattuck—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 3322. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph M. Clough—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 3329. An act granting an increase of pension to Annie McElheney—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 3257. An act granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth K. Prescott—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 3258. An act granting a pension to Simon Partridge—to the Committee on Pensions.

S. 3072. An act granting a pension to Oliver Gisborne—to the Committee on Pensions.

S. 1641. An act granting an increase of pension to Frank J. Clark—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 3097. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph A. Nunez—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 2929. An act granting an increase of pension to Jacob Barton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 3213. An act granting a pension to Anna J. Thomas—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 2802. An act granting a pension to Martha R. Osbourn—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 628. An act granting a pension to Annie E. Taggart—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 502. An act granting a pension to Alexander Beachboard—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 1139. An act granting a pension to Abby Clark McNett—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 1331. An act granting a pension to Ann Eliza Trout—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 1626. An act granting an increase of pension to Michael Samelsberger—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 508. An act granting an increase of pension to Adelaide Worth Bagley—to the Committee on Pensions.

S. 3157. An act granting an increase of pension to Rhody Ann Bradshaw—to the Committee on Pensions.

S. 462. An act granting an increase of pension to Sallie Demonbrun—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 2531. An act granting an increase of pension to William H. H. Scott—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 1467. An act granting an increase of pension to Cynthia A. McKenny—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 713. An act granting a pension to Frances E. Stebbins—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 3026. An act granting an increase of pension to Marie U. Nordstrom—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 1289. An act granting an increase of pension to Julius W. Clark—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 2732. An act granting an increase of pension to Marie J. Smyth—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 2692. An act granting an increase of pension to Lucy W. Smith—to the Committee on Pensions.

S. 3403. An act granting an increase of pension to George M. Emery—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 3820. An act granting an increase of pension to Warren B. Nudd—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 1453. An act authorizing the appointment and retirement of William B. Franklin with the rank of colonel, United States Army—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 2877. An act to remove the charge of desertion standing against the record of Thomas Blackburn—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 1256. An act to remove charge of desertion from the military record of Stephen A. Toops—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 636. An act to remove the charge of desertion against David A. Lane—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 690. An act to correct the military record of Talton T. Davis—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 1681. An act granting an increase of pension to Maria Louisa Michie—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 469. An act granting an increase of pension to Hiram H. Kingsbury—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 1748. An act granting an increase of pension to Williamanna E. Lynde—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

CHARLES N. LEE.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (H. R. 1324) granting an increase of pension to Charles N. Lee, with a Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment was read.

Mr. SULLOWAY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

TREATY OF THE UNITED STATES WITH SPAIN.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (H. R. 8586) amending the act of March 2, 1901, entitled "An act to carry into effect the stipulations of Article VII of the treaty between the United States and Spain, concluded on the 10th day of December, 1898," with Senate amendments.

The Senate amendments were being read by the Clerk, when

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the further reading of the amendments be dispensed with and that the House disagree to the Senate amendments and agree to the conference asked for by the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. RAY of New York, Mr. JENKINS, and Mr. LANHAM.

OLIVER P. GOODWIN.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (H. R. 1200) granting an increase of pension to Oliver P. Goodwin, with Senate amendments.

The Senate amendments were read.

Mr. LOUDENSLAGER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

JAMES SMITH.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 3266) granting an increase of pension to James Smith, with Senate amendments.

The Senate amendments were read.

Mr. LOUDENSLAGER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House agree to the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

JENNIE A. M'KINLEY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 2620) granting a pension to Jennie A. McKinley, with Senate amendments.

The Senate amendments were read.

Mr. LOUDENSLAGER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House agree to the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

ROBERT M. SCOTT.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 1484) granting an increase of pension to Robert M. Scott, with a Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment was read.

Mr. LOUDENSLAGER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

CATHERINE R. A. OGDEN.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 3229) granting an increase of pension to Catherine R. A. Ogden, with Senate amendments; which were read.

Mr. LOUDENSLAGER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

IDA R. SIEGFRIED.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 6453) granting an increase of pension to Ida R. Siegfried, with a Senate amendment; which was read.

Mr. LOUDENSLAGER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

VIRGINIA TERRILL.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 8652) granting an increase of pension to Virginia Terrill, with a Senate amendment; which was read.

Mr. LOUDENSLAGER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

MARTHA V. KEENAN.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 7343) granting an increase of pension to Martha V. Keenan, with Senate amendments; which were read.

Mr. LOUDENSLAGER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering the bill (H. R. 11353) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, with Mr. MONDELL in the chair, and proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask my colleague on the committee, the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. LITTLE], what his desire is in reference to general debate, so that we may, if possible, agree upon some fixed time for closing such debate.

Mr. LITTLE. Mr. Chairman, I have a number of requests from gentlemen who desire to indulge in general debate—in some cases germane to the bill, and in others, of course, not. I suggest that we have two days of general debate.

Mr. SHERMAN. The gentleman thinks we could not get along with less time than that?

Mr. LITTLE. I hardly think so.

Mr. SHERMAN. Then I ask unanimous consent that to-day and to-morrow be devoted to general debate on this bill, and that immediately after the reading of the Journal on Thursday next this bill be taken up for consideration by sections under the five-minute rule.

Mr. LITTLE. That is entirely satisfactory.

The CHAIRMAN. Unanimous consent is asked that to-day and to-morrow be given to general debate on the pending bill, and that immediately after the reading of the Journal on next Thursday the bill be taken up for consideration under the five-minute rule. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. SHERMAN. I understand that many gentlemen on both sides of the House desire to speak in the course of the general debate on subjects that do not relate to the Indian bill. As the few remarks that I desire to make will be confined to that subject exclusively, I do not care to make them now. I prefer to make them when the bill is about to be considered. I therefore desire now to reserve my time, to be used later.

Mr. Chairman, I do not know that I included in my request—if I did not, I will make the request now—that the time for general debate be controlled on the other side by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. LITTLE] and on this side by myself.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, it will be so ordered. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. SHERMAN. Does the gentleman from Arkansas desire to occupy some time now? I understood that he did.

Mr. LITTLE. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHERMAN. Then he can take the floor at once.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from New York [Mr. SHERMAN] desire to dispense with the reading of the bill at this time?

Mr. SHERMAN. I do. I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the second reading of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York? The Chair hears none.

Mr. LITTLE. I now yield thirty minutes to the gentleman from Texas, Mr. BURLESON.

Mr. BURLESON. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, the remarks I propose to submit on this bill are not exactly germane, but, incidentally, I may attempt to toy with the scalp lock of the opposition party with a tomahawk in real aboriginal style.

I regret exceedingly that the amendments offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BABCOCK] failed of a sufficient vote in the Ways and Means Committee to tack them on to the bill that passed yesterday. Not that they would have stood any chance of being enacted into law, because if those amendments had been tacked on to that bill we would have had an entirely different rule brought before this body and submitted to it for consideration; but I was anxious to have them ingrafted upon that bill in order to accentuate the position or attitude of the Republican party toward what are commonly called trusts.

And in this connection, and on this subject of the relation of trusts to the dominant party, I desire to submit a few observations.

Mr. Chairman, this is a most wonderful country of ours, and startling changes are constantly taking place, and I now direct your attention to a recent one which was quickly but none the less completely and radically wrought. It is well known to all that after the election in 1900 the trusts and illegal combinations of aggregated capital quietly settled themselves down to what was accepted by them as a guaranty of four years more of uninterrupted loot and pillage of the people. Judging by the past, they had a perfect right to expect this. This condition obtained until some time in the late summer or early fall of 1901. And candor compels me to say that in the meantime the trusts were not being disappointed in their expectations, for they were being given practically unbridled license to do as they would.

About this time a strenuous man, for reasons satisfactory to himself, proceeded to Minneapolis, in the State of Minnesota, and there delivered himself of a speech. In the course of this speech he used these significant words, speaking of trusts. I read:

> We shall find it necessary in the future to shackle cunning as in the past we have shackled force. * * * The vast individual and corporate fortunes, the vast combinations of capital which have marked the development of our industrial system, create new conditions and necessitate a change from the old attitude of state and nation toward property.

This was pointed language, spoken in an emphatic way. Did it alarm or startle the trusts? Oh, no. The strenuous one was only the occupant of an obscure office and was in no position to menace their interests or even temporarily interrupt their acts of spoliation practiced under laws enacted to favor them by the dominant political party which they had so often favored.

Mr. HAMILTON. I would like to ask the gentleman whether he knows of any trust organized under any Federal law?

Mr. BURLESON. If the gentleman is not aware of the existence of trusts in this country at this time——

Mr. HAMILTON. I did not question that.

Mr. BURLESON. I have no hope of being able to enlighten him, and abandon him as a hopeless task.

Mr. HAMILTON. I did not ask the gentleman that question. I asked him to answer me whether he knew of any trust organized under any Federal law?

Mr. BURLESON. I know of laws that the dominant party could enact to throttle great monopolies and trusts, if they had the will and desire to do it.

Mr. HAMILTON. Do you know of any trusts organized under any Federal law?

Mr. BURLESON. I will open a kindergarten for the instruction of the gentleman, if it becomes necessary; but I decline to be interrupted in this way and at this time.

Mr. HAMILTON. Open the kindergarten now.

Mr. BURLESON. I do not wish to be interrupted now. The gentleman knows I have only a limited time.

Mr. HAMILTON. Do you know of any trust organized under any Federal law?

Mr. BURLESON. I should be glad to enlighten the gentleman from Michigan and also the gentleman from Minnesota upon this question, but I do not want to do it in the limited time which I have to discuss this.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Take a day.

Mr. HAMILTON. Name just one trust organized under a Federal law—mention one.

Mr. BURLESON. Well, if the gentleman is so densely ignorant of the conditions in this country that he does not know of the existence of trusts, I have no hope of enlightening him.

Mr. HAMILTON. Is the gentleman sufficiently well informed to inform me?

Mr. BURLESON. I decline to be further interrupted.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas declines to yield.

Mr. HAMILTON. I want to know the name of a single trust organized under any Federal law.

Mr. BURLESON. I have declined to be interrupted by the gentleman.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. There are a dozen trusts organized under the tariff law that could not exist without it.

Mr. BURLESON. I can suggest to the gentleman laws that would remedy these evils.

Mr. HAMILTON. What laws?

Mr. BURLESON. A revision of the tariff, for one, along lines suggested by a member of your own party, Mr. BABCOCK, of Wisconsin.

But to resume, Mr. Chairman, the leaders of this political party knew the power and influence of trusts, the trusts knew they knew it, and feared not. But this emphatic and apparently honest statement made by the strenuous one fastened the attention of the country at large, and especially the victims of trust manipulations, and in their sore distress they cried out, "Oh, if the strenuous one could only be given an opportunity!" With his great ability, his keen insight into actual conditions, with his honest desire to correct these admitted evils, with the apparent courage to utilize his ability for the accomplishment of his desire, the very thought of it brought cheer to the honest farmers of this country, the one class who never ask special favors at the hands of their Government, but who are at present being victimized by the trusts to the extent of being compelled to pay from 40 to 300 per cent more for their agricultural implements than the same articles, manufactured by the same concerns, can be bought for in the foreign territory adjoining us on the north or southwest. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The suggestion that this cunning could be shackled was a solace and comfort to the mercantile classes throughout the Middle West and Southwest, who were struggling under the exactions of a powerful and voracious railroad combine. The great mass of wage-earners who by reason of trust exactions are groaning under the burden of paying considerably more than double the price for their food supplies than they were paying three years ago heard the voice of the "strenuous one" and believed that they were permitted a gleam of hope that an era might dawn which could bring them relief. Ah, if the "strenuous one" could only be given an opportunity!

The ways of Providence are inscrutable, for, lo, through the happening of a deplorable tragedy at Buffalo, N. Y., on September 6-14 the opportunity unexpectedly came. For a time all our people were overwhelmed with sorrow, but from amidst the pall of grief which enshrouded our country at least one ray of light was to be seen. In the limitless quantities of bitter there was to be found a little sweet. The opportunity to shackle trusts had come.

The "strenuous one" will now proceed to place the gyves upon cunning, as in the past shackles had been placed on force. Of course, as a means for carrying into effect this laudable purpose, he will utilize the services of the Department of Justice to strike down these giant monopolies and trusts which have been for so long preying on a helpless people. Of course he will first carefully overlook the entire field and select an able lawyer for Attorney-General of the United States; a lawyer whose training has been such that he will be in thorough sympathy with this praiseworthy design. This great lawyer shall be his strong right arm—the honest blacksmith, as it were—to fashion the shackles and gyves that the "strenuous one" had determined to place on cunning trust barons and shrewd monopolists, who through their greed and avarice were distressing the people.

Who is to be selected to fill this important post? Great caution must be exercised. No mistake must be made. There was some delay. The strenuous one, anxious to select the right man, concluded, maybe (out of an abundance of caution), to take counsel of his party leaders. It is true, just at this time he was surrounded by many newly acquired friends, and, it may be, he sought advice of his national chairman, or, perchance, the easy boss of New York was consulted. Whether so or not, we will never know, but when he acted all America was disappointed to learn that he had decided to retain a corporation lawyer, a trust attorney, to play the rôle of brawny blacksmith to weld the shackles for cunning trust magnates he had so long and so faithfully served. In effect, the wolf had been selected to care for and protect the sheep. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Time rolls on, and before Congress had convened some of the most colossal aggregations of capital are effected. Trusts now invaded many industrial lines. Finally, a railroad combination is attempted so palpably monopolistic in character that a Republican governor of one of the sovereign States of the Northwest felt that protest must be made; that some action must be taken in the interest of the people. It was not surprising that the brawny blacksmith remained inactive, but, strange as it may seem, for some reason—which is plain to me—the strenuous one had also become quiescent.

Some thought that he had discovered that existing laws did not furnish adequate authority to adjust the shackles he had so bravely and honestly spoken of using. Some thought he waited to communicate with Congress in the method prescribed by our organic law and tell us what he had ascertained and ask for additional authority; some thought other reasons existed in explanation of his conduct, but no one dreamed of the change which had been actually wrought.

Finally the day comes. Congress is in session. The strenuous one sends in his message. Now we are to know why he has been so pitifully quiescent. And lo! when the tale has been told we find that the strenuous one, who was to shackle the cunning trusts, when the opportunity came to carry into effect the declarations so courageously made, had been unable to discover any monopolists or trust barons, but only could see "captains of industry." Permit me to read from this message, in order that I may do him no injustice.

Speaking of trusts, he says:

> The creation of these corporate fortunes has not been due to the tariff nor to any other governmental action, but to natural causes in the business world, operating in other countries as they operate in our own.
>
> The process has aroused much antagonism, a great part of which is wholly without warrant. It is not true that as the rich have grown richer the poor have grown poorer. On the contrary, never before has the average man, the wage worker, the farmer, the small trader, been so well off as in this country and at the present time. There have been abuses connected with the accumulation of wealth, yet it remains true that a fortune accumulated in legitimate business can be accumulated by the person specially benefited only on condition of conferring immense incidental benefits upon others. Successful enterprise, of the type which benefits all mankind, can only exist if the conditions are such as to offer great prizes as the rewards of success.
>
> The captains of industry who have driven the railway systems across this continent, who have built up our commerce, who have developed our manufactures, have, on the whole, done great good to our people. Without them the material development of which we are so justly proud could never have taken place. Moreover, we should recognize the immense importance to this material development of leaving as unhampered as is compatible with the public good the strong and forceful men upon whom the success of business operations inevitably rests.

How very tame and, if I wanted to indulge in strong language, I might say cringing as compared with the aggressive and courageous declarations made at Minneapolis only three short months before. I will read again his declaration at Minneapolis in order that you may appreciate the striking contrast:

> We shall find it necessary in the future to shackle cunning as in the past we shackled force. * * * The vast individual and corporate fortunes, the vast combinations of capital which have marked the development of our industrial system create new conditions and necessitate a change from the old attitude of State and nation toward property.

But this was not enough, for by way of making known his complete surrender, or rather, to be charitable, I will say by way of evidencing an abandonment of all hostility on his part toward trusts he has recently named the son of "the captain" of the "captains of industry" to speak the humiliation of republican America at the coronation of an Emperor and King whose government is now endeavoring to destroy every vestige of republicanism on the dark continent. But, gentlemen, as I have said before, the strenuous one is not blamable. He is environed by a political organization which is owned, body and soul, by the trusts. Nothing else could be expected. And why do I say this?

We all know that a child if taken when it is an infant can be taught that even a green snake is the source of all power, and the child can be made to believe that it actually controls its destiny, and I do not care afterwards how much you may educate that child it can never shake off entirely the effect of its early teachings and environments. It will always feel a superstitious dread of the green snake.

The trouble in this case is the strenuous one is a Republican, he is environed by the Republican party, which is directed and controlled by trusts. This party has looked to trusts and monopolies so long for support and asssistance, turning its back upon the people, that now notwithstanding the strenuous one honestly desired "to shackle cunning," when the opportunity came these old influences were immediately thrown around him and he found himself overcome. He now knows the power of trusts; he now knows their influence; he has been taught it by those who surround him. He is a Republican; his environments control him. He still worships the green snake. As I have said, I have no harsh words for him, only pity, because of the resultant consequences of his most deplorable surroundings. As far as trusts are concerned, henceforth he is blind, he can not see; he is deaf, he can not hear.

Gentlemen of the dominant party, permit me to say to you that you are intoxicated with your present power: you have become recklessly indifferent to the wishes of the people. Listen to what I say. The people are at last awakening to true conditions. You have reached the point where you are anxious to trim, to evade, to dodge, and the people know it. During this Congress there will be no revision of the tariff, there will be no interference with the continued reign of the trusts. The trusts have so willed it. Now, mark the prophecy: These issues will bring about your undoing. Already a storm is gathering in the West. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BABCOCK], who has been on the watch-tower for the Republican party for eight years, as chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, has sounded a note of warning, which has been echoed in effect by the present governors of Iowa and Minnesota, both Republicans, but it will avail naught. You are joined to your idols; you are true Republicans; you know the power of trusts; they know your venality. This tells the whole story. [Loud applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, if any excuse whatever was necessary to bring before this House a discussion of the financial bill, I think that it would be found in the last message which William McKinley sent to Congress. I will read from it:

> It will be the duty, as I am sure it will be the disposition of the Congress, to provide whatever future legislation is needed to insure parity under all conditions between our two forms of metallic money, silver and gold.

That was the last utterance William McKinley ever made to the Congress or the American people on the money question. I propose, in view of that message, to take up now for consideration and explanation, as well as I may, House bill 7645, to maintain the legal-tender silver dollar at parity with gold and to increase the subsidiary coinage, which stands No. 1 on the Union Calendar.

In June, 1878, prior to resumption of specie payments, this country had 900,000 legal tender silver dollars and $71,700,000 of subsidiary coin.

The ratio between gold and silver was then 17.94 to 1, and our stock of gold was $213,199,977.

On November 1, 1893, the purchase clause of the Sherman Act was repealed amid gloom, disaster, and panic, brought on by a well-grounded fear of silver redemption of coin obligations. Our legal-tender silver had then increased to $392,695,785. Our subsidiary coin to $76,960,353 in amount, but fallen off in per capita from $1.36 to 98 cents.

Our stock of gold at the end of the fiscal year was $597,697,685, and the ratio between gold and silver was then 26.49 to 1.

From that day to this we have steadily and persistently continued to coin more dollars which the people do not want and will not circulate, and with the exception of twenty millions refused to coin subsidiary, which the people do want and will keep in circulation.

On January 1, 1902, the legal-tender silver dollars amounted to $532,955,428, and subsidiary coin to $91,975,381. The ratio between gold and silver this year has been about 35 to 1. Fortunate indeed is it that our stock of gold has risen to $1,176,172,153, and saved us from the otherwise inevitable results of our own mistakes.

The present bill proposes to frankly recognize the errors of the past, to stop now in the path we have been pursuing, and which our own judgment and the experience of every gold-standard nation in the world tell us is the wrong one, and manfully taking up the burden which we have put upon ourselves, retrace our steps to the sure and firm ground of financial safety and national honor.

It proposes to do this first by stopping now, and I trust forever, the compulsory coinage of full legal-tender silver dollars.

That any person could object to the exchangeability of silver and gold because of some fancied danger, and at the same time insist upon the continued coinage of the dollar, is to me most amazing. I congratulate our friends in the minority that after a six years' struggle with a simple problem in economics they have now abandoned their old theory that legal-tender silver could be maintained under free and unlimited coinage at a parity with gold, and in their report on page 3 have announced that such dollars "never can go to a discount so long as they are limited in number." What limit? By whom made? With what relation to the whole volume of currency? If they will struggle on for six years more they will get down to the elementary truth that the only way by which any forms of money can be maintained at parity is by redemption or exchangeability at the will of the holder.

The fact that we were forced to the gold redemption of greenbacks, notwithstanding that they had been limited for years to an amount far below that of the silver dollars, should give the advocates of this fallacy food for thought.

I presume the advance already made, however, accounts for the fact that no objection is urged in the minority report to this provision of the bill.

In his recent report the Director of the Mint says:

> No good reason appears why the coinage of dollar pieces should not altogether cease and the entire stock of bullion be used for subsidiary coin.

This opinion is fortified by the remarkable fact that the United States is the only gold-standard independent nation in the world to-day that continues to coin a legal-tender silver dollar or silver piece of similar size and value.

There are many things in which this nation leads the world, but to be champion of an economic heresy is a distinction of which we have little reason to be proud.

Referring to the table in the majority report, showing the monetary systems and approximate stocks of money in the principal countries of the world, it will be seen that Great Britain, Austria, Japan, Russia, Norway, Sweden, Spain, Switzerland, Servia, Roumania, Portugal, Finland, Egypt, Denmark, Cuba, the South African Republic, Cape Colony, Canada, and Australia have now not a single dollar of legal-tender silver in circulation, and Germany is recoining hers into subsidiary coin as rapidly as possible, and under the law passed last year will have it all so changed within ten years.

Under these circumstances is it not at least worth while for the United States to stop and think?

The second proposition of the bill is that the bullion remaining in the Treasury shall be minted into subsidiary coin. Either this must be done or new bullion must be purchased, for the demand for that form of money is imperative and must be met.

The situation is plainly shown in a letter recently written by Hon. George E. Roberts, Director of the Mint. He says:

> The facts of the situation, briefly stated, are that prior to the passage of the act of March 14, 1900, the total stock of subsidiary coin in the country was limited to $80,000,000, and by that act the limit was raised to $100,000,000. The demand for subsidiary coin during the past two years has been very heavy, and the total stock in the country is now nearly $92,000,000, almost all of which is outside the Treasury in active circulation.
>
> It seems quite probable that unless this Congress takes some action to again raise the limit, the entire amount authorized will be absorbed before another Congress can act, and the Treasury will be unable to meet the legitimate wants of trade. It is therefore of urgent importance that some measure be passed by the Fifty-seventh Congress, and, if practicable, during the present session, to relieve the situation. It scarcely need be said that nothing can be more annoying or embarrassing in business circles than to be unable to make change.
>
> There is no gainsaying or arguing against the demand for subsidiary coin. The business men call for it because they want it, and when they call for it are exceedingly annoyed if unable to obtain it. No reason exists why their needs should not be completely supplied, and it is unwise and inconsiderate to neglect the situation and not allow the Treasury to provide for their constantly growing requirements.

The Secretary of the Treasury in his report has referred to the situation, and made the definite recommendation that the limit of the stock be raised from one hundred to one hundred and twenty million, and I know, from personal conference with him, that he has no objection to the limits being entirely removed and thinks that would be the preferable policy.

The objection to limiting the stock of subsidiary coin to $120,000,000 is that it will surely be necessary within three or four years to take further action. It is only two years since the limit was raised from eighty to one hundred million and no good reason exists why the supply of so important a tool of trade shall be strictly limited. If when legislation is asked on short notice it should for any reason be obstructed or delayed, serious embarrassment might result. There is no way in which the discretion vested in the Secretary of the Treasury can be exercised to the detriment of the public, and it would appear from every consideration better to provide for a series of years.

I can add nothing to this statement as to the necessity for some action. The only question is, What action? And my reply, and I think that of every man who gives the subject any consideration, is, Give the people all they want as long as it will remain in circulation. How much that will be can be best determined by comparisons with other nations.

In 1878 we had $1.36 per capita, and on January 1, 1901, we had only $1.12.

On January 1, 1901, Great Britain had in circulation $2.82; Austria Hungary, $1.57; Germany, $2.26, and under a law passed last year is now recoining her legal-tender silver up to an aggregate of $3.50 per capita, the balance of the legal tender having been sold as bullion; France, $1.54; Switzerland, $3.24; Denmark, $2.46; Sweden, $1.34; Japan, only 70 cents, but she, like Germany, on adopting the gold standard, called in all of the old legal-tender yen, sold 41,000,000 yen as bullion, and is recoining into subsidiary 27,500,000 yen as rapidly as possible, and Norway, $1.14.

It was the opinion of Horace White, of New York, expressed to the Coinage Committee, that the United States could float more subsidiary coin than Germany. My question was—

Germany will have about $3.50 per capita when their legal-tender silver is changed to subsidiary coin. Do you think it will be safe for us to figure on the same amount ultimately?
Answer. I think we can calculate on a larger percentage.
Question. Say $4?
Answer. Yes; I should think so.
Question. That would be $300,000,000 of subsidiary coin?
Answer. Yes.

But as a perfectly safe proposition let us take the average of all these countries, except Japan, and this would give $2.20 per capita, and this on the basis of our population January 1, 1902, would make $172,561,400 which this country would float, if our legislation would permit it to do so, with greatly increased satisfaction to the people and with corresponding relief to the Treasury.

It was the opinion of the Assistant Treasurer, C. N. Jordan, given to me a few days ago, that with the retirement of the one-dollar bills at least 60 per cent of the $70,000,000 now outstanding would be replaced by subsidiary coin. We have now of subsidiary $91,975,381. We have of bullion $40,283,086 worth, which would make of subsidiary coin $61,546,100, or a total when coined of $153,521,481, or nineteen millions less than the average of the other nations would call for; but as it would take at least five years to coin the bullion and as with the present growth of the country we should then have a population of 85,000,000, the per capita of subsidiary would be but $1.80, or very much below the average of the nations named.

In a word, we must have more subsidiary coin. To get it, we must either buy bullion or use what we have. The bill repeals the compulsory provisions of the war-revenue act and gives the Secretary of the Treasury power to use his discretion with reference to this matter, and further provides that when the stock of bullion is exhausted, if public necessity demands more, he shall recoin silver dollars into subsidiary coin to meet that demand. I regret that this latter contingency is so remote, for every dollar so recoined will give us a profit of 7 per cent at the same time that it lessens the danger to which we are exposed from the enormous volume of legal-tender silver dollars.

Precisely this is what other nations are doing, Japan and Germany selling part and recoining the balance, and the Latin Union, by the convention of 1898, entering upon the recoinage process to the extent of the following amounts:

	Francs.
France	130,000,000
Belgium	6,000,000
Italy	30,000,000
Switzerland	3,000,000

Holland has upon her statute books a law permitting the treasury to melt into bars and sell the coins minted prior to 1873, the declared purpose being to enable the Government to maintain the relative value of gold and silver in case of necessity.

I do not believe that this is necessary in our case, nor do I believe that the people of the United States would consent to the loss which would accrue, which, figuring only the difference between the nominal and actual value of the stock on hand on January 1, 1902, would be $285,664,110.

By the increase of our population, in less than a hundred years every dollar of it can be converted into limited tender, and meanwhile if the greenbacks are retired and proper precautions are used it can be safely carried.

I look forward to the time when the money of the United States, like that of our commercial rivals, Great Britain and Germany, and our future agricultural rival, Russia, will be gold as the legal tender, silver as the subsidiary coin, and bank notes and checks and drafts as the instruments of trade. Then deficits may come and surpluses may go, but the money of the people will be unchanged and unchangeable, and "maintenance of parity," "16 to 1," and the "Government in the banking business" will be traditions only.

When that time comes the world will be at our feet, for in every other element of superiority we have the advantage now.

So far as the quantity of legal-tender money is concerned no anxiety need be felt.

The increase in the world's stock of gold for the past ten years is but prophetic of its universal use as the world's medium of exchange in the years to come, for in the marts of commerce, as in the factory, the best tool is the cheapest and always will be chosen where choice is possible. The increase in our stock of gold for the past decade has been as follows:

January 1—
1893	$597,697,685
1894	627,293,201
1895	636,229,825
1896	599,597,964
1897	696,270,542
1898	925,100,000
1899	945,800,000
1900	1,020,200,000
1901	1,110,800,000
1902	1,176,172,153

With such a stock of gold as this, why talk of an insufficient supply of legal tender, when the fact is that hardly 10 per cent of either gold or silver is in actual use, but only their paper representatives which possess no such quality, and one of the principal uses for the legal-tender paper which we do have is to draw from the Treasury nonlegal-tender bars of gold for international trade?

To all of the propositions thus far advanced I assume that the minority give their full assent, for in their dissenting views not one word is found concerning any of them, and if the proverb that "silence gives consent" was ever true, it must be in this case.

Assuming then, first, that the maximum limit of legal-tender silver has been fixed, and, second, that an automatic process has been provided by which the volume can be reduced and ultimately changed into a safe, desirable, and needed form of currency, the second clause of the bill looks squarely to its maintenance meanwhile, under all conditions, at parity with the standard of 25.8 grains of gold, by exchangeability therefor, at the will of the holder.

This is based on the plain proposition that a Government ought not to issue a single dollar which the citizen can be forced to accept, unless it will itself accept it in return in exchange for the dollar which it has itself prescribed as the standard.

Let us first see what the relation of the silver dollar is to our currency system now. Under section 3529, Revised Statutes, pennies and nickels are made exchangeable, each for the other, and both redeemable in lawful money in sums of $20 or more. By the law of June 22, 1874, silver coins, in excess of $100 in amount, shall be exchanged for gold coin at the mints and the New York assay office. By the law of June 9, 1879, the Treasurer and assistant treasurer are required to exchange subsidiary coin in sums of $20 and multiples thereof for lawful money, or to exchange lawful money for subsidiary coin on demand of the holder.

By the act of August 7, 1882, the Treasury is directed to transport free of charge silver coins on request and on deposit of like amount of coin or currency in the Treasury.

By the act of May 26, 1882, gold bars are exchangeable for gold coin.

By the act of March 14, 1900, United States notes and Treasury notes are redeemable in gold.

Under section 3700, Revised Statutes, the Secretary of the Treasury can buy coin (gold or silver) at such rates and upon such terms as he may deem most advantageous to the public interest and pay in exchange therefor any bonds or notes of the United States authorized by law

Of course gold and silver certificates are exchangeable for the respective metals.

So that pennies, nickles, subsidiary, paper, and even gold coin all have a redeemer, except the silver dollar; but this half and half of value and promise must stand alone, trusting in God and the Republican party, to maintain itself at parity with other legal-tender money. And yet we call this a gold-standard nation.

I do not think that there is a man on either side of this House who believed, after the campaign of 1896, that the overwhelming victory then secured for sound money was to end with a declaration only for the gold standard, and with it the permanent retention in our monetary system of 346,000,000 demand notes and 573,000,000 silver dollars, and yet, while the position of the greenback has been strengthened and that of the silver weakened by the act of March 14, 1900, both still remain a menace and a hindrance to a real currency reform.

The proposition now before the House is not a new one. On the 12th of January, 1897, a convention assembled in Indianapolis, and 26 States were represented. Its one purpose was a reform in the currency. A commission was appointed to prepare a measure for presentation to Congress. It consisted of George F. Edmunds, of Vermont; Charles S. Fairchild, of New York; C. Stuart Patterson, of Pennsylvania; John W. Fries, of North Carolina; Thomas G. Bush, of Alabama; George E. Leighton, of Missouri; Stuyvesant Fish, of New York; William B. Dean, of Minnesota; Robert S. Taylor, of Indiana; J. Laurence Laughlin, of Illinois; Louis A. Garnett, of California. The entire year was spent in patient investigation.

Thousands of circular letters were sent out with a series of inquiries on every branch of the subject, and numerous meetings were held for consultation, and on January 3, 1898, their conclusions were given to the public, and at once a bill embodying them was introduced in Congress by Hon. JESSE OVERSTREET.

It provided for an unqualified adoption of the gold standard and for its maintenance, that no more silver dollars should be coined, the exchangeability of the silver dollar for gold, the retirement of the greenbacks, and for the sale of the bullion in the Treasury. Leslie M. Shaw, of Iowa, was president, and Henry C. Payne, of Milwaukee, a member of the executive committee of the convention which approved this report.

The bill failed to become a law, but these provisions received the approval of the majority of the Republican members of the Banking and Currency Committee, and in the second session of the Fifty-fifth Congress were embodied in another bill, except that the bullion was to be made into subsidiary coin instead of being sold.

This bill went to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures, and by the solid Republican membership was passed and put upon the Calendar of the House.

There it died a natural death, but prior to the adjournment of the Fifty-fifth Congress a Republican caucus of the House appointed a special committee to prepare a bill to be submitted to the Fifty-sixth Congress. That committee consisted of Hon. DAVID B. HENDERSON, Hon. SERENO E. PAYNE, Hon. JOHN DALZELL, Hon. JESSE OVERSTREET, Hon. W. S. Kerr, Hon. J. W. BABCOCK, Hon. PAGE MORRIS, Hon. W. C. LOVERING, Hon. E. F. LOUD, Hon. CHARLES CURTIS, Hon. R. B. Hawley. After two weeks' deliberation, they made a unanimous report to the caucus of the Fifty-sixth Congress, setting forth "that they did not seek to arrange a complete scheme of finance, but confined their recommendations to those subjects of most pressing demand, as evidenced by pledges of the Republican party," and expressed their "opinion that the most urgent subject was the question of a monetary standard and provision for its maintenance."

Among these provisions were the establishment of the gold reserve against the United States notes, fixing it at 25 per cent of the notes and 5 per cent of the silver dollars outstanding, which would make a total now of $122,855,884; authorized the exchangeability of the silver dollar for gold, and indeed all forms of money; removed the limit for subsidiary coin, and allowed the use of the Treasury bullion for such coinage.

That bill, with those provisions in it, received the vote of every Republican member of the House and of many Democrats besides. It went to the Senate, and came back here with a modified gold-standard declaration at the beginning, and at the end a statement that—

> The provisions of this act are not intended to preclude the accomplishment of international bimetallism whenever conditions shall make it expedient and practicable to secure the same by concurrent action of the leading commercial nations of the world and at a ratio which shall insure permanence of relative value between gold and silver.

And this statement was literally true, for into the very heart of the bill had been driven the continued and expedited coinage of the Treasury bullion. The authority to increase the subsidiary coin had been limited to $20,000,000, and even the discretionary power given to the Treasury to maintain the parity of the silver dollar by exchanging it for gold was stricken out, and such powers as were given by that act were limited to greenback redemption only, so that the silver dollar stands absolutely alone and unsupported to-day, and the Secretary of the Treasury, though directed to maintain the parity of all forms of money, has no lawful power given him to do it. The only way by which anyone has even claimed that parity could legally be maintained is by use of the redeemed greenback, under the term "for any lawful purpose" (and by section 3700, Revised Statutes, the exchange of greenbacks for silver would be lawful); but the trouble is that the language of the same section explicitly provides that—> whenever and as often as any of said notes shall be redeemed from said fund it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to use said notes so redeemed to restore and maintain such reserve fund in the manner following, to wit:

>
> First, by exchanging the notes so redeemed for any gold coin in the general fund of the Treasury; second, by accepting deposits of gold coin at the Treasury or at any subtreasury in exchange for the United States notes so redeemed; third, by procuring gold coin by the use of said notes, in accordance with the provisions of section 3700 of the Revised Statutes of the United States. If the Secretary of the Treasury is unable to restore and maintain the gold coin in the reserve fund by the foregoing methods, and the amount of such gold coin and bullion in said fund shall at any time fall below $100,000,000, then it shall be his duty to restore the same to the maximum sum of $150,000,000, and for the debt thus incurred to issue and sell—bonds, etc., so that demands upon the reserve amounting to fifty millions more than the gold and notes in the current funds of the Treasury would render even this course impossible until a bond issue had been forced.

Furthermore, when this point is reached the Treasury has only come by an indirect and circuitous route to the result of restoring parity, when the direct and easy method of exchangeability would have prevented a panic in the beginning.

But it is said that this bill is more stringent in its provisions than the caucus measure which the House passed. Let us compare the two.

This bill directs the Secretary to maintain at all times the silver dollar at parity with gold by exchangeability of these two only at the Treasury (that means in Washington), and, in his discretion, the greenback reserve fund and all provisions of law for maintaining it are made available.

The language of the caucus bill was:

> The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and required to use said reserve fund in maintaining at all times the parity and equal value of every dollar issued or coined by the Government, and if at any time the Secretary of the Treasury deems it necessary in order to maintain parity and equal value of all the money of the United States he may, at his discretion, exchange gold coin for any other money issued or coined by the United States.

The present bill covers legal-tender coin only, the caucus bill covered nonlegal-tender paper and even subsidiary coin. Both required the maintenance of parity. One authorized the method and provided a reserve, the other directs the thing itself, a reserve being now in existence larger by $28,000,000 than was then proposed. No better argument can be presented for the proposed plan than the language of the caucus report where they say:

> If such an emergency shall arise, it is best that the duty of the Government shall be clear. This will not increase the responsibility beyond the burden which now rests upon the Government. It will discharge the duty directly which is now met indirectly. Indeed, it is confidently believed that less embarrassment will follow the direct method. The demand for such exchange will be reduced in proportion as the certainty of the exchange is made manifest.

To all of which I say "Amen."

The bill as amended came back to the House, and became the law of March 14, 1900. Since that this proposition has received the unanimous Republican vote of the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures in both the Fifty-sixth and Fifty-seventh Congresses, and a bill introduced by Hon. JESSE OVERSTREET, covering exchangeability of the silver dollar at the demand of the holder, received the Republican vote of the Banking and Currency Committee of the Fifty-sixth Congress and has again been introduced in the Fifty-seventh Congress, so that the principles involved in this bill have a very respectable indorsement.

It is needless to discuss now the reasons why the bill which passed the House in the Fifty-sixth Congress did not become a law. The act of March 14, 1900, while falling far short of what had been expected after the campaign of education in 1896, was still a distinct step forward, and, with an explicit declaration for the single gold standard written in the statutes, gave promise of better things. The only question is, Shall those things which are absolutely necessary to its maintenance be done now, or will Congress wait till another sore experience like 1893 compels such action? For the dangerous features of our system which existed then are still present, and, aside from the power to issue certificates of indebtedness to provide for deficiencies of revenue and the increase of gold, the Government machinery for meeting those dangers is less efficient than before.

You who think the endless chain is stopped examine your morning statements of Treasury operations and you will find that from resumption in 1879 to March 14, 1900, the average annual redemption of greenbacks was $23,759,409, and since that time in this floodtide of wonderful prosperity, with over three hundred millions of the gold in the Treasury owned by private parties through certificates, the greenback redemptions in gold have averaged $29,924,952 per year, so that instead of stopping or even clogging the endless chain it has only been made to work more smoothly. There is no room in a gold-standard system for fiat money. It must either be paid and canceled or the responsibility of its current redemption squarely assumed by the issuing power. You say it is dangerous to assume the redemption of the silver dollars. I concede it, but it is still more dangerous not to, for the danger exists all the time, and it is far safer to prepare for it in times of prosperity than to have it find us unprepared and helpless when adversity comes, as come it surely will.

The fiat in the silver dollar and the fiat in the paper dollar must both be treated alike. To say that "it will compel a large increase of the gold reserve" is to admit that the danger exists and that we are unprepared for it. To argue that "it will create a new endless chain" ignores the fact that the silver dollar is receivable for customs duties, and that paying silver into one door of the Treasury has a worse effect upon the gold reserve than drawing gold out from another by greenback redemption. To claim that "the Government has the power to call an absolute halt to a raid upon its gold reserve by impounding the greenbacks and Treasury notes," as the minority do claim, simply shows that they have not read the law, for it explicitly states that only fifty millions can be so held and then the mill begins to grind again. To assert that "it will facilitate the exportation of gold" sets aside the simplest law of trade, that gold exports are governed by rates of exchange and interest charges, over neither of which the Government has any control, and that international balances must in the end be paid.

According to Gresham's law, cheap money will expel good from circulation, and for that reason the money of the wage-earner should be just as good as that which pays the foreign creditor. The minority claim that "it will cause the retirement of the silver dollars." If it would do this, more than half of our troubles would be gone, but I confess I utterly fail to see how exchangeability can have any effect upon quantity; but if by any legerdemain this result was achieved, it would only bring us to the goal which 19 other gold-standard nations of the world have reached after long struggles and severe losses with full legal-tender silver.

The final argument against exchangeability is that it is unnecessary, for "parity will be maintained by use." My reply is that the use of any legal-tender fiat money can only be compelled in the settlement of existing debts, and each new contract must be made with confidence in its ultimate redemption. That confidence once shaken, where possibility of choice exists, as it does here, it surely will be exercised, and that means ultimate disparity.

Limitation of quantity does not affect the quality of money. A counterfeit dollar is no better or no worse because there may be few or many of them. Let me cite an illustration of the difference between parity by use and parity by redemption. India was a silver-standard country. By the act of June 26, 1893, the mints of India were closed to the free coinage of silver and the volume practically limited now to $469,700,000, or a per capita of $1.58 against our $8.51. According to the law of limitation and use, the value should have remained unchanged, but instead of that great fluctuations occurred, "until the act 22 of 1899 passed by the governor-general in council gave legislative effect to the decision of the government to change the standard of the Indian monetary system from silver to gold." Now, as will be seen by the Mint report for 1901, page 382——

Mr. SHAFROTH. Will the gentleman allow me a question?

Mr. HILL. Yes; if I have the time.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Is the policy for which the gentleman contends required by law? Does not the Government retain the option of paying either gold or silver as it chooses?

Mr. HILL. Let us see about that. I say it does not make any difference whether the Government retains the power or not. It is doing this thing now and has done it ever since the gold standard was adopted.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Your bill requires the Government, does it not, to pay gold for silver?

Mr. HILL. Suppose that silver should go to a discount, would not the Government, if it had the power, be compelled to redeem it? It could not refrain from exercising this power. I say that the difference between the word "authorized" and the word "directed" does not make one particle of difference in the practical operation of this bill; and I am perfectly ready at any time when the bill comes up for consideration to accept an amendment changing the word "directed" into "authorized," feeling and knowing that it would make no practical difference in the operation of the bill.

"The Government for the present undertakes to receive from the public gold in exchange for rupees and rupees in exchange for gold at the rate of 15 rupees to the sovereign." Does anyone doubt that parity will continue with exchangeability and disappear at once when exchangeability stops? A year ago I cited the case of Porto Rico. Let me again call your attention to it. Up to 1895 they were using the Mexican dollar. For five years they had tried to maintain its nominal value by forbidding its importation and keeping it in use. But limitation and use alike were of no avail, and it went steadily down to 59 cents, and the necessaries of life went up in price proportionately.

The Porto Rican government then concluded that they would have a currency of their own, which would not be affected by the value of silver in the outside world, but which, exactly adjusted to the needs of trade among their own people, would thus maintain its parity by use. So they gathered in the Mexican dollars at 95 cents each and coined from these the Porto Rican peso or dollar, with less silver in it, and issued them at a dollar apiece in lieu of the Mexicans, which had all been withdrawn. It was a full legal tender, redeemable in nothing, exchangeable for nothing, exactly adjusted to the wants of the trade, for when the island would absorb no more the undistributed balance was sent back to Spain, and free coinage was not permitted, and so every element which could enter into the problem of maintenance of parity by use existed in a marked degree.

There was one thing, however, which they did not do. They did not build a fence around the island and stop the import and export of commodities, and everything which went out or came in just as truly marked the value of the money there as if it had been gold, for the commercial world was doing business with gold as the measure of values. Instead of equaling a dollar in gold in purchasing power among their own people, it started off in 1896 at 64½ cents, fell in 1897 to 59 cents, and when the American occupation came in 1898 went to 42 cents, its bullion value, and in just three years the curtain was rung down on the farce of maintenance of parity by use.

I honestly believe that but for the confidence of the American people that the Government will stand squarely behind the silver dollar and ultimately accept it in exchange for gold it would go to a discount now, as the greenback did before resumption, although the quantity was limited and no legal-tender silver dollars were in existence. I want that confidence made supreme by writing the promise in the statutes, for when once there no party will dare to disobey it.

Let me cite a few proofs that the American people also want it. Says Arthur Hadley, president of Yale University:

The bill in general seems to be a good one, and you are at liberty to quote me as having said so.

A. M. Day, professor in the school of political science in Columbia University:

I sincerely hope that the bill may become a law at once. It seems to me to embody both the least and the most that can now safely be done to secure the safety of our monetary system.

The thirty-first annual meeting of the National Board of Trade, at its session in this city a year ago, after a full discussion and conference with the Secretary of the Treasury and President by a distinguished committee, reported specifically by name and number in favor of the adoption by Congress of this identical bill. At their session again this year the board passed a resolution—

That we recommend that Congress enact such legislation as may be necessary to put this country on a permanent gold basis.

And supplemented this action by declaring for every provision embodied in this bill.

The Finance Committee of the New York Chamber of Commerce said:

We believe that the sooner any and all defects in the legislation of the previous session relating to the maintenance of the gold standard are removed the better it will be for the country at large and for business in general; and we also feel that action in this direction should be taken now at the present session of Congress, rather than be delayed and acted upon at the next session of Congress, when another election is approaching. The marvelous development of the mercantile interests of this country now in progress demands, in our judgment, the serious attention of Congress, in order that the groundwork may be laid and the superstructure begun of a broad and comprehensive working system, which will be adequate to the needs of the coming generations. And the first thing to be done, it seems to us, is to fix beyond all cavil and question the gold basis upon which this fabric of credit and finance shall rest.

The Philadelphia Inquirer says:

Mr. Hill has reported a bill that makes the gold standard absolute in this country, in practice as well as in theory. It ought to pass speedily.

The New York Times says:

The passage of the bill will finally settle the silver question and establish the gold standard on a perfectly sound and steady basis. It will at the same time make provision for the sorely felt and constantly increasing need of small change.

Of it the New Haven Register said last winter:

It is not possible for the party in power to withhold its prompt approval without opening itself to the just charge of a betrayal of sacred trust. In 1896 it made the enactment of a gold-standard law the leading issue of the campaign. It won its election upon that issue with the aid of thousands of men who are members of a different household of political faith. For four years it neglected its pledge, and last year it was again returned to power upon the money issue. Mr. Hill should exhaust his opportunities to drive the bill through in time for the Senate to concur before the death of Congress. It is everlastingly right and just.

The Hartford Post says:

President McKinley and Secretary Gage both recommend that the defect in the law should be remedied at the earliest opportunity. The necessity for doing so is obvious. Mr. HILL's bill covers the ground. It should be passed without unnecessary delay and without amendment.

Worcester Spy says:

Congress should complete the work it has begun.

Memphis Scimitar:

The last remaining danger of a cheap-money Administration degrading the currency would be done away with.

New York Evening Post says:

The measure will require no more gold reserve than we have now, but rather less, since its passage will quiet all lingering suspicions that the Government itself makes a difference between gold dollars and silver ones.

Bradstreet's, New York City, says:

Some such measure would seem to be desirable to remove the uncertainty which still lingers in the public mind in spite of the passage of the law of March 14, 1900.

The Buffalo Commercial, referring to the Overstreet and Hill bills, says:

If either becomes a law there will be no further menace to the gold standard in times of panic or financial distress.

Philadelphia Record says:

This, then, would complete the legislation in regard to the monetary standard.

Baltimore American says:

There being no reason, then, in the American's philosophy for maintaining a flirtation with the white metal when the country is firmly wedded to the yellow, Congress should put an end to the matter by passing the bill.

Pittsburg Times says:

With silver exchangeable for gold, there will be no further doubt of the stable basis of the coinage of the United States, and the fears that were excited by the Bryan campaign will arise no more to plague the nation.

Pittsburg Dispatch says:

The adoption of this measure should suffice to put an end to the mischievous agitation of the currency question as a political issue. In two national elections the people have declared most emphatically for the existing sound monetary system. There can be no doubt either of their understanding of the subject or of their determination upon it.

Cleveland Leader says:

The country simply can not afford to run the risks involved in the postponement of such action by Congress as would make it possible to disturb the existing standard of values by the manipulation of the great stock of silver now on hand.

The Omaha Bee said, referring to the last Congress:

There is no good reason why legislation to fortify the gold-standard act should not be enacted by the present Congress. It is approved by the financial and business interests, and there is nothing to be gained by leaving it to the next Congress. Delay is needless and might prove dangerous.

And the San Francisco Call, speaking of the movement of gold after this legislation passes, says:

It will continue to flow hitherward from all the world, making us a great reservoir of the world's capital, and, therefore, the world's creditor.

Mr. Chairman, this is the consummation which I seek.

In October, 1901, 93 per cent of all the customs duties in New York City were paid in gold certificates. In June, 1894, 84 per cent were paid in silver certificates, the Treasury came within twenty-four hours of compulsory silver redemption, the country was stripped of the change money needed for paying wages and small transactions, and the Treasury was helpless.

It was a concrete illustration of the Golden Rule translated from the domain of ethics to the practical experience of every-day life, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."

The people of this country will have precisely the degree of confidence in our money which the Government has, and if the Treasury refuses to exchange gold for silver, the people will do likewise when the pinch comes and their individual interest prompts them to such a course.

Past experience is not only a warning to the foolish man, but should be a guide to the wise one.

I am not willing to see this nation idly rest in the dreamer's paradise of "letting well enough alone."

China has done that for three thousand years, and has been slowly dying all the time. "Letting well enough alone" never won a victory or blazed the way of progress, and it never will. Thus far in its history the Republican party has been the party of achievement, not of obstruction or stagnation. It looks to the future with joy and hope, rather than to the past with a smirking smile of self-content. So long as there are things to be done which make for righteousness; so long as misery, suffering, and want exist—until the law is all fulfilled and the millennial dawn shall come—there will be no place or time when the nation or the individual can "let well enough alone."

Our motto should be, "Forward," while the laggards and those who are "weary in well-doing" fall to the rear as the procession marches on.

The commercial conquest of the world awaits this nation, when it is impregnable at home, in its industrial and financial systems, for when this is secured it can have no rival elsewhere. [Loud applause.]

Mr. LITTLE. I now yield twenty minutes to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. SHAFROTH].

[Mr. SHAFROTH addressed the committee. See Appendix.]

Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, the other day, when the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WHEELER] made his attack upon the Administration, I tried to get the floor, as did several other gentlemen, but the gentleman from New Hampshire, who had charge of the legislation then under consideration, very naturally and very properly objected to it, saying that if he once let us in all the day would be consumed.

It seemed to me that the gentleman from Kentucky, while his speech was most injudicious, was very judicious and shrewd in his selection of a time to make it, for he chose a day when he knew no one could answer him except by unanimous consent, which was pretty certain not to be freely granted. Consequently he was fairly safe from response. I appreciate that the matter is stale now, and is petty. It needs no refutation, because the very intemperance of his remarks carried with them their own condemnation.

But, inasmuch as the gentleman based his indictment of the Administration on the fact that it was making a departure from Democratic simplicity, that they were tending toward aristocracy and worship of titles, that theory is so contradicted by facts that I wish to give another historical incident illustrating the gentleman's mistakes and showing that we are moderating the Democratic fondness for royalty instead of exaggerating it. I do not mean to intimate that I think that the action of our Administration needs any Democratic precedent. It is sound enough to stand on its own merits. I remember that a great lawyer—I think it was Erskine—was once arguing a case and the court asked him if he had any precedent for his opinion. He said: "I have not examined the cases, your honor. I will if you wish; but I should be sorry to deprive your honor of the distinction of being the first to establish so just and wise a precedent." I think that applies in the present case.

I think the conduct of our Administration is only courteous, hospitable, and sensible, and, without any precedent, will receive the approbation of the American people regardless of party. But, inasmuch as there has been an attempt to make party capital of it, let me give you a Democratic precedent. The reception of the Prince of Wales by President Buchanan was so thoroughly aired the other other day by the gentleman from Ohio that it certainly demolished part of the gentleman's argument. The other action which he complained of as unprecedented and wrong was that a member of the President's family was going abroad to take a glimpse of a foreign court.

Now, I do not think that is a very proper subject of discussion here. I will do the gentleman from Kentucky the justice to say that he had the grace to admit that he did not like to bring it forward, and he touched upon it as delicately as possible, if he was to allude to it at all. I confess it seems to me preposterous to to argue it. If a young lady can not accept the invitation of friends to go and see a great public ceremonial in another country which, however empty and dull it may seem to the gentleman from Kentucky, yet, with its pomp and picturesqueness, would naturally be attractive to the curiosity and ardor of youth, if she could not do that without criticism on this floor, then what I supposed was the dominant principle of American society, the inherent and inalienable right of the American girl to do exactly what she pleases, is seriously endangered. [Laughter.]

To a venerable and serious-minded statesman entirely engrossed in his solemn studies, thin-blooded, aged, and blasé, such pomp and ceremony may appear useless mummeries. But the gentleman must not forget that there is another point of view, less wise, perhaps, but perfectly harmless, and that 99 per cent of the girls of America would be glad to see such a ceremony and would disown anyone of their class who did not seize the opportunity. Then, of course, it follows that 99 per cent of the young men would indorse and approve that opinion, and would consider that nobody could criticise it except some cold and petrified fossil. I do not believe the gentleman from Kentucky belongs in that class at all [laughter], but I fear he will subject himself to the danger of being put there.

Now, it seems to me that prudence would have suggested to the gentleman, before charging this Administration with wandering from Democratic simplicity, to have looked at the facts of history. The truth is that all our Presidents, no matter what their politics have been, under the sobering influence of responsibility have always borne themselves toward foreign nations with dignity. They have never allowed the spirit of demagogy to overcome the courtesy and amenity which marks the gentleman. In good Democratic times, however, there was not always the simplicity the gentleman imagines, and I wish to cite an instance that occurred many years ago under the Presidency of James Madison. You look back to him very properly with admiration and pride, and claim him as a Democratic President; and Dolly Madison is one of the favorite characters of our history.

Dolly Madison had a son, and when some embassy went abroad, I think at the time of the treaty of peace in 1815, this son went with the embassy. I am not sure whether he had a salary, but it would have been natural and democratic if he did. Some years afterwards Henry Clay, who was one of the ambassadors, met this son in the streets of Washington, when his fortunes had very much fallen off from the position he once occupied as the President's son, and Mr. Clay said to him: "Do you remember the day when we went to a court ball, and you, as the son of the President, were admitted into the innermost court circles and allowed to dance with the princesses, while we, being only ambassadors, were kept on the outside and could only look at you from a distance?"

That shows the conduct of the son of good old James Madison. Does the gentleman think that is good evidence of democratic simplicity?

Mr. FLEMING. Will the gentleman allow me a question?

Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts. Certainly.

Mr. FLEMING. Does the gentleman mean to say that this was President James Madison's son?

Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts. No; he was the son of the President's wife by a previous marriage, but he was accepted abroad as the President's son; and this son of a Democratic President was dancing with princesses while Henry Clay and Albert Gallatin and John Quincy Adams had to stand in the background and look on. There is democratic simplicity! I do not think we shall follow that Democratic precedent.

If James Madison had asked that his son be accorded this rank of royalty, I think he would have been properly subject to criticism. But I do not believe that Clay and Adams and Gallatin, as they looked on, felt resentment or anything more than a good-natured amusement that the son of our President was treated with such distinction, and I do not believe that in that day there was any member of Congress so lacking in the sense of the ridiculous or delicacy or propriety as to get up and criticise the Administration of James Madison because of this escapade of his young son; and I do not believe any Democrat or Republican except the gentleman from Kentucky ever has or ever will criticise any other President if he allows some young member of his family to take a look at a foreign court.

I know that the Democratic party is sadly and distressfully groping for new issues, but I do not believe such an issue as that ever occurred to the imagination of more than one gentleman.

Mr. FLEMING. Does the gentleman seriously assert or assume the position that Democrats on this side of the House, as a body or as a party, indorse such a position as that of the gentleman from Kentucky?

Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts. I do not know. I will ask the gentleman what his opinion is.

Mr. FLEMING. I am not authorized to speak for anybody but myself, but I will say that I do not indorse that gentleman's position, and from conversations I have had with other members on this floor, I think I am entitled to say that the Democratic Representatives here do not indorse the position of the gentleman from Kentucky as a whole; they may indorse a part of it, but not all of it.

Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts. I am very glad to hear the gentleman's statement that he does not indorse all that was said by the gentleman from Kentucky. It corresponds with my opinion of the gentleman from Georgia. I have only spoken of the remarks of the gentleman from Kentucky as a Democratic speech—an attack upon the Republican Administration; and the parts of that speech which I particularly reprobate were greeted with applause on the Democratic side. But if the Democratic party is trying to make an issue upon that question, I think it is the most preposterous and ridiculous attempt since the great bedchamber plot, when the administration of Sir Robert Peel abandoned power because they could not have the appointment of the ladies of the Queen's bedchamber. [Laughter.]

Now, there is another phase of the gentleman's speech that, while I am on the floor, I would like to say a word about. To my mind it is most unfortunate that a member of Congress should use such language, should allude to a Secretary of State as a man who was a "pitiable flunky and ought to be booted out of his office;" or should ridicule the German nation and claim that he did not care for their good will.

Whatever else our Secretary of State may be—however the gentleman may disapprove of his policy, which, in my opinion, has been eminently wise and farsighted and successful—nobody can deny that he has won a distinguished place in literature, and that in the many offices which he has filled he has always borne himself as a courteous, dignified, exemplary gentleman. And that such language should be used about him here makes me almost regret that the rules of parliamentary law are such that a point of order could not be made against the words.

I think it unfortunate that in this world while ability is necessary to achieve any good results, harmful results can easily be, and perhaps oftenest are achieved, by the very lack of ability. It is always easy to achieve notoriety, simply by intemperate and extreme remarks; and the more unjustifiable and disgraceful they are, the more notoriety they bring. When such language is used in regard to a foreign nation, it is especially unfortunate, because the people of that nation when they read such remarks about themselves, as they certainly will, know nothing of the man who delivers them; they know nothing of the weight to which his words are entitled; they simply know that he is an official member of the House of Representatives; and it reflects upon all members of this House when a member says something which can alienate and provoke friendly nations.

I do not at all agree with the gentleman that it is of no value to us what the German people think of us. I think it is of vast value to us. It is of value for trade; it is of value for peace; it is of value for that self-respect which makes every man wish the good opinion of his fellow-men. In a measure the rules of conduct among gentlemen apply to the intercourse of nations. Private life would be intolerable if each of us brutally proclaimed each ground for criticism of his neighbor's conduct.

I venture to say that if the friends of the gentleman from Kentucky should say plainly to him just what they thought of him all the time, their friendship would be very much strained [laughter on the Republican side], for I have no doubt that he, like all the rest of us, has foibles which it would not be pleasant to have constantly proclaimed. And, as in the ordinary intercourse of gentlemen, we repress our opinions and try to be courteous and friendly, so, I think, in the intercourse of nations we ought to follow the same rule.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Massachusetts will not be so unfair, I hope, as to charge the Democratic party with being responsible for the utterances of the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts. Well, these repeated disavowals are very agreeable to me, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. The gentleman should himself avow whether that is his purpose or intention—to charge the great Democratic party of the country, whose precedents he has cited, in line with the action of the whole country, as I understand it to be, to do honors to the prince—whether he charged to the Democratic party responsibility for the utterances or the sentiments of the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts. I have made no charge, Mr. Chairman. I am simply answering some remarks which were made on the other side. How much those remarks were sympathized with and enjoyed and are now indorsed by the gentlemen on that side I do not know. I think if they do not indorse them it would be well that somebody should take the pains to say so. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. THAYER. Mr. Chairman, I should like to make a suggestion, if the gentleman will give way for a moment.

Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts. Oh, certainly.

Mr. THAYER. I think the gentleman from Massachusetts, being upon the side of this House where everyone dances when anyone pipes, is living under the delusion that the men upon this side of the House are in the same category themselves. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WHEELER] spoke for himself, and, in my opinion, spoke for the very minor part of those upon this side of the House, especially in the latter portion of his speech, and it is unfair and unjust to taunt the Democracy of this nation as being in sympathy with the sentiments that the gentleman from Kentucky expressed the other day.

Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts. Well, one gentleman after another is obviously seeing which side it is better to stand on.

Mr. TALBERT. Will the gentleman allow me for one moment?

Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts. I will allow a question. You can make a speech afterwards.

Mr. TALBERT. I just want to say while gentlemen on this side are disclaiming any responsibility for what the gentleman from Kentucky said, I want to say that I want to take my part of the responsibility for what he said, and I indorse every word he said and I am sorry he did not go further. [Laughter on the Republican side.] And I believe the Democratic party is more to blame for its cowardice than anything else. Let the party say what it thinks and stand by it and not be such mortal cowards. [Laughter on the Republican side.]

Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts. I commend those remarks to my colleague from Massachusetts [Mr. THAYER].

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Does the gentleman notice that the applause is on the Republican side and not on the Democratic side?

Mr. TALBERT. They applaud what they believe to be right. I believe the sentiments of Mr. WHEELER to be on the right line. I believe they are democratic, and hence I indorse them.

Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts. Now, Mr. Chairman, on the question of the influence of words spoken here, I happened last night to read this sentence from a distinguished scholar and publicist, Charles Francis Adams, which I should like to read here:

> It is useless to say that as between nations irresponsible utterance through the press and from the platform are not entitled to consideration and should not be recalled. They none the less are a fact and they are not forgotten. On the contrary they rankle.

I think the members of this House ought to remember that fact and ought to endeavor not to use words which will rankle. There is too much tendency, not perhaps so marked in this House as "elsewhere," to cator to public sentiment at home quite regardless of the effect abroad. The good will of every nation in this world is useful to us. We have an illustration of the value of good will in the case of Russia to-day. Russia, because of events which happened more than a generation ago, although she differs from this country more than any other nation. although she represents the extreme of despotism just as we represent the extreme of republicanism, Russia to-day has the warm good will of this country, and that good will I think she would find, if occasion came, was a valuable asset. The good will of every country is an asset of every other country, and it is very unwise in us to go out of our way to alienate and destroy it.

Of course, when the relations of other nations come before us for discussion, then we must fairly and openly debate them, but to bring up such a question when there is no occasion for it and to fling a taunt in the face of a foreign nation is to my mind most unkind and unwise.

The gentleman from Kentucky said that the reception of Prince Henry by the President would be a departure toward aristocracy. I agree with what the gentleman said in his disclaimer of love for titles and aristocracy. I entirely and heartily sympathize with him in that. I think the great mass of our people agree with him, and certainly no one more than our President.

The American principle is that worth makes the man, and not birth or royal favor. To my mind there are just two classes of people here who worship birth and title. The great majority say merit is what should be rewarded and what we should respect. But there are two classes which still look to birth and ancestry. One class is the self-styled aristocratic circle in our great cities, who have shown a strong tendency to pay huge prices for empty titles even when they had to be taken with the incumbrance of a useless and disreputable husband. The other class exists almost exclusively in the part of the country dominated hopelessly by the Democratic party, where they consider that no culture, no refinement, or ability, or noble service can atone for a taint of color in the blood.

These are the two classes in this country which recognize birth and not merit. I was glad to see that the gentleman from Kentucky bravely took himself out of the latter class. But aside from these two classes this whole country, as a rule, does not like title, does not care for birth, but honors plain, honest merit. But we can not shut our eyes to the sentiment of other countries.

In Germany they do not agree with us. They prefer an Emperor to a President. They prefer to allow their ruler to come down by descent rather than by choice. They recognize as a distinguished citizen the brother of the Emperor, not simply because he is an admiral, but because he belongs to the reigning house; and when he comes here representing, as we know he does, that feeling in Germany, no matter how little we may consider his title of nobility, we must recognize how Germany looks on him, and in welcoming him we welcome him not simply as a prince, but because Germany recognizes him as one of her great and distinguished men. We want to be a hospitable and generous people, and I am glad that the prince is coming here as the representative of Germany.

Within a few years there has been a little strain in our relations, and I look upon the coming here of the Emperor's brother as a sort of tender of good will, a wiping out of past differences, and I think it would be churlish and inhospitable if we did not give him a hearty and warm welcome.

Now, as to the other embassy, which we are sending over to England, I have much sympathy with the gentleman's feeling that it is a useless show. I do not think it is very democratic or republican, and I do not think that under ordinary circumstances we should send such an embassy. It seems to me, however, it is always a matter of question how much we shall conform to European usages, and that just now it is exceedingly timely and wise to send these two embassies to Spain and to England.

When this matter was considered by President McKinley we had just ended the war with Spain. They were about to crown their young King. Other nations of the world were sending their embassies to carry their congratulations to him. Would it not have seemed rather spiteful, rancorous, and churlish if we had not done the same? If, when nations of Europe were by special embassies expressing their congratulations, should this great, rich country, in order to save a few dollars, refuse to send one?

I think we ought to show our good will toward Spain by doing what the other great nations do. And my zeal is not diminished because a Democrat was selected as ambassador. It was an admirable selection. And if we send one to Spain we can not refuse to send one to England. The exception would be too pointed. As a question of economy, it seems to me when we are spending toward $200,000,000 a year in maintaining the Army and the Navy to insure ourselves against the hostile feeling of other nations, it surely is not very extravagant to spend a few thousand dollars to express to them our good will, to conform with the customs of other great nations and cultivate their friendship by participating in ceremonies which they prize highly. [Loud applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. Chairman, in what I said the other day I did not pretend to speak as a leader of the Democratic party. I could never for a moment hope to have placed myself in such a position without first having the approval of the gentleman from Georgia and the gentleman from Indiana. I simply voiced my own sentiments and what I believed to be the sentiments of quite a number of the people of the United States. My judgment then has since been fortified by innumerable letters, many from the gentleman's [Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts] own State, commending in unstinted terms every word I uttered.

Far be it from me, Mr. Chairman, to ever declare, as the gentleman has seen proper to do, that the amenities either of life or of politics require that a citizen shall resort either to deception or untruth to make himself agreeable even to his colleagues, his neighbors, or to other nations. I prefer the truth, however unpalatable it may be, in all our transactions.

I can not refrain, Mr. Chairman, under the patience of the House, from alluding briefly to the colloquy between the gentleman from Massachusetts and the gentleman from Ohio and myself relative to the reception given by President Buchanan to the Prince of Wales. I find upon investigation that the gentleman from Massachusetts and the gentleman from Ohio are about as far from the real record as the average Republican is when you pin him down to the facts.

President Buchanan never received the Prince of Wales in his official capacity, but he received him as one gentleman should another, and paid the expenses out of his own pocket, like one gentleman should always do when he asks another to be his guest.

Now, what is the record on the subject?

In October, 1860, the Prince of Wales, with a number of friends, visited Washington and were guests at the Executive Mansion. The entertainment of the Prince and his suite at the White House entailed a great deal of expense, extra servants and other things. Congress was never asked to pay any part of it. The British party was taken to Mount Vernon on a revenue cutter, accompanied by President Buchanan, Miss Lane, and nearly all of the diplomatic corps, and the leading Army, naval, and civil-service officers. President Buchanan escorted his guests to Washington's tomb, and the great-grandson of George III planted a tree near the grave of the arch-rebel against that monarch's rule.

That Democratic President seized the first opportunity to make profert of the democratic spirit that burned in his breast, and carried this monarchical representative to the tomb of the arch rebel, George Washington, and had him plant a tree there. Not only that, but a member of his Cabinet invited this gentleman to go on a yachting party on a revenue cutter, and President Buchanan refused to allow the Government to pay for the trip, and paid for it out of his own revenue.

I never contended, nor will any fair-minded man place such a construction on any remarks made by me, that a distinguished gentleman coming from any country in the world and touching our shores should not be extended every courtesy. What I protest against is the spirit of truculency, the spirit of sycophancy, that is characteristic not only of this Administration but the preceding one, and especially of the State Department in its conduct of our foreign affairs. My passing reference to the coming visit of the German Prince was simply brought into my speech to accentuate the dangerous tendency of the present Administration and the Republican party toward what I believe to be un-American methods.

But, Mr. Chairman, the best test of the judgment of the American people is in their own expressions. Whatever my colleagues here may think, whatever my colleagues on that side of the Chamber may believe, when we carry all public questions to their last equation, they must be submitted to the intelligent arbitrament of the rank and file of the American people.

Now, this is only two days' mail that I hold in my hand [here Mr. WHEELER held up a large number of letters]. Nine-tenths of them are from Republican States, and a great number of them from men who call themselves lifelong Republicans. They are from the States of New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Michigan, Massachusetts, Connecticut, and if I had the time (for the edification of a few of my New England friends) I would like to read some of these letters, which declare in unstinted terms that all the patriotism now to be found in the Republic is in the South and West. [Derisive cries and laughter on the Republican side.] It is only the foolish man, joined to his idols, who becomes so blind that he can never see his own shortcomings. The derisive laughter on the other side of the Chamber shows conclusively that those gentlemen have wandered so far away from true American principles that when they are reminded of the fault they absolutely deride one who seeks to call them back to the patriotic spirit of our forefathers.

I do not wish to be discourteous; I do not wish to be understood as desiring the American people to occupy a position of ignorance or one unbecoming a high-minded body of citizens. But before the American people, I unhesitatingly declare that I have not one word to retract of the utterances delivered by me on Friday in this Chamber; and I repeat that I seriously, earnestly, candidly believe that we are drifting toward a spirit hostile to the true interests of the Republic, and that unless we look backward and return to those things and that belief practiced by our forefathers, it bodes no good to the Republic.

I do not believe that in order to occupy a dignified and a great position before the nations of the world we must sacrifice our own institutions or our own conceptions of government; and what boots it to us what other nations think of us if we must have their good will at the expense of our own institutions? It is not against the entertainment of any foreigner per se that I protest; it is against the official reception given to him because of the accident of his birth. I am a son of a foreigner who left a European country to escape the oppression of a monarchy, and it is born and bred in me to love a republic. And I am not afraid to say that I love the institutions of my country, even though I lose the regard of men who do not share my feelings. [Applause.]

I have been taunted, Mr. Chairman, through the medium of the press, with the charge that I am an ignorant agriculturist. I wear that contemptuous epithet as a decoration of honor. Thank God I am a farmer's son, and I wish every man who undertakes to speak for the American people first drank his inspiration from the healthy life of the country. I am not ashamed of that, nor am I ashamed of being the son of a foreigner. But I am ashamed of the men who seek to apologize for the sycophancy and the truculency and the disgraceful bootlicking that characterize the official class in the Republic to-day.

I will read, Mr. Chairman, a few telegrams and letters received by me. For obvious reasons I will not publicly state the names of the gentlemen who sign these documents. I have not the right to do so; but if any member in this House desires to read them, I will cheerfully show them to him.

Mr. BOREING. Will my colleague allow an interruption?

Mr. WHEELER. Yes, sir.

Mr. BOREING. The gentleman refers to a considerable volume of correspondence that he has received. I would like to ask him how many of those letters and telegrams are from the State of Kentucky.

Mr. WHEELER. Not exceeding ten or fifteen.

Mr. BOREING. And they are not from Republicans, are they?

Mr. WHEELER. I do not recall that I have received a single letter or telegram from a Republican in Kentucky. [Derisive laughter on the Republican side.]

Mr. BOREING. May I ask the gentleman how many of them are from his own district?

Mr. WHEELER. Not a single one.

Mr. BOREING. I did not believe the gentleman had indorsement down there.

Mr. WHEELER. That may be. There has not been time yet for any communication from my district to reach me by mail. I will say that eight-tenths of these letters and telegrams are from Northern States. Here is one from Rochester, N. Y. The name of the signer indicates very clearly that he is a German. He says:

Most manly, typical American speech made in Congress this session. The State Department is a hotbed of un-American intrigue and English flunkyism. Ought to be smoked out before disgust becomes dangerous.

[Laughter.]

This is signed "A Life-Long Republican." How does that strike the gentleman? Here is a cablegram from London, which I received this morning:

True Americans everywhere entertain your sentiments.

He is a "life-long Republican," he says.

A MEMBER. Where is that from?

Mr. WHEELER. That is from London.

I suppose he is one of the gentlemen who is going over there to see the coronation.

Now, Mr. Chairman, here is a letter from the city of Philadelphia, signed by half a dozen gentlemen, who say they represent a million and a half of capital. You can inquire as to their standing and their position, both financially and socially.

Mr. FORDNEY. They have gone into a trust. [Applause and laughter on the Republican side.]

Mr. WHEELER. No; they have not yet gone into a trust. That would be according to your code, but they have not formed one yet. [Applause and laughter on the Democratic side.] The letter reads as follows:

PHILADELPHIA, February 14, 1902.

We, the undersigned, business men and citizens, after reading your true, brave words, "Hay should go and retire and Pauncefote should take the first ship home," agree with you heartily and admire you for your good, brave words. Hay should go with Pauncefote, as he is only the slave of English aristocracy.

That is signed by a lot of gentlemen in the city of Philadelphia.

Mr. FORDNEY. I suppose they are lifelong Republicans? [Laughter.]

Mr WHEELER. I don't suppose there is anyone else there.

Here is a letter from a lawyer in Toledo, Ohio. He seems to be a member of a very good firm—I do not know who he is—and he writes as follows:

TOLEDO, OHIO, February 15, 1902.

I do not know your first name, your creed, nor your "previous condition of servitude," but I do know that it is a mighty refreshing thing in these degenerate days to hear something from an American point of view, and from the bottom of my heart I congratulate you. I have a firm conviction that your constituents and the American public will esteem you for it. It has become fashionable to say that men of my blood are prejudiced against kingcraft, because of the old-time grudge against government in England. I notice, however, that the Irish in this country (and they have come here largely in forty or fifty years) have caught up pretty fairly the spirit of our institutions. For myself, I was born under the shadow of Bunker Hill. My own prejudices extend to royalty (?) of all bloods, and I pray for the preservation of the simplicity of our fathers. It is meet that that simplicity should find eloquent expression from the South.

I can not, of course, go on and read all of these letters, or any portion of them. Here is one from Cleveland, and also from many other points, commenting on my speech:

CLEVELAND, OHIO, February 15, 1902.

Nothing has pleased me more this winter of the proceedings which have taken place in and about Congress than your speech yesterday before the House of Representatives. It seemed to be the enthronement of reason and of our time-honored principles. All Democratic hearts will throb in unison with your patriotic, whole-souled democratic sentiments. If it did no good in Congress, it will nevertheless again foster, kindle, and inflame our old and time-honored desire of isolation and cherished immunity from foreign embroglios and plutocratic machinations. I guess now our anglomaniacs will be good for a while. Give it to them once again if you get the opportunity. All my friends are highly pleased.

MARION, S. C., February 17, 1902.

I do not know you personally, but I tip my hat to anyone with such backbone and sound mind. Your able speech in the House of Representatives in regard to "a little Dutchman" ought to be read by every honest son of toil, and your State and district are certainly honored by having you as their Representative. We of the South stand off in admiration and say, "Lay on, Macduff, and damned be he who first cries, 'Hold, enough!'" Give it to them, and a few more such shots will make them abhor the idea of ever seeing a prince, king, or other crowned head. I have no ax to grind in writing you, but do it because I admire your stand.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., February 14, 1902.

The most manly, typical American speech made in Congress this session. The State Department is the hotbed of un-Americanism, intrigue, and English flunkyism, and ought to be smoked out before disgust becomes dangerous.

CHICAGO, ILL., February 15, 1902.

Thank God for your American speech. We join true Democrats in indorsing its sentiments.

NEW YORK, February 16, 1902.

As an American citizen I want to thank you, compliment you, and to congratulate you upon your speech in the House on Friday, February 14. The flunky Administration at present in power at Washington is a disgrace to the American people, and it appears to me from what I read of your speech that you appreciated that fact as well as anyone, and that you have the ability as well as the courage to voice your sentiments in regard to it—sentiments that I really believe are shared by a majority of the American people in spite of their seeming lethargy in the face of such a miserable state of affairs. Again I thank you.

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 15, 1902.

Permit me to express my approval of the general substance of your recent speech in the House of Representatives respecting our official departure from the national dignity of our Democratic character. I had the pleasure of reading only such portions as appeared in this morning's local papers. I did not see the RECORD. While my appreciation and approval may be of little concern to you, still, as an American citizen, born and reared in the State of Michigan, and in political relations a Republican, I am your constituent in the broader sense, and also as true an American as you, and you will not be unmindful of the good will of a citizen of any State. Party or State lines have but little significance to me in international matters or relations. In fact, respecting national partisan politics, etc., I am not such a bigoted partisan as to observe neither good nor bad propositions in either party.

The commercial and intellectual development of our country and the world must also deplore our attitude toward social and economic propositions. Only this, we, as a nation, can not afford to be sycophantic nor transpose individual liberties into corporate, municipal, or State control. The largest share possible of the liberty of the individual should be retained—avoid even bureaucracy and paternalism. We surely have nothing to gain by a flunky recognition of forms of foreign governments whose every pretense the divine rights of kings is slavery and subjugation. We can treat them as will be advisable and manifest our respect for our own institutions. I thank you for calling the country's attention to the real superiority of a republic.

GRAND VIEW, MO., February 15, 1902.

I want to commend you on your speech, made in the House February 14, denouncing European flunkyism. In politics we differ, but on flunkyism we are a unit. Let the good work go on.

BALTIMORE, MD., February 15, 1902.

You are a brave, fearless, honest American, and I regret the fact that I am not a resident of your State and a voter in your district. If we had such Democrats in Maryland like you the dirty imperial Republican party would never win.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., February 15, 1902.

Please accept the very cordial appreciation of one citizen for your powerful and much-needed speech in the House yesterday. While I may not agree with you in every detail of your address, it was eminently needed, and even the possible excess of statement was good. I sincerely hope you will return the charge, and keep it up until you make an impression on the people. I do not speak as a partisan, being an independent in politics.

BELLEFONTAINE, OHIO, February 15, 1902.

By your noble speech yesterday you have raised yourself in the estimation of the people more than you know. We should not be mindful of a king or his coronation, and I believe your constituents will uphold you.

ST. LOUIS, MO., February 15, 1902.

Allow me to congratulate you on your speech regarding the "little Dutchman taking charge of a little ship." It is the first real true American sentiment that has been uttered in Congress for a long time. As you know, I do not belong to your party, but I admire the truth and bravery wherever found. Follow up your attack on the flunkies. You made them wince. Your speech has been the "talk of the town," and it is almost universally approved. I send you a clipping of the St. Louis Chronicle of the 14th instant, which shows you that the people of this country feel outraged about this prince business. We are going to have three meetings this week to protest against this prince.

ATHENIA, N. J., February 15, 1902.

I wish to thank you as a true American for the Americanism expressed in your speech as reported in the New York Times.

BROCKTON, MASS., February 15, 1902.

Please excuse the liberty I take, but after reading your speech of the 15th instant, in the House of Representatives, I could not help writing you to let you know how thoroughly I appreciate your words.

NEWVILLE, PA., February 15, 1902.

Thank God we have still a man in Congress who has nerve enough to tell the truth. My wish is to live in your district so as to support you when you are a candidate for office. The country has need of many more men like you. This is written by a one-armed Union soldier.

NORFOLK, VA., February 15, 1902.

Your expression in Congress yesterday touching upon the official reception of Prince Henry and other foreign questions will, without doubt, meet with the approval of all right-thinking American citizens, and they compose the tremendous majority of the people regardless of party. I am for one delighted with the stand you took yesterday. It was well and nobly done. You have my cheers and well-wishes for your grand speech.

ROCKFORD, ILL., February 15, 1902.

You had the courage yesterday, in your splendid philippic, to say exactly what the vast majority of citizens of genuine American fiber, those who have been named "the common people," really think of prevalent toadyism in the Administration; what they think, but can not so well express as you have done.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., February 14, 1902.

I read an extract of your remarks in regard to sending a delegation to the crowning of King Edward. I am pleased that there are some true Americans still in Washington. If we do not turn face about, we are on the road of losing a republican form of government, how much many may say it is really a scare.

ROSEVILLE, OHIO, February 15, 1902.

Under separate cover I am this day sending you marked copy of my paper about the "Little Dutchman" to manifest my entire approval of your speech in the House. It is refreshing, indeed, to note that the fires of Democracy still burn in some Democratic papers and some Democratic breasts. I further note the unkind manner in which certain so-called Democratic papers, such as the Cincinnati Enquirer, for instance, handled the matter in behalf of our bewhiskered friend, Mr. GROSVENOR, "the very biggest flunky in all flunkydom." Pour it into them. You can not make it too warm for them. The people are ready for that question.

KANSAS CITY, MO., February 14, 1902.

I wish to express my admiration for your recent speech in the House against royal flunkyism. I am glad to know that at least one man in that body is a true American.

NEW HAVEN, CONN., February 14, 1902.

What you said in the House to-day, as reported in the papers, with reference to England's attitude in 1898, and with reference to Sir John Hay, United States Secretary of State, delights many people in this city, and gives further evidence of the truth that for real, true, genuine American sentiment one must look in these days to the South or to the West. However, for the good words well and timely spoken, God bless you; and may the spirit of Washington, of Jackson, and of Jefferson inspire you with sentiments dear to all true Americans, the utterance of which makes us proud of the speaker and gives us hope for the future.

ST. PAUL, MINN., February 15, 1902.

Please permit me to thank you for your very timely strictures upon the un-American conduct of those at present in power in our Government. That the abject adoration of royalty and titles is confined almost entirely to the people living near the Atlantic seaboard is one of the causes of congratulation for those whose homes are in the thoroughly American part of our country, and who are not of the hyphenated Americans. Our ancestors came here to escape the evils of caste and class; yet these degenerate sons of grand men are endeavoring to ingratiate themselves with the useless figureheads of effete monarchies. It is good to know that there are yet some who are able to speak, and who are willing to endure the odium of unpopularity for the sake of warning the American people again "against the insidious wiles of foreign influence," and to urge that the "jealousy of a free people ought to be constantly awake, since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of republican government." I hope that your frankness will not militate against you in the future. I thank you for my share in what you have said.

KALAMAZOO, MICH., February 15, 1902.

As an American citizen, and one whose ancestry fought to get rid of the British yoke and establish a country with a government of the people, by the people, and for the people, and who in the war of 1812 again went to the front to protect from the same invading foe what they had so dearly bought through the Revolutionary war from Bunker Hill to Valley Forge and Yorktown, and again succeeded in driving the noble-blooded oppressors from our land, I wish to congratulate you on your remarks in the House of Representatives yesterday, when you raised your voice against the toadyism and flunkyism that seems to be taking possession of some of the people's servants at Washington, from the occupant of the White House down. Rotten, degenerate royalty! What have we, as an American people, to do with it, whether it be England, Germany, or any other of the so-called princely powers?

It is a shame that the President, even though he is there by accident and through the assassin's bullet, should so far forget his duty to the American people as to take such notice of the coronation of an English king as to debauch the American sentiment and principles by sending a member of his family to be tutored in the ways of rotten royalty, and spend the people's money to entertain another accident of birth, the brother of another degenerate so-called emperor. It is enough to make the true American bow his head in shame and hide from the public gaze. We are drifting rapidly toward centralization of power, brought about by this spirit of flunkyism and toadyism that means ruin to our free system of government, and it is high time the alarm was sounded and the bells of liberty want to be kept ringing and the notes of warning sounding until the people wake up to the situation and place none but true Americans on guard, from the highest to the lowest place of public trust in the land. I congratulate you, and I hope you will not be frightened off by public or private taunts. I hope you will keep up the good fight. The Americans are waking up and listening, and will move in these matters as soon as they are aroused. I beg pardon for so long a letter, but the subject is a grave and great one.

CINCINNATI, OHIO, February 15, 1902.

Allow me to thank you for your speech in the House yesterday against European flunkyism. I am a Republican, but I indorse all you and Mr. TILLMAN and Mr. HOAR, in the Senate, have said. I have lately been in New York, Washington, Pittsburg, and through Ohio, and everywhere the common-sense people are disgusted with the attempts of the American Government to initiate monarchy. Go on, give it to 'em; the reaction will be expressed at the polls.

ST. LOUIS, February 16, 1902.

I crave your pardon for the liberty of addressing you, which I do for the purpose of offering my thanks for your opposition to our Government's proposed act of flunkyism in connection with the coming visit of a German prince, which seems to me to be a distinct affront to every German citizen of this country who has felt impelled by the militarism and cruel tyranny of a Government of which this prince is an important and cruel part to leave his German home, and likewise it seemed to me to be a distinct affront to every citizen of this Republic who has not become wholly drunk with the spirit of militarism and imperialism, and consequent aristocracy, now sought to be made so much a part of our governmental régime.

CHESTER, PA., February 15, 1902.

I read with much satisfaction your speech of yesterday, and hasten to say that you are doing your country a great service. You no doubt were actuated from honest motives, but I desire to say that your course is applauded by a vast majority of our people, and gives me so much pleasure that I can not but send you these lines. We congratulate you, sir, to stand in the midst of such "flunkies" and courageously denounce the conduct of Hay, Pauncefote, etc. A company of us here to-day gave three cheers for you, and not all Democrats, either. The writer was raised a Republican, but am convinced that Bryan's teachings and your sentiments must be held up.

EL RENO, OKLA., February 15, 1902.

Will you kindly mail to my address above a copy of the RECORD containing your time-worthy assault, last Friday, on European flunkyism? It meets the approval of the people of the Southwest, and you have won the esteem of all true Americans for the vigor of the assault. With the hope that other Democrats may follow in the same line, I am, etc.

WARE, MASS., February 17, 1902.

Accept my hearty indorsement of the sentiments expressed in your recent speech in the House against flunkyism. I am in perfect accord with you against such rot. An old veteran of the rebellion wishes me to also extend you his approval.

DAYTON, OHIO, February 15, 1902.

Permit me to congratulate you on the remarks you made in the House of Representatives on the tendency of "snobbery." I read the report of your speech in the public press with much satisfaction and gratification, and believe that you struck a responsive chord in the hearts of thousands of your countrymen. Kissing kings' hands at coronations of the crown and paying homage to royalty at public expense is not American, and I am glad you publicly said so.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., February 16, 1902.

I am no politician, diplomat, or statesman, but plead guilty to possessing Republican proclivities; have never been a candidate for any public elective position, although a citizen and voter in this, my native State, for more than thirty years. Nevertheless, permit me simply, sincerely, and hastily to thank you for your manly courage in publicly expressing the sentiments accredited to you in the herewith inclosed newspaper clipping. Assuming that you may have had, or will have, the entire speech printed later, I beg that you may favor me with a copy of the same that I may read the full text of your remarks. I indulge the pleasing and, I trust, not delusive, hope that there are a large majority of both political parties in the States that hold the same views as yourself upon this subject.

DETROIT, MICH., February 16, 1902.

I thank you for your able denouncement of our American toadies and imperialists. I do not think it will lose one Democratic German vote. Possibly German imperialists, like our Yankees of the same stripe, may think it will. No lover of free institutions here or abroad will take offense at what you say; on the contrary, they will applaud you.

MUSKEGON, MICH., February 15, 1902.

I have just concluded a careful reading of your speech reflecting on the present attitude of our present Administration and the State Department, which is endeavoring to fashion the near future of everything official in America, and I can not refrain from giving some slight expression of my gratitude over the undeniable fact that there is still one American in a position that enables him to voice a sentiment deep-seated in the hearts of the common people of this country to some purpose. Nothing has transpired to enhance my comfort during the past year as your speech has. My only excuse for thus trespassing upon your valuable time is an uncontrollable enthusiasm for any man who at this time undertakes to preserve all that is distinctively American and the loyal old-fashioned sentiment seemingly fast departing.

CINCINNATI, OHIO, February 15, 1902.

I wish that I were present and could be able to grasp your hand to congratulate you on your able and manly speech before the House. I was a soldier during the late unpleasantness, and I respect the memory of such men as Washington, Lincoln, Jefferson, and Jackson. Gold bless you! Continue on this same basis, and you will have the support of all true Americans.

NEW HAVEN, CONN., February 15, 1902.

For the true patriotic stand and the words you spoke in Congress yesterday, when you pointed out the duty of this country's administration, who are all gone Anglophobia, I desire to thank you. My friends here are many who join with me in sending you our heartfelt thanks for your noble American sentiments.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., February 15, 1902.

God bless you for your speech yesterday against the universal toasting of Prince Henry and England. The United States was never in trouble that all Europe did not have to be watched like a hawk; we never had a real friend among them. Four other Republicans and myself were discussing your speech, and they were unanimous that you were right, and they all join me in sending you a right hearty "thank you."

TOWANDA, PA., February 15, 1902.

I thank you most sincerely for the remarks you made in Congress yesterday. I should like to know the man personally who dared to speak as an American should. You voiced what should be the sentiment of the whole people of our country. Again I thank you. Should you be interested to know by whom you are addressed, I would suggest that you inquire of Hon. J. C. SIBLEY. He knows me better than the other Congressmen from this State.

JOPLIN, MO., February 15, 1902.

I have just read your speech of yesterday, and I want to thank you for being the only member of Congress that has had the courage to hit Secretary Hay square between the eyes. The potent influence of that man over the McKinley Administration has been to me a bewildering puzzle—inexplicable. That a person of his vanity and ostentation should become saturated with the delirium of social exaltation accorded titled royalties during long assignment to the court of St. James can be understood, but that he should exploit it from his official position as he has and "hold his job" is a marvel. How long would he have lasted under Jackson or Lincoln? Active participation in newspaper work for twenty-five years leaves me with a keen interest in politics. The imperialistic tendency developed in the last three years is to me appalling. This impels me to express my gratitude to you for your broadside at Hay, the truckling to royalty, and the most unnatural and disgraceful attitude of the present Administration toward the South African Republic.

SHERWOOD, OHIO, February 15, 1902.

The country applauds the genuine American ring in your recent speech in the House against the flunkyism of the Republicans in catering to the royal snobs across the sea. What we need is more speeches on that line, and I am surprised that this foolishness has been allowed to go on so long without rebuke.

BOSTON, MASS., February 15, 1902.

I read with much pleasure your speech delivered before Congress on the 14th instant concerning the reception of Prince Henry, the coronation, etc. As the Boston papers contained only a few extracts, and as I would very much like to read the speech in full, will you kindly send me a copy of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD containing it?

CHICAGO, ILL., February 15, 1902.

As a lifelong Republican I wish to congratulate you on having the nerve to show to the people of this United States how we are drifting. Toadyism is an Eastern sentiment, not a Western. Any traveling man knows you have got to get west of Buffalo to get into the United States. I read in this morning's Tribune how much the Democrats will lose by your speech from the German vote. As I know an American German, they came to this country to get rid of what this country is drifting into, and as a mass will uphold you in your sentiments. Many true Republicans are tired of this Government toadyism to foreign nations. It is not American, and our children should not be brought up to believe a monarchy is more to be desired than a republic. I thank you for your speech; it can do no harm; it must do good.

Mr. SHATTUC. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. WHEELER. No, sir; I do not care to be interrupted.

A MEMBER. I would like to see the names that are signed to all these things.

Mr. WHEELER. You can see the names; I will show you every one.

Mr. SHATTUC. I would like to ask the gentleman a question. Have you got one yet from Edward Atkinson? [Applause and laughter upon the Republican side.]

Mr. WHEELER. No, sir; not yet. And yet, Mr. Chairman, when those men who laughed so derisively upon the other side of the House are dead and gone to that oblivion to which they are so rapidly drifting, Edward Atkinson will be known to posterity and every true American, and will be honored and respected by them. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. WHEELER. I ask for a few minutes more.

Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman be allowed to continue.

Mr. WHEELER. I desire just a few minutes more.

Mr. SHERMAN. The time is under the control of the other side.

Mr. LITTLE. I yield the gentleman five minutes more.

Mr. WHEELER. Here is another one from Hadensville, Mass.

Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts. I think that is from the district of the gentleman on the other side [Mr. THAYER].

Mr. THAYER. It is not. There is no such place in my district. [Laughter and applause.] There is no such place on the map.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. I rise to a point of order, that the gentlemen on the other side are trying to take the five minutes' time away from the gentleman.

Mr. WHEELER. No; I am perfectly well satisfied. This letter is not from the district of either of the gentlemen from Massachusetts who have spoken, Mr. Speaker, and I am satisfied the House will be persuaded it is not when they have heard it read. I have simply read these letters to show that this sentiment is confined to no particular part of the country, and that you gentlemen who drink inspiration around the hotel corridors of Washington and from a few newspapers do not represent the real American sentiment.

Now, I understand that there are certain gentlemen on that side of the Chamber who desire to circulate the speech made by me on last Friday in their districts, and I desire to make a proposition to them. If there is any gentleman on that side of the Chamber who thinks he can make capital out of the speech delivered by me, I here and now pledge myself to send a copy of it, accompanied by a copy of the speech of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR], to every Democrat and every Republican in his district, if he will furnish me their names, and I will do it at my own expense.

Mr. SHATTUC. May I ask you a question?

Mr. WHEELER. Not till I get through. Not only that; when the gentleman's campaign begins, if there be one who believes he can make capital out of it, if he will have the manhood and the bravery to take the end of it taken by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GILLETT] and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR], will notify me when his campaign begins I will meet him on every hustings in the district and pledge myself to repeat my speech made on the floor of this House from every stump, and I now challenge him for a division of time.

Mr. SHATTUC. May I ask a question now?

Mr. WHEELER. Yes.

Mr. SHATTUC. Do not you think it is possible that the reason your people have not communicated with you about this speech before is that they are still debating the question of keeping "Uncle Tom's Cabin" out of Kentucky?

Mr. WHEELER. I think it is very likely, and I think they will send it over to the district of the gentleman from Ohio, who seems to have a fondness for that sort of thing, if my information is correct.

Now, Mr. Chairman, in conclusion I desire to say that I have thrashed over this straw; I have said all I wanted to say. I have no apology to make. I am brave enough and true enough to stand by my words whether I believe them to be discreet or not, and I sincerely affirm that I believe every word uttered by me was justified. I do not think any disrespect can be tortured out of what I said about this man coming to our country. None was intended by me. What I intended to do was to emphasize the fact that a man can not be born great, and that he is entitled to no recognition because of the fact that he happens to be somebody else's brother.

Mr. KLUTTZ. I should like to ask the gentleman if he meant any disrespect to the great German people?

Mr. WHEELER. Of course I meant no disrespect to the German people. There are millions of liberty-loving Germans who fled from the tyranny and oppression of the Emperor of Germany and came to the United States to find a home in a free country. They are a brave, patriotic people, and I would not insult them, and everybody knows that. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. KLUTTZ. That is what I wanted to give the gentleman an opportunity to say; that is all.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. Chairman, it is only the diseased mind of partisan bigotry and spite that could so torture the remarks I made; and if my Republican friends think they can get any capital out of that they are welcome to it. I stand by what I said, and I do not think there is an intelligent German-American citizen to-day that will not echo the sentiments I have voiced. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. LITTLE. I had agreed to recognize a friend on this side of the House to consume half an hour.

Mr. SHERMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky desires to follow his colleague.

Mr. LITTLE. Very well.

Mr. BOREING. Mr. Chairman, I was not present in the House at the time my colleague [Mr. WHEELER] made the speech referred to in the discussion to-day. I have not read the speech, but if the newspaper reports of that speech are correct, the Democratic party having disavowed responsibility for it, on the part of the people of Kentucky I want to disavow for the State of Kentucky. I am glad to hear my colleague here personally assume the sole responsibility for his speech, for in so far as it reflects upon the Administration or upon our distinguished Secretary of State I am quite sure it will not be indorsed by the people of Kentucky, neither the Republicans nor the Democrats.

I do not believe my colleague in his speech reflected the sentiment of 5 per cent of his constituency at home. I am glad to hear him state that the letters and telegrams that he has received have not come from the people of Kentucky. He said it is too far away from his district to hear from them yet. Yes; he is too far away to make a speech like that to this House. [Laughter and applause on the Republican side.] He is like that prodigal son that went into a far country. A Representative can go a long way from his district sometimes in opinion and sentiment, and geographically not be very far off either.

Now, so far as the reflection upon the Germans is concerned, I am glad to hear him disavow any intention to reflect upon them, because a large per cent of the citizenship of Kentucky are Germans. They are in general an intelligent, honorable, and upright class of people everywhere. They are industrious and hard-working people, who attend strictly to their own business affairs. I desire to disavow any indorsement of any of those statements so far as the Eleventh district is concerned and so far as the citizens of Kentucky generally are concerned. Personally I entertain a high regard for my colleague, but I think our people will regard it as unfortunate that any representative of the State should stand upon the floor of this House and insult the intelligence of the country in any such manner. [Loud applause on the Republican side.]

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. PAYNE having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message from the Senate, by Mr. PARKINSON, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution; in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

Senate concurrent resolution 25.

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, directed to cause an examination to be made of the coast of Washington in the vicinity of the mouth of the Hoh River, with a view to the establishment of a harbor, and to submit an estimate therefor.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 176. An act to provide for the extension of the charters of national banks;

S. 1025. An act to promote the efficiency of the Revenue-Cutter Service;

S. 65. An act providing for the retirement of petty officers and enlisted men of the Navy;

S. 1099. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to return to Harvard University certain colors, silver cup, and Nordenfeldt gun;

S. 1563. An act for the relief of William H. Crawford; and

S. 2921. An act to place Henry Biederbick, Julius R. Frederick, Francis Long, and Maurice Connell on the retired list of enlisted men of the Army.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment joint resolutions of the following titles:

H. J. Res. 88. Joint resolution authorizing the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to return bank checks, drafts, certificates of deposit, and orders for the payment of money, having imprinted stamps thereon, to the owners thereof, and for other purposes; and

H. J. Res. 131. Joint resolution authorizing the transfer to the Library of Congress of the Library of State reports, etc.

The message also announced that the Senate had insisted upon its amendment to the bill (H. R. 3104) to grant the right of way through the Oklahoma Territory and the Indian Territory to the Enid and Anadarko Railway Company, and for other purposes, disagreed to by the House of Representatives; had agreed to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. QUARLES, Mr. HARRIS, and Mr. RAWLINS as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

Mr. LITTLE. I yield fifteen minutes to my colleague from Arkansas [Mr. REID].

Mr. REID. Mr. Chairman, in accordance with the custom practiced by the members of this House, I shall not confine myself to the pending bill, but shall take advantage of the time allotted to me to discuss for a few moments the policy recently inaugurated by this Government toward the people of the Philippine Islands. It would of course be presumptious in me to assume that I could add anything particularly new or original to the volumes of argument that from time to time for the last two years have been made upon this subject upon the floor of this House and in the Senate Chamber; but as time progresses and the situation becomes more fully developed the truth or falsity of those arguments becomes manifest, and it becomes more apparent that in the course we have adopted we are departing from American spirit and endangering American interest. In this, sir, I find some excuse for trespassing for a time upon the patience of this committee.

Mr. Chairman, we are paying a colossal price for something over in the Philippine Islands. We must be fighting for something of incalculable worth. Judging from the stupendous price in money and blood we are paying, nothing short of the very existence of our nation and the safety of our own liberties can be at stake upon the issue. What do we expect to get out of it? Are we on the defensive or aggressive? If we are on the defensive, why are we attacked by so relentless a foe, and what is it we have that he seeks to take from us? What have we done that he should punish us? If we are on the aggressive, what is it he has got that we would take from him? What great indignity has he offered us? What vital injury have we suffered at his hands that millions must be appropriated from the revenues of State from year to year to carry on the struggle, and hundreds of thousands of the young manhood of the country must be called into service to pour out their blood in this interminable conflict? These questions can not be answered with such indefinite responses as we hear when we are told that we are "upholding the honor of the flag," or that we are fighting to become a "world power."

The time is coming, sir, when the American people are not going to be content with high-sounding metaphor and sentimental phrase in answer to these vital questions. When the tocsin of war was first sounded and it was heralded over the length and breadth of the land that an issue had been drawn between the armies of this country and an alien race in a foreign land, the American people, true to their natural impulses, never stopped to parley or to reason. Shoulder to shoulder they stood by the Administration and for the honor of the American soldier, who has never yet been conquered by a foe. But the conflict of the hour has lengthened into the duration of years. The insurrection that at first could not be dignified by the name of war has begun to cost us hundreds of millions a year, and the best blood of our armies. The hostile outbreak of an insignificant faction, that we were promised should be suppressed in ninety days, is now admitted to have settled down to a system of warfare that requires the presence of 30,000 men, scattered over 500 stations in the islands.

It was said that the leader of the "rebellion," as it was termed, by some means had caught the spirit of liberty in his savage heart and was furnishing inspiration to the others, and that when his capture was effected resistance to American arms would collapse in the twinkling of an eye. But notwithstanding that we are told he experienced at once a sudden change of heart, and issued a proclamation urging the cessation of hostilities, and inviting his countrymen to find peace under the "glorious banner of the United States," there is as little hope of peace to-day as there was many months ago when his capture was effected. There have been enlisted in the service in the Philippine Islands scarcely less than 125,000 men. More than 1,000 have been killed or died from injuries received in battle. Nearly 3,000 have died from diseases of various kinds. About 4,000 have been discharged for disabilities. Not less than 500 have become insane, and the Surgeon-General startles us with the intelligence that homesickness was one of the principal causes.

The cost of the war can not be accurately stated in dollars and cents. Government officers dare not hazard an estimate upon it. Before the war our Army cost us about $30,000,000 a year. During the three years we have occupied the Philippines it has cost us over $536,000,000, and the Secretary of War's estimate for the year ending June 30, 1902, asks for over $140,000,000 more, and his estimate ending for the fiscal year 1903 calls for $158,403,000 more. This is the price, sir, we are paying for the luxury of establishing our authority over the Philippine Islands. What can we hope to accomplish by it? Control the trade of the Philippines? It has been more than once demonstrated upon the floor of this House that we will not get back what we have already spent for generations in the centuries yet to come; that the cost of governing those distant islands, and keeping them in subjugation to American authority, will always exceed by millions the revenues derived from their trade. An examination into the experience of other nations will show conclusively that spheres of influence and colonial possessions are in no wise essential to the upbuilding of trade and the expansion of commerce. It was stated a few days ago upon the floor of the Senate that an army of 30,000 men kept for twelve months in the Philippine Islands would consume the profit of our trade with them for one hundred and fifty years.

Sir, we have utterly no use for colonies. A modern writer on colonial history has shown that more wars have been waged in controversy over colonies and possessions foreign to the parent state than over all other causes combined. He writes: "Hostilities once commenced will spread. A contest thus commenced often serves as an excuse for an attack on a parent state. A colony is, as some have very truly said, a tinder box, which only requires a stray spark to ignite the conflagration of war. The inhabitants of the mother country must, therefore, always be ready at command to render services in behalf of her wards, or, as frequently happens, to protect their own land against the foreign aggressor to whom some territorial dispute offers the desired pretext." I repeat, sir, we have no use for colonial possessions. Other nations, huddled upon the narrow islands of the sea, may, in the very necessity of the case, be driven to seek broader lands into which to shake from their overcrowded shores a discontented and complaining population. But, sir, this nation, with an expanse of territory embracing millions of square miles upon which the human foot has scarcely trod, teeming with resources that can not be developed in a score of generations, can find no just excuse for such a course.

No careful student of the political history of the country can deny that our Government is being launched upon a course and committed in a large measure to a policy that was never dreamed of by those who drafted the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence. But we are told that we have outgrown them; that our nation has become too great and too powerful to be hedged about and embarrassed by such narrow restrictions. The great documents that were adopted by the people of this country with shouts of glad acclaim and to the peals of liberty's bell scarce more than a hundred years ago, hailed as enduring and eternal, are now, even in this short span of our country's history, said to have served their purpose, and must give way to new and changing conditions. The simple but sublime old truths, so proudly proclaimed by the fathers of this country but a short time ago, and which no man dares to deny, and to which all political parties pointed as the basic principles of their creeds and the all-sufficient fountain of their faith, are now subjected to the closest scrutiny and harshest criticism, and he who can find an exception or evade express provisions by ingenious and tortured construction is proclaimed a great statesman and the man of the hour.

The Declaration announced as the first self-evident truth that all men were created equal. Can anyone truthfully deny that we are dealing with millions of men to-day, not as equals, but as subjects? That to secure the inalienable rights of life, liberty, and happiness governments were instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. Can any man deny that we are governing 10,000,000 people without deriving from their consent the just power to do so? Commissions for their government are created by legislation in this Hall. Are they represented here? "A right inestimable to them and formidable to tyrants only." Are we not "creating a multitude of new offices and sending thither a swarm of officers to harass the people and eat out their substance?" All of these things and many more have been urged upon the floor of this House and in public discussion, but it has all fallen upon ears "deaf to the voice of justice."

Mr. Chairman, it does seem that if we can not learn from the plain history and hallowed traditions of our own country that we ought at least to hesitate when the universal verdict of all history is against us. There is not a nation, from the most ancient to modern times, that has ever reaped any lasting benefit to itself or conferred any true blessing upon any other by the arbitrary exercise over it, against its consent, of the powers of government. A nation may subject another, and by the appropriation of its resources and a great display of its military strength be called a world's power and flourish for a season; but, sir, the very principle and spirit that elevates her to that "bad eminence" becomes at last a source of all her troubles and the ultimate cause of her own disintegration and decay. Gentlemen are anxious for our nation to become what they are pleased to call a world's power.

And let me ask, what is meant by this high-sounding phrase? What is a world power among nations? If it is meant that we should assume the dictatorship of the world; that we should marshal great armies and majestic fleets, and send them on missions of conquest to foreign zones; if it is meant that we should levy tribute upon the weak in order to fill the coffers of the strong, that we must tax the humble to the extent of endurance, in order to maintain the great in the height of affluence; if it is meant that farmer, mechanic, and tradesman must be burdened in order to build up and maintain a horde of govenors and proconsuls, and commissioners; if it is meant that we must monopolize the commerce of the world at the point of the sword and the mouth of the cannon; that we must "bestride this narrow world like a Colossus while petty nations peep about beneath our huge legs to find themselves dishonorable graves," then, sir, I raise my provincial voice against my country's ever becoming such a world power as that.

But if it is meant that we should lead the van of civilization in the industrial arts and sciences; that by the energy and enterprise of American merchant and manufacturer our products shall find a market in every zone; if it is meant that our Government is secure from internal strife and commotion, because resting upon the foundation of contented homes of 80,000,000 people; if it is meant that we have builded here a republic in which equality before the law is the first principle; that we must set the example and lead the way into that perfect system of self-government wherein all the nations of earth may follow, and, ridding themselves of kingcraft and tyranny, enter into the blessings of a true republic, then I call the battle on and God speed the day.

I do not conceive that a nation's greatness consists in the strength of her standing armies and in the great fleets she sends to the seas, in the millions hoarded in her treasury vaults, and in great officials, surrounded by pomp and pageantry, sent to foreign shores to hold the reins and guide the destinies of inferior people. I am among those who still believe that our forefathers, who had lately suffered the evils of intolerable government, had the true idea of national greatness. True then, truer now. They regarded that nation greatest that guaranteed the greatest measure of individual liberty consistent with the good of the state. They believed in preserving the equality of the citizen, and boasted that every man was a sovereign. They believed that the security of the state rested in the happiness and contentment that broke in sunshine about the home of the citizen. That a people who loved their country and shared equally in the burdens and blessings of state could be relied upon in an hour of national peril to rally to her defense and destroy her foes. They had read the history of the nations, and they believed that standing armies were a menace to the liberties of a republic.

These simple principles were the foundations upon which the Republic was builded, and when they were made good by the war of independence they shook every throne on earth. They aroused a revolution in France, and they made a Republic of Brazil. Never in the history of the world did a nation spring with such sudden grandeur from lowliness to might, from weakness unto strength. In less than a century this lusty young Republic marched, the peer of any, among the galaxy of nations; and whenever and wherever the hour of her trial came she measured up to the fullest standard of national greatness. And, sir, to those who can find no measure of a nation's greatness but the rule of barter and trade, although the spirit of commercial greed had not overshadowed every other branch of honest industry and claimed for itself the first favors of government, as it seems to have done in those days, it did sustain a healthy relation to the general development of the country, and the product of American industry and American genius and skill were fast finding their way into every port of trade and mart of commerce on earth.

And let me say here that a nation's permanent commercial success is due to the industry and genius of her people and the resources wrapped in her soil more than in all protective statutes that can be enacted and armies and navies that can be mustered. It is a law of nature against which artificial conditions can not prevail. It is just as certain, sir, that in due season and without protective tariffs and subsidies for ships, and navies and armies, and "spheres of influence," this nation, backed by the enterprise and spirit of her people and the fields and forests and mines that rest on her bosom, should gain the commercial supremacy of this world as it is that the earth should bud and blossom and bear fruit in the warmth of the summer's sun. I have confidence in the American. I believe that he is the greatest and grandest among the tribes of men. He needs nor asks no unfair advantage in the battle of life. He wants no vassal nations to plunder. Guard his individual rights, preserve inviolate the Constitution of his country, stand by the creed of his fathers and he will lead the van of civilization and sway the scepter of commercial supremacy.

A few years ago, when the Democratic party began to cry out against the imperialistic tendencies so suddenly developed in the administration of this Government's affairs, the idea was laughed to scorn or met with indignant denial. And gentlemen are unwilling to admit that they have veered the course of this Government to an alarming extent in the direction of imperialism. But on all sides the advocates of the policy are beginning to defend their position by arguments in substance to the effect that the rugged constitutional structure of a republic is behind the times and must be remodeled to come up to the demands of the hour. It is vaguely hinted that the common people are not capable of self-government after all. Magazines and periodicals are filled with articles describing the beauties of foreign possessions—the wonderful accomplishments of empires in colonizing the world and reaping rich harvests from the government of inferior people. Large appropriations of the people's money are asked for the subjugation of distant races and to send representatives of the American people to make obeisance at the crowning of kings. Things are advocated and done to-day that ten years ago would have meant the destruction of any political party that stood for them, and now he who lifts his voice against them is charged with lack of patriotism and proper conception of the dignity and greatness of his country. It is but a verification of the truth that—

> Vice is a monster of so frightful mien,
> As to be hated needs but to be seen;
> Yet seen too oft, familiar with her face,
> We first endure, then pity, then embrace.

Mr. Chairman, of all men I despise the demagogue most. I believe that our country more than once has been led wrong by want of courage upon the part of those whom the people trusted and looked to lead them right. I do not believe in the abuse of the rich to inflame the poor, or in decrying the great to court the applause of the low. But it has come to the point that no man can lift his voice against the high-handed policy recently inaugurated without being exposed to the charge of being a demagogue. I do not believe in a niggardly administration of the affairs of my country. I believe in maintaining the highest dignity among nations. But I do not forget that ours is a peculiar province. We entered the arena of nations not for conquest and plunder, but to make good the equality of all before the law and to see that a representative government does not perish from the earth.

But gentlemen say there is no cause for alarm. Sir, I do not contend that national destruction is an immediate and impending calamity. I know the exhaustless resources of this great country. I know that the people are long suffering and slow to provoke to wrath. Most of them who have the necessities and a few of the comforts of life rely upon the patriotism and wisdom of their rulers, and give little heed to the drift of public affairs. It may take years, perhaps a generation, for the present course of events to culminate in revolution, but "after us the deluge."

To him who has read history the signs are unmistakable. There are certain well-defined principles from which the course of a nation may be determined with as much certainty as the mariner can determine the course of his bark by the observation of the stars. The mathematician, given the variations of certain lines, can tell with exactness the point of intersection. So the statesman, if the outcome of present policies does not belie the unbroken record of the past, can see with clearness that the "meteor of conquest has already allured us too far."

Show me a nation in which the people forget the lessons of their ancestors and squander the heritage so dearly bought and so proudly possessed by them; show me a nation in which the military spirit predominates and overshadows the majesty of civil institutions, a nation in which gigantic combinations of wealth boldly demand and receive special privileges at the hands of the state, a nation that withholds her sympathy from those struggling to maintain a republic and prides herself upon following in the wake and practicing the methods of empires and kingdoms, a nation that hearkens not to the rights and liberties of others—and I will show you a nation in which the liberties of her own people are inclining to their fall. When it was said that standing armies were a menace to the liberties of a republic a truth was uttered based upon the universal verdict of history. There is something in the clarion voice of war that warps the soul of man. Tales of conquest and glory beyond the seas fall upon the human ears like the song of a siren.

The human heart leaps to the wild music and hoarse cadence of battle. The noble, the brave, and the true flock to the red throne of war. Young manhood rushes from field and forge to march to the stirring strains of fife and drum. It is sweet and glorious to die for one's country; and be it said to the eternal honor and glory of American arms that from the general in command to the humblest soldier in the ranks none have ever paused to question or parley. With them it was not a question of right or wrong. It was "the duty of a soldier to answer and to die." My voice and vote shall never be withheld when it is needed to support or maintain them while they fight the battle of my country; but, sir, that voice and that vote shall never be lent to the cause of those who, under the guise of making provisions for the comfort and maintenance of the Army, are compelling those brave soldiers to cross the seas, thousands of miles from their homes, and wage a cruel war against a defenseless people in the interest of a cold and selfish commercialism and commit my country to a policy that has disgraced the annals of a hundred nations before her.

When I reflect, sir, upon the untold millions that are being poured out in this unhallowed and purposeless strife, and think what magnificent things might be accomplished by the proper expenditures of the same means at home, I am profoundly astonished that any should insist upon it. The arid lands of the West could be redeemed, the canal could be dug, rivers and harbors could be opened, public buildings erected, and thousands now idle and helpless could be given profitable employment, and this all without any question of national honor or the sacrifice of a single life. I think, sir, of what could be done in my own country, with her vast primeval forests, her broad, deep rivers, and her fields of snow-white cotton, her beds of coal and mineral, her fertile valleys and towering mountains. With these rivers open to navigation and these resources brought in touch with some of the millions going to maintain the mercenary strife, a throne of commercial empire would spring up on the banks of the Mississippi and the Arkansas that would bring beneath its peaceful sway more weal and wealth than can be gathered from the sunburnt Orient in a thousand years. And better, sir, it would bring a community of interest and a better understanding between North and South and East and West. The dark shadows of sectionalism would fade away in the bright light of peace and prosperity.

Unjust aspersion and cruel criticism would give way to genuine assistance and kindly sympathy. Embarrassing and vexatious questions, which have harassed and annoyed this nation for half a century, would find their happy solution in the common interest of all. Let us give up this wild dream of conquest; let these people who have been under the hard hand of the oppressor for over three hundred years feel for once the thrill of freedom in their hearts; let them catch the vision of their own flag floating to the breeze. They welcomed the coming of our ships to their shores as the dawning of national independence. Shall we make it an eternal night of warfare and bondage? Let us do what we could have done the first day we went into their harbor—plant the standard of this Republic upon some vantage ground from which we can control our share of the vast commerce of which we hear so much, and let us also be the guardians of the liberties we have conferred upon these people, and by the gentle arts of peace and contact with civilization lead them into a higher order of life and national independence. Let Cuba and Porto Rico join the sisterhood of States at the earliest moment consistent with the wishes of their people and the interest of good government, and we shall have practiced in spirit what we preach in letter and kept, to our honor, the hallowed faith of our fathers. [Loud applause.]

Mr. SHERMAN. I yield thirty minutes to the gentleman from Utah [Mr. SUTHERLAND].

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. Chairman, I do not desire to take advantage of the latitude allowed in this general debate to discuss questions which are entirely foreign to the bill under consideration, but I desire to make some observations upon a subject which is intimately connected with the matter which we are presumed to be considering. The President in his recent message makes use of this language:

> In my judgment the time has arrived when we should definitely make up our minds to recognize the Indian as an individual and not as a member of a tribe. The general allotment act is a mighty pulverizing engine to break up the tribal mass. It acts directly upon the family and the individual. Under its provisions some 60,000 Indians have already become citizens of the United States. We should now break up the tribal funds, doing for them what allotment does for the tribal lands—that is, they should be divided into individual holdings. There will be a transition period, during which the funds will in many cases have to be held in trust. This is the case also with the lands. A stop should be put upon the indiscriminate permission to Indians to lease their allotments. The effort should be steadily to make the Indian work like any other man on his own ground.

Further along he says:

> The ration system, which is merely the corral and the reservation system, is highly detrimental to the Indians. It promotes beggary, perpetuates pauperism, and stifles industry. It is an effectual barrier to progress. It must continue to a greater or less degree as long as tribes are herded on reservations and have everything in common. The Indian should be treated as an individual—like the white man.

If the Indian is to be recognized as an individual, and not as a member of a tribe, then the time has come when we must enter upon the work of breaking up the great Indian reservations, so that they may be settled by the home seekers of this country and the Indians be compelled to take allotments of land in severalty. There is nothing, in my judgment, which fosters and tends to perpetuate the tribal relations so much as the holding of these vast, unbroken areas of the public domain by these Indians in their tribal capacity.

But under the leasing system, which was inaugurated by the act of Congress of March 28, 1891, and as that act has been interpreted and stretched and construed by the Indian Department, the Indians have been so worked upon by their own cupidity and by the efforts of individuals who have procured or who are seeking to procure leases of Indian lands that it has become almost impossible to obtain their consent to the further opening of the reservations.

The Indian policy of this Government is one which has changed from time to time. It has been a matter of evolution. We began by treating the Indians substantially as belonging to a sovereign body with whom we treated. That was the idea of William Penn when he treated with the Indians, and was the principle upon which the colonies proceeded and the principle upon which the Government of the United States proceeded until 1871.

In 1871, however, Congress repealed the treaty-making system, and at that time declared that no more treaties should be made with the Indians. Since that time we have been making agreements with them, and to-day, instead of treating with the Indians as belonging to sovereign nations, we deal with them as wards of the Government. Now, the question is whether or not we can consistently and legally open these reservations to settlement without procuring the consent of the Indians thereto.

Before I discuss that, however, I want to speak a moment or two with reference to the leasing question and its effect upon the Indians in the way of retarding efforts to procure their consent to the opening of their reservations. Gentlemen will know that in 1891 we passed an act which provides for the allotment of lands to the Indians in severalty. That act contains a proviso to the effect that when Indians are in the occupancy of lands which they have "bought and paid for" these lands may be leased by consent of the council representing the Indians, and under such regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe.

It seems to me that that act was originally a very plain one and that there could be no doubt as to exactly what was intended by Congress. Let me refer briefly to what led to the passage of it.

As early as 1884 or 1885 there was considerable agitation in this country upon the question of the leasing of Indian lands to the cattlemen by the Cherokees and the Creeks and other Indians inhabiting the Indian Territory.

Many of these Indians held their lands by patent, in fee simple, and they thought that it was not right that their lands should be tied up and they receive no benefit from them in the way of revenue. So that the chiefs and headmen, speaking for the Indians, undertook to lease them. The matter was called to the attention of the Government, and the question was referred to the then Attorney-General of the United States, Mr. Garland, who rendered an opinion that under the sweeping provisions of section 2116, Revised Statutes of the United States, those leases were absolutely void, wholly irrespective of the question of title.

But the Indians continued to lease their lands, and finally, in 1890, the situation became acute, and the President of the United States, Mr. Harrison, was appealed to. He submitted the same question to the Attorney-General, Mr. Miller, who came to the same conclusion that his predecessor had arrived at, namely, that the leases were absolutely void.

President Harrison then issued a proclamation declaring the leases void, and ordered the cattlemen to remove their cattle from the lands within sixty days, or at any rate on or prior to the 1st day of October succeeding, in 1890. At that time there was pending in Congress this bill providing for the allotment of lands to the Indians in severalty.

The original provision of the bill was that "Indian lands" that were not intended for individual allotment might be leased. The bill in that form passed the Senate; it came to the House, and it passed the House in that form. Some amendments were made, and the matter was sent to a conference committee of the House and Senate, and when the bill came from conference it contained the proviso that I have called attention to, striking out the language that "Indian lands" might be leased, and containing the provision that only such lands as had been "bought and paid for" by the Indians should be leased.

Now, the Indian Department has construed that language so that it substantially applies to every Indian reservation. They say these reservations have been created by carving out of the large body of Indian lands the small bodies which have been erected into reservations, and the Indians have given up the larger body of land for the smaller bodies of land, and have thereby acquired a superior right which, within the meaning of the act, has been "bought and paid for."

Nearly all the Indian reservations have been thus created. Originally the Indians are found maintaining a roving occupancy of vast tracts of land. A treaty is made with them by which they cede to the Government whatever rights they have or claim to have in these lands, reserving from the cession smaller tracts for their future use and occupation, in language more or less comprehensive, and these tracts thereupon become the so-called Indian reservations. Now, it is perfectly clear that no additional title is conferred upon the Indians by these reservations. The effect plainly is simply to exclude the lands so reserved from the effect of the cession and to reserve them for another purpose, leaving the title as it stood before the cession. Such is the clear meaning of the word "reserved" itself, and such is the view of the courts that have passed upon the question, as I shall show in a moment.

That legislative grants are construed most strongly against the grantee is a rule well settled by the authorities, and that this rule applies to reservations claimed under Indian treaties is equally well settled. The Interior Department, with an apparent striving after an extension of its own power and jurisdiction, has ignored this plain rule, and instead of giving these treaties the restricted interpretation demanded by an adherence to this fundamental rule has given them an extended construction wholly unwarranted by any principle of law.

Now, it seems to me that when we come to consider this rule and the history that I have briefly referred to which led to the passage of the act, we must come to the conclusion that the Indian Department is mistaken in its construction of the law. The language is "land which has been bought and paid for."

The expression appears to have been deliberately and carefully chosen. It is not "lands bought by the Indians" or "lands paid for by the Indians" or even lands "owned by the Indians," which might have been interpreted to include the Indian title by occupancy, but it is "lands bought and paid for." It clearly implies a transaction by which there has been an actual sale by one, an actual purchase by another, and anactual payment by the latter.

Congress, it seems to me, undoubtedly had in mind that class of lands such as were in the Indian Territory, and perhaps elsewhere, that by a bargain and sale transaction, with the Government upon one side and the Indians upon the other, had actually been sold to the Indians and for which the Indians had paid. There were quantities of land to which they held title by actual payment of money. This is the case in many instances with reference to Indians in the Indian Territory.

Congress evidently considered that as to such lands, not merely reserved, but actually paid for and held by fee-simple title, it was unjust that the Indians should not be authorized to deal with them in such a way as to make them financially beneficial. But a general leasing system of all Indian lands—including mineral lands of unknown richness—bringing with it the scandals, the Congressional investigations, the opportunities for jobs and imposition upon the Indians by unscrupulous speculators and adventurers which would go with it, was never dreamed of. If it had been, the provision in question would not have received a vote in either House.

The effect of this interpretation by the Indian Office has been to make the Indian a landed proprietor. He is getting a revenue from these reservations, which were never intended to come within the operation of the law, with no effort upon his own part. He is worked upon by the individuals procuring the leases from the Indians in such a way that he now refuses to give his consent to open the reservations.

The question is whether or not the Indian is to be left in his tribal relations forever, or whether we shall adopt some other means of opening the reservations. I have introduced in the House at this session a bill which provides for the opening of the Uintah Reservation in Utah, and I take that as an example of many other reservations.

That bill, in substance, provides that the Secretary of the Interior, within six months after its passage, shall cause each of the Indians residing on the reservation to make a selection of 160 acres of land if he is the head of a family and 80 acres if he is not, which shall thereupon be allotted to him and thereafter held by him in severalty, and that following that the remainder of the reservation lands shall be thrown open to settlement under the homestead law, except that the land shall be paid for at the rate of $1.25 an acre and the funds realized from the sale of these lands, together with the funds realized from the sale of mineral lands, shall be turned into the Treasury of the United States and draw interest at the rate of 4 per cent, and the interest and principal of the fund shall be invested under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior for the benefit of these Indians.

There is no provision for obtaining the consent of the Indians.

Now, it seems clear that some such method as that must be devised in order that the recommendations of the President in his message, to which I have called attention, may be carried out. It seems to me that ample justification might be found for adopting that method in the idea that I first adverted to, that we had come to look upon the Indian as the ward of the Government.

We may deal with his lands and his possessions and dispose of them precisely, it seems to me, as a court of equity may deal with and dispose of the lands of an infant or an incompetent person, being careful of course at all times that no injustice be done to the Indian. In a bill such as I have introduced, following a policy of that kind, no injustice would be done to these Indians, and unless some method of that kind be adopted this reservation must remain forever, or at least for many, many years, entirely closed to settlement by the whites.

The courts of the United States have repeatedly held that the mere fact of the carving out from the body of the public lands of an Indian reservation, calling it such, providing that it shall be occupied as a permanent home by the Indians, does not in any manner change the title. The Indians have their right of occupancy, but nothing more. I want to call attention to one or two cases which hold this doctrine. I will refer first to the case of Godfrey v. Beardsley (2 McLean, 412). In that case it was decided that—

An Indian treaty which cedes lands within certain boundaries, reserving certain parts, does in no respect change as to such parts the original right; but that if a treaty declares there shall be granted certain tracts designated, to certain persons, and in the same article these are referred to as grants, they are held to operate as such.

And the court makes use of this language:

The Indian right is that of occupancy, and until this right shall be extinguished by purchase no possession adverse to it can be taken. It is admitted that the mere reservation of the Indian right to a certain part of the described boundaries leaves the right reserved, as it stood before the cession.

Again, in the case of Goodfellow v. Muckey (1 McCreary, 238), the circuit court of the United States came to the same conclusion. In the course of the opinion upon that subject, it is said:

As a rule legislative grants must be interpreted, if practicable, so as to effect the intention of the grantor, but if the words are ambiguous the true rule is to construe them most strongly against the grantee. (Riee v. Railroad Company, 1 Black., 363.) All grants of this description are strictly construed against the grantee. Nothing passes but what is conveyed in clear and explicit language. (Railroad Company v. Litchfield, 23 How., 66.) This rule of construction may very properly be applied to grants and reservations claimed under Indian treaties.

It has been the policy of the Government in treating with Indian tribes to reserve from the public domain tracts of land for the use and occupation of the Indian tribes and to limit them to such reservations. The right of the Indians to have and occupy these lands for themselves and their families has been granted in language more or less comprehensive, but always evincing the purpose on the part of the General Government to limit the Indian title to the use and occupation of the land.

In some instances their lands have been patented to them in fee simple so long as they should exist as a nation and remain on the land. Such were the provisions of the treaties with the Senecas and Shawnees made in 1861 (7 U. S. Stats., 349, 352). In most treaties the words "set apart and reserved" are used in appropriating portions of the public lands as a home for the Indian tribes. In a treaty with the Menomonies, of Wisconsin, in 1871 (7 U. S. Stats., 342), the following language is used:

"The following-described tract of land, at present owned and occupied by the Menomonie Indians, shall be set apart and designated for their future homes."

The Supreme Court in that case held that the Indian title was in no manner changed by that very broad language. In the case of Wheeler v. Meshinggomesia (30 Indiana, 402), a treaty had been entered into with the Indians, the second article of which provided:

From the cession aforesaid the Miami tribe reserve for the band of Matosinia the following tract of land, etc.

It was claimed upon the trial that the effect of this was to vest the fee in the band of Indians mentioned. But the court said:

This position can not be maintained. The ultimate title was in the United States, with the right of occupancy in the Miama tribe of Indians. By the treaty of 1838 the Indian tribes ceded to the United States their right in certain territory named, but from this cession there was reserved by the tribe, for the band of Matosinia, the land in question. Now, the land thus reserved stood precisely as it did before the cession so far as the ultimate title was concerned. It was left subject to a future cession to the United States.

So that the point I make is that in no manner has the title to these various Indian reservations been changed. The lands upon the Indian reservations are legally as much under the control of the United States Government and as much at the disposal of the United States Government as they were before the reservations themselves were created.

Of course, questions may arise as to whether or not it is just to the Indians themselves to undertake to break up their reservations and sell them, but that is entirely aside from the legal question that is involved. If we deal with the Indians justly, if we sell their lands at a fair price, such as is provided in this bill—$1.25 an acre—and allot them lands on the reservation, so that they may have their farms and grazing lands, and cover the funds arising from the sale of lands into the United States Treasury, and give them the full benefit of that investment, it seems to me no complaint can be made on the part of the Indians themselves.

Now, there are certain reservations to which the United States has a broader title than the ones I have just been discussing, and within that class of reservations is included the reservation that is in question in the bill that I have adverted to, the Uintah Reservation, situated in the State of Utah. Prior to the Mexican cession that was Mexican territory. The Mexican Government recognized no title whatever in the Indians, except those Indians who were gather together in pueblos, who had actually settled on definite tracts of land. The Mexican Government recognized no title whatever in the wandering tribes of Indians, the so-called "blanket" Indians, who roamed to and fro in this vast territory.

Now, the rule is well settled that where one country acquires territory from another, either by conquest or by purchase, it takes exactly the title which the latter country has. So that when the United States acquired this Mexican territory by the treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo, they acquired exactly the title which Mexico had, and the Government of Mexico recognized no title in the Indians, and the Indians had no title to the lands.

It is true the Government has at various times made treaties with these former subjects of Mexico, but it has not been done in recognition of any title. It has been done by way of obtaining peace. It has been done to avoid disastrous conflicts, because the United States considered that it was very much easier to make a treaty with the Indians than it was to fight them.

Those treaties were made at a time when the Indians in that section of the country were numerically strong and the whites were not; and, as I say, the Government simply considered that it was less expensive and infinitely better for the people of the United States that they should treat with the Indians for their fancied right to the lands than that they should go to war with them.

But time and time again in that section of the country the United States has disposed of the lands over which the Indians theretofore roamed, and to which they had as much claim as they have to these reservations, without consulting the Indians at all. That was the case with reference to the public domain in the State of Utah prior to the creation of this Uintah Reservation. A number of the Indians had settled in four different so-called reservations—one called the Corn Creek Reservation, another the San-pete Reservation. another the Deep Creek Reservation, and a fourth the Spanish Fork Reservation.

Now, by the act of May 5, 1864, by which the Uinta Reservation is created, it is provided that those reservations shall be appraised and sold to the highest bidder, and the consent of the Indians is not asked or obtained. Later, along in 1878, that provision of the law of 1865 is repealed, and the reservations are restored to the public domain, to be disposed of under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, as other public lands; and in that way the Government has disposed of these reservations.

It has disposed of the other public lands in the State of Utah, and I doubt not in other surrounding States, which were formerly a part of the Mexican territory, so that the Congress in dealing with these lands has recognized repeatedly that the Indians have no claim to them, such as was recognized to exist in the Indians settled in the Eastern States and in the Mississippi Valley.

In the case of the Uinta Reservation there is not even a treaty stipulation which creates the reservation. I am aware of the fact that the Indian Department and the supreme court of my own State have intimated that, in their opinions, this reservation was created in pursuance of the treaty made with the Utah Indians in 1849; but a moment's investigation will disclose the fallacy of that position. This treaty will be found in 9 Statutes United States, page 985. It is strictly a peace treaty. It provides for the surrender by the Indians of stolen property, the restoration of captives, and that their territorial—not reservation—boundaries shall be designated, and that when adjusted the Indians promise to confine themselves to such limits.

The Utahs consisted of numerous bands, having separate tribal organizations, under separate chiefs. They did not constitute a nation. They roamed, as the treaty indicates, over large tracts of country, having no fixed abiding places. This treaty was not made with all the Utah Indians, but with three isolated bands in New Mexico called the Mohuaches, Capotes, and Nomenuches. Not one of the tribes of Utes in Utah participated in the treaty. They knew nothing of it whatever, and the treaty has no more connection with the Uintah Reservation than the treaties made by William Penn. It has been time and again declared by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the Indian agents, in their correspondence prior to 1891, that no treaty existed with the Ute Indians of Utah, and such is the fact.

The Uinta Reservation was created by an Executive order of October 3, 1861, and by act of Congress approved May 5, 1864. This act provides that the Superintendent of Indian Affairs shall collect as many of the Indians of the Territory of Utah as he may find practicable in the Uinta Valley, which is set apart for their permanent occupation. It is not limited to the Utah Indians, which is of itself sufficient to show that it was not created in pursuance of any treaty stipulation with the Utahs, but all Indians were to be sent there—Navaho, Shoshone, Utahs, or others who were in Utah at that time. No title is conferred, no lands are described, no Indians or Indian tribes are named.

It is difficult to understand how anyone can be found who will seriously assert that an additional title has been created where there is no grant or language implying one, no lands described, and no grantee.

This reservation is subject to the absolute power of Congress. We may dispose of it as we have already disposed of other lands occupied by the Indians in Utah, with or without their consent, as we please. This bill goes beyond exact justice. It gives the Indians every dollar which may be realized from a sale of the lands. In the interest of the development of the Indians themselves, it should be enacted into law.

Now, Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that the Indian tribal system, fostered and perpetuated by the Indian reservation system, is contrary to the genius of our civilization, which is builded upon the idea of individual action and responsibility. A thousand Indians upon the Uintah reservation, controlling over 2,000,000 acres of land, stand in the way of homes and farms for 50,000 citizens of the Republic.

These Indians contribute no revenue to the Government which feeds and clothes and schools them. They pay no taxes to the State which protects them. The ordinary citizen toils every day in order that he may eat every day. These luxurious wards of ours "toil not, neither do they spin;" but they are the steadiest boarders that we have. In a nation of workers the reservation Indian is an aristocrat. He is the landed proprietor of a princely domain which he has perpetually dedicated to the solitude of the wilderness.

In my judgment, it is time we inaugurated a new policy. Open the reservations. In doing so, deal justly with the Indians—generously, if you please—but open the reservations to settlement, in order that labor may take the place of idleness, that civilization may replace barbarianism, that the hunting ground may give way to the farm, and that the desert silence may be broken by the voice of industry. [Applause].

Mr. LITTLE. I yield fifteen minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. PADGETT].

Mr. PADGETT. Mr. Chairman, there are no two questions of more vital importance to the people in their individual capacities and the body politic than the questions of taxation and commerce. The question of taxation has always been and ever will be one of deep and abiding interest to the masses of the people, for it is one that comes in close and immediate contact with them in their daily avocations. It is a question that rightfully should arouse and maintain among the people a deep solicitude, for its rightful exercise is and should be promotive of their welfare, and its perversion is easily accomplished and is fraught with much evil. Of like importance is the question of commerce, for it involves the rights of trade and traffic and the opportunities of the people to secure a livelihood and the gaining of wealth.

There are two theories or underlying principles of taxation. One theory, and the one which the Democratic party teaches and advocates, is that the power of taxation—the power which the Government possesses to take and appropriate the private property of the individual citizen—can be rightfully and properly exercised only for the purpose of raising public revenues adequate and sufficient in the exercise of legitimate Government duties and functions to meet the expenses of the Government honestly and economically administered, and when revenues sufficient for these purposes have been secured, the power of the Government to take and appropriate the private property of the individual citizen ceases and determines.

The Democratic party proclaims that the taxing power of the Government is limited to the necessities of the Government and that the exercise of the taxing power for any other or different purpose is a perversion of the power of taxation and, to the extent of such wrongful exercise, is an oppression of the people. The Democratic party is now and ever has been jealous in behalf of the masses of the individual citizenship of the country to restrict and limit the exercise of this power within its rightful and legitimate scope; has ever battled and still battles against every theory and exercise of the taxing power which seeks to use this strong arm of the Government for ends or purposes other or different than Government ends and purposes.

The other theory or underlying principle of taxation, and the one which the Republican party teaches and practices, is essentially different and distinct in its scope, intent, and purpose from the one taught by the Democracy. Judged by its declarations and by its legislation, the Republican party controverts the principle and theory of taxation as taught by the Democracy and boldly asserts that the taxing power of the Government is not limited to the necessities of a Government honestly and economically administered, but boldly asserts that the Government has the right and authority to exercise the taxing power—that is, to take and appropriate the private property of the individual citizen—for purposes other and different from raising public revenue. It proclaims that, independent of the question of public revenues, and without reference to the question of the necessities of the Government for revenue, the taxing power can and should be rightfully exercised for the purpose of promoting the private business affairs of individuals, or certain classes of individuals, whose business, in the exercise of its discretion, it wishes to foster, upbuild, and protect.

This is an issue between the two great political parties, and in its correct analysis it comes to the proposition as to whether legislation, and especially taxation, shall be exercised only for consideration of the masses, or whether the Government shall constitute itself an agency or engine to care for, protect, foster, and upbuild the private business of particular classes. Upon this issue the Democracy is proud of its position and confidently appeals to the ultimate judgment of the American people. It realizes that temporarily the power and influence of protected capital, combining in a common purpose to pervert the taxing power and secure Government aid, may obscure the judgment and thwart the real purposes of the people, but time, experience, and observation will expose and lay bare the insincerity, the perversion, and the wrongs of such legislation, and the people, realizing their situation, will rise in their might and power to make manifest their belief in the truth, the righteousness, and the justice of the legislation and political theories which have for their aims and purposes the welfare and prosperity of the masses of the people.

The Democracy believes that the legitimate purpose of government is to maintain order and administer public affairs so as to afford to all of its citizens untrammeled and unhampered opportunities in the race of life for wealth and happiness. And it spurns with indignation that political dogma which teaches that the Government has the right and authority to levy tribute upon the labor, the toil, and the production of the masses of the people and appropriate it by legislation to increase the wealth and strengthen the position and power of any particular class or classes of its citizenship.

It believes and teaches that the individual citizen is the unit in society, and that the Government, preserving order and maintaining organized society, should leave to every citizen the full measure of opportunity which his intellect, ingenuity, and skill may secure for him in the honest pursuit of wealth; and that the Government exceeds its authority and perverts the functions of government when, by the exercise of legislation, it requires one citizen to pay tribute, either of his labor or his earnings, to increase the private wealth of some other citizen. And I reaffirm that upon this issue the ultimate judgment of the American people, based upon its intelligence and conscience, will approve the Democratic doctrine.

It is our opinion that the legislation of the Republican party for the past forty years, in the exercise of the taxing power of the Government, has been subversive of every one of these fundamental principles of justice and individual right. The taxing power of the Government has, by legislation, been so manipulated and constructed that the masses of the American people have been required to pay tribute to the classes, and the production of the country has been tolled, like the miller tolls the turn of his customer, and this toll has been turned into the coffers of these classes whom the Republican party has seen fit, for political purposes, to make the favored objects of its munificent bounty. As illustrations and proof of this contention, may I cite the many colossal fortunes of amazing and incomprehensible magnitude which have been accumulated in this country within the last forty years.

I realize and fully appreciate that this is a new country of magnificent domain, of rich mines, fertile fields, and verdant forests, and that the opportunities for the accumulation and upbuilding of private fortunes is exceptional. But these conditions are not a sufficient answer or explanation of the thousands of fortunes amounting to twenty-five, fifty, seventy-five, one hundred, and in some cases as much as two hundred millions of dollars. Does any man with capacity to reason and with a sober judgment to weigh and consider believe that these great fortunes separately and collectively represent and are the results and the accumulation of honest toil and legitimate industry? I will not stop to make the effort to give some comprehension of the magnitude of a million dollars.

I believe that I will be safe in saying that to the minds of all it simply means a great sum, which we can not adequately comprehend or measure in our minds; much less can we form any intelligent or adequate conception or comprehension of the real magnitude when we speak in figures of $50,000,000 and $100,000,000. When I assert that these colossal fortunes are not the result of honest toil or legitimate industry, I do not mean to state, nor would I be understood as meaning, that necessarily the owners of these fortunes have personally been guilty of dishonest methods or practices or have resorted to personal acts of wrongdoing. But I do mean to say that the conditions and circumstances which made possible the accumulation of such fortunes within such few years have not been rightful or legitimate conditions, and that these fortunes do not represent the accumulation of legitimate labor and personal industry, but they are the results of the perversions of legislation, whereby under Republican administration the taxing power of the Government has been so manipulated and exercised in such a way as to require contributions—exorbitant contributions—from the labor, toil, and production of the masses of the people, and through these channels of legislation have been emptied into the private treasuries of these specially benefited or protected individuals and classes of Republican legislation.

There is no other sufficient or adequate explanation of these conditions, and they stand out boldly as object lessons of the practical workings and of the perversion of the taxing power of the Government under Republican administration. This explanation and solution of this state of affairs is not only the sole, sufficient, adequate, and satisfactory one, but it does not in any way disparage the individual intelligence, industry, and worth of the American citizen or discredit the matchless resources and opportunities for wealth of our magnificent country. Giving due consideration to the resources of our country and the energy, industry, and intelligence of our citizenship, our minds can not rest easily upon the conviction that fortunes of $25,000,000, $50,000,000 $100,000,000, and $200,000,000, represent the results of honest toil and legitimate industry, and are not the results of perverted legislation.

The Democratic party to-day is and always has been the true friend, admirer, and advocate of toil, intelligence, and industry; and for the accumulations of these manly virtues it cherishes a profound respect and friendship, and lends encouragement to every proper effort for their support, maintenance, and upbuilding. At the same time it protests, and will continue to protest, against all legislation which has for its purpose or its logical results the creation of conditions whereby the masses of the people are required to contribute of their labor and production to maintain and enrich particular classes and build up these unnatural and unhealthy aggregations of capital.

The Democratic party realizes that wealth in its last analysis is labor, and that the dollar of to-day represents and stands for the labor of yesterday, and wholly fails to see any distinction or essential difference in the exercise of a governmental power which can take from the citizen his dollar, which represents his labor of yesterday, and contribute it to upbuild the fortune of his neighbor and the exercise of a power of the Government, by compulsion, to require a citizen without reward to labor in the workshop of his neighbor.

We are aware that there has been a measure of success and accumulation on the part of the great mass of the people, but we assert with full confidence that the authoritative statistics will sustain the assertion that the measure of success of the masses of the people in the accumulation of wealth has been wholly inadequate and greatly less proportionate to the accumulation of the classes, and that the masses of the people have prospered, not by reason of the legislation which they have enjoyed, but in spite of it. Possessed of an intelligence, industry, and energy far above the average, living in a country comparatively new, with fertile fields, rich mines, virgin forests, the masses of the people, by their incessant toil and continued labor, have produced a mass of wealth of which the masses have enjoyed an inadequate proportion, and of which the classes, by means of Republican legislation, have received an unmerited share.

But these favorable conditions can not continue indefinitely in behalf of the masses of the people. Increase of population and exhaustion of natural resources and productiveness will increase and intensify competition and reduce profits and render success and accumulation more difficult. And the burdens of the legislation of which I complain will become more perceptible and bear more harshly upon the masses of the people, and will widen the chasm—that chasm which is, from a social and political standpoint, awful and fearful to contemplate—between wealth and poverty, and gradually eliminate the great middle class of society, which has ever been the stay and support of the social system. This condition will breed dissatisfaction and discontent with existing institutions and will not be promotive of patriotic impulses.

Let us make a brief retrospect of the history of tariff legislation and see if the criticisms which I have offered are not justified and well founded. In the first tariff law enacted by Congress, in 1790, the duties averaged about 8½ per cent ad valorem. Up to about the year 1812 the average rates on both free and dutiable goods were less than 20 per cent.

Gradual advances were made in the rate of duty until 1830, when the general average was about 45 per cent ad valorem. Then the rate began gradually to decrease, until in the year 1861 the general average was about 14 per cent ad valorem on free and dutiable goods.

The condition of the country following the war of 1812, and especially from a commercial standpoint, superinduced by the action of Great Britain, the industries of the country, especially the manufacturing industries, were in a depleted and dependent condition, and the argument was made, and with some show of force and reason, that the Government should remedy these conditions and help the struggling industries in their infancy. This was then a new and undeveloped country; there was but little wealth or money in the country; the manufacturing industries were in their infancy, without capital, without money, and without any source of supply.

Under these conditions and for the purposes suggested by them the doctrine of a tariff with incidental protection was inaugurated; but to-day, at a distance of eighty-five years from that period, with a strong and powerful nation of 75,000,000 of people, with our country developed, our manufactures no longer struggling infants, but powerful giants, with every branch of industry and manufactures become skilled and experienced, no longer paupers financially, but strong and powerful, with a collective capital amounting in the aggregate to many billions of dollars, and with a money circulation in the United States, February 1, 1902, of $2,544,446,893, we find a very different condition prevailing; and yet with these changed and favorable conditions we find a tariff tax of 50 per cent ad valorem upon dutiable goods, on a general average, but when specially examined and applied to individual articles we find many of the rates much higher.

No longer is the appeal made for protection to struggling industries in their infancy and poverty. No longer is the plea made that the Government should place its arm of support under these weak institutions and enable them to stand. These pleas have long since been discarded, and these favorites come forth and boast of their power and their strength and their magnitude. They assert not only their power and magnitude here at home, but point to their great achievements of sales in foreign lands, and by reason and virtue of their strength and power demand this Government protection, this bonus, not as a source of support, but as an element of profit. And we find the Republican party, true to its instincts and purposes of class legislation and its alliances with the rich and powerful organizations of the country, yielding to them their demands and contributing to the increase of their profits an ad valorem rate of 50 per cent on dutiable goods.

The Democratic party asserts that this is not only wrong in principle, but if there ever was a time and condition of affairs in this country which warranted such legislation, that time has passed and those conditions no longer exist, and there is to-day no necessity for the further continuance of legislation which is an oppressive burden upon the masses of the American people and a menace and a threatening danger to American commerce.

We confidently assert that there is no necessity for the further continuance of this exorbitant tariff tax, and for the proof of the correctness of this assertion we point to the $433,851,756 worth of manufactured articles exported from the United States in the year 1900. We assert that this export trade was profitable or it would not have been undertaken, and we call attention to the fact that these exports not only yielded profit to the American manufacturer, after paying cost of transportation and additional handling, but were sold in foreign countries, in the open markets of the world, entirely separate from any good influence of our tariff legislation, and in competition with the pauper labor of Europe, Asia, and Africa, that bugbear which the Republican party so much delights to hold up to frighten and intimidate the American people, and especially the American laboring man, into a support of its policy and legislation which yields tribute money to these rich and powerful classes.

Mr. Chairman, I submit to the candid and unprejudiced judgment of this House and of the country the statement that if this export business was profitable and desirable—and both of these propositions are universally admitted to be true—why is it not profitable for these manufacturers to sell their products to the American people at the same price at which they sell them to the foreigner? This proposition I respectfully invite some advocate of the opposition to answer candidly. Again, selling to the American people at the same price as to the foreigner, is not the profit greater by the amount of saving of freight and additional cost of handling?

But let us turn this proposition around, and look at it from the other side, and by so doing we will make more odious and more vicious that system of legislation which sanctions and tolerates such taxation.

It is well known that the price at which American manufactures are sold abroad is only 60 to 70 per cent of the price at which the same products are sold by the same concerns to the American people. If there be profit in the sale to the foreigner, does not the transaction dealing with the American people pass out of the domain of percentage of profit into the domain of common robbery? What reason, excuse, or justification can longer be offered for the continuance of a system of legislation which works such results upon the American people? The Democracy asserts that such a system of legislation is neither just, right, nor patriotic. It proclaims that the American people are worthy of better consideration and fairer treatment at the hands of the lawmakers, and we believe that the American citizenship will awake to a full realization of the iniquity of such legislation and will sweep it from the statute books and the public policy of the Government.

Forbearance with such conditions and such legislation has ceased to be a virtue, and virtue will be a dignified but unmistakable disapproval by the American people of a further continuance of such conditions. But this is not yet a full view of the situation. This Republican legislation has not only become no longer revenue legislation, no longer is it legitimate and proper legislation for the protection of American industries, but it has become an actual prohibition and hindrance of national and international commerce.

Around this country it has erected a mighty wall, prohibiting the legitimate commerce of the nation. It forbids the foreigner in a large measure to bring his wares and merchandise to our shores and trade and traffic with our people. For the purposes of such trade privileges he must pay such enormous and onerous duties that he finds in other lands more profitable trade. The result is that the American people are, so to speak, hemmed in, denied all choice of trade, and forced to buy of the American manufacturer at 100 cents the goods and wares which he sells to the foreigner at 60 and 70 cents. Is that patriotism? And more than this, by so doing you drove away from the American market a customer for the corn and wheat and products of field and farm of the American citizen.

Mr. Chairman, there is still another phase of this question to which I desire to invite the serious consideration of this House. That is our commercial position, from a political standpoint, relating to the world's commerce. Under the tariff policy of the Republican party—a narrow, selfish, and restrictive policy, which has had no eye of consideration for the trade and traffic of foreign nations—we find ourselves confronted with serious trade conditions. Has there been no serious suggestion? Is there no valuable lesson to be learned, and from which to derive profit, from the threatening attitude and menacing declarations of other nations regarding the narrowness and injustice of Republican national commercial policy?

What do these conditions mean? Do they mean that we can continue this policy without penalty? Do they mean that we can continue to cherish the hope of selling our products to other nations and forbidding to them a fair and reasonable opportunity to traffic with our people? Does it mean that we can continue to live and move and have our commercial being within a narrow, restricted, and selfish policy and expect the other nations of the world to extend to us a wholesome, generous welcome to their markets? It seems to me unnecessary to make answer to these questions. Their very mention suggests answers of disapproval for such policies, and demands a change of conditions.

I fully realize, Mr. Chairman, that the leaders upon the majority side of this House who control its legislation and dictate and shape the policy of Republican legislation, like Ephraim are joined to their idols, and have declared that no change should be made by this Congress in the tariff policies and legislation. Pride of opinion and elation over past successes may obscure their judgment and fortify them in their determination, but the enlightened judgment and quickened conscience of the American people will not much longer tolerate these iniquities. I am aware that this legislation of the Republican party has given a stimulus, a powerful stimulus, to the development of American manufactures.

I believe I would be justified in saying it had yielded an unnatural stimulus, and, encouraged by the fictitious profits consequent upon such legislation, an enormous amount of capital has been invested in these enterprises, and the result is that we have an immense production of manufactured products demanding exportation and sale in other countries. We even witness the condition here at home that these enterprises, springing up everywhere, with immense capital, struggling in competition with each other for self-preservation, must combine into great consolidated or trust organizations in order to continue their existence, or else, profiting by the suggestion arising from the Republican policy of shutting out competition, organize themselves into trusts for the purpose of throttling and destroying competition. Take which ever horn of the dilemma you will, there is no relief or consolation to the American consumer.

Many of the wiser and more farseeing of the Republican leaders have realized the situation to which we are brought, especially in relation to our international commerce, and they realize the direful results commercially which forebode the continuance of this policy and are trying to extricate their party and the country from the consequences thereof. Pride of opinion for their party policy and an unwillingness to acknowledge the correctness and the wisdom of the Democratic policy, when viewed from a broad and wise international statesmanship and point of view, are trying to extricate themselves from the dilemma by resorting to what they are pleased to term "reciprocity."

Reciprocity is a Democratic principle and policy. It is the underlying principle of Democratic doctrine of fair, reasonable, and just legislation, patriotic in its purpose but international in its scope, which affords reasonable opportunities for all the world to trade with us and in return to give us the right and privilege to trade with them. The Republican party are seeking to extricate themselves by appropriating Democratic doctrine and brand it with a new name. Reciprocity is a good thing as far as it goes. If good to have with one nation, why not with two? And if desirable to have congenial trade relations with two nations, why is it not desirable to have congenial trade relations with all the world? This is the Democratic doctrine and policy.

The adoption of reciprocity arrangements will to some extent relieve the congested commercial situation, the extent of the relief being measured by the extent of the reciprocal arrangements effected. It would be wiser and we think a better solution to so revise the tariff legislation as to eliminate the unjust and oppressive features of the existing tariff system; but as there is a fixed purpose on the part of the Republican leaders to refuse such relief, it will be well through the medium of reciprocity negotiations, authorized and adopted by the Congress, to incorporate into our tariff system and legislation as large a measure of Democratic doctrine and theory as possible.

In discussing this question it is well to bear in mind the following propositions, which I believe are clearly evident and will not be seriously controverted:

First. The Government necessities no longer require the continuance of these high and excessive tariff rates for revenue purposes. The Treasury of the Government is overflowing with money. The recent statement issued from the Treasury Department shows about $550,000,000 in gold in the Treasury, and the last report of the honorable Secretary of the Treasury shows an excess of revenue over disbursements of about $100,000,000 a year, notwithstanding the enormous expenditures and extravagances of the Administration in carrying on the war against the Filipinos and maintaining a costly and unnecessary civil establishment of officeholders in the Philippine Islands and in the home Government. Notwithstanding these enormous expenditures and extravagances, the question which presents itself and is demanding urgent consideration is how to reduce the revenue.

Second. It is evident to every unprejudiced mind that it is no longer necessary to continue this excessive tariff taxation for the purpose of protecting and maintaining against foreign competition. Whenever it is admitted that American industries can carry their products across the seas and sell them in foreign lands in successful competition with the home product, manufactured by the so-called pauper labor of such foreign countries, the admission goes with it that the American industries can sell their products profitably to the American people at the same price and that an artificial stimulus and support are no longer needed for their maintenance.

As before stated, the amount of manufactured products sold abroad in the year 1900 was more than $433,850,000. The statisticians and writers upon commercial geography place the ratio of domestic and foreign commerce which goes into utilization or consumption at a proportion of from 12 to 1 to as high as 20 to 1. The best authorities and the consensus of opinion place the ratio at about 15 to 1, but for the purposes of this illustration let us adopt the low basis of 10 to 1, and upon this basis the amount of manufactured products consumed by the American people in the year 1900 would be of the enormous value of $4,338,500,000.

It is further apparent that these are very conservative figures when we remember that the census of 1900 places the value of manufactured products in the United States in the year 1900 at more than $13,000,000,000, excluding from said estimate the production of all establishments with a yearly output of less than $500. Assuming that the price at which the goods are sold to the American people is only 30 cents in the dollar more than the foreign price, it will be seen that more than $1,300,000,000 per annum, by this system of legislation, over and above legitimate profits is legislated from the masses of the people, and especially the laboring classes, into the coffers of these protected classes. Is it any wonder that under such legislation and such manipulation of the taxing power we have seen the number of millionaires increase by the thousand, and the magnitude of their estates multiply by the hundred?

Third. It is manifest and universally admitted that we need and must have the markets of the world in which to sell our surplus products if we are to avoid a commercial crisis and disaster. Can such markets be secured so long as the Republican tariff policy and legislation continues? Does any reasonable man believe it? What mean the mutterings and the threats of commercial combinations and antagonisms and retaliatory legislation we hear coming from Germany and Russia and the other powers of Europe? Are these things meaningless? Is there no significance to them? Nay, verily, we believe it is the part of wisdom that the Congress of the United States should place its commerce upon the foundation of broad, humane, statesmanlike international foundations.

I stated before that some of the wiser and more farseeing of the Republican leaders had realized the straits and rocks into which the further continuance of the Republican policy would lead the commerce and business interests of this country. I call your attention to the following declaration of the late President McKinley, taken from his fourth annual message, 1900:

The policy of reciprocity so manifestly rests upon the principles of international equity, and has been so repeatedly approved by the people of the United States, that there ought to be no hesitation in either branch of the Congress in giving to it full effect.

Again I call your attention to his language and warning, taken from his Buffalo speech in 1901:

The period of exclusiveness is past. The expansion of our trade and commerce is the pressing problem. Commercial wars are unprofitable. A policy of good will and friendly trade relations will prevent reprisals. Reciprocity treaties are in harmony with the spirit of the times; measures of retaliation are not.

I invite your attention to the language and wisdom of President Roosevelt, taken from his Minneapolis address:

Through treaty or by direct legislation it may, at least in certain cases, become advantageous to supplement our present policy by a system of reciprocal benefit and obligation. We must remember, in dealing with other nations, that benefits must be given when benefits are sought.

Again I invite your attention to the recommendations of President Arthur in his annual message, 1884:

A series of reciprocal treaties with the countries of America which shall foster between us and them an unhampered movement of trade. The conditions of these treaties should be the free admission of such merchandise as this country does not produce, in return for the admission free, or under a favored scheme of duties, of our own products. * * *

It is by no means desirable, however, that the policy under discussion should be applied to these countries alone. The healthful enlargement of our trade with Europe, Asia, and Africa should be sought by reducing tariff burdens on such of their wares as neither we nor the other American states are fitted to produce, thus enabling ourselves to obtain in return a better market for our supplies of food, of raw material, and of the manufactures in which we excel.

It seems to me that many of the embarrassing elements in the great national conflict between protection and free trade may thus be turned to good account; that the revenue may be reduced so as no longer to overtax the people; that protective duties may be retained without becoming burdensome; that our shipping interests may be judiciously encouraged, * * * and above all such a unity of interests established among the States of the American system as will be of great and ever-increasing advantage to them all.

The broad principle of reciprocity, which has come under discussion in recent years, in which we make concessions in tariff duties on goods imported from another country in return for like concessions on the part of the other party to the treaty, was first enunciated by Thomas Jefferson. In 1791, while Mr. Jefferson was Secretary of State in Washington's Cabinet, the Congress, by a resolution, asked his advice as to means for promoting the commerce of the United States with other countries. In his report Mr. Jefferson said:

As to commerce, two methods occur: First, by friendly arrangements with the several nations with whom these restrictions exist; or, second, by the separate act of our own legislature for countervailing their efforts. There can be no doubt but that, of these two, friendly arrangement is the most eligible.

* * * * * * *

Some nations, not yet ripe for free commerce in all its extent, might still be willing to modify its restrictions and regulations for us in proportion to the advantages which an intercourse with us might offer. Particularly they may concur with us in reciprocating the duties to be levied on each side, or in compensating any excess of duty by equivalent advantages of another nature.

Having shown that the doctrine of reciprocity is a Democratic doctrine and rests and is grounded upon the great underlying Democratic principles and theories of legislation, and that it has received the approval of Republican leaders, I wish to invite your attention to the consideration of the proposition that whenever and wherever these principles have been practiced, and our commerce has rested upon wise legislation, granting fair and just tariff rates, that the trade and commerce of the United States has greatly increased in volume and value. There existed with Cuba a reciprocity treaty from 1891 to 1894. I invite your attention to the following statistics:

Reciprocity with Cuba, 1891-1894.

Year.	Total exports to Cuba of domestic use.	Wheat flour.		Corn.
		Barrels.	Value.	Bushels.	Value.
1891	$12,224,888	114,447	$591,886	367,324	$220,187
1892	17,953,570	386,175	1,826,348	627,177	369,131
1893	24,157,698	616,406	2,821,557	1,041,474	582,050
1894	20,125,321	662,248	2,473,805	1,136,657	571,326
1895	12,807,661	379,856	1,301,079	392,204	216,602
1896	7,530,880	176,724	647,057	199,193	93,201

Year.	Beef products.	Bacon.	Hams.	Salt pork.	Lard.	Potatoes.
1891	$11,760	$351,955	$234,458	$33,315	$2,079,534	$168,354
1892	71,939	453,624	529,328	43,911	2,974,545	228,079
1893	89,460	556,747	761,082	59,276	4,023,917	554,153
1894	75,529	532,035	668,959	52,333	3,625,545	496,875
1895	43,069	390,454	420,215	32,586	2,209,067	274,853
1896	52,982	386,475	348,065	10,286	1,551,185	217,315

I further invite attention to the following table of statistics of the exports from the United States to Cuba of manufactured products during the treaty period:

Exports from United States to Cuba.

	1891.	1892.	1893.	1894.	1895.
Agricultural implements	$55,618	$84,442	$130,341	$118,354	$38,461
Breadstuffs	1,004,535	2,436,850	3,588,837	3,203,885	1,673,655
Carriages and vehicles	166,890	270,276	316,045	261,175	147,740
Cotton	101,800	114,112	148,178	120,183	67,441
Fibers	279,190	235,660	76,478	66,321	30,495
Iron and steel (bars, rods, sheets, plates, wire, and casting)	260,490	257,280	809,807	835,300	256,197
Builders' hardware	174,620	294,490	395,964	246,142	160,623
Machinery, printing presses, locomotive and stationary engines, sewing machines, boilers, and not otherwise specified	1,915,906	3,023,181	3,776,527	2,319,324	1,666,832
Nails and spikes	40,070	48,716	127,582	129,370	40,830
Tools	107,291	130,393	243,544	192,578	97,369
All other manufactured iron and steel	573,851	600,203	1,255,139	885,151	455,169
Leather, raw and manufactured	172,813	277,386	181,476	144,467	99,618
Provisions, canned meats, smoked meats, butter, cheese, and lard	2,787,337	4,203,955	5,700,195	5,134,560	3,240,255
Lumber	740,467	932,496	1,299,271	1,097,381	509,307
Furniture, wooden ware, etc	329,783	446,507	445,462	390,791	206,934
Total	8,710,661	13,355,947	18,494,846	15,144,982	8,690,926

A reciprocity treaty was negotiated with Hawaii in 1876, and continued in force until 1898. I submit some statistics, beginning with the year 1874 and ending with 1900, which show that during this treaty period when our high tariff rates were removed our exports to the island increased nearly tenfold:

Results of Hawaiian treaty.

Fiscal year.	Imports into United States from Hawaiian Islands.	Exports from United States to Hawaiian Islands.
1874	$1,016,952	$614,628
1875	1,373,681	662,164
1876	1,227,191	779,257
1877	2,550,335	1,272,949
1878	2,678,830	1,736,099
1879	3,257,938	2,374,918
1880	4,606,444	2,086,170
1885	8,857,497	2,787,922
1890	12,313,908	4,711,417
1895	7,888,961	3,723,057
1896	11,757,704	3,985,707
1897	13,687,799	4,690,075
1898	17,187,380	5,907,155
1899	17,831,463	9,305,470
1900	20,707,903	13,509,148

There also existed treaties with Brazil and Germany during these same years.

The trade with Brazil during these years also shows a substantial increase, being:

	Barrels.		Barrels.
1891	722,367	1893	837,639
1892	918,447	1894	920,869

While our shipments to Germany show a still larger percentage of increase, being:

	Barrels.		Barrels.
1891	8,864	1893	209,719
1892	54,277	1894	286,229

Mr. Chairman, I wish to call attention to the fact, and to emphasize it, that while there has been an increase in the volume of our export trade, such increase has been made up largely of manufactured products, and there has been but very little increase in the volume and value of the agricultural products of the country since 1881. Fifty-eight per cent of the increase of our export trade was composed of manufactured products, while the increase in the exports of leading agricultural products from 1881 to 1900 was less than 6 per cent. I submit for consideration the following table of statistics for the years 1881, 1891, and 1900 of some of the leading agricultural products:

Articles.	1881.	1891.	1900.
Sheep	$762,932	$261,109	$733,477
Hogs	572,138	1,146,630	394,813
Cattle	14,304,103	30,445,249	30,635,153
Bacon and hams	61,161,205	45,650,674	59,362,282
Dairy products	22,775,742	9,863,780	9,226,520
Breadstuffs	270,532,519	128,121,656	232,744,078

Mr. Chairman, let us make a brief review of the commerce of the world and compare the commerce of the United States with the commerce of the other leading nations of the world in the great markets of other nations.

The exports of manufactured goods from Great Britain to France in 1897 were $43,000,000; exports of manufactured goods from Germany to France in 1897 were $31,000,000; exports from the United States of manufactured goods to France in 1897 were $4,000,000.

I submit a comparative statement of statistics furnished me by the Bureau of Statistics of the Treasury Department of the commerce of the world and the share of the United States therein:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF STATISTICS,
Washington, February 6, 1902.

The imports into the various grand divisions, and share supplied by the United States, was as follows:

Country.	Total imports.	Amount from United States.	Per cent from United States.
Asia	$725,083,093	$53,291,278	7.35
Oceania	398,078,981	38,957,177	9.79
Africa	197,226,959	13,879,153	7.04
Europe	8,005,200,513	1,346,790,901	16.82
North America	377,733,117	199,331,780	52.77
South America	359,679,426	39,208,741	10.90
Total	10,063,002,089	1,691,459,033	16.81

O. P. AUSTIN, Chief of Bureau.

Imports into the United Kingdom.

From United States	$675,417,939
From Germany	151,745,583
From France	260,935,189
From other countries	1,457,446,570
Total	2,545,545,281

United States equals 26.2 per cent.

Imports into the United States.

From United Kingdom	$143,388,501
From Germany	100,445,902
From France	75,458,739
From other countries	503,879,023
Total	823,172,165

Imports into Germany.

From United Kingdom	$171,167,000
From United States	238,858,000
From France	72,011,000
From other countries	890,180,000
Total	1,372,216,000

United States equals 17.4 per cent.

Imports into France.

From United Kingdom	$130,319,000
From United States	98,339,000
From Germany	82,407,000
From other countries	595,611,000
Total	906,676,000

United States equals 10.8 per cent.

Exports of domestic merchandise to China, Hongkong, Straits Settlements, British India, Japan, and Australasia.

From United Kingdom	$417,988,553
From United States	74,094,131
From Germany	57,355,000
From France	11,666,000
Total	561,053,684

United States equals 13.2 per cent.

Mr. Chairman, we often allow the magnitude and extent of our country and our large population to give us erroneous and misleading ideas of the foreign commerce of the United States. We have become so accustomed to speak flatteringly of ourselves as the greatest of commercial nations that we fail properly to compare our foreign commerce with that of other nations. I submit for consideration some estimates based on a per capita comparison, and on such a basis it will be seen that the United States stood No. 10 in the list of nations.

Foreign commerce per capita based on statistics of 1898-99.

Netherlands	$258.18
Switzerland	117.55
Belgium	100.07
Great Britain	98.78
Denmark	92.17
Canada	60.76
Sweden and Norway	43.57
France	43.21
Germany	42.02
United States	27.65
Austria-Hungary	20.15
Roumania	19.48
Spain	19.04

These figures forcibly impress upon us the serious fact that our foreign commerce is much below what it should be, and that by establishing wise, fair, and just trade relations with the other nations of the world there are splendid commercial opportunities for the United States—large fields of trade and commerce barely touched by the American trader.

I refer to the foregoing statistics and quotations not for the purpose of expressing approval of the Republican idea and practice of reciprocity as exemplified under Republican administration, but to illustrate and emphasize two important truths:

First. That under the operation of lower tariff rates our foreign commerce rapidly grows and expands and a profitable market is secured for the surplus of American products.

Second. That the present high tariff rates are unnecessary and are so recognized by these eminent Republicans.

The logical result is an approval of the Democratic doctrine of taxation when viewed from an international commercial standpoint and having in view the permanent commercial policy of this Government. I might cite other statistics with other countries, but deem it unnecessary. The fact is demonstrated and the truth of the statement is made manifest, that under existing conditions the high-tariff duties of Republican legislation are hindering and crippling and in the future will demoralize the foreign commerce of the United States; and it further demonstrates that the avenue of escape from such embarrassing conditions is to remove the excessive and burdensome and unnecessary taxes now being levied and collected by the Republican party under existing tariff legislation.

Cuba is asking for an opportunity to trade with us. She desires to sell to us her sugar and tobacco and buy from us our breadstuffs and manufactured products. She asks for fair and reasonable trade rates and that the prohibitive tariff duties may be partially removed.

The inhabitants of our new colonies in the far-away Philippine Islands ask for similar rights and privileges. Against their petitions these protected and duty-fattened home concerns rise in wrath and indignation; the hue and cry goes forth in a demand for a claim for protection to American enterprises and institutions of manufacture. What a spectacle! What a confession! The great United States, with its magnificent domains, its splendid civilization, its established industries, its fabulous wealth and aggregated capital, frightened at the very prospect of competition with poor little downtrodden Cuba, and staggering at the thought of competition with the poor Filipinos, whom it is so popular to describe as half civilized and wholly incapable of self-government. When will the protected industries of the United States pass from a state of infancy and reliance upon Government bounty and step upon the plane of independent manhood, ready to do battle, unsupported by Government aid, in the great commercial conflicts with the mighty powers of the earth?

I spurn the suggestion and I despise the plea, as beneath the spirit of American manhood and the spirit of American enterprise, which would forever keep our industries in swaddling clothes and supported by unjust contributions, levied by unhallowed legislation upon the toil and production of the American people. [Loud applause.]

Mr. LITTLE. I now yield to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. POU].

Mr. POU. Mr. Chairman, the time allotted for the discussion of measures in this House is so exceedingly short that I count it a matter for congratulation that I have been able to secure a few moments during which to discuss a proposition which I believe to be of great importance to the American people.

The plan of the majority on this floor is rather peculiar. Important measures are allowed but a few hours of discussion. Unimportant measures are given ample time. This is certainly an evidence of great boldness upon the part of the majority. The more unimportant a measure is, my observation has been, the more time there is allowed for its discussion. But measures affecting the property or happiness of millions of people are rushed through with unseemly haste, and a minute or two is exceedingly precious.

Now, another evidence of the boldness of the majority was the rule which their committee brought in on yesterday not permitting any amendments to the bill which was then under discussion. If there had been any opportunity for amendment, humbly, as a new member, I should have been glad to submit this for their consideration:

Whenever any article manufactured in the United States is sold at a lower price abroad than in the United States the President, having ascertained such to be the case, is authorized and empowered to suspend the collection of the duty on similar articles imported into this country from abroad for such length of time as the President may deem expedient.

Mr. Chairman, the Republicans tell us that they have a bold party and that they dare do anything. They were not bold enough, however, to permit an amendment of this kind. They were not bold enough to give gentlemen an opportunity to vote upon an amendment of this sort. Yet it is stated in the public prints, and I have never seen it denied, that the great trusts of this country, the great industrial combinations, are selling their products cheaper abroad than they are to the people of the United States.

For instance, they are selling farm implements, grain drills, harrows, and things of that kind cheaper to the people of South America than they are to our own people here in the United States. They are selling petroleum outfits cheaper to the people at Baku, on the shores of the Caspian Sea, than they are to the people of Beaumont, in the State of Texas. They are treating us worse than they treat foreigners.

More than that, Mr. Chairman, they are treating us worse than foreigners treat us. It seems to me that no gentleman can stand on this floor, in the light of this condition of affairs, and deny that proposition. I desire to emphasize, Mr. Chairman, that these great industrial combinations, fostered, protected, and built up by the Republican party, are treating us not only worse than they treat foreigners, but they are treating us worse than foreigners treat us. All that we ask is that we be put upon an equality with heathens and aliens. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Now, for the edification of our Republican friends, I should like to read from a declaration of their convention. You would never hear anything about this, Mr. Chairman, if some gentleman did not read it; but I find in the Republican platform of the year 1900 these words:

We recognize the necessity and propriety of honest cooperation of capital to meet new business conditions, and especially to extend our rapidly increasing trade—

Sounds like you might trust that, does it not?—

but we condemn all conspiracies and combinations intended to restrict business, to create monopolies, to limit production, or to control prices.

Nobody, Mr. Chairman, would ever have known this last was in the Republican platform, except by referring to the original document. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Now, this amendment, which I should like to see tested, it seems to me is above criticism, even from a Republican standpoint. Of course, as a good Democrat, I say it does not go far enough. It puts in the hands of your President the power to suspend the duty upon articles which come in competition with articles of American manufacture sold cheaper abroad than they are at home.

These monopolies have become so absolute and so tryannical that they fix their price according to competition. Where the competition is small the price is high, and where the competition is great the price is lower. Our people at home are absolutely at their mercy. The law of supply and demand is abolished, and in order to aid these combinations to oppress the people more effectively the Republican party has surrounded this country with a tariff wall which shuts off competition from every other part of the universe.

There is nothing complex about the proposition to put these articles on the free list. It does not require the President to determine whether any particular corporation is a trust or not. It does not require him to ascertain whether two or more persons have conspired together to regulate prices. There is no difficulty about it. There is no legal obstacle in the way. There need be no fear of any shifting decision of one majority by the highest court in the land.

The proposition would apply to the individual as well as the corporation. It is simply the suspension of duty on every article which comes in competition with articles sold by American manufacturers cheaper abroad than at home. The President could easily determine this. You say you do not fear him. He is a protectionist; he is a bold man; he is a warrior; he leads a strenuous life. You need not fear to put yourself in his hands. You say, and I say, we believe he is honest.

Now, if these things be true, let us offer an amendment of this kind to some bill, and let us give to Theodore Roosevelt, Republican, soldier, warrior, the absolute power to suspend the duty on all articles which are sold cheaper abroad than they are at home. You condemned all conspiracies to restrict business or create monopolies in the platform of your party. We are ready to help you carry out your platform pledges. If you do not do this, then all we ask of you is that in the year 1904 you have the courage to nominate for President of the United States Theodore Roosevelt, upon a platform which honestly declares the true principles of your party.

Yes, in some respects your President is bold. He is bold enough to allow the Stars and Stripes to continue to float over polygamy and human slavery. During the civil war the great Lincoln issued his proclamation giving freedom to every slave in the United States. Now, you say your President did not enter into a contract with any one of the native rulers of the Philippine Islands whereby we are bound to protect slavery over there.

You can not deny that human beings are held in bondage by other human beings in one of the islands at least. Why has not your President the courage of great Mr. Lincoln? Why does not he issue his proclamation and declare free every slave in the islands? You say the war is ended. Gentlemen on this floor who have recently visited this extraconstitutional territory of ours tell us they have seen and talked with slaves. Your President is czar of the islands. Let him issue his edict and remove this stain before history shall indelibly record it.

But, Mr. Chairman, we have been told that our party is dead; that the Democratic party is dead. We heard something of that kind of talk in 1872. Then they said that the Democratic party was dead. In 1876 they found out differently. They got the Presidency in 1876 in a way they have never been proud of. There is an odor about that affair which lingers to this day.

In 1880 they said that the Democratic party was dead. In 1884 they found that it was still alive. In 1888 they said the Democratic party was dead. In 1892 they found out the old party was still alive. Mr. Chairman, they say now that the old Democratic party is dead, but in 1904 they will again find out that the old party is still alive, thank God! [Loud applause on the Democratic side.]

Our Republic can boast of the greatest trusts on earth. It is too bad we must be constantly punished by them. You said if the Government would protect these great corporations so that they could become rich it would enable them to sell their goods cheaper and enable them to pay more for the labor necessary in the manufacture of their goods. My observation has been, Mr. Chairman, that these huge combinations of capital get just as much as they can for their goods and get their labor just as cheap as they can.

This is human nature, anyway. Men do not pay wages according to their ability to pay. Most men get all they can in this world. The laboring man is not fooled by this argument any longer. He knows that he must look out for himself, and he is wise when he does it. The trusts have outgrown our country. They tell us they want the world for their market. If so, it is only fair that they should have the world to compete with.

These things can not endure always. Unless the conscience of the Republic has become paralyzed, there must be, there will be, a change. We have the right on our side, and in the end the right will win. It is not right to shoot down men who are entitled to freedom just as much as we are. It is not right to allow laws to endure which permit individuals and corporations to charge us more for their products than they do foreigners. If anything in the world is wrong, these things are wrong. If there is ever a change, it must be, it will be, wrought by the Democratic party.

It may be of interest to you Republicans to know that in the year 1904 you will be confronted by a united Democratic party, and nobody knows better than you what that means. [Applause on the Democratic side.] Hoist your banner. If the truth shall be written upon it, your motto should be this: "Slavery or death to the Filipinos; protection for the trusts at home." Upon ours shall be: "Freedom for the Filipino; equal and exact justice to all men; equal opportunity to every citizen, State, and section;" and upon this issue, Mr. Chairman, with confidence we shall appeal to the sense of right of the American people. [Loud applause on the Democratic side.]

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. GROSVENOR having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message from the Senate, by Mr. PARKINSON, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bill of the following title:

H. R. 11470. An act making an appropriation for clearing the Potomac River of ice.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments the bill (H. R. 10308) to provide for a permanent Census Office; in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

Mr. LITTLE. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. ROBINSON].

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I agree with the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. PADGETT] that upon the shoulders of labor rests the burden of taxation.

Labor is likewise burdened by trust exactions imposed by the combinations mentioned by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. POU].

These trusts and monopolies have flooded the field of industries in the last few years. Why do you not consult the interest of labor when you mold the policies of government? So far from consulting it, you would impose taxes on labor that you may further oppress it, under the plea of "trade expansion," by bringing into competition with it the lowest-paid labor in the world.

Our present colonial policy, which so vitally and adversely affects labor, received its full measure of encouragement by a taxation of the masses to augment the surplus in the Treasury.

The toilers who bear the taxation are made to feel the heavy hand not only in taxation, but in appropriations, to bring within our domain and hold Asiatic and tropical peoples who will dispute with them in all the walks and avenues of labor.

From earliest time there has been a conflict for supremacy between those of the race well favored with world's goods and those who struggled for subsistence. At first this conflict was waged by force of arms. Brute force and violence held full sway. The weak succumbed to the strong and became their serfs and slaves. Later in the progress of the world governments were established to equalize conditions, to guarantee rights, and to redress wrongs.

The struggles between the contending forces have gone on through governmental institutions, and in this country to-day the only real power of government that needs to be controlled by any interest to dominate all the others is taxation. It involves the raising and equipping of armies, the creation of navies; it involves expansion; it involves everything in government, for appropriations, which are the life of administration, must be preceded by taxation.

Taxation can create or destroy. In government it has done both. If taxes were so adjusted as to charge by tolls and tributes those special interests clamoring for colonies and expansion and exclusively receiving the benefits of it, in short, if the people were, by a system of taxation, relieved from this burden and it was placed on commercialdom, where it belongs, this policy would cease and we would be spared the evils that follow in its train.

The power of taxation has been used to foster "infant industries" and is still used to "protect" them after they have reached full manhood. Everything in government that is known is made or unmade through the great power of taxation.

The producers of wealth—the laboring men—pay the greater part of the tributes levied by the Government in the form of taxes.

But what recognition is accorded to them in legislation? The Government in late years, under the policy adopted by the Administration, has come to tax the people each year on an average $10 a head for the support of National Government. This amount falls heavily on the laboring man and his family, when to it must be added the State, county, and municipal taxes necessary to support local administration.

A large share of the national taxes is expended for the luxury of a colonial policy that tends to bring closer to us and into our dominion an Asiatic cheap and competing labor which lowers the level of our labor and makes it less able to bear its burden of tax. The annexation of every new island opens a flood gate to cheap labor. It will be a menace so long as boats ply between the ports. You can not keep it out when the bars are once laid down unless you can eradicate the cupidity of man.

It will be useless to try when you are adding more coasts to watch, more territory to patrol. With the ingenuity and cunning of man, and the sordidness of the navigation corporations, it will be physically impossible to keep cheap labor away, not to mention the impolicy and destructive consequences of attempting to prevent free migration from one part of our country to another. Where will the line be drawn? How long will a people under our flag be bound down by restrictions on their travels? Will they not ever be in revolt, or be abject slaves to the unjust system of American colonial rule?

California and the Pacific coast States that have been afflicted as with a plague by the incoming of Asiatics seek by act of Congress to keep out the Chinese inhabitants of Hawaii. This is manifestly in the interest of labor, but can it be lawfully done?

The Japanese and Filipinos are as great a menace to labor as the Chinese. Many of the former as artisans are along the streets of the populous cities, many are working as domestics, and many are on the farms and in the gardens of California and the Western States, and many more are scattered over the face of this broad country disputing with their low grade of living and low wages that labor which has heretofore been performed by Americans.

But it seems we must deal gently with the Japanese because they aided us in the trouble in China; because, forsooth, she is ready to aid in the division and exploitation of China.

So far from showing the proper interest in labor, you make not the least efforts to keep out the Japanese, a more dangerous menace to American labor than the Chinese. You exclude the latter, why not the Japanese? You have the power. The Japanese treaty of 1894 gives you expressly the power. I read on page 353 of the Compilation of Treaties, in force, of 1899, article 2, paragraph 3:

It is, however, understood that the stipulations contained in this and the preceding article do not in any way affect the laws, ordinances, and regulations with regard to trade, the immigration of laborers, police, and public security which are in force or which may hereafter be enacted in either of the two countries.

Sir, the reason for the retention of the Philippines is for the exploitation of China. This policy is urged on and encouraged not by the patriots, not by the men who labor and pay our taxes, but by those who want to profit at the expense of weaker people. What is our attitude in China? It can all be gathered in brief from pages 43 to 45 of President Roosevelt's message.

The President says:

Owing to the rapid growth of our power and our interests on the Pacific, whatever happens in China must be of the keenest national concern to us. The general terms of the settlement of the questions growing out of the anti-foreign uprisings in China of 1900, having been formulated in a joint note addressed to China by the representatives of the injured powers in December last, were promptly accepted by the Chinese Government. After protracted conferences the plenipotentiaries of the several powers were able to sign a final protocol with the Chinese plenipotentiaries on the 7th of last September, setting forth the measures taken by China in compliance with the demands of the joint note, and expressing their satisfaction therewith.

"Promptly accepted" are proper terms of designation of the action of China, which seeks to rule 400,000,000 people with an inert soldiery.

Why should not China "promptly accept" what all the powers of Europe and what the United States, all with trained soldiers on her territory, demanded of her?

What further does the President say:

Provisions have been made for insuring the future safety of the foreign representatives in Peking by setting aside for their exclusive use a quarter of the city which the powers can make defensible and in which they can, if necessary, maintain permanent military guards; by dismantling the military works between the capital and the sea, and by allowing the temporary maintenance of foreign military posts along this line. An edict has been issued by the Emperor of China prohibiting for two years the importation of arms and ammunition into China.

Here is a surrender of sovereignty by a weaker country to the superior force of the joint powers. Here is the first step in the dismemberment of China by the other countries of the world. We join in the erection of military forts and establishments in a foreign country.

Under the provisions of the joint note of December, 1900, China has agreed to revise the treaties of commerce and navigation and to take such other steps for the purpose of facilitating foreign trade as the foreign powers may decide to be needed.

Here it is shown that China yields to the other countries, "the powers," the right and authority to dictate and decide what is needed in the revision of China's treaties of commerce and navigation, and is to take such other steps "for the facilitation of foreign trade" as the foreign powers may decide to be needed.

This is an abdication of power of government by China forced by "the powers."

Again this surrender of power is shown:

The Chinese Government has agreed to participate financially in the work of bettering the water approaches to Shanghai and to Tientsin, the centers of foreign trade in central and northern China, and an international conservancy board, in which the Chinese Government is largely represented, has been provided for the improvement of the Shanghai River and the control of its navigation.

Then follows a statement which shows how far the United States and Europe has encroached on China. It shows a monopolizing of a material part of the taxing power of government by the United States and "the powers." It reads:

In the same line of commercial advantages a revision of the present tariff on imports has been assented to for the purpose of substituting specific for ad valorem duties, and an expert has been sent abroad on the part of the United States to assist in this work. A list of articles to remain free of duty, including flour, cereals, and rice, gold and silver coin and bullion, has also been agreed upon in the settlement.

Thus we control the tariff laws of China. Is this proper? Is it wise for our country to enter into the affairs of another country? Would our country submit to any such rule, such exactions by other countries?

We lay a tariff tax on wheat and flour and rice in our Dingley bill, but in the tariff bill that we joined "the powers" in forcing on China we put them on the free list.

A singular and portentous anomaly. Republicans standing for protection in America and for free trade in China. In tariffs they stand for one thing in the United States, another thing for Cuba; for one thing at one time in Porto Rico, and for another at another time, and for still another policy in China, and for a mixed policy in the Philippines.

To this incongruity does the avidity for power and thirst for dominion lead us.

Surely in polity and in domestic rule each nation is the equal of any other.

Surely no rule of this Government can be found to justify us in levying a tribute on, or assuming a governmental function in, or exacting a right to pass a revenue law for China.

Continuing the President, as if in palliation of our conduct, says:

During these troubles our Government has unswervingly advocated moderation, and has materially aided in bringing about an adjustment which tends to enhance the welfare of China.

On page 45 of his message the President says:

Leaving no effort untried to work out the great policy of full and fair intercourse between China and the nations on a footing of equal rights and advantages to all. We advocate the "open door" with all that it implies; not merely the procurement of enlarged commercial opportunities on the coasts, but access to the interior by the waterways with which China has been so extraordinarily favored. Only by bringing the people of China into peaceful and friendly community of trade with all the peoples of the earth can the work now auspiciously begun be carried to fruition. In the attainment of this purpose we necessarily claim parity of treatment, under the conventions, throughout the Empire for our trade and our citizens with those of all other powers.

What has the Philippine "open door" done for us in the Philippines? It has given us a war that has cost hundreds of millions of treasure and thousands of lives, and in return for this, according to the last annual report of the Secretary of War, on pages 76 and 77, we get in trade (let me read): "Out of a total in one year of $53,000,000 of imports and exports the United States got the paltry amount of $5,000,000, both amounts in round numbers." Ten per cent of profit in this trade would represent $500,000 as the recompense to the traders for the expenditures of war by the nation. Does it pay? Let us be honest with ourselves. Let us be fair to the people. Does it pay?

This is a new system of international comity—this nation to rule another for her benefit. This sounds again like "manifest destiny," but used in a different sense than that in which the President used it once in his work on Thomas H. Benton, of Missouri. In that work he styled those who favored aggression on weaker peoples as men of "easy international morality."

The President shows, in his message, our purposes and intentions to share in the arbitrary rule of China, and mellows this harsh and unwarranted treatment by the assertions that it is our right and for her good.

Thus we face the great and momentous problem, whether this nation should assume the dangers and evils and entanglements that will ensue from the dismemberment of China, to which this policy of the party in power unerringly and inevitably leads.

The President likewise shows that the "open door," which is England's colonial policy, will prevail in China under the rule of the powers, and we are thus committed irretrievably to the "open door" so long as we retain a foothold in the Philippines.

How fortunate it would have been had this nation been checked in its policy of imperialism by a lack of revenues that furnished the means for these new and dangerous enterprises. How much would we have saved in blood and treasure and in national honor.

Occasionally some one with a sinister design concealed rises up and says, "give us expansion with the golden rule." These principles do not go together. No such incongruous thoughts can inspire one prompted by true Americanism. The golden rule is too sweet, too harmonious, too Christian, to enter into a problem that involves the shedding of human blood.

Why invoke "manifest destiny" and the "golden rule" to justify oppression, bloodshed, and warfare? He that does this clothes in the livery of the best masters to serve the devil in. If appeals to religion can be made, if the "golden rule" and "manifest destiny" can cover the crime of imperialism, how much, I wonder, will these great cardinals be appealed to in years to come to cover up national sins?

It is claimed that we annexed the Hawaiian Islands by reason of their strategic value as a key to the Pacific and to prevent the peaceful invasion of them by the Japanese. It is asserted that Porto Rico came to us as a fruit of war, and that she is also of value as a key, as a strategic point in the Atlantic. Of these two keys one was admitted under the Constitution, the other outside its pale.

We hold a suzerainty in form over Cuba, because it is alleged she is near our shores, and the Monroe doctrine is again invoked.

The same class of statesmen would have us purchase the Danish West Indies from the King of Denmark, not for a strategic point, for we have already Porto Rico, but in furtherance of and maintenance of the Monroe doctrine. They appeal to the Monroe doctrine to justify colonial rule in the West, but abandon it in their attitude in the Far East. Why appeal to the Monroe doctrine to justify the holding of islands in the West and refute and repudiate it by holding islands in the East?

Those in whose interest this policy is urged, without compunction, if indeed the word conscience can be found in the lexicon of commercialdom, with a versatility and elasticity they claim that manifest destiny guided us to the Philippines. If manifest destiny and not the commercial interests guided us to the Philippine Islands, what power is it that urges on to the rule of China? Was there ever an instance where the exercise of a power was more exacting and autocratic than that in which we joined the powers in the rule over China? Can we dissociate this exercise of sovereignty from the abject submission of China and the absolute rule of the powers? The United States, in conjunction with the other countries of Europe, becomes a tyrant for the rule of a weaker country.

Why this departure? Why should this country enter into the politics of Asia? Thus are islands annexed, entangling alliances assumed, and the insidious wiles of foreign influences courted against our traditions and against our most familiar notions of American prudence and policy, because the commercial powers of this country, which already fully control the legitimate markets of the world, desire the Government to use its power and its money to open up new and untried and un-American fields for exploitation.

The American laboring man, who has the power to control his country's policy, can not see in this new-fledged system any guaranty for his interests or his future safety and protection. You have bound the Philippines down with chains. You have oppressed Porto Rico. You have joined the powers in the control of China. You have curbed the freedom of Cuba, and, after tying her hand and foot, you are getting ready to still extend your character as men of "easy international morality" by stifling your consciences against her appeals for humanity. You have raped her industries, and if you refuse her full reciprocity you lay her helplessly at your feet.

Hawaii so far has escaped. She was annexed in 1898, when we were imbued with the spirit of true Americanism. The Hawaiian Islands were admitted to full fellowship under the Constitution and the flag.

In passing the organic law for their government we ruthlessly and rightly tore down the slave flag that covered the serfdom there before, and snatched from the driver's hand the lash that beat the backs of men and women who labored under contract. I voted against the admission of Hawaii, believing that American labor would suffer by its inclusion.

To those who favor island annexation the unwelcome truth has been unfolded by our experiences in Hawaii. The census of 1900 shows that of the total population of 154,000 in an area one-fifth the extent of Indiana, 25,767 are Chinese as against 17,002 in 1890, and 61,111 Japanese in 1900 as against 12,360 in 1890.

The census shows a population of native and mixed Hawaiian blood of 37,918.

This is the heterogeneous admixture of the un-American races that were afflicted upon the laboring men of this country by the resolution of the gentleman from Nevada [Mr. NEWLANDS], and as he has recently introduced a resolution for the annexation of Cuba I hope that in the interest of American labor he will see the evil consequences to our workingmen and forbear bringing islands into our dominion. Let us aid Cuba to help herself. With this our mission is ended. Can our laboring men compete with the Chinese and the Japanese of Hawaii or with the native Hawaiians?

This is full American territory. They must be admitted with full privilege with the mainland or the Constitution be endangered by attempts to keep them out. Such is colonial rule in its protection to labor, and thus must you abandon the interest of the toilers or give but a limited constitutional guaranty and protection to the inhabitants of Hawaii.

There is no reason for duplicity or deception, for uncertainty or vagueness. Our Government is strong in military prowess. It should be just and merciful and magnanimous. It must deal fairly with the soldiers and their families, who are tortured and distressed in body and in mind by deadly war and pestilential disease. Our Government must be fair to them or retribution will come.

The President and his advisers know full well the meaning of language, and they can say that it is the purpose to give the Philippines their independence, as we did to Cuba, and at that instant the war in the Philippines will be ended.

The President has not said so. His advisers have not said so, and the war goes on. All civilized nations know the consequences of war. Americans know them full well. Our duty lies along the pathway blazed out by the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution, our traditions, and humanity.

The Bacon resolution, introduced in the Senate before the direful consequences in the Philippines had befallen us, would have spared and rescued us from its misfortunes.

It reads like this:

Resolved further, That the United States hereby disclaim any disposition or intention to exercise permanent sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over said islands, and assert their determination, when a stable and independent government shall have been erected therein, entitled in the judgment of the Government of the United States to recognition as such, to transfer to said government, upon terms which shall be reasonable and just, all rights secured under the cession by Spain, and to thereupon leave the government and control of the islands to their people.

This resolution was opposed by the body of Republican Senators and was supported by the Democrats. The vote resulted in a tie and was decided in the negative by the deciding vote of the Republican Vice-President. It may have been thought at that time that there would be no serious insurrection, no serious rebellion, no strenuous war for human liberty, and no great drain in money. All these matters have been made clear to us now, to our misfortune.

Our duty is made plain to us in the language of the Democratic platform, which but voices true Americanism. It says: "We favor an immediate declaration of the nation's purpose to give to the Filipinos, first, a stable form of government; second, independence, and, third, protection from outside interference, such as has been given for nearly a century to the Republics of Central and South America."

There is not a Filipino of the millions on the islands, from the most cultured to the slave-owning, polygamous inhabitants of the Sulus, who cares for us or for our institutions, except as their attachment is held by the mighty arbitrament of the sword or by the more mild and seductive influences of money, filched by taxation from the islanders to hoist into office mercenary Filipinos, whose attachment to our Government is measured by the tenure of their offices and the amount of the perquisites they afford.

Every Filipino who has a sense of patriotism as it is understood by Americans is to us an enemy, a traitor, or a spy. This is shown by the testimony of our officers, military and civil. Our warfare shows it, and it is disclosed in the history of the islands.

Filipinos may be in the service of the United States, they may pretend to be our friends, but they will wait forever to strike the invader; and when the opportunity comes and the blow is struck, it will show us the folly of lulling ourselves into a security while treachery was so plainly written in their dissembled conduct.

From all the reports that come to us it does not take much penetration to see through the slight veneer that covers the real character.

If this position is not correct, then no one heretofore has correctly written the history of these islands and the 8,000,000 people. If this position is not sound, then no one heretofore has understood human nature the world over.

The spirit of rebellion, as we call it, the spirit of patriotism, as they call it, is on the islands to stay, and the only question that concerns our people is whether we should be taxed to hire soldiers, to buy war ships and war supplies to suppress it. All told, colonial rule costs us annually over a hundred million. It can not be eradicated entirely. It will smolder on in embers, while Wheaton's 50,000 soldiers patrol the coasts and are quartered among them. Under daring chiefs and leaders they will rise from year to year in insurrection and rebellion. Sickness and death stalks in the wake of our army there, and plague and pestilential disease overtakes them.

To carry on this colonial Philippine policy we are taxed, not only for war, but we are taxed in the lives and limbs and health of our soldiers, taxed in tears and anguish of mothers and sisters, whose sons and brothers have been sent to those far-away islands on a dreadful mission. To mitigate in some measure the horrors of that climate it is recommended that the soldiers be relieved in a year or two of service.

The necessity for this regulation shows the danger in the climate. But who can tell how many will fall in that time victims to it by diseases peculiar to the climate? Surely more than in battle. How many will be wrecked for lives, and how liberal will the Government be to them in pensions? Let these considerations enter into the questions of taxation.

The managers of the Republican party were wont to tell us on this floor for several years that it was but a shadow of an insurrection in the Philippines; that our prophecies that it would be long, stubborn, and dangerous were ridiculous, and that the facts upon which this judgment was based existed nowhere but in the mind of some weak or designing and unpatriotic person. But the spark that kindled the flame grew to be a dreadful conflagration that takes more than one-half our Army to smother. They can only allay it. They can not conquer it altogether. How different the conditions here and there.

Seventy-five million people here and an Army less than one-half of the whole; an insurrectionary and dissatisfied people there numbering 8,000,000, and more than one-half of our Army needed to coerce and suppress them. And such a method of warfare! A system that punishes the promulgation of the Declaration of Independence and Constitution of the United States! These considerations are not sentimental. They are real; they are substantial.

If sentimentality were to be appealed to, we could cite that the war in Cuba was waged in the cause of liberty and humanity. Now we offer them a sort of liberty, a diluted liberty, diluted by the Platt amendment.

But we give them a form of liberty, and when they set up a stable form of government it will be easy enough for the Cubans, under the sentiment that prevails in America, if I mistake not, to shake off any hold that this country may claim to have or any restraints it may have imposed, which were notoriously secured under duress from the people of Cuba.

Why not give the same guaranties to the Philippines? There is a similarity between the case of Cuba and the Philippines, if not in its good and humanitarian purposes and objects, at least in its harsh misfortunes, the result of war.

Weyler's order to the Cuban reconcentrados meant torture, death, and starvation.

Our generals in the Philippines are giving out the same reconcentrado order, in efforts to suppress the insurrection.

England finds the same effective means in her war against the Boers who fight for the South African Republic.

England against the Boers follows the example of Spain in Cuba; and has it come to this, Mr. Chairman, that we must follow the example of both to suppress the Filipinos?

To-day little Boer boys, snatched from their homes in the absence of their parents and imprisoned, now are crying for their fathers and their mothers; and little Boer girls, in reconcentrado camps, to-day are crying, bitterly crying, for their mothers and their fathers. Must we follow their example? They were kidnapped, many of them, and carried from their homes, and are now held in prison in the name of human warfare. They are kept from care and protection of parent. This is warfare as England understands it, as Spain understood it, and it is the system that is being adopted in the Philippines by our officers.

Can such acts be brutalities only when practiced by Spain and England?

Our history is moving in cycles. Our soldiers who went to Cuba in that war for liberty and humanity found reconcentrado camps with untold sufferings under the Spanish. Our soldiers now, who go to the Philippines, find the same camps of suffering and distress under American officers.

The laboring man is taxed to support a system of colonial rule that strikes at his vital interest.

Let him beware. When he understands the situation, he will rebel against it. If he fails to heed the admonition enforced by a departure from more than a hundred years of constitutional government for his protection, if he fails to do his duty, for he still has the sovereign power, and a horde of Asiatics and kindred peoples are brought in closer relations with us, then not only will labor suffer in his day, but the cloud will hang over his children in the coming generation. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. SHERMAN. I move that the committee rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the House having resumed its session, Mr. MONDELL reported that the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union having had under consideration the Indian appropriation bill, had come to no resolution thereon.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask unanimous consent that all gentlemen who have spoken on the Indian appropriation bill, or who shall speak on it during the general debate, may have leave to extend their remarks in the RECORD.

There being no objection, leave was granted accordingly.

INTERNATIONAL RECOGNITION OF BOILER-INSPECTION CERTIFICATES.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, I hold in my hand the bill (H. R. 7936) to amend section 4400 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and the bill (H. R. 7951) to amend section 4400 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to a reciprocal recognition of boiler-inspection certificates between the several maritime nations having marine-inspection laws. I ask that the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries may be discharged from the further consideration of these two bills and that they may lie on the table. I make this request because a corresponding bill—Senate bill 546—has already been passed by the House.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, House bills 7936 and 7951 will be laid on the table.

There was no objection.

EXECUTION OF DEEDS IN THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS, ETC.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message of the President of the United States; which was read, referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia, and ordered to be printed:

To the House of Representatives:

In compliance with a resolution of the House of Representatives of the 17th instant (the Senate concurring), I return House bill No. 5814, entitled "An act to provide for the execution in the Philippine Islands and in Porto Rico of deeds of lands situate in the District of Columbia or the Territories of the United States."

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

WHITE HOUSE, February 18, 1902.

RETIREMENT OF NAVAL CONSTRUCTOR RICHMOND P. HOBSON.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the following message of the President of the United States; which was read, referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

In June, 1900, Naval Constructor Richmond P. Hobson, then on duty at the naval station, Cavite, P. I., was found to be suffering from "compound hypermetropic astigmatism, retinal hyperæmia, and trachoma," and an operation was performed for the latter. On the 28th of June, 1900, he was admitted to the naval hospital, Yokohama, Japan, the hospital ticket stating: "Retinitis. There is good evidence it was in line of duty. While on duty at Hongkong during the past year he suffered from weakness of eyes, particularly after exposure to glare of sun or while subject to the irregularities of light on board the ships under repairs." On September 7, 1900, he was discharged from the naval hospital at Yokohama and ordered to the United States, and was subsequently granted six months' leave of absence on account of continued "irritation of retinæ."

In January, 1902, Naval Constructor Hobson appeared before a retiring board, the medical members of which, after an examination of his case, made the following certificate:

"At present there is apparently only a slight retinal irritation, but by the exercise of reasonable care it should not give great trouble.

"An opthalmoscopic examination not made and deemed not essential.

"We believe, therefore, that Mr. Hobson is fit for active duty."

Upon this state of facts the retiring board decided "that Naval Constructor Richmond P. Hobson, United States Navy, is fit for active duty."

Without suggesting that any injustice has been done by this finding, and while in effect pronouncing it correct, Mr. Hobson states, in a letter addressed to the Secretary of the Navy, February 5, 1902, that "the duty required in the Construction Corps, in connection with plans and blue prints, and in connection with inspection and supervision in the glare at shipyards and navy-yards, requires just the kind of use of the eyes that is painful and injurious and would tend to thwart their recovery;" that the condition of his eyes has improved since his return to the United States, while on special duty not in the usual line of work of the Construction Corps, but that "under these favorable conditions the irritation and sensitiveness continue and show that" he "should not undertake work that taxes the eyes * * * in the future." He accordingly asks special legislation authorizing his retirement as for disabilities incurred in the line of duty. This request is approved by the Chief Constructor and by the Secretary of the Navy.

In consideration of the foregoing, but especially of the gallant service rendered by Mr. Hobson in the sinking of the Merrimac in the harbor of Santiago during the recent war with Spain, I recommend the enactment of a suitable measure for his relief.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

WHITE HOUSE, February 17, 1903.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to transfer to the retired list of the Navy, as for disabilities incurred in the line of duty, Naval Constructor Richmond P. Hobson, United States Navy, at the rate of pay provided by section 1588 of the Revised Statutes in the case of officers retired on account of incapacity resulting from long and faithful service.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. WACHTER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same.

H. R. 4208. An act granting an increase of pension to Susan M. Pardee;

H. R. 2321. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph R. Martin;

H. R. 2607. An act granting an increase of pension to Uriah S. Karmany;

H. R. 5147. An act granting an increase of pension to Theodore Lane;

H. R. 2502. An act granting an increase of pension to Ambrose Burton;

H. R. 2528. An act granting a pension to Helen M. Evans;

H. R. 5169. An act granting an increase of pension to Hiram S. Kingsley;

H. R. 6926. An act granting a pension to Mabel H. Lazear;

H. R. 1285. An act granting an increase of pension to Cyrus Odell;

H. R. 6465. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel Briscoe;

H. R. 5149. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles E. Bachelder;

H. R. 815. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry S. Comer;

H. R. 5002. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas H. McConnaughey;

H. R. 2983. An act to amend an act entitled "An act granting an increase of pension to Francis M. Thompson," approved March 3, 1901;

H. R. 3230. An act granting a pension to Catherine Pflueger;

H. R. 6720. An act granting an increase of pension to George Patterson;

H. R. 2265. An act granting an increase of pension to Martin V. Hathaway;

H. R. 1374. An act granting an increase of pension to James Willard;

H. R. 5860. An act granting an increase of pension to Edward B. Scott;

H. R. 3511. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary C. Newcomb;

H. R. 2416. An act granting an increase of pension to John B. Wilcox;

H. R. 7408. An act granting an increase of pension to Levi Cross;

H. R. 2193. An act granting an increase of pension to David A. Ireland;

H. R. 1017. An act granting a pension to Mary Tripp;

H. R. 6459. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary F. Hooper;

H. R. 9312. An act granting an increase of pension to Kate Virginia Dewey Cushing;

H. R. 2455. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. McClure;

H. R. 3413. An act granting an increase of pension to Jedediah S. Vallet;

H. R. 5108. An act granting an increase of pension to Elisha B. Taylor, alias Elisha T. Bisbee;

H. R. 3184. An act granting an increase of pension to David Petee;

H. R. 3300. An act granting an increase of pension to George B. Boyd;

H. R. 2484. An act granting an increase of pension to Jeremiah Evans;

H. R. 287. An act granting an increase of pension to Leighton J. Folsom;

H. R. 4037. An act granting a pension to Julia Maher;

H. R. 3024. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas V. Stran;

H. R. 5259. An act granting an increase of pension to Gustav Schwartz;

H. R. 2628. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew Mulholland;

H. R. 286. An act granting an increase of pension to Lawrentus Lane;

H. R. 2412. An act granting a pension to Helen L. Pepper;

H. R. 2429. An act granting an increase of pension to John C. Morrison;

H. R. 3240. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph Church;

H. R. 5162. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew H. Gifford;

H. R. 6684. An act granting an increase of pension to Marshall Bachelder;

H. R. 4182. An act granting an increase of pension to David Cupps;

H. R. 4268. An act granting an increase of pension to James D. Woodward;

H. R. 5753. An act granting an increase of pension to Emil Frank;

H. R. 1728. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. Thompson;

H. R. 2617. An act granting an increase of pension to John Rapple; and

H. R. 10780. An act to transfer the county of Carroll from the northwestern division of the northern district of Georgia back to the northern district of Georgia of the United States district and circuit courts, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the following titles:

S. 1267. An act granting an increase of pension to Susan F. Connit;

S. 2128. An act granting a pension to Jane Taylor;

S. 2161. An act granting an increase of pension to A. Custis Steever Carpenter;

S. 1337. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary R. Miller;

S. 1329. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. Black;

S. 1465. An act granting an increase of pension to George Fowler;

S. 1610. An act granting an increase of pension to Napoleon B. Perkins;

S. 1622. An act granting a pension to Theophilus Goodwin;

S. 890. An act granting an increase of pension to Catharine Moore;

S. 891. An act granting a pension to Lucinda W. Cavender;

S. 920. An act granting an increase of pension to Francis M. Reilly;

S. 919. An act granting an increase of pension to Daniel C. Knowels;

S. 1094. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry Gifford Dunbar;

S. 1143. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles L. Sweat;

S. 1148. An act granting an increase of pension to Dennis Hannifin;

S. 1167. An act granting an increase of pension to John Ferguson;

S. 887. An act granting an increase of pension to Sarah McCord;

S. 888. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary Taylor;

S. 889. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles F. Burger;

S. 692. An act granting an increase of pension to Daniel T. Rose;

S. 526. An act granting an increase of pension to John McGrath;

S. 568. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry Fisher;

S. 232. An act granting a pension to Mary E. W. Morgan;

S. 199. An act granting an increase of pension to Nathaniel Eaton;
S. 197. An act granting an increase of pension to John Chandler;
S. 200. An act granting an increase of pension to Eunice P. Detweiler;
S. 193. An act granting a pension to Richard H. Musgrove;
S. 1783. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry B. Schroeder;
S. 194. An act granting a pension to Joseph W. Mulford;
S. 1805. An act granting a pension to Laura B. Wear;
S. 1977. An act granting an increase of pension to Harrison T. De Long;
S. 1020. An act for the relief of John Emerson;
S. 2107. An act granting a pension to Matilda Armstrong;
S. 2334. An act granting an increase of pension to Oscar Reed;
S. 2359. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel Hymer;
S. 2389. An act granting a pension to John E. Farrell;
S. 2390. An act granting a pension to Nellie M. Emery;
S. 2485. An act granting an increase of pension to Tempy French;
S. 2484. An act granting an increase of pension to Loren S. Richardson;
S. 2392. An act granting an increase of pension to Elmer L. Stevens;
S. 1621. An act granting an increase of pension to David Pollock;
S. 2010. An act granting an increase of pension to Marcia M. Merritt; and
S. 2131. An act granting a pension to Carolina N. Allen.

SENATE BILLS AND RESOLUTION REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate bills and resolution of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and referred to their appropriate committees, as indicated below:

S. 65. An act providing for the retirement of petty officers and enlisted men of the Navy—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

S. 1099. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to return to Harvard University certain colors, silver cup, and Nordenfeldt gun—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

S. 1563. An act for the relief of William H. Crawford—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

S. 2921. An act to place Henry Biederbick, Julius R. Frederick, Francis Long, and Maurice Connell on the retired list of enlisted men of the Army—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 1025. An act to promote the efficiency of the Revenue-Cutter Service—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

S. 176. An act to provide for the extension of the charters of national banks—to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Senate concurrent resolution 25—

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, directed to cause an examination to be made of the coast of Washington, in the vicinity of the mouth of the Hoh River, with a view to the establishment of a harbor, and to submit an estimate therefor.—

to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. MCCLEARY, by unanimous consent, obtained leave of absence for one week, on account of sickness.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

By unanimous consent, leave for withdrawal of papers was granted in the following cases, no adverse report having been made:

To Mr. TAYLOR of Alabama, papers in the case of James W. Carmody (Fifty-sixth Congress).

To Mr. OVERSTREET, papers in the case of Samuel B. Alexander (Fifty-fourth Congress).

LEAVE TO PRINT.

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. SAMUEL W. SMITH] may have permission to print remarks in the RECORD on the Indian appropriation bill. I was unable to give him time.

There was no objection, and leave was accordingly granted.

PERMANENT CENSUS OFFICE.

The SPEAKER laid before the House, with amendments of the Senate, the bill (H. R. 10308) to provide for a permanent Census Office.

Mr. RUSSELL. I ask unanimous consent that the House disagree to the several amendments of the Senate and request a conference.

There being no objection, it was ordered accordingly; and the Speaker announced as conferees on the part of the House Mr. HOPKINS, Mr. RUSSELL, and Mr. GRIFFITH.

And then, on motion of Mr. PAYNE (at 5 o'clock and 7 minutes p. m.), the House adjourned.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred, as follows:

A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a draft of a bill relative to the signing of letters patent for inventions—to the Committee on Patents, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several Calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. HITT, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 11471) making appropriations for the diplomatic and consular service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, reported the same, accompanied by a report (No. 558; which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. ADAMS, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 8129) to amend sections 4076 and 4078 and 4075 of the Revised Statutes, reported the same with amendments, accompanied by a report (No. 559); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

Mr. STORM, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 6703) for the relief of George A. Rogers, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 560); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CAPRON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 336) to grant an honorable discharge from the military service to Charles H. Hawley, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 561); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. PARKER, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 608) for the relief of George K. Bowen, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 565); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 3762) for the relief of Emanuel Klauser, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 566); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 24) for the relief of James W. Howell, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 567); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

ADVERSE REPORTS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, adverse reports were delivered to the Clerk and laid on the table, as follows:

Mr. SLAYDEN, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 32) to correct the military record of Albert S. Austin, reported the same adversely, accompanied by a report (No. 562); which said bill and report were laid on the table.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 619) to authorize the President to revoke the order dismissing William T. Godwin, late first lieutenant, Tenth Infantry, United States Army, and to place him on the retired list, reported the same adversely, accompanied by a report (No. 563); which said bill and report were laid on the table.

Mr. PARKER, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 139) for the relief of Edward Byrne, reported the same adversely, accompanied by a report (No. 565); which said bill and report were laid on the table.

CHANGES OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of the following bills; which were referred as follows:

A bill (H. R. 7509) granting an increase of pension to Annie M.

Walker—Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 11199) granting a pension to Lewis Walton—Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 11464) granting a pension to Marion L. Wilson—Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PUBLIC BILLS, MEMORIALS, AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. HITT, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs: A bill (H. R. 11471) making appropriations for the diplomatic and consular service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1893—to the Union Calendar.

By Mr. CONRY: A bill (H. R. 11472) to establish light-houses at the mouth of Boston Harbor to mark the entrance to the new Broad Sound Channel—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. BROWN: A bill (H. R. 11473) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to fulfill certain treaty stipulations with the Chippewa Indians of Lake Superior and the Mississippi, and making appropriation for the same—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. JENKINS: A bill (H. R. 11474) for the acknowledgment of deeds and other instruments in the Philippine Islands and Porto Rico affecting land situate in the District of Columbia or any Territory of the United States—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. IRWIN: A bill (H. R. 11475) for the purchase of the portrait of Gen. George H. Thomas—to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. SPARKMAN: A bill (H. R. 11476) authorizing, empowering, and directing the Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries to establish in the State of Florida, on the Gulf of Mexico, a station for the investigation of problems connected with the marine-fishery interests of the region—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. SAMUEL W. SMITH: A bill (H. R. 11477) for improving Fort street between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets northeast, and for other purposes—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 11478) to provide for refunding internal-revenue taxes paid upon legacies and bequests for uses of a religious, literary, charitable, or educational character, or for the encouragement of art, under the war-revenue act of 1898—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WILCOX (by request): A bill (H. R. 11479) to apportion the term of office of seven senators elected at the first general election of the Territory of Hawaii—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. TONGUE (by request): A bill (H. R. 11480) appropriating the receipts from the sale and disposal of public lands in certain States and Territories to ascertain the extent to which said lands may be reclaimed, and to authorize the taxation of public lands under certain conditions—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

By Mr. CURRIER: A bill (H. R. 11481) to authorize the purchase of certain pictures of Arctic expeditions, by Mr. Albert Operti—to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. LACEY: A bill (H. R. 11535) for the protection of game in the district of Alaska, and for other purposes—to the Committee on the Territories.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11536) to transfer certain forest reserves to the control of the Department of Agriculture, to authorize game and fish protection in forest reserves, and for other purposes—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. NORTON: A bill (H. R. 11537) to reimburse detailed or assigned officers—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BELL: Joint resolution of Colorado legislature, favoring a department of mining—to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

By Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi: Memorial memorializing the Representatives and Senators of Mississipp iin Congress to prepare and urge the passage of a bill refunding to the cotton-growing States the cotton tax collected from said States immediately after the war—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. RYAN: Memorial memorializing the Representatives and Senators of Mississippi in Congress to prepare and urge the passage of a bill refunding to the cotton-growing States the cotton tax collected from said States immediately after the war—to the Committee on War Claims.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills of the following titles were presented and referred as follows:

By Mr. BELL: A bill (H. R. 11482) for the relief of O. E. Noland, of Mancos, Colo.—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BLAKENEY: A bill (H. R. 11483) granting an increase of pension to William D. Kimble—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BROWNLOW: A bill (H. R. 11484) for the relief of Edwin S. Harris—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. COWHERD (by request): A bill (H. R. 11485) granting a pension to Julia McCarthy—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DOUGHERTY: A bill (H. R. 11486) to correct the military record of Aaron Norris—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11487) granting a pension to James F. Montgomery—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11488) granting an increase of pension to John J. Hunter—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. EMERSON: A bill (H. R. 11489) granting an increase of pension to William D. West—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FORDNEY: A bill (H. R. 11490) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth Parrish—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FOWLER: A bill (H. R. 11491) granting an increase of pension to Israel D. Lum—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11492) granting an increase of pension to John J. Willis—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. GORDON: A bill (H. R. 11493) granting a pension to Mary A. Lipps—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HANBURY: A bill (H. R. 11494) granting a pension to Henrietta A. Buell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HAUGEN: A bill (H. R. 11495) granting an increase of pension to Mary A. Bailey—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HEMENWAY: A bill (H. R. 11496) granting a pension to Henry S. Foster—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HOWARD: A bill (H. R. 11497) for the relief of Martha Strickland, widow of William Strickland—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. IRWIN: A bill (H. R. 11498) granting an increase of pension to Candace Browder—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11499) granting an increase of pension to Silvia Miller—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11500) for the relief of Schuyler B. Mayhall—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11501) for the relief of John Hedrick—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11502) for the relief of Mary D. Griffiths—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. KEHOE: A bill (H. R. 11503) granting an increase of pension to Israel T. Osborn—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11504) for the relief of James H. Reeder—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MERCER: A bill (H. R. 11505) granting a pension to David Dunkle—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MIERS of Indiana: A bill (H. R. 11506) granting a pension to Samuel Stetzer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. NAPHEN: A bill (H. R. 11507) for the relief of the heirs of Valentine Kirchner—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. NORTON: A bill (H. R. 11508) granting an increase of pension to Joseph A. Van Pelt—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ROBB: A bill (H. R. 11509) granting an increase of pension to Henry J. Smith—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11510) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of James Coad—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11511) for the relief of George Kinnard—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. SELBY: A bill (H. R. 11512) granting an increase of pension to J. H. Daniels—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SHAFROTH: A bill (H. R. 11513) granting a pension to Oscar O. Vaughan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11514) granting an increase of pension to Charles Ambrook—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11515) for the relief of Samuel Gates—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SHALLENBERGER: A bill (H. R. 11516) granting an honorable discharge to William J. Coady—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SMITH of Iowa: A bill (H. R. 11517) for the relief of John Lammert—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11518) granting an increase of pension to Craig Mardis—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11519) granting an increase of pension to Henry Russell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. STEWART of New York: A bill (H. R. 11520) granting an increase of pension to Carrie Conant, widow of Capt. Charles H. Conant—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11521) to correct the military record of Wesley Mickel—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11522) for the relief of Eliza Ellen Ehle—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. TATE (by request): A bill (H. R. 11523) for the relief of the First Georgia State Troops—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also (by request), a bill (H. R. 11524) for the relief of Samuel Howard—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11525) for the relief of William Pastell—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11526) to correct the military record of Capt. Thomas E. Holland's company of Georgia Mounted Volunteers—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. TOMPKINS of Ohio: A bill (H. R. 11527) to correct military record of Charles H. Jessup—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WHEELER: A bill (H. R. 11528) for the relief of Vina Furguson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WILLIAMS of Illinois: A bill (H. R. 11529) for the relief of the heirs of R. H. Montgomery, of Holmes County, Miss.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BALL of Delaware: A bill (H. R. 11530) granting an increase of pension to William J. Williams—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11531) to correct the military record of William J. McNatt—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11532) to remove the charge of desertion from the military service of John Gilsenen—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BROUSSARD: A bill (H. R. 11533) for the relief of Remy Bagary, of Iberia Parish, La.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. PERKINS: A bill (H. R. 11534) for the relief of Hugh McGuckin—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER: Petitions of E. C. Little Post, No. 54; Sam Rice Post, No. 6, Department of Iowa; William McKee Post, No. 110; Blythedale Post, No. 551; Marion Post, No. 119; Andy Martin Post, No. 259, Department of Missouri; E. C. D. West Post, No. 168; James A. Garfield Post, No. 46, Department of Maine; G. W. Larrimore Post, No. 445; Joseph Cross Post, No. 691; T. J. Stanley Post, No. 295, Department of Ohio; Lincoln Post, Charlestown, N. H.; Live Eagle Post, Fullerton, Nebr.; L. S. Payne Post, North Tonawanda, N. Y.; J. W. Thornburg Post, Odon, Ind.; Eli Berlin Post, East Hickory, Pa.; A. H. Dutton Post, Wallingford, Conn.; Caldwell Post, Lake City, Mich.; John A. Logan Post, Ashaway, R. I., Grand Army of the Republic, for investigation of the administration of the Bureau of Pensions—to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. ACHESON: Petition of Ripper Lodge, No. 263, of Washington, Pa., favoring the building of vessels in the United States navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolution of Ripper Lodge, of Washington, Pa., for exclusion of Chinese—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of the First Reformed Presbyterian Church of Beaver Falls, Pa., in opposition to the reenactment of Chinese-exclusion law—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. ADAMSON: Petition of Garment Makers' Union No. 63, of Columbus, Ga., in favor of the reenactment of Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. ALEXANDER: Resolution of Tile Layers' Union No. 5, and Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association No. 1, Buffalo, N. Y., in favor of laws restricting immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. BABCOCK: Resolution of Will Hickok Post, No. 134, Grand Army of the Republic, Bloomington, Wis., favoring the construction of Government vessels in navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. BARTHOLDT: Resolutions of Broom Makers' Union No. 45, and Badge and Lodge Paraphernalia Makers' Union No. 9136, Iron Molders' Union No. 7413, National Building Trades Council, and Carpenters and Joiners' Union No. 51, of St. Louis, Mo., favoring the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of the National Trades Council of America, favoring irrigation by the General Government—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

Also, resolution of citizens of St. Louis, Mo., regarding House bill 7189 and Senate bill 2162, relating to the United States Marine-Hospital Service—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, resolutions of Beer Drivers and Stablemen's Union No. 43, of St. Louis, Mo., concerning the relief of reconcentrados in South Africa—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of Musicians' Mutual Benefit Association of St. Louis, Mo., urging that the navy-yards be utilized for the construction of war vessels—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, petition of citizens of St. Louis, Mo., in favor of a Federal election law—to the Committee on Election of President, Vice-President, and Representatives in Congress.

By Mr. BOUTELL: Petition of A. C. Miller and others, of Chicago, Ill., in relation to the report of the Department of Labor, under an act of March 3, 1887—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. BOWERSOCK: Resolution of Western Retail Implement and Vehicle Dealers' Association, held in Kansas City, Mo., against House bill 6578, known as the parcels-post bill—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, resolution of George H. Thomas Post, No. 18, of Ottawa, Kans., favoring the construction of Government vessels in navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolutions of Coopers' Union No. 18, of Kansas City, Kans., concerning the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. BROWNLOW: Petition of the heir of Jacob Shelton, deceased, late of Tennessee, for reference of war claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BRUNDIDGE: Petition of James H. Merritt, of Dewitt, Ark., praying reference of war claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BURKE of South Dakota: Resolution of the Typographical Union No. 218, of Sioux Falls, S. Dak., favoring the Chinese-exclusion act and the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of Silas A. Strickland Post, No. 127, of Hot Springs, S. Dak., favoring the construction of war ships at the navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. BURLESON: Resolution of Trades Council of Austin, Tex., favoring the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. CORLISS: Resolution of Tobacco Workers' Union of Detroit, Mich., favoring the construction of war vessels in Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. COWHERD: Papers to accompany House bill 11424, granting a pension to Mrs. A. Crismas, wife of Hiram Dickinson—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CUSHMAN: Petition of the Alaska Chamber of Commerce, of Juneau, Alaska, relative to desired legislation for the district of Alaska—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. EMERSON: Resolutions of Cigar Makers' Union No. 279, of Plattsburg, N. Y., in favor of the reenactment of Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, papers in support of House bill 3516, granting an increase of pension to O. F. Cheney—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany House bill 4799, granting a pension to Mrs. S. A. Fay—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, papers to accompany House bill 7238 for the relief of William Brown—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, papers to accompany House bill 11489, granting an increase of pension to William D. West—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ESCH: Resolution of the Lake Seamen's Union, against Chinese labor—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of the Lake Seamen's Union, in opposition to House bill 7189, changing the name of the United States Marine-Hospital Service—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. FITZGERALD: Petition of Central Tea Growers and Traders' Association, of Japan, for the repeal of the tax on tea—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of New York Retail Grocers' Union, protesting against the removal of the duty on teas—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolution of the Oklahoma City Commercial Club, urging the admission of Oklahoma and Indian Territory as a single State of the Union—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. FOERDERER: Resolution of National Building Trades

Council, favoring the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolution of the National Building Trades Council, in relation to the sale of public lands and the irrigation of arid lands—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

Also, resolutions of the United Retail Grocers' Association of Brooklyn, and New York Retail Grocers' Union, of New York City, in relation to the duty on tea—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolution of the executive board of the American Lace Curtain Operatives' Union of Philadelphia, Pa., favoring the exclusion of Chinese—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of the Grocers and Importers' Exchange of Philadelphia, urging the creation of a department of commerce and industries—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, resolutions of the Grocers and Importers' Exchange of Philadelphia, favoring Cuban reciprocity—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. FOSS: Resolutions of the National Tea Duty Repeal Association, in relation to the duty on teas—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of officers of societies, protesting against the enactment of any law to exclude honest, able-bodied foreigners from immigrating to this country—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. FOWLER: Petition of the Presbytery of New Brunswick, N. J., against the repeal of the anticanteen law—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of Chicago and Northwestern Railway Telegraphers, Division No. 76, and Cigar Makers' Union No. 427, of Rahway, N. J., for the restriction of illiterate immigrants—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of Board of Chosen Freeholders of Hudson County, N. J., concerning the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of Typographical Union No. 23, of Rahway, N. J., and American Wire Weavers' Protective Association, of Belleville, N. J., favoring the construction of war ships at the navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. GAINES of Tennessee: Petition of Rock City Division, No. 135, Order of Railway Conductors, Nashville, Tenn., praying for the further restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. GILLET of New York: Petition of Gregory Post, No. 649, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of New York, for investigation of the administration of the Bureau of Pensions—to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. GRAHAM: Petition of the United Presbyterian Church of Sewickley, Pa., in opposition to the exclusion of Chinese—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of Merchants' Association of New York, in favor of the establishment of reciprocal relations with Cuba—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolution of the Oklahoma City Commercial Club, Territory of Oklahoma, in favor of single statehood for Oklahoma and Indian Territories—to the Committee on the Territories.

Also, petition of S. Saito, for the repeal of the duty on tea—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts: Resolution of National Building Trades Council, Worcester, Mass., and Boot and Shoe Workers' Union No. 238, of New Bedford, Mass., in favor of the reenactment of Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of the National Building Trades Council, held at Worcester, Mass., in relation to the leasing of public lands, irrigation, and homesteads—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, resolution of the National Association of Machinists, Boston, Mass., favoring the construction of war ships at the navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. GRIFFITH: Resolution of Indianapolis Division, No. 11, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, of Indianapolis, Ind., in support of Senate bill 1118, limiting the meaning of the word "conspiracy," etc.—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HAUGEN: Resolution of Hughes Post, No. 168, Grand Army of the Republic, Decorah, Iowa, for the construction of war vessels in Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolution of Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Division No. 117, of Mason City, Iowa, favoring restriction of undesirable immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. HAY: Petition of George W. Bromley, of Frederick County, Va., for reference of war claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of the heir of John B. Almond, deceased, of Page County, Va., for reference of war claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of Branon Thatcher, of Frederick County, Va., for reference of war claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. HEMENWAY. Resolution of Post No. 139, Grand Army of the Republic, of Fulsomville, Ind., favoring the construction of war vessels in Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolution of the Tinners' Union No. 96, of Evansville, Ind., concerning the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of Iron Molders' Union No. 51, of Evansville, Ind., for an educational test in the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. HENRY of Connecticut: Resolution of Carpenters' Union No. 757, of South Manchester, Conn., American Federation of Labor, concerning the construction of Government vessels in navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolution of Unity Lodge, No. 436, of New Britain, Conn., favoring the passage of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. HILL: Resolutions of Cigar Makers' Unions Nos. 139, of Long Hill, Conn., and 130, of Danbury, Conn., favoring the continuation of the exclusion law against Chinese laborers—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of Carpenters' Unions Nos. 216, of Torrington, and 115, of Bridgeport; Typographical Union No. 143 and Iron Molders' Union No. 110, of Danbury; Sheet Metal Workers' Lodge No. 127, of South Norwalk, Conn., for restriction of immigration, etc.—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. HOWELL: Petition of Cigar Makers' Union No. 146, of New Brunswick, N. J., for the restriction of illiterate immigrants—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolutions of Hiawatha Council, Junior Order United American Mechanics, of East Millstone, N. J., relating to the suppression of anarchy—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Cigar Makers' Union No. 146, of New Brunswick, N. J., favoring the reenactmeut of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. JACKSON of Kansas: Resolution of Union No. 157, of Pittsburg, Kans., for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. LITTAUER: Papers to accompany House bill correcting the military record of Seneca S. Van Ness—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. LITTLE: Petition of J. M. Cooper, heir at law of Marie Cooper, deceased, late of Saline County, Ark., for reference of war claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of Susan Allen, heir at law of Isaac T. Epler, deceased, late of Sebastian County, Ark., for reference of war claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of John B. Clark, heir at law of Asa Clark, deceased, late of Fort Smith, Ark., for reference of war claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. LITTLEFIELD: Petition of Lewiston (Me.) post-office clerks, urging the passage of House bill 5286, for the reclassification of salaries—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, resolution of Union No. 273, of Rockland, Me., for the reenactment of the Chinese exclusion law—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. LOUDENSLAGER: Resolution of Glass Bottle Blowers' Association, of Woodbury, N. J., and American Flint Glass Workers' Union of Millville, N. J., favoring the enactment of a law excluding the Chinese without limitation from this country—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. MAHONEY: Petitions of H. C. Valentine and numerous other citizens of Chicago, Ill., and of the Fifth Congressional district of Illinois, in behalf of such intervention on the part of the United States for the cessation of hostilities in the Transvaal as may reestablish peace upon honorable terms—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. McCULLOCH: Petition of Mary Johnson, of Cross County, Ark., for reference of war claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of C. G. Dorris, heir at law of Othello E. Dorris, deceased, late of St. Francis County, Ark., praying reference of war claim to Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of W. R. Hicks, heir at law of J. C. Hill, deceased, late of St. Francis County, Ark., praying reference of war claim to Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. McANDREWS: Sundry petitions of citizens of the Fourth Congressional district of Illinois, in behalf of such intervention on the part of the United States for the cessation of hostilities in the Transvaal as may reestablish peace upon honorable terms—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of Journeymen Plasterers of Chicago, Ill., favoring restriction of undesirable immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of the West Side Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of Chicago, Ill., and the Metropolitan Church of Christ, of Chicago, for the abolition of the saloon in the island possessions of the United States—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. McRAE: Petition of John Q. Taylor, of Arkansas, praying reference of war claim to Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of W. P. Barton, heir at law of J. W. Barton, deceased, of Clark County, Ark., praying reference of war claim to Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MERCER: Resolution of Sedgwick Post, No. 1, Grand Army of the Republic, Omaha, Nebr., favoring the construction of war vessels in Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolutions of Sheep Butchers' Union, Beef Butchers' Union, and Stationery Firemen, of South Omaha; Theatrical Stage Employees' Union of Omaha, Nebr., for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. MIERS of Indiana: Resolutions of Grand Army of the Republic post at Freedom, Ind., favoring the building of war vessels in the navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. NORTON: Resolution of Jaqueth Post, No. 196, Grand Army of the Republic, Sycamore, Ohio, favoring the construction of war vessels in Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolution of National Brotherhood of Operative Potters, Tiffin, Ohio, and Iron Molders' Union of Bucyrus, Ohio, favoring exclusion of the Chinese from the United States and our insular possessions—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of Iron Molders' Union No. 352, Bucyrus, Ohio, favoring an educational test in the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition in support of House bill 5192, granting an increase of pension to John English—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, papers to accompany House bill 7856, granting an increase of pension to Wilson H. Davis—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, petition of Joseph A. Van Pelt, to accompany House bill 10963, granting him a pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PATTERSON of Pennsylvania: Petition of Retail Clerks' Union No. 469, Shenandoah, Pa., American Federation of Labor, favoring the construction of war ships at the navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolution of United Brewery Workmen's Union, of Pottsville, Pa., for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. PATTERSON of Tennessee: Resolution of Memphis Cotton Exchange, Memphis, Tenn., favoring improvement of rivers and harbors—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana: Petition of B. J. Crosswait Post, No. 150, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Indiana, for investigation of the administration of the Bureau of Pensions—to the Committee on Rules.

Also, resolution of Steam Engineers' Union No. 19, Fort Wayne, Ind., favoring the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of James Butler, of Gage, Ind., for reciprocal trade relations with Cuba—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. REID: Petition of Mrs. M. J. Spake, of Pulaski County, Ark., for reference of war claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of Mrs. R. M. Scruggs, heir at law of Mary Lefevre, deceased, late of Pulaski County, Ark., for reference of war claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. RICHARDSON of Alabama: Papers to accompany House bill 5609, for the relief of Sallie C. Smith—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, papers in support of House bill 7844, providing for the erection of a public building in the city of Florence, Ala.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. ROBB: Papers to accompany House bill for the relief of George Kinnard—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, papers to accompany House bill 4128, granting a pension to Rhoda Burnham—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RUPPERT: Resolution of the Amalgamated Wood Workers' Union No. 92, of Clinton, Iowa, for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law and favoring an educational test in the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of the New York Retail Grocers' Union, in relation to the removal of the duty on teas—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SCHIRM: Resolution of Amalgamated Woodworkers' Union No. 6, of Baltimore, Md., favoring the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. SCOTT: Resolution of Western Retail Implement and Vehicle Dealers' Association, held in Kansas City, Mo., against House bill 6578, known as the parcels-post bill—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. SHALLENBERGER: Petition of Clearman & Hines and 6 other merchants of Heartwell, Nebr., against House bill 6578, known as the parcels-post bill—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. SHERMAN: Papers to accompany House bill 11337, for the relief of the legal representatives of James and Milton Caldwell—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, resolution of Mailers' Union No. 19, of Utica, N. Y., in favor of the reenactment of Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of Amalgamated Leather Workers' Union No. 10, of Littlefalls, N. Y., praying for the further restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, protest of the Quapaw tribe of Indians, of Indian Territory, against the annexation of Indian Territory—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. SNOOK: Resolution of Cigar Makers' Union No. 166, of Defiance, Ohio, praying for the further restriction of immigration—to the Committtee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolution of the National Building Trades Council of America, concerning the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of National Building Trades Council of St. Louis, Mo., favoring irrigation of arid lands—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

Also, resolutions adopted by the Addison Clark Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of Ohio, favoring the construction of naval vessels at the Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. SPERRY: Resolution of Excelsior Lodge, No. 259, of Derby, Conn., favoring the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. STARK: Papers in support of House bill 10023, granting an increase of pension to William Mills, Beatrice, Nebr.—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. STEWART of New York: Papers to accompany House bill No. 11521, relating to the correction of the military record of Wesley Mickel—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SULLOWAY: Petitions of the Woman's Christian Temperance Unions of Sanbornville, Manchester, Nottingham, Water Village, Tilton, and Northwood, all of New Hampshire, favoring the adoption of an antipolygamy amendment to the Constitution—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. WOODS: Resolution of Stockton Federated Trades, for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of the Chamber of Commerce of San Francisco, Cal., favoring a light and fog-signal station at Point Buchon, California, and also at a point on Karquines Strait, California—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, resolution of the Chamber of Commerce of San Francisco, urging favorable consideration of the bill which provides for a reorganization of the consular service—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. YOUNG: Petition of S. Saito, Washington, D. C., for the repeal of the duty on teas—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolutions of New York Retail Grocers' Union, against repeal of duty on tea—to the Committee an Ways and Means.

Also, resolutions of the National Building Trades Council of St. Louis, Mo., and of Local Union No. 114, of Ottumwa, Iowa, favoring the exclusion of the Chinese—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of National Building Trades Council of America, favoring the irrigation of the arid lands of the United States—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

Also, petition of the Grocers and Importers' Exchange of Philadelphia, favoring a reciprocity treaty with Cuba—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolutions of the Grocers and Importers' Exchange of Philadelphia, Pa., urging the creation of a department of commerce and industries—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, resolutions of G. W. Childs Division 353, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Philadelphia, Pa., in favor of laws restricting immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, papers to accompany House bill for the removal of the charge of desertion from the military record of George W. Smith—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

SENATE.

WEDNESDAY, February 19, 1902.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when, on request of Mr. KEAN, and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the Journal will stand approved.

PRINTING OF GEOLOGICAL SURVEY REPORTS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a letter from the Director of the Geological Survey calling attention to the advisability of a change in existing law regarding the printing of his annual report, etc., which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on the Geological Survey, and ordered to be printed.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. KEAN presented the memorial of Mrs. Joel Borton, of New Jersey, remonstrating against the regulation and control of vice by the board of health of Manila; which was referred to the Committee on the Philippines.

He also presented a petition of Hiawatha Council, No. 110, Junior Order United American Mechanics, of East Millstone, N. J., praying for the enactment of legislation to suppress anarchy; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of Cigar Makers' Local Union No. 427, American Federation of Labor, of Rahway, N. J., praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented petitions of Monitor Council, No. 83, of Hackettstown; of Speedwell Council, No. 227, of Morristown, Junior Order United American Mechanics, and of Federal Labor Union No. 7211, American Federation of Labor, of Dover, all in the State of New Jersey, praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which were referred to the Committee on Immi gration.

Mr. FAIRBANKS presented a petition of the Quarterly Meeting of Friends, of Westfield, Ind., praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of firearms and intoxicating liquors in the island possessions of the United States; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented petitions of Division No. 11, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, of Indianapolis, and of Division No. 221, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, of Huntington, in the State of Indiana, praying for the passage of the so-called Hoar anti-injunction bill to limit the meaning of the word "conspiracy" and the use of "restraining orders and injunctions" in certain cases; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented the petition of Katherine H. Day and sundry other members of the Home Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church, of Indianapolis, Ind., praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented petitions of Steam Engineers' Local Union No. 19, of Fort Wayne; of Cigar Makers' Local Union No. 221, of South Bend; of Local Branch No. 61, Glass Bottle Blowers' Union, of Gas City, and of W. C. Beaty and sundry other citizens of Linton, all in the State of Indiana, praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a petition of the Goshen Milling Company, of Goshen, Ind., praying for the adoption of certain amendments to the interstate-commerce law; which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented the petitions of Charley Thornton and sundry other citizens of Bristol; of Z. T. Strong and sundry other citizens of Muncie; of I. O. Grimes, of Martinsburg, and of L. D. Pierle, of Martinsburg, all in the State of Indiana, praying for the passage of the so-called Grout bill to regulate the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine; which were referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented petitions of Local Union No. 652, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, of Elwood, and of the Trades and Labor Council of Fort Wayne, in the State of Indiana, praying for the repeal of the so-called desert-land law and also for the commutation clause of the homestead act; which were referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

He also presented petitions of Hackelman Post, No. 64, of Brookville; of Harrison Cathcart Post, No. 117, of Bristol, Department of Indiana, Grand Army of the Republic; of Elwood Typographical Union, No. 331, of Elwood; of Friendship Lodge, No. 70, of Fort Wayne, and of Journeymen Horseshoers' Local Union No. 81, of the American Federation of Labor, all in the State of Indiana, praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. MCMILLAN presented a petition of sundry business men of Detroit, Mich., praying for the establishment of reciprocal trade relations with the Dominion of Canada; which was referred to the Committee on Relations with Canada.

Mr. WETMORE presented a petition of Farragut Post, No. 8, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Rhode Island, of Providence, R. I., praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. PERKINS presented petitions of United Metal Workers' Union No. 47, Granite Cutters' National Union, of Raymond; of the Federated Trades Union, American Federation of Labor, of Stockton; of the Marine Cooks and Stewards' Association of the Pacific Coast, of San Francisco, and of the Chamber of Commerce and Merchants' Exchange of San Francisco, all in the State of California, praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a petition of the Chamber of Commerce of San Francisco, Cal., praying for the adoption of certain changes in the consular service; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of the Chamber of Commerce and Merchants' Exchange of San Francisco, Cal., praying for the enactment of legislation granting unrestricted entrance into the United States to all members of the mercantile class of Chinese, such as salesmen, clerks, buyers, bookkeepers, accountants, managers, storekeepers, bankers, and cashiers; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. NELSON presented a petition of the Chamber of Commerce of St. Paul, Minn., praying that an appropriation be made for the construction of reservoirs in the arid regions of the country; which was referred to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation of Arid Lands.

Mr. HAWLEY presented a petition of sundry citizens of Watertown, Conn., praying that generous treatment be accorded the inhabitants of Cuba and the Philippines; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Watertown, Conn., praying for the ratification of reciprocity treaties with foreign countries; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. DIETRICH presented petitions of sundry citizens of Dorsey, Omaha, Blackbird, Meek, Knoxville, Bellevue, Fairburg, and of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Fairburg, all in the State of Nebraska, praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of the Omaha Association of Credit Men, of Omaha, Nebr., praying for the adoption of certain amendments to the present bankruptcy law; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of Cigar Makers' Local Union No. 276, of Plattsmouth, Nebr., praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented petitions of Local Union No. 82, Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen, of Omaha; of Carpenters and Joiners' Local Union No. 427, of Omaha; of Local Union No. 180, International Association of Machinists, of North Platte; of Omaha Typographical Union, No. 190, of Omaha; of Carpenters and Joiners' Local Union No. 113, of Lincoln, and of Cigar Makers' Local Union No. 276, of Plattsmouth, all of the American Federation of Labor, in the State of Nebraska, praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented petitions of Buford Post, No. 23, of Central City; of Rising City Post, No. 20, of Rising City; of Local Post, No. 155, of Kenesaw; of Neligh Post, No. 68, of Neligh, and of Lyon Post, No. 11, of Grand Island, all of the Department of Nebraska, Grand Army of the Republic, in the State of Nebraska, praying that preference be given to veterans in the employment of mechanics and laborers in the navy-yards of the country; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented a memorial of the Chamber of Commerce of Sacramento, Cal., remonstrating against the admission of sugar and other products grown in Cuba free of duty into this country; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. HANSBROUGH presented a petition of Company B, First Infantry, North Dakota National Guards, of Fargo, N. Dak., praying for the enactment of legislation to increase the efficiency of the militia, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. MASON presented a memorial of sundry business men of New Athens, Ill., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called parcels-post bill; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented a petition of sundry wholesale grocers and tea merchants of Chicago, Ill., praying for the repeal of the duty on tea; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of the Illinois State Brewers' Association, praying for the repeal of the war tax on beer; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of Somonauk, Woodstock, Elida, Amboy, Rockford, Hebron, Poplargrove, Creston, Delavan, Mount Carroll, Compton, Plainfield, Freebury, Lockport, Gardenplain, Belvidere, Ivanhoe, Elgin, Hinsdale, and Chicago, all in the State of Illinois, praying for the passage of the so-called Grout bill to regulate the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine; which were referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented a petition of Iron Molders' Union No. 134, American Federation of Labor, of Kewanee, Ill., and a petition of Local Union No. 125, Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paper Hangers, of Litchfield, Ill., praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the enactment of an eight-hour law for all manufacturing and mercantile establishments in the United States; which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a memorial of the Ministerial Union of the Congregational Churches of Chicago, Ill., remonstrating against the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented petitions of Pressmen's Local Union No. 68, of Peoria; of the United Glass Workers' Local Union No. 9441, of Streator; of Elgin Union, No. 128, of Elgin; of the Boiler Makers and Iron Shipbuilders' Local Union No. 227, of Chicago; of Cigar Makers' Local Union No. 294, of Sycamore; of Federal Labor Union No. 8374, of Decatur; of Federal Labor Union No. 7241, of Dundee; of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, of Kewanee; of Federal Labor Union No. 9020, of Beardstown; of the Post-Office Clerks' Union No. 8703, of Chicago, and of the Journeyman Barbers' Local Union No. 119, of Pontiac, all of the American Federation of Labor; of the Scandinavian Local Union No. 194, Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators, of Chicago, and of Local Union No. 781, United Mine Workers of America, of Decatur, all in the State of Illinois, and of the Building Trades Council, American Federation of Labor, of Minneapolis, Minn., praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a petition of the Merchants' Association of New York, praying for the reorganization of the consular service; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. MILLARD presented a petition of 36 citizens of Fairburg, Nebr., praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of 54 post-office clerks of Omaha, Nebr., praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the classification of the salaries of clerks in first and second class post-offices; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented a petition of 102 business firms of Omaha, Nebr., praying for the adoption of certain amendments to the present bankruptcy law; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens and business firms of Lincoln, O'Neill, York, Omaha, Riverton, Archer, Amelia, Osceola, Cavenna, Wahoo, Fremont, Havelock, Elwood, Emmet, Minden, Clarks, Ponca, Newport, Petersburg, Pawnee City, Gasper, Anita, Gibbon, Oakland, Palmer, Wilber, Savage, Schuyler, Neligh, and Kearney, all in the State of Nebraska, praying for the passage of the so-called Grout bill to regulate the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine; which were referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented petitions of Coopers' Local Union No. 10, American Federation of Labor, of South Omaha; of Dahlgren Post, No. 55, of Papillion; of Sedgwick Post, No. 1, of Kearney; of E. M. Stanton Post, No. 20, of Rising City, and of D. S. Crawford Post, No. 197, of Westpoint, all of the Department of Nebraska, Grand Army of the Republic, in the State of Nebraska, praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. GALLINGER presented a petition of sundry citizens of New Hampshire, praying for the passage of the so-called Grout bill to regulate the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented petitions of the Woman's Christian Temperance Unions of Center Sandwich, Wolfeboro, and Wilton, all in the State of New Hampshire, praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. CLARK of Montana presented a petition of Federal Labor Union No. 175, American Federation of Labor, of Kalispell, Mont., and a petition of Brewery Workers' Union No. 27, American Federation of Labor, of Kalispell, Mont., praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. BLACKBURN presented a petition of Grateful Lodge No. 494, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, of Lexington, Ky., praying for the passage of the so-called Hoar antiinjunction bill, to limit the meaning of the word "conspiracy" and the use of "restraining orders and injunctions" in certain cases; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of Tobacco Workers' International Union No. 68, American Federation of Labor, of Henderson, Ky., praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. MITCHELL presented a statement to accompany the bill (S. 1468) for the relief of Henry Bash and the bill (S. 1668) for the relief of Custis Parke Upshur; which was referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also presented the petition of Sarah Cleveland Nicklin, of Portland, Oreg., praying that she be granted a pension; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented the petition of Arthur I. Chapman, of Portland, Oreg., praying that he be granted a pension; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented memorials of sundry citizens of Vale, Ontario, Cord, Westfall, and Dell, all in the State of Oregon, remonstrating against the enactment of legislation looking to any change as to the public domain, either by lease or otherwise; which were referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. FORAKER presented a memorial of the Trades and Labor Council of Ironton, Ohio, remonstrating against the sentence imposed upon and subsequent imprisonment of Santiago Iglesias and other citizens of Porto Rico; which was referred to the Committee on Pacific Islands and Porto Rico.

Mr. FRYE presented a memorial of the National Live Stock Exchange, remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Grout bill to regulate the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

THE NICARAGUA CANAL.

Mr. PLATT of New York. I move that an article on the Nicaragua Canal, contributed by the late Gen. Ulysses S. Grant to the North American Review, in relation to the Nicaragua Canal, be printed as a document and referred to the Committee on Interoceanic Canals.

The motion was agreed to.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. BURNHAM, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3546) for the relief of L. A. Noyes, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. CULLOM, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, to whom the subject was referred, reported a bill (S. 4012) to authorize G. B. Brackett, Pomologist, Department of Agriculture, to accept a decoration tendered to him by the Government of the French Republic; which was read twice by its title.

He also, from the same committee, reported an amendment proposing to appropriate $750 for salary of consul at Riga, Russia, intended to be proposed to the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill, and moved that it be printed, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Appropriations; which was agreed to.

He also, from the same committee, to whom were referred the following bills, reported adversely thereon, and the bills were postponed indefinitely:

A bill (S. 2297) to authorize the issue of letters rogatory by the Spanish Treaty Claims Commission; and

A bill (S. 3285) defining the evidence to be received by the Spanish Treaty Claims Commission.

Mr. LODGE, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1618) to provide for the reorganization of the consular service of the United States, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED.

Mr. COCKRELL introduced a bill (S. 4013) granting an increase of pension to Stephen M. Fitzwater; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. COCKRELL. To accompany the bill I present the application for increase of pension of Stephen M. Fitzwater, together with his military record and a report from the Pension Office and the affidavits of Dr. U. F. Kerr, G. H. Simmons, J. B. Melton, James D. Head, and H. H. Lee. I move that the bill and accompanying papers be referred to the Committee on Pensions.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL introduced a bill (S. 4014) granting an increase of pension to John J. Roberts; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. COCKRELL. To accompany the bill I present the petition for increase of pension of John J. Roberts, together with the affidavits of Dr. Z. T. Martin, A. Helphenstine, and J. T. Quick and records from the War Department, Auditor's Office, and Pension Office. I move that the bill and accompanying papers be referred to the Committee on Pensions.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CULLOM introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 4015) granting an increase of pension to Susan C. Gilbreath (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 4016) granting a pension to Mary Keys (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 4017) granting an increase of pension to William St. Martz; and

A bill (S. 4018) granting a pension to Calvin S. James (with accompanying papers).

Mr. CULLOM introduced a bill (S. 4019) authorizing the Secretary of War to issue an honorable discharge to Asa Collins; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. WETMORE introduced a bill (S. 4020) for the relief of the heirs and legal representatives of those who were killed by the explosion of the gun-cotton factory at the United States torpedo station at Newport, R. I.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. HAWLEY introduced a bill (S. 4021) granting a pension to Sarah Frances Taft; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. DRYDEN introduced a bill (S. 4022) granting an increase of pension to Annie E. Brown; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. McMILLAN introduced a bill (S. 4023) granting an increase of pension to Alman J. Houston; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. DEPEW introduced a bill (S. 4024) for the relief of G. G. Martin; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. FAIRBANKS introduced a bill (S. 4025) granting a pension to Joseph B. Voris; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4026) to remove the charge of desertion from the record of F. W. Zickendrath; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. MASON introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 4027) granting a pension to Sophia McClelland (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 4028) granting an increase of pension to Michael G. Kauffmann (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 4029) granting a pension to Mary J. Parker (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 4030) granting a pension to Charles F. Huston (with an accompanying paper);

A bill (S. 4031) granting an increase of pension to William E. Ward (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 4032) granting an increase of pension to Orrin L. Mann;

A bill (S. 4033) granting an increase of pension to William H. Wilson (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 4034) granting an increase of pension to Emma Ochs (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 4035) granting an increase of pension to Samuel J. Reed (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 4036) granting a pension to Napoleon B. Greathouse (with accompanying papers); and

A bill (S. 4037) granting an increase of pension to James McTwiggan (with accompanying papers).

Mr. MASON introduced a bill (S. 4038) to provide for the education of the blind, and so forth; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4039) granting an honorable discharge to Nelson J. Blatherwick; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4040) for the relief of Benton L. Phillips; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4041) for the relief of F. J. Bissell; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. MILLARD introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 4042) granting an increase of pension to William H. Norton (with accompanying papers); and

A bill (S. 4043) granting an increase of pension to Catharine A. Carroll (with accompanying papers).

Mr. KITTREDGE introduced a bill (S. 4044) for the relief of J. G. Vincent; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. PETTUS introduced a bill (S. 4045) for the relief of George F. Ormsby; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4046) for the relief of Samuel F. Ryan; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. CARMACK introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Claims:

A bill (S. 4047) for the relief of the estate of Phoebe Cummings, deceased (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 4048) for the relief of the estate of Edwin Grant (with an accompanying paper);

A bill (S. 4049) for the relief of the estate of B. H. Caldwell (with an accompanying paper);

A bill (S. 4050) for the relief of the estate of F. T. McLaurine (with an accompanying paper);

A bill (S. 4051) for the relief of the estate of Andrew Scott (with an accompanying paper);

A bill (S. 4052) for the relief of the estate of Jonathan Mills (with an accompanying paper);

A bill (S. 4053) for the relief of the estate of Lemuel Long (with an accompanying paper);

A bill (S. 4054) for the relief of E. C. Overton (with an accompanying paper); and

A bill (S. 4055) for the relief of James Crews.

Mr. DOLLIVER introduced a bill (S. 4056) granting an increase of pension to Minerva Melton; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. BLACKBURN introduced a bill (S. 4057) granting an increase of pension to Frank M. Schell; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4058) for the relief of Sarah K. T. Baker; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. PETTUS introduced a bill (S. 4059) for the relief of George B. Caldwell as administrator of Hamlin Caldwell, deceased; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. CLAY introduced a bill (S. 4060) for the relief of the estate of Leander C. McLelland, deceased; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. FORAKER introduced a bill (S. 4061) granting a pension to Lina V. Dietz; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. NELSON (by request) introduced a joint resolution (S. R. 60) giving the thanks of Congress to Capt. Charles A. De Arnaud, on the staff of General Frémont, Missouri Volunteers, for very important and meritorious services rendered to the country in 1861; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

AMENDMENTS TO BILLS.

Mr. LODGE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 8587) for the allowance of certain claims for stores and supplies reported by the Court of Claims under the provisions of the act approved March 3, 1883, and commonly known as the Bowman Act; which was referred to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MONEY submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 8587) for the allowance of certain claims for stores and supplies reported by the Court of Claims under the provisions of the act approved March 3, 1883, and commonly known as the Bowman Act; which was referred to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. FORAKER submitted an amendment providing for an increase in the salary of the consul at Mannheim, Germany, intended to be proposed by him to the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment providing for an increase in the allowance for clerk hire at the consulate at Edinburgh, Scotland, intended to be proposed by him to the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment providing for an increase in the salary of the consul at Turin, Italy, intended to be proposed by him to the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment providing for a change of the consulate at Rosario, Argentine, from class 6 to class 4, intended to be proposed by him to the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment providing for an increase in the salary of the consul at Cologne, Germany, intended to be proposed by him to the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed.

INDEX OF PUBLIC DOCUMENTS.

Mr. CULLOM submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed the number of copies hereafter stated of Tables of an Annotated Index to the Congressional Series of United States Public Documents, prepared under the supervision of the Superintendent of Documents, 5,000 copies, 1,000 copies for the use of the Senate, 3,000 for the House of Representatives, and 1,000 for the Superintendent of Documents.

APPORTIONMENT OF DEPARTMENTAL EMPLOYEES.

Mr. TILLMAN submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Civil Service Commission is hereby directed to transmit to the Senate a full and accurate statement showing the apportionment among the several departments of the Government of persons now in the classified service from the several States and Territories and the District of Columbia, and giving the percentages of the same as provided in section 2 of an act entitled "An act to regulate and improve the civil service of the United States," approved January 16, 1883.

REPORT OF INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION.

Mr. BARD submitted the following resolution; which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved, That 5,000 copies of the report of the Industrial Commission on irrigation, which is incorporated in the final report of the Industrial Commission, Volume XIX, pages 1071 to 1084, inclusive, be printed, and that 2,500 copies thereof be printed and bound in paper covers for the use of the Geological Survey.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. C. R. MCKENNEY, its enrolling clerk, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10308) to provide for a permanent Census Office, asks a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. HOPKINS, Mr. RUSSELL, and Mr. GRIFFITH managers at the conference on the part of the House.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills, and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (S. 193) granting a pension to Richard W. Musgrove;

A bill (S. 194) granting a pension to Joseph W. Mulford;

A bill (S. 197) granting an increase of pension to John Chandler;

A bill (S. 199) granting an increase of pension to Nathaniel Eaton;

A bill (S. 200) granting an increase of pension to Eunice P. Detweiler;

A bill (S. 232) granting a pension to Mary E. W. Morgan;

A bill (S. 526) granting an increase of pension to John McGrath;

A bill (S. 568) granting an increase of pension to Henry Fisher;

A bill (S. 692) granting an increase of pension to Daniel T. Rose;

A bill (S. 887) granting an increase of pension to Sarah McCord;

A bill (S. 888) granting an increase of pension to Mary Taylor;

A bill (S. 889) granting an increase of pension to Charles F. Burger;

A bill (S. 890) granting an increase of pension to Catharine Moore;

A bill (S. 891) granting a pension to Lucinda W. Cavender;

A bill (S. 919) granting an increase of pension to Daniel C. Knowels;

A bill (S. 920) granting an increase of pension to Francis M. Reilly;

A bill (S. 1020) for the relief of John Emerson;

A bill (S. 1094) granting an increase of pension to Henry Gifford Dunbar;

A bill (S. 1143) granting an increase of pension to Charles L. Sweatt;

A bill (S. 1148) granting an increase of pension to Dennis Hannifin;

A bill (S. 1167) granting an increase of pension to John Ferguson;

A bill (S. 1267) granting an increase of pension to Susan F. Connit;

A bill (S. 1329) granting an increase of pension to George W. Black;

A bill (S. 1337) granting an increase of pension to Mary R. Miller;

A bill (S. 1465) granting an increase of pension to George Fowler;

A bill (S. 1610) granting an increase of pension to Napoleon B. Perkins;

A bill (S. 1621) granting an increase of pension to David Pollock;

A bill (S. 1622) granting a pension to Theophilus Goodwin;

A bill (S. 1783) granting an increase of pension to Henry B. Schraeder;

A bill (S. 1805) granting a pension to Laura B. Wear;

A bill (S. 1977) granting an increase of pension to Harrison T. De Long;

A bill (S. 2010) granting an increase of pension to Marcia M. Merritt;

A bill (S. 2107) granting a pension to Matilda Armstrong;

A bill (S. 2128) granting a pension to Jane Taylor;

A bill (S. 2131) granting a pension to Carolina N. Allen;

A bill (S. 2161) granting an increase of pension to A. Custis Stever Carpenter;

A bill (S. 2334) granting an increase of pension to Oscar Reed;

A bill (S. 2359) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Hymer;

A bill (S. 2389) granting a pension to John E. Farrell;

A bill (S. 2390) granting a pension to Nellie M. Emery;

A bill (S. 2392) granting an increase of pension to Elmer L. Stevens;

A bill (S. 2484) granting an increase of pension to Loren S. Richardson;

A bill (S. 2485) granting an increase of pension to Tempy French;

A bill (H. R. 286) granting an increase of pension to Lawrentus Lane;

A bill (H. R. 287) granting an increase of pension to Leighton J. Folsom;

A bill (H. R. 815) granting an increase of pension to Henry S. Comer;

A bill (H. R. 1017) granting a pension to Mary Tripp;

A bill (H. R. 1285) granting an increase of pension to Cyrus Odell;

A bill (H. R. 1374) granting an increase of pension to James Willard;

A bill (H. R. 1728) granting an increase of pension to George W. Thompson;

A bill (H. R. 2193) granting an increase of pension to David A. Ireland;

A bill (H. R. 2265) granting an increase of pension to Martin V. Hathaway;

A bill (H. R. 2321) granting an increase of pension to Joseph R. Martin;

A bill (H. R. 2412) granting a pension to Helen L. Pepper;

A bill (H. R. 2416) granting an increase of pension to John B. Wilcox;

A bill (H. R. 2429) granting an increase of pension to John C. Morrison;

A bill (H. R. 2455) granting an increase of pension to George W. McClure;

A bill (H. R. 2484) granting an increase of pension to Jeremiah Evans;

A bill (H. R. 2502) granting an increase of pension to Ambrose Burton;

A bill (H. R. 2528) granting a pension to Helen M. Evans;

A bill (H. R. 2607) granting an increase of pension to Uriah S. Karmany;
A bill (H. R. 2617) granting an increase of pension to John Rapple;
A bill (H. R. 2628) granting an increase of pension to Andrew Mulholland;
A bill (H. R. 2983) to amend an act entitled "An act granting an increase of pension to Francis M. Thompson," approved March 3, 1901;
A bill (H. R. 3024) granting an increase of pension to Thomas V. Stran;
A bill (H. R. 3184) granting an increase of pension to David Petee;
A bill (H. R. 3230) granting a pension to Catherine Pflueger;
A bill (H. R. 3240) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Church;
A bill (H. R. 3300) granting an increase of pension to George B. Boyd;
A bill (H. R. 3413) granting an increase of pension to Jedediah S. Vallet;
A bill (H. R. 3511) granting an increase of pension to Mary C. Newcomb;
A bill (H. R. 4037) granting a pension to Julia Maher;
A bill (H. R. 4182) granting an increase of pension to David Cupps;
A bill (H. R. 4208) granting an increase of pension to Susan M. Pardee;
A bill (H. R. 4268) granting an increase of pension to James D. Woodward;
A bill (H. R. 5002) granting an increase of pension to Thomas M. McConnaughey;
A bill (H. R. 5108) granting an increase of pension to Elisha B. Taylor, alias Elisha T. Bisbee;
A bill (H. R. 5147) granting an increase of pension to Theodore Lane;
A bill (H. R. 5149) granting an increase of pension to Charles E. Bachelder;
A bill (H. R. 5162) granting an increase of pension to Andrew H. Gifford;
A bill (H. R. 5169) granting an increase of pension to Hiram S. Kingsley;
A bill (H. R. 5259) granting an increase of pension to Gustav Schwartz;
A bill (H. R. 5753) granting an increase of pension to Emil Frank;
A bill (H. R. 5860) granting an increase of pension to Edward B. Scott;
A bill (H. R. 6459) granting an increase of pension to Mary F. Hooper;
A bill (H. R. 6465) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Briscoe;
A bill (H. R. 6684) granting an increase of pension to Marshall Bachelder;
A bill (H. R. 6720) granting an increase of pension to George Patterson;
A bill (H. R. 6926) granting a pension to Mabel H. Lazear;
A bill (H. R. 7408) granting an increase of pension to Levi Cross;
A bill (H. R. 9312) granting an increase of pension to Kate Virginia Dewey Cushing; and
A bill (H. R. 10789) to transfer the county of Carroll from the northwestern division of the northern district of Georgia of the United States district and circuit courts, and for other purposes.

ENID AND ANADARKO RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. RAWLINS submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3104) to grant the right of way through the Oklahoma Territory and the Indian Territory to the Enid and Anadarko Railway Company having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House agree to the Senate amendment, with the following amendments: In line 15, page 20, strike out the word "said" and insert "any;" in line 19, page 21, after the word "Territory," insert "and Oklahoma Territory;" on page 22 add the following to section 23:

"And provided further, That the provisions of this act shall apply also to the Osage Reservation and other Indian reservations and allotted Indian lands in the Territory of Oklahoma, and all judicial proceedings herein authorized may be commenced and prosecuted in the courts of said Oklahoma Territory, which may now or hereafter exercise jurisdiction within said reservations or allotted lands."

J. V. QUARLES,
W. A. HARRIS,
J. L. RAWLINS,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
JOHN F. LACEY,
C. D. SHELDEN,
JOHN H. STEPHENS,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

PERMANENT CENSUS OFFICE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10308) to provide for a permanent Census Office, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. QUARLES. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments and accede to the request of the House for a conference.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. QUARLES, Mr. MCCOMAS, and Mr. TALIAFERRO were appointed.

MARTHA R. OSBOURN.

Mr. GALLINGER. I desire to enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate passed the bill (S. 2802) granting a pension to Martha R. Osbourn. I move that the House be requested to return the bill to the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

AFFAIRS IN THE PHILIPPINES.

Mr. LODGE. I addressed a letter to the Secretary of War last week for my own information, asking him if he could give me any information in regard to the charges of cruelty and oppression exercised by our soldiers or by our civilians in the Philippines, of which there have been many charges in the press and some allusions to them in debate. He replied to me this morning, sending a bundle of papers containing a large amount of information on those points. I ask that the Secretary's letter of transmittal, together with the papers, may be printed as a Senate document.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts asks that the papers received from the Secretary of War, together with the letter of the Secretary of War, be printed as a document. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

PHILIPPINE TARIFF BILL.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The morning business is closed, and the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5833) temporarily to provide revenue for the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question before the Senate is on the amendment offered by the junior Senator from Colorado [Mr. PATTERSON].

Mr. BURROWS. Mr. President, the debate upon this measure has taken a very wide range, not broader, however, than the importance of the question would justify. It is quite probable that the American Congress will never be confronted with a proposition more important than that involved in this whole Philippine controversy.

I shall not attempt to go over the entire subject, but confine myself to the consideration of the Philippine question proper, and the measure before the Senate—how it happens that we are in the Philippines and why we should remain there.

Whatever differences of opinion may have heretofore existed (and that there have been such differences no one can deny) touching the wisdom, in the beginning, of acquiring the Philippine Archipelago, a revival of that controversy at this time can not possibly aid us in the remotest degree in solving the important question in hand.

We are dealing with conditions as we find them to-day and not with the theories of the past. "It is a condition," as an eminent gentleman once said, "that confronts us and not a theory." Wisely or unwisely, and as one of the results growing out of the war with Spain, we took the sovereignty of the Philippine Archipelago voluntarily, freely, and hold it to-day by a title deed that can not be challenged or impeached in any court in Christendom. In taking upon ourselves the sovereignty of those islands we became responsible for their government not only to the inhabitants of the islands, but to the nations of the whole world.

The pending bill is only a measure of government prescribing the mode of raising revenue in sufficient amount, it is believed, to meet the needs of governmental administration. The bill of the committee, as it came from the House of Representatives and as reported from the Committee on the Philippines to the Senate, provides, in the first place, that the tariff act passed by what is known as the Taft Commission shall remain in full force and effect, continuing in operation a measure designed to raise revenue for the support of the government in those islands.

On an examination of the measure proposed as a substitute by the minority it will be found that we happily do not differ upon that question except in this respect: We propose to continue in force that provision of the Taft Commission for raising revenue, while the minority propose to continue in force not only that measure, but every other legislative act passed by the Taft Commission, including the statute in relation to treason. I will read that provision of the substitute of the minority:

That until the people of the islands shall establish a government, as hereinbefore provided, all laws, rules, and regulations now in force for the government of the islands and the raising of revenue therefor shall be in force, except as the same may be in conflict with this act.

There is no controversy, therefore, between the two sides as to the necessity of raising revenue for the government of the islands. Whatever may be our stay in the islands, whether temporary or protracted, we are agreed that the act passed for raising revenue by the Taft Commission shall continue in force as a necessary means of providing revenue for carrying on the government in those islands.

Turning to the report of the minority of the committee on their substitute we find this statement:

Our opposition is not based on any mere question of revenue or any theory concerning the form and principles of taxation.

Confirming the harmony of views upon this point.

But while thus acquiescing in the necessity for the enactment of the main provisions of the bill, as long as the present policy of the Government toward the Philippines is continued and maintained, yet the minority, in broader provision, proposed to terminate that policy, outlining a plan which, in their judgment, should be promptly declared and executed. In other words, they present the whole question of the future government of those islands, quite foreign, possibly, to the measure before the Senate, but quite proper, nevertheless, in view of the importance of the subject.

The minority propose:

First, "that the United States shall continue to occupy and govern said archipelago," forgetting, for the time being, that this is to be done "without the consent of the governed," until we have "established a stable government."

We are to remain in the islands "until sufficient guarantees have been obtained for the performance of our treaty obligations with Spain." What those guaranties shall be is not disclosed.

That we are to remain there until sufficient guaranties have been obtained "for the safety of those inhabitants who have adhered to the United States;" and

We are to govern "without their consent" until we have secured sufficient guaranties "for the maintenance and protection of all rights which have accrued under the authority of the United States."

When that consummation is to be attained nobody on earth can possibly predict.

Secondly, "that as soon as these results have been accomplished it is declared to be the purpose of the United States, which the President is directed to carry into effect, to withdraw from said islands and leave the government, control, and sovereignty thereof to the inhabitants of the same, retaining only such military, naval, and coaling stations as may be designated by the Government of the United States."

The next stipulation is the provision which I have already read.

Fourthly, the United States "hereby relinquish all claim of sovereignty over and title to the archipelago known as the Philippine Islands;" and

Finally, "that from and after the passage of this act said archipelago shall be foreign territory."

This substitute, while thus clearly outlining the general policy of the opposition, which, in their judgment, ought to be adopted in the management of the islands, has also served as the basis of attack upon the whole course of the Government in its conduct of affairs in the Philippine Islands, the object of which, or at least the effect of which, is to produce, if possible, in the public mind such a spirit of discontent and hostility as to make the further prosecution of the contest exceedingly unpopular if not impossible. That the course of the Government in the Philippines has been reprehensible from the beginning and deserving only of public condemnation—a reproach to the Army, a disgrace to the nation, and a shame to our civilization. What justification can be found for this wholesale denunciation?

I propose very briefly, therefore, to follow the various steps which brought us to the Philippines and the reasons why we are remaining there.

Let us, then, for a moment see what our course has been in the Philippines from the moment Dewey's guns awoke the echoes of Manila Bay until this hour, and what there is in the record of our operations in those islands to justify the assaults so unsparingly made. Let us inquire how we happen to be in the Philippines, what right we have to remain, and what is to be our future policy.

The war with Spain was a response to the popular demand in this country, and no people were more clamorous and eager for a declaration of war than our friends of the opposition. My recollection is that the Senate sustained the declaration by its unanimous voice, and in the House by a vote of 311 to 6. So the die was cast, and on the 21st day of April, 1898, war against the Kingdom of Spain was proclaimed. This declaration meant, of course, a conflict with that Kingdom on land and sea, and one of the first objects to be attained in its successful prosecution was the destruction of the Spanish fleet, which, wherever it might be, was sure, if not destroyed, to be an aggressive and dangerous power in menacing our commerce and our extensive, and in some instances our defenseless, coast. To guard against and avert this danger the following order was sent to Admiral Dewey, April 24, 1898, three days after the declaration of war:

WASHINGTON, April 24, 1898.

DEWEY, Hongkong:

War has been commenced between the United States and Spain. Proceed at once to the Philippine Islands. Commence operations at once, particularly against the Spanish fleet. You must capture vessels or destroy. Use utmost endeavors.

LONG.

Is that action subject to criticism? Will anyone presume to criticise that order? Indeed, the President of the United States would have been severely condemned if it had not been issued.

Immediately upon receipt of information that the Spanish fleet in Manila Bay had been destroyed, the President telegraphed the commander of the fleet to be informed what land forces would be needed to prosecute the advantage already gained to a successful conclusion, and was informed that while the city of Manila might be taken by bombardment, yet the city and adjacent country could not be held without the assistance of an adequate land force.

Thereupon the President ordered General Merritt to proceed at once with an army of 15,000 men to cooperate with Admiral Dewey in his operations against Manila. With this reenforcement, and on the 13th day of August, 1898, the surrender of Manila was demanded, and, under the joint assault of the Navy and Army, Manila, the capital of the Philippines, with its Spanish garrison, surrendered to the American forces. Will anyone presume to criticise that? Thus we secured a foothold in the Philippines, every step toward which was taken in an orderly and legitimate way, in the prosecution of what was regarded the world over as a just and humane war.

The purpose of the United States in taking possession of the islands is so clearly set forth in the instructions of President McKinley to the commander of the expedition that I beg to insert it in the RECORD as a part of the history leading up to the occupation of the archipelago, calling attention in passing only to a few passages therein:

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington, May 26, 1898.

Maj. Gen. WESLEY MERRITT, U. S. A.,
Commanding Army of Occupation to the Philippines,
Washington, D. C.

GENERAL: The following instructions of the President are communicated to you for your information and guidance:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, Washington, May 19, 1898.

The SECRETARY OF WAR.

SIR: The destruction of the Spanish fleet at Manila, followed by the taking of the naval station at Cavite, the paroling of the garrisons, and the acquisition of the control of the bay, have rendered it necessary, in the further prosecution of the measures adopted by this Government for the purpose of bringing about an honorable and durable peace with Spain, to send an army of occupation to the Philippines for the twofold purpose of completing the reduction of the Spanish power in that quarter and of giving order and security to the islands while in the possession of the United States. For the command of this expedition I have designated Maj. Gen. Wesley Merritt; and it now becomes my duty to give instructions as to the manner in which the movement shall be conducted.

The first effect of the military occupation of the enemy's territory is the severance of the former political relations of the inhabitants and the establishment of a new political power. Under this changed condition of things the inhabitants, so long as they perform their duties, are entitled to security in their persons and property, and in all their private rights and relations. It is my desire that the people of the Philippines should be acquainted with the purpose of the United States to discharge to the fullest extent its obligations in this regard. It will therefore be the duty of the commander of the expedition, immediately upon his arrival in the islands, to publish a proclamation declaring that we come not to make war upon the people of the Philippines nor upon any party or faction among them, but to protect them in their homes, in their employments, and in their personal and religious rights. All persons who, either by active aid or by honest submission, cooperate with the United States in its efforts to give effect to this beneficent purpose, will receive the reward of its support and protection. Our occupation should be as free from severity as possible.

Though the powers of the military occupant are absolute and supreme, and immediately operate upon the political condition of the inhabitants, the municipal laws of the conquered territory, such as affect private rights of person and property and provide for the punishment of crime, are considered as continuing in force, so far as they are compatible with the new order of things, until they are suspended or superseded by the occupying belligerent; and in practice they are not usually abrogated, but are allowed to remain in force and to be administered by the ordinary tribunals, substantially as they were before the occupation.

This enlightened practice is, so far as possible, to be adhered to on the present occasion. The judges and the other officials connected with the administration of justice may, if they accept the authority of the United States, continue to administer the ordinary law of the land, as between man and man, under the supervision of the American commander in chief. The native constabulary will, so far as may be practicable, be preserved. The freedom of the people to pursue their accustomed occupations will be abridged only when it may be necessary to do so.

While the rule of conduct of the American commander in chief will be such as has just been defined, it will be his duty to adopt measures of a different kind if, unfortunately, the course of the people should render such measures indispensable to the maintenance of law and order. He will then possess the power to replace or expel the native officials in part or altogether, to substitute new courts of his own constitution for those that now exist, or to create such new or supplementary tribunals as may be necessary. In the exercise of these high powers the commander must be guided by his judgment and his experience and a high sense of justice.

One of the most important and most practical problems with which the commander of the expedition will have to deal is that of the treatment of property and the collection and administration of the revenues. It is conceded that all public funds and securities belonging to the government of the country in its own right, and all arms and supplies and other movable property of such government, may be seized by the military occupant and converted to the use of this Government. The real property of the state he may hold and administer, at the same time enjoying the revenues thereof, but he is not to destroy it, save in the case of military necessity.

All public means of transportation, such as telegraph lines, cables, railways, and boats belonging to the State may be appropriated to his use; but, unless in case of military necessity, they are not to be destroyed. All churches and buildings devoted to religious worship and to the arts and sciences, all schoolhouses, are, so far as possible, to be protected, and all destruction or intentional defacement of such places, of historical monuments or archives or of works of science or art, is prohibited, save when required by urgent military necessity.

Private property, whether belonging to individuals or corporations, is to be respected, and can be confiscated only as hereafter indicated. Means of transportation, such as telegraph lines and cables, railways, and boats may, although they belong to private individuals or corporations, be seized by the military occupant, but, unless destroyed under military necessity, are not to be retained.

While it is held to be the right of a conqueror to levy contributions upon the enemy in their seaports, towns, or provinces which may be in his military possession by conquest, and to apply the proceeds to defray the expenses of the war, this right is to be exercised within such limitations that it may not savor of confiscation. As the result of military occupation the taxes and duties payable by the inhabitants to the former government become payable to the military occupant, unless he sees fit to substitute for them other rates or modes of contribution to the expenses of the government. The moneys so collected are to be used for the purpose of paying the expenses of government under the military occupation, such as the salaries of the judges and the police, and for the payment of the expenses of the army.

Private property taken for the use of the army is to be paid for, when possible, in cash, at a fair valuation, and when payment in cash is not possible receipts are to be given.

In order that there may be no conflict of authority between the Army and the Navy in the administration of affairs in the Philippines, you are instructed to confer with the Secretary of the Navy, so far as necessary, for the purpose of devising measures to secure the harmonious action of these two branches of the public service.

I will give instructions to the Secretary of the Treasury to make a report to me upon the subject of the revenues of the Philippines, with a view to the formulation of such revenue measures as may seem expedient. All ports and places in the Philippines which may be in the actual possession of our land and naval forces will be opened, while our military occupation may continue, to the commerce of all neutral nations, as well as our own, in articles not contraband of war, and upon payment of the prescribed rates of duty which may be in force at the time of the importation.

WILLIAM McKINLEY.

Very respectfully,

R. A. ALGER,
Secretary of War.

In conformity with that declaration and in obedience to it the commander of the army of occupation issued, on August 14, the following proclamation to the people of the Philippines:

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE PACIFIC,
August 14, 1898.

To the People of the Philippines:

I. War has existed between the United States and Spain since April 21 of this year. Since that date you have witnessed the destruction, by an American fleet, of the Spanish naval power in these islands, the fall of the principal city, Manila, and its defenses, and the surrender of the Spanish army of occupation to the forces of the United States.

II. The commander of the United States forces now in possession has instructions from his Government to assure the people that he has not come to wage war upon them, nor upon any part or faction among them, but to protect them in their homes, in their employments, and in their personal and religious rights. All persons who, by active aid or honest submission, cooperate with the United States in its efforts to give effect to this beneficent purpose will receive the reward of its support and protection.

III. The government established among you by the United States is a government of military occupation; and for the present it is ordered that the municipal laws, such as affect private rights of persons and property, regulate local institutions, and provide for the punishment of crime, shall be considered as continuing in force, so far as compatible with the purposes of military government, and that they be administered through the ordinary tribunals substantially as before occupation, but by officials appointed by the government of occupation.

IV. A provost-marshal-general will be appointed for the city of Manila and its outlying districts. This territory will be divided into subdistricts and there will be assigned to each a deputy provost-marshal.

The duties of the provost-marshal-general and his deputies will be set forth in detail in future orders. In a general way they are charged with the duty of making arrests of military as well as civil offenders, sending such of the former class as are triable by courts-martial to their proper commands with statements of their offenses and names of witnesses and detaining in custody all other offenders for trial by military commission, provost courts, or native criminal courts, in accordance with law and the instructions hereafter to be issued.

V. The port of Manila and all other ports and places in the Philippines which may be in the actual possession of our land and naval forces will be open while our military occupation may continue to the commerce of all neutral nations, as well as our own, in articles not contraband of war, and upon payment of the prescribed rates of duty which may be in force at the time of the importation.

VI. All churches and places devoted to religious worship and to the arts and sciences, all educational institutions, libraries, scientific collections, museums, are, so far as possible, to be protected; and all destruction or intentional defacement of such places or property, of historical monuments, archives, or works of science and art is prohibited, save when required by urgent military necessity. Severe punishment will be meted out for all violations of this regulation.

(The custodian of all property of the character mentioned in this section will make prompt returns thereof to these headquarters, stating character and location and embodying such recommendations as they may think proper for the full protection of the properties under their care and custody, that proper orders may issue enjoining the cooperation of both military and civil authorities in securing such protection.)

VII. The commanding general, in announcing the establishment of military government and in entering upon his duty as military governor, in pursuance of his appointment as such by the Government of the United States, desires to assure the people that so long as they preserve the peace and perform their duties toward the representatives of the United States they will not be disturbed in their persons and property, except in so far as may be found necessary for the good of the service of the United States and the benefit of the people of the Philippines.

WESLEY MERRITT,
Major-General, U. S. Army, Commanding.

Is there anything censurable in that proclamation? We were at war with Spain, but the army of occupation was enjoined to protect the interests and the property of the people of Manila and the territory under its control. Soon after that, and on the 12th day of August, 1898, fortunately a protocol was signed, an agreement for peace between Spain and the United States—to the material part of which I desire to invoke special attention. It was stipulated in that protocol—

That the United States will occupy and hold the city, bay, and harbor of Manila pending the conclusion of a treaty of peace which shall determine the control, disposition, and government of the Philippines.

This was a most solemn national agreement, to the fulfillment of which we as a nation were obligated by every consideration of public honor and duty, at whatever sacrifice of blood or treasure. The protocol having been adopted by the Spanish Senate and signed by the Queen September 10, 1898, President McKinley immediately thereafter proclaimed an armistice, and the war with Spain was at an end.

On December 10, 1898, the final treaty of peace between the United States and Spain was signed, by the terms of which it was stipulated that—

Spain cedes to the United States the archipelago known as the Philippine Islands, and the United States shall pay to Spain the sum of $20,000,000.

Thus we legitimately acquired the sovereignty of the Philippine Islands, which we have continued to hold from that time until the present hour.

The treaty of peace having been signed, on the 21st day of December, 1898, President McKinley took occasion to acquaint the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands of the new relations existing between them and the United States and the policy of the Administration proposed to be adopted in relation to their government. That declaration is so broad, comprehensive, and complete, so statesmanlike and patriotic, that I will insert it in the RECORD in full, although it is a document with which we are all familiar.

Mr. COCKRELL. Will the Senator please give the date of that?

Mr. BURROWS. December 21, 1898.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, December 21, 1898.

The SECRETARY OF WAR.

SIR: The destruction of the Spanish boats in the harbor of Manila by the United States naval squadron commanded by Rear-Admiral Dewey, followed by the reduction of the city and the surrender of the Spanish forces, practically effected the conquest of the Philippine Islands and the suspension of Spanish sovereignty therein.

With the signature of the treaty of peace between the United States and Spain by their respective plenipotentiaries at Paris on the 10th instant, and as the result of the victories of American arms, the future control, disposition, and government of the Philippine Islands are ceded to the United States. In fulfillment of the rights of sovereignty thus acquired and the responsible obligations of government thus assumed the actual occupation and administration of the entire group of the Philippine Islands become immediately necessary, and the military government heretofore maintained by the United States in the city, harbor, and bay of Manila is to be extended with all possible dispatch to the whole of the ceded territory.

In performing this duty the military commander of the United States is enjoined to make known to the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands that in succeeding to the sovereignty of Spain, in severing the former political relations of the inhabitants, and in establishing a new political power the authority of the United States is to be exerted for the sovereignty of the persons and property of the people of the islands and for the confirmation of all their private rights and relations.

It will be the duty of the commander of the forces of occupation to announce and proclaim in the most public manner that we come, not as invaders or conquerors, but as friends, to protect the natives in their homes, in their employments, and in their personal and religious rights. All persons who either by active aid or by honest submission cooperate with the Government of the United States to give effect to these benefits and purposes will receive the reward of its support and protection. All others will be brought within the lawful rule we have assumed with firmness, if need be, but without severity, so far as may be possible.

Within the absolute domain of military authority, which necessarily is and must remain supreme in the ceded territory until the legislation of the United States shall otherwise provide, the municipal laws of the territory in respect to private rights and property and the repression of crime are to be considered as continuing in force and to be administered by the ordinary tribunals, so far as possible.

The operations of civil and municipal government are to be performed by such officers as may accept the supremacy of the United States by taking the oath of allegiance or by officers chosen, so far as may be practicable, from the inhabitants of the islands.

While the control of all the public property and the revenues of the state passes with the cession, and while the use and management of all public means of transportation are necessarily reserved to the authority of the United States, private property, whether belonging to individuals or corporations, is to be respected, except for cause fully established.

The taxes and duties heretofore payable by the inhabitants of the late government become payable to the authorities of the United States, unless it be seen fit to substitute for them other reasonable rates or modes of contribution to the expenses of government, whether general or local. If private property be taken for military use, it shall be paid for, when possible, in cash at a fair valuation, and when payment in cash is not practicable, receipts are to be given.

All ports and places in the Philippine Islands in the actual possession of the land and naval forces of the United States will be opened to the commerce of friendly nations. All goods and wares not prohibited for military reasons by due announcement of the military authority will be admitted upon payment of such duties and other charges as shall be in force at the time of their importation.

Finally, it should be the earnest and paramount aim of the military administration to win the confidence, respect, and affection of the inhabitants of the Philippines by assuring to them in every possible way that full measure of individual rights and liberty which is the heritage of free people, and by proving to them that the mission of the United States is one of benevolent assimilation, substituting the mild sway of justice and right for arbitrary rule.

In the fulfillment of this high mission, supporting the temperate administration of affairs for the greatest good of the governed, there must be sedulously maintained the strong arm of authority to repress disturbances and to overcome all obstacles to the bestowal of the blessings of good and stable government upon the people of the Philippine Islands under the flag of the United States.

WILLIAM McKINLEY.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. BURROWS. Certainly.

Mr. TILLMAN. Does the Senator contend that the President had any authority to issue that order?

Mr. BURROWS. I have no doubt of it.

Mr. TILLMAN. The treaty had not been ratified, and therefore it had no legal status, and so I do not see where the legal authority to act in a way that might have produced war contrary to the terms of the truce with Spain comes in.

Mr. BURROWS. The President of the United States, as it will be observed from this communication, said that the signatures to the treaty of peace between the United States and Spain had already been attached.

Mr. TILLMAN. But, Mr. President——

Mr. BURROWS. While the treaty had not been ratified, yet the President, in his anxiety to deal with those people in the most generous manner, issued a proclamation through the commander of the forces in Manila directing the manner in which affairs in those islands were to be conducted.

Mr. TILLMAN. In other words, if the Filipinos were to submit unconditionally and without any guarantees as to what their future status would be, he would—the words "civil rights" being sedulously withheld or not contained in anything there, but merely their religious rights and rights of property and person—in other words, their political status being absolutely ignored and they being treated as subjects with no future promise, did you expect that those 9,000,000 people, who had gone to war with Spain for their own liberties, would submit to that kind of an order without any fighting?

Mr. BURROWS. Oh, Mr. President, my friend is opening up a very broad question.

Mr. TILLMAN. That is the whole question.

Mr. BURROWS. The President of the United States issued this proclamation to the people of the Philippines, disclosing to them the purpose of occupation of the islands.

Mr. TILLMAN. Which was "benevolent assimilation."

Mr. BURROWS. Very well.

Mr. TILLMAN. If the Senator will explain what "benevolent assimilation" is, we will all know what the meaning of the President was.

Mr. BURROWS. Mr. President, I will proceed.

In obedience to this declaration——

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. BURROWS. Certainly.

Mr. CULBERSON. The Senator from Michigan has spoken very highly of the proclamation of the President, which he has just read, on the ground of generosity. I desire to remind him, so that we may have his observations upon that point, that that proclamation was considered so extreme by General Otis that he suppressed a portion of it in the proclamation which he subsequently issued.

Mr. BURROWS. Subsequently, and in obedience to the declaration in the message of the President, General Otis, in conformity to the President's direction, issued the following proclamation to the people of the Philippines:

PROCLAMATION.

OFFICE OF THE MILITARY GOVERNOR OF THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS,
Manila, P. I., January 4, 1899.

To the People of the Philippine Islands:

Instructions of His Excellency the President of the United States relative to the administration of affairs in the Philippine Islands have been transmitted to me by direction of the honorable the Secretary of War, under date of December 28, 1898. They direct me to publish and proclaim, in the most public manner, to the inhabitants of these islands that in the war against Spain the United States forces came here to destroy the power of that nation and to give the blessings of peace and individual freedom to the Philippine people; that we are here as friends of the Filipinos, to protect them in their homes, their employments, their individual and religious liberty, and that all persons who, either by active aid or honest endeavor, cooperate with the Government of the United States to give effect to these beneficent purposes, will receive the reward of its support and protection.

The President of the United States has assumed that the municipal laws of the country in respect to private rights and property and the repression of crime are to be considered as continuing in force in so far as they be applicable to a free people, and should be administered by the ordinary tribunals of justice, presided over by representatives of the people and those in thorough sympathy with them in their desires for good government; that the functions and duties connected with civil and municipal administration are to be performed by such officers as wish to accept the assistance of the United States, chosen in so far as it may be practicable from the inhabitants of the islands; that while the management of public property and revenues and the use of all public means of transportation are to be conducted under the military authorities until such authorities can be replaced by civil administration, all private property, whether of individuals or corporations, must be respected and protected.

If private property be taken for military uses it shall be paid for at a fair valuation in cash, if possible, and when payment in cash is not practicable at the time, receipts therefor will be given, to be taken up and liquidated as soon as cash becomes available. The ports of the Philippine Islands shall be open to the commerce of all foreign nations, and goods and merchandise not prohibited for military reasons by the military authorities shall be admitted upon payment of such duties and charges as shall be in force at the time of importation.

The President concludes his instructions in the following language:

"Finally, it should be the earnest and paramount aim of the Administration to win the confidence, respect, and affection of the inhabitants of the Philippines by insuring to them, in every possible way, the full measure of individual rights and liberty which is the heritage of a free people, and by proving to them that the mission of the United States is one of beneficent assimilation, which will substitute the mild sway of justice and right for arbitrary rule. In the fulfillment of this high mission, while upholding the temporary administration of affairs for the greatest good of the governed, there will be sedulously maintained the strong arm of authority to repress disturbance, and to overcome all obstacles to the bestowal of the blessings of good and stable government upon the people of the Philippine Islands."

From the tenor and substance of the above instructions of the President, I am fully of the opinion that it is the intention of the United States Government, while directing affairs generally, to appoint the representative men now forming the controlling element of the Filipinos to civil positions of trust and responsibility, and it will be my aim to appoint thereto such Filipinos as may be acceptable to the supreme authorities at Washington.

It is also my belief that it is the intention of the United States Government to draw from the Filipino people so much of the military force of the islands as is possible and consistent with a free and well-constituted government of the country, and it is my desire to inaugurate a policy of that character. I am also convinced that it is the intention of the United States Government to seek the establishment of a most liberal government for the islands, in which the people themselves shall have as full representation as the maintenance of law and order will permit, and which shall be susceptible of development, on lines of increased representation and the bestowal of increased powers, into a government as free and independent as is enjoyed by the most favored provinces of the world.

It will be my constant endeavor to cooperate with the Filipino people, seeking the good of the country, and I invite their full confidence and aid.

E. S. OTIS,
Major-General, U. S. V., Military Governor.

Subsequent events have shown beyond all controversy that that policy has been faithfully carried out.

This declaration of the President and of the commander in the field are sufficient to disclose the spirit and purpose of the United States in its dealings with the people of the Philippines. But the United States in upholding its sovereignty and in enforcing law and order and protecting the lives and property of the inhabitants of the archipelago has not prosecuted this purpose solely through the harsh instrumentality of war, but have repeatedly and persistently employed every possible method at their command to consummate the pacification of the islands and the betterment of the people under American rule without resort to arms.

To this end, as early as January, 1899, before the treaty of peace had been ratified or proclaimed, President McKinley appointed a commission known as the Schurman Commission, composed of those distinguished gentlemen, Jacob G. Schurman, Rear-Admiral Dewey, General Otis, Charles Denby, and Dean C. Worcester, to whom the President gave the following instructions, which so fully set forth the purpose of the President and the object of the Commission that I will ask to have it inserted as part of my remarks.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be inserted in the RECORD, in the absence of objection.

Mr. BACON. Will the Senator permit me to ask a question?

Mr. BURROWS. Certainly.

Mr. BACON. I do so with great reluctance; but I did not understand the Senator to reply to the inquiry first made by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN]. Does the Senator, as a lawyer, recognize the rights of the President of the United States—not that particular President, but any President of the United States—when a treaty has been negotiated and signed by the President on the one side and a foreign power on the other, but before there has been a ratification by the Senate, does the Senator, as a lawyer, recognize that there is any power in the Executive to issue a proclamation to the people affected by that treaty assuming the right of sovereignty over them before the ratification of the treaty by the Senate? That is the question I should like to have the Senator answer.

Mr. BURROWS. I do not care to enter into a discussion of that question, for my purpose, as I said in the beginning, was to point out the various steps taken by which we reached the Philippines and what we have done since occupying them, and to stop and discuss these other questions would divert me entirely from the purpose I have in view.

That the President had the right to issue such a proclamation I have no doubt. It was issued to the people of the Philippines, and it was to serve as a guide for the operations of the army under the commander having its movements in charge.

The directions and instructions to the Commission were as follows:

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, January 20, 1899.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE:

My communication to the Secretary of War, dated December 21, 1898, declares the necessity of extending the actual occupation and administration of the city, harbor, and bay of Manila to the whole of the territory which by the treaty of Paris, signed on December 10, 1898, passed from the sovereignty of Spain to the sovereignty of the United States, and the consequent establishment of military government throughout the entire group of the Philippine Islands. While the treaty has not yet been ratified, it is believed that it will be by the time of the arrival at Manila of the commissioners named below. In order to facilitate the most humane, pacific, and effective extension of authority throughout these islands, and to secure, with the least possible delay, the benefits of a wise and generous protection of life and property to the inhabitants, I have named Jacob G. Schurman, Rear-Admiral George Dewey, Maj. Gen. Elwell S. Otis, Charles Denby, and Dean C. Worcester to constitute a commission to aid in the accomplishment of these results.

In the performance of this duty, the commissioners are enjoined to meet at the earliest possible day in the city of Manila and to announce, by a public proclamation, their presence and the mission intrusted to them, carefully setting forth that, while the military government already proclaimed is to be maintained and continued so long as necessity may require, efforts will be made to alleviate the burden of taxation, to establish industrial and commercial prosperity, and to provide for the safety of persons and property by such means as may be found conducive to these ends.

The commissioners will endeavor, without interference with the military authorities of the United States now in control of the Philippines, to ascertain what amelioration in the condition of the inhabitants and what improvements in public order may be practicable, and for this purpose they will study attentively the existing social and political state of the various populations, particularly as regards the forms of local government, the administration of justice, the collection of customs and other taxes, the means of transportation, and the need of public improvements. They will report through the Department of State, according to the forms customary or hereafter prescribed for transmitting and preserving such communications, the results of their observations and reflections, and will recommend such executive action as may from time to time seem to them wise and useful.

The commissioners are hereby authorized to confer authoritatively with any persons resident in the islands from whom they may believe themselves able to derive information or suggestions valuable for the purposes of their commission, or whom they may choose to employ as agents, as may be necessary for this purpose.

The temporary government of the islands is intrusted to the military authorities, as already provided for by my instructions to the Secretary of War of December 21, 1898, and will continue until Congress shall determine otherwise. The Commission may render valuable services by examining with special care the legislative needs of the various groups of inhabitants, and by reporting, with recommendations, the measures which should be instituted for the maintenance of order, peace, and public welfare, either as temporary steps to be taken immediately for the perfection of present administration or as suggestions for future legislation.

In so far as immediate personal changes in the civil administration may seem to be advisable, the commissioners are empowered to recommend suitable persons for appointment to these offices from among the inhabitants of the islands who have previously acknowledged their allegiance to this Government.

It is my desire that in all their relations with the inhabitants of the islands the commissioners exercise due respect for all the ideals, customs, and institutions of the tribes which compose the population, emphasizing upon all occasions the just and beneficent intentions of the Government of the United States. It is also my wish and expectation that the commissioners may be received in a manner due to the honored and authorized representatives of the American Republic, duly commissioned on account of their knowledge, skill, and integrity, as bearers of the good will, the protection, and the richest blessings of a liberating rather than a conquering nation.

WILLIAM McKINLEY.

In obedience to these instructions the Commission proceeded to Manila, the last member arriving on the 2d of April, 1899. Two days later, in obedience to the orders of the President, they issued the following proclamation to the Philippine people:

To the People of the Philippine Islands:

The treaty of peace between the United States and Spain, ratified several weeks ago by the former, having on March 20 been ratified by the latter, the cession to the United States, as stipulated by the treaty, of the sovereignty which Spain possessed and exercised over the Philippine Islands has now, in accordance with the laws of nations, received a complete and indefeasible consummation.

In order that the high responsibilities and obligations with which the United States has thus become definitely charged may be fulfilled in a way calculated to promote the best interests of the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands, His Excellency the President of the United States has appointed the undersigned a civil commission on Philippine affairs, clothing them with all the powers necessary for the exercise of that office.

The Commission desire to assure the people of the Philippine Islands of the cordial good will and fraternal feeling which is entertained for them by His Excellency the President of the United States and by the American people. The aim and object of the American Government, apart from the fulfillment of the solemn obligations it has assumed toward the family of nations by the acceptance of sovereignty over the Philippine Islands, is the well being, the prosperity, and the happiness of the Philippine people and their elevation and advancement to a position among the most civilized peoples of the world.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. BURROWS. Certainly.

Mr. TILLMAN. Is there a word there about liberty and civil rights?

Mr. BURROWS. I can not inform the Senator now, but I will proceed to read to the Senator, and he can then discover for himself whether there is or not.

Mr. TILLMAN. Another question. Was not the war of subjugation then in full swing? Had not the attack of the Philippine army, which occurred on Saturday before the treaty was ratified here on Monday, produced a condition of war which was——

Mr. BURROWS. Mr. President, evidently the Senator does not understand what I am doing.

Mr. TILLMAN. Oh, the Senator is reading from the proclamation of the first Philippine Commission.

Mr. BURROWS. I am presenting the various steps leading up to the occupation of the islands and the action of this Government after such occupation.

Mr. TILLMAN. But will the Senator——

Mr. BURROWS. The Senator asked me whether the word "liberty" occurs——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Michigan decline to yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. BURROWS. I must decline to yield.

Mr. TILLMAN. Of course if the Senator wishes to make a one-sided statement I can not object.

Mr. BURROWS. I have no such purpose, but evidently the questions of the Senator are intended rather to lead me away from what I am discussing than to enlighten the subject.

I will continue the quotation:

His Excellency the President of the United States believes that this felicity and perfection of the Philippine people is to be brought about by the assurance of peace and order; by the guaranty of civil and religious liberty.

I hope the Senator from South Carolina did not lose that statement. I will repeat it, because I believe the Senator's attention was diverted.

His Excellency the President of the United States believes that this felicity and perfection of the Philippine people is to be brought about by the assurance of peace and order; by the guaranty of civil and religious liberty; by the establishment of justice; by the cultivation of letters, science, and the liberal and practical arts; by the enlargement of intercourse with foreign nations; by the expansion of industrial pursuits, trade, and commerce; by the multiplication and improvement of the means of internal communication; by the development, with the aid of modern mechanical inventions, of the great natural resources of the archipelago; and, in a word, by the uninterrupted devotion of the people to the pursuit of those useful objects and the realization of those noble ideals which constitute the higher civilization of mankind.

Unfortunately, the pure aims and purposes of the American Government and people have been misinterpreted to some of the inhabitants of certain of the islands. As a consequence, the friendly American forces have, without provocation or cause, been openly attacked.

And why these hostilities? What do the best Filipinos desire? Can it be more than the United States is ready to give? They are patriots and want liberty, it is said. The Commission emphatically asserts that the United States is not only willing, but anxious, to establish in the Philippine Islands an enlightened system of government, under which the Philippine people may enjoy the largest measure of home rule and the amplest liberty consonant with the supreme ends of government and compatible with those obligations which the United States has assumed toward the civilized nations of the world.

The United States striving earnestly for the welfare and advancement of the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands, there can be no real conflict between American sovereignty and the rights and liberties of the Philippine people. For, just as the United States stands ready to furnish armies, navies, and all the infinite resources of a great and powerful nation to maintain and support its rightful supremacy over the Philippine Islands, so it is even more solicitous to spread peace and happiness among the Philippine people; to guarantee them a rightful freedom; to protect them in their just privileges and immunities; to accustom them to free self-government in an ever-increasing measure, and to encourage them in those democratic aspirations, sentiments, and ideals which are the promise and potency of a fruitful national development.

It is the expectation of the Commission to visit the Philippine peoples in their respective provinces, both for the purpose of cultivating a more intimate mutual acquaintance and also with a view to ascertaining from enlightened native opinion what form or forms of government seem best adapted to the Philippine peoples, most apt to conduce to their highest welfare, and most conformable to their customs, traditions, sentiments, and cherished ideals. Both in the establishment and maintenance of government in the Philippine Islands it will be the policy of the United States to consult the views and wishes, and to secure the advice, cooperation, and aid of the Philippine people themselves.

In the meantime the attention of the Philippine people is invited to certain regulative principles by which the United States will be guided in its relations with them. The following are deemed of cardinal importance:

"1. The supremacy of the United States must and will be enforced throughout every part of the archipelago, and those who resist it can accomplish no end other than their own ruin.

"2. The most ample liberty of self-government will be granted to the Philippine people which is reconcilable with the maintenance of a wise, just, stable, effective, and economical administration of public affairs, and compatible with the sovereign and international rights and obligations of the United States.

"3. The civil rights of the Philippine people will be guaranteed and protected to the fullest extent; religious freedom assured, and all persons shall have an equal standing before the law.

"4. Honor, justice, and friendship forbid the use of the Philippine people or islands as an object or means of exploitation. The purpose of the American Government is the welfare and advancement of the Philippine people.

"5. There shall be guaranteed to the Philippine people and honest an effective civil service, in which, to the fullest extent practicable, natives shall be employed.

"6. The collection and application of taxes and revenues will be put upon a sound, honest, and economical basis. Public funds, raised justly and collected honestly, will be applied only in defraying the regular and proper expenses incurred by and for the establishment and maintenance of the Philippine government, and for such general improvements as public interests may demand. Local funds, collected for local purposes, shall not be diverted to other ends. With such a prudent and honest fiscal administration, it is believed that the needs of the government will in a short time become compatible with a considerable reduction in taxation.

"7. A pure, speedy, and effective administration of justice will be established, whereby the evils of delay, corruption, and exploitation will be effectually eradicated.

"8. The construction of roads, railroads, and other means of communication and transportation, as well as other public works of manifest advantage to the Philippine people, will be promoted.

"9. Domestic and foreign trade and commerce, agriculture, and other industrial pursuits, and the general development of the country in the interest of its inhabitants will be constant objects of solicitude and fostering care.

"10. Effective provision will be made for the establishment of elementary schools in which the children of the people shall be educated. Appropriate facilities will also be provided for higher education.

"11. Reforms in all departments of the government, in all branches of the public service, and in all corporations closely touching the common life of the people must be undertaken without delay and effected, conformably to right and justice, in a way that will satisfy the well-founded demands and the highest sentiments and aspirations of the Philippine people."

Such is the spirit in which the United States comes to the people of the Philippine Islands. His Excellency the President, has instructed the Commission to make it publicly known. And in obeying this behest the Commission desire to join with his Excellency the President, in expressing their own good will toward the Philippine people, and to extend to their leading and representative men a cordial invitation to meet them for personal acquaintance and for the exchange of views and opinions.

MANILA, April, 4, 1899.

JACOB GOULD SCHURMAN,
President of Commission.
GEORGE DEWEY,
Admiral U. S. N.
ELWELL S. OTIS,
Major-General U. S. Volunteers.
CHARLES DENBY,
DEAN C. WORCESTER.

JOHN R. MACARTHUR,
Secretary of Commission.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. BURROWS. I prefer to proceed without interruption now.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Michigan declines to yield.

Mr. BURROWS. The results of the labors of this Commission were embodied in four large volumes containing a mass of information exceedingly valuable and throwing a flood of light upon the conditions in the archipelago. While I have no time to quote at length from the findings of the Commission, I may be permitted to read a few extracts. The Commission in making their report, among other things, say, at page 81, speaking of the abuses under the old régime:

If these abuses are remedied, if a capable and honest government is instituted, if the Filipinos are permitted to the full extent of their ability to participate in it, if all unnecessary offices are abolished, if church is separated from state, if the public revenues are used solely to defray the legitimate expenses of the government and the cost of duly authorized public works and improvements, including the beginnings of a system of elementary schools—if, in a word, government is administered in the Philippines in the spirit in which it is administered in the United States, the people of that archipelago will, as already a few of them foresee, enjoy more benefits than they dreamed of when they took up arms against the corrupt and oppressive domination of Spain.

* * * * * * *

The Filipinos and independence.—While the peoples of the Philippine Islands ardently desire a full measure of rights and liberties, they do not, in the opinion of the Commission, generally desire independence. Hundreds of witnesses testified on this subject to the Commission and its individual members; and, though they represented all possible varieties of opinion—many of them being in sympathy with the insurgents—they were uniform in their testimony that, in view of the ignorance and political inexperience of the masses of the people, the multiplicity of languages, the divergencies of culture and mode of life, and the obstacles to intercommunication, an independent sovereign Philippine state was at the present time neither possible nor desirable, even if its poverty and internal weakness and lack of coherence would not invite and the dissatisfaction of aliens entail the intervention of foreign powers, with the inevitable result of the division of the archipelago among them and the disappearance forever of the dream and hope of a united and self-governing Philippine commonwealth. The Philippine Islands, even the most patriotic declare, can not at the present time stand alone. They need the tutelage and protection of the United States.

I also desire to read another extract from page 121 of the report. It is the conclusions of the Commission in relation to government:

SOME CONCLUSIONS CONCERNING GOVERNMENT.

In connection with the subject of government the Commission has reached the following conclusions:

1. The United States can not withdraw from the Philippines. We are there and duty binds us to remain. There is no escape from our responsibility to the Filipinos and to mankind for the government of the archipelago and the amelioration of the condition of its inhabitants.

2. The Filipinos are wholly unprepared for independence, and if independence were given to them they could not maintain it.

3. As to Aguinaldo's claim that he was promised independence or that an alliance was made with him, Admiral Dewey makes the following communication to the Commission:

"The statement of Emilio Aguinaldo, under date of September 23, published in the Springfield Republican, so far as it relates to reported conversations with me, or actions of mine, is a tissue of falsehoods. I never, directly or indirectly, promised the Filipinos independence. I never received Aguinaldo with military honors, or recognized or saluted the so-called Filipino flag. I never considered him as an ally, although I did make use of him and the natives to assist me in my operations against the Spaniards."

4. There being no Philippine nation, but only a collection of different peoples, there is no general public opinion in the archipelago; but the men of property and education, who alone interest themselves in public affairs, in general recognize as indispensable American authority, guidance, and protection.

5. Congress should, at the earliest practicable time, provide for the Philippines the form of government herein recommended or another equally liberal and beneficent.

6. Pending any action on the part of Congress, the Commission recommends that the President put in operation this scheme of civil government in such parts of the archipelago as are at peace.

7. So far as the finances of the Philippines permit, public education should be promptly established, and when established made free to all.

8. The greatest care should be taken in the selection of officials for administration. They should be men of the highest character and fitness, and partisan politics should be entirely separated from the government of the Philippines.

I will read another quotation. Speaking of the past history of the people the Commission say:

This is all the training in self-government which the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands have enjoyed. Their lack of education and political experience, combined with their racial and linguistic diversities, disqualify them, in spite of their mental gifts and domestic virtues, to undertake the task of governing the archipelago at the present time. The most that can be expected of them is to cooperate with the Americans in the administration of general affairs, from Manila as a center, and to undertake, subject to American control or guidance (as may be found necessary), the administration of provincial and municipal affairs.

Fortunately, there are educated Filipinos, though they do not constitute a large proportion of the entire population, and their support and services will be of incalculable value in inaugurating and maintaining the new government. As education advances and experience ripens, the natives may be intrusted with a larger and more independent share of government—self-government, as the American ideal, being constantly kept in view as the goal. In this way American sovereignty over the archipelago will prove a great political boon to the people.

Should our power by any fatality be withdrawn, the Commission believe that the government of the Philippines would speedily lapse into anarchy, which would excuse, if it did not necessitate, the intervention of other powers and the eventual division of the islands among them. Only through American occupation, therefore, is the idea of a free, self-governing, and united Philippine commonwealth at all conceivable. And the indispensable need from the Filipino point of view of maintaining American sovereignty over the archipelago is recognized by all intelligent Filipinos and even by those insurgents who desire an American protectorate.

The latter, it is true, would take the revenues and leave us the responsibilities. Nevertheless, they recognize the indubitable fact that the Filipinos can not stand alone. Thus the welfare of the Filipinos coincides with the dictates of national honor in forbidding our abandonment of the archipelago. We can not from any point of view escape the responsibilities of government which our sovereignty entails; and the Commission is strongly persuaded that the performance of our national duty will prove the greatest blessing to the peoples of the Philippine Islands.

OUR SOLDIERS AND SAILORS IN THE WAR.

The Commission is not willing to close this statement without paying just tribute to our sailors and soldiers. The presence of Admiral Dewey as a member of this body makes it unfitting to dwell on his personal achievements, but he joins with us in eulogy of his comrades. We were fortunate in witnessing some of the many brave deeds of our soldiers. All that skill, courage, and patient endurance can do has been done in the Philippines.

We are aware that there are those who have seen fit to accuse our troops of desecrating churches, murdering prisoners, and committing unmentionable crimes. To those who derive satisfaction from seizing on isolated occurrences—regrettable, indeed, but incident to every war—and making them the basis of sweeping accusations this Commission has nothing to say. Still less do we feel called upon to answer idle tales without foundation in fact. But for the satisfaction of those who have found it difficult to understand why the transporting of American citizens across the Pacific Ocean should change their nature, we are glad to express the belief that a war was never more humanely conducted.

* * * * * * *

Our control means to the inhabitants of the Philippines internal peace and order, a guaranty against foreign aggression and against the dismemberment of their country, commercial and industrial prosperity, and as large a share in the affairs of government as they shall prove fit to take.

This Commission made its final report January 31, 1900, and by its searching investigation, extensive research, exhaustive analysis, and wise recommendations paved the way for the appointment of another commission, clothed with enlarged powers, to aid in the work of pacification and peace. On the 16th of March, 1900, President McKinley appointed another commission, headed by Judge Taft, of Ohio, an eminent jurist, which commission is now engaged in the prosecution of its work in conformity with the instructions imposed by President McKinley.

I will also ask to insert in the RECORD the instructions to the Commission.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. No objection being made, they will be inserted.

The instructions are as follows:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, April 7, 1900.

SIR: In the message transmitted to the Congress on the 5th of December, 1899, I said, speaking of the Philippine Islands: "As long as the insurrection continues the military arm must necessarily be supreme. But there is no reason why steps should not be taken from time to time to inaugurate governments essentially popular in their form as fast as territory is held and controlled by our troops. To this end I am considering the advisability of the return of the Commission, or such of the members thereof as can be secured, to aid the existing authorities and facilitate this work throughout the islands."

To give effect to the intention thus expressed, I have appointed Hon. William H. Taft, of Ohio; Prof. Dean C. Worcester, of Michigan; Hon. Luke E. Wright, of Tennessee; Hon. Henry C. Ide, of Vermont, and Prof. Bernard Moses, of California, commissioners to the Philippine Islands, to continue and perfect the work of organizing and establishing civil government already commenced by the military authorities, subject in all respects to any laws which Congress may hereafter enact.

The commissioners named will meet and act as a board, and the Hon. William H. Taft is designated as president of the board. It is probable that the transfer of authority from military commanders to civil officers will be gradual and will occupy a considerable period. Its successful accomplishment and the maintenance of peace and order in the meantime will require the most perfect cooperation between the civil and military authorities in the islands, and both should be directed during the transition period by the same executive department. The Commission will therefore report to the Secretary of War, and all their actions will be subject to your approval and control.

You will instruct the Commission to proceed to the city of Manila, where they will make their principal office, and to communicate with the military governor of the Philippine Islands, whom you will at the same time direct to render to them every assistance within his power in the performance of their duties. Without hampering them by too specific instructions, they should in general be enjoined, after making themselves familiar with the conditions and needs of the country, to devote their attention in the first instance to the establishment of municipal governments in which the natives of the islands, both in the cities and in the rural communities, shall be afforded the opportunity to manage their own local affairs to the fullest extent of which they are capable, and subject to the least degree of supervision and control which a careful study of their capacities and observation of the workings of native control show to be consistent with the maintenance of law, order, and loyalty.

The next subject in order of importance should be the organization of government in the larger administrative divisions, corresponding to counties, departments, or provinces, in which the common interests of many or several municipalities falling within the same tribal lines, or the same natural geographical limits, may best be subserved by a common administration. Whenever the Commission is of the opinion that the condition of affairs in the islands is such that the central administration may safely be transferred from military to civil control, they will report that conclusion to you, with their recommendations as to the form of central government to be established for the purpose of taking over the control.

Beginning with the 1st day of September, 1900, the authority to exercise, subject to my approval, through the Secretary of War, that part of the power of government in the Philippine Islands which is of a legislative nature is to be transferred from the military governor of the islands to this Commission, to be thereafter exercised by them in the place and stead of the military governor, under such rules and regulations as you shall prescribe, until the establishment of the civil central government for the islands contemplated in the last foregoing paragraph, or until Congress shall otherwise provide.

Exercise of this legislative authority will include the making of rules and orders, having the effect of law, for the raising of revenue by taxes, customs duties, and imposts; the appropriation and expenditure of public funds of the islands; the establishment of an educational system throughout the islands; the establishment of a system to secure an efficient civil service; the organization and establishment of courts; the organization and establishment of municipal and departmental governments, and all other matters of a civil nature for which the military governor is now competent to provide by rules or orders of a legislative character.

The Commission will also have power, during the same period, to appoint to office such officers, under the judicial, educational, and civil-service systems, and in the municipal and departmental governments as shall be provided for. Until the complete transfer of control the military governor will remain the chief executive head of the government of the islands, and will exercise the executive authority now possessed by him and not herein expressly assigned to the Commission, subject, however, to the rules and orders enacted by the Commission in the exercise of the legislative powers conferred upon them. In the meantime the municipal and departmental governments will continue to report to the military governor, and be subject to his administrative supervision and control, under your direction, but that supervision and control will be confined within the narrowest limits consistent with the requirement that the powers of government in the municipalities and departments shall be honestly and effectively exercised and that law and order and individual freedom shall be maintained.

All legislative rules and orders, establishments of government, and appointments to office by the Commission will take effect immediately, or at such times as they shall designate, subject to your approval and action upon the coming in of the Commission's reports, which are to be made from time to time as their action is taken. Wherever civil governments are constituted under the direction of the Commission, such military posts, garrisons, and forces will be continued for the suppression of insurrection and brigandage and the maintenance of law and order as the military commander shall deem requisite, and the military forces shall be at all times subject under his orders to the call of the civil authorities for the maintenance of law and order and the enforcement of their authority.

In the establishment of municipal governments the Commission will take as the basis of their work the governments established by the military governor under his order of August 8, 1899, and under the report of the board constituted by the military governor by his order of January 29, 1900, to formulate and report a plan of municipal government, of which his honor Cayetano Arellano, president of the audiencia, was chairman, and they will give to the conclusions of that board the weight and consideration which the high character and distinguished abilities of its members justify.

In the constitution of department or provincial governments they will give especial attention to the existing government of the island of Negros, constituted with the approval of the people of that island, under the order of the military governor of July 22, 1899, and after verifying, so far as may be practicable, the reports of the successful working of that government, they will be guided by the experience thus acquired, so far as it may be applicable to the conditions existing in other portions of the Philippines. They will avail themselves to the fullest degree practicable of the conclusions reached by the previous commission to the Philippines.

In the distribution of powers among the governments organized by the Commission, the presumption is always to be in favor of the smaller subdivision, so that all the powers which can properly be exercised by the municipal government shall be vested in that government, and all the powers of a more general character which can be exercised by the departmental government shall be vested in that government, and so that in the governmental system which is the result of the process the central government of the islands, following the example of the distribution of the powers between the States and the National Government of the United States, shall have no direct administration except of matters of purely general concern, and shall have only such supervision and control over local governments as may be necessary to secure and enforce faithful and efficient administration by local officers.

The many different degrees of civilization and varieties of custom and capacity among the people of the different islands preclude very definite instruction as to the part which the people shall take in the selection of their own officers, but these general rules are to be observed: That in all cases the municipal officers who administer the local affairs of the people are to be selected by the people, and that wherever officers of more extended jurisdiction are to be selected in any way natives of the islands are to be preferred, and if they can be found competent and willing to perform the duties they are to receive the offices in preference to any others.

It will be necessary to fill some offices for the present with Americans, which, after a time, may well be filled by natives of the islands. As soon as practicable a system for ascertaining the merit and fitness of candidates for civil offices should be put in force. An indispensable qualification for all offices and positions of trust and authority in the islands must be absolute and unconditional loyalty to the United States, and absolute and unhampered authority and power to remove and punish any officer deviating from that standard must at all times be retained in the hands of the central authority of the islands.

In all the forms of government and administrative provisions which they are authorized to prescribe the Commission should bear in mind that the government which they are establishing is designed not for our satisfaction or for the expression of our theoretical views, but for the happiness, peace, and prosperity of the people of the Philippine Islands, and the measures adopted should be made to conform to their customs, their habits, and even their prejudices to the fullest extent consistent with the accomplishment of the indispensable requisites of just and effective government.

At the same time the Commission should bear in mind and the people of the islands should be made plainly to understand that there are certain great principles of government which have been made the basis of our governmental system which we deem essential to the rule of law and the maintenance of individual freedom, and of which they have, unfortunately, been denied the experience possessed by us; that there are also certain practical rules of government which we have found to be essential to the preservation of these great principles of liberty and law, and that these principles and these rules of government must be established and maintained in their islands for the sake of their liberty and happiness, however much they may conflict with the customs or laws of procedure with which they are familiar.

It is evident that the most enlightened thought of the Philippine Islands fully appreciates the importance of these principles and rules, and they will inevitably within a short time command universal assent. Upon every division and branch of the government of the Philippines, therefore, must be imposed these inviolable rules:

That no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law; that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation; that in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation, to be confronted with the witnesses against him, to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense; that excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishment inflicted; that no person shall be put twice in jeopardy for the same offense or be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself; that the right to be secure against unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated; that neither slavery nor involuntary servitude shall exist except as a punishment for crime; that no bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be passed; that no law shall be passed abridging the freedom of speech or of the press or of the rights of the people to peaceably assemble and petition the government for a redress of grievances; that no law shall be made respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, and that the free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship without discrimination or preference shall forever be allowed.

It will be the duty of the Commission to make a thorough investigation into the titles of the large tracts of lands held or claimed by individuals or by religious orders; into the justice of the claims and complaints made against such landholders by the people of the island, or any part of the people, and to seek by wise and peaceable measures a just settlement of the controversies and redress of the wrongs which have caused strife and bloodshed in the past. In the performance of this duty the Commission is enjoined to see that no injustice is done; to have regard for substantial right and equity, disregarding technicalities so far as substantial right permits, and to observe the following rules:

That the provision of the treaty of Paris pledging the United States to the protection of all rights of property in the islands, and as well the principle of our own Government which prohibits the taking of private property without due process of law, shall not be violated; that the welfare of the people of the islands, which should be a paramount consideration, shall be attained consistently with this rule of property right; that if it becomes necessary for the public interest of the people of the island to dispose of claims to property which the Commission finds to be not lawfully acquired and held, disposition shall be made thereof by due legal procedure, in which there shall be full opportunity for fair and impartial hearing and judgment; that if the same public interests require the extinguishment of property rights lawfully acquired and held, due compensation shall be made out of the public treasury therefor; that no form of religion and no minister of religion shall be forced upon any community or upon any citizen of the island; that, upon the other hand, no minister of religion shall be interfered with or molested in following his calling, and that the separation between state and church shall be real, entire, and absolute.

It will be the duty of the Commission to promote and extend and, as they find occasion, to improve the system of education already inaugurated by the military authorities. In doing this they should regard as of first importance the extension of a system of primary education which shall be free to all, and which shall tend to fit the people for the duties of citizenship and for the ordinary avocations of a civilized community.

This instruction should be given, in the first instance, in every part of the islands in the language of the people. In view of the great number of languages spoken by the different tribes, it is especially important to the prosperity of the islands that a common medium of communication may be established, and it is obviously desirable that this medium should be the English language. Especial attention should be at once given to affording full opportunity to all the people of the islands to acquire the use of the English language.

It may well be that the main changes which should be made in the system of taxation and in the body of the laws under which the people are governed, except such changes as have already been made by the military government, should be relegated to the civil government which is to be established under the auspices of the Commission. It will, however, be the duty of the Commission to inquire diligently as to whether there are any further changes which ought not to be delayed, and, if so, they are authorized to make such changes, subject to your approval.

In doing so they are to bear in mind that taxes which tend to penalize or repress industry and enterprise are to be avoided; that provisions for taxation should be simple, so that they may be understood by the people; that they should affect the fewest practicable subjects of taxation which will serve for the general distribution of the burden. The main body of the laws which regulate the rights and obligations of the people should be maintained with as little interference as possible. Changes made should be mainly in procedure and in the criminal laws to secure speedy and impartial trials, and at the same time effective administration and respect for individual rights.

In dealing with the uncivilized tribes of the island the Commission should adopt the same course followed by Congress in permitting the tribes of our

North American Indians to maintain their tribal organization and government, and under which many of those tribes are now living in peace and contentment, surrounded by a civilization to which they are unable or unwilling to conform. Such tribal governments should, however, be subjected to wise and firm regulation; and, without undue or petty interference, constant and active effort should be exercised to prevent barbarous practices and introduce civilized customs.

Upon all officers and employees of the United States, both civil and military, should be impressed a sense of the duty to observe not merely the material but the personal and social rights of the people of the islands, and to treat them with the same courtesy and respect for their personal dignity which the people of the United States are accustomed to require from each other.

The articles of capitulation of the city of Manila on the 13th of August, 1898, concluded with these words:

"This city, its inhabitants, its churches and religious worship, its educational establishments, and its private property of all descriptions are placed under the special safeguard of the faith and honor of the American Army."

I believe that this pledge has been faithfully kept. As high and sacred an obligation rests upon the Government of the United States to give protection for property and life, civil and religious freedom, and wise, firm, and unselfish guidance in the paths of peace and prosperity to all the people of the Philippine Islands. I charge this Commission to labor for the full performance of this obligation, which concerns the honor and conscience of their country, in the firm hope that through their labors all the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands may come to look back with gratitude to the day when God gave victory to American arms at Manila and set their land under the sovereignty and protection of the people of the United States.

WILLIAM McKINLEY.

The SECRETARY OF WAR,
Washington, D. C.

Mr. BURROWS. The labors of this Commission have not yet been concluded, but they have progressed far enough, however, to justify the wisdom of its creation and far enough to already bear rich fruitage and give assurance of an abundant harvest in the not distant future.

With these two instrumentalities, the Army and Navy on the one hand and the Civil Commissions on the other, both intent on the accomplishment of a common purpose, the work of pacification in the islands is progressing with marvelous rapidity. Indeed, when we consider that these islands are 7,000 miles distant from our shores, inhabited by alien races aggregating from eight to ten million people in all stages of civilization, from the cannibal to the educated Filipino, speaking divers and unknown tongues, it is a matter of profound astonishment that so much has been accomplished in the direction of establishing peaceful and orderly government.

In a little over three years of American sovereignty and control an insurgent army has been utterly broken up and destroyed, leaving nothing but guerrilla bands infesting remote portions of the country. Whatever pretense of rival government may have existed has been dissolved, and many of the insurgent leaders in military and civil life have taken the oath of allegiance to the United States and are now among its most loyal and ardent supporters.

Let me place the names of some of them on record, and let us see if the operations of the United States Government in the Philippines has not tended to pacification and already secured the cooperation of many of the leading spirits of the islands. Here are a few of the men once prominent in Philippine affairs now as prominent in the administration of public affairs in the islands under the guidance and sovereignty of the United States:

C. S. Arellano, chief justice of the supreme court, was secretary of state in the first cabinet of the revolutionary government.

Florentino Torres, associate justice, was chairman of a board to confer with another presided over by General Hughes before the outbreak of hostilities between Americans and Filipinos.

Victorino Mapa, associate justice, was counselor of the revolutionary government in the island of Panay.

Trinidad H. Pardo de Tavera, commissioner, was assistant secretary of state in the first cabinet of the revolutionary government at Malolos and member of its congress.

Benito Legarda, commissioner, was assistant secretary of the treasury of the same government and vice-president of its congress.

Jose Luzuriaga, commissioner, was president of the revolutionary congress of the island of Negros.

Felipe Buencamino, member of the civil-service board, was counselor of Aguinaldo in Cavite, member of the congress of Malolos, and secretary of Fomento in Malolos and secretary of state in San Isidro de Nueva Ecija.

Felix M. Roxas, judge, was member of the Filipino junta in Paris.

Ignacio Villamor, judge, was member of the Malolos congress.

Gregorio Araneta, solicitor-general, was secretary of justice and member of Malolos congress.

Jose Serapio, governor of Bulacan, was colonel in the revolutionary army.

Martin Delgado, governor of Iloilo, was commanding general of the revolutionary forces in the island of Panay.

Ambrosio Flores, governor of Rizal, was general of the revolutionary army, member of the revolutionary congress, and assistant secretary of war.

Mariano Trias, governor of Cavite, was commanding general of the revolutionary forces of southern Luzon, secretary of the treasury, and secretary of war.

Gracio Gonzaga, governor of Cagayan, was member of the revolutionary congress and secretary of the interior.

Arsenio Cruz Herrera, president of the municipal board of Manila, was member of Malolos congress and assistant secretary of the interior.

Jose Alejandrino, city engineer in Manila, was general of the revolutionary army.

Modesto Reyes, city attorney of Manila, was member of the Filipino junta in Madrid.

Daniel Tirona, provincial secretary of Cavite, was Aguinaldo's first secretary of war and commanding general of the revolutionary forces in the province of Cagayan.

Mariano Cunanan, provincial secretary of Pampanga, was major in the revolutionary army.

Mariano Crisostomo, fiscal of Bulacan; Jose M. Lerma, provincial secretary of Bataan; Sofio Alandy, fiscal of Tayabas, were all congressmen at Malolos.

This list of the most prominent men in the archipalego, once identified with the insurgents in civil and military operation, but now openly and loyally supporting the United States in its efforts to establish peace and orderly government in the islands, is convincing and gratifying proof of the dominant sentiment of the intelligent and controlling element in the islands.

But there are other and even more convincing indications of the final pacification of the inhabitants of these islands. The American army, which, but a short time ago, I think in January, 1901, aggregated 69,420, now numbers 33,522, and when orders already issued have been carried out the force will be reduced to 26,234. Since December 1, 1901, there has been a reduction in the number of stations of ninety-five.

But this is not all. Hostility has been so far allayed in the archipelago that already civil government has been inaugurated in 34 provinces out of a possible 54, and I see by the press that in another province civil government has been inaugurated. Through the instrumentality of these governments peace and order have been established. I will ask to have inserted in the RECORD a list of the provinces in which civil government has been established, containing not only the names of the provinces, but the area of each and the number of inhabitants.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it will be inserted in the RECORD.

Provinces in the Philippines in which civil government has been instituted.

[The provinces not specially noted have been pacified and civil government is maintained in peace.]

LUZON—UNDER CIVIL ADMINISTRATION.

Provinces and important dependencies.	Area (approximate).	Number of dependent islands.	Population (approximate).
	Sq. miles.
Abra	1,964		57,285
Bontoc.			228,139
Albay	1,711	21
Catanduanes.
Ambos Camarines	3,161	83	194,022
Bataan	436	1	50,761
Batangas[a]
Benguet	990		15,175
Bulacan	841		239,221
Cagayan	5,291	46	96,367
Babuyanes.
Batanes.
Cavite	610	7	134,569
Ilocos Norte	1,265	4	163,349
Ilocos Sur	491	2	215,792
Isabela	5,396	2	48,302
Manila	20		[a]250,000
Corregidor	4	5	420
Marinduque	681	13	48,000
Nueva Ecija	3,840		156,610
Pampanga	2,209		223,922
Pangasinan	1,316		302,178
Rizal	1,048	3	246,940
Sorsogon	675	16	98,650
Tarlac	1,295		89,339
Tayabas[b]
Union	867		110,184
Zambales	2,210	76	87,295
Total	39,081	302	3,429,460

MINDANAO—UNDER CIVIL ADMINISTRATION.

	Sq. miles.
Misamis[b]	5,879	5	126,942
Surigao	13,201	83	85,125
Total	19,080	88	212,067

[a] Not pacified. [b] Partially pacified.

Provinces in the Philippines in which civil government has been instituted—Continued.

VISAYAS—UNDER CIVIL ADMINISTRATION.

Provinces and important dependencies.	Area (approximate).	Number of dependent islands.	Population (approximate).
	Sq. miles.
Cebu	1,782	29	518,032
Masbate:
Burias	268	12	1,703
Masbate	1,315	46	23,069
Ticao	149	8	----------
Negros, occidental	3,112	14	231,512
Negros, oriental	1,742	3	140,498
Panay:
Antique	1,340	6	115,434
Capiz	1,661	30	224,000
Iloilo	2,102	80	462,444
Romblon	515	32	55,339
Leyte	4,214	40	270,491
Total	19,814	359	2,302,522

Mr. BURROWS. Civil governments have been organized and established in more than 800 towns; a judicial system has been inaugurated in the islands, with a supreme court and inferior courts, presided over by native and American judges, through which rights are maintained and wrongs redressed; a new code of practice or civil procedure has been adopted, abolishing the complicated and technical methods under Spanish rule, which made the administration of justice a mockery and farce; prison doors have been unlocked and the victim of Spanish cruelty set free; a constabulary has been organized, composed largely of natives, which is a most effective instrumentality in ridding the provinces of ladronism, supplemented by an organization of native police in the several towns, which is becoming not only the conservator of peace but the protector of the people, thus permitting the withdrawal of the army and its relief from mere police duty. Land taxes have been imposed and collected for local purposes only, and all other internal-revenue taxes are applied to the locality where collected; have established a tariff system far more just and equitable than the former Spanish exactions, relieving the necessities of life of the heretofore heavy exactions; have collected sufficient customs dues to meet all the expenses of the central government and devote $3,000,000 to the improvement of Manila Harbor and $1,000,000 to the building of highways; have made provision for the maintenance of the common-school system, and 835 American teachers in 445 towns are not only giving primary instruction to the children but normal instruction in English to more than 3,000 native teachers. Agricultural, manual training, and night schools have been founded, presenting an ever-increasing demand for American teachers. Several executive departments have been organized, a telegraph service has been established, reaching the capitals of every organized province, and the Filipinos are being rapidly educated to man this service; highways are being constructed and repaired in each province under the direction of competent supervisors; a health bureau established and legislation enacted looking to the promotion of the sanitary condition of the people and the conservation of the public health; a million dollars has been set aside to establish and maintain interisland communication between the central government and the outlying provinces, to the promotion of intercourse and trade; light-houses illuminate the extensive coasts, warning and guiding the mariner in his perilous voyage.

The city of Manila, the emporium of the archipelago, under the protection of a police force more than half native, presents an object lesson of American government and control which augurs well for the future of the city and the peace, happiness, and prosperity of its people.

Speaking of the constabulary force established in the islands, I hold in my hand the last report, bearing date December 15, 1901, of Captain Allen, from which I beg leave to quote a few passages. It is a report made showing the conditions of the constabulary in the islands and the advancement of the cause of peace and order under American rule.

I submit a few extracts only:

> Ending November 30, up to which time the statistics set forth in this report are for the most part included, the constabulary may be said to be 4 months old. The first appointments were made in the early part of August, and the recruiting had scarcely begun before the latter part of the same month. In organizing this force it was necessary to start at the very bottom, as there was absolutely nothing of the kind in existence.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> The archipelago is divided into three districts, the first of which embraces that portion of the archipelago north of Manila; the second, that portion of Luzon south of Manila, together with the islands not belonging to the Visayan group; the third, the Visayas, Mindanao, and Jolo.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> We are now able to hold the following provinces without troops: Abra, Bontoc, Union, Lepanto, Benguet, Nueva Viscaya, and Bataan, likewise Principe and Infanta whenever it may be required. Within three months from this date it is believed that troops may be concentrated in a single garrison in at least eight provinces and that there will be others that can be held by the constabulary without troops.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> The necessity of maintaining at least one large garrison in many of the provinces may always exist, but it is my candid opinion that within one year from this date 15,000 American soldiers, with the native contingent of troops and the constabulary, will suffice to garrison the Philippine Archipelago. I make this statement after due consideration of the conditions existing here, and with fairly good knowledge of the character of the inhabitants of these islands.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> The general condition of the islands as regards pacification has never been so favorable as now, when the crumbling from the top is duly manifest.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> From reports received from various parts of the islands there can be no question but that the better class of people are extremely tired of the struggle and ardently desire peace. The recently enacted sedition law has had a potent value in bringing evil doers to a realization of their allegiance to law and order. It demonstrates to these people the forcefulness of civil government, enables the constabulary to reap the rewards of its labors, and gives to the insular judiciary ample opportunity to prove the great importance of its work in this period of reconstruction.
>
> As our knowledge of the Filipinos and the islands is daily increasing, the danger of future uprisings and disorders is daily diminishing.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> As a proof of the improvement in the general situation the following is submitted:
>
> On July 1, 1901, the Army was holding in the island of Luzon 420 posts with 36,274 troops; December 1, 1901, there were 293 posts held by 25,808 troops, a diminution of 30 per cent in posts and 29 per cent in troops in a period of five months. In the entire archipelago there were 491 posts and 49,937 troops on July 1, 1901, and 372 posts with 37,340 troops December 15 of the same year. Excepting in Batangas, Laguna, and Samar, the number of military stations is being continually diminished. For example, orders have just been issued abolishing seven military posts in the province of Leyte.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> It is perhaps premature to speak of an organization so far-reaching in its operations after an existence of only four months, but it is believed that the experimental stage is passed, and that the constabulary may be duly reckoned upon as a potent factor in the maintenance of order in the Philippines.

Such, in dim outline, are some of the results of American domination in the Philippines which would seem to justify the legislation proposed in this bill and the continued exercise of American sovereignty over a people so rapidly advancing in the scale of civilization and orderly government.

But we are asked, What of the future? I do not know. No man living knows. As McKinley well said, "We are treading in an unexplored field which will test our wisdom and statesmanship." There was never a truer declaration. It is an unexplored field, fraught with perils perchance, but surely with tremendous responsibilities. Human wisdom and foresight can not penetrate the future.

I only know for the present that to abandon these islands now and turn them over to warring factions within and assaults of designing enemies from without, to desert a people dependent upon us to be led in the paths of peace, order, and stable government, would be the master crime of the centuries. If the inquiry is made, What is to be the policy of the future? I would answer in the language of the Taft Commission, approved by the Secretary of War. It is a policy I believe in and most fully indorse. The Taft Commission in its last report says:

> It is perhaps right that we should express our views as to the wisest course for Congress to take at the coming session. We think that if Congress were to give the present government the benefit of Congressional authority to continue under the limitations which it now has by virtue of the President's instructions until January, 1904, this would probably give time enough to form a complete government as a going concern, and at the end of that time provisions might well be made for a change in the form of the government, so that it should consist of a civil governor, of a legislative council, and of a popular assembly chosen by a limited electorate.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> We respectfully urge that Congress be requested to confirm the legislation of the Commission already enacted and vest by Congressional act in the civil governor and Commission and their successors by appointment of the President the powers and authority heretofore exercised by them under the instructions of the President and subsequent modifications thereof, with the limitations therein contained, and that provision be made in such legislation for the popular assembly already described, to begin its life January, 1904.
>
> We further recommend that by the act establishing the government above recommended provision be made for the selection, after January, 1904, by a joint vote of the popular assembly and the executive council of two delegates to represent the interests of these islands and the Filipino people before Congress and the Executive at Washington. Their expenses and salaries should be paid from the insular treasury. This is something which the Filipino people have very much at heart. We believe that such representation would be useful both to these islands and to the United States.

That policy as outlined receives my unqualified approval, and it will be a most happy termination of a conflict for the establishment of peace, order, and justice, if in 1904, or as soon as conditions will justify it, the Filipino people can have the suggestions of the Commission carried out and crystallized into law. The sooner it can be safely consummated the better for the inhabitants of the islands and the better for the United States.

This I believe to be the true policy—home rule under American sovereignty—which, it is hoped, in the years to come, and at no very distant day, will result in the establishment of a just and stable government in the Philippines and the uplift of 10,000,000 people to a higher civilization and a better destiny.

Mr. MALLORY. Mr. President, I have proposed an amendment to section 3 of the bill "temporarily to provide revenue for the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes," now pending. In doing so I am actuated solely by a purpose to endeavor to improve the measure, so as to make it conform as much as possible to certain of our navigation laws that have existed in this country for many years. How far a legislator is justified in attempting to improve legislation which in his judgment is unsound in principle and unwise in policy I shall not now undertake to determine, but it will suffice to say for present purposes that I am utterly and wholly opposed to the principle underlying this measure and to the policy which it undertakes to set in operation.

The amendment which I have proposed relates solely to that portion of the bill which proposes to deal with the subject of the navigation laws affecting the Philippine Islands, and while it does not to any very great extent change the phraseology of that section, it does propose to change its features very materially. In order that there may be a correct understanding of the purport of the amendment, I will trespass upon the time of the Senate to read it. It proposes to strike out the third section as it now reads, and that in lieu thereof the following be inserted:

SEC. 3. That until July 1, 1903, the same tonnage taxes shall be levied, collected, and paid upon all foreign vessels coming into the United States from the Philippine Archipelago, and in addition to any tonnage dues or taxes now imposed by the government of the Philippine Islands upon all foreign vessels (except vessels of Spain, owned by Spanish subjects) engaged in traffic between the ports of the Philippine Archipelago, which are required by law to be levied and collected and paid upon vessels coming into the United States from foreign countries: Provided, however, That until July 1, 1903, the provisions of law restricting to vessels of the United States the transportation of passengers and merchandise directly or indirectly from one port of the United States to another port of the United States shall not be applicable to foreign vessels engaging in trade between the Philippine Archipelago and the United States, or between ports in the Philippine Archipelago; and thereafter such provisions shall not apply to vessels of Spain owned by Spanish subjects entering the ports of the Philippine Islands until the expiration of the ten years mentioned in Article IV of the Treaty of Paris of December 10, 1898: And provided further, That the Philippine Commission shall be authorized and empowered to issue licenses to vessels or other craft now engaged in lighterage or other exclusively harbor business, but after the passage of this act such licenses, except as herein provided, shall be issued only to vessels or other craft built in the Philippine Islands or in the United States and owned by citizens of the United States or by inhabitants of the Philippine Islands.

And it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury, as soon after the approval of this act as practicable, to make and promulgate such rules and regulations as may be necessary for the nationalization of all vessels built in the United States or in the Philippine Islands and owned at the date of the approval of this act and thereafter by inhabitants of said islands not subjects or citizens of any foreign nation; and no inhabitant of said Philippine Islands, not the subject or citizen of any foreign nation, possessed of other qualifications required by existing law to act as an officer of a merchant vessel of the United States, shall be disqualified as an officer of any vessel nationalized in accordance with the provisions of this act by reason of his not being a citizen of the United States.

In addition to these provisions it has occurred to me that it is proper to add a further extension of our navigation laws in the terms which I shall read, and which I shall ask that I be permitted to make a part of the amendment that I have proposed. I will read it as I have written it, as an addition to the amendment:

The coasting trade between the Philippine Islands and the United States shall be regulated in accordance with the provisions of law applicable to such trade between any two great coasting districts of the United States, and the coasting trade between the islands of the Philippine Archipelago and between said islands and the other insular possessions of the United States in the Pacific Ocean shall be regulated in accordance with the provisions of law applicable to such trade within one great coasting district of the United States.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KEAN in the chair). Does the Senator propose that as a modification of his amendment?

Mr. MALLORY. I wish to ask permission to add this clause to the printed amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be so modified. Does the Senator desire to have the amendment reprinted?

Mr. MALLORY. Yes, sir; with the addition that I have just read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

Mr. MALLORY. This amendment and these changes which I have proposed are to a certain extent technical, and are probably not intelligible to most of the members of this body, unless they take the trouble to compare carefully our navigation laws with the proposition contained in the third section of the pending bill; and I shall endeavor briefly to point out the differences which I propose to incorporate in the bill.

The bill as it now is provides that on and after the passage of this act the same tonnage dues, etc., shall be imposed, putting no limitation whatever upon the traffic between the Philippine Islands and the United States by foreign vessels. It provides that foreign vessels shall be permitted to engage in the commerce between the Philippine Islands and the United States until hereafter some legislation shall be enacted by Congress.

That, Mr. President, is in derogation of a principle which we have adhered to since the beginning of the Republic—of denying the right to engage in our domestic commerce to foreign-built or foreign-owned ships.

That this is domestic commerce of the United States can not, I think, in view of a decision of our Supreme Court rendered about a year ago, be disputed. In the case, known as Huus v. New York and Porto Rico Steamship Company, the question was whether the steamship Ponce, which was a vessel enrolled in the United States merchant service and engaged in commerce between Porto Rico and the port of New York, was in fact engaged in the coasting trade of the United States. The point, of course, is familiar to all lawyers who have read that decision. It was one of what were known as the insular decisions, and is the last in the little pamphlet containing a compendium of those decisions. The Supreme Court, in taking up this question, said:

Under the commercial and navigation laws of the United States merchant vessels are divisible into two classes: First, vessels registered pursuant to Revised Statutes, section 4131. These must be wholly owned, commanded, and officered by citizens of the United States, and are alone entitled to engage in foreign trade; and, second, vessels enrolled and licensed for the coasting trade or fisheries. (Rev. Stat., sec. 4311.) These may not engage in foreign trade under penalty of forfeiture. (Sec. 4337.) This class of vessels is also engaged in navigation upon the Great Lakes and the interior waters of the country—in other words, they are engaged in domestic instead of foreign trade.

The court evidently, as I think will appear from the reading of other portions of this decision, considers domestic trade and the coastwise trade as identical, the terms being significant of the same thing in both instances:

The words "coasting trade," as distinguishing this class of vessels, seem to have been selected because at that time all the domestic commerce of the country was either interior commerce, or coastwise, between ports upon the Atlantic or Pacific coasts, or upon islands so near thereto, and belonging to the several States, as properly to constitute a part of the coast. Strictly speaking Porto Rico is not such an island, as it is not only situated some hundreds of miles from the nearest port on the Atlantic coast, but had never belonged to the United States, or any of the States composing the Union. At the same time trade with that island is properly a part of the domestic trade of the country since the treaty of annexation, and is so recognized by the Porto Rican or Foraker Act.

The court has laid down there beyond any question that trade between Porto Rico and the United States is a part of the coasting trade of the United States, and by parity of reasoning (and I can not see how there can be any question about the similarity of the two cases) trade between the Philippine Archipelago and the United States must also be coastwise trade of the United States.

Our statutes do not recognize any other than the two distinct divisions of maritime or water-borne commerce than the foreign and the coastwise trade, and these two distinctions have been observed very carefully from the very earliest part of the century.

Therefore, Mr. President, the proposition to admit foreign ships to engage in our coastwise trade indefinitely is such an innovation upon the principle on which our navigation laws are based that I do not think we ought lightly to indorse such a change; and by my first amendment, instead of using the language that on and after the passage of this act foreign ships shall be permitted to engage in our coastwise commerce, I fix a date. I am not particular as to the date, but in my amendment I have named the 1st day of July, 1903, as the time when this extraordinary privilege shall cease.

The idea, as I understand it, which has led to this innovation is that we have no vessels under American documents on the Pacific coast, or not enough to engage properly in this commerce, and that the commerce between the Philippine Archipelago and the Pacific ports will languish unless we permit foreign-owned and foreign-officered vessels to engage in that commerce.

In answer to that we might say that it would be more appropriate and better, perhaps, to allow American citizens to purchase and own and officer foreign-built ships to engage in that trade in this particular emergency rather than to open the door and permit foreign-built and foreign-owned vessels to engage in it, and thus overthrow a rule which we have adhered to very strenuously for so many years.

But, Mr. President, I do not undertake to make any such proposition, because, while I would prefer it to admitting foreign-built ships into our domestic commerce under any circumstances, I do not think that it would prevail in this body, and I really wish to accomplish something by the amendment.

Therefore I have thought it proper to fix the time at which this permit shall expire, namely, July 1, 1903, which will enable our shipowners on the Pacific coast and elsewhere to supply themselves with a sufficient number of ocean-going vessels to engage in the Philippine trade.

We have to-day before the Senate a bill which proposes to give a bounty to American shipowners for the business of running their own ships, a bill which has been pressed here very strenuously in years gone by, and which will probably prevail at this session of Congress, paying our own owners of foreign ocean-going craft and of domestic craft also for running their own vessels. We propose taxing the citizens engaged in other pursuits in the United States for the purpose of building up this business of ocean traffic, and the argument is that it is for the public welfare, and that we have a perfect right to do so.

In the same breath, while we are doing that, and while our old, well-tried laws are keeping out from our coastwise commerce all foreign-built ships and all foreign-owned ships, we turn in this particular instance and invite the entire world to come into the commerce between the Philippine Islands and the United States and compete with our vessels. It strikes me, Mr. President, that that is bad policy if not unsound principle.

The second change which I propose to incorporate in this amendment relates to an exclusion of the Spanish vessels engaged in the Philippine trade or engaged in the trade between the Philippine ports from the effects of the provisions of this act. The treaty of Paris, of December 10, 1898, provides in its fourth article:

That the United States will, for the term of ten years from the date of the exchange of the ratification of the present treaty, admit Spanish ships and merchandise to the ports of the Philippine Islands on the same terms as ships and merchandise of the United States.

I construe that to mean all the ports of the Philippine Islands, without reference to the ports from which the Spanish vessels come, and I think that the committee which has reported this bill so construes that article of the treaty; that is, that even in the trade between the Philippine Islands themselves vessels owned by Spanish subjects and carrying the Spanish flag will be entitled to enjoy all the privileges that vessels of the United States enjoy up to a period of ten years from the ratification of that treaty.

There is, however, in the third section no provision made for that condition. That section simply declares that—

The provisions of law restricting to vessels of the United States the transportation of passengers and merchandise directly or indirectly from one port of the United States to another port of the United States shall not be applicable to foreign vessels engaging in trade between the Philippine Archipelago and the United States or between ports in the Philippine Archipelago.

There is no provision in it at all to exempt Spanish vessels, which under our treaty shall enjoy all the rights that American vessels enjoy in that trade from the effects of the provision.

The third point on which I offer an amendment to this third section is with regard to a matter which I do not think has been considered by the other body of Congress or by the committee which has had this bill under charge. It is a fact which I gather from the report in the year 1900 of the Philippine Commission—that there were engaged in 1891 in the interisland commerce of the Philippine Archipelago some 7,000 registered craft of all kinds, and it is reported that in 1895 the number had increased to 11,000; quite a large commerce. That is commerce between the islands constituting the Philippine Archipelago, ranging practically a thousand miles in distance from north to south.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. MALLORY. Certainly.

Mr. PERKINS. If the Senator from Florida will permit me, I will call his attention to the report of the Commissioner of Navigation, at page 444, wherein he shows from the reports of the War Department that on July 10, 1899, there were 2,340 vessels registered, with a tonnage of 102,581 tons, which were engaged in the same traffic to which the Senator from Florida now refers—that is, in the interisland commerce, between the islands and China and Japan. That was in 1899, and I am informed by credible nautical men who have been in the islands that it is 50 per cent more at this time than it was in 1899.

Mr. MALLORY. I am much obliged to the Senator from California for the information. Of course the prevalence of war in the Philippine Islands did much to decrease that kind of commerce, and I suppose that probably from 1897 to this year the number of vessels engaged in that interisland commerce has been less than it was anterior to the outbreak of hostilities between the Filipinos and the Spaniards.

But it is a very considerable commerce, and if we are to accept the decision of the Supreme Court in the Huus case, to which I have adverted, as law, I can see no escape from the conclusion that this commerce is also coastwise commerce of the United States. If the commerce between the Philippine Islands themselves and the United States is coastwise commerce, and so the Supreme Court has held, then the commerce between the Philippine Islands themselves, a part of the United States, is necessarily coastwise commerce.

I can not see how there can possibly be any other designation given to it, because there is no authority under law, except in Congress, to change our navigation laws, to change the laws which affect the coasts of our Territory, whether it is Territory that falls within the uniformity clause of section 8 of Article I of the Constitution or not.

Yet, Mr. President, it is a fact that the Philippine Commission, under the absolute and unqualified power which was conferred upon it by Congress last year, through the interposition of the President, vesting in the President all civil, military, and judicial power in these islands, has gone to work and established a system of registry, if I am not misinformed or if I do not misinterpret the language of the report.

It has established rules and regulations for the navigation and management of those vessels; it has established rules and regulations governing the masters and mates and some individuals known as patrons, whatever they may be, all of which is, in my judgment, in conflict with the acts of Congress upon that subject. It is clearly so, because they differ in many respects from the acts of Congress. As a specimen I will read one provision of one of these laws relating to that subject enacted by the Philippine Commission. It is entitled "An act providing for the examination and licensing of applicants for the positions of masters, mates, and patrons of sea-going vessels." It will be found on page 120 of the Public Laws and Resolutions passed by the United States Philippine Commission, which we all have on our desks, and which was published in 1901.

It provides that a board, consisting "of the captain of the port of Manila, the superintendent of the nautical school, and two masters of merchant vessels, to be appointed by the captain of the port," shall constitute the board of examiners, who shall examine applicants for permission to act as masters, mates, and patrons of vessels engaged in commerce in the Philippine Islands. As a specimen of the regulations established for that board, I will read what the applicant for license as a patron has to do:

Every applicant for license as patron shall not be less than 23 years of age. He shall be examined on the following subjects: Reading and writing; management of sails and rigging of coasting and pilot boats; manner of loading, according to cargo; manner of careening a boat so as to rid it of water, as well as manner of stranding same; knowledge of the coasts where he is to navigate, their shoals, banks, and reefs; of ocean currents and tides; of prevailing winds; which winds to sail with and which to sail away from; how to square the compass, to take bearings by the lead, and other practical methods for determining the nearness of the coast and what course to be taken; methods of entering and leaving the ports of the provinces; precautions to be taken in time of storms at sea, as well as in port; method of repairing damage sustained by vessels; familiarity with all existing coast light-houses on their routes; knowledge of all maritime laws relating to the sanitation and police regulations of ports; of his knowledge of regulations governing the use of lights and signals for the prevention of collisions, and, in short, of all subjects that may have a bearing on his calling.

Mr. FORAKER. Will the Senator kindly give me the volume from which he makes his citation? I have not the volume before me to which I can turn.

Mr. MALLORY. It is page 121 of Public Laws and Resolutions passed by the United States Philippine Commission, Division of Insular Affairs, War Department, printed at the Government Printing Office in 1901.

These are the subjects which are submitted to the applicant for the position of patron, whatever that is. There is no definition in the act, or anywhere else that I can find in the acts of the Philippine Commission, as to what the duties of a patron are, but from the immensity of the field which this examination is intended to cover, I should imagine that he was at least a man who would be qualified to command a small fleet, much less a small boat. Then there is provision for the license of a master:

Every applicant for license as master must produce satisfactory evidence that he has served as certified first mate for at least three years in a seagoing sailing vessel or at least five years in a seagoing steamer, and must not be less than 23 years of age. The holders of licenses as master or mate under the laws of the United States shall be eligible to appointment to like positions under this act. The examination of every applicant shall be in writing, and shall include a thorough examination as to his knowledge of seamanship and navigation in its various branches, his capacity and skill in lading and unlading cargo, in handling and storing freight under all conditions, and his knowledge generally of the duties of the position which he seeks. To obtain a license every applicant shall be required to show a proficiency in the subjects upon which he is examined and shall answer correctly at least 75 per cent of the questions propounded to him on such examination.

And further on, in section 3 of the same act, it is provided:

SEC. 3. Every applicant for license as master, mate, or patron shall be a citizen of the United States or of the Philippine Islands, notwithstanding any provision in existing Spanish laws to the contrary: Provided, however, That every citizen or subject of any other country who is now acting as master, mate, or patron of any vessel flying the American flag may, if otherwise qualified as herein prescribed, continue to act as such for the period of two years. But he shall be required to secure a license and be subject to all the other requirements and provisions of this act as are other persons in like situations.

There is so much in this act that is suggestive of thought that one might be justified in consuming a great deal of time in criticising the aspect which the Philippine situation presents to us from this point of view, but I do not propose to consume any more time than I think is absolutely necessary to make clear the object and purpose of the amendment which I have had the honor to offer; but I can not forbear noting the expression which I have just read:

Provided, however, That every citizen or subject of any other country who is now acting as master, mate, or patron of any vessel flying the American flag—

How can any man be the master of a vessel flying the American flag and at the same time be a citizen or subject of a foreign country? Our laws are imperative on that subject. The laws under which every vessel of the United States is entitled to carry the flag prohibit any man who is not a citizen of the United States from commanding such vessel, and yet we have the fact disclosed by this act that such provision is made temporarily, not by Congress, but in violation of the act of Congress, by eight gentlemen sitting in Manila, who set aside an act of Congress and allow a vessel to be mastered by a man who is not a citizen of the United States, permitting her to fly the American flag.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. MALLORY. I do.

Mr. PERKINS. I do not wish to interrupt my friend from Florida, except to correct him in one respect. If he will look at the Executive order issued by President McKinley regarding the regulations of vessels in the Philippine Islands, he will see that it reads as follows:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, Washington, D. C., July 3, 1899.

1. Officers of the customs in the Philippine Islands may issue a certificate of protection entitling the vessel to which it is issued to the protection and flag of the United States on the high seas and in all ports if the vessel is owned by—

(a) A citizen of the United States residing in the Philippine Islands.

(b) A native inhabitant of the Philippine Islands upon taking the oath of allegiance to the United States.

(c) A resident of the Philippine Islands before April 11, 1899, hitherto a subject of Spain, upon abjuring his allegiance to the Crown of Spain and taking the oath of allegiance to the United States.

2. The master and the watch officers of a vessel to which a certificate of protection is issued shall be citizens of the United States, or shall take the oath of allegiance to the United States, provided that the general commanding the forces of the United States in the Philippine Islands may, in his discretion, in special cases waive this requirement in whole or in part.

3. Such certificate of protection shall entitle the vessel to the same privileges and subject it to the same disabilities as are prescribed in Article XX of the Consular Regulations of 1896 for American or foreign built vessels transferred abroad to citizens of the United States.

4. The form and manner of the issue of certificates of protection provided for in this order shall be prescribed by the Secretary of War.

WILLIAM McKINLEY.

This order is similar, I think, to the protection which is given, as my friend knows, under the general law to vessels that have been purchased in foreign countries.

Mr. MALLORY. I deny that any Executive order of the President of the United States or of anybody else can repeal an act of Congress, and that is what this amounts to, that a man who is not a citizen of the United States shall command a vessel of the United States and that that vessel shall be permitted to carry the emblem of the sovereignty of the United States. No Executive order that I have ever heard of can reach to that extent, unless Congress makes up its mind to entirely abdicate its functions in matters of that character.

I do not care to enter into this discussion, because it is an old subject which has been discussed in the past; but I deny that Congress has power to vest in the President the naming of a commission to exercise the functions which these gentleman have unquestionably been exercising there. The fact that here are vessels sailing in defiance of the acts of Congress and in defiance of the laws of the United States governing our coastwise commerce, which thus are enabled, under the decree of this Philippine Commission, to set at their mastheads the flag of the United States, is, I think, Mr. President, as good an illustration as we could have of the correctness of the contention of those of us who a year ago argued that vesting in the President the power that was given him by an amendment in the last hours of Congress on the Army appropriation bill—absolute military, civil, and judicial control of the Philippine Islands—was a delegation of legislative power that was without any authority under the Constitution, and certainly was in inexcusable derogation of the authority of Congress. Here we have an act of Congress prescribing who shall be masters of American vessels, and there, on the other hand, is a body of eight gentlemen, seated in Manila, who say that these men who have not the qualifications prescribed by the act of Congress may act as masters of so-called United States vessels and may hoist our flag at the masthead of those vessels.

But I do not care to be diverted into that argument, except simply to note the fact that at the base and foundation of all these anomalies that are constantly cropping out and being called to our attention, arising out of the peculiar situation of the Philippine Islands, is the fact that Congress has abdicated its trust and has vested in or delegated to some one else the duty of performing the functions which were imposed upon it by the Constitution.

Mr. President, I think all that can be corrected if the latter part of the amendment which I propose here, so far as this particular point is concerned, is adopted. This amendment provides:

And it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury—

Instead of the Commissioner of Navigation. The law regarding Porto Rico puts this duty on the Commissioner of Navigation. I thought it better to put it in the hands of a Cabinet officer himself, but in other respects it is similar to the Porto Rican law—

And it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury, as soon after the approval of this act as practicable, to make and promulgate such rules and regulations as may be necessary for the nationalization of all vessels built in the United States or in the Philippine Islands—

That word "nationalization" is a somewhat vague word, but it was used in the Porto Rican act and was also used in the act providing for the navigation of vessels coasting along the Alaskan coast a good many years ago, and has undergone the scrutiny of the Supreme Court—and owned at the date of the approval of this act and thereafter by inhabitants of said islands not subjects or citizens of any foreign nation; and no inhabitant of said Philippine Islands, not the subject or citizen of any foreign nation, possessed of other qualifications required by existing law to act as an officer of a merchant vessel of the United States, shall be disqualified as an officer of any vessel nationalized in accordance with the provisions of this act by reason of his not being a citizen of the United States.

Let us, Mr. President, stop this anomaly. By the enactment of this amendment we will get rid of it. Congress will authorize it, and not the Philippine Commission in defiance of an act of Congress. It is but right and proper that the people living in the Philippine Islands, who are not citizens of the United States, but nevertheless are under the sovereignty of and owe allegiance to the United States, should enjoy the privilege of owning and commanding vessels engaged in that interisland commerce.

I do not attach the slightest importance to this edict of the Philippine Commission if its correctness or its legality is ever questioned in any court of competent jurisdiction. Therefore, let us put this thing on a proper basis and enable those unfortunate people to at least take part in the commerce of their own islands, as we have permitted foreign nations to enter in there and take part in that commerce.

In addition to that, Mr. President, I have thought proper to add the language which I read some time ago, and to ask that it might be incorporated as a part of this amendment, which I will read again for the benefit of those Senators who were not present when I read it before:

The coasting trade between the Philippine Islands and the United States shall be regulated in accordance with the provisions of law applicable to such trade between any two great coasting districts of the United States, and the coasting trade between the islands of the Philippine Archipelago and between said islands and the other insular possessions of the United States in the Pacific Ocean shall be regulated in accordance with the provisions of law applicable to such trade within one great coasting district of the United States.

I claim if this amendment be adopted we would at least get rid of one or two reasons for very grave objection to that third section. We are disposed, I believe, on all sides to treat the people of the Philippine Islands with all the kindness and tenderness that the circumstances and conditions will permit. We propose to impose a very heavy tariff upon their importations from this country and on their exportations to this country.

That, Mr. President, is hardly in harmony with our professions of good will and desire to better their condition, but if we can open, under an act of Congress, under the authority of the Government of the United States, not under the authority of a commission in the Philippine Islands, a new field of endeavor for them, and place them in a position where there can be no question but what they will have the right to enjoy it without let or hindrance, it seems to me, Mr. President, that it is excellent policy to do so.

I have no object in the world in offering this amendment other than what I stated in the outset was my purpose—to endeavor, at least, to secure an amendment that will make a bill that is unsound in principle and unwise in policy somewhat better than it is in its present form.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, when the distinguished Senator from Michigan [Mr. BURROWS] addressed the Senate this morning, he made a statement of facts, or supposed facts, that I sought to correct in some respects, but he saw fit to peremptorily deny me the opportunity. I desire now, in order that it may go into the RECORD along with his speech, to present some quotations from official documents. The first is the treaty of cession by France to the United States of the territory of Louisiana. I wish the Secretary to read article 3 of that treaty.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

ART. III. The inhabitants of the ceded territory shall be incorporated in the Union of the United States, and admitted as soon as possible, according to the principles of the Federal Constitution, to the enjoyment of all the rights, advantages, and immunities of citizens of the United States; and in the meantime they shall be maintained and protected in the free enjoyment of their liberty, property, and the religion which they profess.

Mr. TILLMAN. The cession of the Philippines which the Senator, I believe, quoted, is specifically different from this cession by France; and I wish to draw attention to the contrast between the condition of the very small number of people, thirty or forty thousand, who were in Louisiana at that time, not counting the Indians, and the 9,000,000 people—subjects that we bought from Spain—and to show the falsity of the contention of our friends on the other side that the Democracy has always stood for expansion, and that, therefore, the subjugation of the Philippine Islands is but a continuation of the time-honored principles and doctrines and policy of the Democratic party.

I also called attention to the fact that the President had issued a proclamation in December before the treaty was ratified, thereby exceeding his power and authority, and I desire to have read the statute of October 31, 1803, which authorized President Jefferson to take possession of Louisiana.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to take possession of and occupy the territory ceded by France to the United States by the treaty concluded at Paris, on the 30th day of April last, between the two nations; and that he may for that purpose, and in order to maintain in the said territories the authority of the United States, employ any part of the Army and Navy of the United States, and of the force authorized by an act passed the 3d day of March last, entitled "An act directing a detachment from the militia of the United States, and for erecting certain arsenals," which he may deem necessary, and so much of the sum appropriated by the said act as may be necessary is hereby appropriated for the purpose of carrying this act into effect, to be applied under the direction of the President of the United States.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That until the expiration of the present session of Congress, unless provision for the temporary government of the said Territories be sooner made by Congress, all the military, civil, and judicial powers exercised by the officers of the existing government of the same shall be vested in such person and persons and shall be exercised in such manner as the President of the United States shall direct for maintaining and protecting the inhabitants of Louisiana in the free enjoyment of their liberty, property, and religion.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, we have there an act of Congress passed in pursuance of the treaty with France, carrying into effect the taking possession of the territory which we had bought. The difference between that and the existing condition in the Philippines is all I desire to call attention to at this time.

Our army was in Manila before the time the treaty with Spain was ratified, having been there from August, 1898, until February following. The reason there was no war at that time between the United States and Spain was because of a truce declared after the battle of Santiago. The Filipinos had in the meantime organized a government, had captured or driven from the islands every Spanish soldier, and had, according to the report of our naval officers who traveled all through Luzon, established peace and order. They had acted as our allies in besieging Manila, and the President in issuing his proclamation after the treaty was signed and before it was ratified simply served notice on those people that the purpose of this Government was one of "benevolent assimilation." What that means I do not know. I know what has happened since. We have shot down and harassed the Filipinos, burned and destroyed the property of those people, and the infamies that have been perpetrated in this war of subjugation should cause the blush of shame to mantle the cheek of every liberty-loving American.

Having pointed out that Louisiana was taken possession of in pursuance of an act of Congress after the ratification of the treaty and, therefore, a legal consummation of the purchase, in which the President was authorized to do those things specified in the act just read, I will next have the Secretary read the message of President Jefferson, transmitting to Congress information of what he had done, after which I want the Secretary to read the proclamation issued by the governor appointed to execute the orders of the President. Then I want the governor's address to the citizens of Louisiana in taking possession of that territory read, in order that the people of the United States may see for themselves the difference between the cession or purchase of Louisiana, Democratic expansion, and the present war of subjugation in the Philippines.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

JANUARY 16, 1804.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

In execution of the act of the present session of Congress for taking possession of Louisiana, as ceded to us by France, and for the temporary government thereof, Governor Claiborne, of the Mississippi Territory, and General Wilkinson were appointed commissioners to receive possession. They proceeded, with such regular troops as had been assembled at Fort Adams from the nearest posts, and with some militia of the Mississippi Territory, to New Orleans. To be prepared for anything unexpected which might arise out of the transaction, a respectable body of militia was ordered to be in readiness in the States of Ohio, Kentucky, and Tennessee, and a part of those of Tennessee was moved on to the Natchez.

No occasion, however, arose for their services. Our commissioners, on their arrival at New Orleans, found the province already delivered by the commissaries of Spain to that of France, who delivered it over to them on the 20th day of December, as appears by their declaratory act accompanying this. Governor Claiborne, being duly invested with the powers heretofore exercised by the governor and intendant of Louisiana, assumed the government on the same day and, for the maintenance of law and order, immediately issued the proclamation and address now communicated.

On this important acquisition, so favorable to the immediate interests of our Western citizens, so auspicious to the peace and security of the nation in general, which adds to our country territories so extensive and fertile, and to our citizens new brethren to partake of the blessings of freedom and self-government, I offer to Congress and our country my sincere congratulations.

TH: JEFFERSON.

PROCLAMATION.

By his Excellency William C. C. Claiborne, governor of the Mississippi Territory, exercising the powers of governor-general and intendant of the province of Louisiana.

Whereas by stipulation between the Governments of France and Spain the latter ceded to the former the colony and province of Louisiana, with the same extent which it had at the date of the above-mentioned treaty in the hands of Spain, and that it had when France possessed it, and such as it ought to be after the treaties subsequently entered into between Spain and other States; and whereas the Government of France has ceded the same to the United States by a treaty duly ratified and bearing date the 30th of April, in the present year, and the possession of said colony and province is now in the United States, according to the tenor of the last-mentioned treaty; and whereas the Congress of the United States, on the 31st day of October, in the present year, did enact that until the expiration of the session of Congress then sitting (unless provisions for the temporary government of the said territories be sooner made by Congress), all the military, civil, and judicial powers exercised by the then existing government of the same, shall be vested in such person or persons, and shall be exercised in such manner as the President of the United States shall direct for the maintaining and protecting the inhabitants of Louisiana in the free enjoyment of their liberty, property, and religion; and the President of the United States has by his commission, bearing date the same 31st day of October, invested me with all the powers, and charged me with the several duties heretofore held and exercised by the governor-general and intendant of the province.

Mr. TILLMAN. Before the Secretary proceeds further I will comment right here upon the contrast in conditions. Governor Claiborne went to Louisiana, as is stated there, in accordance with the appointment of the President, in obedience to an act of Congress, and in the notice to the country of his coming and why he came, he proclaimed that he intended to recognize existing laws and those enforcing them, and that that was his mission. The difference between that and the benevolent assimilation which was offered the Filipinos two months before they were even annexed lawfully, is worthy of the attention of the country.

The Secretary read as follows:

I have, therefore, thought fit to issue this my proclamation, making known the premises and to declare that the government heretofore exercised over the said province of Louisiana, as well under the authority of Spain as of the French Republic, has ceased, and that of the United States of America is established over the same; that the inhabitants thereof will be incorporated in the Union of the United States and admitted as soon as possible, according to the principles of the Federal Constitution, to the enjoyment of all the rights, advantages, and immunities of citizens of the United States; that in the meantime they shall be maintained and protected in the free enjoyment of their liberty, property, and the religion which they profess; that all laws and municipal regulations which were in existence at the cessation of the late Government remain in full force, and all civil officers charged with their execution, except those whose powers have been especially vested in me and except also such officers as have been intrusted with the collection of the revenue, are continued in their functions during the pleasure of the governor for the time being or until provision shall otherwise be made.

And I hereby exhort and enjoin all the inhabitants and other persons within said province to be faithful and true in their allegiance to the United States, and obedient to the laws and authorities of the same, under full assurance that their just rights will be under the guardianship of the United States and will be maintained from all force or violence from without or within.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand. Given at the city of New Orleans the 20th day of December, 1803, and of the Independence of the United States of America the 28th.

WM. C. C. CLAIBORNE.

The governor's address to the citizens of Louisiana.

NEW ORLEANS, September 20, 1803.

FELLOW-CITIZENS OF LOUISIANA: On the great and interesting event now finally consummated—an event so advantageous to yourselves and so glorious to united America—I can not forbear offering you my warmest congratulations. The wise policy of the consul of France has, by the cession of Louisiana to the United States, secured to you a connection beyond the reach of change and to your posterity the sure inheritance of freedom. The American people receive you as brothers, and will hasten to extend to you a participation in those inestimable rights which have formed the basis of their own unexampled prosperity. Under the auspices of the American Government you may confidently rely upon the security of your liberty, your property, and the religion of your choice. You may with equal certainty rest assured that your commerce will be promoted and your agriculture cherished; in a word, that your true interests will be among the primary objects of our National Legislature.

In return for these benefits the United States will be amply remunerated if your growing attachment to the Constitution of our country and your veneration for the principles on which it is founded be duly proportioned to the blessings which they will confer. Among your first duties, therefore, you should cultivate with assiduity among yourselves the advancement of political information; you should guide the rising generation in the paths of republican economy and virtue; you should encourage literature, for without the advantages of education your descendants will be unable to appreciate the intrinsic worth of the Government transmitted to them.

As for myself, fellow-citizens, accept a sincere assurance that, during my continuance in the situation in which the President of the United States has been pleased to place me, every exertion will be made on my part to foster your internal happiness and forward your general welfare; for it is only by such means that I can secure to myself the approbation of those great and just men who preside in the councils of our nation.

WILLIAM C. C. CLAIBORNE.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I suggest the lack of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allison,	Burrows,	Cullom,	Elkins,
Bacon,	Burton,	Depew,	Fairbanks,
Bard,	Clapp,	Dietrich,	Foraker,
Bate,	Clay,	Dillingham,	Foster, Wash.
Berry,	Cockrell,	Dolliver,	Frye,
Burnham,	Culberson,	Dryden,	Gallinger,

Gamble,	Lodge,	Mitchell,	Quarles,
Gibson,	McCumber,	Money,	Rawlins,
Hansbrough,	McEnery,	Patterson,	Scott,
Hawley,	McLaurin, S. C.	Perkins,	Stewart,
Jones, Nev.	McMillan,	Platt, Conn.	Teller,
Kean,	Mallory,	Platt, N. Y.	Vest,
Kearns,	Martin,	Pritchard,	Warren,
Kittredge,	Millard,	Proctor,	Wetmore.

Mr. MONEY. My colleague [Mr. MCLAURIN of Mississippi] is necessarily absent on account of the illness of a member of his family.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Fifty-six Senators have responded to the roll call. There is a quorum present.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, in further pursuance of the study of ancient history, which I was getting in shape to go to the country along with the sweet, simple tale which we had from the Senator from Michigan [Mr. BURROWS] this morning, I will not ask to have read, but I will ask to have inserted in the RECORD the act of March 26, 1804, United States Statutes at Large, volume 2, "An act erecting Louisiana into two Territories, and providing for the temporary government thereof."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection to the request of the Senator from South Carolina.

The act referred to is as follows:

CHAP. XXXVIII.—An act erecting Louisiana into two Territories, and providing for the temporary government thereof.

Be it enacted, etc., That all that portion of country ceded by France to the United States, under the name of Louisiana, which lies south of the Mississippi Territory, and of an east and west line to commence on the Mississippi River, at the thirty-third degree of north latitude, and to extend west to the western boundary of the said cession, shall constitute a Territory of the United States, under the name of the Territory of Orleans; the government whereof shall be organized and administered as follows:

SEC. 2. The executive power shall be vested in a governor, who shall reside in the said Territory, and hold his office during the term of three years, unless sooner removed by the President of the United States. He shall be commander in chief of the militia of said Territory; shall have power to grant pardons for offenses against the said Territory, and reprieves for those against the United States, until the decision of the President of the United States thereon shall be made known; and to appoint and commission all officers civil and of the militia, whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for, and which shall be established by law. He shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed.

SEC. 3. A secretary of the Territory shall also be appointed, who shall hold his office during the term of four years, unless sooner removed by the President of the United States, whose duty it shall be, under the direction of the governor, to record and preserve all the papers and proceedings of the executive, and all the acts of the governor and legislative council, and transmit authentic copies of the proceedings of the governor in his executive department, every six months, to the President of the United States. In case of the vacancy of the office of governor, the government of the said Territory shall devolve on the secretary.

SEC. 4. The legislative powers shall be vested in the governor, and in the 13 of the most fit and discreet persons of the Territory, to be called the legislative council, who shall be appointed annually by the President of the United States from among those holding real estate therein, and who shall thave resided one year at least in the said Territory, and hold no office of profi under the Territory or the United States. The governor, by and with advice and consent of the said legislative council, or of a majority of them, shall have power to alter, modify, or repeal the laws which may be in force at the commencement of this act. Their legislative powers shall also extend to all the rightful subjects of legislation; but no law shall be valid which is inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States, or which shall lay any person under restraint, burthen, or disability, on account of his religious opinions, professions, or worship; in all which he shall be free to maintain his own, and not burthened for those of another.

The governor shall publish throughout the said Territory all the laws which shall be made, and shall from time to time report the same to the President of the United States, to be laid before Congress; which, if disapproved of by Congress, shall thenceforth be of no force. The governor or legislative council shall have no power over the primary disposal of the soil, nor to tax the lands of the United States, nor to interfere with the claims to land within the said Territory. The governor shall convene and prorogue the legislative council whenever he may deem it expedient. It shall be his duty to obtain all the information in his power in relation to the customs, habits, and dispositions of the inhabitants of the said Territory, and communicate the same from time to time to the President of the United States.

SEC. 5. The judicial power shall be vested in a superior court, and in such inferior courts, and justices of the peace, as the legislature of the Territory may from time to time establish. The judges of the superior court and the justices of the peace shall hold their offices for the term of four years. The superior court shall consist of three judges, any one of whom shall constitute a court; they shall have jurisdiction in all criminal cases, and exclusive jurisdiction in all those which are capital; and original and appellate jurisdiction in all civil cases of the value of $100.

Its sessions shall commence on the first Monday of every month, and continue till all the business depending before them shall be disposed of. They shall appoint their own clerk. In all criminal prosecutions which are capital, the trial shall be by a jury of twelve good and lawful men of the vicinage; and in all cases criminal and civil in the superior court, the trial shall be by a jury, if either of the parties require it. The inhabitants of the said Territory shall be entitled to the benefits of the writ of habeas corpus; they shall be bailable, unless for capital offenses where the proof shal lbe evident, or the presumption great; and no cruel and unusual punishments shall be inflicted.

SEC. 6. The governor, secretary, judges, district attorney, marshal, and all general officers of the militia, shall be appointed by the President of the United States, in the recess of the Senate; but shall be nominated at their next meeting for their advice and consent. The governor, secretary, judges, members of the legislative council, justices of the peace, and all other officers, civil and of the militia, before they enter upon the duties of their respective offices, shall take an oath or affirmation to support the Constitution of the United States, and for the faithful discharge of the duties of their office; the governor, before the President of the United States, or before a judge of the Supreme or district court of the United States, or before such other person as the President of the United States shall authorize to administer the same; the secretary, judges, and members of the legislative council, before the governor; and all other officers before such persons as the governor shall direct.

The governor shall receive an annual salary of $5,000; the secretary of $2,000; and the judges of $2,000 each; to be paid quarter yearly out of the revenues of impost and tonnage accruing within the said Territory. The members of the legislative council shall receive $4 each per day during their attendance in council.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the following acts, that is to say:

An act for the punishment of certain crimes against the United States.

An act, in addition to an act, for the punishment of certain crimes against the United States.

An act to prevent citizens of the United States from privateering against nations in amity with, or against citizens of, the United States.

An act for the punishment of certain crimes therein specified.

An act respecting fugitives from justice, and persons escaping from service of their masters.

An act to prohibit the carrying on the slave trade from the United States to any foreign place or country.

An act to prevent the importation of certain persons into certain States where, by the laws thereof, their admission is prohibited.

An act to establish the post-office of the United States.

An act further to alter and establish certain post-roads, and for the more secure carriage of the mail of the United States.

An act for the more general promulgation of the laws of the United States.

An act, in addition to an act intituled "An act for the more general promulgation of the laws of the United States."

An act to promote the progress of useful arts, and to repeal the act heretofore made for that purpose.

An act to extend the privilege of obtaining patents for useful discoveries and inventions to certain persons therein mentioned, and to enlarge and define the penalties for violating the rights of patentees.

An act for the encouragement of learning, by securing the copies of maps, charts, and books, to the authors and proprietors of such copies, during the time therein mentioned.

An act, supplementary to an act intituled "An act for the encouragement of learning, by securing the copies of maps, charts, and books to the authors and proprietors of such copies during the time therein mentioned;" and extending the benefits thereof to the arts of designing, engraving, and etching historical and other prints.

An act providing for salvage in cases of recapture.

An act respecting alien enemies.

An act to prescribe the mode in which the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings in each State shall be authenticated, so as to take effect in every other State.

An act for establishing trading houses with the Indian tribes.

An act for continuing in force a law intituled "An act for establishing trading houses with the Indian tribes." And

An act making provision relative to rations for Indians, and to their visits to the seat of government, shall extend to, and have full force and effect in the above-mentioned Territories.

SEC. 8. There shall be established in said Territory a district court, to consist of one judge, who shall reside therein, and be called the district judge, and who shall hold, in the city of Orleans, four sessions annually; the first to commence on the third Monday in October next, and the three other sessions, progressively, on the third Monday of every third calendar month thereafter. He shall, in all things, have and exercise the same jurisdiction and powers which are by law given to or may be exercised by the judge of Kentucky district; and shall be allowed an annual compensation of $2,000, to be paid quarter yearly out of the revenues of impost and tonnage accruing within the said Territory. He shall appoint a clerk for said district, who shall reside, and keep the records of the court, in the city of Orleans, and shall receive for the services performed by him the same fees to which the clerk of Kentucky district is entitled for similar services.

There shall be appointed in the said district a person learned in the law, to act as attorney for the United States, who shall, in addition to his stated fees, be paid $600 annually as a full compensation for all extra services. There shall also be appointed a marshal for the said district, who shall perform the same duties, be subject to the same regulations and penalties, and be entitled to the same fees to which marshals in other districts are entitled for similar services, and shall moreover be paid $200 annually as a compensation for all extra services.

SEC. 9. All free male white persons who are housekeepers, and who shall have resided one year at least in the said Territory, shall be qualified to serve as grand or petit jurors in the courts of the said Territory; and they shall, until the legislature thereof shall otherwise direct, be selected in such manner as the judges of the said courts, respectively, shall prescribe, so as to be most conducive to an impartial trial and to be least burthensome to the inhabitants of the said Territory.

SEC. 10. It shall not be lawful for any person or persons to import or bring into the said Territory, from any port or place without the limits of the United States, or cause or procure to be so imported or brought, or knowingly to aid or assist in so importing or bringing, any slave or slaves. And every person so offending, and being thereof convicted before any court within said Territory having competent jurisdiction, shall forfeit and pay for each and every slave so imported or brought the sum of $300; one moiety for the use of the United States, and the other moiety for the use of the person or persons who shall sue for the same; and every slave so imported or brought shall thereupon become entitled to and receive his or her freedom.

It shall not be lawful for any person or persons to import or bring into the said Territory, from any port or place within the limits of the United States, or to cause or procure to be so imported or brought, or knowingly to aid or assist in so importing or bringing, any slave or slaves which shall have been imported since the 1st day of May, 1798, into any port or place within the limits of the United States, or which may hereafter be so imported from any port or place without the limits of the United States; and every person so offending, and being thereof convicted before any court within said Territory having competent jurisdiction, shall forfeit and pay for each and every slave so imported or brought, the sum of $300, one moiety for the use of the United States, and the other moiety for the use of the person or persons who shall sue for the same; and no slave or slaves shall directly or indirectly be introduced into said Territory, except by a citizen of the United States removing into said Territory for actual settlement, and being at the time of such removal bona fide owner of such slave or slaves; and every slave imported or brought into the said Territory contrary to the provisions of this act shall thereupon be entitled to and receive his or her freedom.

SEC. 11. The laws in force in the said Territory at the commencement of this act, and not inconsistent with the provisions thereof, shall continue in force until altered, modified, or repealed by the legislature.

SEC. 12. The residue of the province of Louisiana, ceded to the United States, shall be called the district of Louisiana, the government whereof shall be organized and administered as follows:

The executive power now vested in the governor of the Indiana Territory shall extend to and be exercised in the said district of Louisiana. The governor and judges of the Indiana Territory shall have power to establish, in the said district of Louisiana, inferior courts, and prescribe their jurisdiction and duties, and to make all laws which they may deem conducive to the good government of the inhabitants thereof: Provided, however, That no law shall be valid which is inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States, or which shall lay any person under restraint or disability on account of his religious opinions, profession, or worship; in all of which he shall be free to maintain his own, and not burthened for those of another; And provided also, That in all criminal prosecutions the trial shall be by a jury of 12 good and lawful men of the vicinage, and in all civil cases of the value of $100 the trial shall be by jury if either of the parties require it.

The judges of the Indiana Territory, or any two of them, shall hold annually two courts within the said district, at such place as will be most convenient to the inhabitants thereof in general, shall possess the same jurisdiction they now possess in the Indiana Territory, and shall continue in session until all the business depending before them shall be disposed of. It shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Indiana Territory to record and preserve all the papers and proceedings of the governor of an executive nature relative to the district of Louisiana, and transmit authentic copies thereof every six months to the President of the United States. The governor shall publish throughout the said district all the laws which may be made as aforesaid, and shall from time to time report the same to the President of the United States, to be laid before Congress, which, if disapproved of by Congress, shall thenceforth cease and be of no effect.

The said district of Louisiana shall be divided into districts by the governor, under the direction of the President, as the convenience of the settlements shall require, subject to such alterations hereafter as experience may prove more convenient. The inhabitants of each district, between the ages of 18 and 45, shall be formed into a militia, with proper officers, according to their numbers, to be appointed by the governor, except the commanding officer, who shall be appointed by the President, and who, whether a captain, a major, or a colonel, shall be the commanding officer of the district, and as such shall, under the governor, have command of the regular officers and troops in his district, as well as of the militia, for which he shall have a brevet commission, giving him such command, and the pay and emoluments of an officer of the same grade in the Regular Army; he shall be specially charged with the employment of the military and militia of his district, in cases of sudden invasion or insurrection, and until the orders of the governor can be received, and at all times with the duty of ordering a military patrol, aided by militia if necessary, to arrest unauthorized settlers in any part of his district, and to commit such offenders to jail to be dealt with according to law.

SEC. 13. The laws in force in the said district of Louisiana at the commencement of this act, and not inconsistent with any of the provisions thereof, shall continue in force until altered, modified, or repealed by the governor and judges of the Indiana Territory, as aforesaid.

SEC. 14. And be it further enacted, That all grants for lands within the territories ceded by the French Republic to the United States by the treaty of the 30th of April, in the year 1803, the title whereof was, at the date of the treaty of St. Ildefonso, in the Crown, Government or nation of Spain, and every act and proceeding subsequent thereto, of whatsoever nature, toward the obtaining any grant, title, or claim to such lands, and under whatsoever authority transacted, or pretended, be, and the same are hereby declared to be, and to have been from the beginning, null, void, and of no effect in law or equity.

Provided, nevertheless, That anything in this section contained shall not be construed to make null and void any bona fide grant, made agreeably to the laws, usages, and customs of the Spanish Government, to an actual settler on the lands so granted for himself and for his wife and family; or to make null and void any bona fide act or proceeding done by an actual settler agreeably to the laws, usages, and customs of the Spanish Government to obtain a grant for lands actually settled on by the person or persons claiming title thereto, if such settlement in either case was actually made prior to the 20th day of December, 1803: And provided further, That such grant shall not secure to the grantee or his assigns more than 1 mile square of land, together with such other and further quantity as heretofore hath been allowed for the wife and family of such actual settler agreeably to the laws, usages, and customs of the Spanish Government.

And that if any citizen of the United States, or other person, shall make a settlement on any lands belonging to the United States, within the limits of Louisiana, or shall survey, or attempt to survey, such lands, or to designate boundaries by marking trees, or otherwise, such offender shall, on conviction thereof in any court of record of the United States or the Territories of the United States, forfeit a sum not exceeding $1,000 and suffer imprisonment not exceeding twelve months; and it shall, moreover, be lawful for the President of the United States to employ such military force as he may judge necessary to remove from lands belonging to the United States any such citizen or other person who shall attempt a settlement thereon.

SEC. 15. The President of the United States is hereby authorized to stipulate with any Indian tribes owning lands on the east side of the Mississippi, and residing thereon, for an exchange of lands, the property of the United States, on the west side of the Mississippi, in case the said tribes shall remove and settle thereon; but in such stipulation the said tribes shall acknowledge themselves to be under the protection of the United States, and shall agree that they will not hold any treaty with any foreign power, individual state, or with the individuals of any state or power; and that they will not sell or dispose of the said lands, or any part thereof, to any sovereign power except the United States, nor to the subjects or citizens of any other sovereign power, nor to the citizens of the United States.

And in order to maintain peace and tranquillity with the Indian tribes who reside within the limits of Louisiana, as ceded by France to the United States, the act of Congress passed on the 30th day of March, 1802, intituled "An act to regulate trade and intercourse with the Indian tribes and to preserve peace on the frontiers," is hereby extended to the Territories erected and established by this act; and the sum of $15,000 of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated by law is hereby appropriated to enable the President of the United States to effect the object expressed in this section.

SEC. 16. The act passed on the 31st day of October, 1803, intituled "An act to enable the President of the United States to take possession of the territories ceded by France to the United States by the treaty concluded at Paris on the 30th day of April last, and for the temporary government thereof," shall continue in force until the 1st day of October next, anything therein to the contrary notwithstanding; on which said 1st day of October this act shall commence, and have full force, and shall continue in force for and during the term of one year, and the end of the next session of Congress which may happen thereafter.

Approved, March 26, 1804.

Mr. TILLMAN. I will just comment, as I go on, by pointing out the fact that the act of Congress which authorized the President to take possession and govern was passed in October, 1803. A period of less than six months had elapsed between the occupation and creation of the Territorial government. Congress immediately proceeded to give those people Territorial government and to erect the Territory of Orleans and the Territory of Louisiana, specifying the kind of government they were to have.

Contrast the two, and what becomes of the attempt which has been made and repeated time and again and again ad nauseam, to hold up the Louisiana cession as an excuse or example for our present war of subjugation and the holding of the Filipino people indefinitely as subjects, to erect a tariff wall between two sections of the country, one occupied by these subjects and the other by we citizens, and all of the infamies of which we on this side complain, which complaints are pooh-poohed and pushed aside as mere lip service or attempts to deceive the people. The facts speak for themselves.

It is known of all men that the Filipinos had gone to war with Spain for their independence, or at least in resistance to its tyranny, before we went to war with Spain about Cuba. It is known of all men that Aguinaldo was sent for and brought to Manila in a vessel of war of the United States, and armed or assisted to get arms by Dewey. It is known of all men that with that encouragement and assistance on our part, and with practical acknowledgment of him and his people as allies against Spain, he had, as I said a while ago, conquered the archipelago and established a government.

If the President of the United States had waited till the treaty was completed, had become a law; if we had quieted Spain's title, so as to shut the mouths of any European nation and to give ourselves an excuse not to subjugate these people, but had recognized their efforts to free themselves from an unbearable tyranny; if we had let the government then in force continue and treated these people as Jefferson and Congress treated the Louisianians of 1803, as brethren, welcomed as fellow-citizens, to be congratulated upon joining their fortunes with those of the great Republic, would we now have had this miserable, this horrible story of wrong and war and bloodshed in the Philippines? Nobody believes it.

We now come to the act of benevolent assimilation; and about the best definition I ever heard of it was the lion and the lamb who laid down together, and when they got up the lamb was inside. That appears to be the condition of the Filipino people, colored though they be, who are being shot to death in the name of liberty, against whom we are discriminating in every possible way and treating them as chattels. We will not declare any purpose toward them other than that of selfishness.

The Senator a moment ago said something in regard to our schools over there, and that we must not abandon our schools. Consider for a moment, if you please, this spectacular abomination, the grand-stand play to the maudlin sentimentalists, of collecting last summer six or eight hundred or a thousand of the best teachers, or at least as good teachers as could be got together in the United States, selected by college faculties and superintendents of education and other instrumentalities, which were certain to give us men and women of high character and attainments; and a shipload of them started across the ocean with the beating of tomtoms and a parade of headlines in our papers about civilization, and all that sort of thing being carried to our—I do not know what to call them; our subjects, I suppose.

And then I want to ask any man in this Chamber or in any locality in the United States to take this question home to his heart; to go into New England, for instance, in a township where the taxes are levied for every purpose of local government, where nothing is levied by the State, except enough to carry on the State government; where the school taxes are fixed by the local conditions and the wishes of the inhabitants of the locality. Let those school taxes be collected, not by the people of the locality, but by five men sent there from somewhere else, to legislate not only for New England, but for New York, for the difference between the population is not so great. The millions thus collected—eleven millions, I think, is the report of the Taft Commission—are to be spent and have been spent under 292 acts. Of what? Congress? Oh, no. Acts of the Taft Commission. And how do those acts run?

By the authority of the President of the United States, be it enacted by the United States Philippine Commission, and so on.

One million dollars I notice was appropriated by one act to make roads.

For purpose of comparison and to show the cloven hoof of tyrannical and irresponsible power—imperialism, in a word—I give here the enacting clause of the laws of the German and Austrian Empires. Mark the contrast, all ye who still talk of freedom and liberty as the purpose we have in view, and express content with the methods we are pursuing. One man is given as the source of authority on the Philippines.

GERMANY.

Wir Wilhelm, von Gottes gnaden Deutscher Kaiser, Koenig von Preussen, etc., verordnen im Namen des Reichs, nach erfolgter Zustimmung des Bundesraths, was folgt.	We William, by the grace of God Emperor of Germany, King of Prussia, etc., order in the name of the Empire, with full agreement of the Bundesrath, what follows.

AUSTRIA.

Mit Zustimmung der beiden Häuser des Reichsrathes finde Ich anzuordnen wie folgt.	With agreement of both houses of the Reichstag I find it to direct as follows.
FRANZ JOSEF.	(Signed at end) FRANZ JOSEPH.

But to get back to my schools. Suppose the taxes thus collected in a New England community, or any American community, or any liberty-loving community under the sun—collected at the point of the bayonet, mind you—are to be spent, as these are, to educate the children of Filipinos, and lo and behold, when the Filipino child, who knows nothing about English, goes into the schoolroom furnished him by his benevolent assimilators, he knows nothing about the tongue of the teacher. How are they to understand each other? He or she speaks only English.

Take the matter home to your bosoms and your souls, if you have any left, and consider for a moment what you would think about such benevolent assimilation or such travesty upon liberty and decency and justice. Yet that is the system which the self-complacent Senator from Michigan declares meets his full approval, and judging by the votes of his State I presume it meets the full approval of the majority of the citizens of Michigan. God have mercy on their pusillanimous souls! English-speaking teachers, who know no Spanish, to teach Filipino children, who know nothing but their native tongue, and the Filipinos to pay the taxes, amounting to a million and a half dollars, for that one shipload of teachers who have gone over there to spread the blessings of liberty and civilization and religion.

I did not get up to make a speech. If the Senator from Michigan had allowed me to put these historical documents in along with his Taft Commission proclamation, his Presidential definition of liberty, and all that kind of thing, I should not have said a word. But I do not wish that record to go out to the country with his special pleading and with his one-sided statement of pretenses and purposes and of so-called facts uncontradicted. I apologize to the Senate for having intruded on it this long to revamp some more ancient history connected with the glorious pages of our early Republic, when its people loved liberty and had not learned to cant and whine and play the hypocrite.

Mr. MONEY. Mr. President, the other day the distinguished and able Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL] made an elaborate exposition of his views upon the question of holding the Philippines. I was unable to hear him in full because of the visit of a number of distinguished Mississippians here, to whom I had to devote myself a good deal, and when I came in to hear the last part of the Senator's remarks I caught only a few of them, because I was unable to hear him, to my regret and my misfortune.

This morning I had brought to my attention, however, the RECORD, which I do not read. There are some parts of the remarks made by the distinguished Senator from Oregon to which I desire to call attention, and I desire now to make a brief reply to him. It is not what he said concerning me, which was very kindly said. He said that I had said that there were many things that I would omit and many I would insert in the minority report, but that I did not state what they were. I had attempted to state, in response to an inquiry from the senior Senator from Maine, what my views were individually, without any responsibility to anybody or speaking for anybody, but in my own behalf, simply what I thought about it.

But I find here some remarks that the Senator from Oregon made in criticism of the very able speech delivered by the Senator from Washington [Mr. TURNER], and I will read that part to which I expect to allude briefly. I only intend to speak on this single point, because the Senator has made it the focal point, and the whole thing hangs by this, according to his own phraseology. The Senator said:

But I deny the claim of the distinguished Senator—

Referring to the Senator from Washington [Mr. TURNER]—

But I deny the claim of the distinguished Senator as to the assumed fact. I deny that the Filipinos had, prior to the fall of Manila, ever succeeded to their independence. The indestructible facts of history will not sustain the assumption of the Senator. I deny that they had ever at any time prior to the fall of Manila established an independent government. When did Spain recognize their independence? When did any other power on earth recognize their release from Spanish sovereignty? When did either Spain or any other of the great powers ever concede that they had achieved their independence or established an independent government? The utter fallacy of the whole argument of the distinguished Senator abides in his assumption of an alleged fact which never had any existence.

This is the clearly discernible vice, this is the deadly "fly in the ointment," which utterly destroys the very plausible argument of the distinguished Senator. Any claim, therefore, that there is any defect in our title to the Philippine Archipelago, based on the strange suggestions of our Democratic friends and so strenuously insisted upon by the distinguished Senator from Washington in his recent speech, that at the time of the Paris treaty the Filipinos were in possession of those islands and had conquered Spain and secured their independence and established an independent government of their own, is wholly barren of support.

As a matter of fact, those people, so far from having achieved independence and established an independent government of their own, had not been even urging a war for independence. They were professedly contending with Spain for other and wholly different purposes than that of independence.

Then he goes on to state that—

Their independence had never been recognized by Spain, the United States, or any other sovereign power of the world, and by the universally accepted rule of international law until this is done the territory remained under the sovereignty of Spain and the people were subjects of Spain.

Now, I wish to call attention to this fact. It is not the de jure but the de facto government that has always been recognized. The United States Government has particularly supported that theory. In all its relations with the new sovereignties of the world, it has been prompt to accede their sovereignty or their independence, as it is called, and to recognize belligerency, because the United States themselves owe their origin to the throes of a revolution. When the Senator says that we had not recognized the independence of the Filipinos, nor had any other sovereignty recognized them and, therefore, that all our assumptions falls to the ground, he is very much mistaken, in my humble judgment.

For two years we were a de facto government. For two years we had a Continental Congress. For two years we marshaled our squadrons in the field, and for two years we maintained ourselves against the power of Great Britain. Yet in that two years there was no recognition, and we ourselves said in the Declaration of Independence two years after the conflict had begun, or rather we said up to that time, and we said in that paper that we were the most loyal subjects of Great Britain; that we were not fighting for independence, as the Senator says the Filipinos were not fighting for independence. He says they were fighting for certain reforms. We were fighting for certain reforms. They were fighting for the expulsion of the friars and a good many other amendments of their government, and we were fighting for one thing, for representation to accompany taxation. It is true literally, as the Declaration of Independence cites, that we were spurned from the foot of the throne in preferring our petitions to the Crown, and we were assuming and declaring in every one of those petitions that we were the most humble and devoted and loyal subjects of George the Third. Now, that was the case. There is the historical parallel here.

Then I want to say to the Senator also that in anything that I have said, or as I believe that was said by the Senator from Washington [Mr. TURNER] and by others who have spoken on this side, there is no intention to challenge the right of the United States as against the world, according to international law. That is an assumption of fact by the Senator from Oregon which is not shown. There was no other party that had a claim except Spain. How could any other party come in but Spain?

Mr. MITCHELL. May I ask the Senator from Mississippi a question?

Mr. MONEY. Certainly.

Mr. MITCHELL. When does the Senator from Mississippi say that the sovereignty passed from Spain to some government there?

Mr. MONEY. My answer to that will be included in the remarks I was about to make.

Now, Mr. President, there is no contest here with any other power about our right. If we go before an arbitration contesting the right of Germany, France, or any other government, the arbitrator would simply say that according to international law the United States has the title. But in this Senate, when we are considering among ourselves what our country ought to do for its own sake, as well as in justice to aliens, we are not considering international law, nor whether any power on earth has recognized the independence of the Filipinos, but we are considering the high law of morality and justice and liberty.

We, as a nation, devoting ourselves to liberty, have stood as a brilliant example to every struggling people on top of the earth for national independence. We are not to consider whether international law would give us a title to the Philippines as against any other power, but whether we are to adopt or not a certain policy, whether we are to adopt or not certain principles, which go against every profession of liberty we have ever made, either in this Congress or elsewhere. That is the question, and not the other. So we are to consider, then, the question of our right to the Philippines not upon a question of international law, not upon a question of recognition of independence.

Now, it might be very well said that we did have to be there recognized, if we chose to have a responsible government. We had there a government which was proclaimed first as the dictatorship. That was before the protocol was signed some months. Then we had, after three days of that, the provisional republic. That provisional republic had its provisional president. It had its congress by election, and the statistics show that that congress was fully capable of performing all the duties that devolve upon the congress of any people in the world, as far as written instruments can go, and I say that the state papers of Aguinaldo, the provisional president of the republic, are equal in dignity and force and clearness, and in truth and in majesty and the assertion of the principles of national independence, to any that were ever framed, here or elsewhere.

The fact is that they had a government de facto, the very kind of a government that this country has been the first always to recognize, and was so anxious, indeed, to recognize them that we sent ministers through the South American continent hunting up the peripatetic homes of revolutionary governments to give them some sort of recognition by accrediting a minister to them. In every instance we have been the foremost, even sending a gentleman of the highest distinction to Hungary in its revolt against the Austrian Government to ascertain the extent of the revolt and whether it was of sufficient importance to justify our recognition of belligerency.

We have been foremost in every instance. In the Old World it has been different, where families were supposed to rule by divine right. Then the de jure government was recognized long after its efficiency had departed, until nations were compelled by the necessity of commerce alone, if by nothing else, leaving aside any question of diplomacy, to recognize the de facto government.

So the Filipinos had a government that was capable of recognition, and that is the only point that we are to consider—whether they had a government that was performing its obligations to its citizens and capable of performing them to the whole family of nations into which it was about to enter.

Now, the testimony that we have from our own officials upon the islands is that Aguinaldo had established his provisional government; that they had a tentative constitution and a series of laws, and also that they had established courts throughout the whole islands; that affairs were being administered without objection by the inhabitants, and nobody else was concerned. We hear of no single instance of revolt nor of dissent against that government among the people. The processes of the courts ran throughout the whole islands. Schools were established. The taxes were regularly collected, without, as far as we are informed, any dissent. They were performing all the functions of government in all the various forms of the executive without any sort of dissent from anybody that we know of. And that was before we had signed the protocol with Spain.

So the Senate, I think, will see that the controversy had not turned upon the point which is assumed to be the vital one, but totally disregarded it. It does not come into the controversy at all. There is no other party extraneous to ourselves and the Filipinos to make any claim there whatever. It is only a question that we are to determine here for ourselves what is just and honorable in a great liberty-loving nation to do with a late ally and a people struggling for national independence. In my opinion they are just as much entitled to it as any other people who ever struggled for independence.

How long did we wait after seven years of struggle before we received recognition? How long did the Constitution of the United States remain before it was ratified by the States of Rhode Island and North Carolina? About two or three years. This Government was a government de facto when it could put armies in the field and maintain them, when it could perform the functions of civil government through the courts and through the disbursement and the collection of taxes. It became then a government de facto.

As I said, we have universally been the first to recognize the de facto government everywhere, insisting upon what is now a common rule of international law, but which formerly was not.

So it devolves upon us to consider what is right in the case, not what title we might acquire, however surreptitious, however bad in morals or in principle, but what have we got and what relation ought we in good conscience and in good faith and in honesty to sustain to those people who so lately had assisted us in their feats of arms.

The Senator says there has been no struggle there for independence. I will cite him to our own case, where for two years we were an humble suppliant at the foot of the Throne, signing ourselves the most loyal and obedient subjects of King George.

But, Mr. President, the facts remain that all through the months of February and March and in April, after Admiral Dewey sailed for the Bay of Manila, the contest was going on and was a struggle for independence. It was so declared when Aguinaldo was brought from Singapore to Hongkong and put in the care of Consul Wildman and then brought out to Manila. He came there to congregate in one the different insurrectionary bands who were besieging the Spaniards in every garrison in the islands. He began then a movement for independence. Whatever the war had been waged for, it was no longer in doubt what they were contending for. That was before we had any claim to the islands whatever, by treaty or by conquest or otherwise.

As a matter of purely historical fact we all know that the Filipinos had driven the Spaniards from every single garrison except that of Manila. We all know that when the first troops landed under General Anderson, when the fleet of Montijo was sunk in the harbor of Cavite, the city was beleaguered, and the first American troops were landed, and the Filipinos were moved farther from the interior that they might be nearer our ships. That was done, and they stood shoulder to shoulder in the same trenches, and the city of Manila was held by the united forces of the Filipinos and the Americans. We all know that a joint expedition sailed to Subig Bay; that the squadron of the Filipinos floated their flag; that the squadron of the Americans floated their flag; that the fort was soon reduced; that the only terms the Spanish commander made was that he should not be turned over to the Filipinos; that he was promptly turned over to the Filipinos, notwithstanding that engagement, with 14,000 other prisoners, and they were held by the Filipinos.

Now, the Senator says that they made war upon our troops by firing upon some of our soldiers. That was very opportunely two or three days before the treaty was to be voted on here, so opportunely that it changed exactly enough votes to carry through the Spanish treaty.

I had read in the Senate a letter from a young gentleman in the ranks who had joined one of the regular regiments going through San Francisco, a young gentleman of intellect and education. Writing on the 24th day of December, he said that a single shot would bring on a general engagement, and that it was hourly looked for. But it is singular that an engagement should be brought on by those people firing upon our flag when nearly every single general in the Philippine army was inside of our lines at a ball.

You have got to take these historical facts and put them together before you can assign a motive, for the motive is the whole thing. You must consider with what assiduity Aguinaldo addressed himself to the task of piecing up the breach that had occurred; how he proposed to make a neutral zone and withdraw his troops to any extent that the American commander might design; and preceding that we had the spectacle of these two armies lying side by side, and Aguinaldo furnishing, upon repeated requisition from our forces, bullocks, carts, horses, fuel, forage, and everything else. "My dear General Aguinaldo" was furnishing all these things to us and fighting side by side when the time came—the day after the protocol was signed—on the 12th of August, the city, after a sham fight, surrendered upon the understanding that the Filipinos were not to enter. Why? The Spanish said they would plunder and loot the city. In other words, the Filipinos were to loot their own city and the Americans—the strangers—were to be intrusted with it. That was all there was of that.

The excuse was so paltry and so pitiful that I think every American ought to blush for it. Her people could not be trusted at their own capital city, where they themselves resided with their families and their friends, and strangers to them were permitted to take occupation, for fear there would be some looting going on.

We did not see anything of that sort in China. There the Japs, who broke the wall first in the only two attacks upon fortified cities, distinguished themselves by their valor, and lost more men in killed and wounded than the whole white contingent put together, were the only people who preserved discipline and refrained from looting and from pillaging. So I think in this case the brown race could have been intrusted with their own city, their own household, as well as could the foreigners, who afterwards abused the liberty which their friendship had admitted them to.

So it will be seen, Mr. President, that this side of the House has not proceeded upon a false assumption of alleged fact, to use the language of the distinguished Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL], but it has proceeded upon the true conception of what the duty of this country ought to be in the premises, whether we ourselves can afford to deal faithlessly with those people, not regarding their future, but our own.

Now, the Senator says that we can not abandon this condition of things in competition with the other powers of the world in civilization. For heaven's sake, what have we to abandon that we are in competition with? Are we in competition with the balance of the world in subduing distant peoples to make them subjects? Is that the great competition? Ought we to strip for such a race as that? Ought we to strip ourselves of every principle that has adorned the American history heretofore? We are to pull off our sandals and gird up our garments to run the race with the robber nations of Europe in seeing who can go farthest in the conquest and subjugation of people 9,000 miles away, with whom we are not in the least bit concerned. No man has ever shown where the prize is. What is the compensation for all this?

If we take the Senator from Oregon, who is a very distinguished man, upon his ground, we will agree with him that there can not be any controversy before an arbitration of any foreign governments as to our international-law right to the Philippines. But that is not the question we have undertaken to discuss at all. The question what we are to do with these things is to be argued out here among ourselves, with no third party to the transaction at all. The question is whether the American Senate and the House of Representatives and the Executive, including the coordinate branches of the whole Government, will continue to do a thing which has shown itself so unprofitable; whether, in other words, we are doing right now or ever have been doing right.

It is useless for people to say that nations have no morals. It is useless to say that any nation can commit a wrong without its feeling at some time the full effect of it. It can no more do it than a man can. Every man who commits a wrong against another and every nation which commits a wrong against another wrongs itself more than the other. It will feel some time or other the effect of it, for the trangression of the law is followed always by the penalties of the law.

Now, we have undertaken to find out here, if we can, what is the best thing we can do for ourselves, not for the Filipinos. As I stated here the other day in a speech I did not expect to make, there is nobody here who cares anything about them—not a solitary thing. The question is, what are we going to do for ourselves? We have expended some $250,000,000—$350,000,000, as is suggested to me by my friend from Georgia [Mr. BACON]—and we are expending, I understand, at the rate of a million and a half a week. We have put ourselves in an attitude that our present strength, military and naval, must go to that weak point in case of war with any other country, and we do not know when that will occur. However fair the horizon now, the cloud, like a man's hand, may rise at any moment. What was more unexpected than the Spanish war six months before?

That reminds me that it has been stated here to-day that this side of the House was very precipitant to go into that Spanish war, but very reluctant to enter into the other. It is the very highest compliment that that distinguished Senator can pay the Democratic party on this side of the House, because we went into the war to rescue a people from starvation and from tyranny, and you have entered into a war that has no such purpose nor any akin to it, only for self-aggrandizement. This pretense of securing a better government than they have is simply preposterous. It does not rise to the dignity of a second-class article of nonsense. However we may think of those people, and I myself do not believe they have the capacity to share with us in the civic burdens that our citizenship imposes, yet they are sufficient unto themselves.

They can govern themselves in some manner. They can govern themselves as well as the protectorates in the Malacca Straits Settlements and different English protectorates all over the globe, and also a great many other independent nations of the globe. We are accustomed to pronunciamentos and revolutions everywhere. They are matters of daily account. We ought not to continue in the course that we find detrimental to ourselves simply because of an assumed responsibility toward another people, and we are so tender and conscious of that responsibility to those people that we inflict upon them governments which they would never choose of their own choice. I wish to-day there might be a ballot taken on the island of Luzon to see whether those people would prefer to return to Spain or stay with the United States. I should like to get from some authority there that could be respected something of the opinions and real feeling of the people who inhabit the Philippine Archipelago, especially the Christians, the Visayans, and Tagalogs, as to what they thought of this attempt to give them a better government.

Why, Mr. President, our war there is simply like putting out a fire in one place and having it break forth in another. This war will not be ended in our day. I stated in a speech I made upon the Spanish treaty, when we were calling home the volunteers from a few months' war, that we should have to enlist a larger number of volunteers in a war that would last indefinitely. Not one of you would have any respect for a man living in the Philippines who did not resist with all his might the attempt to place him against his will under another government. Who is willing to say that, if he were a Filipino, he would not do his very best for Filipino independence?

I know how we regarded the Tories of the Revolution, and yet the Tories of the Revolution comprised one-third of the population of the united provinces. They not only comprised one-third of the number, but they comprised very largely the greater share of the wealth of the country. They were the older people, who were supposed to be the best informed; they were the commercial people, and many of them had such a profound distrust of their fellow-countrymen that they speedily left the provinces when the war had concluded.

There may be some commercial people also among the Filipinos. There never yet has been a country that did not have its traitors, and we do not know how far commercial interests will control people and how far they will lead people who are for conquest and dominion. If we could strip ourselves of all ideas of commerce and resolve this question down to one of fact, of morality, and of justice, I think this Chamber would speedily change its conclusions on this subject. We can not, however, it seems, rid ourselves of all the burden of a certain public opinion of a certain class of people, but we can continually make protests against an obvious wrong, and we can continually appeal from the votes here to the awakening conscience of a great people.

They may be, in the delirium of military success, capable of doing things they would not do in a more sober moment. To that sober people this side is entitled to have always the privilege of appealing. We make no war on the Government; there is nothing here that can be construed into anything of that sort; but certainly we can here, upon the question of policy that so deeply and vitally affects the American people themselves, discuss dispassionately a question that goes to the very roots of free institutions and of government and liquefies the solid pillars which support the popular institutions of this country.

We have had scenes in this Chamber which were not characterized as traitorous when leading Senators from the North stated that the war with Mexico justified secession. We have had Senators and Representatives from that section of the country say that the war of 1812, the second war for independence, justified secession. We have heard it said from the pulpit in that section that if it were left to the voters, 99 out of every 100 respectable men would rather go to Great Britain than enter into the abysses of war with the English people; and there was a Northern governor who made proclamation that his Commonwealth would not concede the right to the President to order out the troops as the quota of Massachusetts against the country from which we are descended and whose religion we have. Nobody talked about traitors then.

Men must express their views here fairly, or there will never be any righteous or any wise conclusion. Let us forget that there is such a thing as Executive patronage, and we shall have gone halfway toward a settlement of every one of these troubles. Then let us remember—having forgotten that much—that there is something due to conscience, something due to morality, and we shall accomplish the balance of it. There is no difficulty except that which we make ourselves.

It is said that it is impossible for us to cut loose from the Philippines, or to retreat, or to scuttle, to use these phrases. I recollect in one of Scott's novels his heroine, Di Vernon, said to her halting cousin, "There is no such word as 'impossible.'" Things only are impossible because they seem to be so. There is no difficulty when we honestly try. We are not ruled by justice here to-day, but we are here to make difficulties; we are here to put obstructions in the plain, straight road of duty; we are here to dig ditches across the highway that will lead us to a safe harbor; we are here to place obstacles when we ought to remove them; and I feel sure this Senate is not going to do anything else but to continue this policy just as it has been marked out—a policy that has not been justified by a single day in the history of this country, a policy that has been denounced by every important instrument, by the Constitution, by the Declaration of Independence, by every oration delivered on the hustings, in the forum, in the Senate, and everywhere else, in favor of liberty when any other oppressed people of the world were struggling for the same blessings which we enjoy.

We are going right on. There has been a tremendous change of front in these United States. That is all there is about it. We are marching forward, extending foreign trade, and forgetting the claims of people struggling for national independence. We have heretofore been hunting for excuses to acknowledge belligerency and to justify military intervention, but now we turn our backs on everything we have ever said or anything we have ever done. Is there any reason why we should do it? Will somebody tell me where our compensation is to come in?

The other day there was a convention between Japan and Great Britain as to the preservation of the Chinese Empire against certain European nations that are said to have designs upon it, and the newspapers said that the American Executive looked favorably upon that convention. I hope he does; and yet we have had the argument here as one of the main reasons for taking possession of the Philippines against any moral right, as I say, that they will afford us a base of operations when the dismemberment of the Chinese Empire shall take place, so that we may claim our share. It is all greed, it is all lust of conquest. Morality has been relegated to the limbo of old curiosity; justice is no longer spoken of—

> O judgment! thou art fled to brutish beasts,
> And men have lost their reason.

The whirlwind of military excitement, the sudden fanning of the flame of military ardor of a great people like this has made a vortex that envelops us. The result is that we have not yet emancipated ourselves from the glamour of military successes in the East and in the West. We have been incapable of fair judgment. Philip has not yet become sober; but the appeal will continue to be made to him until he is sober; and when that time comes I have yet enough faith in the liberty-loving character of the American people, in their sense of justice, in their conscience, and in their morality to believe that they will undo what we have been doing.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, just a word or two in reply to the remarks of my friend, the distinguished Senator from Mississippi [Mr. MONEY]. He undertook to defend the position taken and argument made a few days since by the Senator from Washington [Mr. TURNER], and also to demolish what little I said in reply to that argument. But the Senator from Mississippi, after announcing his position and what he was about to do, very rapidly gets away from the main point at issue, and submits an argument upon an entirely different subject, insisting that international law has nothing whatever to do with the question under consideration.

Mr. President, there was but one point in the argument of the Senator from Washington to which I alluded or which I undertook to answer, and that was the position taken by the Senator from Washington to the effect that at the date of the fall of Manila, and consequently, of course, at the date of the Paris treaty, sovereignty had passed from Spain to the Filipinos; and that, therefore, we had no title to the Philippine Archipelago at the date of the fall of Manila, either by virtue of our victory over Spain or yet by virtue of our treaty with Spain afterwards consummated.

That was the argument of the Senator from Washington, who stated in substance and effect, if not in so many words, that we had no title to any part of the Philippine Archipelago for the simple and sole reason, as alleged by him, that the Filipinos had achieved their independence prior to our victory over Spain, and that, therefore, nothing passed to us by virture of that victory nor yet by virtue of the treaty of peace.

That is the position, and the only position and argument, of the Senator from Washington that I alluded to or undertook to answer. My reply was in effect, first, a denial thereof, and, in the second place, as the reason for that denial, that they never had achieved their independence, that they never had been recognized as an independent government, either de jure or de facto, either by Spain or by any other power in the world. Consequently, the argument of the distinguished Senator from Mississippi, based upon the proposition stated by him, that international law has nothing whatever to do with the question now before the Senate, can not stand.

It has very much to do with it, when we consider the argument of the Senator from Washington; it has all to do with it when we consider the position taken and the argument made by the distinguished Senator from Washington; because, if his position is true, if his argument is correct, then—as I stated before—we took nothing by virtue of our victory over Spain; we took nothing by virtue of our treaty of peace, because our victory, in the first place, was not a victory over the Filipinos.

We were not at war with them. Our war was with Spain. Our victory was over Spain and not over the Philippines. Our treaty was with Spain and not with the Filipinos. Consequently, if Spain did not own the archipelago, as contended by the distinguished Senator from Washington, at the date of that victory, and at the date of that treaty of peace, of course we took nothing by virtue of either under the principles of international law and of common sense as well, because all will concede that no government can cede away that which does not belong to it.

Now, the distinguished Senator from Mississippi puts in a claim to the effect that it was not necessary that there should be any recognition by any power. I do not and did not claim that necessarily there should have been a recognition by Spain. I simply stated that there had been no recognition by Spain. I do not think that would have been necessary, but there must have been an established government and a recognition of that government at least by the universal acquiescence and acknowledgment of the great masses of the people themselves; and, if I read history aright, there was no such recognition by the Filipinos themselves of any government, either de jure or de facto, prior to the fall of Manila. In order to operate, to transfer sovereignty and with it all property included in such sovereignty, a people engaged in rebellion must show they have conquered the government against which they have rebelled and established a government of their own and have the ability to maintain it.

But, aside from that, what does the argument of the distinguished Senator from Washington and the distinguished Senator from Mississippi, who has just taken his seat, mean? If you are right, if your position is correct and your argument good, then we have no business to have any dealings with the Filipinos or the Philippine Archipelago at all. We never owned them—I mean the islands; that is your argument—they never came to us, and they are not ours, according to the position you assume. Consequently, we have nothing to do with them if your argument is sound.

Was that argument ever made when the treaty of peace was under consideration in this body? I was not then here, but even if I had been I do not suppose I could state, for I assume it was done in executive session; but I take it that no such argument was ever made here at that time. Of course, I do not know personally, as I say. On the contrary, some of our Democratic friends—not all—voted for the treaty of peace. Why? Would they ever have voted for the treaty of peace if they believed that Spain had nothing in the archipelago to sell at the time we made that treaty?

Mr. RAWLINS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Oregon yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. MITCHELL. Yes.

Mr. RAWLINS. I rise simply for the purpose of correcting a statement the Senator has made, that no one on this side took the position that we had no moral right to assert sovereignty over the people of the Philippine Islands.

Mr. TELLER. And on the other side, too.

Mr. RAWLINS. But the position was taken by many Senators in speeches both on this side and the other side; and quite a number, I think, on both sides of the Chamber took the position that the ratification of the treaty itself, under which Spain purported to convey her rights to the Philippine Islands, did not bind us to any course of action, and that it would be our duty, as it would be to our interest, to see to it that the Filipinos secured their independence upon the ratification of the treaty.

Mr. MITCHELL. That is an entirely different proposition, Mr. President, and it is an open question yet, I take it, as to what we shall ultimately do with the Filipinos and the Philippine Archipelago.

Mr. TELLER. Will the Senator allow me to say a word?

Mr. MITCHELL. Certainly.

Mr. TELLER. It was challenged upon the other side of the Chamber repeatedly that we could not buy sovereignty under any circumstances whatever, and the answer to that was from the other side of the Chamber and from this that so far as those of us were concerned who supported the treaty—and I was one originally—this was a matter to be disposed of after the war had ceased to exist between us and Spain. Our anxiety was to close the war, which would technically exist until we ratified the treaty.

Mr. MITCHELL. Of course we could not buy sovereignty as something separate and alone. Sovereignty is not a thing to be bought or sold, except as it passes with and attaches to property—an island or a continent—which is the subject of sale, and nobody contends otherwise. When, however, we deal with a nation in reference to certain property supposed to be owned by that nation, then, for the purpose of determining the question of title, we must consider the question of sovereignty. The question is, Who owned the archipelago at the date of our victory over Spain and at the date of our treaty? The Senator from Washington and the Senator from Mississippi contend Spain did not, but some government in the archipelago did. This I deny.

If the Filipinos had achieved their independence prior to the close of the Spanish war, as contended for by the Senator from Washington [Mr. TURNER] the other day, and by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. MONEY], who has just taken his seat, then I concede that archipelago did not belong to Spain at the time we achieved our victory and at the time we made our treaty of peace, and consequently we took nothing.

So, after all, Mr. President, the position assumed by the two Senators, to whom I have referred, simply amounts to this: That we did not have at the time of our victory and at the time of our treaty, and consequently do not have now, any title to the Philippine Archipelago or any part of it. This is the legitimate conclusion to which the arguments of the distinguished Senators lead.

Mr. MONEY. Mr. President, the speeches made upon the Spanish treaty set forth very fully the views of this side of the House. It is true that some Senators on this side voted with the majority on this subject, that the treaty should be ratified in the very language in which it was referred to us. The only contention on this side was that the language in article 3 should be in the same phraseology as that used in article 1, applying to Cuba, being a temporary possession for the purpose of passing over the rights of sovereignty to a government already organized. That was decided against this side by a majority, I believe, of two votes.

I alluded on a former occasion to the manner in which those two votes were procured. I do not think there was a man in favor of the treaty who believed that morning that the treaty would pass. Notwithstanding, we treated it as a question of morals, and not, as I said a while ago, as a question as to the good of the Filipinos, for we were more concerned about the rights of the people at home than we were about the rights of people abroad.

At the same time we could not help feeling a generous sympathy, if I may so call it, for any considerable number of people struggling for independence; and as we had participated with them jointly as allies or confederates, or whatever you may term them, in the endeavor to shake off the yoke of their oppressor, which they had substantially accomplished without our assistance, except so far as the battle of Manila Bay was concerned, then the question addressed itself, at least to some of us, as to whether we had the right in morals to assume sovereignty where we had none; whether in fact this Government could afford to hold any people subject to its will and against theirs; whether it was true, as pronounced in the Declaration of Independence, that all governments are founded upon the consent of the governed; whether we had been justified during our one hundred and twenty-five years of glorious history in giving our sympathy and moral support to every people who had struggled for liberty anywhere.

These questions come up, and with them the cognate question of what was to be done with those people, the difficulties that would be encountered in ruling them, and the objections to their admission to citizenship on account of the peculiar construction of the oriental mind. I said even then that I believed them incapable of our kind of government, but I have never said, and I do not believe, that they are incapable of self-government, that is, a government according to their ideas of government, that will work out according to their mental, moral, and spiritual wants through generation after generation of their forefathers.

I believe now that, whether the government which would subsist there if we should withdraw our troops could be characterized, in the language of the President, as murderous anarchy or as a free republic, it devolves upon us simply to absolve ourselves from an onerous duty that does not belong to us by Providence, by destiny, or by any power except our own will; to rid our people of enormous taxation and from the still greater danger of the threatened peril of introducing here into this free Republic the idea that imperial or autocratic power can be conferred by the Congress of the United States upon the Executive; and it is a question whether we are to survive the experiment that is being made with them when we have not yet shown ourselves entirely capable of settling all the problems which have risen within our borders.

These are the questions that address themselves to our minds, not, as I said, because we love the Filipinos less, but the Americans more; not that we are not concerned in companies organized to exploit the woods and the commerce and the mines of the Philippines, but because we are concerned in the perpetuity of free institutions in America. It was the question whether we were to transmit to our posterity, untarnished and effective, the institutions we received from our sires. These were the vital questions which addressed themselves to us, and to them we solemnly addressed ourselves.

This quibbling about title was not the thing. The debate was not upon any such point as that, and it has not been yet. It is a mistake to suppose that any debate upon technicalities here can hide the true character of the debate carried on in this Chamber. At last the reason and the conscience of the people must see that there were great questions at stake that will involve the character of this Government at home. The rot at the circumference will after a while surely reach the center. You can not safely invest anybody, not even St. Paul himself, fresh from the sermon on Mars Hill, with immense authority and no responsibility; and that is exactly what we have done.

There is throughout this whole business a steady accretion of executive power and a steady delegation of power by Congress to the Executive. We foresaw the consequences three years ago, prior to the ratification of the treaty. They were pointed out as clearly as the noonday sun. It was stated as precisely and as accurately then as it has been shown to-day what the consequences would be. We have persisted, however, because some people said we could not retreat. They might just as well have said that we could not drop a red-hot bar of iron which we had accidentally picked up. We can do what we please, and if it is so that we can not do what is right, then the beginning of the end has come.

Rome was never greater nor grander than on the brink of her fall. It was then that the Roman senate had lost its authority, had lost its independence, and met regularly in the curule chair, with the scepter, to respond to the rescript of the Emperor and not to speak the wish of the people of Rome; and this Senate, I am sorry to say, and I hope I am not violating parliamentary law when I say it, is fast assuming that attitude toward the Executive.

We are the guardians of popular liberty as much as is the House. In all of the great questions that involve the constitutional liberties of this people, in all that involves the natural and inherent and inalienable authority and powers and liberties of this people we are the constitutional guardians. We are here to see that the three coordinate branches of government are confined strictly within their limits, and yet we have the spectacle of the Senate and the House giving away the authority of the representatives of the citizens of the sovereign States of this Union to the Executive, and the Executive calling for more, like the horse-leech's daughter.

Not satisfied with the autocratic power already given him, another bill is to be soon introduced, I am told, by the same gentleman, to give him the right to say which of two canals he will take, involving in it the right to tax a hundred or two hundred million dollars, more or less, as he may choose in his judgment. Everything is slipping away. That "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty" is one of the maxims of the ancients, and that was the crystallized expression of their experience. The failure of every republic that ever existed—and the shores of time are strewn with their wrecks—has been due to the failure of men to govern themselves, by the fact that the authority slipped from the hands of the many into the hands of the few and ultimately into one.

I know there is no bugle blast long enough to bring you back to the constitutional duty imposed upon you. I know very well that what the President wants he will get. I do not reflect upon that distinguished official. It is the tendency of the time. It is the effect of that of which Sam Adams wrote to Richard Henry Lee after the adoption of the Constitution, when he declared, "Our people are now simple and virtuous and love liberty, but I fear the time will come when they will get rich and love their riches more than their liberty." It has been the fear which has haunted the mind of every patriot since this organization was made. It is justifying what Alexander Hamilton said, that the people were incapable of self-government; what Mr. Sedgwick, of Massachusetts, said in the Senate Chamber; what Robert Sherman, of Connecticut, said. It is a prediction that has been made from the beginning, and we, unhappily, when these times are out of sorts, are called upon in our conduct to verify that prediction.

This side of the House, I believe, has labored earnestly for the benefit of American institutions, of American liberty, of the principles of justice and morality; and without these no country on earth can long maintain itself as a republic. What other people have done concerns us only in the example which it affords us. What empires may do, what autocracies may do, what aristocracies or paternal governments may do is one thing. They may do things and prosper, but what a republic may do, based upon the will and capacity of every man to govern himself and help to govern others, is a totally different question. They can not follow with impunity the course of other nations. They must each one trust to themselves; and we will find before we terminate this experiment that the saddest day of American history was when the Spanish treaty was signed. We will then recollect that—

> Of all sad words of tongue or pen,
> The saddest are these: "It might have been!"

And yet we will endeavor to divest ourselves here individually of responsibility by saying that we are standing with our party; that we are obliging somebody; that we have not studied the question; that we are ashamed to go back when we find we are wrong; that we can not withdraw the flag; that no one should pull it down where it has once been put up, although that has been done over and over again and always will be. It is not dishonor to the flag. The highest honor I can pay the flag of my country is to pull it down when it is in the wrong place.

The greatest duty we owe to ourselves is to consider what the American people are to suffer or enjoy by this forced relation with a people 9,000 miles away, absolutely discordant with us in all their ideas, incapable, as you have declared in a resolution which you passed simultaneously with the treaty, of becoming citizens of this country.

Then what are they? Some one said here the other day, although I have forgotten who it was, that a citizen and a subject were the same thing. A subject can be a citizen, but also a man can be a subject and not a citizen. A man can be the subject of a country and enjoy none of the privileges of citizenship. The Roman power covered the world, from burning sands to frozen snows, and the Roman eagle flew as the emblem of the authority of that gigantic power. Were they citizens? It was the crowning honor to a distinguished subject of Rome to be made a Roman citizen, and to be a Roman citizen was more than to be a King. The two words are entirely different. They have not the same meaning, and if the Filipinos are never to be citizens, then what can they be but subjects? You have differentiated the two terms. You must stand to your own definition one way or the other.

Then, in the name of common sense, of common patriotism, of common honesty, of the commonest sort of statesmanship, what do you want with these people way off there? What is the compensation? Where is the return on the investment? It is true a few distinguished gentlemen seem to have been able somehow to organize and exploit companies in the islands to some extent, but what is the object of the expense of maintaining an armament in that ocean and an army of 70,000 men? Can we find no better use for our people, converted from citizens into soldiers, than in suppressing a people struggling for liberty? What is the reflex action of this thing? Will it not reach us after a while?

Now, the American people are in danger of becoming familiar with and then embracing the proposition of governing without the consent of the governed, and when that is well accepted by the American people they will have very little concern about their own liberties, except as a matter of convenience. Senators, it seems to me that this proposition, or anything akin to it, concerning the relation of this country to the Filipinos, should be most solemnly and prayerfully considered, and that no desire for party advantage, no desire for personal political advantage anywhere should deter any Senator from giving his conscience and his intellect to the solution of this question. We are invested with a mighty responsibility as well as ability to determine this question. We are to respond to the demand made upon us by the generations that will come after us, who will say, "Why have you done this thing; why have you set in motion the machinery in the distant islands of the ocean that after a while has reached our own country and subverted the fundamental principles of liberty here at home?"

What is the rationale of all this movement? Who four years ago would have dreamed it to be possible that any such action would be had as has been had by this Congress and this little government in petto that we have set up in the Philippines, assuming, as was so well and clearly shown by the distinguished Senator from Florida [Mr. MALLORY], to annul laws passed by Congress, setting up penal statutes applicable at least to subjects of the United States, undertaking to make offices of all sorts, all in accord with resolutions passed by this body, all in accord with resolutions that have made them and their master, who appointed them, absolutely irresponsible to any tribunal on earth? There is not a court open before which you can impeach the President or any one of his appointees for malfeasance in office.

When Verres plundered Sicily the Roman Senate condemned him; when Crassus plundered Asia Minor he, too, had his accusers; but we sit in this Senate as dumb as oysters at every single encroachment on the liberties of human beings who inhabit the Philippine Islands, as much entitled to them as any others on the face of the globe. Crassus was killed by having molten gold poured down his throat—that was the vengeance which the Almighty Providence had given him for his greed; and Verres was forever a disgraced man in Rome.

We can profit by their example and by their loss. We can not continue a career of this sort without detriment to ourselves; and whoever does a wrong afflicts not so much the man he has wronged as he does himself. We are moral agents, and we must consider the moral side of this question, and we must not cease to do that and we must not consider only technicalities and the bare framework of assumed cases as a shelter for acts of injustice, for acts of oppression. And when I use those words I do not intend in any sense to reflect upon the gallant soldiers who are risking their lives in that hostile climate and who are simply doing their duty as they are commanded and, like the sword, are the mere instrument of the work.

Nor do I condemn even the Taft Commission, which is the most useless and pernicious thing I know of to-day. I read in the paper this morning that the distinguished head of the Commission had said as to Aguinaldo, whom he had never met, that he had come to the conclusion that there was nothing in Aguinaldo which gave him (Judge Taft) the impression that Aguinaldo had any idea of civil liberty; and yet I challenge comparison of the form of government provided by Aguinaldo in his provisional republic with any instrument that ever laid the foundation of any free State on earth.

His struggles were sufficient; his sacrifices enough. He had the faculty in six days of binding every insurgent chief in the islands into one compact army; and yet this man, we are told by the head of the Commission, has not any idea of civil liberty; that he is poorly educated; and yet his profession was that of a school-teacher. A man who at 26 years of age could secure such a unanimous indorsement and the confidence of his people that he was put at their head in all the insurrectionary movements is a man who did not have any idea of civil liberty and was poorly educated! That is not the testimony of Admiral Dewey and other people. They said he was capable; that he was honest; that he was patriotic. I care nothing about that. It does not go to the point with me, except as one of the facts that are part of the history of all these transactions.

But what are we doing to ourselves? I hope Senators will not hold me too strictly for the "damnable iteration" of that word, as it may seem to them. What are we doing for ourselves? What injury are we inflicting? It is said that Mithridates accustomed himself to take every sort of poison so that none of them would hurt him. Are we beginning that experiment in order to be secure from poison?

But what a tremendous reversal of the history of this great people, who have been a world power since the flag first floated upon an independent republic of united and independent States, who have been a power that has had more influence upon this earth than any other power in the world, however great its armies or its navies, or however great its riches or its population.

It had the moral power and the moral force, more forceful than the power of a storm wave, resulting from knowledge that we were pursuing the path of righteousness and peace; that we were instructing mankind in liberty and in humanity; that we were giving a fair and safe haven here to the distressed and storm-beaten ship of every people on earth, and that we were affording them the principles of civil liberty and exemplifying them by our practice. That was the influence which made us the greatest nation on earth and the greatest world power that ever existed in the annals of mankind. Have we got that now? Has not that perished with the transactions of the last three years? Is there any struggling nation on earth that would to-day ask for the sympathy of the United States?

The Philippine Archipelago has been a tremendous extinguisher upon the esteem, the gratitude, the admiration, and the affection of all liberty-loving people in every quarter of the globe. I would not give the proud and inspired attitude of this great Republic before the war in the Philippines began, for any amount of successful competition with the advanced nations of civilization in their progress of usurpation and robbery. The multiplication of navies and armies will never restore to this nation the proud position it once occupied. You may after a while come to a lucid interval, as I have said, and undo what you have done. But, like the boy's faults which were illustrated by nails driven in the post, there will still be the scars when the nails are withdrawn. There will be the reproach which you can not wipe out. The shield bright from either side will have its stigma.

We here are deliberating about international laws, about which there is no question. We are deliberating here about commercial expediency, in which there is no profit. Only three years ago you heard it everywhere that trade followed the flag. That was so preposterous and silly that it was exposed over and over again here. Now, in the last three years, since the Philippine Islands have come under our flag, the trade of Great Britain, Germany, and France have increased in a larger and faster proportion than that of the United States. So you see that fallacy has been exposed and one sophism after another has come to naught, touched by the eternal spirit of truth as exemplified in the statistics and the history of the day.

I hope that such action will be taken as will not close forever the pathway to retreat from dishonor. I want at least the gates left open wide behind and no ships burned, so that a nation repenting of its assault upon the rights of another people, or I would rather put it in this way—a nation anxious about its own liberties—may return to original principles, as declared in the Declaration of Independence and in the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President, I do not rise to make a speech. My purpose is simply to put into the RECORD, in answer to the documents presented by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN] a few minutes ago, some other documents with respect to the Louisiana purchase and the institution of civil government there.

But before I do that I wish to say in a word, in answer to the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. MONEY], that I feel like congratulating ourselves and the country upon the fact that the despairing view he takes of the Philippines and our situation there is not very generally entertained. I think that view is limited to very few, both in Congress and out of Congress.

At another time, in connection with this debate, if I can get the floor, I shall undertake to show that in this matter the way to honor is not in retreat, but in going forward—in pursuing the policy upon which we have entered. It is enough to say now that there is not, so far as I know, except only in Democratic imagination, any unnecessary or improper deprivation of the liberty of anyone either in this country or in the Philippines. On the contrary, both here and there, as always since the institution of our Government, the spirit of liberty prevails, and government is in accordance with that spirit of liberty.

Who represents us in the Philippines, except only the Army, which the Senator from Mississippi has seen fit to eulogize properly and justly, and the Taft Commission, of which he has taken pains to say he has no words of criticism to offer, so far as they are concerned as men, or as representatives of our institutions and our people and our civilization? But if these have not been false to liberty, who has been? They have gone there, Mr. President, pursuant to instructions, according to which they are bound to apply in government the spirit of our institutions, not only generally, but specifically. Those instructions have been called to the attention of the Senate, and they have been placed in the RECORD, and it has not yet been shown that the spirit of those instructions, or any specific detail of those instructions, has been violated by that Commission or by any other authority representing the United States in the Philippines.

That is all I want to say for the present in answer to the speech of the Senator from Mississippi, but before I put the documents in the RECORD I wish to come to an understanding with the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER], who made a remark a while ago which I think I must have misunderstood. I understood the Senator from Colorado to say that sovereignty can not be purchased.

Mr. TELLER. I did not say anything of the kind. The Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL] said it could not. I said it had been asserted in this Chamber that sovereignty could not be purchased.

Mr. FORAKER. I never heard it so asserted. I thought it was asserted now by the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. TELLER. If the Senator had listened to the senior Senator from Massachusetts, not only during that debate but this, he might have heard the same statement made, that sovereignty could not be purchased.

Mr. FORAKER. I do not refer to it for the purpose of entering into any argument about it, but only to point to what I think is conclusive, so far as concerns the position of the American people at least, with respect to such a proposition, and that is that we acquired Louisiana by purchase, and other acquisitions of the United States have been acquired by purchase.

Mr. TELLER. A purchase of territory carries with it, of course, sovereignty, in my judgment. Now, whether we should exercise sovereignty in a way to disregard the rights of the people it seems to me is the only question which is left.

Mr. FORAKER. I am in entire accord with the Senator from Colorado with respect to that proposition.

Mr. MITCHELL. Will the Senator from Ohio yield to me?

Mr. FORAKER. Certainly.

Mr. MITCHELL. I would inquire of the Senator from Ohio if this is not the fact in regard to sovereignty. We deal with a nation, and we purchase property belonging to the nation, and then sovereignty follows.

Mr. FORAKER. Undoubtedly. I was called from the Chamber and did not hear all that occurred. I came in just as the matter was being passed from, and I discover now that I was under a misapprehension and a misunderstanding. I am glad I called attention to it so as to be corrected. Undoubtedly we have the right to acquire territory by purchase.

Mr. TELLER. Certainly.

Mr. FORAKER. And if we acquire territory, we have a right to govern it; and if we govern it, we, of course, exercise sovereignty.

Mr. MONEY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. FORAKER. Certainly.

Mr. MONEY. Mr. President, I did not speak at any time of any loss of liberty by the people of this country at this time. On the contrary, I explained very carefully that it would be the result of a familiarizing process, beginning 9,000 miles away, but that from the circumference the rot would reach the center.

Now, my friend from Ohio, if I can call him such, and I know I can, says he believes that I stand very much alone, both here and in the country, upon this subject. That may possibly be true, but the same Senator said the other day that after Thomas Corwin, of his own State, had resisted the Mexican war and pronounced his sympathy with the people there, it was the last of Thomas Corwin. But as a matter of history, after all that was done, he was twice elected to the House, elected to the Senate, and served in the Cabinet. Now, if I can meet as good a fate as that, I do not think I can grumble.

Mr. FORAKER. So far as Thomas Corwin is concerned, the Senator did not intend, of course, to misrepresent what I said about him.

Mr. MONEY. No; of course not.

Mr. FORAKER. He would not do that. What I said about Thomas Corwin was that after his attitude in regard to the Mexican war he was never again honored with an office by the people of Ohio.

Mr. MONEY. That seems to have been a mistake.

Mr. FORAKER. No; it is not a mistake. What I referred to, as I explained afterwards when my attention was called to it, was that the people of the State as a whole had never called upon him again to represent them as their Senator, but that he was selected, however, by his fellow-citizens in his Congressional district to represent them twice in Congress, and he was selected by Mr. Fillmore to be Secretary of the Treasury, and later he was appointed by Abraham Lincoln to be minister to Mexico.

Mr. MONEY. So it seems——

Mr. FORAKER. So he was not without honor. I did not pretend that he was.

Mr. MONEY. I am drawing a simile now. So it seems Mr. Corwin did not suffer so much in the esteem of his own people, and if I can suffer as little I shall be quite satisfied.

But it makes no difference to me, Mr. President, how many people sympathize with me in my utterances. Like Victor Hugo, I believe that God and one is a majority, and I shall always assert what I believe to be right, what I believe to be the true principle of conduct for this great Republic, as long as I enjoy the honor of a seat in this body, perfectly regardless of my political fortune.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President, nobody questions the sincerity of the Senator from Mississippi, and nobody thinks for one moment that the Senator from Mississippi would desist from advocating anything he might sincerely believe because of any effect it might have prejudicially upon him. We know how manly he is, how courageous he is, and how eloquent he is; and having convictions and having conscientious purposes, he is always ready to stand for that which he does believe and never fails to espouse his cause.

So far as Mr. Corwin is concerned, I do not wish to dwell upon that; but while it is true that he did afterwards have honors of the character mentioned imposed upon him, yet also it is true that Mr. Corwin—and nobody more than Mr. Corwin himself recognized it—was never after that utterance the same power politically or otherwise in his State or outside of it that he had been before. He was a lovable man, a man of great intellectual endowments, a man of beautiful character. To know him was to love him, and his neighbors took great pleasure in standing by him when his State had ceased any longer to honor him as he had been honored before.

But, Mr. President, that is foreign to what, as I announced a moment ago, I rose to do. The Senator from South Carolina a while ago took occasion, as he stated, to point out the difference between Democratic expansion and Republican expansion, and to do that he had placed in the RECORD an extract from the treaty with France by which we acquired the Louisiana purchase, according to which it was provided—I am not undertaking to quote literally—that the territory and the inhabitants should ultimately—"in due time," I believe, was the expression—be admitted into the Union of our States. Then he read the proclamation of Thomas Jefferson, the first great expansionist.

Mr. TILLMAN. The Senator will allow me to correct him. I had read Mr. Jefferson's message.

Mr. FORAKER. Well, Mr. Jefferson's message, was it? I thought it was his proclamation. I stand corrected. It was his message to Congress announcing his purchase, and announcing what had been provided with respect to the people and with respect to their government.

Then he read the proclamation, I believe, of Governor Claiborne, the first governor appointed by Thomas Jefferson to go down to Louisiana and take possession and institute civil government there; and he dwelt upon the fact that the President in his message and this governor in his proclamation blazoned it forth that those people in the Louisiana purchase were to be taken into the Union as brethren of the American people and were to be at once admitted to the enjoyment of all the privileges of our institutions.

Now, Mr. President, that was the talk. That is what Jefferson said and what Claiborne said; but what did they do, and what did the people say? I need not stand here to point out the character of government they instituted. By comparison the civil governments instituted in the Philippine Islands are far more liberal and generous than was the government instituted by Thomas Jefferson and that Democratic Congress which acted with him for the Louisiana purchase.

Every Senator here is familiar with the fact that they did not permit the people of the Louisiana purchase to elect the governor or to elect any other official. The President appointed the governor, and he did not consult anybody in the Louisiana purchase as to who should be that governor.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

Mr. FORAKER. The people were not allowed to elect a judiciary or a legislature. They were appointed, and consisted of the governor and an executive council selected by Thomas Jefferson, not from among them, but sent down there from here, for the purpose of instituting government, and representing all the departments of government—the executive, the judicial, and the legislative alike.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. FORAKER. Yes, sir.

Mr. TILLMAN. If the Senator had been present when I first began the presentation of the documents, he would have found that I had the act establishing the Territory incorporated in the RECORD, so that every one can see for himself just what its provisions are. He would have also learned that I had stated that instead of Mr. Jefferson taking any action before the ratification of the treaty, he did not move in the matter at all. Not only did he not move after the ratification, but he waited until Congress had authorized him to move, whereas in the Philippines our President began to move within three or four days after the treaty had been signed, before it was ratified, and before Congress moved one step or authorized him to move a step.

Mr. FORAKER. The situations were different. At another time I shall point out why the President of the United States was justified in moving, if I may use that expression, as President McKinley did move, when he issued his proclamation in December, 1898.

But for the moment let me deal with what was done in Louisiana, in order that I may answer the record that has been commented upon. It is true that the Senator put into the RECORD the statute that Congress enacted, but the Senator did not stop to comment on that. The Senator did not point out that that statute provided that the President of the United States, and not the people of Louisiana, should exercise all power in the selection of governmental agencies and officials.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Ohio yield?

Mr. FORAKER. Certainly.

Mr. TILLMAN. Does not the President appoint every governor of a Territory now, and has he not appointed the governor of every Territory ever created by law, and has he not appointed every judge?

Mr. FORAKER. Certainly; and he always has done so without criticism until he was authorized to appoint a governor for the Philippines.

Mr. TILLMAN. The trouble about it is that we have not appointed any governor for the Philippines.

Mr. FORAKER. The President has appointed a governor for the Philippines.

Mr. TILLMAN. Congress has not authorized it.

Mr. FORAKER. Well, Mr. President——

Mr. TILLMAN. Congress has given the Filipinos no semblance of a government.

Mr. FORAKER. That is a question of construction. The Congress has invested the President with power to exercise all civil and military power in the islands and to repose it in such persons as he may see fit to select and designate to exercise that power. Pursuant to that authority, given him by Congress, he has appointed a governor, and it is the first appointment of a governor for a territorial possession of the United States that has ever been criticised, so far as the act of power is concerned, since the Government began.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. FORAKER. Yes; but——

Mr. TILLMAN. If I recall the date, the Spooner amendment to the Army appropriation bill is less than a year old. All our dealings with the Filipinos have been those of a conquering power with the strong arm of the Army and of the Navy slaughtering and burning those people under the title which we acquired from Spain. We never as a Congress gave the President one scintilla of authority. He exercised everything he has ever done in that direction by reason of his being the Executive and taking it for granted that after we had purchased the archipelago, or after we had ratified the treaty of purchase, he had the right and was expected to put down insurrection.

Mr. FORAKER. By the treaty we acquired the title to the Philippine Islands. Congress adjourned after having ratified that treaty, and after we had taken possession and taken title without legislating. That left the President of the United States in charge of that territory, as he was in charge of every other territory belonging to the United States.

Mr. TILLMAN. As Commander in Chief of the Army?

Mr. FORAKER. The President is Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, and as such it was his duty to suppress insurrection in the Philippines as it would have been his duty to suppress insurrection in Alaska, in Hawaii, in Porto Rico, or in any State or Territory of this Union. The President would have been derelict in the discharge of his duty if he had not employed the Army and Navy to suppress the insurrection that broke out in the Philippines after we took title and possession of those islands. It then became his duty to assert our authority and to uphold our authority and enforce our authority in the Philippine Archipelago, and in that behalf he discharged his duty.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Ohio yield?

Mr. FORAKER. In a moment. When later the Congress at another session passed the Spooner amendment authorizing the President, as was referred to a moment ago, to exercise civil and military authority there and appoint persons and give them power to exercise it, he then appointed a governor, and the governor on the 4th of July last was duly inaugurated. He is governor by appointment, just as Andrew Jackson's Governor Claiborne was governor by appointment, and as every other governor of a Territory has been governor by appointment and not by selection by the people.

Mr. MONEY. Will the Senator from Ohio allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. FORAKER. Certainly.

Mr. MONEY. The Senator says that the President appointed a governor just as Andrew Jackson appointed a governor in the case of Louisiana. Does the Senator mean to say that the governor's appointment was confirmed by the Senate, as was the case of Andrew Jackson's governor?

Mr. TILLMAN. Andrew Jackson, I understand, did not appoint anybody governor of Louisiana. It was Jefferson. The Senator from Ohio made an error, and the Senator from Mississippi simply repeats it.

Mr. MONEY. Excuse me; I meant to say Thomas Jefferson. I have an excruciating neuralgia now and am hardly responsible. I have been discussing this question and using the name of Thomas Jefferson all the time, and I let it slip here. Thomas Jefferson appointed a governor, and he was confirmed by the Senate, as were the other officers confirmed, which was not so in the Philippines. Not only that, but the President put down the insurrection by order—that is, he commanded the commanding general to put down insurrection with the army in the island of Luzon before the treaty was ever ratified that gave him any authority whatever. We were living in a state of profound peace——

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President, I did not yield to the Senator from Mississippi to make another speech.

Mr. MONEY. Excuse me.

Mr. FORAKER. He had almost the entire afternoon and I——

Mr. MONEY. I beg pardon of the Senator.

Mr. FORAKER. I do not want to interrupt you, but simply to admonish you.

Mr. MONEY. I stand admonished.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President, of course there is a distinction such as the Senator points out, but that has no reference to the point I was making. The point I was making is that the people were not consulted in the one case any more than in the other, and it was not therefore an appointment without consent in the Philippine case any more than it was an appointment without the consent of the people of the Louisiana purchase in the other case.

Now, I want to point out how the people regarded it. The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN] told us with all the zeal and earnestness and eloquence for which he is so distinguished that there was a wide difference between that transaction and this in the regard that was shown to human liberty and individual rights; that they were welcomed as brethren; that we were glad to have them come in, and they were glad to come into this Union and become a part of the American people. Now, let me see how glad they were.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. FORAKER. I yield.

Mr. TILLMAN. The Senator puts some words in my mouth which I did not utter.

Mr. FORAKER. I was giving the effect of what the Senator said.

Mr. TILLMAN. I did not say they were glad about it, but I do say I believe if they had been bought like the Filipinos were, and that article third of the treaty had been left out guaranteeing them citizenship and the rights that other Americans have, we would have met more rifles down there than we have met in Manila.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President, it is easy for the Senator to say the Filipinos were bought, but the Filipinos were not bought in any other sense than we bought the people of Louisiana. We paid $15,000,000 for the 30,000 people of Louisiana, if you want to put it that way, just as much as we paid $20,000,000 for the 10,000,000 people in the Philippines. But, Mr. President, it is not right to put it in that way. The Senator does not wish to have anybody understand that he seriously means that we undertook to buy any people in the one case or in the other. We paid $20,000,000 on account of the Philippine transaction in a way the Senator is familiar with, and $15,000,000 on account of the other transaction. Neither payment had any reference to the individuals themselves as being purchased, or in the sense that a price was being put upon them of any kind whatsoever.

Mr. RAWLINS. Will the Senator from Ohio permit me?

Mr. FORAKER. Yes; I want to put this in the RECORD, though, pretty soon, and then I will be through.

Mr. RAWLINS. Then I will not interrupt the Senator.

Mr. FORAKER. Go ahead.

Mr. RAWLINS. I wish to ask the Senator if it is not true that in the case of the Louisiana Purchase the inhabitants were given the option of retaining their former allegiance or becoming citizens of the United States, and that no such option was given as to the native inhabitants of the Philippine Islands?

Mr. FORAKER. An option was given to the native inhabitants of the Philippine Islands to retain their allegiance to Spain if they wanted to do so.

Mr. RAWLINS. No; I think the Senator is mistaken about that.

Mr. FORAKER. That is my recollection of the treaty. But they were not given an option to become citizens of the United States. Instead of a provision of that kind it was provided, and wisely, I think, that the civil and political status of the inhabitants of the islands acquired should be determined by Congress.

Mr. RAWLINS. If the Senator will permit me, I think he will find, if he examines the Paris treaty, that as to the foreign inhabitants—the Spaniards and others—they were given an option to retain their former allegiance or to become citizens of the United States, but to the native inhabitants there was no option given.

Mr. FORAKER. Well, that may be.

Mr. RAWLINS. Their status was to be as defined by Congress. So we exacted, without their consent, allegiance of the native inhabitants, which we have never exacted of any other people.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President, I do not know that there is any difference between the two treaties in that respect; but if there should be it does not have anything to do with what I am addressing myself to. I am undertaking to show, in answer to the point made by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN], that there is no more attempt here to govern without the consent of the inhabitants than there was in the case of the Louisiana purchase, which he held up as an example of Democratic expansion and Democratic institution of government over territory acquired.

Now, we have learned, if I may be allowed to proceed, from what the Senator has put into the RECORD and from what he has said about it, what President Jefferson's message was, and what Governor Claiborne's proclamation was; and we know from the act which he put in the RECORD, but did not stop to comment upon, what the character of legislation was, namely, that nobody in Louisiana was consulted as to who should be this, that, or the other official, but they were all selected and appointed by the President of the United States, and they went down and took their offices and proceeded to discharge the duties pertaining to those offices.

Then what did the people do for whom the Senator from South Carolina has so much concern? I hold in my hand a protest which the people of Louisiana proceeded almost immediately to address to the Congress of the United States. It is dated the 31st day of December, 1804. Before I read it I will call attention to the fact that there are two such protests, the first signed by representative citizens of Louisiana, who say, "We, the planters, merchants, and other inhabitants of Louisiana," and another, the second, signed by a number of officials who had been elected by the various districts of the Louisiana Territory to represent them in the government of those districts. Both of these memorials are protests against the tyrannous government that had been instituted by Mr. Jefferson and the Congress of the United States.

Let me read briefly, and then I shall ask, if the Senate will allow me, that both these memorials may be incorporated in the RECORD.

In the first the citizens, planters, merchants, and other inhabitants use this language:

> Disavowing any language but that of respectful remonstrance, disdaining any other but that which befits a manly assertion of our rights, we pray leave to examine the law for erecting Louisiana into two Territories and providing for the temporary government thereof, to compare its provisions with our rights, and its whole scope with the letter and spirit of the treaty which binds us to the United States.
>
> The first section erects the country south of the thirty-third degree into a Territory of the United States by the name of the Territory of Orleans.
>
> The second gives us a governor appointed for three years by the President of the United States.
>
> The fourth vests in him and in a council, also chosen by the President, all legislative power, subject to the revision of Congress, specially guarding against any interference with public property either by taxation or sale.
>
> And the fifth establishes a judiciary, to consist of a supreme court, having exclusive criminal and original jurisdiction without appeal for all causes above the value of $100, and such inferior courts as the legislature of the Territory may establish. The judges of the superior court are appointed by the President, to continue in office four years.
>
> This is the summary of our constitution; this is so far the accomplishment of a treaty engagement to "incorporate us into the Union, and admit us to all the rights, advantages, and immunities of American citizens." And this is the promise performed, which was made by our first magistrate in your name, "that you would receive us as brothers and hasten to extend to us a participation in those invaluable rights which had formed the basis of your unexampled prosperity."

They are alluding there that what Governor Claiborne said in the proclamation the Senator commented on as showing the spirit of Democracy.

> Ignorant as we have been represented of our natural rights, shall we be called on to show that this Government is inconsistent with every principle of civil liberty?
>
> Uninformed as we are supposed to be of our acquired rights, is it necessary for us to demonstrate that this act does not "incorporate us in the Union," that it vests us with none of the "rights," gives us no advantages, and deprives us of all the "immunities" of American citizens?
>
> If this should be required, we think neither task will be difficult.
>
> On the first point we need only appeal to your Declaration of Independence; to your Constitution; to your different State governments; to the writings of your Revolutionary patriots and statesmen; to your own professions and public acts; and finally, legislators, to your own hearts, on which the love of civil liberty and its principles are, we trust, too deeply engraved to be ever totally effaced.
>
> A governor is to be placed over us whom we have not chosen, whom we do not even know, who may be ignorant of our language, uninformed of our institutions, and who may have no connections with our country or interest in its welfare.

Then they go on in that same style, elaborating the same idea, that they are to be governed and taxed without representation and without consent, and without being given the privilege of participating in the selection of their officials, until they make a memorial that covers some 8 or 10 pages of this work that I have before me.

I ask that the memorial, and the one immediately following it, may be incorporated into the RECORD as a part of my remarks, without being read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The matter referred to is as follows:

[Extracts from American State Papers, vol. 1.]

No. 183. Remonstrance of the people of Louisiana against the political system adopted by Congress for them.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE ON THE 31ST OF DECEMBER, 1804.

> We, the subscribers, planters, merchants, and other inhabitants of Louisiana, respectfully approach the Legislature of the United States with a memorial of our rights, a remonstrance against certain laws which contravene them, and a petition for that redress to which the laws of nature, sanctioned by positive stipulation, have entitled us.
>
> Without any agency in the events which have annexed our country to the United States we yet considered them as fortunate, and thought our liberties secured even before we knew the terms of the cession. Persuaded that a free people would acquire territory only to extend the blessings of freedom, that an enlightened nation would never destroy those principles on which its Government was founded, and that their Representatives would disdain to become the instruments of oppression, we calculated with certainty that their first act of sovereignty would be a communication of all the blessings they enjoyed, and were the less anxious to know on what particular terms we were received.
>
> It was early understood that we were to be American citizens; this satisfied our wishes; it implied everything we could desire, and filled us with that happiness which arises from the anticipated enjoyment of a right long withheld. We knew that it was impossible to be citizens of the United States without enjoying a personal freedom, protection for property, and, above all, the privileges of a free, representative Government, and did not, therefore, imagine that we could be deprived of these rights even if there should have existed no promise to impart them; yet it was with some satisfaction we found these objects secured to us by the stipulations of treaty and the faith of Congress pledged for their uninterrupted enjoyment. We expected them from your magnaminity, but were not displeased to see them guaranteed by solemn engagements.
>
> With a firm persuasion that these engagements would be soon fulfilled, we passed under your jurisdiction with a joy bordering on enthusiasm, submitted to the inconveniences of an intermediate dominion without a murmur, and saw the last tie that attached us to our mother country severed with less regret. Even the evils of a military and absolute authority were acquiesced in because it indicated an eagerness to complete the transfer, and place beyond the reach of accident the union we mutually desired. A single magistrate, vested with civil and military, with executive and judiciary powers, upon whose laws we had no check, over whose acts we had no control, and from whose decrees there is no appeal; the sudden suspension of all those forms to which we had been accustomed; the total want of any permanent system to replace them; the introduction of a new language into the administration of justice; the perplexing necessity of using an interpeter for every communication with the officers placed over us; the involuntary errors of necessity committed by judges uncertain by what code they are to decide, wavering between the civil and the common law, between the forms of the French, Spanish, and American jurisprudence, and with the best intentions unable to expound laws of which they are ignorant, or to acquire them in a language they do not understand, these were not slight inconveniences, nor was this state of things calculated to give favorable impressions or realize the hopes we entertained; but we submitted with resignation, because we thought it the effect of necessity; we submitted with patience, though its duration was longer than we had been taught to expect; we submitted even with cheerfulness, while we supposed your honorable body was employed in reducing this chaos to order, and calling a system of harmony from the depth of this confused, discordant mass.
>
> But we can not conceal, we ought not to dissemble, that the first project presented for the Government of this country tended to lessen the enthusiasm which, until that period, had been universal, and to fix our attention on present evils, while it rendered us less sanguine as to the future. Still, however, we wished to persuade ourselves that further inquiry would produce better information; that discussion would establish our rights and time destroy every prejudice that might oppose them. We could not bring ourselves to believe that we had so far mistaken the stipulations in our favor, or that Congress could so little regard us, and we waited the result with anxiety which distance only prevented our expressing before the passing of the bill. After a suspense which continued to the last moment of the session, after debates which only tended to show how little our true situation was known, after the rejection of every amendment declaratory of our rights, it at length became a law, and, before this petition can be presented, will take effect in our country.

Disavowing any language but that of respectful remonstrance, disdaining any other but that which befits a manly assertion of our rights, we pray leave to examine the law for erecting Louisiana into two Territories and providing for the temporary government thereof, to compare its provisions with our rights, and its whole scope with the letter and spirit of the treaty which binds us to the United States.

The first section erects the country south of the thirty-third degree into a Territory of the United States by the name of the Territory of Orleans.

The second gives us a governor appointed for three years by the President of the United States.

The fourth vests in him and in a council, also chosen by the President, all legislative power, subject to the revision of Congress, specially guarding against any interference with public property either by taxation or sale.

And the fifth establishes a judiciary, to consist of a supreme court, having exclusive criminal and original jurisdiction without appeal for all causes above the value of $100, and such inferior courts as the legislature of the Territory may establish. The judges of the superior court are appointed by the President, to continue in office four years.

This is the summary of our constitution; this is so far the accomplishment of a treaty engagement to "incorporate us into the Union, and admit us to all the rights, advantages, and immunities of American citizens." And this is the promise performed, which was made by our first magistrate in your name, "that you would receive us as brothers, and hasten to extend to us a participation in those invaluable rights which had formed the basis of your unexampled prosperity."

Ignorant as we have been represented of our natural rights, shall we be called on to show that this Government is inconsistent with every principle of civil liberty?

Uninformed as we are supposed to be of our acquired rights, is it necessary for us to demonstrate that this act does not "incorporate us in the Union," that it vests us with none of the "rights," gives us no advantages, and deprives us of all the "immunities" of American citizens?

If this should be required, we think neither task will be difficult.

On the first point we need only appeal to your Declaration of Independence; to your Constitution; to your different State governments; to the writings of your Revolutionary patriots and statesmen; to your own professions and public acts, and finally, legislators, to your own hearts, on which the love of civil liberty and its principles are, we trust, too deeply engraved to be ever totally effaced.

A governor is to be placed over us whom we have not chosen, whom we do not even know, who may be ignorant of our language, uninformed of our institutions, and who may have no connections with our country or interest in its welfare.

This governor is vested with all executive, and almost unlimited legislative power; for the law declares that, "by and with the advice and consent of the legislative body, he may change, modify, and repeal the laws," etc. But this advice and consent will no doubt in all cases be easily procured from the majority of a council selected by the President or governor and dependent on him for their appointment and continuance in office; or, if they should prove refractory, the power of prorogation frees him from any troublesome interference until a more prudent selection at the end of the year shall give him a council better suited to his views. The true legislative power, then, is vested in the governor alone; the council operates as a cloak to conceal the extent of his authority, to screen him from the odium of all unpopular acts, to avoid all responsibility, and give us the faint semblance of a representative assembly with so few of its distinguishing features that unless the name were inscribed on the picture it would be difficult to discover the object for which it was intended.

Taxation without representation, an obligation to obey laws without any voice in their formation, the undue influence of the executive upon legislative proceedings, and a dependent judiciary, formed, we believe, very prominent articles in the list of grievances complained of by the United States at the commencement of their glorious contest for freedom. The opposition to them, even by force, was deemed meritorious and patriotic, and the rights on which that opposition was founded were termed fundamental, indefeasible, self-evident, and eternal; they formed, as your country then unanimously asserted, the only rational basis on which government could rest. They were so plain, it was added, as to be understood by the weakest understanding; not capable of alienation, they might always be reclaimed; unsusceptible of change, they were the same at all times, in all climates, and under all circumstances; and the fairest inheritance for our posterity, they should never, it was firmly asserted, they should never be abandoned but with life.

These were the sentiments of your predecessors. Were they wrong? Were the patriots who composed your councils mistaken in their political principles? Did the heroes who died in their defense seal a false creed with their blood? No, they were not wrong. The admiration of the world, the respect still paid to the living, the veneration accorded to the memory of the dead, attest the purity of their principles and prove the truth of those maxims, which rendered their lives a blessing to their country and their deaths glorious in its defense.

Are truths, then, so well founded, so universally acknowledged, inapplicable only to us? Do political axioms on the Atlantic become problems when transferred to the shores of the Mississippi? or are the unfortunate inhabitants of these regions the only people who are excluded from those equal rights acknowleged in your Declaration of Independence, repeated in the different State constitutions, and ratified by that of which we claim to be a member? Where, we ask respectfully, where is the circumstance that is to exclude us from a participation in these rights? Is it because we have not heretofore enjoyed them?

This, on the contrary, would seem a reason to hasten the communication, to indemnify us by a futurity of freedom for the years we have been deprived of it, and enable us, experimentally, to compare the blessings of a free government with the evils of another kind of dominion. But the present situation of affairs forms no pleasing contrast with that which is past; and if we did not count with confidence on a change in the system you have adopted the prospect before us would not afford matter for consolatory anticipation; for though a period is fixed for the absolute government placed over us, though a year may terminate the equally objectionable system which succeeds it, yet what is to follow? Liberty? Self-government? Independence and a participation in the advantages of the Union? If these were offered to us as the reward of a certain term of patience and submission, though we could not acquiesce in the justice of the procedure, we should have some consolation in our misfortunes; but no manifestation of what awaits us at the expiration of the law is yet made.

We may then again become the victims of false information, of hasty remark, or prejudiced opinion; we may then again be told that we are incapable of managing our own concerns, that the period of emancipation is not yet arrived, and that when, in the school of slavery, we have learned how to be free, our rights shall be restored. Upon the topic to which this leads we are reluctant to speak; but misrepresented and insulted, it can not be deemed improper to show how groundless are the calumnies which represent us as in a state of degradation, unfit to receive the boon of freedom. How far any supposed incapacity to direct the affairs of our own country would release the United States from their obligation to confer upon us the rights of citizenship, or upon what principle they are to become the judges of that capacity, might, we believe, fairly be questioned; for we have surely not become less fit for the task since the signature of the treaty than we were before that period; and that no such incapacity was then supposed to exist is evident from the terms of that instrument, which declares that we are to be admitted as soon as possible, according to the principles of the Constitution. If the United States, then, may postpone the performance of this engagement until, in their opinion, it may be proper to perform it, of what validity is the compact, or can that be called one of which the performance depends only on the will of the contracting party?

But if capacity is to be the criterion, and information the preliminary requisite of our admission, let us respectfully inquire what is the nature of this capacity and information, and where it will most probably be found? By the distribution of powers between the General and State Governments the former have the exclusive superintendence of all external relations, and of those internal arrangements which regard the several States in their national capacity; the residuary powers retained by the States are more limited in their operations, and require in their exercise a species of information to be derived only from local sources. The purest principles will be misapplied, the best intentions will be ill directed, the most splendid efforts of genius will prove ineffectual, without an intimate knowledge of the manners, customs, pursuits, and interests of the people to whom they are applied or in whose favor they are exerted.

Should this reasoning be just, it would appear to follow that local information should be preferred in a State legislator to splendid acquirement, when they can not be united; and although we give the representatives of the United States all the superiority they claim and justly merit, yet we can not be accused of presumption in supposing that we know somewhat more of our own country and its local interests than men who are acquainted with it only from report. It will not, we trust, be answered that the members of the council must be selected from the inhabitants; we have already shown what share this council will probably have in legislation, and the residence of one year is certainly too short to attain information or secure anything like a permanence of attachment.

If this local knowledge is necessary to legislate wisely, how much more so is it in order to select discreetly those on whom this task must devolve. The President must necessarily depend on the information of his agents here, without any personal knowledge of the men he must choose. How can he detect imposition or counteract prejudice? How defeat intrigue or secure himself from the reproach of having confided our interests to men in whom we have no confidence? We might contrast these inconveniences with the evident advantages of a choice made by the people themselves, and the conviction would be irresistible that the latter possess exclusively that species of information, with respect to character, conduct, circumstances, and abilities, which is necessary to a prudent choice of their representatives; but we presume enough has been said to show that among a people not absolutely sunk in ignorance the kind of knowledge indispensable to good government or a selection of rulers can only be found at home; that the best abilities and the purest intentions will not replace it abroad, and that without it all legislation is tyrannical and oppressive. Convinced of this truth, we find the advocates for our subjection driven to an argument at which we have before hinted.

To deprive us of our right of election, we have been represented as too ignorant to exercise it with wisdom and too turbulent to enjoy it with safety. Sunk in ignorance, effeminated by luxury, debased by oppression, we were, it was said, incapable of appreciating a free constitution, if it were given, or feeling the deprivation, if it were denied.

The sentiments which were excited by this humiliating picture may be imagined but can not be expressed consistent with the respect we owe to your honorable body. We were willing, however, to ascribe it to the want of correct information, but we could not avoid wondering that it should be so very defective as to have drawn from the names of some districts in our country an argument as to the language spoken in them, which proved fatal to an important amendment to the bill. We could not imagine what had excited the idea of our effeminacy and profusion; and the laborious planter, at his frugal meal, heard with a smile of bitterness and contempt the descriptions published at Washington of his opulence and luxury.

As to the degree of information diffused through the country, we humbly request that some more correct evidence may be produced than the superficial remarks that have been made by travelers or residents, who neither associate with us nor speak our language. Many of us are native citizens of the United States, who have participated in that kind of knowledge which is there spread among the people. The others generally are men who will not suffer by a comparison with the population of any other colony. Some disadvantages as to education in the higher branches of literature have lately attended us, owing to the difficulty of procuring it, but the original settlement of the province was marked by circumstances peculiarly favorable in this respect. It was made at no distant date, at a period when science had attained a great degree of perfection, and from a country in which it flourished. Many individuals possessing property and rank which suppose a liberal education were among the first settlers; and perhaps there would be no vanity in asserting that the first establishment of Louisiana might vie with that of any other in America for the respectability and information of those who compose it. Their descendants now respectfully call for the evidence which proves that they have so far degenerated as to become totally incompetent to the task of legislation.

For our love of order and submission to the laws we can confidently appeal to the whole history of our settlement, and particularly to what has lately passed in those dangerous moments when it was uncertain at what point our political vibrations would stop; when national prejudice, personal interest, factious views, and ambitious designs might be supposed to combine for the interruption of our repose; when in the frequent changes to which we have been subject the authority of one nation was weakened before the other had established its power. In those moments of crisis and danger no insurrection disturbed, no riot disgraced us; the voice of sedition was silent; and before a magistrate was appointed good morals served instead of laws, and a love of order instead of civil power. It is, then, as unjust to tax us with turbulence as it is degrading to reproach us with ignorance and vice. But let us admit that by some train of reasoning to which we are strangers, by some incomprehensible fatality, we are cut off from our national rights and form an unfortunate exception to those general principles on which your revolution and Government are founded; that there is no clause for us in the great charter of nature, and that we must look for our freedom to another source, yet we are not without a claim, one arising from solemn stipulation, and, according to our ideas, full, obligatory, and unequivocal.

The third article of the treaty lately concluded at Paris, declares that "the inhabitants of the ceded territory shall be incorporated into the Union of the United States, and admitted as soon as possible, according to the principles of the Federal Constitution, to the enjoyment of all the rights, advantages, and immunities of citizens of the United States, and in the meantime they shall be protected in the enjoyment of their liberty, property, and the exercise of the religion they profess."

Your honorable body seems to have adopted a construction of this article, which would suspend its performance until some period fixed by the principles of the Constitution, and to have read the article thus: "The inhabitants shall be incorporated into the Union, and admitted to the enjoyment of all the rights, etc., as soon as the principles of the Federal Constitution will permit." We, on the contrary, contend that the words "according to the principles of the Federal Constitution," as they are placed in the sentence, form no limitation, that they were intended as a description of the kind of rights we were to enjoy, or at most relate to the mode in which they were to be conferred, and that the article contemplates no other delay to our reception than will be required to pass the necessary laws and ascertain the representation to which we are entitled.

The inhabitants of the ceded territory are to be "incorporated into the Union of the United States." These words can in no sense be satisfied by the act in question. A Territory governed in the manner it directs may be a province of the United States, but can by no construction be said to be incorporated into the Union. To be incorporated into the Union must mean to form a part of it; but to every component part of the United States the Constitution has guaranteed a republican form of Government, and this, as we have already shown, has no one principle of republicanism in its composition. It is therefore not a compliance with the letter of the treaty, and is totally inconsistent with its spirit, which certainly intends some stipulations in our favor.

For if Congress may govern us as they please, what necessity was there for this clause, or how are we benefited by its introduction? If any doubt, however, could possibly arise on the first member of the sentence, it must vanish by a consideration of the second, which provides for their admission to the rights, privileges, and immunities of citizens of the United States. But this Government, as we have shown, is totally incompatible with those rights. Without any vote in the election of our legislature, without any check upon our executive, without any one incident of self-government, what valuable "privilege" of citizenship is allowed us, what "right" do we enjoy, of what "immunity" can we boast, except, indeed, the degrading exemption from the cares of legislation and the burden of public affairs?

Will it be said that though our right be admitted, yet Congress are to determine the period when it shall be conferred? This, we apprehend, would not only be contrary to the words of the treaty, but would be a solecism in itself. The words "according to the principles of the Federal Constitution, to the enjoyment of the rights," etc., certainly mean to such rights as are secured by the principles of the Constitution, or that we are to be admitted to their enjoyment in such manner as the same principles direct; and at any rate, the words "as soon as possible," can never be construed so as to give a right of deferring it indefinitely. If it may be procrastinated for two years, we see no reason why it may not be deferred for twenty, or a hundred, or totally omitted. That our verbal construction is the true one will be evident from pursuing the other exposition to its consequences. If the treaty means to say that we shall be admitted as soon as the principles of the Constitution will permit, we must look into that instrument to discover what restrictions oppose its immediate performance.

We should naturally expect, if this reasoning be true, to find some period limited before which we could not become members of the Union, some requisites of population or other circumstance to be previously attained or performed; but, on the contrary, the power of admitting new States is vested in Congress, without any restriction whatever that can be applicable to the present case. There is, therefore, nothing that can satisfy these words, if they are construed as a limitation; nothing but the will of Congress is referred to in the Constitution. This construction, then, would prove that the United States had stipulated to admit us into the Union as soon as they should think proper. But a treaty implies a compact, and what compact can arise from a stipulation to perform or not perform, as the party shall deem expedient? This would be such a solecism in argument, such a confusion of terms as must make us doubt the propriety of any construction that leads to them, and we feel ourselves justified in a persuasion that the treaty intended to incorporate us into the Union as soon as the laws necessary for that purpose could be passed.

We know not with what view the territory north of the thirty-third degree has been severed from us and carried with it the distinguishing name which belonged to us and to which we are attached. The convenience of the inhabitants we humbly apprehend would have been better consulted by preserving the connection of the whole province until a greater degree of population made a division necessary. If this division should operate so as to prolong our state of political tutelage, on account of any supposed deficiency of numbers, we can not but consider it as injurious to our rights, and therefore enumerate it among those points of which we have reason to complain.

If there is force in our reclamations on the great question of fundamental rights, if we are entitled to legislate for ourselves as a member of the Union and to establish the forms on which that legislation shall be conducted by framing a constitution suited to our own exigencies, then no further observations need be made on other parts of the law, for the right of local legislation implies that of making the alterations we might deem expedient; then our judiciary would become independent, the executive power would be properly circumscribed, and the legislative guarded against encroachment.

There is one subject, however, extremely interesting to us, in which great care has been taken to prevent any interference even by the governor and council selected by the President himself. The African trade is absolutely prohibited, and severe penalties imposed on a traffic free to all the Atlantic States who choose to engage in it, and as far as relates to procuring the subjects of it from other States, permitted even in the territory of the Mississippi.

It is not our intention to enter into arguments that have become familiar to every reasoner on this question. We only ask the right of deciding it for ourselves, and of being placed in this respect on an equal footing with other States. To the necessity of employing African laborers, which arises from climate and the species of cultivation pursued in warm latitudes, is added a reason in this country peculiar to itself. The banks raised to restrain the waters of the Mississippi can only be kept in repair by those whose natural constitution and habits of labor enable them to resist the combined effects of a deleterious moisture and a degree of heat intolerable to whites. This labor is great, it requires many hands, and it is all-important to the very existence of our country.

If, therefore, this traffic is justifiable anywhere, it is surely in this province, where, unless it is permitted, cultivation must cease, the improvements of a century be destroyed, and the great river resume its empire over our ruined fields and demolished habitations.

Another subject, not indeed growing out of thislaw, but of great moment to us, is the sudden change of language in all the public offices and administration of justice. The great mass of the inhabitants speak nothing but the French; the late Government was always careful, in their selection of officers, to find men who possessed our language, and with whom we could personally communicate; their correspondence with the interior parts of the province was also carried on chiefly in our own language; their judicial proceedings were indeed in Spanish, but being carried on altogether by writing, translations were easily made; at present, for the slightest communication, an interpreter must be procured; in more important concerns our interest suffers from not being fully explained; a phrase, a circumstance seemingly of little moment, and which a person uninterested in the affair will not take the trouble to translate, is frequently decisive and produces the most important effects. That free communication so necessary to give the magistrate a knowledge of the people and to inspire them with confidence in his administration is by this means totally cut off, and the introduction of viva voce pleadings into the courts of justice subjects the party who can neither understand his counsel, his judge, nor the advocate of his opponent to embarrassments the most perplexing and often to injuries the most serious.

We have thus stated the great sources of discontent which have arisen from the measures your honorable body has been pleased to pursue. Did we suppose them the effect of a settled design to oppress, of a determination to disregard our natural and stipulated rights, we are persuaded we should do as much injustice to your views as the strongest expressions would do to our feelings of indignation and grief; but we will not insult you by a suspicion so injurious to your motives; the want of true information with respect to us, opinions founded on a superficial acquaintance with our country, and prejudiced relations with our habits and manners, on reports the most unfounded, even as to our language, these alone have given rise to the measures of which we complain, and when these impressions shall have been effaced we have the fullest confidence that their effects will cease and the language of remonstrance will be changed to that of congratulation and thanks.

Deeply impressed, therefore, with a persuasion that our rights need only be stated to be recognized and allowed, that the highest glory of a free nation is a communication of the blessings of freedom, and that its best reputation is derived from a sacred regard to treaties, we pray you, Representatives of the people, to consult your own fame and our happiness by a prompt attention to our prayer; we invoke the principles of your revolution, the sacred, self-evident, and eternal truths on which your governments are founded; we invoke the solemn stipulations of treaty; we invoke our own professions and the glorious example of your fathers, and we adjure you to listen to the one and to follow the other by abandoning a plan so contradictory to everything you have said and they have taught, so fatal to our happiness and the reputation of your country.

To a generous and free people we ought not to urge any motive of interest, when those of honor and duty are so apparent; but be assured that it is the interest of the United States to cultivate a spirit of conciliation with the inhabitants of the territory they have acquired. Annexed to your country by the course of political events, it depends upon you to determine whether we shall pay the cold homage of reluctant subjects, or render the free allegiance of citizens, attached to your fortunes by choice, bound to you by gratitude for the best of blessings, contributing cheerfully to your advancement, to those high destinies to which honor, liberty, and justice will conduct you, and defending, as we solemnly pledge ourselves to do at the risk of fortune and life, our common Constitution, country, and laws.

We therefore respectfully pray that so much of the law above mentioned as provides for the temporary government of this country, as divides it into two Territories, and prohibits the importation of slaves be repealed.

And that prompt and efficacious measures may be taken to incorporate the inhabitants of Louisiana into the Union of the United States and admit them to all the rights, privileges, and immunities of the citizens thereof.

And your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray for the happiness and prosperity of the United States.

Conformable to the original deposited in the House of Representatives.

P. SAUVE.
L. DERBIGNY.
DESTREHAN.

[NOTE.—See report on this memorial, No. 187.]

The following remonstrance was communicated to the House of Representatives January 4, 1805:

To the honorable the Senate and the honorable the House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled: The remonstrance and petition of the representatives, elected by the freemen of their respective districts in the District of Louisiana, humbly show:

That your petitioners, as well as those whom they represent, were filled with the most lively pleasure at the first rumor of the cession of Louisiana to the United States. When it no longer became us to doubt of the event, and when we were informed that Congress were making laws to organize the newly-acquired territory, we experienced emotions of gratitude, and anticipated for ourselves and our posterity all the blessings which result to the people of the United States from the wisdom and magnanimity of an enlightened and free government.

While we were indulging in these fond expectations, unmixed with distrust or fear, the act of the last session of your honorable Houses, entitled "An act erecting Louisiana into two Territories, and providing for the temporary government thereof," came to our knowledge, and snatched from our eager grasp the anticipated good. The dictates of a foreign government, an incalculable accession of savage hordes to be vomited on our borders, an entire privation of some of the dearest rights enjoyed by freemen! These are the leading features of that political system which you have devised for us; for those very men whom in a solemn treaty you had stipulated to call and treat as fellow-citizens; yet the American colors are hoisted in our garrisons, this far-famed signal of liberty to all, to us alone exhibits a gloomy appearance, and makes us more sensible of the immeasurable interval between us and political happiness. May we not be long doomed, like the prisoners of Venice, to read the word liberty on the walls of prisons. We trust to your wisdom and goodness; you are the guardians of our constitutional rights, and we repose our hopes in you as in the sanctuary of honor.

The right of the people peaceably to assemble and petition the Government for a redress of grievances is declared and warranted by the first amendment to the Constitution. To this Constitution we appeal. We learned from you to resist by lawful means every attempt to encroach on our rights and liberties; the day we became Americans we were told that we were associated to a free people. We can not suppose that the language of men jealous of their freedom can possibly be unwelcome to your ears.

By the third article of the treaty between the United States and the French Republic it is agreed "that the inhabitants of the ceded territory shall be incorporated in the Union of the United States and admitted as soon as possible, according to the principles of the Federal Constitution, to the enjoyment of all the rights, advantages, and immunities of citizens of the United States, and in the meantime they shall be maintained and protected in the free enjoyment of their liberty, property, and the religion they profess."

Your petitioners beg leave to represent to your honorable Houses that according to the principles contained in the third article of the treaty above quoted they conceive that had not Congress thought proper to divide Louisiana into two Territories they should now be entitled by their population to be incorporated in the Union as an independent State.

In the ordinance for the government of the territory of the United States northwest of the river Ohio, article the fifth, it is ordained "that whenever any of the States to be formed out of the Northwestern Territory shall have 60,000 free inhabitants therein such State shall be admitted by its delegates into the Congress of the United States on an equal footing with the original States in all respects whatsoever, and shall be at liberty to form a permanent constitution and State government: Provided, The constitution and government so to be formed shall be republican, and in conformity with the principles contained in these articles; and so far as it can be considered consistent with the general interest of the confederacy such admission shall be allowed at an earlier period, and when there may be a less number of free inhabitants in the State than 60,000."

Your petitioners are informed, moreover, that at the time of the admission of the State of Ohio in the Union, said State, conformable to the last clause of the fifth article of the ordinance above quoted, did not contain more than from thirty-three to forty thousand free inhabitants; which proportion, if adhered to in our case, as it seems to us it should have been, the United States having bound themselves by the third article of the treaty above quoted to admit us as soon as possible into the Union, would have given us a right to be immediately incorporated in the Union of the United States.

We find neither in the Constitution of the United States, nor in the treaty with the French Republic, any provisions by which Congress may have been authorized to make such division.

We find in the treaty nothing but the plain and unequivocal obligation in Congress to incorporate the ceded territory into the Union of the United States, and admit it as soon as possible, according to the principles of the Federal Constitution, to the enjoyment of all the rights, advantages, and immunities of citizens of the United States; but if Congress had a right to divide Louisiana into two Territories last year, they may claim next year the right to divide it into four, into eight Territories. Whenever the population of one of those Territories shall amount to very near the population required by the Constitution of the United States to entitle that Territory to be admitted in the Union as an independent State, Congress may again claim the right to subdivide said Territory. Your petitioners, if the principle should be granted, see no end to the oppression likely to result from such a precedent; and ill-fated Louisiana is condemned to drag along for ages the fetters of an endless Territorial infancy, never (to use the expression of one of the most strenuous advocates of American independence) to be hardened into the bone of manhood.

Under ordinary circumstances your petitioners would have been disposed to sacrifice some of those rights secured to them by a solemn treaty to the convenience of the United States, but the provisory laws enacted by Congress for the district of Louisiana seem to us to be characterized by such an unusual spirit of severity as to oblige your petitioners (if those laws should be enforced) to pray for the unconditional fulfillment of those express engagements contained in the treaty of cession and for those other benefits to which they are entitled as freemen of the United States.

But had not your petitioners the unconditional provisions of a treaty to rest their rights upon, still they might have expected a government founded on more liberal principles from the representatives of a free people, who, on a great occasion, had previously declared to the world these truths to be self-evident: "That all men are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. That whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it and to institute a new government, laying its foundations on such principles and organizing its powers in such form as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness."

Little as we are acquainted with the United States, we know by heart your Declaration of Independence; we recollect the noble deeds of the heroes who bled in your glorious Revolution; we are no strangers to the Constitution of the United States, and the bills of rights, and constitutions of the several States in the Union; and it was upon those highly respectable and absolutely binding authorities that we had anticipated the blessings of freedom.

In order to enforce their pretensions, your petitioners are sensible that it becomes incumbent on them to submit to your honorable Houses a comparative view of the constitutions enacted by Congress at different times for the different Territories which were erected previously to the erection of the district of Louisiana. From that statement, extracted from your own records, your honorable Houses can not help being convinced that the act respecting the district of Louisiana alone, instead of the open, disinterested countenance of a fond, adoptive mother exhibited to our sister Territories, bears the stern, distrustful look of a severe, imperious master; and if your honorable Houses will be so good as to follow your petitioners through this interesting review you will be fully satisfied that the humble remonstrances of your petitioners rest on the rock of American liberty and independence.

Although your petitioners lament that the principle should now appear consecrated by practice, that governors and judges should, contrary to every principle of liberty and to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, which took care to separate them, unite in their hands the three powers, legislative, executive, and judicial, yet your petitioners would have submitted in silence to whatever had been adopted by Congress and submitted to by the people. But arbitrary measures without a precedent call loudly for the most energetic remonstrances to your honorable Houses.

By the twelfth section of the act erecting Louisiana into two Territories, and providing for the temporary government thereof, "the executive power, now vested in the governor of the Indiana Territory, is to extend to and be exercised in Louisiana." Your petitioners beg leave to state that they have read, with the utmost attention, the laws enacted at different times for the provisory government of the several Territories of the Union; and that, far from observing in those laws anything like trusting the governor of a neighboring State or Territory with the government of a newly erected Territory, they find, on the contrary, that Congress paid the most scrupulous respect to the interest and feelings of the inhabitants by the wisest precautions, in not only obliging the governor to reside in the Territory which he governs, but also in obliging him to hold a freehold estate in the same Territory. In the ordinance for the government of the Territory of the United States northwest of the River Ohio, we find this provision: "Be it ordained by the authority aforesaid, that there shall be appointed from time to time by Congress a governor whose commission shall continue in force for the term of three years, unless sooner revoked by Congress; he shall reside in the district, and have a freehold estate therein in 1,000 acres of land, while in the exercise of his office."

In the act authorizing the establishment of a government in the Mississippi Territory we find, "and the President of the United States is hereby authorized to establish therein a government in all respects similar to that now exercised in the Territory northwest of the river Ohio." And in the act to divide the Territory of the United States northwest of the river Ohio, we find: "SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That there shall be established within the said Territory a government in all respects similar to that provided by the ordinance of Congress, passed on the 13th day of July, 1787, for the government of the Territory of the United States northwest of the river Ohio."

In the act erecting Louisiana into two Territories, the executive power in the district of Orleans is vested in a governor, who shall reside in the Territory, etc.

Here, then, are the laws of the three Territories erected previously to the erection of the district of Louisiana, and the laws of the district of Orleans erected by the very same act. Those laws make it necessary for the governor, who is liable to be called upon for the discharge of his official duties by every citizen of the Territory, to reside in said Territory. The law with respect to three of those Territories does not stop there. Congress were fully sensible that the inhabitants of those Territories would place more confidence in men who, like the inhabitants themselves, should have a direct interest in the welfare of the country by their own possessions in it; and to the indispensable condition of residence in the Territory they made it necessary for the governor, while in the exercise of his office, to have a freehold estate therein in 1,000 acres of land.

The extension of the executive power given to the governor of the Mississippi Territory over the district of Orleans can hardly be adduced as a precedent; for ever since the extension of his jurisdiction the governor of the Mississippi Territory has habitually resided in the district of Orleans, of which he was governor in fact, while the administration of the government of the Mississippi Territory was left in the hands of a secretary. But admitting, for argument's sake, that it might be construed into a precedent, your petitioners beg leave to observe to your honorable Houses that the circumstances of the two Territories can not be compared. There are hardly 240 miles from Natchez to Orleans. An easy and speedy communication can be had at all times between the two places, both by land and by water.

The laws of both Territories may be very similar in many important respects, by which the property of the inhabitants may be affected. Slavery prevails in both Territories. On the contrary, the point of Louisiana nearest to the place where the governor of the Indiana Territory makes his habitual residence is not less than 165 miles distant, and there is not a house to be met with on the road. Impassable at many seasons of the year, owing to the number of creeks and rivers which sometimes overflow their banks, sometimes are entirely covered with ice, so that we may conclude that, did not justice and sound policy prohibit the alliance in contemplation, nature itself loudly proclaims its impracticability. Your honorable Houses may judge at what an immense distance some parts of Louisiana must be from the governor, to whom an appeal lies in many cases affecting the property and even the life of individuals.

What would it be if, arriving at Vincennes in those circumstances, an inhabitant of Louisiana was told of his excellency's being at Detroit, 600 miles farther? Besides, the laws of both Territories must be very dissimilar in a number of respects. Slavery can not exist in the Indiana Territory, and slavery prevails in Louisiana; and here your petitioners must beg leave to observe to your honorable Houses that they conceive their property of every description has been warranted to them by the treaty between the United States and the French Republic. Your petitioners are informed that a law respecting slavery has been passed by Congress for the district of Orleans, similar in many respects to the one formerly made for the Mississippi Territory. Is not the silence of Congress with respect to slavery in this district of Louisiana, and the placing of this district under the governor of a Territory where slavery is proscribed, calculated to alarm the people with respect to that kind of property, and to create the presumption of a disposition in Congress to abolish at a future day slavery altogether in the district of Louisiana?

The same wise precaution which induced Congress to make the residence of the governor and the holding of property in the Territory where he exercises his office necessary extends likewise, in the three Territories erected previously to the erection of the district of Louisiana, to the secretary and judges of the said Territories. In the same third section of the ordinance for the government of the territory of the United States northwest of the river Ohio we find "there shall be appointed, from time to time, by Congress, a secretary, whose commission shall continue in force for four years, unless sooner revoked; he shall reside in the district, and have a freehold estate therein in 500 acres of land, while in the exercise of his office," etc.

And again, in the same third section, "there shall also be appointed a court, to consist of three judges, any two of whom to form a court, who shall have a common-law jurisdiction, and reside in the district, and have each therein a freehold estate in 500 acres of land, while in the exercise of their office."

These provisions extend likewise to the Mississippi Territory, as may be seen by a reference to an act authorizing the establishment of a government in the Mississippi Territory; and to the Indiana Territory, as may be seen by a reference to an act of Congress to divide the territory of the United States northwest of the Ohio into two separate governments.

Your petitioners can not consider it as necessary to add any other reasons to those given already, and which appear to them grounded upon justice, in order to determine your honorable Houses immediately to repeal that part of the act providing for the government of the district of Louisiana which places this district under the administration of the governor, secretary, and judges of the Indiana Territory. To say more on the subject might appear to doubt your disposition to do justice to the request of your petitioners, and to your justice alone they are determined to appeal.

How far the extraordinary measures, contemplated by the fourteenth section of the bill erecting Louisiana into two Territories, may, in the opinion of Congress, have been rendered necessary by circumstances, it does not belong to your petitioners to determine. Were those measures only severe, we should oppose to them only the articles of compact between the original States and the people of the Northwestern Territory. Article 2 of said compact expressly declares: "That in the just preservation of rights and property, it is understood and declared, that no law ought ever to be made, or have force in the said Territory, that shall, in any manner whatever, interfere with or affect private contracts or engagements, bona fide and without fraud, previously formed."

In the fourth article of the same compact it is provided "That nonresident proprietors shall in no case be taxed higher than residents."

Here Congress not only acknowledge that they have no right to make a law interfering with or affecting private contracts or engagements, bona fide and without fraud, previously formed, but so tender are they of the right of property that they even go so far as to provide that nonresident proprietors shall in no case be taxed higher than residents.

How different is the condition of the Louisianians. Congress, in the fourteenth section of the act erecting Louisiana into two Territories, seems to acknowledge the validity of some incipient titles to land, for what else can mean these words? "Or to make null and void any bona fide act or proceedings to obtain a grant for lands done by an actual settler, agreeably to the laws, usages, and customs of the Spanish Government." Act or proceedings can not certainly mean anything else than the incipient titles of which we are speaking.

Now, suppose such act or proceeding, agreeably to the laws, usages, and customs of Spain, to have actually taken place, three years were granted by the Spanish Government after having obtained a full or incipient grant for making a settlement thereon. There may be and there are American emigrants who some time previously to the 20th day of December, 1803, may have bought from the original proprietor or rather holder of that incipient title his right to said lands. There may be and there are some who have obtained those incipient titles in their own name and who, ignorant as they must have been of a law not enacted at the time and taking it for granted that Congress would allow the same space of time which was allowed by the Spanish Government for making a settlement upon lands obtained from the Spanish Government, may have returned to the eastern part of the United States in order to prepare everything necessary for their removal and with an intention of coming back to Louisiana in the following spring to settle upon those lands which they had bought bona fide and without fraud.

But perhaps Congress—who in the beginning of the fourteenth section had declared null and void every act and proceeding subsequent to the treaty of St. Ildefonso, made the 1st day of October, 1800, of whatsoever nature toward the obtaining any grant, title, or claim to such lands and under whatever authority transacted or pretended, be and have been from the beginning null, void, and of no effect in law or equity—may insist that since the sovereignty of the lands in Louisiana was vested in the United States the 1st day of October, 1800, and since more than three years elapsed from the 1st day of October, 1800, to the 20th day of December, 1803, they have unquestionably a right to expel from the lands they claim any man who, according to the conditions of the Spanish Government, has made no improvement on the lands he might have obtained on the 20th day of December, 1803; and as to Congress being pleased to confirm such in itself an insufficient title to any actual settler, it is a favor which they may or may not grant without binding themselves to extend it to the representative of the original holder, unless the express condition of an improvement has been fulfilled; but if your honorable Houses give leave to your petitioners to remind you that by the first article of the treaty of St. Ildefonso "His Catholic Majesty promises and engages on his part to cede to the French Republic six months after the full and entire execution of the conditions and stipulations herein relative to His Royal Highness the Duke of Parma the colony or province of Louisiana with the same extent that it has now in the hands of Spain and that it had when France possessed it," it will be manifest to your honorable Houses that the King of Spain did not renounce his sovereignty over Louisiana on the 1st day of October, 1800.

At what period of time an absolute renunciation of Louisiana was made by the King of Spain your petitioners can not ascertain; but they humbly conceive that the sovereignty of the United States in Louisiana did not begin previously to that absolute and unconditional renunciation on the part of the King of Spain.

And if your honorable Houses consider, moreover, that time sufficient must be allowed for the Spanish Government to make known its final treaty with the French Republic to its agents in Louisiana (authorized, your petitioners humbly conceive, to grant lands in its name until they received official notice of the treaty which ceded Louisiana to France), and that it is not probable that a government at a considerable distance can be in a greater hurry to take steps by which it divests itself of the sovereignty of a country than the government which has just acquired that country and which is on the spot has taken to have its sovereignty acknowledged there, and that ten months and ten days elapsed after the treaty between the United States and the French Republic before the United States took possession of Louisiana, your honorable Houses must conclude that there may have been grants for lands obtained from the Spanish Government as to which those who have obtained them may have yet more than one year to comply with the laws, usages, and customs of the Spanish Government.

But your petitioners (we mean the few who have any knowledge at all of the law respecting Louisiana enacted during the last session of your honorable Houses) find themselves placed between the necessity either of not complying with the conditions on which they received lands from the Spanish Government or of acting in direct contradiction to a law enacted by your honorable Houses; and yet what do those grants amount to which were given since the 1st day of October, 1800?

If your honorable Houses will be pleased to call upon your officers in Louisiana for a correct statement of the quantity of land given since that epoch by the officers of the Spanish Government, your honorable Houses will be satisfied that there has been but a very inconsiderable quantity of land thus disposed of, and disposed of chiefly in favor of hard-laboring men, who, owing to the various rumors which ran all over the country ever since the cession of France was spoken of, the country belonging sometimes to Spain, sometimes to France, sometimes to the United States, sometimes to Spain again; at an immense distance from every source of information, very often not understanding the language of their neighbors; discouraged at first from exhausting their whole in making improvements on lands to which they had obtained an incipient title, from what they conceived the precariousness of those titles, likely to result from the interference of such, or such a power to which they were told Louisiana belonged; prevented by your law from complying with the conditions of Spain, when they had not it any longer in their power to doubt that the country was ultimately to remain to the United States, and who, at the very moment their confidence had begun to revive, find themselves, whatever they may do, liable to be punished by a free and enlightened nation for having listened to the dictates of prudence and placed confidence in the United States.

Your petitioners beg leave to observe further that it was only on the 10th day of March, 1804, that the United States took possession of the district of Louisiana; it should seem, of course, that the inhabitants of Louisiana could not be bound by any law of the United States previously, at least, to that epoch: yet your honorable Houses, by a law approved by the President on the 26th day of March, 1804, deprive of his property, and if he does persist in his claim after the 1st day of October next, condemn to a fine not exceeding $1,000 and to suffer an imprisonment not exceeding one year, any man who shall have attempted a settlement on lands to which he may not have obtained, as yet, a complete title, if he has made or attempted a settlement any time posterior to the 20th day of December, 1803; that is, more than three months before the law which condemns him was enacted; and if your honorable Houses reflect that the act erecting Louisiana into two Territories is only to take place on the 1st day of October, 1804, it will result that a man may be guilty by doing an act indifferent in itself, in virtue of a law which is to take place more than nine months subsequently according to the law itself, before the provision of that law can be enforced, and that, too, in the very face of the third article of the ninth section of the Constitution of the United States, which declares "that no bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be passed."

The fifteenth section of the law erecting Louisiana into two Territories authorizes the President of the United States "to stipulate with any Indian tribes owning lands on the east side of the Mississippi and residing thereon for an exchange of lands, the property of the United States, on the west side of the Mississippi, in case the said tribes shall remove and settle thereon."

Had the United States bound themselves to exterminate from the face of the earth every inhabitant of Louisiana, your petitioners do not conceive that they could have taken a more effectual step toward the fulfillment of the engagement than the measures contemplated by the fifteenth section of the law respecting the district of Louisiana; but by the treaty with the French Republic the United States have engaged to maintain and protect us in the free enjoyment of our liberty and property.

Great God! a colony of Indians to maintain and protect us in our liberties and properties! And we hear, at the same time, that troops have been ordered from some parts of this district of Louisiana; and at this moment the garrison of New Madrid is reduced (not from death or sickness, from which they have kept entirely free, but in virtue of orders received from the commanding officer at Fort Massac) to 15 men. In the meantime depredations and assassinations by the Indians have already begun. It is not a week since your petitioners received the news that within 40 miles of this place the Indians had wantonly assassinated three men.

A week before we heard of another set, on the river St. Francis, who committed against one of our scattered settlers every sort of depredation; killing his cattle of every description, destroying all his property of every kind, stripping him and all his family entirely naked, and after glutting themselves with what provisions they found in the house throwing all the rest into the fire. What a time have your honorable Houses chosen for the exchange in contemplation! A plan wearing the most threatening aspect to our lives and properties; a plan not only alarming in its immediate effects, but pregnant with evils of a most dangerous nature in its remote consequences.

Your petitioners humbly conceive that the tribes of Indians living in your populous States can not possibly prove at any time dangerous to their white inhabitants, principally dispersed and scattered as they are upon an immense and in many parts very thickly inhabited territory. But your honorable Houses must be sensible that it would be far otherwise with respect to any habitual residence those now scattered Indians could make on the west side of the Mississippi. The Indians will be by the measure contemplated connected together, and our white settlers must for a very considerable time to come remain dispersed at an immense distance from each other, an easy and defenseless prey to the bloody rage of the merciless tomahawk.

Is this protection? Is this justice? Is this equity? Would your honorable Houses acknowledge in all the powers of Europe the right to collect in one body all their convicts, amounting in number (if such a number could be found) to twice or perhaps three times your own population, and to vomit them on your shores? The narrow and limited view of your petitioners does not allow them to see any the least difference between the conduct of the powers of Europe in that case and your conduct with respect to us; except that in one case the powers of Europe are not bound by any treaty to protect you, and the Government of the United States is bound to protect us. Your petitioners might add that convicts might possibly be reclaimed, but experience teaches us that the Indians, when conscious of their strength, the nearer they approach to civilization the more inclined they feel to resume at the first opportunity their naturally cruel and savage disposition.

Your petitioners do not doubt but that some grand political ends were expected, to be answered by the provision in the fifteenth section of the bill, erecting Louisiana into two Territories, but were those ends as advantageous as in the humble opinion of your petitioners they are disastrous—"Nothing," said Aristides to the Athenians, "could be more advantageous than the proposition of Themistocles, but nothing could be more unjust." Your honorable Houses are well acquainted with the determination of the Athenian people.

Your petitioners have gone through the painful, yet they conceive indispensable, task of remonstrating against grievances, in compliance with the duty they owed to their country, to themselves, and to posterity. Your petitioners are sensible that in the discussion of interests of such magnitude, involving their dearest rights, they may perhaps appear to have deviated a little, either in some of their conclusions or expressions, from the respect they never intended to refuse to the highest authority of their country; but let your honorable Houses remember that your petitioners feel themselves injured, deeply injured. Could they tamely submit, could they even represent with more moderation in such a case, you yourselves would not consider them worthy to be admitted into a portion of the inheritance of the heroes who fought and bled for the independence of America.

Your petitioners ask, first, for the repeal of the act erecting Louisiana into two Territories, and providing for the temporary government thereof.

Second. That legal steps should be immediately taken for the permanent division of Louisiana.

Third. That a governor, secretary, and judges should be appointed by the President, who shall reside in the district of Louisiana and hold property therein to the same amount as is prescribed by the ordinance respecting the territory northwest of the river Ohio.

Fourth. That the governor, secretary, and judges to be thus appointed for the district of Louisiana should in preference be chosen from among those who speak both the English and the French languages.

Fifth. That the records of each county and the proceedings of the courts of justice in the district of Louisiana should be kept and had in both the English and French languages as it is the case in a neighboring country under a monarchical government and acquired by conquest.

Sixth. That supposing the district of Louisiana to be divided into 5 counties, 10 members, 2 from each county, shall be elected by the people having a right to vote in each county according to the rules prescribed by the ordinance respecting the Northwestern Territory every two years, or such another number as Congress may appoint, which said members shall, jointly with the governor, form the legislative council of said district of Louisiana.

Seventh. That Congress would acknowledge the principle of our being entitled, in virtue of the treaty, to the free possession of our slaves, and to the right of importing slaves into the district of Louisiana, under such restrictions as to Congress in their wisdom will appear necessary.

Eighth. That Congress, taking into consideration the distance at which we live from the seat of the General Government, which does not allow the General Government to be informed with respect to the true interest of this country but through the agents of that same Government, Congress should enact a law authorizing this district of Louisiana to send an agent or delegate to Congress, whose powers as to speaking and voting in the House Congress may circumscribe as to them may seem proper.

Ninth. That funds should be appropriated for the support, and lands set apart or bought for the building and maintaining of a French and English school in each county and for the building of a seminary of learning where not only the French and English languages, but likewise the dead languages, mathematics, mechanics, natural and moral philosophy, and the principles of the Constitution of the United States should be taught. Independent of the obligation of spreading knowledge, upon which alone a free government can stand in a country till now unacquainted with your laws and language, a powerful additional interest will result, in the opinion of Congress, from the teaching principally of mathematics and natural philosophy when your honorable Houses reflect that Louisiana abounds with mines of every description which can never be worked to any advantage without the powerful engines supplied by these two sciences.

Tenth. That every private engagement conformable to the laws of Spain, entered into during the time Louisiana was ruled by the laws of Spain, shall be maintained.

Eleventh. That any judgment which was considered as final, according to the Spanish law, shall not be revised by any of the tribunals to be established in Louisiana by the United States.

Twelfth. That any judgment from which an appeal might be had, according to the Spanish law, to any superior tribunal may be appealed from to a tribunal of equal dignity within this Territory or the United States and that a final judgment be had, conformably to the laws of Louisiana at the time the suits were first brought into court.

And now your petitioners trust their remonstrances and petition to the justice of your honorable Houses, and they do not entertain the least doubt but that a nation who in their Declaration of Independence has proclaimed that the governors were intended for the governed, and not the governed for the governors; a nation who complained so loudly of their right of representation, a right inestimable to them and formidable to tyrants only, being violated; a nation who presented it to the world as one of their reasons of separation from England that the King of England had endeavored to prevent the population of their States; a nation who waged war against her mother country for imposing taxes on them without their consent; a nation who styles the Indians "the merciless Indian savages, whose known rule of warfare is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes, and conditions," will not be deaf to their just complaints, and by redressing their grievances will deserve forever the most unbounded affection of the inhabitants of this district of Louisiana.

Elated with these hopes, your petitioners conceive that they can not end their present remonstrance and petition in a more suitable manner than by renewing to you the oath they had administered to them on the first day of their meeting together in general assembly, by the first civil commandant of this district of Louisiana.

And we all swear "to be faithful to the United States, to maintain with all our power the Constitution of the United States, and to obey the laws made and to be made by Congress for the district of Louisiana."

Signed at St. Louis the 29th day of September, A. D. 1804, and of the American independence the twenty-ninth.

Richard Jones Waters, Eligius Fromentin, Deputies of New Madrid; Christopher Hays, Andrew Ramsey, Deputies of Cape Girardeau; J. S. J. Beauvais, P. D. Etchemendy, Deputies of Ste. Genevieve; Charles Gratiot, P. Provenchere, Augustus Chouteau, Richard Caulk, David Musick, Francis Cottard, Deputies of St. Louis and its dependencies; Warren Cottle, A. Reynal, F. Saucier, Timothy Kibby, Deputies of St. Charles and its dependencies.

Mr. TILLMAN. Will the Senator from Ohio allow me a moment?

Mr. FORAKER. Certainly.

Mr. TILLMAN. I would direct the Senator's attention to the fact that that is a protest against Territorial government rather than anything else, and that those people, although there were only 30,000 or 40,000 of them, occupying a very limited area at the mouth of the Mississippi, were then clamoring for admission to the Union upon terms of equality with other citizens, and objecting to carpet-bag government.

Mr. FORAKER. Well, Mr. President, did they or not have cause to object; and if so, who offered them a cause but Thomas Jefferson and the Democratic Congress?

Mr. TILLMAN. The principle involved in governing people by outsiders was the cause, the love inherent in every human soul.

Mr. FORAKER. Who applied the principle——

Mr. TILLMAN. The Government was the cause.

Mr. FORAKER. Who applied the principle in this case but Thomas Jefferson?

Mr. TILLMAN. But he only applied it until the State could be brought in seven years later. You do not give these Filipinos anything. You do not propose to announce your purpose. You say they have no rights you are bound to respect. You have set up a carpetbag government over them. You are levying taxation and spending it by your carpetbag governor, and I do not blame the Filipinos for fighting.

Mr. FORAKER. No promise was given to the people of Louisiana in connection with this legislation that at the end of seven years a different condition would be established for them. They were not told when this governor was sent down to put this statute into operation that if they lived under him possibly for seven years they would then be incorporated into the Union as a State.

Thomas Jefferson and that Democratic Congress did not proceed in such a way, Mr. President. They acquired this territory; they recognized that the people inhabiting it, although an intelligent and capable people, capable of self-government according to their own views of self-government, were yet a people who were not acquainted with our institutions, and that for the time being the 30,000 or 40,000 people should be put under such a character of government as this statute has defined. The point I make in this——

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. FORAKER. In a minute I will yield.

The point I make is that they did not stop to consult them; but this Government, which was responsible for the government there, responsible for the protection of life, for the protection of property, for law and order, said we here would judge what kind of institutions they should have to start with; and we gave them these institutions. They raised a protest against it. They said it was tyranny; but Jefferson persisted in his way.

What I point out to the Senator from South Carolina is, that that was precisely the same principle as that which is being applied to the Philippines. We are responsible for government there; we are responsible for law and order there; we are responsible for life and for the protection of property there; and we, being so responsible, are undertaking to restore law and order, to establish a government that will answer the purposes that are to be subserved. Those purposes are the protection of life and property, the promotion of liberty, civilization, education, and everything else that will ennoble that people.

Mr. CARMACK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. FORAKER. Yes.

Mr. CARMACK. I want to suggest to the Senator from Ohio that at some very early time—I have forgotten the exact year—I think an act was passed providing that when it should have arrived at a certain population it should be admitted to statehood in the Union.

Mr. MONEY. That was in March, 1804.

Mr. FORAKER. That was true as to Louisiana.

Mr. CARMACK. One suggestion that I want to make to the Senator from Ohio is that those people were not objecting to annexation to the United States, but they were objecting to the particular form of law and the particular form of government, and they were appehensive, because of its acts, that they would not secure the rights which had been guaranteed to them in the treaty. I do not know how many of the people were engaged in that protest, but the protest was very early answered, and they were satisfied that the United States Government intended to give them all the rights that were guaranteed.

If the Senator will allow me just one moment further, I will suggest to him that there is a very great difference in the two cases. In the case of the people in the Louisiana Territory, they had the guaranteed right of statehood, of citizenship, and of full constitutional protection. For the people in the Philippine Islands there is no guaranty whatever, and no indication of anything, except that they are to remain permanently as a colony and to be governed as subjects, without any constitutional rights whatever. So I do not see that the two cases are exactly the same.

Mr. FORAKER. Well, Mr. President, there are some differences, of course, but all the differences there are were in favor at the time of giving that people representation in the government and participation in the selection of their officials; and yet, notwithstanding they were an intelligent people, notwithstanding they were practically a part of our own people, although they had lived under the civil law and under other institutions, and were not familiar with ours, and although they were all that would seem to commend them as fit and as worthy to be allowed to govern themselves, yet Thomas Jefferson and the Democratic party of that day did not see fit to give them that privilege, but withheld it from them. It does not make any difference, Mr. President, that subsequently they were incorporated into the Union. We are talking about how they commenced, and how they were dealt with at the beginning. We are only now beginning in the Philippines, and are so far but following precedent.

Mr. CARMACK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Ohio yield?

Mr. FORAKER. Yes.

Mr. CARMACK. I will say that they commenced by guaranteeing to those people full rights of American citizenship and incorporation into this Union. That is the way they began, and we have not begun in any such way in the Philippine Islands.

Mr. FORAKER. It is true that they were annexed with the guaranty that ultimately they would be admitted into the Union and guaranteed all the privileges that belonged to American citizens, yet they entered a solemn protest against being governed, even for the time being, in that sort of way. It is not necessary to debate about that.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

Mr. FORAKER. I hope the Senator will not detain me longer. I mention this simply to show that to establish a government in territory acquired in the way in which the Philippine territory has been acquired, without stopping to hold an election, without stopping to consult the inhabitants there as to who shall be their governor or what shall be their form of government, is not an unheard-of thing in the history of this Government; that it is but following the precedent which the Senator from South Carolina himself cited as a fit and worthy precedent to be followed. We are not denying anybody any liberty. We are but following in that regard in Democratic footsteps—not modern Democratic footsteps, but old Democratic footsteps. There is a great deal of difference between them.

Mr. MONEY. I should like to ask the Senator before he takes his seat what was the date of that protest?

Mr. FORAKER. It is dated December 31, 1804.

Mr. TILLMAN. In what document is it found?

Mr. FORAKER. I read from Senate Document No. 147, Fifty-sixth Congress, first session, which is a compilation of various Territorial organic laws. The particular document to which I first called attention is entitled: "Appendix. Extracts from American State papers, volume 1. No. 183. Remonstrance of the people of Louisiana against the political system adopted by Congress for them."

The other immediately follows it in this work, and it is found at page 242, under the following heading:

[NOTE.—See report on this memorial, No. 187.]

[The following remonstrance was communicated to the House of Representatives, January 4, 1805.]

To the honorable the Senate and the honorable the House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled: The remonstrance and petition of the representatives elected by the freemen of their respective districts in the District of Louisiana humbly show.

Mr. MONEY. Mr. President, it is quite late, and I am not disposed to take any more time of the Senate, particularly as my friend from Ohio has admonished me that I have already spoken too much.

Mr. FORAKER. I beg the Senator's pardon. I did not admonish the Senator, if he will allow me to correct him, that he had spoken too much. What I said was that I wanted to admonish him not to take too much of my time.

Mr. MONEY. Ah!

Mr. FORAKER. And I appealed to him not to do so, in view of the fact that he had himself a pretty liberal chance at the floor this afternoon.

Mr. MONEY. I do not think I have spoken an hour altogether; but it does not make any difference.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, we do not know what is going on here. We can not hear anything in this part of the Chamber that is being said.

Mr. MONEY. I only want to say a few words about the history of the early possession and occupancy of the Louisiana territory by the United States.

After the purchase you will recollect that as to the territory which had been sold or had passed by treaty from Spain to Louisiana, Spain having occupied all that territory and, having been its sovereign for sixty-five years, there had been no formal surrender of the territory of Louisiana to the French. Then, on October 31, the Spanish superintendent delivered over to the French superintendent the government of the territory, and the French superintendent then transferred it to the American superintendent. In the meanwhile a promise had been made to those people, which had been provided for in the treaty, that they should come into the Union with all the rights that pertained to citizenship of the United States in any of the States. Mr. Jefferson in his message particularly congratulated the people of the United States that so many people should be admitted to the blessings of liberty, to use his expressive phrase.

The ceded territory was divided into two Territories, as has been recited by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER]; Territorial governments were established until Louisiana came into the Union as a State in 1810 or 1811, if I am not mistaken, and the Territories had their officers appointed subsequently, as I said. It could not be very well expected that an American could understand the French language—we are in the habit of speaking only our own tongue, and we do not speak that very well generally—but the governor of the Territory of Mississippi, nearest to Louisiana and more acquainted with it than any other, was appointed to that office, and the officers appointed were such as were conducive to good order, and good order was maintained there; the rights of the people were respected; and this protest which has been put on file here was the expression of the discontent of only a few people.

I have very clearly in my mind, although I can not recall the date, that a subsequent enactment by Congress met the approval of the people of Louisiana, and made them satisfied with the Territorial government which had existed for such a very short time. It was stated in every single enactment, in every proclamation, and in every message of the President that their rights would be respected just the same as those of citizens of the United States in any State. They had that assurance all the time.

The objection made to the governor that he did not understand their language was perhaps well placed; but it was a new thing to us to have Territories at all and to appoint governors. There had been none before that time, except perhaps in the Northwestern Territory, as it was called, but since that time the same thing has been done in this Administration. We have had a man appointed governor of a Territory who, I am informed, does not understand the language, although he is a native himself. I mean the governor of New Mexico. I understand he does not speak the Spanish language, and yet that is the language of the courts of that Territory, and no lawyer can make a speech there in English, except with an interpreter back of him to interpret the speech, so the jury may understand it. But that was not any bar to the appointment or confirmation of that distinguished gentleman, for I believe he was confirmed by the Senate.

Mr. President, the difference is so great between these cases that there is no parallel. The lines do not run together at all, but diverge and run from each other as fast as they can.

The citizens of Louisiana for a time were exceedingly dissatisfied with the assurances which had been made and treated them with profound contempt and disbelief. You will all recollect, for you have no doubt read it, that charming novel of Cable's called The Grandissimes, in which the little Louisiana Creole was continually referring to his picture, which he called the picture of Louisiana refusing to enter the Union. Cable was characterizing a certain class of people at that time in giving the story of those old Creole days.

Mr. MASON. I ask the indulgence of the Senate for just one moment for the consideration of the bill (S. 3518) granting a pension to Nodine A. Turchin, which is an emergency case. I ask unanimous consent that it be taken up and passed at this time. It has been favorably reported by the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PATTERSON. Will the Senator from Illinois permit me a moment?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. MASON. Yes, sir.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President, I desire to discuss somewhat the treason and sedition laws which have been referred to during the progress of this discussion, and incidentally therewith some of the testimony that up to this time has been adduced before the Committee on the Philippines. It is too late now to enter upon that discussion.

Mr. TELLER. I ask that my colleague [Mr. PATTERSON] may have the floor for to-morrow morning, and that the Senator from Illinois [Mr. MASON] may now be permitted to go on with his bill.

Mr. BATE. I have already bespoken the floor for to-morrow. I have given notice to that effect.

Mr. PATTERSON. If that be the understanding, let the Senator from Tennessee speak first.

Mr. BATE. I do not want to speak long.

Mr. PATTERSON. The Senator from Tennessee may speak first, and I be recognized afterwards.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Two Senators have given the Chair notice—not the Senate—that they desire to speak for some twenty or twenty-five minutes each the first thing in the morning.

Mr. TELLER. I want to say that that is not giving notice to the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair so understands it.

Mr. BATE. I ask permission now that I may be permitted to go on to-morrow morning.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair has no power whatever in the premises. The Senator simply gives notice. The Chair will, under the rule, recognize whoever is first on the floor.

Mr. PATTERSON. I shall be very glad, indeed, to yield to the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BATE] in the morning if the Chair will recognize me, and ask that I be permitted to follow the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. BATE. Very well; that is very agreeable to me.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair, under the rule, will be obliged to recognize whatever Senator first addresses the Chair. Ordinarily in the Senate a Senator gives notice; the courtesy of the Senate recognizes that he has given notice, and the Chair recognizes him; but the Chair has no power in the premises.

Mr. COCKRELL. If this were unfinished business, Mr. President, and did not come up until a certain hour, the Senator who holds the floor now would hold it then, as I understand it, under the practice of the Senate; but this bill will come up in the morning hour, and the presiding officer can not bind himself to recognize anyone at that time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. He can not.

Mr. TELLER. I do not suppose that either of the Senators expects the Chair to agree to recognize him, but there has always been a courtesy in the Senate that when a Senator gives notice that he wants to speak that notice will be respected. He gives notice not to the Chair, but to the Senate. Now, the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BATE] gives notice that he wants to speak in the morning.

Mr. BATE. I have already done so.

Mr. TELLER. The Senator has already done so.

Mr. BATE. But I withdraw the notice, sir.

Mr. TELLER. My colleague [Mr. PATTERSON] is a member of the Committee on the Philippines and is very desirous to speak. I do not see any reason why both Senators may not give the notice now, the Senator from Tennessee that he will speak at the first opportunity to-morrow, and my colleague that he will follow the Senator from Tennessee. That is the usual custom. I have no doubt that every Senator will respect that notice.

Mr. PATTERSON. Let me make a very short statement. I would not ask to speak at all upon this question were it not for the fact that my colleague and some members of the minority of the Committee on the Philippines have particularly requested that I should address myself to that feature of the discussion which has been progressing. I have given some particular attention to the laws to which I have referred and concerning which I have offered an amendment which is pending.

I have also given some considerable attention to the testimony which has, up to this time, been given before the Committee on the Philippines. Had not the minority members of the committee requested that I should discuss those features of the controversy I should not have sought the attention of the Senate at all.

Mr. BATE. I think it proper that the Senator from Colorado, as a member of the Committee on the Philippines, should address the Senate upon this question. I ask to be recognized, and then I shall be ready to yield to the Senator.

Mr. COCKRELL. The Senator from Illinois [Mr. MASON] made a request.

NADINE A. TURCHIN.

Mr. MASON. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill to which I referred a few moments ago, being the bill (S. 3518) granting a pension to Nodine A. Turchin.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Illinois?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Nadine A. Turchin, widow of John B. Turchin, late colonel Nineteenth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and brigadier-general, United States Volunteers, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Nadine A. Turchin."

Mr. ALLISON. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 25 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Thursday, February 20, 1902, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WEDNESDAY, February 19, 1902.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

PRINTING AND BINDING FOR A COMMITTEE.

Mr. TAWNEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which I ask the Clerk to read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Industrial Arts and Expositions be authorized to have such printing and binding done as may be required in the transaction of its business.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution just read. Is there objection?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I do not like to object to this, but I can not see what use on earth that committee has for what is asked in the resolution.

Mr. TAWNEY. I will state that the committee have had a hearing on the question of the amount necessary to be appropriated to make a Government exhibit at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. We have heard the members of the government board only. That testimony was desired for the benefit of the Committee on Appropriations, and also for the benefit of the Committee on Industrial Arts and Expositions. That testimony has been taken, and it is simply for the purpose of publishing that testimony for the use of both the Committee on Appropriations and the Committee on Industrial Arts and Expositions that I make this request.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I was going to say, further, that I am quite sure a general right to print would not be abused while the present efficient chairman has that office, but we do not know how soon some other gentleman might be chairman of that committee in some other Congress, and it might then be abused, it seems to me.

Mr. TAWNEY. This applies only to the present Congress.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I know, but it is such a precedent as might be followed in the next. I was going to say that the gentleman might be content with leave to print this hearing.

Mr. TAWNEY. That is practically all that is desired.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I will not make any objection myself.

There was no objection.

The resolution was agreed to.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows;

To Mr. TOMPKINS of New York, for ten days, on account of sickness.

To Mr. HEDGE, for one week, on account of important business.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for the further consideration of House bill 11353, the Indian appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for the further consideration or the Indian appropriation bill, with Mr. MONDELL in the chair.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I should like to know how much time has been consumed by the two sides.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York has consumed one hundred and thirteen minutes, and the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. LITTLE] one hundred and sixty-two minutes.

Mr. SHERMAN. That leaves nearly three hours, I suppose, that I would be entitled to, and the gentleman on the other side two hours; that would come somewhere near balancing it. I understand that the gentleman from Arkansas would like to occupy some time now himself. Am I correct?

Mr. LITTLE. Yes; I would like to proceed at this time.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Before the gentleman proceeds, I ask unanimous consent of the committee that when they reach the point on this bill, under the five-minute rule, which provides for certain Indians on the Gila River, in Arizona, that instead of taking any time in general debate as a member of the committee, I may have, if necessary at that time, upon that part of the bill, thirty minutes for debate on that matter alone. I prefer it then because it will be the matter directly before the committee for action—a very important measure, as I deem it—and I would like the unanimous consent of the committee that such order be made.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not object. I am entirely willing the gentleman should have his thirty minutes when we get to that portion of the bill to-morrow, under the five-minute rule.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. That is the time when I want it.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have no objection. I just wanted to understand what the gentleman wishes.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. LITTLE. Mr. Chairman, I desire at this time to use a few minutes in the discussion of a question more or less germane to the bill; at least, germane to the general Indian problem. I shall, on this occasion, address myself exclusively to the conditions in the Indian Territory, known as the Territory of the Five Civilized Tribes.

We have in that country a condition unparalleled, I think, in the entire history of this Republic. We have a condition there that cries aloud to this Congress for some affirmative and aggressive remedial action. As is known by most of the members of this House, there are five tribes of Indians in this Territory, amounting to about 80,000 people. There is also in this country a population, shown by the last census, of 391,960 American citizens, who have no part in the tribal affairs of the government of the Territory and are without government.

The following are the official figures:

POPULATION OF THE TERRITORY.

During the year the Twelfth United States Census was completed, and the information procured from the official results of such census shows the following concerning the Territory, including whites, Indians, and negroes:

Seminole Nation	3,786
Creek Nation	40,674
Cherokee Nation	101,754
Choctaw Nation	99,681
Chickasaw Nation	139,260
Total, Five Civilized Tribes	385,155
Quapaws, Senecas, etc	6,805
Total for the Territory	391,960

Of the above about 84,000 are considered members of the Five Civilized Tribes, and the following is the approximate number belonging to each tribe from information obtained from the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes:

Tribe.	Population.	Total.
Choctaw	16,000
Choctaw Freedmen	4,250
		20,250
Chickasaw	6,000
Chickasaw Freedmen	5,500
		11,500
Creek	10,000
Creek Freedmen	5,000
		15,000
Cherokee	31,000
Cherokee Freedmen	4,000
		35,000
Seminole		2,757
Total		84,507

This Territory comprises 31,400 square miles. It is not, as is understood by a great many, a country similar to that of the various other Indian reservations throughout the United States, but it is a country peculiar to itself. It is not only an Indian country, but it is a great country where the development is not only phenominal but astounding.

With a population now of some 400,000 people there we find not a solitary emblem of government, except the limited tribal governments of the Indians, the municipal government in the cities and towns, and the government represented by the Federal courts. I believe that the time has come in the history of that region when its citizenship, its intelligence, its progress, and its property interests demand at the hands of Congress that it be given at least a liberal form of Territorial government.

In the year 1901 they produced in that country 250,000 bales of cotton, with corn, oats, and other cereals in like proportion. This country is great not only in its agricultural interests, developed largely by American citizens, but great in its mineral resources. In the year 1901 it produced 2,391,688 tons of merchantable coal and 33,900 tons of merchantable coke. It has in operation to-day 280 first-class coke ovens in the midst of the numerous and great coal-mining interests of that country.

Not only this, but there are more than 1,000 miles of railroad in active operation and more than 2,000 miles of telephone and telegraph lines. There are in this country 90 incorporated cities and towns having a population of from two to five thousand inhabitants each, by the census of 1900, and many of the smaller towns have doubled their population since that time. The fact is, the growth of population in this country can scarcely be measured by any normal rule. I insert a list of the incorporated cities and towns, giving their population.

Population of the incorporated towns of Indian Territory, 1900.

Towns.	Population.	Towns.	Population.
Adair	268	Leon	221
Afton	606	Lonegrove	215
Ardmore	5,681	McAlester	646
Bartlesville	698	McGee	209
Berwyn	276	Mannsville	198
Bluejacket	308	Marietta	842
Bokoshe	153	Marlow	1,016
Bristow	626	Miami	1,527
Caddo	930	Muldrow	465
Cameron	316	Muskogee	4,254
Canadian	522	Nowata	498
Catoosa	241	Oakland	701
Checotah	805	Oologah	308
Chelsea	566	Orr	222
Chickasha	3,209	Paoli	234
Claremore	855	Pauls Valley	1,467
Coalgate	2,614	Peoria	144
Collinsville	376	Pontotoc	366
Comanche	547	Poteau	1,182
Connerville	189	Pryorcreek	495
Cornish	307	Purcell	2,277
Cowlington	272	Purdy	200
Cumberland	343	Ravia	128
Davis	1,346	Rush Springs	518
Dougherty	437	Salisaw	965
Duncan	1,164	Sapulpa	891
Durant	2,989	Silo	246
Earl	225	South McAlester	3,479
Elmore	192	Spiro	543
Emet	342	Sterrett	575
Eufaula	757	Stilwell	779
Fairland	499	Sulphur Springs	1,198
Fort Gibson	617	Tahlequah	1,482
Gans	136	Tamaha	237
Grove	314	Thackerville	154
Hanson	182	Tulsa	1,390
Hartshorne	2,352	Vian	296
Heavener	234	Vinita	2,339
Hickory	282	Wagoner	2,372
Holdenville	749	Webbers Falls	211
Howe	626	Welch	334
Johnson	204	Westville	296
Kemp	221	Wister	313
Lehigh	1,500	Wyandotte	224
Lenapah	154	Wynnewood	1,907

All told, they have in this country more than 150 cities and towns, the number beyond 90 being the smaller ones. In those cities and towns they have over 40 banks in actual operation, with a capital of more than $3,000,000, with deposits of over $7,000,000. When you come to estimate the taxable property of that country there can be no intelligent estimate made that will reach a sum less than $50,000,000.

Between the school ages of 5 and 20 there is a population of 156,416. I insert a detailed statement from the census showing the population of school ages and its character.

Scholastic population between ages of 5 and 20 years, inclusive, in Indian Territory.

Nations.	Whites.		Indians.		Negroes.		Total.
	Males.	Females.	Males.	Females.	Males.	Females.	Males.	Females.
Cherokee	13,422	12,606	5,556	5,663	1,809	1,994	20,787	20,263
Chickasaw	26,836	24,651	1,299	1,330	1,930	1,872	30,065	27,853
Choctaw	16,161	15,597	2,237	2,308	1,996	1,936	20,394	19,841
Creek	4,812	4,621	1,616	1,684	1,449	1,473	7,877	7,778
Seminole	243	195	341	356	208	215	792	766
Total	71,474	57,670	11,049	11,341	7,392	7,490	79,915	76,501

For this school population, outside of the Indian population, there are no school opportunities except the limited opportunities that have been temporarily provided by the noncitizens in the towns and cities. There are in that country more than 80,000 children of the same bone and blood as ourselves, who are without any school privileges at all, and it has been and is a crying shame, in my judgment, that some measure of relief has not been afforded.

I believe that with a Territorial government the taxable wealth of that country, excluding the nontaxable property belonging to the Indians, is ample and abundant, with such personal and privilege taxes as may be legitimately and justly imposed, to furnish at least moderate means of common-school education to the thousands of children that are growing up without any of these benefits.

I believe the agitation for a State government for the Indian Territory will only have a tendency to delay any relief. Too many believe that conditions are not ready for the formation of the Indian Territory into a State. I wish to God they were believed to be so. I believe that not only the Indian Territory, but Oklahoma, New Mexico, and Arizona should be admitted into statehood. [Applause.]

I believe it but fair to the citizens of that country, but fair to that section of the country. I believe the Indian Territory ought to be put on the road that will lead to ultimate independent statehood. I believe that Oklahoma is now ready for statehood, both in wealth and population. [Loud applause.] The Indian Territory is ready, so far as population and wealth are concerned, but the conditions there, in my judgment, will not justify it, or at least make it beyond the hope of man that it should be accomplished at this time.

But I believe that this Congress should give to the people of the Indian Territory a liberal form of government, such as their conditions demand and justify. I believe the crying need is not only that, but that great wealth and population stands to-day without a mouthpiece on the floor of this House. For six years I have had pending before Congress a bill to simply give them a representative upon the floors of Congress. Give them a mouth, so that they may speak; give them a tongue, in which their wants and their rights may be made known upon the floor of this House.

I do not believe that there is a man in this Congress, if he understood the circumstances of this country and the immediate conditions, but would grant them representation and self-government. But when men think of the Indian Territory, as they do of the ordinary Indian reservation of the West, the analogy is no more apt than in comparing the ordinary reservation and its population with that of any of the Western States.

You may travel to-day through the great State of Kansas and through the great State which I have the honor in part to represent, or through the State of Missouri and through the Indian Territory to the empire State of Texas, and unless you know or have some one to tell you, from the improvements in the cities and towns and the electric lights that you see as you pass through the cities and towns you will not know when you pass beyond the bounds of a State.

I believe that these conditions ought to be met justly, ought to be met fairly, and ought to be met promptly. It is not necessary to deprive the tribal Indian of any right that he now enjoys; but he himself has no representative, strange to say, though a citizen of the United States, declared so by act of Congress, to have all the rights and privileges of an American citizen. It is not necessary to abolish the present limited tribal forms of government; they may exist as they exist now in some of the Territories and States.

There will be and must be some protection for the great number of people, for the great amount of property, permanently located in that country under the authority of Congress. With cities of from 6,000 down to towns of 150 inhabitants, ranging in number something over 150 of these towns, with nothing but a simple, meager municipality, many of them without that, they have been authorized and have purchased, many of them, their lots as fast as they can be put on the market, the ground upon which they live.

The towns have been segregated; the property has been put on the market, and this vast number of people in that country are without any representative here, without any government save such as we give them through four different district courts and the court officers. These courts need not be disturbed by the Territorial government. The form and the conditions there can easily be met, and will not be a burden either to the courts or the people there, and it will afford some opportunities in the cities and in the country for the establishment of schools that will give the children an opportunity to become intelligent citizens of our common country.

I only want to submit these few remarks in the hope that the condition of that country might attract the intelligent attention of members of Congress, to lead them to investigate those conditions. If you do, I have but little hesitancy in saying that I believe any disinterested man will concur in my views. I have no personal interest in that country, but they have no representative here. Those of us who are more familiar with the conditions, whose districts border upon this great country, are continually impressed with the conditions there, and it becomes in a measure our duty to speak.

I hope Congress may at this term give unto the Indian Territory a liberal form of Territorial government that will meet the conditions there, and if statehood can not be acquired in any other way, although reluctantly, voicing, as we know, the sentiments of the people, while they do not want single statehood, they would accept anything as an escape from the conditions which exist there to-day. [Loud applause.]

Mr. SHERMAN. I yield fifteen minutes to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. BROMWELL. Mr. Chairman, there is an old story told of the Irishman who was arrested for assaulting a Jew. The excuse he made was that the Jews killed Christ, and upon being informed that that took place nineteen hundred years ago his further excuse was that he had just heard of it. [Laughter.] I can hardly make a similar excuse, Mr. Chairman, for not referring before this to the remarks of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WHEELER], as I had heard of them shortly after they were made, but business before other committees has so completely taken my time since then that it was impossible for me to make the few comments which I now desire to make upon portions of that gentleman's speech.

I was reminded particularly of the gentleman from Kentucky by a little poem which is said to have been delivered in his State, in the city of Lexington, by Colonel Mulligan. I have two or three verses which I have copied and desire to read, and then to add a couple of verses later, which were not in the original poem, but were prepared by an unknown poet. Those for which Colonel Mulligan is responsible read as follows:

Orators are the grandest
In Kentucky;
Officials are the blandest
In Kentucky;
Boys are all the fliest,
Danger ever nighest,
Taxes are the highest,
In Kentucky.

The dove's notes are the saddest
In Kentucky;
The streams dance on, the gladdest,
In Kentucky.
Hip pockets are the thickest,
Pistol hands the slickest,
Cylinders turn quickest,
In Kentucky.

Song birds are the sweetest
In Kentucky;
Thoroughbreds the fleetest
In Kentucky;
The mountains tower proudest,
Thunder peals the loudest,
The landscape is the grandest,
And politics the darnedest,
In Kentucky.

[Laughter.]

So much for Colonel Mulligan, and it is particularly the last line of this poem which reminded me that the gentleman from Kentucky had made a speech which illustrated it most fully, that "politics are the darnedest in Kentucky." [Laughter.]

Mr. WHEELER. Will the gentleman allow me an interruption?

Mr. BROMWELL. Yes.

Mr. WHEELER. I desire to say that the author of that poem telegraphed me his congratulations and indorsement of my remarks on this floor. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. BROMWELL. I am glad the gentleman who wrote the poem fathers the sentiments of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WHEELER]. Possibly he will not indorse the sentiments of the two verses I will hereafter read, which Colonel Mulligan is not the author of.

Mr. Chairman, we have no Indians nor savages in Ohio. The general impression is that while there may not be many Indians in Kentucky, there are still some specimens of savages there. There are neither Indians nor savages in my district, but we do have some of the class referred to by the gentleman from Kentucky as "little Dutchmen," and I want to say, Mr. Chairman, that it is hardly necessary for me on the floor of this House to say that the "Dutchmen," as the gentleman calls them, or Germans as we know them, in Cincinnati form an element of our population which has contributed more to the prosperity, the growth, the reputation, and the honor of the city of Cincinnati than any other class of our citizens.

In the days of the civil war they sent forth their thousands to battle for the flag. In the days of peace they have built up the establishments and industries of our city, and have added to the reputation and wealth of the country. The old Ninth Ohio, made up almost entirely of Germans, under Fighting Bob McCook, and Hecker's brigade of German regiments made records at Perryville, Chickamauga, and on other battlefields of this country that no native-born regiments can excel. Now, Mr. Chairman, I know the gentleman from Kentucky claims that he has had the indorsement of Germans as to his remarks. I know I express the sentiments of the Germans in Cincinnati when I say that although they left Europe to get away from a system which was not agreeable to them, they still carry in their hearts a memory and love for the old fatherland; they still honor the music of Germany and the poetry of Germany, and still take pride in her great achievements. They have become American citizens; but no less they look back to that land across the sea, where their fathers and mothers and ancestors came from, and feel a pride for Germany.

Mr. Chairman, I do not intend to make a long speech upon this subject. It is not necessary for me to defend the Germans in Cincinnati or the Germans in this country against the language used by the gentleman from Kentucky. But I do desire to add now the other two verses, which seem to be entirely apropos, and which, as I say, were not written by Colonel Mulligan, but by some unknown poet, still unheard of in the halls of fame.

Mr. WHEELER. Will the gentleman read to the House a letter which I hold in my hand, just received, from a gentleman born in Germany, but now a citizen of Indiana?

Mr. BROMWELL. I have no objection to the gentleman's reading anything in his own time.

Mr. WHEELER. No; I do not care to occupy the time just now. This is a letter which comes to me in my mail from a gentleman born in Germany, but now a citizen of the State of Indiana, commenting upon the utterances of myself on this floor.

Mr. BROMWELL. The gentleman knows well enough how to get the floor in his own time to introduce telegrams or letters of congratulation, if he has them, from anybody on earth.

Mr. WHEELER. I do not desire to do that; I simply want the gentleman to state the facts of the case.

Mr. BROMWELL. I do not pretend to know all the facts in regard to your telegrams or your letters. But I have two verses here of this poem which I wish to finish reading, and then I will take no further time of the House. These two verses, as I have said, are from an unknown poet:

'Tis no doubt an honor to be born
In Kentucky;
And 'tis sweet to drink her corn
In Kentucky;
But her public men get frisky
When they think upon her whisky
And do things that are risky
In Kentucky.
Some of her sons are peaches,
In Kentucky;
But they do make foolish speeches
In Washington.
They will wish they hadn't said them,
And the papers hadn't spread them,
And the Germans hadn't read them
In Kentucky.

[Laughter and applause.]

Mr. SHERMAN. I now yield twenty minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CORLISS].

Mr. CORLISS. Mr. Chnirman, last week I presented the legal status of this subject, covering the enactments of Congress and the conditions imposed by the President and ratified by Congress, under which all cable lines have heretofore been permitted to land upon our shores. I also presented the ingenious modifications and illustrated the effect of the combination of the Eastern Extension Cable Company with its American ally.

To-day I propose to discuss the cable monopoly of the East, the effect of the exclusive rights held by this monopoly, as well as the effect upon the "open door" in China.

CABLE MONOPOLY OF THE EAST.

The Eastern and Eastern Extension Cable companies, with their allied lines, embrace a system which aggregates nearly 70,000 nautical miles of cable, covering the most extensive and powerful cable and telegraph monopoly in the world. Their lines reach every continent except North America, and the purpose of the union with its American ally, the Commercial Pacific Cable Company, is to encircle the globe and extend the influence and advantage of its present monopoly in the Pacific Ocean and the Far East.

Mr. HENRY C. SMITH. Will my colleague state whether the bill he is now advocating is in the interest of the Western Union Telegraph Company?

Mr. CORLISS. I am very glad to have that question asked at this time. In the Fifty-fifth Congress there were pending two measures, one in behalf of what was known as the Pacific Cable Company, controlled by Mr. Scrymser, who sought to obtain the right to lay this cable with a subsidy; and another company, in whose interest the Commercial Company seemed to be associated, sought also the privilege with a subsidy. One of those bills was reported to the House carrying a subsidy of, I think, $400,000 per annum. It was in behalf of the Pacific Cable Company, associated with which is supposed to be the Western Union interest in the cable across the Atlantic. They were undoubtedly interested in that bill, as the Commercial Cable Company, now seeking to usurp the right, was anxious to defeat that bill or pass one for its own use.

I had the pleasure, with one other gentleman upon the committee, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FLETCHER], to file a minority report, we contending that if there were two great institutions in this country desiring to obtain this privilege it should be offered to the public; that the lowest bidder or the bidder who would furnish tolls at the lowest possible rate should have the privilege of laying this cable.

I could find only one member of the committee willing to join with me in that minority report. Later on the Spanish war had occurred. We had acquired the possessions in the Pacific, and when the measure was brought before this House, on the 18th of January, 1899, a great transformation had taken place in the history of our country. Instead of offering as a substitute the bill I had incorporated into the minority report, I surprised those gentlemen interested in obtaining this privilege with a subsidy by the proposition that the cable should be laid by the Government of the United States.

The consideration of that bill was defeated by the proposition then made. At that time the interests of the Western Union were hostile to my position and the Commercial Pacific Cable Company were with me, writing letters encouraging me in my efforts to secure a Government cable. A change has come about, and now we find the Commercial Cable Company, after they have united and made a contract with the Eastern Extension Cable Company, that owns the monopoly of the cable interests in the East, seeking to unlawfully lay a cable, while in the Fifty-fifth and Fifty-sixth Congresses they urged the Government to build the cable in order that their rival might not have the privilege.

Mr. Chairman, that statement will cover this little history and illustrate the interest of the telegraph and cable interests in this matter.

EXCLUSIVE RIGHTS HELD BY THIS MONOPOLY.

In March, 1898, the Eastern Extension Company obtained from the Government of Spain a prolongation of its monopoly for twenty years, ending in May, 1940. It will be interesting to examine two paragraphs of this contract.

Article 3: The laying of the cable, the landing at Manila, and the working of the same, will be undertaken by the company at its own risk in return for the following privileges:

First. The granting of a prolongation of twenty years of the monopoly by the said company of the cable between Hongkong and Manila, so that no other telegraphic communication can be established between the two places.

Second. Extension of the landing right during the period of twenty years of the cables which may be established to connect all the Spanish possessions in the Pacific Ocean, or to connect them with any other country, the period to start from the date in which the new cable is opened.

This concession covers not only the Philippine Islands, but Guam and other Spanish islands in the Pacific Ocean.

When we ratified the treaty of peace it was expressly provided therein that all contracts then existing, lawfully issued by Spain, should be recognized by our country. The Eastern Extension Company claim the exclusive right to lay, land, and operate cables with Guam and the Philippine Islands under this contract. Whether such exclusive privileges are legally binding upon our country will in due time be determined by a proper tribunal. It is sufficient for us to know in the consideration of the construction of a Pacific cable that this great corporation assumes to hold these exclusive rights, and has made a contract with an American ally for the express purpose of extending her grasp of the cable business into the very center of civilization, and with the hope of monopolizing the growing commercial interests of our people in the Pacific Ocean.

The audacity of this octopus and the villainous ingenuity with which it seeks to evade the conditions imposed upon other cable companies, and extend its tentacles over our islands in the Pacific, and fasten its grasping clutch upon the wheels of progress so rapidly moving from our country towards the Pacific Ocean is marvelously ingenious and the most audacious usurper of public rights of the present age. How any one, representing the interests of the people, can sanction such a scheme by their silence and countenance the compact between these companies is beyond my comprehension.

But this is not the most dangerous menace to the future welfare of our people and the expansion of our trade and commerce in the Pacific Ocean.

On various occasions, from 1883 down to the present time, China has granted to these cable monopolists the exclusive right to establish cable communication with China. The last of these concessions was in 1900, extending its monopoly for thirty years. This contract received the official approval of the British Government by a contract made by a representative of His Majesty's Government and the Eastern Extension Company. In this agreement Great Britain volunteered to use its best endeavors to secure from the administration of Great Britain recognition of these exclusive privileges. The contract was submitted to the British Parliament for its approval by Mr. Chamberlain, who stated that the Chinese administration had already pledged itself to give no landing rights to any company except The Great Northern and the Eastern Extension companies; these two companies are working under a joint-purse agreement.

But even in the British Parliament there were found men who deemed this step hostile to the best interests of Great Britain, and especially the United States. On this occasion Sir Charles Dilke said "the effect of the agreement would be that the Governments were binding themselves to maintain for the two companies concernd—the Eastern Extension and the Great Northern Telegraph companies—a monopoly in the working of all Chinese submarine lines. It was the declared policy of the United States Government to establish direct communication with China, and the agreement would bind the British Government to resist that. He contended that the more competing telegraph lines there were, the greater the advantage to this country, especially in war times."

The foregoing demonstrates the necessity of immediate action if we are to preserve the "open door" in China.

If the Commercial Pacific Cable Company is permitted, by the inaction of Congress, to lay its cable across the Pacific Ocean, this gigantic cable monopoly will have the future trade and commerce of our country within its grasp; our naval station at Guam will be left without cable communication, as it is well known that the intention of this company is to extend its cable to the Marshall Islands, controlled by Germany, and obtain a subsidy she offers therefor.

Of what use will the American naval station be to the American Navy at the island of Guam with a cable held and controlled by a foreign cable company? I charge that the Commercial Company is in fact the Eastern Extension monopoly. This is shown by the fact that Mackay made his contract with them in August last before he applied for the privilege of extending the cable.

Let us read the testimony of Mr. Ward, vice-president of this company, a British subject, and we can better understand the purpose of this nefarious scheme:

Mr. CORLISS. Is it not true that the application which was made last August from London was the result of an understanding with the Eastern Cable Company?

Mr. WARD. That was the result of negotiations to see whether we could make satisfactory arrangements with them to give the people of the United States a lower rate to the Far East.

Mr. CORLISS. And in consequence of your communications you made this application to secure a connecting link with the United States?

Mr. WARD. Certainly, because it would be useless to lay a cable to Manila unless we could get traffic beyond. The Manila traffic to-day is perhaps only 80,000 words a year.

Mr. CORLISS. So that you made certain of your connection beyond Manila before proceeding to get permission or to making a contract to lay the present cable?

Mr. WARD. Yes, sir.

* * * * * * * *

Mr. CORLISS. Your proposition is to charge the Government of the United States and the people of the United States who desire to communicate with Manila just as much per word as you would charge for the same message through to China or Japan?

Mr. WARD. We have made arrangements for a through rate to China of a dollar a word simply for the benefit of the American public. If anybody else lays a cable, they will probably find they will have to pay more than a dollar a word to China.

* * * * * * *

Mr. CORLISS. You stated yesterday, if I understood you correctly, you had an arrangement made with the existing cable lines from Manila to the East, and these arrangements enabled you to give a toll of $1 a word to China and Japan?

Mr. WARD. Practically we have come to that understanding.

Mr. CORLISS. Do you want us to understand that, because of your understanding, then, no other company or the Government of the United States can secure such relations with those people?

Mr. WARD. That is my opinion.

Mr. CORLISS. So that you desire the committee to understand that you, because of your relations with them, hold a monopoly of communication beyond Manila?

Mr. WARD. Oh, I do not look upon it as a monopoly at all.

Mr. CORLISS. You claim nobody else can make an arrangement?

Mr. WARD. It is possible, if you lay a Government cable, you can send business from there to China.

Mr. ADAMSON. But you think they would not be as susceptible to the wooing of other suitors?

Mr. WARD. No, sir.

These admissions prove conclusively the unholy alliance that has been made between the Commercial and the Eastern Extension Cable monopolists.

My attention has recently been called to the semiannual statement of the Eastern Cable Company, ending September 30 last. Its revenues, as shown thereby, amounted to £603,640, or $3,018,200, equivalent to an annual revenue of over $6,000,000. The expenses were as marvelously insignificant as its gross receipts seem fabulous.

Ordinary expenses	£142,638 or	$713,190
Expenses, repairs, and renewals	49,314 or	246,570
Spare cable	6,647 or	33,335
Income tax	10,078 or	50,390
Leaving a net income of	397,924 or	1,989,620

The statement shows, after the payment of interest on mortgage debentures, a 5 per cent dividend for six months on ordinary stock and $50,000 reserve for maintenance of ship; $1,120,000 net profit, equivalent to an annual profit of $2,240,000 after the payment of all fixed charges, 10 per cent on its common stock, and a large amount set aside for reserve.

Talk about the trusts in the United States! They are pygmies compared with this octopus.

How can we permit the construction of the cable across the Pacific by the Commercial Company when in view of the action of our Government with reference to cables laid in the Atlantic, in which express provision is made that such cable company, "nor any cable with which it connects, shall receive from any foreign government exclusive privileges," and that such company "shall not combine with any other line for the purpose of regulating rates." In flagrant violation of these conditions, this American ally has established relations with the Eastern Company and boldly defies the rights of our Government.

While Great Britain was willing to recognize this cable monopoly and its exclusive cable rights in China, through which it hoped to close the "open door" in the Far East to our trade and commerce, she refuses to allow her naval power to be under the control of this, an English corporation, or to burden the English manufacturer and tradesman with the excessive cable tolls charged by this company; but recognizing the importance of Government ownership and control, she has contracted for the construction of a cable over 7,000 miles in length, extending from Vancouver, in the British possessions, down through the Pacific, connecting all of her islands, including Australia and New Zealand. This enterprise will cost her about $9,000,000, and the annual expense for maintenance and repairs is estimated at about $400,000 per annum.

Two important facts should be remembered: First, that Great Britain provided in her contract with the Eastern Extension Company that the employees in her cable offices in China shall be British subjects; secondly, that for the protection of her military power and the expansion of her trade and commerce she builds and proposes to own and control a government cable through the Pacific Ocean, and has established a rate of only 50 cents per word for the benefit of her people.

How can we maintain peace in the Pacific and properly direct our Army and Navy through a foreign cable company officered and manned with British subjects? How can our tradesmen compete with a cable rate twice the amount charged by the English Government cable?

Mr. SHERMAN. Does the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HAMILTON] wish an entire hour of my time?

Mr. HAMILTON. I will endeavor to finish before that time.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, how much time have I occupied to-day?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York has two hours and sixteen minutes remaining.

Mr. SHERMAN. I yield the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HAMILTON] an hour.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Chairman, the Democratic national platform of 1900 proposes that—

Tariff laws should be amended by putting the products of trusts upon the free list to prevent monopoly under the plea of protection.

In view of this proposition and of the remarks of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BURLESON] and of the remarks of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. POU], I desire to investigate the subject of trusts in their relation to the tariff.

When a corporation becomes a monopoly strong enough to dictate terms to 76,000,000 people, at first glance it would seem to be strong enough to get along without protection.

Let us not, however, permit our prejudice against things that care nothing for ourselves to bias our judgment. "Nothing could be so hurtful to the sight as sore eyes."

The politician who aspires to be called a statesman, and after he is dead to sit in bronze while the procession goes by, ought to have regard for his government as a whole and to set down naught in malice against any constituent element thereof.

A lawmaker for all the people ought to go to his objective point without zigzagging here and there to punish or reward.

It is true, the meek do not seem to be inheriting the earth to any considerable extent nowadays.

The earth seems to be made for Dombey & Son to trade in and the sun and the moon and the stars to give them light, with electricity thrown in, and Dombey & Son seem to be trading mostly in hides, not hearts.

Industry is represented by shares of stock nowadays, and there are gentlemen so eminent on the stock exchange that stocks go up and down in sympathy with their health, and when they die stocks fall a little for a few days.

There are also gentlemen whose world is mainly a political world, divided among Republicans, Democrats, and Populists, its rewards the incorporeal hereditaments of political jobs and its punishments being out of political office.

The best interests of our Government can probably be conserved without undue reference to any of these.

PROTECTION.

The catgut of many a political guitar has been fretted under the tariff window.

Diligence in tariff schedules has not infrequently in our history given men a reputation for statesmanship and clothed them with the emoluments of political office. [Laughter and applause.]

For many years the policy of protection has needed no stronger argument than the labor argument.

It has proceeded upon the theory that on the whole about 80 per cent of the cost value of finished products represents labor.

If a thing is made at home, home labor is employed; if abroad, foreign labor is employed. Wages are lower abroad than at home. If a thing can be made cheaper because labor is cheaper, then it can be sold cheaper.

If foreign products can undersell our home products on our own soil, then our home factories must go out of business and our laboring men must go out of employment.

This argument applies with certain modifications to corporations as at present organized into combinations.

A duty, therefore, high enough to equalize the difference between foreign and domestic labor has heretofore created, fostered, and developed home industries, and by virtue of domestic competition prices have been reduced in many cases below the duty levied, while the wages of American labor have been sustained.

But it is said that home industries so created, fostered, and developed have not only ceased to compete among themselves, but have combined; that corporations with equipments which exhaust the resources of mechanical science, whose price lists none dispute, hold the field alone, except where some smaller industry is permitted to exist from motives of trade policy; that they not only hold the field at home, but have crossed the sea, invaded European markets, and are disputing sales at the very doors of competing foreign factories, at prices in some instances lower than at home.

Therefore it is said the duty should be removed from articles so triumphantly bearing American labels over seas and the tide of pauper products should be let in to see if, perchance, it can not sap the foundations of our growing commerce and humble the power of our enterprises.

MORE MARKETS.

Here between the Atlantic and Pacific we have a population of about 76,000,000, every man, woman, and child of whom is a storage battery of condensed energy, with the exception of a certain inevitable percentage of loafers, paupers, criminals, and others who get rotten before they get ripe [laughter], and what we want is more markets.

Like the shadow on the dial, we have moved steadily forward while the sun of Republican prosperity was shining. Of course, there have been nights and days of gloom and periods of eclipse, like that from 1893 to 1897, when our progress was not distinctly visible [applause on the Republican side], but at last it has dawned upon the minds of men everywhere that we are a great and growing nation with a human, Christian mission to perform on earth.

The question of trade and territorial expansion has direct relation to our whole population.

The human brain is like a garden. If it is not growing something useful it grows weeds. So long as hope sings in the heart above the task of the hands, so long as men have something to do at something a day for doing it, it means home and contentment. When there is idleness, want, rust, and stagnation, it means trouble and degeneration.

We are constantly making, growing, and producing something. Our home markets can no longer absorb the increasing output of our increasing population, aided by improved machinery.

Industrial bookkeeping has no regard for home-keeping theorists. Foreign markets are more and more essential to our continued growth and prosperity. Without them overproduction is inevitable.

With the tremendous and tireless energy of an increasing population, with thousands of business men seeking business, with millions of laboring men demanding occupation, with millions of capital seeking investment, what we want is more markets.

When a universal holiday can be decreed, when an international equilibrium can be reached, when the millenium dawns, cool, golden, and calm, and the voice of the demagogue is no longer heard in the land, and every man loves his neighbor as himself and will not try to beat him any more in a horse trade, then, perhaps, we need trouble ourselves no longer about markets. [Applause on the Republican side.]

At present, however, other nations think more of themselves than they do of us.

At present we think more of ourselves than we do of other nations—that is, when the Republican party is in power.

At present, instead of giving away our markets, what we want is more markets.

RECIPROCITY.

Whenever we open our markets to other nations under the policy of reciprocity, it seems to me it ought to be under the policy of light and breadth and glory promulgated by James G. Blaine, and on the plan defined in the Republican national platform of 1900, "in articles which we do not ourselves produce," unless there be exceptional conditions where mutual concessions may redound to our benefit.

Our friends on the other side profess at times their inability to distinguish between reciprocity and free trade in homeopathic doses, but, as a matter of fact, the distinction is clear.

You can not swap jackknives unless you are the owner of a jackknife.

By the policy of free trade you give away your jackknife in advance and have nothing left to exchange.

By the policy of reciprocity we say to other nations which grow and produce things which we can not grow and produce: "We need your products and you need ours. We will let your products in free if you will let ours in free." This is the logic of protection, the logic of reciprocity, and the logic of prosperity. [Applause on the Republican side.]

PROSPERITY.

This also is called by some people commercial greed. But while our friends on the other side are exercising themselves "with vain jangling" about imperialism and commercial greed, and the Sultan of Sulu and other infidels in remote parts, let them not forget the language of the Scriptures, wherein it is written:

If any provide not for his own, and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith and is worse than an infidel.

[Laughter and applause on the Republican side.]

We have blazed the way for business enterprise by the restoration of business confidence.

Instead of an overdraft in our Treasury fed by selling bonds and drained by an endless chain, we have set up a stable standard of commercial value around which the infinite transactions of a business day are carried on, not only here, but in the islands of the sea, and by which they are measured.

Our financial standard is as unequivocal as our flag, and both command respect at home and abroad.

In 1898 we added to our interest-bearing debt of $847,364,950 a further debt of $198,792,660 for expenses of our war with Spain.

But from March 1, 1897, to September 1, 1901, we paid off $63,517,520 of our public debt and cut down our annual interest charge by nearly eleven million dollars.

From September 1, 1901, to February 1, 1902, we still further reduced our public debt by $43,545,760, and still further reduced our annual interest charge by $1,744,064.

In all, within the last five years we have paid $107,063,280 of our interest-bearing public debt, and reduced our annual interest charge by $12,485,201.50.

The sum of our trade balances in the last three years, it is said, equals the sum of all the gold in all the banks and treasuries of Europe.

The rich are growing richer and the poor are better off.

Instead of our Government making depreciated money at our mints our whole population have been making money of full-face value in all our industries.

When times are good they are good for everybody, and when they are good for individuals they are good for combinations of individuals. You can not draw the line in favor of some and against some.

We are buying less and selling more abroad than ever before.

We are buying more and selling more at home than ever before, because people have got something to sell and something to buy with.

We have more money in use and circulation than ever before; more money per capita than ever before; more money in savings banks than ever before; the dollar has larger purchasing power than ever before, and the laboring man lives better than ever before.

The ships of every business venture have come to port laden with better returns than ever before. [Applause on the Republican side.]

But prosperity is not eternal, and it is possible to go backward. We were not invading foreign markets to any extent from 1893 to 1897. We were too hungry to go far from home. Some of our population were confined to a soup diet. Then vacancy, bankruptcy, and dull despair looked out of broken factory windows at men out of work and women in want, and the whole nation, yellow eyed, jaundiced, and stagnant, stumbled on, a prey to political quacks and soothsayers, until a voice from a vine-clad porch in Canton, Ohio—the voice of William McKinley, now forever silent—began to proclaim the doctrine of commercial salvation, and men forgot their dream of wealth without work, of transforming 40 cents' worth of silver into a dollar by the touch of the Government stamp, and wheels began to turn again, and money began to flow back again into the withered arteries of trade. [Applause on the Republican side.] It is possible to go backward.

REVISION.

Sometimes the time of greatest prosperity is the time of greatest danger.

It is then that those who entertain the concealed idea that there ought to be a dividend on party service proceed to realize on their political affiliations.

A great change is working in our national and international life. We are doing a phenomenal export business.

Constantly increasing exports and constantly decreasing imports will doubtless require tariff adjustment. Nothing stands still.

Economic changes doubtless require tariff changes, but the tariff which has relation to national and international business ought to be adjusted on business principles having relation to all interests involved.

The commerce of a country becomes geared and adjusted to a tariff law. It can not be revised at any time without affecting not only the fabric of the law, but all industries surrounding it. It can not be revised so as to protect small industries without protecting larger industries, and it can not be revised now without disturbing a condition of phenomenal prosperity in which labor and capital are participating.

Labor is steadily employed at good wages and is not asking for a change.

Capital is profitably employed and is not asking for a change.

Doubtless there are defects in the present tariff law. Nothing is perfect.

No sooner does a tariff bill become a law than it begins to develop inequalities. In its very formation it is a compromise among conflicting interests.

Doubtless there are industries that need less or no protection. It may be that prices are charged to pay dividends on stock issued on overvalued assets of protected industries.

There is a general impression that the duties in certain iron and steel schedules, that duties on glass and knit goods and in some other industries ought to be reduced. But in the choice of evils between too much tariff tinkering and the continuance for a time of duty in some schedules where less or none is needed, the danger of transforming phenomenal prosperity, in which both labor and capital are participating, into a condition of halting doubt and distrust may well give us pause for careful consideration.

Mr. THAYER. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. HAMILTON. Certainly.

Mr. THAYER. When will the time come that we can have a change in the tariff schedules?

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. Never, if you wait for your party. [Laughter on the Republican side.]

Mr. THAYER. We won't have to wait as long as you think.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. I think we will.

Mr. HAMILTON. I want to answer the gentleman from Massachusetts fairly. I think that the tariff law ought to have some stability about it. Don't you?

Mr. THAYER. I do.

Mr. HAMILTON. Business gets adjusted to it; and where a threat is made, where a suggestion is made, that the tariff is to be encroached upon here and there, it arouses the desire of gentlemen everywhere to have industries in which they are interested taken into consideration, and you inevitably, introduce an element of doubt and distrust into the business situation. To-day my friend will admit, I know, that we are in the midst of a condition of phenomenal prosperity. It is doubtful if we want to start down the toboggan slide at this time—very doubtful, I think. I can not say but that there are some industries where the tariff might be revised, but I think we ought to be very careful about proceeding to revise the tariff. Now I want to go on with the main argument which I set out to make.

Mr. THAYER. The gentleman has not answered my question as to the time.

Mr. HAMILTON. I think we ought to wait at least four years.

Mr. THAYER. I think we will give you about two years.

Mr. HAMILTON. I mean from the time of the passage of the act; and I think, too, that it ought to be revised by the Republican party. I will also say to my friend from Massachusetts that I hardly believe that it will be revised by the Democratic party. I do not want to say anything unkind to you or of your party; but your party did not have any very good success in revising the tariff the last time they tried it. The people do not have a great deal of confidence in your party in the matter of the revision of the tariff.

Mr. VANDIVER. Will the gentleman allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. HAMILTON. I will yield to the gentleman, although I wanted to proceed with my argument.

Mr. VANDIVER. In view of the gentleman's statement a moment ago on the matter of exports, whether they had increased or our imports had decreased, I wish to read——

Mr. HAMILTON. I beg the gentleman's pardon. I have not time to yield to that.

Mr. BURLESON. Will the gentleman permit me just a question?

Mr. HAMILTON. Certainly, although the gentleman did not permit me a question yesterday.

Mr. BURLESON. Is the gentleman in favor of removing the tariff upon articles which are sold in Mexico and Canada cheaper than they are in the United States? That can be answered yes or no.

Mr. HAMILTON. The gentleman from Texas submits his question very much like a lawyer in justice court in examining a witness.

Mr. BURLESON. But the gentleman does not answer like a witness. [Laughter.]

Mr. HAMILTON. I will answer the gentleman. In the first place, I do not know that there are any articles sold in Canada or Mexico at a less price than are articles sold at home. But I submit this—and it is a matter that every man who has knowledge of commerce, and I was about to proceed to discuss that very thing because I propose to make a fair argument here and address my argument to the intelligence of the gentleman from Texas, and I am anxious to get along with it—we all know that in industries great and small there are times when stock is carried over——

Mr. BURLESON. If the gentleman from Michigan——

Mr. HAMILTON. No; you will have to hear me out. I am answering your question. When stock is carried over and the local market has been supplied, it is unloaded sometimes outside at prices less than the stock has brought locally.

Mr. VANDIVER. Will the gentleman allow me to quote the official report on that very subject?

Mr. HAMILTON. No; I am not going to listen to any more reports. I am going to make a report myself. [Laughter.]

Mr. VANDIVER. That is a much easier job.

Mr. HAMILTON. I ask you gentlemen to give me an opportunity to go ahead. I want to be perfectly courteous. I will get to the thing that is troubling my friend from Texas. I have given this a good deal of thought. I differ with him, but I believe I fairly differ with him. I am no more in favor of trusts than he is.

I recognize that there is an industrial situation confronting us, and we can not meet it in a demagogic way, but we must fairly reason it out to a conclusion.

Mr. BURLESON. Will the gentleman allow me?

Mr. HAMILTON. I can not yield further.

COMBINATIONS IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The commercial world at present is a world of commercial combinations. The further advanced a nation is commercially the more its industries seem to have combined. Trade combinations prevail in all civilized countries.

They are the logical result of commercial conditions without reference to politics.

"They flourish alike under free trade or protective policies, or under monarchical or republican institutions."

AUSTRIA "is the birthplace of trusts of central Europe."

"In the last three years the syndicates have increased in number to such an extent that there does not appear to be at present any really important industry in the country which has not resorted to combination."

In ITALY nearly all the important iron foundries are combined. There is a union of chemical fertilizers, and in Florence there are many cooperative organizations which, however, have not been successful.

In GREECE the Government controls the sale of salt, petroleum, and tobacco.

In FRANCE, notwithstanding the fact that there is a law there against coalitions to raise and lower prices, which operates to some extent as a deterrent force, syndicates are in more or less undisturbed control of borax, candles, coal, furniture, groceries, matches, petroleum, pig iron, rice, Roquefort cheese, silk spinning, sugar refining, sulphur, tiles, tobacco, transportation by land, and transportation of emigrants.

In SPAIN tobacco, matches, and powder are controlled by a monopoly.

HOLLAND is politically decentralized. Each province and city is to a great extent self-centered. The world-wide trade that flows through Amsterdam and Rotterdam is in the hands of many people. As a small state, with great ports and many neighbors, Holland is not a separate economic entity, but part of "an industrial and commercial web that covers Europe and, more remotely, the entire world."

The Standard Oil Company, as the American Petroleum Company, running its steamers under the Dutch flag, controls the oil trade there. Coal is subject to a monopoly, and peat moss is a natural monopoly in the hands of a few.

In Amsterdam all public utilities, except electric lights, are controlled by the city.

In BELGIUM coal, coke, glass, stone, mirrors, and sugar refining are under syndicate control.

In NORWAY wood pulp, lumber, paper, and condensed milk are controlled by combinations.

American petroleum has some competition with Russian oil.

In SWEDEN the manufacturers of iron, steel, wood pulp, sugar, anchovies, coal and cigar dealers, and retail grocers make yearly agreements as to prices in their respective lines.

In GERMANY syndicates have steadily increased since the Franco-Prussian war in 1870, until they cover practically the entire field of industrial activity.

In 1879 Germany adopted a protective policy protecting manufactured products and letting most raw materials in free.

Liefmann, in his treatise published in 1897 says:

> Had Germany not adopted a protective policy there would now be in existence a greater number of powerful international trusts, and it is very questionable whether consumers would be better off than they are to-day.

As it is, there are combinations governing transportation between and international trade with England, France, Belgium, Switzerland, and Austria.

Professor Von Holle says:

> I do not hesitate to say that, according to my opinion, Germany would be already in the midst of a dangerous industrial crisis but for the modifying and regulating influence of our cartels in most branches of production and distribution.
>
> The country, with its dense population and increasing capital that seeks employment, could not stand the reckless speculation that would develop from unrestricted competition. Modern production by means of steam-driven machinery can not stand unlimited competition, which too often leads to the destruction of the value of large capitals. Machine production requires close, technical regulation and does not admit of economic anarchy.

Combinations in Germany are sanctioned by the Government and upheld by the courts.

In ENGLAND, within the last four years, there has been a strong movement toward the combination of industries into large corporations.

From 1887 to 1896, inclusive:

Seven firms were consolidated under the name of the Bath Stone Firms, capital, $1,642,680; the Salt Union, capital, $20,412,000.

Forty-eight firms and companies were consolidated under the name of the United Alkali Company, Limited, capital, $41,310,000.

Six firms under the name of Liverpool Warehousing Company, capital, $5,103,000.

Three important competing companies were acquired by J. & P. Coates, Limited, capital, $26,765,750.

From 1897 to 1900, inclusive, 15 companies were consolidated under the name of the English Sewing Cotton Company, Limited, capital, $13,382,875.

Ten firms as the Yorkshire Dyeware and Chemical Company, capital, $1,749,600.

Three firms as the United Turkey Red Company, capital, $5,832,000.

Thirty-one firms and companies as the Fine Cotton Spinners and Doublers, Limited, capital, $29,199,000.

Nine firms as the Linen Thread Company, capital, $9,720,000.

Four firms as British Dyewood and Chemical Company, capital, $2,799,360.

Thirteen firms as the American Thread Company, capital, $18,103,380.

Twenty-two firms and companies as the Bradford Dyers' Association, Limited, capital, $21,899,250.

Eleven firms and companies as the Yorkshire Indigo, Scarlet, and Color Dyers, Limited, capital, $2,919,000.

Eight firms and companies as the Bradford Coal Merchants and Consumers, Limited, capital, $1,216,625.

Thirty-eight firms and companies as the Yorkshire Woolcombers' Association, Limited, capital, $12,166,250.

Seven firms as the Borax Consolidated, capital, $15,452,000.

Seven companies as the Woolen and Worsted Machinery Manufacturers, capital, $1,409,400.

Seventeen firms and companies as the British Oil and Coke Mills, capital, $7,299,750.

Five companies as Barry, Ostlere & Shepherd, Limited (floor cloth and linoleum), capital, $19,466,000.

Eight companies as the United Indigo and Chemical Company, Limited, capital, $1,216,625.

Sixty firms and companies as The Calico Printers' Association, Limited, capital, $44,771,800.

Twenty-two firms as the English Velvet and Cord Dyers' Association, capital, $4,860,000.

Thirty-one firms and companies as the Wall Paper Manufacturers, capital, $20,439,300.

Four firms and companies as the United Velvet Cutters' Association, Limited, capital, $1,459,950.

Forty-six firms and companies as the British Cotton and Wool Dyers' Association, Limited, capital, $13,382,875.

Bedford Lime, Cement and Brick, capital, $1,944,000.

Four firms as the British United Shoe Machinery Company, capital, $1,458,000.

Flax, Hemp and Jute Machinery Manufacturers, capital, $5,832,000.

Six firms as G. & J. Baldwin (fingering and knitting wools and hosiery yarn), capital, $4,131,000.

Ten firms as Leeds and District Worsted Dyers and Finishers' Association, capital, $874,800.

Twelve firms and companies as the Yorkshire Soap Makers' Association, Limited, capital, $1,946,600.

Fifty-three firms as the Bleachers' Association, capital, $40,095,000.

Thirty-four firms as the Associated Portland Cement Manufacturers, capital, $38,880,000.

Fifteen firms as the Rivet, Bolt, and Nut Company, capital, $2,673,000.

Thirty-two firms as the Wholesale News Agent Association, capital, $972,000.

Seven firms as the Extract Wool and Merino Company, capital, $1,652,000.

Mr. COCHRAN. Will the gentleman allow me a question?

Mr. HAMILTON. I must go ahead, but I will yield for one question.

Mr. COCHRAN. If, as the gentleman states, it is the fact that everywhere combinations are being formed to increase the cost of living, is that an argument in favor of tolerating such things in the United States?

Mr. HAMILTON. No; not at all.

Mr. COCHRAN. Then why does the gentleman use that as an argument?

Mr. HAMILTON. I am going to show my friend just what the difficulty is. I am coming to it now. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COCHRAN] is an intelligent gentleman, and I propose to address my argument to him as such, without any demagoguism. I propose to make here, if I may, a clean argument on this proposition. I am coming right to the gentleman's proposition, I think; and if I do not, I will give him an opportunity later.

Mr. BURLESON. Will the gentleman yield a moment?

Mr. HAMILTON. No, sir; let me answer this question. An interruption will disturb me now.

Mr. BURLESON. I do not wish to disturb the gentleman, but I would like——

Mr. HAMILTON. No, I must not be diverted at this time.

HOW EUROPE REGARDS OUR EXPANDING TRADE.

This is the condition in Europe, but this is not all. Not only is the commerce of Europe organizing itself into combinations, but combinations are seeking continental and international combinations among themselves.

Our exports have reached the point where they have aroused solicitude here as to whether foreign nations can continue to purchase and pay for them and have aroused fear abroad of American commercial subjugation.

It is proposed to oppose a Pan-Europe against a Pan-America.

French statesmen say American financiers contemplate nothing less than the economic conquest of Europe and advise combined resistance.

Germany has recently revised its tariff so as to discriminate against American grain, meat, shoes, and bicycles.

English newspapers have become sarcastic, and are suggesting that at the next examination of students for admission to Scotch universities aided by Mr. Carnegie they shall be required to give an account of the successive invasions of England, including those of Yerkes, Sloan, and Morgan, draw a map of the United States, marking London, Glasgow, and Birmingham, and explain why American millionaires visiting England always feel as if they were in their own country.

European fear of American trade encroachment is well founded. So long as the United States confined its exports to agricultural and raw products European statesmen made no objection. They were willing that this country should be the granary of the world and furnish cheap food and raw material while European countries did the manufacturing for the world.

But they have been studying American trade statistics of late, and have discovered that while in 1890 only 17 per cent of our total exports were manufactured products, in 1895 they rose to 23.14 per cent, in 1899 to 28.02 per cent, in 1900 to 31.65 per cent, and in 1901 to 38.22 per cent.

Under the McKinley tariff in the fiscal year 1892 our exports were $1,030,278,148; under the Wilson tariff in 1895 they fell to $807,538,165, while in 1901, under the Dingley law, they rose to $1,487,764,991.

Our imports for 1901 are valued at $873,190,480, leaving a balance in our favor of $614,574,511.

Every commodity exported means employment to American labor and American capital, and it means increased prosperity and increased purchasing power to American citizens.

The more there is sold at home and abroad, the more labor employed at home. The more labor employed at home, the more wages paid at home and the more wages paid at home the more wages spent at home.

The national wealth of America is enormous and steadily growing. It is made up of the aggregate wealth of its citizens, and they have not made it by opening our ports to foreign individuals or combinations.

We have gathered our national wealth from the legitimate spoils of trade, in which both capital and labor have participated. Our unlimited natural resources are being worked with unlimited energy. The Patent Office is the register of our ingenuity. We have surrounded industry with the aureoles of genius and of art.

GIANTS.

Meanwhile infant industries have grown gigantic, kicked out the end of their cradle, taken their place at the head of the commercial table, and are reaching for everything in sight.

Commerce has centralized itself into a race of giants here and abroad.

Like Pantagruel in Rabelais, they carry ships at their belt and contain whole cities in their capacious maw.

Like Loupgarou, they are armed with steel and harnessed with anvils; and like Loupgarou and his company of giants, the industries of Europe are banding to resist invasion.

For any single industry of the old style, seated in parochial content on the bank of some stream with its village surroundings keeping time "to the click of the mill," to attempt to compete with the combinations of Europe would be like the crossbowmen of the Middle Ages contending against smokeless powder and steel-tipped bullets of to-day.

ORGANIZATION AND REGULATION OF COMBINES.

Let us examine this power among us, evolved out of unlimited resources and the most vigorous commercial enterprise and inventive genius the world has ever known.

Some regard the trust combine as the modern Atlas that upholds the commercial world. Others would pull it down and stone it with the ruins of its own enterprise.

Assuming that legislators and officeholders, clothed with a little brief authority by both labor and capital, are not the only important elements in the community;

Assuming that the rich and the poor, the corporation and the individual have some rights which their temporary representatives under a democratic form of government are bound to respect;

Assuming, in short, that this Government belongs to all of us, not to some of us, questions like this ought not be juggled with for political purposes, but ought to be reasoned out honestly, straight from premise to conclusion.

This is not likely to happen, however. The people of the United States had an illustration of partisan reasoning on the trust question in the last national campaign, when a candidate for the presidency of all the people went about among them on a special car and illuminated the trust question after this manner:

If a Republican tells you that the trust is a good thing, ask him why he denounces it in his platform; if he tells you it is a bad thing, ask him why more trusts were organized under this Administration than ever before in our history.

And then the train moved on, carrying with it this "fountain and abyss of the encyclopedia of learning," and the assembled crowd at the station, not being a great constitutional lawyer, wondered that the trust question could be made so plain. [Laughter on the Republican side.]

As a matter of fact no trusts had been organized under that Administration, and the gentleman knew it;

No trusts had been organized under any Federal Administration, and the gentleman knew it.

There is no Federal law under which any trust could be organized, and the gentleman knew it; and there never has been any Federal law under which a trust could be organized.

The modern trust is not a trust at all, but is a corporation, organized under the laws of New Jersey, Delaware, or West Virginia, and the gentleman knew it. It does not owe its origin to the Federal Government at all but to certain sovereign States which pass laws to facilitate its formation.

It is composed generally of several merged industries, the merger being effected by the organization of a corporation, usually under the laws of New Jersey, and the conveyance to the corporation so organized of the real and personal property of the merged industries and the issuing of stock based on a capitalization of the industries so merged frequently in excess of their real value.

The corporation so organized may be organized under the laws of New Jersey, have its office on Broadway, New York; its factories where it pleases, and by virtue of State comity may trade all over the Union.

Some States have been making money out of the business of making corporations. The newspapers report that last year New Jersey received $687,000 in fees on account of incorporation papers of companies, which had a total capitalization of $4,773,790,000. The presumption is that New Jersey looks upon the trust combine as a good thing.

Some States have laws severely restrictive of corporations; others have laws inviting their formation.

Under the Constitution, Congress has power to regulate commerce among the several States, not in the several States.

Under the Constitution and the decisions of the Supreme Court, Congress must stop short at State boundaries and can not reach over and interfere with the so-called reserved rights of States.

So long as the States can not agree among themselves, so long as State legislatures continue to grind out conflicting laws without cooperative effort at uniformity, the several States, of course, can not regulate and control corporations among themselves.

It is proposed to remove the tariff from commodities produced by corporations which have become monopolies at home and are invading foreign markets, and thereby to discipline them.

No doubt they need disciplining, but it ought seriously to be considered whether the proposed policy might not result rather in strengthening the strong corporations and driving the weaker to the wall, thereby defeating its own purpose.

Apparently the tariff has nothing to do with corporate combinations. They operate as well in free-trade England as in protected Germany.

The Standard Oil Company, the type and forerunner of all trusts in this country, is doing business in a totally unprotected commodity and shipping its products everywhere abroad.

MONOPOLY.

These and hundreds of other corporations are monopolies, not within the dictionary definition of a monopoly as the sole possessor of a market, but in the commercial acceptation of the term.

What is a monopoly?

There have been monopolies ever since Pharoah ran a corner in corn down in Egypt, based on Joseph's interpretation of his dream. [Laughter.]

If the grocer in your town, by reason of the quality and cheapness of his goods, commands a certain trade, he has a capitalistic monopoly.

If he buys the grocer out across the way and gets and holds his trade, he extends his monopoly.

If a man has a patent, he has a legal monopoly of the thing patented during the life of the patent.

If he has all the coal and iron in the country, all the peat moss in the Netherlands, all the caves in France where Roquefort cheese is made, he has a natural monopoly.

If he has a public franchise to run a railroad or a street-car line, he has another kind of a monopoly, known as quasi public.

One way to get other people's money is to have something to sell that they must buy or want to buy, and the more people you can get to buy what you have to sell the more of a monopoly you have.

LABOR AND MACHINERY.

Against us the foreign combination has the advantage of cheaper labor.

As compared with the foreign workman, the American workman works less time and earns more money both for himself and his employer. In many instances he has invented some tool or machine for the use of which his employer pays him.

In many instances he and his employer are partners in the working of some invention of his own.

In all cases under the American piecework system he forces his own powers of production, and necessarily those of his employer, to the utmost, so as to earn the largest possible wages.

Therefore the better the workman the better the pay, whereas under the English trades-union system the pay is the same without regard to the differing energy of employees. Hence there is no incentive to strenuous effort. This results, too, in a limitation of the production of the English workingman.

As bearing upon English labor union methods, in an editorial of December 16, 1901, the New York Journal of Commerce says:

Thirty years ago bricklayers working on a railway tunnel in London laid 1,200 bricks a day. Twenty years ago a bricklayer would lay 1,000 bricks a day on ordinary work. At the present time, in London, a maximum of 400 bricks a day is the recognized limit for dwelling houses, shops, and business premises built by a private contractor. In the case of public buildings erected for the London county council and the London school board the limit is 330 bricks, or a good deal less. The bricklayers have refused to do more on work for the county council, and on jobs for the school board the men laid only 200 bricks a day in one case, and in another they got their work down to 70 bricks.

Inasmuch as the American operative is frequently of recent foreign extraction, this English trades-union system explains to some extent his increased energy on American soil. His increased energy may be further explained by the fact that he falls in here with a swifter moving system, and must keep pace or fall out.

The American workman is not an expert in making a complete thing, as a rule, but he is an expert in making some component part thereof, and supplements the steady speed and untiring accuracy of the machine he operates with his own steady speed and untiring accuracy.

The machine he operates has increased American manufacturing capacity some thirty, some sixty, and some an hundred fold.

For illustration, Carroll D. Wright finds that it used to take six and one-half hours to make 1,000 paper bags by hand. Now they can be made by machinery in forty minutes.

It formerly took two hundred days of twenty-four hours each to rule 100 reams of paper on both sides by hand. Now one man with a machine can do the same work in two and one-half hours.

In making axle yokes a steam automatic clip enables one man to do the work of 192 blacksmiths.

With a pair of steam shears one man can do the work of 37.

One horsepower equals the power of 6 men. In 1890 the total horsepower of the United States was estimated by Colonel Wright to be 6,000,000, equivalent to the work of 36,000,000 men, representing a population of 180,000,000, so that if the products of all the manufacturing establishments of the United States were made by hand it would require a population of 180,000,000, with none left for other occupations.

The horsepower of factories by the Census of 1900 is 11,000,000, equal to the work of 66,000,000 men representing a population of 330,000,000.

EFFECT OF TARIFF REMOVAL.

Assuming mechanical facilities here and abroad to be equal, which they are not, and assuming the American workman to be the better man, which he is under our system, still the effect of tariff removal would be to level down instead of up, and after every other reduction had been made down to the margin of a living profit labor would probably suffer some reduction in competition with foreign cheap labor.

Probably many American manufacturers would continue to do business. The weaker would die first, of course.

Probably combinations would continue to combine. Certainly international combinations would be easier.

In the last analysis the question of tariff removal resolves itself into a choice between foreign and domestic corporations, or, if it does not do that, it resolves itself into a question of reduced American wages.

If individual manufacturers have not been able to compete successfully unprotected against cheap foreign labor in the past without reduction of wages, it raises the presumption at least that American corporate combinations would encounter the same difficulty.

Men would probably continue to go on strikes, but they would strike in vain against an inexorable industrial system that would compel our better-paid labor to compete with the cheaper labor of Europe.

If foreign combinations should get possession of our markets, what assurance have we that they would not raise prices, and if they should raise prices what redress have we?

The domestic corporation is a combination of American capital and American labor receiving and disposing of its wealth on American soil, which we may now regulate to some extent, and which we hope to regulate more, while the foreign combination would enrich itself at our expense, would carry its wealth beyond seas, and would be beyond our control.

TIN.

By reason of our tariff many industries have been bodily transplanted to America and set up beside some field of raw material here. Other industries, notably that of tin, have been created here by a protective tariff.

In 1880 we were paying foreigners $8 for boxes of 108 pounds, while the foreign price was $4.86.

We adopted a protective tariff on tin in 1890. By that tariff we created a tin industry here. In 1890 we were paying $5.60, while the foreign price was $3.

In April, 1901, we were paying our home manufacturers, employing American capital and American labor, $4.20 per box of 100 pounds, while the foreign price was $3.90, and had established here a new industry.

In 1889 we imported over $21,000,000 worth of tin plate.

In 1899 we imported $2,000,000 worth.

It is said that the tin combine has advanced prices arbitrarily, at times close to the importing point. This sort of thing angers every man who likes to see fair play, and yet a legislator ought to hesitate a long time before voting to close our American tin-plate factories, thereby throwing our labor out of employment, and turning the business over to foreign manufacturers again to raise prices on us as they see fit.

SUGGESTED REMEDIES.

Possibly prices may have been somewhat higher and steadier at the outset in some industries under protection than they would be without it if the industry survived without protection, but they are never as high as the disinterested foreigner and his coadjutors here would have them if they had their way.

It seems scarcely a remedy to close all mills owned by corporations by legislation and drive their operatives into the street, as was proposed in the case of the Nebraska starch factories.

Neither does the sweeping proposition embodied in the Kansas City appendix to the Chicago platform to put upon the free list the products of all corporations, commonly called trusts, seem to be good statesmanship.

They would probably have come no nearer executing this plank than they did their promises preceding the Wilson bill. Legislation never ought to be vindictive.

It is doubtful if the American people on the whole want to go into the business of attempting to punish men for diligence in business or keeping pace with their commercial environment.

I doubt if a national policy ought to be obliterated because there are abuses here and there.

It is hardly rational to burn down the barn to get rid of the fleas.

RIGHTS OF PERSONS.

It is proposed to put the products of trusts on the free list, and, since trusts and corporations are interchangeable terms, this amounts to a proposition to put the products of corporations on the free list.

To be logical, why not put the products of individuals and partnerships on the free list, and, if you propose to do this, at what point of capitalistic development will you say that the product of this or that individual, partnership, or corporation ought to go on the free list.

How much wealth will you permit an individual, a partnership, or a corporation to have before you will put his or its product upon the free list?

As the law stands, if it is lawful for A to make shoes, it is lawful for A and B to form a copartnership to make shoes, and it is lawful for A and B and others to organize themselves into a corporation to make shoes.

As the law stands, it is lawful for men to buy and to sell.

If it is lawful for a farmer to sell a load of wheat at the mill, it is lawful for the miller to sell his mill to a corporation of millers.

As the law stands, it is lawful for a milkman to get all the customers he can along his milk route. It is lawful for him to extend his route, and if it is lawful for him to do this, it is lawful for any other business man or combination of business men to get all the business they can and to extend their business.

As the law stands, if it is lawful for A to acquire wealth and use it in trade, it is lawful for A and B and others to put their wealth together and use it in trade.

As the law stands, it is lawful for men to do all these things.

But no man has a right to do as he pleases in his public relations, at least unless he pleases to do right.

We may not say to a corporation or an individual, "You may gain so much wealth and no more," but we may say to the corporation which owes its corporate existence and the manner of its existence to the people who make the law, "You shall conduct yourself with equity and good conscience toward the people by whose permission you exist." To this end publicity is important. Whenever, as in the case of the first attempted international copper trust, it is attempted to disregard natural law; wherever it is attempted to artificially put up prices, whenever it is apparent that profits are large there is always capital, and plenty of it, waiting and ready to invest in opposition.

There never was a combination of men so strong but that some stronger force was lying in wait for them.

The only panoply which can assure success in the long run is justice and fair dealing.

LARGE INVESTMENTS.

The advantage of large investments in trade can not be overlooked, and men can not be prevented from availing themselves of it.

Besides, if you should attempt to say, by legislation, how much or how little a corporation or an individual should acquire, where would you draw the line?

Burke long ago called attention to the difference between large and small investments in these words:

A tradesman who has but £100 capital, which he can turn but once a year, can not live upon a profit of 10 per cent, because he can not live upon £10 a year. But a man of £10,000 capital can live and thrive on 5 per cent profit in the year, because he has £500 a year. The same proposition holds in turning it twice or thrice.

People are not consistent in their relation to large investments. They buy where they can buy cheapest, whether the thing bought is the product of centralization or otherwise—whether it be corporation made, combination made, or even if it be sweat-shop made.

They object to department stores, but send or go to the department store for what they want instead of patronizing their own local stores.

ORIGIN AND CONTROL OF CORPORATIONS.

The State organizes the corporation, "the state in State." It gives it life and directs the purpose and method of its life. There are abuses, of course. For illustration, there is too much water in stock.

Doubtless if the light of publicity were thrown upon all combines some would have to go out of business.

But if a corporation has too much water in its stock and there is not enough publicity as to its methods, whose fault is it?

If a corporation, organized under the laws of a sovereign State and operating under those laws, is not conducting itself properly, whose fault is it?

Obviously it is the fault of the sovereign State which makes the law which makes the corporation.

The corporation is not a sentient being. It did not make itself. It has no soul. It exists alone by virtue of the law creating it. It is frequently a device whereby personal responsibility is shifted.

Its power can be lopped away or increased or its life can be extinguished.

I entertain the view that the Federal Government ought to have an amendment to its Constitution to enable it more completely to follow, regulate, and control commercial corporations.

Commerce constantly runs beyond State boundaries. Freight trains pay no attention to State lines. We are more and more a centralized nation.

Articles of association put in motion a corporate power which is more than Federal in its scope, but which the Federal Government has not at present sufficient power to deal with.

At present the formation, regulation, and control of corporations doing business all over the country is miscellaneous, depending upon the temper of legislatures elected on various party tickets, calling themselves the vox populi—the vox populi, of course, differing in different States.

In this view of the case the President's recommendation as to publicity must be taken as advisory to the States, which may or may not regard it, unless there can be a law whereby corporations organized under the laws of various States may be required to make representations to the Federal Government on which the Federal Government may act. Certainly publicity would give people an opportunity to act with their eyes open.

Things placed in show windows generally look their best.

As was ably said in a recent editorial in the Washington Post, commenting on the transition from sickle to harvester, from flail to thrashing machine, from spinning by hand to power loom, from stage lines to railroads:

The principles of law have heretofore proved an ample resource to control the power of all combinations affecting the interests of man. The fountain of these principles is still affluent. For every wrong a remedy flows from that fountain. The pessimist and the demagogue own no charm that will conjure the rescuing statute. But legal philosophy, constructive and not destructive, bears the rod which will smite the rock and bring the healing waters forth in increasing volume to meet the larger need.

CENTRALIZATION.

If the nation is going out on the scythe-chariot plan of taking everything in sight, there are many abuses ripe for the harvest.

The world at present is a world of centralization. If the wealth of the world were divided to-night, the per capita share would be small. It would immediately begin to centralize again, and some people would gamble theirs away before morning. [Laughter and applause.]

It is also a world of corporations and combinations. A few hundred years ago it was a world of voyages and discovery. What it will be a few thousand years from now we can not conjecture.

Possibly it may resolve itself back into the Old Testament pastoral plan, when somebody lived an hundred years and begat somebody. [Laughter.]

This is an age of wheels and shafts and bands, of steam and electricity, and condensed air and hot air, and so much light that the eye of man hath not where to rest itself.

Competition has begotten combination, and combination has resulted in the survival of the strongest. The weak go to the wall, are starved out or bought out.

Like atoms, industries are constantly taking new shapes and combinations, which tend constantly to disintegration and re-formation.

Corporations have their appointed place in human evolution.

One man can not build the pyramids, lay transcontinental railroads, tunnel mountains, or harness Niagara Falls, but combinations of men, corporations of men, can do all these things.

PARASITISM.

We may not like their methods of doing business. We may not like to have them usurp the functions of the market.

We may not like to have them hold dominion over what we shall eat and what we shall wear, and scientifically levy tribute on our every necessity and luxury.

We may not like their very charities or their patronage.

We may not like the parasitism that swarms about their footsteps.

We may not like some products of congenital wealth who bow down before family names and refuse to have a disease unless it be an hereditary disease.

We may not admire the squaw men and carpet knights and certain types of the heirs and diluted descendants of money-getting ancestors who caper to the lascivious pleasings of the lute in various places; who act as ringmasters for the society circus and the delectation of the ladies, who also go about diligently doing nothing, except occasionally to violently visit the unoffending poor.

All these do nothing for the body politic except to consume, which, of course, is no inconsiderable service.

However, let us not introduce the element of a personal bias into an equation calling for unprejudiced accuracy.

It always seems easier to begin reforms on some one else.

WEALTH.

There is really nothing to be gained by denouncing wealth. Wealth is very likely to consider denunciation as the tribute which envy compels.

Then, too, those who denounce wealth are very likely to be suspected of hypocrisy. It is generally known that most people would like to try the experiment of wealth. When a farmer gets 40 acres of land he generally wants 80, and when he gets 80 he wants 160, and when he gets 160 he wants more.

It is currently reported that a legislator who used to denounce stocks and bonds with great force and violence went up to New York at the close of the last Congress and cashed in a tip at something like $250,000.

It is hard to please people, anyhow. If a man is economical, you call him parsimonious; if he is a spendthrift, you call him a fool; if he is rich, you call him a plutocrat. [Laughter.]

Besides, wealth is the victim of its own environment. When you see one of those figures in a grocery window grinding coffee, the figure seems to be running the machine; but in reality the machine is running the figure, and the figure can not very well escape the tyranny of its own surroundings.

To the man of moderate means unlimited wealth seems a good deal like the prospect of unlimited jam to the small boy, but he can hold only about so much anyhow.

Generally speaking, it means rather a dreary round, certainly not more interesting than the keen ambition of the man seeking to get there.

"The wheel of life turns high, turns low," but there is no point where the average man, rich or poor, is willing to stop.

Above a certain moderate sum wealth becomes a financial expression, a column of figures.

The capitalist plays for thousands as the schoolboy plays for marbles, and is not so much interested in the money as in the game.

After all, enjoyment is not so much in the thing tasted as in the palate of the taster.

The millionaire maintains a palace and finds his comfort in one room; keeps many servants to wait on each other; keeps a carriage and walks for exercise; has plenty to eat and diets for his health; has unlimited means for diversion and seldom has time for diversion; gets tired of watching the boundaries of his own possessions, but has to remain on guard.

Every once in a while, after he has drained all there is in it, he turns state's evidence against the world, the flesh, and the devil, good form, charitable brokerage, and the well-dressed treadmill generally, and tells us there is nothing in it; but we keep right on after it. [Laughter.]

Capital is only labor grown prosperous, and when it becomes prosperous it acts just as prosperity always acts, and gets envied in turn just as prosperity is always envied.

WEALTH AND POVERTY NOT DIVIDED ALONG POLITICAL LINES.

Neither is anything to be gained by claiming that plutocracy is Republican or Democratic.

It seems to be both, and it seems also to be monarchical.

Mr. Havemeyer, himself a Democrat, declares that his sugar trust contributes both ways, and when the Wilson bill was framed our Democratic brethren protected sugar and the sugar trust. This is the testimony of the statute book.

As a matter of fact, the only Federal law ever passed for the regulation of trusts was passed by a Republican Congress.

This also is the testimony of the statute book.

Whenever two or more factories have gotten together to take unfair advantage of the people, as in the case of the Addystone Pipe Line Company, the Sherman antitrust law has proved effective.

At the first session of the Fifty-sixth Congress the gentlemen on the other side were given an opportunity to vote for a joint resolution for the submission of an amendment to the Constitution whereby the Federal Government would have been given power to control trusts.

It required two-thirds of Congress to carry this resolution into effect.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. HENRY C. SMITH. Mr. Chairman, I yield fifteen minutes of the time assigned to me to the gentleman, as he can use it to much better advantage than I can.

Mr. VANDIVER. Now, will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

Mr. HAMILTON. No; I can not yield further.

Mr. HENRY C. SMITH. I yielded my time to the gentleman from Michigan, and not to you. [Laughter.]

Mr. HAMILTON. The Republican party had a majority of only about fifteen in the last Congress. The gentlemen on the other side refused to vote for this resolution, and it failed to pass. This is the testimony of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Our friends on the other side always express a vociferous and voracious appetite for octopi, but generally limit their efforts to platform preambles and resolutions never executed.

So far as I have been able to observe, human nature is about the same in its fundamental outlines in the Democratic and Populist parties as it is in the Republican party, only a little more so.

In these days, as in the days when we told them on our buttons, the world is divided among rich men, poor men, beggar men and thieves, and no party has a monopoly of any of them.

So far as I have been able to observe there are no political prenatal influences that determine a man's money-getting instinct, and the poverty and the wealth of the world are not divided along political lines.

Now, you gentlemen who look conscious whenever it is suggested that the country is in need of a great leader, did you ever hear of a Democrat or a Populist running his business any differently than a Republican?

Do you run your factories any differently than Republicans?

Don't you have shafts, and bands, and wheels in your factories just like Republicans?

You don't farm any differently than Republicans, do you?
You don't pay any more wages than Republicans, do you?
You don't think you are any better than we are, do you?
You don't think you are any more pious than we are, do you?
You don't go to church any oftener than we do, do you?

There is, it is true, a certain class who want to level down and start over again about every thirty days; whose dream of Utopia is to pull down and destroy other people's prosperity and sit around among the ruins.

There are also those whose inventive faculties run to safe cracking; whose ideas of the currency run to counterfeiting and to forgery; who never study prison reforms, though having excellent opportunities, and never study drainage, though living close to the gutter.

Naturally these kinds of people are attracted to those who denounce their natural prey.

JOINT AND SEVERAL INTERESTS.

Neither is anything to be gained by looking into the future and shivering for political effect after the fashion of the amateur prophets on the other side.

Of course you can never please a pessimist by proving to him that things are right and he is wrong.

A genuine pessimist is never so happy as when standing on the brink of the abyss and holding out to a horrified audience the awful alternative of voting the Populist ticket or going to destruction. These gentlemen mistake their prejudices for their principles. [Applause.]

Prices may be high, but they would be higher if we could call half a dollar a dollar and they would be lower if they were not so high.

Crops may be large, but they would be larger if we could call a half bushel a bushel.

We are conquering, winning, and annexing the markets of the world. Therefore we are guilty of commercial greed.

We have freed 10,000,000 people from the yoke of imperialism. Therefore we are imperialists.

And so the splendor of our advancing commercial power "is sicklied o'er" with the yellow cast of pessimism and enterprises of great pith and moment are slandered and misnamed for political purposes.

Although the devil and the octopus may not yet have been tied up for a thousand years, this Republic is still in the forenoon of its best days.

Here in America men are honest and women are virtuous. There is no trait more common than bravery; no trait more prevalent than patriotism. [Applause.]

On land and on sea the ancient qualities that made our people great have shone again with all their old-time luster.

"America is working out on the largest scale the most remarkable experiment in government the world has ever witnessed."

Here the average citizen constantly realizes that he is part of the nation and feels a certain personal pride and responsibility for its standing among the nations.

At the same time every man is one of a population so vast that it rules like the forces of nature.

In the long run the great mass of our people come to conclusions as to what they want and what they do not want.

What they want goes on; what they do not want withers in the breath of an adverse public opinion.

Nothing is permanent. The corporate combine is a phase of centralization, which is itself a phase of evolution.

The more men become civilized and the more civilized men become the wider the field of exchange of thought and commodities, therefore the greater the tendency to centralization.

No man liveth unto himself. No nation liveth unto itself, and the action of America must have relation to the world at large.

We have reached that stage of commercial altruism where we are gravely considering not only our own interests but the interests of other nations in their relation to our interests; not unselfishly, it is true, but with a view to so conserve their interests that their interests may be made tributary to our own interests.

"Only a broad and enlightened policy will keep what we have. No other policy will get more." [Loud and long-continued applause.]

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. VANDIVER].

Mr. VANDIVER. Mr. Chairman, replying to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HAMILTON] who has just taken his seat, if I could have his ear for a moment or two, I should like to direct his attention to one or two of his mistakes. I am sorry that he was unwilling during the course of his remarks to allow a question or to answer an inquiry that he could have answered with the word "yes" or "no." I am sorry that the gentleman seems to be still unwilling to hear the question and retires from the scene. It seems to me rather significant that the first speech delivered on this floor in championship of the trusts, the millionaire magnates, and the great corporations is received so heartily by the Republican members of the House. In fact, they seem to jubilate over it.

I concede that the gentleman from Michigan made an excellent speech in behalf of the trusts and the plutocrats. I concede that his poetic fancy ranges high—that his imagination takes a lofty flight. If, in fact, he had been willing to come down to the surface of the earth and discuss the plain facts of business with the men of this House he might, perhaps, have been as instructive as he was entertaining. But, preferring the atmosphere of the clouds—the beauties of poetry and eloquence to the plain truths of business—he seems to have eschewed the facts and figures of the official reports to which I called his attention; and when I asked him if he would allow me in his time to read one single sentence from an official report bearing on the subject of trusts, which he was discussing, he declined to listen to it.

His defense of the trusts was eloquent. His speech was entertaining, and what he said about the progress of our manufactures and about the increase of our exports had some semblance of truth. But when I called his attention to the fact that instead of our imports decreasing, as he said they were, they have actually increased, he declined even to allow me to read the figures from the official report, and when I called his attention to the fact that the president of the Industrial Commission, Hon. Thomas W. Phillips, once a Republican member of this House, having sat for four years on the Republican side——

Mr. OTJEN. The gentleman will allow me to say that Mr. Phillips was never the president of that Commission.

Mr. VANDIVER. He was a member of the Commission, and at the time he made this report was, as I am informed, the acting chairman.

But when I called the attention of the gentleman from Michigan to the fact that Mr. Phillips, a prominent Republican, an expert on this subject, has just recommended in his official report that those articles manufactured and controlled by the trusts should be put on the free list or the tariff upon them reduced, the gentleman pleaded ignorance and said that he did not know that those articles were being sold in foreign countries cheaper than at home; and when I asked if he would allow me to read one statement of the report of Mr. Phillips in proof of what I had said, he declined to yield. In fact, he refused to answer a single question put to him by members on this side, because he found them very embarrassing, and he did not want them to appear in the printed report of his speech.

Now, I submit here is what Mr. Phillips actually said on the subject. I read from volume 19 of the final report of the Industrial Commission, at page 663:

TARIFFS IN THEIR RELATION TO TRUSTS.

In certain cases it is claimed very strongly that trusts have been fostered by an abnormally high protective tariff. There seems to be a great change in public sentiment upon this question within the last few years. Witnesses before the Commission have insisted upon a reduction of the tariff wherever the duties seem to have become unnecessary or too high, and particularly where they tend to foster monopoly. One witness, Mr. Havemeyer, asserts broadly (Vol. I, p. 101) that the tariff is the mother of trusts and that his own, the sugar trust, in particular, is the result of the tariff. The revival of interest in this subject during the last two years has been due to the fact that people now realize the effect of the tariff in strengthening the trusts.

That there is much force in this general feeling can hardly be denied. There are a large number of industries in which it is in evidence that the domestic price is much higher than the export price. I do not agree that the answers to inquiries addressed by the Commission to exporters indicate that the trusts are not chargeable with this practice to any serious extent. Out of 2,000 schedules of inquiry sent out, there were received only 416 replies, and only a very few of these replies came from corporations known popularly as trusts. (Vol. XIII, p. 726.) The fact that about 75 answers indicated lower prices abroad than at home is significant, when it is noted that more than four-fifths of those addressed failed to answer and that naturally those who are chargeable with such discriminations would be the ones who would decline to reply.

In other words, there are 75 corporations in this country that have admitted that they are selling their manufactured products cheaper to foreigners than they sell them to Americans.

Mr. THOMAS. Well, what of it?

Mr. VANDIVER. What of it? It is robbery under false pretense of protection. But I will continue with what Mr. Phillips says:

Several witnesses before the Commission on behalf of the trusts admitted that their export prices were lower than their domestic prices, but they contended that this was necessary in order to work off their surplus and to keep their establishments running full time, and that all manufacturers in all countries do the same. This argument overlooks the fact that their surplus products could also be worked off by lower prices at home, and that it is the tariff which encourages them to cause a domestic surplus by restricting domestic consumption through high prices.

When, as is shown in the testimony regarding several trusts which produce crude products, the industry has reached the point where the labor cost is relatively small, notwithstanding high wages, the tariff becomes not a means of maintaining wages, but a means of excessive charges to the consumer and to other American manufacturers who depend upon them for their material. But, on the other hand, where the tariff is necessary to maintain the American rate of wages as against the rates in foreign countries, there is no objection.

I do not agree with the statement in the review of the Commission nor with the statements of trust witnesses that the tariff should be retained in order to protect the small domestic competitors of the trusts. I hold that, apart from freight discriminations, destructive competition, and monopoly of raw material, the competitors of the trusts are able to manufacture and sell their goods profitably at prices as low as those made by the trusts, and that if they are not so able they should not be protected.

Here, Mr. Chairman, is high Republican authority on the rapacity of the trusts, and I will quote a little more of it.

Now, when the gentleman on the other side charged the Democratic members of this House with hypocrisy in proposing to deal with these trusts he made another statement which he would not allow to be corrected, and that was that in the Fifty-sixth Congress this House passed a law for the regulation of trusts. I called his attention to the fact that they did not pass any such law, but he would not allow the correction to be made. The Republican members of this House proposed only an amendment to the Constitution, which they knew would never pass, but would delay matters till after the election, and when the gentleman says that we were hypocritical in our opposition to the trusts I denounce his statement as a false imputation.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. May I interrupt the gentleman a moment?

Mr. VANDIVER. Certainly, I yield to my friend.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. I wish to state to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. VANDIVER] that it is a fact that Attorney-General Griggs gave me an official letter a year ago in April, in which he showed that only three suits had been tried during the McKinley Administration to enforce the law against trusts.

Mr. VANDIVER. Yes, sir; that is a fact, and when I asked the gentleman from Michigan why the Republican Administration had refused to enforce the law which they claim credit for enacting he declined again to answer. Now, Mr. Chairman, once more, when the gentleman talks about cowardly pretenses and hypocrisy, I want to call attention to the fact that only three days ago we passed a bill through this House which was subject to amendment under the rules, and yet they refused to allow us to offer an amendment which would strike down the trusts. And why? It was because they were unwilling to strike the trusts and they were afraid to vote against our amendment. And so they would not allow any vote to be taken. Talk about hypocrisy! This was cowardice and hypocrisy combined.

Now, Mr. Chairman, when your party lash whipped the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BABCOCK] into line, and his associates, who professed to want to curb the trusts, you knew you were strangling the last effort of your party to restrain these leeches from sucking the blood of the people. Why were you not willing to vote and go on record? Because you were afraid the wrath of the people would fall upon you, because you protect the vampire which soothes them to slumber and then steals their breath while they sleep. Aye, sir, the refusal of your party to allow a vote to be taken on this question was the most cowardly performance I have witnessed since I have been a member of this body.

Now, Mr. Chairman, as this question of trusts affects every farmer in the land, I am determined that his interest shall be represented here and to see that he is not without a friend on this floor. I never had any occupation but that of farmer and school-teacher, and I know what it is to have to dig a living out of the ground, and sometimes hard and stony ground at that. Some of you were farmers in your youth, but you have become great lawyers and bankers, and your fondness for the farmer only shows itself for a short time before the elections every two years. I have never accumulated enough to get far away from the farm and never expect to have more than enough to pay for the farm on which I shall spend my closing days. Hence, it may be a duty, as it is my heart's best impulse, that leads me to sympathize with the man who toils from morn till night in the field or the workshop, actually adding to the world's stock of material goods, while the products of his toil are often reaped and enjoyed by the speculator or the capitalist, who by nature and the laws of God is entitled to nothing, but by Republican legislation is given the largest share, if not the whole, of the "unearned increment."

Briefly and pointedly I want to show you two particular acts of injustice to the farmer.

Before this high tax was put on sugar the farmer could go to town and buy a hundred pounds of sugar for $4.12, or buying it at retail he could get the best granulated sugar for 5 cents a pound or 20 pounds for a dollar. You raised the tax by the Dingley bill, and now he walks into the store, lays down his dollar, his gold-standard dollar, which you tell us is the best dollar in the world, and he gets only 15 pounds of sugar. What has become of the other 5 pounds? Is it kept by the sugar planters, the farmers in Cuba and Porto Rico? No; it is cheaper there than ever. They only get 2 cents a pound for it at the mill. Where are the 5 pounds? Does the retail merchant get it? No; the competition there is sharp and profits exceedingly small. No, gentlemen, the trust has absorbed it. The very day the bill passed this House certificates of stock in the sugar trust were sold on the market in New York at a premium of 43 per cent, and inside of thirty days the trust magnates reaped a harvest of $12,000,000, most of it in one day—the day the bill passed—and from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000 a month ever since.

Now, on page 351 of the Statistical Abstract which I hold in my hand I find that the average consumption of sugar by our people last year was nearly 68¼ pounds per capita. Nearly 60 per cent of our population is engaged in agriculture, or about 42,000,000 of our people are farmers, and they consumed last year, in round numbers, two and three-quarter billion pounds of sugar, and the increase of nearly 2 cents a pound forced them to pay out $56,000,000 increase of taxes, most of it, or at least half of it, going into the pockets of the sugar trust. In other words, sir, your unjust system of legislation has forced the farmers of this country to contribute from $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 a year to building up the fortunes of the great millionaires who own the stock of the sugar trust.

By your system of trust protection you have forced the farmers also to pay more than a hundred million dollars a year to the Standard Oil trust and its associates in the oil business, and its enormous profits, aggregating millions a month, are drained mostly from the farmers.

Besides this, the iron and steel trust has come into the field to control the entire supply of farm implements and machinery, so that the farmer can not buy a shovel or a hoe, a plow nor a harrow without paying tribute to the trust.

The United States Steel Corporation is really the largest industrial trust in the country, as it is a combination of all the trusts controlling the iron and steel industry of the United States, capitalized at $524,000,000. While it is protected by a 30 per cent tariff, it boasts of capturing the foreign market by underselling the foreigners in their countries, and charges the farmers of our own land from 30 to 35 per cent more for plows and other iron implements than the same articles are sold for abroad. In fact, it is reported that a plow which costs the American farmer $15 is sold in Buenos Ayres for $8. They make the farmer pay the freight both ways. They catch him "a comin' an' a gwine," and still cry for protection from foreign competition in the interest of American labor. I am in favor of protecting American labor by excluding the pauper labor of China and Italy and by forcing the protected intersts to divide their immense profits with the men who really create their wealth. But a 5 per cent advance in wages is not in proportion to a 30 per cent protection.

Once more, Mr. Chairman, I wish to quote from Mr. Phillips's report as a member of the Industrial Commission, because he is high Republican authority and has studied the subject for the last three years as an expert since his appointment by Mr. McKinley, and because Mr. McKinley himself, in the last speech he ever delivered, uttered very much the same kind of sentiments.

Mr. Phillips, in the 19th volume of this very bulky and exhaustive report, further says, referring to that immense aggregation of capital known as the United States Steel Corporation:

> The evidence shows it is not safe to trust private combinations with the public weal. It may reasonably be apprehended that the more recent combinations will follow the practices of the older trusts. The United States Steel Corporation exceeds all these, in that it is a combination of combinations. The stocks of the original corporations were watered when they were organized, and again watered when they entered the giant combination. It is estimated by practical men that the actual investment in its plants and transportation equipment does not exceed one-third of its actual capitalization of $1,400,000,000, upon which its profits in the first nine month of its existence were $84,779,298.

Again, Mr. Chairman, referring to the great railroad corporations which combine to keep up freight rates and use rebates to assist their favorite shippers and to break down others, Mr. Phillips says that the railroads keep no books on the subject of rebates, because the books would furnish proof of their violation of the law, and very pertinently adds:

> In the face of testimony like the foregoing, it is not surprising that the people are widely demanding remedial legislation on this subject. Railroad corporations have received from the public hundreds of millions of dollars for which they have given little consideration. The Government, in order to develop the country, gave to the railroads enormous tracts of lands, which in time became very valuable. They aggregated, according to the Government Land Grant Office at Washington, about 197,000,000 acres—more than the entire area of New England, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois. In addition, the National Government gave vast subsidies in money or bonds.

Now think of it, if you can, the steel trust making $84,000,000 in nine months and taxing the farmers of Missouri for barbed wire 100 per cent more than they paid before the trust was organized, and the land-grant railroads receiving from the Government as a donation a domain greater than five great States like Missouri and yet combining to keep the farmers' freight rates up to the point which allows him no profit on his products.

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, let me say that but for the farmers' patient industry that vast volume of exports that we hear so much about would diminish to an insignificant sum.

By your unfair treatment the agricultural exports from our farms to foreign markets have fallen in the last forty years from 81 per cent of the total exports of the country, in 1860, to 65 per cent last year, and yet in spite of that the farmers last year sent $943,811,020 worth of their products abroad, and the total of all other exports was only $412,155,066; and our total imports were $823,172,165. In short, sir, the farmer turned the balance of trade in our direction, and, but for him, instead of having a balance of $664,592,826 in our favor, we should have had $411,077,099 against us.

Now, sir, is it fair that, while the farmer carries the burden of the Government and saves us as a nation from financial embarrassment and ruin, we should allcw these gigantic combinations of capital to rob him of the just returns for his toil?

You are allowing the sugar trust to rob him of $30,000,000 a year.

You help the steel barons to rob him of more than sixty millions a year, while the oil trust takes another sixty millions, and the railroads take all that is left.

How much longer can he bear it? It is true he is living, but for the most part living by very hard work on short rations, while your favorite trust magnates are eating up his substance while he sleeps and their millions are multiplying. Furthermore, it is not only the farmer that suffers, it is the laborer, the small merchant, the mechanic, and the merchant.

The trust is gnawing at the vitals of society. If I had the time I would like to show how the laborer suffers and is becoming a slave to these great corporations. I fear he will never get his share of the products of his toil until some form of commercial cooperation is brought about by which he can have the right to a share of the profits of the business, and I shall favor such a proposition whenever and wherever it is presented. But in the meantime let us at least see that those who receive government protection in the name of American labor shall share that protection with the American laborer. Now, sir, I am through. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, the bill under consideration carries an appropriation of $8,441,505.69. This amount is necessary, if we carry out the plans of the Interior Department relative to Indian affairs. But, Mr. Chairman, I desire to enter my protest against the Indian policy pursued by our Government. It is not best for the civilization and welfare of the Indians, and is a heavy burden on the taxpayers.

We should, in my judgment, apply the old-time Democratic doctrine of home rule and local self-government to our Indian wards. This Congress should pass a law transferring the Indians and all their property to the States in which their reservations are situated. We should dissolve the tribal relations of the Indians, repeal all Indian laws, and allot all the Indian lands among the members of the tribes. We should give the courts and legislatures of the States where the Indians live full and complete jurisdiction over their persons and estates. The Indian Territory should be added to Oklahoma, and Oklahoma, New Mexico, and Arizona should each be made States. But the enabling acts making them States should extend the right of suffrage in the new States only to male citizens over 21 years of age who can speak, read, and write the English language.

The laws recently adopted by Congress restricting the rights of suffrage in our newly acquired Spanish territory should apply to the Mexicans and Indians in our home Territories who can not speak or read and write the English language. The Indians must be civilized by coming into contact with the white man and by being treated like the white man by our Government. Why should Congress tax the people of this country the amount named in this bill, or any other amount, for the purpose of maintaining in idleness 180,000 Indians? A red man should be required to work and support himself, just as the white man or the black man is required to do. What patent of nobility does the red man possess that would make the white man a hewer of wood and a drawer of water for him? We have spent in the last thirty-three years more than $240,000,000 on our Indian wards. This amounts to $860 per capita to each Indian.

We have spent $45,000,000 on the education of 20,000 of their children in the last twenty years. It has cost us $2,250 to educate and support each Indian child. It will cost us $70,000,000 to educate them the next twenty years. I glean these figures from the last Government reports. We now have on our hands 10,000,000 yellow men in the Philippines. Our Republican friends tell us that God gave them into our hands, and that they, too, are our wards, and that we must assume the white man's burden in the Orient and educate them and maintain them until we make good American citizens out of them, thus adopting the same policy that we are pursuing with the Indians. Already we are sending shiploads of school-teachers over to the Philippines, and we are making the same expensive mistake that we have made with the Indians. There are at least 2,000,000 school children in the Philippine Islands, and if we spend as much money on their support and education per capita as we have on the Indians, we will have spent on them four and one-quarter billions of dollars in the next twenty years.

There is but one solution of these vexed questions: That is to permit these Spanish-American islands to govern themselves in their own way, and also to educate themselves at their own expense. We should, as I before remarked, withdraw all support from the Indians now residing in States and allot all their lands among them, and pay all the money due them by former treaties to the States in which they live and let them become the wards of their own State, leaving the legislatures of the States to legislate and care for the Indians in their borders, and as fast as the new States are created the Indians would become a part of their commonwealth. We have a precedent for this mode of solving the Indian question. At the close of the civil war the Southern States were forced to take control of and educate 4,000,000 of negroes, and by changing the Constitution the negroes were made citizens and voters without the consent, and indeed over the protest, of the people of the Southern States. Congress should not make the Indians voters in the States, but each State should settle that question in their own way. I do not believe that the people of the Western States would object to this manner of settling the Indian question.

There are but 180,000 Indians for all the Western States to absorb and care for; and their problem would be far less difficult and burdensome than the negro problem has been and now is to the Southern States. The Indians all have lands of their own, and many of them own personal property, but the negroes had nothing when the South was forced to take charge of them.

There is a race prejudice against the black man that does not exist against the red man. The only argument against turning the Indians and their lands and also the public domain over to the States is that the State legislatures will not treat the Indians fairly, but will cheat them out of their lands.

I do not subscribe to this "holier than thou" hypocritical doctrine. Were I an Indian, I had rather trust and be controlled by the free and generous men of the West than by the commercial and purse-proud East. I had rather trust the legislators in the States where the Indians live to do justice to their Indian wards (because they know and understand their character, habits, and environments) than Congress, but few of whose members have any personal knowledge of the Indians or their wants or capabilities. The old Democratic doctrine of home rule and local self-government is as dear to the heart of the red man as it is to the white man. Therefore they should be controlled by the States where they live and by the men among whom they live, for they must be finally civilized by coming into contact with the white man politically, and learn to compete with him in all of the industrial pursuits of life.

At the close of the civil war the negroes were as poor and ignorant as the Indians are to-day, and the black man has the same constitutional dread of work that his red brother, the Indian, possesses. The negro in his aboriginal state in Africa was by far a more degraded human being than his red brother in America. The negro at the close of the civil war had to go to work or starve. He preferred to work. So will the Indian when this alternative is presented to him.

Congress never appropriated any money whatever to educate and support its black wards, but simply turned them loose in the Southern States for the Southern people to educate and care for. The South has wrestled with the negro problem ever since, and these States have spent hundreds of millions of dollars in educating the negroes, giving them the same amount per capita as their own children receive, though the white race pays more than 95 per cent of the school taxes.

The South thirty-seven years ago was impoverished by the desolation of war and compelled to educate and care for 4,000,000 free negroes—compelled to help pay her share of Federal pensions, which have, since the civil war, amounted to more than $2,500,000,000. These States have also at the same time cared for the disabled and indigent Confederate soldiers; yet she has triumphantly overcome all these obstacles, and some of these States are to-day among the most prosperous States in the Union. If the South has been able, under all these adverse circumstances, to educate and care for the negroes without any Government aid, would it be any more unjust to turn the red man—the Indians—over to the States where they are living and let these States assume the white man's burden of educating and caring for the red man?

We should also convey with the Indians the public lands belonging to the United States to the States in which these lands are situated. We would thus at once and forever settle, as far as Congress is concerned, the Indian problem and the problem of reclaiming the public lands by irrigation. If we keep these lands, we must enter into an irrigation system for the purpose of reclaiming them, which will cost the Government an immense amount of money and involve us in a species of paternalistic legislation dangerous to our Republican institutions. If we keep our public lands, we should lease the arid grazing lands for grazing purposes. I have introduced a bill for this purpose.

The State of Texas has been leasing her public lands for several years and deriving therefrom more than a half million of dollars per annum in cash, which money goes to swell her available school fund. The only argument against transferring the Indians and the public lands to the States where they are situated is the fear that the State legislatures will steal the lands and corrupt the Indians. The State of Texas kept her public lands, and we are managing them to the satisfaction of all her citizens. We have utilized our public lands in such a way that we have the best public-school system in the United States. There is no State in this Union that is more prosperous than Texas. What she has done with her public lands the other Western States will do if given an opportunity. Why should the legislatures of these States squander their own public lands and corrupt the Indians living among them?

The records will show that the school and public lands of Texas have been leased, and thus used to a much better advantage than are the public lands of the United States, and our Alabama tribe of Indians are and have been as well if not better treated than any similar tribe of Indians in the United States. We should reverse our Indian policy; cease making these great annual appropriations; break up their tribal relations; allot their lands among them, and open up the surplus lands on their reservations for settlement, and if they contain valuable minerals the miners should have the right to acquire them under the mining laws of the United States. I have introduced several bills along these lines that should become laws. In the Fifty-sixth Congress I secured the passage of a bill to open up the Kiowa, Comanche, and Apache Reservation in Oklahoma, and succeeded in doing so over the opposition and protests of the Secretary of the Interior and the Indian department.

The Senate conferees put on an amendment to this bill, setting apart 480,000 acres of pasture lands for the purpose of permitting these Indians to graze their stock thereon. It was the intention of Congress that this pasture reserve should not be farming lands; but the Secretary, over the written protest of every member of Congress from Texas, located 400,000 acres of this pasture so as to include good farming lands fronting on Red River for 30 miles, and just opposite the Texas ranches of two millionaire cattlemen (Waggoner and Burnett, by name), and at the exact place where these cattlemen wanted their pastures located. He has leased these lands to these two men, who now have them fenced and in their possession, and he now proposes to re-lease them for three years, notwithstanding.

I have a bill pending to open them up for settlement, and a resolution also pending before the Indian Affairs Committee to prevent the leasing of the lands for a longer period than one year. The Secretary seems to think that if he succeeds in making this long-term lease that the land can not be opened up for settlement until the lease expires. Were the Secretary of the Interior the paid attorney of these rich cattlemen he could not serve them more faithfully. His every act proves this to be true. He violated the law when he set apart farming lands instead of grazing lands, and he violated the law when he leased these lands to these cattlemen instead of letting the Indians use them, as Congress intended.

He violated the law and committed a great wrong against thousands of home seekers in that country by compelling them to settle on the grazing lands, composed of rough, stony, broken lands, unfit for cultivation and homestead purposes. On the other hand, he reserved for these two rich cattlemen 400,000 acres of rich agricultural lands on the valley of Red River. Each of these cattle barons have enough land inclosed in their pastures to make homes for 1,250 families. This high Government official evidently believes in making the rich richer and the poor poorer. If not, why did he give these two rich men fine agricultural lands on Red River and leave the rough, stony grazing lands in the Wichita Mountains for the poor homesteaders to settle upon?

It is one of the beauties of our republican institutions that no man is above criticism, and this high autocratic official, who scarcely deigns to consent to an audience with a representative of the common people of this country, can be called to the bar of public opinion and unmasked on this floor, and if the President permits him to remain in his Cabinet his Administration will greatly suffer thereby. This autocratic Secretary of the Interior has arrested without trial or warrant many white American citizens in the Indian Territory and deported them from its borders, thus plainly violating the Constitution of the United States. To prevent these high-handed outrages and to protect the citizens of this Government from the tyranny of this modern Nero, it was found necessary by the committee to insert in this bill a provision to the effect "that it shall be unlawful for the police of the Indian Territory to deport any person from the Territory who is in the lawful possession of any lands or parcel of land of any town or city in that Territory that has been designated as a town site." On what meat hath this our modern Cæsar fed that he has become so great?

Is it because he has command of a police force in the unfortunate Indian Territory and desires to show his brief power that he causes free American citizens to be arrested and deported? I think not; but in my judgment these arrests are made to extort unjust tax money from white noncitizens who live in that country. These outrages only exemplify the dangerous tendency of imperialism. If this Secretary will at our doors thus trample our Constitution and laws under his feet, what must be the fate of the poor Filipinos, thousands of miles removed from our shores, where there are no newspapers to expose the tyrannical actions of our Government officials?

But, returning to the Secretary of the Interior and his actions, I will read one of his orders for the removal of a citizen from his home, and all papers in the case will be printed as part of my remarks:

In the United States court for the southern district of the Indian Territory, at Pauls Valley. In re Dorset Carter.

Comes now Jack Ellis, by the United States attorney, William B. Johnson, and, answering the writ heretofore granted against him to show cause why he is restraining one Dorset Carter of his liberty within said district, respectfully shows to the court:

That at the dates alleged in the application for the writ the said Jack Ellis was, and is now, the duly authorized captain of the Indian police in the Indian Territory.

That by virtue of an order issued on October 11, 1901, by W. A. Jones, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, by and with the approval of the Hon. E. A. Hitchcock, Secretary of the Interior, it was directed that the United States Indian agent, Hon. J. Blair Shoenfelt, of the Union Agency at Muskogee, Ind. T., cause the removal from said Territory and the Chickasaw Nation of the said Dorset Carter, together with his personal effects, and any and all cattle owned, kept, or controlled by him, within the limits of said nation, under and in accordance with the provisions of section 2149 of the Revised Statutes of the United States. A copy of said order is hereto attached, marked Exhibit "A."

That on, to wit, October 25, 1901, the said Ellis, as captain of the Indian police aforesaid, received an order from the said Indian agent, directing him to remove said Carter and his effects from the said Chickasaw Nation and the Indian Territory. A copy of said order is hereto attached, marked Exhibit "B."

That acting under said order as aforesaid the said Ellis directed the Indian police acting under him to seize the person of the said Carter and remove him from the limits of the said Chickasaw Nation and the Indian Territory; that he has now and has at all times had the custody of the said Carter by reason of the said order.

Wherefore he prays that the application for the writ of habeas corpus be denied and that he be permitted to execute the process now in his hands for the removal of said Carter from the Chickasaw Nation and the Indian Territory.

JACK ELLIS.

WASHINGTON, October 11, 1901.

J. BLAIR SHOENFELT, Esq.,
United States Indian Agent, Union Agency, Muscogee, Ind. T.

SIR: It being my judgment that the continued presence of Dorset Carter in the Indian Territory is detrimental to the peace and welfare of the Indians, I hereby direct, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, that you remove from the Chickasaw Nation and the Indian Territory said Dorset Carter, his personal effects, and any and all cattle owned, kept, or controlled by him within the limits of said nation, under and in accordance with the provisions of section 2149 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

Very respectfully,

W. A. JONES, Commissioner.

Approved.

E. A. HITCHCOCK, Secretary.

UNION AGENCY, MUSCOGEE, Ind. T., October 25, 1901.

J. W. ELLIS,
Captain, United States Indian Police, South McAlester, Ind. T.

SIR: I am in receipt of a letter from the honorable Commissioner of Indian Affairs, as follows:

WASHINGTON, October 11, 1901.

J. BLAIR SHOENFELT, Esq.,
United States Indian Agent, Union Agency, Muscogee, Ind. T.

SIR: It being my judgment that the continued presence of Dorset Carter in the Indian Territory is detrimental to the peace and welfare of the Indians, I hereby direct, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, that you remove from the Chickasaw Nation and the Indian Territory said Dorset Carter, his personal effects, and any and all cattle owned, kept, or controlled by him within the limits of said nation, under and in accordance with the provisions of section 2149 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

Very respectfully,

W. A. JONES, Commissioner.

Approved.

E. A. HITCHCOCK, Secretary.

Section 2149 of the Revised Statutes referred to in the above letter provides as follows:

"The Commissioner of Indian Affairs is authorized and required, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, to remove from any tribal reservation any person being therein without authority of law, or whose presence within the limits of the reservation may, in the judgment of the Commissioner, be detrimental to the peace and welfare of the Indians, and may employ for the purpose such force as may be necessary to enable the agent to effect the removal of such person."

In compliance therein, you are directed to remove the said Dorset Carter from the limits of the Chickasaw Nation and the Indian Territory, and in executing this order you are cautioned to do so with as little friction as possible, treating the said Dorset Carter with all humanity consistent with the due execution of this order.

When you have complied with the instructions and directions therein, you will make a full report thereon to this office.

Very respectfully,

J. BLAIR SHOENFELT,
U. S. Indian Agent for the Indians of the Union Agency, Ind. T.

PURCELL, IND. T., November 20, 1901.

Under instructions from Captain Ellis, I arrested the within-named Carter, and attempted to eject said Carter from the Indian Territory. Was compelled to release said Carter on account of a writ of habeas corpus from the Hon. Hosea Townsend's court for said Carter being served upon me for the release of said Carter. Said writ was this day forwarded by me to the attorneys for the Chickasaw Nation.

Respectfully,

Lieut. ALF McCAY,
United States Indian Police.

Ex parte Dorset Carter. Application for writ of habeas corpus before Hon. Hosea Townsend, judge of the United States court, Indian Territory.

Comes now the applicant, Dorset Carter, and excepts to the return of the respondent, because it appears therefrom that the pretended orders thereto attached are not due process of law, and in reply to said return the applicant, Dorset Carter, says that he is a citizen of the United States and a resident of the city of Purcell, in the Chickasaw Nation, and has been such resident for six or seven years. That he is a licensed and practicing attorney of this court, and is and has been one of the aldermen of the said city of Purcell, which is a duly incorporated city of the second class, is and has been such alderman for the last eight months, and in addition thereto this applicant is and has been an employee and local attorney for the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe Railway Company, whose employees, under its charter and the laws of the Congress of the United States, have a right to reside in said Indian Territory. And this applicant is also an employee of the Ozark and Cherokee Central Railway Company, a corporation whose employees in like manner under the laws of Congress have a right to reside in said Chickasaw Nation.

Your applicant further says that the pretended order was issued without any notice to him, and he had no knowledge thereof, or of an intention or purpose to apply, until long after the issuance of said order; and that your applicant has always conducted himself in an orderly, peaceable, and law-abiding manner; and as for tribal taxes, he has paid all that were ever demanded of him; and that your applicant is the owner of and the occupant of a residence in the said city of Purcell, of the value of $3,000, which is occupied by himself and wife, who does not seem to be embraced in said order.

Wherefore he prays that he be discharged with his costs.

DORSET CARTER.

INDIAN TERRITORY, southern district:

I, Dorset Carter, the applicant, on oath say that the allegations contained in the foregoing reply are true.

DORSET CARTER.

Subscribed and sworn to before me, the undersigned authority, this 27th day of November, A. D. 1901.

[SEAL.]

C. M. CAMPBELL,
Clerk United States Court, Indian Territory.
By G. G. GREEN, Deputy.

Ex parte Dorset Carter. Supplemental brief.

There is one view we neglected to present. Section 2149, enacted in 1858, attempts to confer upon the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, the power to remove from a tribal reservation anyone whose presence within the limits of the reservation may, in the judgment of the Commissioner, be detrimental to the peace and welfare of the Indians.

Now, this is peculiar statute; it is not applicable, as all admit, to the present conditions, and its attempted enforcement in the Chickasaw Nation is a gross absurdity. We regret to say that it is being grossly prostituted for the purpose of extorting money.

When the Commissioner of Indian Affairs says that in his judgment the continued presence of a citizen in the Chickasaw nation is detrimental to the peace and welfare of the Indians, this should be his deliberate judgment based upon reasons calculated to bring conviction to a right minded and conscientious officer. When an order of expulsion is issued, accompanied by secret instructions that it is not to be executed provided the party pays a certain amount of money, the order is a fraud upon the law. The Commissioner does not act in good faith. He threatens for the purpose of extorting money. He turns his office into a collecting agency. He inaugurates a practice that will result in rottenness from top to bottom. There is no pretense that Mr. Carter is in the Chickasaw Nation in violation of law, but the order concedes that he is there lawfully, but claims that his presence is detrimental to the peace and welfare of the Indians, and must therefore leave.

Since the enactment of article 2149 Congress, in order to promote the peace and welfare of the Indians and others concerned, has established courts in the Indian Territory and caused judges, marshals, commissioners, district attorneys, notaries public, and various other officers to be appointed and clothed them with certain public duties. Now, should it be the judgment of the Commissioner that this is detrimental to the peace and welfare of the Indians, could he exclude all of these officers from the Indian Territory? When did he acquire the power to veto an act of Congress and nullify such legislation as Congress may see fit to put in force in the Indian Territory? Congress, exercising its own judgment with reference to what the peace and welfare of the Indians required, provided for the incorporation of towns in the Chickasaw Nation and the election of aldermen, marshals, and the maintenance of municipal government, clothing its various officers with certain powers and imposing upon them certain duties. Now, Mr. Jones may honestly believe that this is detrimental to the peace and welfare of the Indians, but Congress is superior to him, and Congress, and not Mr. Jones, is the judge.

Our friend Johnson, district attorney, admitted that he could not hold his office after the Commissioner should conclude that his presence in the Indian Territory is detrimental to the peace and welfare of the Indians, and that the district attorney could be lawfully kidnaped and banished. Mr. Johnson has been ordered around so much by the Commissioner that he has acquired the habit of implicit obedience, and is disposed to look upon the Commissioner as "the only bright tin can in the trash pile."

Other officers take a different view of the dignity and responsibilities of the position to which they have been appointed or elected, and justly believe that they have as much right to their offices as the Commissioner or Secretary have to theirs.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

DAVIS & GARNETT,
Attorneys for Carter.

Mr. Chairman, I desire to read in my time a letter from the lawyers of Muscogee. It is as follows:

MUSCOGEE, IND. T., January 28, 1902.

Hon. JOHN STEPHENS,
Member of Congress, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SIR: I desire, as a member of the bar of Muscogee, to express to you my sincere appreciation of your efforts in Congress to relieve us of the infamous tribal tax law of the Indian Territory. The sum of $25 annually is demanded of the lawyers of this Territory who reside in the Creek Nation. The Secretary of the Interior rules that it is for residing here that we are required to pay this tax, but the Creek law says it is for the privilege of practicing our profession. We were never allowed to practice in any but the United States courts. We were not represented in the Creek council which passed such a law, and are in no wise subject to Creek legislation.

We are all citizens of Muscogee; that is, the bar here, and own our lots and homes under a law of Congress. We are compelled to pay taxes for municipal purposes, and our town limits are no part of the lands of the Creek Nation, and never can be.

It is true that titles to all the town lots have not been perfected in the recognized owners and holders, but certainly the Creek Nation has no title at all. If those to whom the lots have been appraised do not pay for them, the law of Congress provides for a sale to some one else. We owe no allegiance to the Creek Nation, and it promises us no protection. We receive no return for the tax. This mythical Creek government has no right to prescribe conditions upon which we shall practice law in the Federal courts. The lands in the Creek Nation have been allotted to the Creeks outside of all of the organized towns. Then, certainly, we are not intruders upon the lands of the Creek Nation. The Creek Nation owns no lands, but they are owned, since allotment, by individuals.

To whom does this tax go? It goes to these Creek Indians for what? Nothing. There are 6,000 negroes and 10,000 Indian citizens in the Creek Nation. There are 16,000 homes in this nation, or rather allotments, and these allotments are not the property of the Creek Nation. And if they were the few white lawyers in these little towns could not intrude upon 16,000 allotments all at once.

The mode or process by which we are compelled to pay these unjust taxes is to declare that we are detrimental to the peace and welfare of the Creek Nation. There are 24,000 noncitizens in this nation, and if we were all taxed $25 each it would amount to $600,000 annually—quite a sum to have to give to these Indians. The Creeks draw interest on $2,000,000 from the United States. They all have a home, and yet the 24,000 homeless white people have to pay tribute to the Indian and get no return whatever.

There is but one Government here, and that is the Federal Government. There is no reason why a few lawyers of the noncitizen class should be singled out and made to pay, not to our Government, not to any government, but to 16,000 private individuals. The bar is a part of the judicial machinery, and no person can be tried unless he has the benefit of counsel, and they are more frequently appointed here than anywhere else to defend paupers, for which they get no pay, and yet we are required to pay a bonus to these people for the privilege of residing in our own homes.

We have issued $175,000 worth of bonds to build waterworks, etc., here. Our town taxes, already high, are going to be enormous.

The Secretary of the Interior threatens to put the lawyers not only out of the Creek Nation, but out of the Territory, unless they pay these taxes to the Creeks. We are to be put out of the country and taken from our homes and our business affairs as intruders upon Creek soil. If we were on the lands of any Creek Indian we could easily be ejected by the courts. We have the right (noncitizens do) to lease 120 acres from a Creek Indian, but still, under the arbitrary rule of the Secretary, we would be intruders unless we paid this tax.

If we pay $6.25 every three months, our characters are good for that length of time; but if we refuse to pay we are declared to be detrimental to the peace and welfare of the Creek tribe. No pay, no character, no peace. If 24,000 white people are to be robbed and oppressed in this way, there is little use of trying to encourage the Creeks in habits of industry, because if we have them to support it will not be necessary for them to work. It is only the lawyers that reside here that are required to pay this tax. Lawyers from all the States can come with impunity and practice law here without paying the tax, and they do come from all the surrounding States and Territories and practice and pay nothing. Also all lawyers connected in any way with railroads or corporations in actual operation or prospective are exempt from this tax.

Those who live here and assist by their might and money to build up the towns must contribute to the support of the Creeks or lose their character and be put out of the country, and when put out we would not be allowed the privilege of the nonresident lawyers, because if we return we would be arrested and fined $1,000 and costs. If the tax is just, and it is for the privilege of residing here, then, as all are equal before the law, all the 24,000 should pay the same amount for the same article received, and the Indian lawyers should pay also, for all Indians are citizens of the United States and are all likewise subject alike to the Federal Government.

We are not intruders. We are on our own soil, and had to pay twice for our lots—first, to individual Indians, and second, to the Creek Nation. Other officers—our oppressors—are, like all other officials, free from this unjust tax.

I hope and trust that you may be successful, for which you will receive the thanks of hundreds, yea thousands.

I am, very respectfully,

THOS. MARCUM.
ED. E. BROOD.
W. N. BROOD.

We, the undersigned, members of the Muscogee bar, fully concur in the above letter.

ROBT. TOOMER.	S. HEARD.
D. M. WISDOM.	JESSE HILL.
T. W. LEAHY.	S. M. RUTHERFORD.
N. B. MAXEY.	WM. N. CRAVENS.

Mr. Chairman, I have introduced into this Congress a bill providing for temporary allotment of lands in the Indian Territory, and it is embodied in this bill and should become a law, for the reason that rich Indians are now using nearly all these lands, as is shown by the letter that I now read you, as follows:

PURCELL, IND. T., February 7, 1902.

DEAR SIR: According to the Washington dispatches to the press, you have introduced a bill in the House providing for the immediate allotment of 160 acres of land to each Choctaw and Chickasaw Indian in the Indian Territory, and you are quoted as saying that many of these Indians are holding as much as 1,000 to 2,000 acres of land each, and that deserving members of these tribes are being prevented from participating in their share of the rentals and holdings.

All of which you will permit me to verify by citing the following-named members and their holdings, all of whom are personally well known to me, to wit:

Ed. B. Johnson, Norman, Okla., has wife and five or six children, and who is holding, at the very least estimate, 20,000 acres, and realizes annually in rents from $15,000 to $20,000.

S. L. Williams, Purcell, Ind. T., ten in the family, holding 15,000 acres, with about one-third in cultivation, worth $2 per acre per annum.

Ben. F. Freeney, Purcell, Ind. T., five in family, holding 5,000 acres.

J. Hazel, Purcell, Ind. T., seven in the family (my wife's father), is holding 10,200 acres, with about 2,000 acres in cultivation, in the Washita River bottom.

Mrs. R. J. Love, Purcell, Ind. T., nine in the family, holding 10,000 acres.

Mrs. A. Murray, Erin Springs, Ind. T., three in the family, holding 4,500 acres.

A. P. Jennings, Erin Springs, Ind. T., three in the family, holding 6,000 acres, with about 1,000 in cultivation.

S. J. Garvin, Pauls Valley, Ind. T., four in the family, holding 5,000 acres.

All of these parties are holding the best lands in the Chickasaw Nation. They are all old settlers here and have had the use and benefit of these lands for many years, and yet when the poorer class of Indians offer to purchase their improvements and their possessory right to their surplus lands they will ask two prices for the same, placing their figures so high that the average Indian can not afford to buy.

We have tried to buy these lands and can not do it, and therefore we have asserted our rights under the "Curtis law," by appealing to the courts in this country, but the courts here have invariably dismissed all actions on demurrer, and consequently we are left without any remedy in the premises, and owing to this fact many of the poorer class of Indians are eking out a miserable existence in the midst of plenty. They are denied the rights that are guaranteed to them under all the treaties and laws of the tribe and the Government of the United States. It is the strong oppressing the weak, and that, too, with the concurrence of the courts of the Territory.

The courts in this district have held that the provisions of the "Curtis Act" could not be enforced in this regard, for the reason that the tribal rolls were not complete, and no one knows what the pro rata share is now or will be when the rolls are completed, and therefore the richer class of Indians will be permitted to prostitute the poorer and weaker class till allotment is made.

This class of Indians, together with the Indian officials, are to-day opposing any legislation for the Indian Territory looking to settlement of the affairs in this Territory, while the poorer class are willing to take anything in preference to the stones they are receiving to-day.

I don't think the Indians will favor the clause in your bill providing for the sale of the lands over and above 160 acres to the head, but they would prefer that it be allotted to them without any restrictions thereon, except the 160 acres as a homestead, allowing them to sell the surplus at any time after allotment, at a fair consideration. I think, however, that they would readily accede to a proposition giving them 320 acres each and allow the Government to sell the remainder as provided in your bill; this would leave about 3,000,000 acres to be sold by the Government.

And, again, I understand that the supplemental treaty provides that we will be permitted to allot the coal and asphalt lands the same as other lands; the coal and asphalt lands were reserved from allotment under the provisions of the Atoka agreement. I am sure that this provision of the supplemental treaty will be satisfactory to all the Choctaws and Chickasaws. It should have been incorporated in the first treaty, for the reason that the coal lands of the Choctaw Nation will equalize the rich farming lands of the Chickasaw Nation.

If you think this letter will be of any service to you in presenting these matters to the Committee on Indian Affairs, you may use the same, and I will state that the matters set forth can be easily verified by other citizens in Purcell and vicinity.

I write you because you seem to be interested in Indian Territory affairs, and am sure you will appreciate any information you may obtain in these matters, and you will therefore pardon me for the presumption.

With assurances of regard, I am, very truly,

JOSEPH P. SMITH.

Hon. JOHN H. STEVENS,
Washington, D. C.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I have not the time, and if I had it I am not able to make a speech to-day.

I should be delighted to reply to the very interesting speech that has just been delivered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HAMILTON], who has exploited the history, as he reads it, of the Republican party and trusts. The truth is very brief. The Republican party and the Democrats both, without a dissenting voice, voted for the present antitrust law, but the Republican party has never enforced it. It would seem useless, as long as the Republicans remain in power, to amend that law, although I favor its amendment, because the Republican party fails to enforce the present law, and will continue to do so, I take it, as long as this trust-loving party is in power.

Attorney-General Griggs stated to me officially, and I have his letter, dated about April 1, 1901, which says that during the entire McKinley Administration there had only been three suits filed against trusts. One had succeeded, one had failed, and the other was pending.

I rose, Mr. Chairman, simply to read some portions of an interview with Dr. J. Albert, taken stenographically in the Philippine Islands. I hold that interview in my hand. He is the president of the Federal party. That party wants the Philippines made into a State of the Union; it does not want to remain or be a colony. He says they want no "carpetbag" government, and that is what a colony means. I asked him where he got the word "carpetbag," and he stated that he got it in reading the history of the late civil war. This party prefers the independence of the islands rather than to remain colonies. They want all our rights, every one that we enjoy as citizens of the United States, and every protection which the American Constitution gives us. They want it, and expect it, and he says that his party and his people will be sorely disappointed if it is not given them. The interview is as follows:

Statement of Dr. J. Albert, president of Federal party, in the presence of his brother, interpreter, Mr. Gaines, M. C., of Tennessee, and Mr. L. E. Appleby, stenographer.

Q. How old are you?
A. I am 34 years old.
Q. Where did you graduate in medicine?
A. I graduated in Madrid, Spain.
Q. Where did you graduate in literature?
A. In Manila.
Q. Were you connected with the insurgent forces at any time in the Philippine Islands?
A. I was an insurgent from the beginning of the war.
Q. Down to what time?
A. I was caught in February, 1899, by the American forces.
Q. What office did you hold in the insurgent government?
A. I was congressman in the civil government which the Filipinos established.
Q. When did they establish that government?
A. This government was established, little by little, from Cavite to Malolos. It was first established on the 29th of September, 1898.
Q. What was that government called?
A. Republica de Filipinas. I want to state this, that no Filipino should be called an insurgent until after the conflict between the Americans and Filipinos began.
Q. Where did that conflict occur?
A. At San Juan del Monte, on the 4th of February, 1899.
Q. How far is San Juan del Monte from Manila?
A. About three miles.
Q. Did you allude to the conflict that occurred between the American and the Filipino soldier at San Juan bridge?
A. Yes.
Q. Where were you when the conflict began?
A. I was at Capalagnan, Apalit.
Q. What caused this difficulty at the bridge?
A. The first information I had upon the subject was when I read General Otis's report.
Q. How many members were there in the congress of which you were a member?
A. About ninety.
Q. What place were you elected from?
A. Some members were appointed by General Aguinaldo and others were elected. I was appointed.
Q. Where did you then live?
A. In Manila.
Q. Did you write up a constitution for your republic?
A. I took a part in writing one.
Q. Who wrote the most of it?
A. Mr. Felipe Calderon, a lawyer, and Dr. Joaquin Gonzales, a physician.
Q. Where is Mr. Calderon and Dr. Gonzales at the present time?
A. Mr. Calderon lives in Manila; Dr. Gonzales is dead.
Q. Is Mr. Calderon a Filipino, and was Dr. Gonzales a Filipino?
A. Yes.
Q. Were they both members of congress?
A. Yes; both were members of this congress.
Q. Where were you when the constitution was written?
A. I went up and down from here to that place, Malolos.
Q. Can you recite any part of it?
A. It started like the Constitution of the United States of America.
Q. Did you have a copy of the Constitution of the United States when you wrote yours?
A. Yes; we had the Constitution of the United States and many others, that of Spain of '69 and of other European countries. We liked the American Constitution best.
Q. Where did you first read or see the Constitution of the United States?
A. Before the Spanish-American war started.
Q. What were you doing with it at that time?
A. I bought a book containing the Constitution of the United States that was published before the war between Spain and the United States broke out, and I bought it to see what sort of people the American people were, and I then read and studied the Constitution, but not so profoundly as I study it now. I read it when I was a schoolboy, and, while I have forgotten a good deal of it, I still remember a good deal.
Q. What do you think of the American Constitution?
A. It is the best constitution.
Q. What do you think of the Declaration of Independence?
A. The Declaration of Independence is a son of the declaration of France that declared the rights of men.
Q. Is it a good instrument?
A. It is the eternal truth.
Q. What makes you think so?
A. It is the eternal truth [points toward the heavens] for all mankind, for all time, and for all generations.
Q. Do you read it often or study it?
A. I know parts of it by heart. One of its parts is "that all governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed. All men are equal;" and it says further that when the government does wrong and oppresses the people and don't listen to the people the people have a right to take up arms, if necessary, and make a government to suit themselves. I read that when I was at school, and I remember it. The Filipinos can always repeat those principles and the declaration by heart. I made speeches, but I don't remember exactly what I said, when we were framing the constitution.
Q. Are the people in the Philippine Islands acquainted with the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence?
A. All the leaders know all about it, and all the people who are enlightened, that is, those who can read and write.
Q. What per cent of the people read and write?
A. I do not know what per cent of the Filipinos can read and write. We have no census, but I can assure you that there are more Filipinos who can do so than there are Spaniards. Padre Vigil, who was the Bishop of Oviedo, Spain, wrote a book on the Philippines, and he said that a greater per cent of the Filipinos could read and write than Spaniards.
Q. What particular part of the Declaration of Independence do you and your people know best?
A. "All men are equal."
Q. You know the Declaration, it seems, by heart?
A. I know the leading principles by heart.
Q. Can many of the Filipinos quote it like you do?
A. Yes; many of them. All the congressmen of Malolos knew it by heart. I speak, if you please, German, French, and Spanish. I understand Portuguese and Italian, and I also speak Tagalog. All Spaniards can understand Portuguese.
Q. What do you think of George Washington?
A. George Washington was the first man in America. About a year ago now there was an assembly in New York; I remember very well they voted that George Washington was the first man of the country and General Grant was the third; I don't remember who was voted the second. Lincoln was also one of your great men.
Q. How did you get that information?
A. I read the papers and journals from America; all of them almost, and I remember that the Atlanta Constitution is the best Democratic paper: the editor is named Howell.
Q. What do you think of Mr. Bryan?
A. He is a great, intelligent man, but unfortunate in not getting enough votes.
Q. What did you think of President McKinley?
A. He made good statements and was a good willing man and loved the Filipinos.

Q. Do you think that he loved the Filipinos any more than Mr. Bryan; if so, why?

A. Bryan had no chance to show that he loved the Filipinos like Mr. McKinley. Bryan had no chance to give any instructions to the Philippine Commission.

Q. If he had had the power to give instructions to the Commission, do you believe that they would have been unkind instructions or contrary to your liberty and happiness?

A. Never! Never! I consider Bryan a man of right and justice.

Q. Did you ever read the platform that Bryan run on last year for President?

A. Yes; I have read it, and I read another article of his, translated, in the North American Review. I think that was the journal.

Q. Where did you get the Democratic platform?

A. In the San Francisco Chronicle.

Q. Have you a copy of it now?

A. I have now a big book containing all the platforms, and in that is the one he run on. [Here Mr. GAINES shows him the picture of Bryan and Stevenson.] That is the picture of Bryan and Stevenson that you have in your hand.

Q. When did you first read this platform?

A. In the last days of August, 1900.

Q. Did you read the Republican platform?

A. That is the picture of McKinley and Roosevelt that you have in your hand; I have read that, too. Bryan is 44 years old; Roosevelt is 46. [Here Dr. Albert took from Mr. GAINES the book containing the platforms of all the parties and read the first paragraph of the Democratic platform in English perfectly correctly.]

Q. What do you think of the platform which Bryan run on for President in 1900?

A. The two platforms do not differ very much; both of them agree to give on the first period autonomy to the Filipinos. The Republican does not say anything on the second period, but the Democratic is full and well defined.

Q. What does the Democratic platform say as to the second period?

A. Independence.

Q. What does it say as to the third period?

A. Protectorate. For protection in defense from other nations.

Q. When did you last read the Democratic platform?

A. Not since I read it in the San Francisco paper alluded to above.

Q. I here show you a copy of this platform, so you can see how correctly you have stated the three subjects you allude to in your answer, and ask you if you can read it aloud in English?

Here the Doctor read the paragraphs in the Democratic platform entitled the "Philippine question," and said "that the third period was the Monroe doctrine—that is, protection from outside interference, such as has been given for a century to the Central and South American governments."

Q. Now, is that what the Filipinos want—first, a stable form of government; second, independence; and third, protection?

A. What the Filipinos want now is for Congress to establish a stable form of government here in the Philippines; after that the opinions of the people will be divided.

Q. Divided how?

A. The Federal party will want to be made a State of the United States, like the other States of the Union. I am president of the party.

Q. Then you don't want an independent government of your own, run by yourselves, and make your own laws, but want to be admitted as a State in the Union?

A. We follow the traditions of America, "that the Constitution follows the flag," and if the Constitution follows the flag to this country it must be a State of the Union, and before the Philippines can be separated from the United States it must be by the consent of this people and the United States, otherwise a secession will begin, as happened in the South.

Q. Why do you not want independence, after we have given you a stable form of government and you become or are capable of self-government?

A. Because it would be better to be a State of the Union than to have independence.

Q. Suppose Congress does not allow the Philippines to become a State of the Union, then what will occur to your people? And we give you a stable form of government and you are capable of self-government, would you then want independence or not?

A. My opinion is that Congress will allow the Philippines to be made a State of the Union. The Declaration of Independence says that "all men are equal;" it is not possible to deny us.

Q. Had you rather have your independence when you are capable of self-government, and stable government is given you, than to be a colony owned by the United States?

A. It would be worse to be a colony than it would to have independence.

Q. You don't want to be a colony?

A. No Filipino wishes to be a colonist. We have had experience as colonists; it is carpetbag government.

Q. Where did you get that word "carpetbag?"

A. By reading. It was drawn from the history of the secession war in the United States.

Q. You people want to help make your own laws that govern you?

A. Yes; it is not possible otherwise. We want a house of representatives and a senate to make our laws, with a governor or president. For the first time, or the present, the governor should be an American.

Q. How soon will your people be capable, if they are not now, of self-government and of having a senate and house of representatives to make your own laws?

A. Now; at present we are capable, under the direction and control of the United States.

Q. What would you want the Americans to do?

A. We think for the present that the one branch should be elected by the people and that the other should be appointed by the President or governor. I can not say exactly how long it will be before we are capable to take charge of the whole thing. I can not tell exactly the number of years.

Q. If this had been promised to the Filipinos before the insurgents and Americans fell out, would it, or not, have prevented any war between the Philippine and the American Army?

A. Yes; from the very first the Americans—General Otis—did not give any definite programme: we did not know what the Americans would do; they made no promises. For this very reason I pray you to ask Congress to at once establish a stable form of government here under a law made by Congress itself, and I pray you that Governor Taft be allowed to execute the government, as he has the general sympathy of the Filipinos.

Q. What you want, then, is a stable government established here composed of two bodies, a senate and a house of representatives, under the direction of Governor Taft?

A. Yes; under the direction of some American.

Q. Did you ever see Admiral Dewey?

A. One time.

Q. Was he friendly or unfriendly toward the Filipinos?

A. He was friendly toward them, but not now.

Q. Was he acquainted with Aguinaldo?

A. Yes.

Q. How came them to meet?

A. Ordinarily Admiral Dewey sent his adjutant to Cavite to talk with Aguinaldo, and I only remember to have seen Aguinaldo go aboard the Olympia and talk with Admiral Dewey on one occasion.

Q. Did Admiral Dewey want to fight the Filipinos?

A. No.

Q. What makes you think so?

A. Because Admiral Dewey had great sympathy for the Filipinos in his communications with them, and the failure of the Americans to give a definite programme or plan for the Philippines is what caused the war between the Filipinos and Americans.

Q. What caused the Americans and Filipinos to fall out about this time?

A. For the same reasons as stated and because Congress did not take any action and give us a definite programme. It was all left to surmise on our part.

Q. If Congress had said that it would pass a law that would give to the Filipinos a stable government, local self-government, and their ultimate independence with the protection of the United States, would it have prevented any conflict between the insurgents and Americans at that time?

A. It would.

Q. Are you certain about this?

A. I followed the chances of war with the insurgents during four months, awaiting some action from Congress, and all the others followed those chances of war just for the same reasons that I did, certainly a majority. Bear in mind this, that I am a physician, supporting a large family in Manila by my profession; I am not rich; I went to the war, understanding that the war would be over in a short time, because the Congress will act or pass an act about the Philippines which will give us an autonomous government. I followed the chances of the war politically and not militarily.

Q. Was this congress of which you were a member aware of the failure of the authorities at Washington to do this, and was it discussed by you in congress?

A. At the beginning of May, in 1899, when the Filipino government was at Nueva San Isidro, Ecija, we read Schurman's proclamation promising to give us the fullest autonomous government. We met at San Isidro to advise Aguinaldo that he change his policy and his secretaries, and we succeeded. Mr. Buencamino and myself were the leaders of this policy, which consisted in entering into negotiations with General Otis; so we put Paterno in Mabini's place in the cabinet. Buencamino was secretary of foreign affairs; at the same time was appointed a committee of peace to come here to Manila to see General Otis. The president of this committee was Buencamino, and I, myself, was a member of same. While they were organizing, General Lawton's forces came to go north in the direction where we were, the Filipino government moved, and I remained at San Isidro and surrendered to General Lawton, for my daughter was sick. I could not go and did not go any further with the committee because of what I stated.

Afterwards General Luna was appointed with another committee to go to Manila and see the American authorities—not exactly a peace commission, but to see who had authority he had to guarantee that an autonomous government would be given to the Philippines, and if the Filipinos surrendered who would grant this autonomous government. The Luna committee came to Manila and saw General Otis. This committee was composed of Engracio Gonzaga Barretto, General Gregorio del Pilar, deceased, and Major Zialcita. This is what I was told by Aguinaldo about twelve days ago, "that that committee came here and spoke to Otis, and Otis could not say anything about the autonomous government until the Filipinos surrendered to the American Government unconditionally." I say all this to assure you that if Congress will pass a law that will give the Filipinos autonomous government here that all supreme peace will be in the islands. I am sure of it.

Q. Do you mean to say by this that the war has been kept up in the Philippines because Congress has not done this?

A. Yes. Because this little wrong in McKinley's policy, that nothing would be done until there was perfect peace in the islands, is what has kept up the war.

Q. Do you mean to say, then, that if Congress will do now what they failed to do at the first of the war, that peace will be supreme?

A. I have said four or five times, yes.

Q. What countries supply the imports of these islands?

A. England supplies the most of them.

Q. What chance would the United States have with Japan, China, and England to furnish what you want over here?

A. There are good opportunities for the importation of agricultural machinery and implements for the Americans.

Q. Can we run England, China, and Japan out of the Philippine Islands in trade, or will they still hold the trade?

A. The people here will buy from the cheapest country, of course.

Q. Will the fact that the United States is so much farther away from the Philippines than these other three countries I have mentioned cut any figure against the United Stases in selling her goods here?

A. England is about as far as the United States, and Japan and China only furnish rice and tea that is consumed in the islands.

Q. Are there any American members of the Federal party?

A. A few.

Q. Who are they?

A. Mr. Fisher, clerk of the supreme court, Dr. Bournes, superintendent of the Hull Lumber Company, and others.

Q. How many men who were in the insurgent army are members?

A. A great part of the Federal party have been in the insurgent army.

Q. How many leading men who were in the insurgent army are now employed in the civil government?

A. I can not remember, but there is a large number.

Q. Were they mostly leaders of the insurgent army?

A. Yes.

Q. Mention some of them.

A. Buencamino, now a member of the civil service board; General Alejandrino, assistant engineer of this city; General Geronimo, inspector in the Philippines constabulary; General Trias, governor of Cavite Province, and many others.

Q. Are there many clerks who were formerly insurgents?

A. Not many.

Q. Your brother (who is our interpreter, interpreted this interview) is an employee of the civil government, is he not?

A. He is a clerk in the civil service board.

Q. Have you anything else now that you wish to say?

A. Yes; we want a civil government here, made by Congress; we don't want two jurisdictions here, military and civil—you see now what is happening with the "Brooks case." We don't want any more shipments of soldiers out here; we have enough.

Q. Will it be necessary if Congress don't act?

A. No; no more are necessary.

Q. If Congress don't act, then will it be necessary?

A. No, it will not be necessary in either case; there are about 40,000 soldiers here now. The other things are very necessary. A general amnesty is necessary to give a pardon to all those who belong to the insurgents.

I certify that the foregoing is a correct transcription of my notes, as taken down in shorthand, at an interview between Mr. GAINES and Dr. J. Albert, at Manila, P. I., October 13, 1901.

L. E. APPLEBY, Stenographer.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. LANDIS having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message from the Senate, by Mr. PARKINSON, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 592. An act to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Deadwood, in the State of South Dakota;

S. 2311. An act making appropriation for the improvement of the legation building owned by the United States at Tokyo, Japan;

S. 3357. An act to authorize Lieut. Commander Asher C. Baker, United States Navy; Frank W. Clarke, curator, United States National Museum, and Henry E. Alvord, William A. Taylor, H. W. Wiley, M. A. Carleton, and John I. Schulte, of the Department of Agriculture, to accept decorations tendered to them, respectively, by the Government of the French Republic;

S. 1845. An act to amend section 2 of an act entitled "An act to incorporate the convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the diocese of Washington;"

S. 640. An act to extend the provisions, limitations, and benefits of an act entitled "An act granting pensions to the survivors of the Indian wars of 1832 to 1842, inclusive, known as the Black Hawk war, Creek war, Cherokee disturbances, and the Seminole war," approved July 27, 1892;

S. R. 42. Joint resolution providing for the introduction of testimony in behalf of the defendant in all preliminary hearings of a criminal nature;

S. 305. An act providing for a monument to mark the site of the Fort Phil Kearny massacre;

S. 1178. An act providing for an additional judge in the second judicial district;

S. 1920. An act for the relief of Albert C. Brown;

S. 173. An act for the relief of the owners of the British ship Foscolia and cargo;

S. 2705. An act to provide an American register for the barge Admiral Tromp;

S. 2736. An act to provide for the service of warrants issued by the United States commissioners in the district of Minnesota, and for the summary disposition by such commissioners of certain cases connected with Indian liquor traffic;

S. 2513. An act to ratify an agreement with the Lower Brule band of the Sioux tribe of Indians in South Dakota, and making appropriation to carry the same into effect;

S. 165. An act to reimburse certain persons who expended moneys and furnished services and supplies in repelling invasions and suppressing Indian hostilities within the territorial limits of the present State of Nevada; and

S. 169. An act for the relief of Robert D. McAfee and John Chiatovich.

The message also announced that the Senate had insisted upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 10308) to provide for a permanent Census Office, disagreed to by the House of Representatives, had agreed to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. QUARLES, Mr. MCCOMAS, and Mr. TALIAFERRO as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3104) to grant the right of way through the Oklahoma Territory and the Indian Territory to the Enid and Anadarko Railway Company, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Secretary be directed to request the House of Representatives to return to the Senate the bill (S. 2802) granting a pension to Martha R. Osbourn.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

Mr. FITZGERALD of New York. I now yield ten minutes to my colleague from New York [Mr. SULZER].

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Chairman, for some time past there has been a great deal of talk by the Republicans in this House in favor of and in the defense of the trusts. To-day several Republicans have taken advantage of the pending measure before the House to make set speeches which seek to justify the position of the Republican party in favor of monopolies.

It is well known that every Democrat on this side of the House is opposed to trusts and monopolies, and if we Democrats had our way we would put all goods manufactured by a monopoly on the free list, especially where the reports and statistics and facts demonstrated that the monopoly was selling its manufactured goods cheaper in other countries than here. In such a case our people should not be taxed to support the monopoly. The protection of the protective tariff should be repealed. But we are in a hopeless minority. We can not initiate and pass bills to control trusts and to destroy monopolies. The people know the Republicans are responsible.

Mr. Chairman, I do not rise, however, for the purpose of discussing the trust question. I am now, always have been, and always will be opposed to monopolies, and to the criminal trusts. At this time I simply want to point out what is apparrent to all—that the Republicans are so busy in this Congress defending and justifying and helping the great trusts and monopolies of the country that they have not time to consider the crying wants of the people, the urgent demands of the rank and file, and the necessity of much important and meritorious legislation pending in the House and in its committees.

Now, sir; I want to state that in every Congress since I have been here a bill has been introduced in the interest of and for the benefit of the letter carriers. In three different Congresses—namely, the Fifty-fourth, the Fifty-fifth, and the Fifty-sixth—I had the honor of introducing such a bill myself, and I worked as hard as I could, before the committee, with members of the House—in season and out of season—continually to get a favorable report, but all in vain. I never could get the Republicans on the committee to report the bill and do justice to the deserving letter carriers of the country. Time and time again on the floor of this House have I and others pleaded for decent treatment and fair play for the letter carriers.

If there ever was a bill introduced in this House that ought to appeal to every member as a matter of right and justice, it is the letter carriers' bill. The bill was introduced in this Congress early in the session—to be accurate, on the 13th day of December, 1901—by the gentleman from Michigan. The Speaker referred it to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

It is there now. It is sleeping in that committee, and it will never wake up, never come out, if we do not demand and insist that the committee report it favorably. The bill is so short that I will ask the indulgence of the House while I read it. Besides, I want it to go in the RECORD as part of my remarks, so that all who are concerned in the matter can read it and judge of its merit. It is entitled "A bill to increase the pay of letter carriers," and reads as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That after June 30, 1902, the pay of letter carriers in cities of more than 75,000 population for the first year of service shall be $600; for the second year of service shall be $800; for the third year of service shall be $1,000; for the fourth year of service and thereafter shall be $1,200. And after June 30, 1902, the pay of letter carriers in cities of a population of under 75,000 for the first year of service shall be $600; for the second year of service, $800; for the third year of service and thereafter, $1,000.

SEC. 2. That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

That is all there is to it—a most commendable bill. Why should it not be reported? Why should it be smothered in the committee? Why should it not be presented to the House and the members given an opportunity to vote for it or against it? We want a record on this bill. We want to fix responsibility. We want to find out who are the friends and who are the enemies of the letter carriers. I am a friend of the letter carriers. I am proud to say that. The Government in all its service has no more honest, no more tireless, no more faithful employees. Their claims are just and should be recognized.

These men are the most efficient, the hardest worked in all the country's service, and the poorest paid. The letter carriers of the land are compelled to toil day in and day out—in sunshine and in storm, in winter and in summer, in all kinds of weather—sometimes eighteen hours out of the twenty-four, and taking all other employees in the various departments of the Federal Government as a basis for comparison, it can not be denied that the letter carriers render the most and the hardest work for the smallest remuneration. Let us be just to these honest, hard-working, faithful men.

Now, sir, why is it when every Democrat, I believe, on this side of the House is anxious for a favorable report of this bill, is anxious to have it passed, is anxious to vote for it to make it a law, why is it, I ask, that the Republicans in this House smother the bill every session in the committee? Why is the Republican party against the letter-carriers' bill? Is it because a few Republican leaders of this House are opposed to giving the letter carriers decent wages? Or is it because the Republicans are so busy legislating for monopoly that they have no time to legislate for man? Let the Republican party answer, and let man answer the Republican party.

There is a great blizzard, or has been a great blizzard, in New York City. The first city in the land is locked in the embrace of one of the worst storms for years. The streets are blocked with snow and ice. It is almost impossible for the ordinary pedestrian to get around, but the mail must be delivered, and the letter carriers are compelled to go through these streets—almost impassable—with pounds and pounds of mail matter on their backs. They have to go through streets now that horses can not get through, that vehicles can not go through, and are compelled to go through these streets four and five times a day and deliver the mail.

Rest for man, rest for beast, but no rest for the indefatigable letter carrier. He must go, he must do his work, deliver the mail on his route, no matter what the weather, no matter what the consequences to his health or his life. And yet, take them all in all, they are courteous, long suffering, uncomplaining, honest, assiduous, and industrious. How few of our citizens ever think of their trials, their wants, their health, and their little ones at home. Again and again I have watched them and sympathized with them—with their hopes and their sorrows.

To-day my heart goes out to them. I can not refrain from making this appeal in their behalf for simple justice. How I wish it were in my power to aid them, to pass and enact into law this bill they all want, they all pray for; this bill that is so fair and so just, that appeals to every right-thinking citizen in all the land, and that challenges adverse criticism. How much time and money we waste here for useless and worthless things! It is terrible when one soberly considers it all—and then, again, so much for the few, so little for the many. How easy for the monopolies and the powerful to pass a bill—a bad bill—and how difficult for the poor and the weak, the many, to pass a bill—a good bill. It is a just commentary. It should make us pause at times and think.

How poorly, how miserably the letter carriers are paid! Under the present law they do not, and can not, earn enough, no matter how long they have been in the service of the Government or how many hours a day they labor, to keep body and soul together. And what do they get? A mere pittance a month that is not enough to economically support one man. It is a disgrace, a crying shame. Many of these letter carriers have wives and children—little homes—and these wives and children in many cases are to-day in want.

The head of the household does not get paid enough by the Government to live half way decently. But it is not the Government's fault, it is the fault of the Republican leaders here in Congress. I want to appeal to the Republicans of this House, in the name of justice and fair play, in the name of decency, that when they are doing so much for organized capital, so much for criminal syndicates, so much for monopolies, for God's sake to do something for the poor letter carriers. [Applause.]

Let us be honest. Let us be just. Let us be true to the dictates of our nobler impulses, and if we are this bill—so honest and so just and so earnestly desired—will soon be reported, speedily passed, and a law on our statute books. Is there a man here opposed to it? If so, let him come out in the open and have the courage to get up and say so. I pause for an answer. No one opposed to it, and yet the bill lies in the committee, and it seems almost impossible to ever get it out. But something is going to happen. It will come out. It will be reported, never fear.

Sir, I speak plain. The case demands plain speaking. I serve notice now on the Republican leaders of this House that I shall make it my business to go deeper in this subject—to find out why this meritorious measure is delayed and the ends of justice to the letter carriers defeated. If no one else will do so, I will ascertain and lodge the responsibility where it belongs. Everyone here knows, if he knows anything, that this is a just and worthy bill and if it came before this House for a vote it would pass by an overwhelming majority.

Why should a few men on the Republican side have it in their power to deprive us all of an opportunity to vote for the bill? It is an outrage, but it is true, and knowing the facts as I do, I would despair of ever passing this bill, of ever getting it reported, if it were not for the fact that recently the New York Journal, that fearless foe of injustice and monopoly, that champion of the right and the plain people, that great American newspaper, has taken up the cause of the letter carriers and intends to see to it that they get fair play and equitable treatment.

The Journal is a mighty power for good. I believe the letter carriers will now win, because the Journal has never lost a battle when enlisted in a just cause, and the letter-carrier's cause is just. Then success to the New York Journal and speedy success to the letter-carrier's bill, and if its friends in this House will all stand together I feel confident, and I predict victory will ere long crown our efforts and the bill will soon become a law. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. FITZGERALD rose.

Mr. SHERMAN. Does the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] desire to occupy time now?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I was about to occupy the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York is entitled to twenty-six minutes.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, there are still many unsolved Indian problems. Thoughtful men have carefully considered them during many long years. Differences as sharp to-day as in the beginning exist regarding their proper determination. The Indian and his troubles, however, are with us still, and the continued encroachment of the whites upon the areas reserved to the Indians serves to accentuate the difficulties.

If it could have been foreseen early in the history of this country that its people would overrun this continent in the marvelous manner in which they have, perhaps the reservation system would never have been adopted. Some other method of caring for the Indian and of bringing him to a realization of the blessings of our civilization might have been devised, and the troublesome question of disposing of tribal funds and of allotting lands might have been avoided. At the very outset measures might have been adopted to assimilate the Indian with the white population of the country and thus relieved the present generation and future ones of many vexatious problems.

A question of more pressing moment than any other that might be mentioned is that which affects the civilization of the Indian by education. Upon other occasions I have discussed changes then proposed in the Indian school system. Further observation and reflection have only strengthened the opinions I then had. I can not refrain from again expressing my conviction that a grave, and, considering present conditions, an irreparable error was committed in the discontinuing of the contract schools.

There are many, I know, who do not share my belief on this question. For their opinion and judgment upon matters affecting the Indian service in its multitudinous details I have the most profound respect; yet I can not help feeling that time and experience will surely and unquestionably demonstrate the unwisdom of the policy that eliminated the contract school from the educational system. Instead of being cast out, I believe the contract schools should have been encouraged and increased until the necessity for other schools had ceased. Had such a course been pursued, the country as well as the Indian would have been the gainer; his ultimate civilization would have been assured, and the solution of the Indian problem would have been reached.

Education has well been defined as the drawing out and the development of the mind and soul. They must be cultivated together. One should not be developed at the expense or to the neglect of the other. The moral and intellectual improvement of man should go hand in hand.

In the last annual report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs the real object of Indian education, as understood by the officials in charge thereof, is pointed out with startling frankness.

The primary essential of Indian education—

The Commissioner says—

is to enlighten the soul. Under our system of government the latter is not the function of the State.

The Commissioner claims that when—

A white youth goes away to school or college, his moral character and habits are already formed and well defined. In his home, at his mother's knee, from his earliest moments he has imbibed those elements of civilization which, developing as he grows up, distinguish him from the savage. He goes to school, not to acquire a moral character, but to prepare himself for some business or profession by which he can make his way in after life.

Perhaps it is proper for me to say at this time that I have little sympathy for that system of education which purports to develop the intellect without the concurrent cultivation of the moral nature.

The prevailing common-school system of the States is founded upon the theory that the child receives all necessary moral and religious instruction in church and at home; in the school, intellectual training. But where is the Indian to receive his religious training, so essential to all true education, and, as the Commissioner says, "the primary essential of Indian education?"

The function of the State is not to enlighten the soul of the Indian, but, briefly stated, says the Commissioner, is "to see that the Indian has the opportunity for self-support and that he has the same protection of his person and property as is given to others. That being done, he should be thrown entirely upon his own resources, to become a useful member of the community in which he lives or not, according as he exerts himself or fails to make an effort."

An appalling picture is here presented to thoughtful men. The red man is a savage by nature. His barbarous instincts have been developed through unnumbered generations. Black with the ignorance and mysticisms of his progenitors, his mind has never been brightened, even temporarily, by the ideals or influences of Christian civilization. There is no home with a Christian mother at whose knee the red man "from his earliest moments can imbibe those elements of civilization which, developing as he grows up, distinguish him from the savage." It can not be said of the Indian, if it can of the white youth, that, having his moral nature already developed and cultivated, "he goes to school, not to acquire a moral character, but to prepare himself for some business or profession by which he can make his way in after life."

If "the primary essential of Indian education is to enlighten the soul," and in this I fully agree with the Commissioner, then the entire prevailing system of Indian education is absurd, and must be unavailing to bring the Indian to an appreciation of Christian ideals.

No hope lies dormant in my heart, Mr. Chairman, that these words will effect any change in the present system. Few members of this House have either the time or the inclination to consider this question in even the most casual manner.

Mr. BOUTELL. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Yes.

Mr. BOUTELL. Right in that connection, as the gentleman is speaking of the education of the Indian, my attention was called some time ago to a matter which surprised me very much, and that was that through a departmental ruling which to me seems illogical and unjust the rations to which the Indian children were entitled under the law had been withheld from those who were in attendance upon the private or sectarian schools. Does the gentleman know whether that is true or not?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I believe there was some such construction of the law that prevented the distribution of rations to Indians in schools not controlled by the Government, but the committee unanimously inserted in this bill a provision which cures that abuse.

Mr. BOUTELL. I am very glad indeed that that provision is in this bill, and that it will be settled beyond any question that these rations should be distributed to those in the private schools as well as those outside of them.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Yet unless it speedily be given that grave consideration that it deserves, disaster will surely and swiftly follow in the pathway of those Indians whose minds have been cultivated while their moral nature has been neglected.

I have read the glowing reports made from the different agencies of the success of those Indian children who have returned from the nonreservation schools to their homes. These reports are too highly colored. No one familiar with the service places any reliance upon them. I venture to say that no university or college in the United States would go so far as to say that only "1 per cent (of their students) have not been, so far as their lives and actions are concerned, in any way benefited by the education which has been given them." The unfortunate wrecks that are passed in everyday life teach us differently. Ask any man of wide experience in the Indian service, and another story will be heard.

There has been no intention on my part to place the blame for what I consider the present deplorable condition of the Indian educational system upon the Commissioner or his subordinates. They are executing the laws as well as it is possible to do. The fault is in the system. It lacks the most essential of all civilizing influences. The fact can not be hidden that these schools will eventually prove more harmful than beneficial. The New York Herald of September 12, 1901, tells us that the fourth article of the anarchist programme is "unreligious schools." Such schools are fostered to-day in the Indian service.

I am aware that it is strenuously denied that these schools are not Christian schools. Major Pratt, the superintendent of the Carlisle school, in an address made at the nineteenth annual meeting of the Lake Mohonk Conference of the Friends of the Indian, held in October of last year, made the following statement:

> We are trying to bring these young people into our Christian civilization. The Commissioner (of Indian Affairs) says the Government is not to consider religious matters. I think it is. I believe that the Government school that is not a Christian school ought not to exist.

What is meant by a Christian school? If Major Pratt means that those in charge and the teaching staff are to be Christians, I answer, in the first place, that that does not constitute a Christian school, and, secondly, that there is no authority lodged in anyone in this Government to exclude, either from the control or from the teaching staff of the schools, either agnostics or infidels merely because they are such. If by a Christian school is meant one wherein are taught the doctrines of any Christian church or sect, I answer that that is in direct violation of the existing law.

The schools under the law must be irreligious schools. The contract schools were abolished because the pupils who were in attendance were instructed in the doctrines and tenets of the church which controlled the particular school. That was the offensive sectarianism about which there was so much complaint. If the Government is to consider religious matters as an essential of Indian education, as Major Pratt insists, it should do it in the only feasible way ever suggested—through the contract school.

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs struck the right note in his report:

> The primary essential of Indian education is to enlighten the soul. Under our system of government the latter is not the function of the State.

I am well aware, Mr. Chairman, how futile are my words on this subject. I have no exalted pride that this House will be swayed in this way to return to the contract-school system, although I believe that should be done. I will content myself with repeating the warning of the Protestant bishop of western Texas, who was quoted a short time since in the New York Sun as saying:

> The conditions around us are to lead in a few decades to a struggle the like of which has never been seen in this country, and it will be with a generation that will not believe in anything at all.

The Indian schools are adding daily to the numbers of those who "will not believe in anything at all," and, to our lasting discredit, have never been instructed or given an opportunity to learn so as to believe in anything.

There is another phase of the school question, Mr. Chairman, to which I wish to refer. The time has come, in my opinion, when steps should be taken for the abandonment of the nonreservation schools. I refer particularly to those which are located at great distances from the reservations. Twenty-five such schools, accommodating about 7,000 pupils, about 25 per cent of the Indian children under instruction, can not be abandoned in a day. Their continuance, however, is adding to the difficulties eventually to be overcome. The Secretary of the Interior, in his report, expresses the opinion:

> That nonreservation schools have fully served their purpose, and that further extension of these schools should not be permitted, but rather that increase in facilities for education of Indians should be sought in the district or common schools of the States and Territories adjacent to reservations, and in the establishment of more day and boarding schools upon the reservations.

A glance at the report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs will convince anyone that there is no hope for relief in the common schools of the States. For the past eleven years the results have been unsatisfactory. Never have as many as 600 children been taken care of in this way, and since 1896, the high-water year, the number has steadily decreased.

The Commissioner pictures most graphically the condition of an Indian taken from his home on a reservation to a nonreservation school. His account will repay well the reading. Suffice it to say, Mr. Chairman, that the transferring of an Indian from the squalor of his home on the reservation to the luxuries of the school, his subsequent training under conditions as different as can be imagined from those that exist in the home to which he must look forward as his ultimate abiding place, the despondency that follows the change from the school back to the reservation, usually undoing in a moment what it has taken years to accomplish, can not be held up as a system productive of lasting benefit to the Indian.

In his "History of the Catholic Missions among the Indians of North America," John Gilmary Shea, the eminent historian, tells us that an Indian whom he heard successfully uphold a thesis in Latin at the Propaganda in Rome, he saw a few years later "riding half naked at the head of his tribe on the billowy plains of Nebraska." Within the past few years I met as fine a specimen of the red race as the West has produced. He had been a student at Carlisle, but unwilling to take the manual-training course provided there, had left and entered Notre Dame University to take the courses in literature. He was 19 years of age and quite well informed.

At the time I saw him he was at home on the reservation for vacation. After a conversation of some length with this young man I became convinced that he would eventually relapse into a semisavage state. Upon intimating my opinion to the agent, a many of many years' experience with the Indians, he said that from his knowledge of the boy he had no doubt that within six months from his return to the reservation he would be wearing the blanket.

I believe, Mr. Chairman, that the Indian should be placed in schools either upon or adjacent to the reservations. Whatever improvement in character, whatever knowledge would be acquired by him, would then be displayed before the old Indians in living examples, ever present, impressing the value of the white man's way; and instruction would more likely be given along lines of knowledge most useful upon particular reservations. The conditions under which the various tribes live are so diverse that it does not seem feasible to instruct them to advantage in homogeneous classes.

The tendency of the times, too, seems to be toward the breaking up of the reservations and the allotment of land to the individual. If these schools are added to without stint or limit the Representatives of the communities in which they are located eventually will be compelled to block, as far as will in their power lie, the solution of many problems of the service in order to protect and retain such schools long after their usefulness shall have ceased.

Before it is too late let a stop be put to the increase and enlargement of these schools. Develop rather the reservation schools. When they cease to be required for Indians exclusively they can be utilized for school purposes by the surrounding community. It is necessary to face resolutely the problems that press for solution to-day. It is often said that criticisms of the existing service are easily made, but remedies for the evils thereof are never proposed. I suggest a programme, Mr. Chairman, for Indian civilization which I believe would produce the results desired.

First. Make the Indians eat their bread in the sweat of their brow. Put them to work. Let them earn their living. End the life of idleness and vice which they pursue, and the first step for their reclamation will be taken.

Second. Have schools upon the reservations, or as close thereto as possible, so that the old Indians will have ever before them the improvement made in their children, and thus be impressed with the benefits that flow from proper training and education.

Third. Make their schools religious. Instill into their minds a belief and a knowledge of those things that make our boasted Christian civilization what it is. Give them an opportunity to learn and to believe. Cultivate their hearts as well as their minds, so that they may grow up and develop into decent, respectable, God fearing and abiding men and women, for their own happiness and contentment and prosperity and to the enduring glory and credit of our country. [Applause.]

Mr. SHERMAN. I wish to yield to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BOUTELL]. Does the gentleman desire to take the time now?

Mr. BOUTELL. I do not think it would be wise to do so just now.

Mr. SHERMAN. The gentleman does not care to have any time now?

Mr. BOUTELL. Not to-day; perhaps later on, if there is time, I might desire to use some time.

Mr. SHERMAN. Well, how much time might the gentleman, perhaps, want a little later on? I want to know, because I desire to let my colleague from Arkansas have as much time as possible.

Mr. BOUTELL. I had a few observations which I wished to submit while one gentleman on the other side was present. I see that he has gone, and I prefer not to address the committee in his absence. If he comes back later on in the afternoon I would like thirty minutes.

Mr. SHERMAN. I suggest to the gentleman from Arkansas that he might safely proceed for an hour if he desires to do so.

Mr. LITTLE. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. JACKSON].

Mr. JACKSON of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, a few days ago this House, by unanimous vote, passed a bill providing for the election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people. In so doing the House obeyed the command, desire, and wish of the American people. This bill will now go to the Senate, and, if we are to judge the future by the past, we have reason to fear that it will meet with the same fate as like bills on former occasions. Notwithstanding the House has performed its duty full well, it occurs to me that each member should realize that his duties have not ceased and should not cease in behalf of this bill until it becomes a law; that it would be wise and proper to express upon this floor that the people whom he has the honor to represent are heartily in favor of such an amendment. For my part I entertain the homely, old-fashioned idea that we are here as servants of the people, and it is our duty to obey their desire and wish and to legislate for their welfare. If this conviction is true, and if this sentiment is entertained by the other branch of Congress, then there is no occasion or reason to fear the result on this bill. We should, as members, explain to the American people the present condition of the bill and urge upon them the necessity of requesting—yea, petitioning—their Senators to pass such a measure.

In days past much has been said and written with reference to an amendment of this nature and character. Arguments have been made on the stump, in the papers, and in this House in its favor. Sophistry has been its only open and avowed enemy. In my judgment, the time for any lengthy argumentative discussion in favor of this bill is past. Many years ago the people took up the question, and, after a full and thorough discussion, they rendered their verdict in its favor, and nothing remains for us but, as servants of the people, to obey their command and wish. This House having performed its duty, it now remains for the Senate to perform its duty. In my judgment, he who knowingly refuses to obey the desires and wishes of the people whom he has the honor to represent is, to say the least, unmindful of his sacred duty. It gives me pleasure to announce to this House, and thereby to the Senate and the country, that the people whom I have the honor to represent are heartily in favor of this amendment, and that their desire and wish meets with my unqualified approval.

Mr. Chairman, many beautiful things in days past have been said of and concerning the Constitution, its sacredness and the protection which it extends to the humblest citizen in our land. I yield to none in my devotion to that matchless written instrument, but, sir, I do not indulge in any maudlin or sentimental reverence. It was made by the people, and it was made for the people. The people gave it and the people can take it away. The change which is now sought to be made is, in my judgment, the highest possible compliment to the genius, forethought, patriotism, and statesmanship of the fathers. This change but accentuates the fact that this is a "government by the people, for the people, and of the people." It is a consoling thought that in this day of avarice and greed, in this age of a world power by force and arms, the plain people, of whom Lincoln loved so much to speak, are demanding that they shall have greater constitutional rights.

To my mind this serves notice on the world that, notwithstanding recent legislation, the American people will yet arise in their supreme manhood, honor, and ability and, with Old Glory flying to the breezes, declare that every male citizen who has reached majority and who stands under its folds shall have a voice in saying what laws shall be made for his government and control. To my mind it serves notice on the civilized world that we are still true and loyal to a republican form of government. It refutes the base and slanderous statement which has been made that the power to govern was not derived from the consent of the governed. The demand of the people that they shall have greater constitutional rights is the strongest indictment possible against a colonial policy. We may go on in our mad career of avarice and greed, but the day will come when we will be summoned before the American people to answer to the charge of the perversion of the Constitution, and I trust and hope that in that great hour I can truthfully answer, "Not guilty."

We mistake the feeling, sentiment, and conviction of the American people if we think they will tolerate any legerdemain with the Constitution. It is as sacred as their life and honor, because both were pledged for its preservation. A moment's reflection of the history of the Republic will convince the most skeptical that the people have never sought to impair any of the rights as expressed in the Declaration of Independence, but, upon the contrary, have sought the fulfillment of those rights. We know, as an historic fact, that after the Constitution was first framed, and after the wisest heads had assured the people that it was ample and sufficient to protect them in their inalienable rights, yet so jealous were they of the individual rights of the citizen that they demanded that ten amendments be adopted, and in the most nervous language possible, emphasizing the individual rights of the citizen, they declared for freedom of speech, freedom of press, and freedom of religion.

Then, Mr. Chairman, we had that cruel war, in which father was arrayed against son and brother against brother, a war in which on either side the noblest and best of American manhood surrendered their lives on the field of battle for that which they thought was right. As a result of that war we had other amendments, among which was the one obliterating the race line and giving to the colored man the same constitutional rights as to the white. And now, Mr. Chairman, we have this proposed amendment. It takes not one jot, one hairsbreadth, from the rights heretofore conferred, but enlarges the rights of the citizen and seeks the perfection of the principles of the Declaration of Independence. This should be sufficient to notify Congress that in its legislation the Constitution should be the map, the chart, and the compass.

England may crown her King in all pomp and splendor possible. Nations may, if they desire, send representatives to witness that which is to an American citizen a hollow mockery, but America—God bless her—by and through the potential power of a written Constitution, places a crown upon each and every one of her citizens which is more resplendent than any crown worn by any king of any nation and in any age. Inasmuch as it is conceded that this Government is to send representatives to witness the coronation of the King, I can not help but think that as they leave the shores of the Republic to tread the banks of monarchy we should at the same time send some message of love and hope to the little band of Spartans in South Africa who are fighting for liberty, freedom, and a republican form of government.

Mr. Chairman, for my part I entertain none of the fears which

I have heretofore heard expressed by those who are opposed to this amendment. They tell us that it is a dangerous thing to meddle with the Constitution, that it would have a tendency to disturb settled and well-established principles. For my part, I have no desire to disturb any principle which has for its object and purpose the welfare and happiness of the people. But, sir, when courts are, in this day, juggling with the Constitution, when one day it means one thing and another day it means another and a different thing, depending upon the mere whim of the court, then, for my part, but speaking only for myself, I would ten thousand times rather that the American people, in their sovereign capacity, should meddle with the Constitution than that a select few should usurp that prerogative.

As I have said, there is nothing in this proposed amendment which can in any way reflect upon the patriotism and statesmanship of the fathers. We should remember that the conditions which confront us to-day and the conditions which confronted them are radically different. We understand and know to-day that our Constitution is but the result of compromises. Hamilton, that great man, believed in independence, yet doubted the wisdom and capability of the American people for unqualified self-government. Jefferson—sacred be his name, and his memory will ever be held dear by those who love liberty and freedom—had implicit confidence in the people and believed that that was the best government which governed the least.

As a result of these contending ideas certain concessions were made, and among them was the provision for the election of United States Senators, which we now seek to change. We should also remember that our fathers were fresh from the field of battle, where they had waged seven years of unequal warfare for our inalienable rights. In that great hour, flushed as they were with victory purchased by the priceless blood of the patriots, they did not understand or know that it would be possible for a people to ever become forgetful of those blessings. They did not understand and know that capital, haughty, arrogant, and intolerant, would seek the political markets and purchase favors at the expense of the peace and happiness of the people.

But, Mr. Chairman, I do not place my reason for supporting this measure on any such pessimistic grounds. I put it upon a higher and a nobler plane. I maintain that the citizen should have the right, by and through the sanctity of the ballot, to say who shall make laws for his government and for his control. Yea, I go further and maintain that he who holds office, the duty of which may in any way affect the life, liberty, or the property of the citizens, should receive his authority direct from the ballot and be responsible to the people for his stewardship.

Mr. Chairman, I have read somewhere—I do not now remember whether it was given as a historic fact—that there was a king so jealous of his throne that ever so often he would require his subjects to renew the oath of allegiance. In view, sir, of what has transpired within the last few years; in view of the war waged first in the name of humanity and now for subjugation and oppression; in view of the fact that in one place our flag represents liberty and freedom, and that the people shall have a voice in saying who shall make laws for their government and control, and in another place it represents subjugation and oppression and a denial of the right of the people to have a voice in determining who shall make laws for them; in view of the fact that our governmental policy has been such that God-fearing, liberty-loving citizens have been called upon to express their fears that our present policy was leading from that of a republic to an empire—and I say this in sadness and sorrow; I say it as one who loves his country and is proud of her progress, growth, and improvement; I say it as one who trusts and hopes that we may become a world power, not by force and arms, but by and through love, charity, and by extending the benign blessings of liberty and freedom—in view of these things, this proposed amendment is indeed most propitious. It serves to remind us of that sacred instrument and that the source of all power is derived from the people. It causes us to renew our allegiance to a republican form of government and pays a just tribute to the hand that swung Liberty Bell when it pealed forth its gladsome tidings of liberty and freedom. [Applause.]

Mr. LITTLE. I now yield twenty minutes to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. KERN. Mr. Chairman, I am exceedingly grieved to observe that on every occasion when a member on this side of the House gives expression to his honest and sincere sentiments upon any vital question, he is promptly accused of being a demagogue by some member on the other side of the House. I desire to say that the honest convictions and the honest sentiments and the opinions of members on this side of the House are as dear and as sacred to them as are those of the gentlemen on the other side to themselves.

I stand here to protest against that sort of intolerance, that sort of bigotry, and that sort of discourtesy. When it comes to the question of demagogery, I have never in my life seen any set of gentlemen demagogue it worse than have the gentlemen on the other side of this House [laughter] when they commenced to indulge in this cheap political claptrap and in this cheap political twaddle which they have been indulging in on this so-called German question.

The other day the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WHEELER], inadvertently I know, did not properly qualify one of the sentences which he used in his remarks, and was in one instance unfortunate in the choice of a term he employed. He took occasion yesterday to stand up here like a man, and he did then properly qualify and properly define his meaning in most elegant language, and yet indulgence in this foolish claptrap has not reached the end. The attempt to make cheap political capital out of it has not ceased. I want to say to you that I speak here as the representative of what is perhaps the strongest German Congressional district in the entire United States.

In my district there live some 300,000 people, and the great majority of them are hard-working, frugal, and intelligent Germans. I myself have the distinguished and proud honor of being the son of a German father and of a German mother, both born across the sea, and I want to say to you that my mother, although she speaks the German language perfectly, is incapable of uttering one sentence in the English language, never having enjoyed the opportunity to learn the use of our own exceedingly beautiful and fascinating tongue.

I am here in the name of the German people, whom I have the proud honor of representing, to protest most vigorously against the Republican party trying to make political capital out of this trivial and insignificant incident. Their attempt to do so simply proves how void is the realm of Republican politics of real, just, and live principle. It shows, furthermore, that the Republicans in this House do not understand the German people, their make-up, their temper, and their character in the least if they imagine that they can influence them and swerve them from their firm political convictions by that sort of abominable rot. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The German people are a people who study the issues of the day and who think independently for themselves, and instead of being influenced by some little remark that is made on this floor in a well-meant endeavor they are influenced by the great underlying principles; they are influenced by the fundamental maxims which form the basis of the political questions and the political agitations of their day and time.

It seems indeed that every time a prince or a king or a nobleman or any other kind of a royalist is mentioned and the system of government which he represents is criticised in this House, every time anything of that sort is done, rage and indignation makes itself manifest instantly on the Republican side, and a protest is raised against the temerity of him who sees fit to mention or find fault with these worthies on the same side.

Every time a king, a prince, or a noble is apologized for on that side of the House there is general rejoicing among the Republican members. But I have not yet in all the course of this debate heard one word of sympathy uttered on the Republican side of the House for the poor Boer women and children who are suffering and dying from starvation in the vile concentrado camps in South Africa [applause on the Democratic side], nor for the poor fellows, those brave, heroic men, giving up their lives in the last ditches fighting the same battles for the same principles of liberty which our Revolutionary forefathers fought. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

I have not heard one word that has been uttered in sympathy with and admiration for those people applauded on the Republican side. I want to say to you that the hearts of the German people in this country, instead of being with the monarchists and royalists in Germany or in any other country under the sun, are with those poor struggling, self-sacrificing, pious, and liberty-loving Boers in South Africa. [Applause.]

Talk to me about the German people here in America being in love with or having any sympathy for the royal and monarchical institutions—the princes, the dukes, the herzogs, and all that sort of timber in any country!

Permit me to ask you, Why are the German people who are in America among us to-day? Is it because the physical conditions in that country are not as desirable as they are in this country? Is it because the same glorious sun that shines in this land does not also shed its munificent rays there? Is it because the birds do not sing just as sweetly there as they do here? Is it because the clouds in the sky do not float just as softly there? Is it because the flowers are not as fragrant in that land or the foliage of the trees as magnificent? Is it because the land is not as fertile and does not produce rich fruit and grain to supply the wants of man there as it does here? Is it because of any of these things or for any of these reasons?

No, sir. These conditions are just as excellent in that fair land as they are in this God-blessed country of ours. They are here to get away from monarchical institutions, many of them exiled because they loved liberty and were champions in the cause of liberty. They are here to flee from princes and from kings, and to escape involuntary military service in armies formed to defend their vain titles and to oppress and crush the people. They came in quest of freedom and the right to govern themselves, and they have no sympathy with the kings, with the princes, with the dukes, and with the herzogs of the country to which they bade a long and sad farewell.

They left that country to face unflinchingly the hardest life the brain of man can conceive. They came here leaving a thickly populated country, leaving the enjoyment of social life, leaving the neighbors and the friends and the relatives they esteemed and loved. People do not leave their homes and the loving surroundings of home life for light and trivial causes. And they came here not as adventurers, not in the spirit of gold seekers; they came as workers, to clear the little patches of timber and convert them into beautiful farms. They came to this country to brave all of the perils of the wilderness, willing to live lives of isolation, to face wild beasts of prey, to face bloodthirsty and treacherous savages, knowing at the same time that the savages who roamed through the American forests and lurked in the lonely bypaths would be kinder to them than the kings and the nobles who inhabited the palaces of their own native land.

They have played a wonderful part in the work of developing and building up this great country. They have been instrumental in planting culture here, in building schoolhouses and churches, in establishing libraries and newspapers and colleges and universities, and in doing everything else that it was possible for an enlightened people to do to rescue this continent from the clutches of a dark and hopeless barbarism.

And let me tell you that they are here now as a standing protest against kingcraft and against royalty, and against militarism in all Europe; and while they do not object to receiving their countryman, Prince Henry, kindly and with all of the courtesy that is due the distinguished brother of the Emperor, who, I understand, is a man of good character and high attainments, who, I understand, is a man of even democratic proclivities—so democratic that they sometimes become distasteful to his brother, the Emperor, so democratic that they sometimes even honor him by calling him a Democrat out there—yet at the same time, in spite of all those virtues, he is not an admiral in the German Navy for the same reason that Perry was, that Farragut was, that Porter was in the American Navy, or that Dewey and Sampson and Schley are in the American Navy. These men that I have just named were made admirals in the American Navy because they were brave and intrepid fighters. These men won their places by their deeds. Prince Henry became an admiral of the German Navy by accident of birth. [Applause.] Had he not been the son of an Emperor he might be serving as a plain sailor or an obscure private to-day. [Applause.]

It is not against him personally that we protest. It is not with his personality that we find fault. We find fault with the institutions, antagonistic to our own, a standing menace to our own, of which he is the typification and the acknowledged and titled representative. We have not any fault to find even with the German Emperor as a man. According to my best information and belief the Emperor of Germany is personally in every way an admirable character.

He has the quality of independence. He is a man of culture; he is a scholar; he is a man of toleration. He loves literature; he is a patron of art; he is an admirer of good music. He is even one of those rare men who has a touch of genius in his soul. We are opposed to the system of government which he stands for and we do not want our own Government tainted with the poison of it.

We want to preserve that in all of its simplicity and all of its purity and all of the democracy which the fathers infused into its life at its earliest inception. He stands for monarchy, and the entire royal family stands for monarchy, and I am here to emphasize the fact that all of this fuss which is being made about Prince Henry is simply in line with the flunkyism and the toadyism which is disgracing this capital to-day, and which we see so humiliatingly and disgustingly displayed in sending a job lot of special envoys over to England to watch the proceeding of placing a crown on the dishonored head of a discredited King. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The anomalous part of the whole situation is this: We send a lot of flunkies over to England to attend the coronation of the King. We pay their expenses out of the Treasury of the United States. At the same time we receive Prince Henry as our guest and we pay his expenses, too. These expenses include special train hire, renting of a whole floor of a swell hotel, buying the finest champagnes and the finest cigars, not only for the Prince, but the crowd that toadies around him, and cordons of soldiers to accompany him on the strenuous flying trips through the great cities which have been included in the itinerary. So you see they catch us coming and they catch us going. [Laughter.]

If it is right for us to pay the expenses of those fellows who go over there to attend the coronation of the King, then it is right for Germany to pay the expenses of her representative now about to visit this country, or more proper still, for him to pay his own expenses. I, for one, do not believe that it is right for us to pay the expenses in either case. I do not believe that the people's money should be squandered or wasted in any such way. Leave the money in the pockets of the people, or expend it for the relief or the advancement of the people.

Now, suppose the labor organizations of England should call a great international convention of all of the labor organizations of the entire world—and the labor organizations of England are the only remaining remnants of England's departing glory. The labor organizations of England are organized for the same worthy purpose and for the same noble end that the labor unions in all other countries are banded together for—to protect laboring men against greedy combinations of wealth, to elevate laboring men in the standard of intelligence, and to raise the standard of life of laboring men and their families.

The labor organizations of England are strong, and they are generaled with exceptionally keen intelligence. Suppose, now, that special delegates from the labor organizations of this country were asked to attend that great convention, at which would be discussed all the great economic and social questions that confront the people of all countries for solution to-day. It has been urged on this floor that the coronation ceremonies of King Edward will be extremely interesting. So would that sort of a convention be interesting.

The world could certainly expect more lasting good to flow from its deliberations than from a ceremony at which nothing is done except the putting of a crown upon the head of a king. Do you suppose that under these circumstances this Congress would be as ready to jump in and make an appropriation to defray the expenses of these representatives of the laboring men as they are to defray the expenses of this crowd that goes over there in knee breeches to attend the coronation of a king? I dare say not. There would be certainly some debate allowed on the subject of appropriating the money, and it would not be sneaked into the bill under cover, as it was in this case.

It has been said, and if it has not been directly said it has been intimated again and again in the course of this two days' debate, that the Republican party is the conservator, the guardian angel, the special friend, of the German people in this country.

I challenge that assertion. During the great war of 1870—the Franco-Prussian war—what was the attitude of the Republican party to the German people then?

In violation of the neutrality laws a Republican Administration openly sympathized with the country that Germany was fighting, the same as it is now, in violation of the neutrality laws, sympathizing with the country which the Boers are fighting. Not only that, but in the State of Illinois, my own State, the Republican party tried, in opposition to all rules of decency and of justice, to close up the little German schools, where the Germans were teaching their children their own mother tongue, in addition to the national language of this country, and the expenses for running which the Germans ungrudgingly paid out of their own pockets. And for the time being the Republican party in that State was wiped from the earth for the foul and nefarious attempt.

In the State of Kansas, against the protests of all the Germans, the Republican party took their personal liberty away from the people; and wherever there has been Republican legislation it has been characterized by illiberality, fanaticism, and intolerance. The German people are a broad-minded people. They are liberal and they are tolerant in their views. They want the people, within lines of law, to enjoy liberty everywhere on earth. For that reason they know that the brave Boers are as maliciously right in their battle for liberty and justice as England is maliciously wrong. They want this country to extend its sympathy, if not its aid, to the Boers. They want the party in power in this country to stop the sending of the supplies of war from the United States to South Africa for the benefit of the English crushers of liberty, the English oppressors of men, the English slaughterers and murderers of free republics.

The German people in this country, believe me, my friends on the other side, are to-day not being influenced by the kind of claptrap that you are trying to ram down their throats. They are not so easily misled. They are not easily victimized. They are not easily hoodwinked. They will not betray their real, their staunch, and honest friends. These are at this time principally found in the Democratic ranks. They are among our very best Americans. They are students. They are studying the great political, economic, and social problems of the day; and let me further assure you that they are diligent students, intelligent, logical, and profound thinkers.

They are not only philosophers, but they are a proud people. They are a people to stand up for their rights under any and all circumstances and regardless of any consequences that may follow. They know what it has been to live under monarchical rule, under a system of compulsory military servitude, in a land where the freedom of speech and of the press is denied. They are thoroughly familiar with the oppressive and exploiting and intolerant methods of kings and nobles and nabobs, and they left their mother country to get away from them. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. BOUTELL. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. BOUTELL. I am very glad that my distinguished colleague from Illinois [Mr. KERN] has joined the ranks of the humorists. I have the honor to represent a district which is made up very largely of Germans and the descendants of Germans, and I really thought that I represented the district which had the largest number of German birth or descent, but I will not enter into any dispute with my colleague on that subject, and simply congratulate him on adding his name to the roll of the great American humorists.

During the past three days the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WHEELER] has achieved a reputation for humor distinct and national, and if it were not for the serious—not to put too fine a point on it—and earnest way in which his jocundity was displayed, he might even have acquired an international reputation. But over there across the water they take our language more seriously than we do here. Now, my acquaintance with the Germans here in this country leads me to the conclusion that they have "got on," as the boys say, to our American humor, and they quite appreciate the wondrous merry mood of the gentleman from Kentucky and of my colleague from Illinois.

The great trouble with the gentleman from Kentucky, however, is that he was not nearly as funny as he might have been, and if he had only given his humor a wider field to play upon, the results to this House might have been disastrous. I know of no reason why he held his humor so in check, except that given by our great American humorous poet, Oliver Wendell Holmes for restraining his humor. In his early days he wrote a poem called "The Height of the Ridiculous," and in these verses he showed the danger of being too funny:

THE HEIGHT OF THE RIDICULOUS.

I wrote some lines once on a time
In wondrous merry mood,
And thought, as usual, men would say
They were exceeding good.

They were so queer, so very queer,
I laughed as I should die;
Albeit, in a general way,
A sober man am I.

I called my servant, and he came;
How kind it was of him
To mind a slender man like me,
He of the mighty limb!

"These to the printer," I exclaimed,
And, in my humorous way,
I added (as a trifling jest),
"There'll be the devil to pay."

He took the paper, and I watched,
And saw him peep within;
At the first line he read, his face
Was all upon the grin.

He read the next; the grin grew broad,
And shot from ear to ear;
He read the third; a chuckling noise
I now began to hear.

The fourth, he broke into a roar;
The fifth, his waistband split;
The sixth, he burst five buttons off,
And tumbled in a fit.

Ten days and nights, with sleepless eye,
I watched that wretched man,
And since I never dare to write
As funny as I can.

[Laughter and applause.]

Now, I will endeavor to show that if the gentleman from Kentucky had been as funny as the circumstances surrounding the history of the Democratic party justified we should have all had the same experience that happened to Dr. Holmes's servant, we should simply have been overcome, and for at least ten sleepless nights the gentleman from Kentucky would have nad this House on his hands to take care of. [Laughter.] I regret very much that his address of yesterday has not yet appeared in print. I had a glance at the stenographer's notes, and I saw that after thinking over for several days his words of last Friday his chief indictment was that the Republican party under the present Administration was introducing "truculent sycophancy and flunkyism" into our international dealings and in our intercourse with the representatives of foreign powers. [Laughter.]

Now, of course, if this were true, it would be a very important question, and I think we ought really to take this matter up quietly this afternoon, when we have plenty of time, and discover, if we can, where "truculent sycophancy" began to worm its insiduous way into the administration of our national affairs. As I look back over the history of our country and study the lives of its distinguished statesmen I find that what appears to be "truculent sycophancy" in the mind of the gentleman from Kentucky was first seriously cultivated by the founder of the Democratic party. The gentleman from Kentucky criticises this Republican Administration because he says we are departing from democratic methods and are aping foreign manners and giving too much attention to foreign methods of entertaining representatives of other countries.

Now, I want to read a few words of Thomas Jefferson, the founder of the Democratic party, which are to be found in a letter from him to one Thomas Adams, on February 20, 1771, and I read from the Complete Writings of Jefferson, by Ford. It appears from this letter that Thomas Adams was just about to go as a business agent of Jefferson to London, and after giving him some several commissions he goes on:

One further favor and I am done; to search the herald office for the arms of my family. I have what I have been told were the family arms, but on what authority I know not. It is possible there may be none. If so, I would with your assistance become a purchaser, having Stearne's word for it that a coat of arms may be purchased as cheap as any other coat.

[Laughter.]

So here we have the founder of the Democratic party just dabbling, as it were, in sycophancy—not very truculent as yet. [Laughter.]

Mr. SULZER. What year was that in?

Mr. BOUTELL. Seventeen hundred and seventy-one.

Mr. SULZER. That is five years before the Revolution.

Mr. BOUTELL. That is five years before the Revolution.

Now, just a few months before the Revolution, on August 25, 1775, the great founder of the Democratic party, the introducer of truculent sycophancy into our national administration, wrote to John Randolph, from Monticello, urging a reconciliation with Great Britain, and in that letter he uses this expression:

I am sincerely one of those who would rather be in dependence on Great Britain, properly limited, than any other nation on earth, or than on no nation.

[Laughter.]

The gentleman from New York [Mr. SULZER] asked if the original letter, in which he authorized the purchase of a coat of arms, was before the Revolution. It was; but only a few months before the Declaration of Independence was signed, we find him saying that he would rather be dependent on Great Britain than on any other nation, or than on no nation. I have often wondered at the hidden meaning of that remark. It still puzzles me; but after looking the matter over carefully, it seems possible that, having purchased this coat of arms, he feared that on the Declaration of Independence and the establishment of a republican form of government it would not be an available asset, and so he hoped that the dependence would continue. [Laughter.]

Owing to the distinguished part which he took in bringing about our independence, and with my great admiration for Thomas Jefferson, I only hope sincerely that he was able to realize upon this asset and dispose of his second-hand coat of arms which he had to a good advantage. [Laughter.]

Here, now, we find the first germ of what the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WHEELER] calls this truculent sycophancy. It has a thoroughly Democratic origin. [Laughter.]

Let us come down a few years in the history of our country and of the Democratic party. The charge the gentleman makes is that the Republican party at this day is entering upon new and untrodden fields, and that the President of the United States should be gently disciplined for allowing a member of his family, in private capacity, to appear at the coronation of King Edward VII. He proceeds upon the theory, as I say, that this would be a new departure, that there has never been anything of this sort in the history of Democracy.

I wish to read a few of the opening sentences from a life of Martin Van Buren. This biography, by the way, is written by Edward M. Shepard. If I mistake not, he is good Democratic authority. I believe Mr. Shepard is the gentleman who led the serried phalanxes of Tammany to glorious defeat a few months ago in New York City. [Laughter.] The opening sentence of this book is as follows:

It sometimes happened during the anxious years when the terrors of civil war, though still smoldering, were nearly aflame, that on Wall street or Nassau street busy men of New York saw Martin Van Buren and his son walking arm in arm. "Prince John," tall, striking in appearance, his hair divided at the middle in a fashion then novel for Americans, was in the prime of life, resolute and aggressive in bearing.

And he is then described as the leader of the Democratic party in New York State, and his father is thus spoken of:

He was no longer, his friends strove to think, the schismatic candidate of 1848, but rather the ally and friend of Jackson, or, better still and farther away, the disciple of Jefferson.

For, more than any other American, Martin Van Buren had succeeded to the preaching of Jefferson's political doctrines and to his political power as well, that curious and potent mingling of philosophy, statesmanship, and electioneering.

Now, Mr. Chairman, where did the son of this distinguished Democrat get his title of "Prince John?" Where did he learn to part his hair in the middle?

Mr. SULZER. Did Prince John ever become baldheaded, like some members of this House, and have no hair to part?

Mr. BOUTELL. I do not know whether later in life he joined the ranks of those whose strength goes to brains instead of hair [laughter]; but at this time we have Mr. Shepard's authority that he had hair and that he parted it in the middle. The gentleman from New York will recollect the old consolation of the men with smooth domes:

If by thy hairs thy sins should numbered be,
Angels in heaven were not more pure than thee.

[Laughter.]

Now we are tracing the origin of truculent sycophancy, as understood and described by the distinguished gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WHEELER]. We find that as late as 1860 Martin Van Buren, the friend, the disciple of Jefferson and Jackson, with his son, Prince John, was often seen about Wall street. What a strange place for two such distinguished Democrats! [Laughter.]

Why was the son called Prince John; and why, when he had any hirsute adornment, did he part it in the middle?

I read from a volume entitled, American Biography, by Hunt, on page 53, a paragraph which will give the explanation:

In May, 1838, Mr. John Van Buren visited England on professional business. The coronation of Queen Victoria in that year drew to London a great concourse of English people and foreigners of distinction and was the occasion of much festivity. As the son of the President of the United States he was invited very generally to the public and private parties, and the marked attention which he received from the nobility and from the Queen herself, the particulars of which may be found in the papers of the day, were of a most flattering character.

[Laughter.]

And so we see that "Prince John," son of the great Democratic President, acquired and held through life this distinguished title by attending in his private capacity the coronation of Queen Victoria. [Laughter.] And so to-day, after the lapse of some sixty-four years, when the gentleman from Kentucky is so distressed at the reports that the daughter of the President is to be present simply as a spectator at the coronation of Edward VII, we see how much funnier he could have been if he had only alluded to this direct precedent, that in 1838 the son of President Van Buren attended the coronation of Queen Victoria.

Mr. SULZER. Did he pay his own expenses?

Mr. BOUTELL. Undoubtedly he did; for was he not a prince—a Democratic prince?

Mr. SULZER. That is good.

Mr. BOUTELL (continuing). And he acquired the sobriquet of "Prince John" from his "truculent sycophancy" in attending the coronation of Queen Victoria, and it followed him to his tomb. [Laughter on the Republican side.]

Mr. SULZER. Will the gentleman pardon me?

Mr. BOUTELL. Surely.

Mr. SULZER. I believe you are right. He got that title because he danced with Queen Victoria, but I believe the Democrats of New York never elected him to any political office.

Mr. BOUTELL. The Democrats may never have elected him to any political office, but I will say to the gentleman from New York that Prince John Van Buren, like his great successor the English Prince Croker, elected more men in New York than any other man during his lifetime. [Laughter and applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. SULZER. That only goes to show that he was a good politician as well as a good dancer.

Mr. BOUTELL. That is what Mr. Shepard says. [Renewed laughter.] And all I have to say with reference to the remark of the gentleman from Kentucky, that we are departing from old moorings and established precedents and laying down entirely new Republican rules, we were simply following the example set by Martin Van Buren and his distinguished son. [Laughter and applause.]

I am sure that the gentleman from Kentucky will admit that if the President's daughter, as the invited guest of an American private citizen, witnesses the coronation of the English King, there will be no more gracious presence at the ceremony than the beautiful daughter of our American President [loud applause]; and when she comes back home she will not be "Princess Alice," but the same modest, unassuming daughter of the President, for, according to our Republican ideas,

Kind hearts are more than coronets,
And simple faith than Norman blood.

[Loud applause.]

Well, now, there is another indictment, and that is we are sending a special embassy to the coronation of Edward VII, and that it is something new, startling, Republican, and "truckling sycophancy." [Laughter.] Let us see what the Democratic party has done in this line. Oh, how funny the gentleman from Kentucky would have been if he had told us about what I am now going to describe!

I want to call attention to the coronation of a distinguished monarch that occurred on the 26th of May, 1896, during the second incumbency of the last Democratic President of this great Republic. On that day the Czar of all the Russias was crowned the head of a vast empire, and consecrated as head of the national church. The New York Herald of May 27, in the account given by its correspondent, contained this sentence in describing the ceremonies:

Mr. Clifton R. Breckinridge, the American minister, wore a full court suit.

[Laughter.]

Gen. A. C. McCook, the special representative of the American Government, and Admiral Selfridge wore full dress suits of their rank.

Now, Mr. Chairman, in the first place, who was Clifton R. Breckinridge? A native of Lexington, Ky. [Great laughter and applause on the Republican side.] A most distinguished Democrat. The financier who drew the financial part of the great Wilson bill as a Representative in this House from Arkansas.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. BOUTELL. I will.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Have you ever heard of Mr. Breckinridge politically since he did that?

Mr. BOUTELL. Well, I will state to my friend from New York that I am not really much of a friend of "truculent sycophancy," and I have no doubt its effects are disastrous, but I just wanted to trace its origin. [Laughter.] This is historical matter which my friend from Kentucky refrained from mentioning. It was quite too funny. [Laughter.]

I do not object to the opinions of my friend from Kentucky. I do not object to the opinions of my friends on the other side. I am glad to help on the international reputation for humor of my friend from Kentucky, but I want to get the facts right, and I want to show you how much more funny he might have been if he had only covered the whole ground. [Laughter.]

Mr. SCOTT. Right in line of the question of the gentleman from New York, may I ask the gentleman from Illinois if there are not a number of other Democrats that have not been heard of since 1896? [Laughter on the Republican side.]

Mr. BOUTELL. Quite right. Many have gone down since then. Now, I find in the public diplomatic correspondence sent from St. Petersburg in 1896 the following cablegram:

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
St. Petersburg, May 6, 1896.

OLNEY, Washington:

As to costumes, please instruct.

BRECKINRIDGE.

[Laughter on the Republican side.]

Truculent sycophancy a Republican invention, Mr. Chairman! "As to costumes, please instruct!" [Laughter.] Well, that was a cablegram. He was afraid that cablegram might get lost under the waves of the Atlantic, and so on the same date he sent a letter——

Mr. MERCER. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. BOUTELL. Certainly.

Mr. MERCER. Did the Government pay for that cablegram?

Mr. BOUTELL. I presume it was charged up in the expenses of the legation. The letter is as follows:

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
St. Petersburg, May 6, 1896.

Hon. RICHARD OLNEY,
Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.

SIR: Upon the overleaf I have the honor to give a copy of my telegram to you of this date in regard to an unofficial costume which the Russian direction of ceremonies has prescribed for those attending the coronation functions who are not permitted to wear a military uniform or a costume indicative of official position.

In the same connection I inclose a translation of the circular giving this information.

This information has only been made known during the last three or four days. Since then I have taken steps to communicate it to Americans placed upon the list of distinguished visitors, and have acquired, in broken installments, the full meaning and desire of the Russian Government in the matter.

Without entering upon the well-worn subject of an official costume, I will simply say that I find, after several conferences with members of the direction of ceremonies, that the Government, desiring that all should show some distinctive mark of respect at what is to them both the coronation and consecration of their majesties, and having for the first time determined to admit to the functions persons not in official life, has prescribed this costume for such persons on these occasions, as well as for foreign officials who are not permitted to wear a costume denoting their position or rank, and that they greatly desire the members of this legation to conform to it. They make the point that this is only indicative of the occasion, and not of anyone's official position, as an evening suit is of most formal social gatherings, etc.

At the same time they are extremely polite and considerate about the matter, saying that while they must require this of our visitors, they will accept cheerfully the decision I may reach in regard to myself and the Secretary, but adding that they hope it will not be considered unreasonable or contrary to the law and custom of the United States.

It seemed to me that the case could not be stated within the possible limits of a cablegram, and that under all the circumstances I should invoke your decision before giving a final reply.

I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

CLIFTON R. BRECKINRIDGE.

Mr. SIMS. Will the gentleman from Illinois state from whence he got those papers, and whether they are authentic?

Mr. BOUTELL. From the public records, and for the accuracy of the papers I will refer the gentleman to the State Department.

Mr. SIMS. The gentleman got them from the State Department, I understand the gentleman to say?

Mr. BOUTELL. Surely, these are copies of the public records.

Mr. SIMS. Brought here on the floor of the House for this purpose?

Mr. BOUTELL. I am sorry the mention of these monuments of Democratic diplomacy distresses my friend. Now, in the annotations describing what the director of ceremonies required to be worn is the following:

Foreigners of distinction who have neither court nor military uniform are to wear full dress: Evening dress coat, metal buttons, white vest, knee breeches, and silk stockings.

[Laughter on the Republican side.]

Mr. LACEY. Does the gentleman mean to say that a Democrat appeared at that function in silk stockings?

Mr. BOUTELL. That is what the able correspondent of the New York Herald said, and I have endeavored to find ground for denying the report of such truculent sycophancy on the part of a distinguished Democrat. [Laughter.]

Mr. LACEY. It is beyond belief. [Laughter.]

Mr. BOUTELL. But he was a most distinguished gentleman and a man for whom we have great respect, and a Democrat. But where was the gentleman from Kentucky at that time? Shades of Fayette County, rise up and accuse him! [Laughter.]

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Will the gentleman from Illinois allow me a question?

Mr. BOUTELL. Certainly.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Does not the gentleman think it would be more commendable if the State Department would be as diligent in helping the suffering Boers in South Africa as it is to get this kind of information? [Applause on the Democratic side and derisive cries on the Republican side.]

Mr. BOUTELL. The State Department is not getting this or any other kind of information for the gentleman from Illinois. The gentleman from Illinois is using public records to establish the reputation of the gentleman from Kentucky as a humorist.

Now, a few words more in reference to another matter—the entertaining of the representative of a foreign power, and this insistence by the gentleman from Kentucky that it is purely a Republican innovation. I want to read a few paragraphs from Hawaii's Story by Hawaii's Queen. On page 120, I read:

We arrived safely at Washington and found comfortable quarters at the Arlington Hotel. Our party consisted of the following individuals: Her Majesty Queen Kapiolani, wife of my brother, the reigning King; Lieut. Gen. J. O. Dominis, governor of the island of Oahu, and myself; Col. C. P. Iaukea, Col. J. H. Boyd, besides which each of us had our attendants, the Queen having four, and each of the others at least one attendant or valet.

A few days after our arrival the Queen signified her wish to call on the President; so we all attended Her Majesty to the White House. President Cleveland and his beautiful young bride most cordially received and hospitably entertained us, and a more recent experience of my own would prove that neither one of them has ever forgotten that their position required them to be really the first lady and the first gentleman of the land.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon of the same day our call was returned by Mrs. Cleveland, accompanied by the ladies of the Cabinet. No person could have shown in her presence a fairer type of youth and loveliness than the wife of the President, and her manner was graceful and dignified in a rare degree for so young a lady. She impressed us with a conviction, since most abundantly justified, that she was well chosen for the duties and responsibilities of an exalted position. On the day following her call we were invited to dine at the Executive Mansion. The Queen occupied the seat of honor at the right of President Cleveland; the Secretary of State, Mr. Endicott, attended me to my seat on the President's left; the Hawaiian minister, Hon. H. A. P. Carter, was assigned to a seat on Mrs. Cleveland's right; while General Dominis, my husband, waited upon Mrs. Endicott, and was at Mrs. Cleveland's left. The remaining members of the Queen's party were disposed of in proper order, and the dinner passed off with cheerfulness and in due form. It was a grand affair and arranged with the best of taste.

[Laughter.]

Mr. VANDIVER. Allow me to ask the gentleman a question at this point. I would like to ask whether it turned out, immediately after the events which he has been reading, that the American people reelected President Cleveland to the White House. [Derisive cries on the Republican side.]

Mr. BOUTELL. No; but four years later you did.

Mr. VANDIVER. We afterwards repudiated him.

Mr. BOUTELL. Was it for that reason? He is the ablest leader you have had since Van Buren.

Thus we have in the purchasing of a spurious coat of arms by the first Democratic President of the United States and the entertainment of a real queen by the last Democratic President of the United States a sort of condensed history of truculent sycophancy. [Laughter.] It seems to be a thoroughly Democratic institution.

Mr. MAHON. I wish the gentleman would give the color of these distinguished people as he goes along.

Mr. BOUTELL. No color line seems to have been drawn. All potentates have been treated with equal distinction.

Now, we are about to extend some international courtesies and treat with genial hospitality, a gentleman who comes here from a country that has always been the unfailing and hereditary friend of the American people. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WHEELER], going almost to the "height of the ridiculous," applied some epithet to him which I hope will be regarded as real genuine humor by the people of the German Empire. But when his attention was called to the entertainment of the Prince of Wales under somewhat similar circumstances by a Democratic President, he fell back upon the statement that the Prince of Wales was entertained simply in his private capacity.

But I now wish to refer to an account of the entertainment of a gentleman who came here, not at all in his private capacity, but in a very public and open capacity as the personal representative of the most absolute monarch that has ever ruled over any portion of this earth since the passing away of imperial Cæsars. I hold in my hand an elegant morocco-bound gilt-edged volume entitled "His Imperial Highness, the Grand Duke Alexis, in the United States of America, during the winter of 1871–72." The narrative was prepared from the newspapers of the day and from letters and other contemporary sources of information. The grand duke arrived not in a private steamer, but on one of the great war vessels of the Russian Empire. He was met at the mouth of New York Harbor by several of the American gunboats.

The account goes on to tell that the national salute of 21 guns was fired on each side, and then the procession moved on up the river. Then after the debarkation began the tour of the grand duke through the United States. We have here an account of his official call upon President Grant in Washington; his visit to New York, Boston, and the other great cities of the country; his tour of the Great Plains; his visit to Denver and Topeka and Jefferson City and St. Louis, and finally his imperial highness the Grand Duke Alexis, the official representative of the Czar of all the Russias, crossed the boundaries of the State of Kentucky. [Laughter and applause.] What happened then, Mr. Chairman? Did the people go out with bowie knives and shotguns to drive him from the confines of their Commonwealth? Quite the contrary. The people of Kentucky were true to their best traditions for generous hospitality. Let me read the account of what occurred in Louisville:

LOUISVILLE, KY., January 31, 1872.

At half past 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon 25 carriages left the Galt House for the Bridge station to meet the ducal train. At that hour there were more than a thousand people congregated in front of the stately building, and the crowd was momentarily increasing. The front of the house was decorated with the American and Russian flags, which swayed in the breeze in close proximity to each other, and the steps and rotunda were thronged with people. The gamins of the street had gathered in force, and their shrewd comments on the event of the day, so near its culmination, were the source of much amusement.

The train arrived at a quarter past 3 o'clock, and a portion of the committee entered the cars, with General Preston at the head. Introducing themselves and announcing the object of their presence, the Duke taking the arm of General Preston, they proceeded to the carriages and were soon on their way up Main street.

Think of it, my friends. Think of the deep and almost unspeakable pathos of that spectacle, this grand Kentucky gentleman taking the arm of a Duke, not a plain, simple Duke, but a Grand Duke! [Laughter.]

The street was thronged with spectators, and almost every window was filled, many with ladies, who waved their handkerchiefs at the cortege as it passed, and all the party, including the principal guest, acknowledged the salutes with polite bows. A number of flags were displayed at various points along the route, and here and there a cheer went up as the party swept by. The city was alive with excitement and interest.

Arrived at the Galt House, the ducal party and the committee alighted and proceeded to the parlor, where General Preston made the excuses of the committee, who retired, leaving the visitors to be conducted to their apartments in order to rest after their long ride by rail.

The rooms were most elegantly fitted up.

The house rapidly filled with visitors and people anxious to catch a glimpse of the guest, and as 9 o'clock approached the crowd exhibited considerable nervousness and impatience. The spacious parlors were well thronged, and the committees of citizens and of the legislature were present with their respective chairmen, and every preparation was made for the formal ceremony. At length, at about half past 9 o'clock, the doors of the crimson parlor were thrown open and the ducal party emerged from the music parlor, with the imperial visitor at their head. Halting in front of the committee, who were arranged in convenient positions, General Preston advanced and spoke as follows:

Now, I would like to call the attention of the gentlemen to the fact that the illustrious Russian was not traveling incognito. He was not addressed as Mr. Romanoff, but the committee, with General Preston at their head, advanced and said:

Your imperial highness—

[Prolonged laughter and applause.]

it affords me great pleasure, in behalf of the people of Louisville, to welcome you to the city and to the State. We, in common with our countrymen, appreciate the course of Russia to the United States, and the constant and unaltered friendship which has always existed between our Governments. The people remember the early assistance rendered by Russia when we first struggled to establish the freedom of commerce and equal maritime rights. By the powerful aid of the most extensive empire of the Old World those principles have now been finally and happily established.

A concord, based upon great ideas and generous purposes, leading to free commercial wealth and widened civilization, is in this age the surest augury for permanent amity, and we trust that this strong bond between our countries may never be severed. The hospitalities tendered to your highness to-day are the spontaneous offering of the people of this city in an unofficial way simply intended to testify to your highness the pleasure your visit has caused—but the legislature of the State and its authorities share this sentiment and have appointed a committee, now present, to extend official welcome.

Oh, ye that have tears to shed for truculent sycophancy, prepare to shed them now—

[Prolonged 'aughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

A MEMBER. Oh, let him have some more.

Mr. SHERMAN. How much time have I remaining?

Mr. SULZER. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman be permitted to conclude his remarks. We are enjoying them as much as he is. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. SHERMAN. I yield fifteen minutes more to the gentleman.

Mr. BOUTELL. That will be abundant time, I will say to the gentleman from New York, in which to complete the history of this interesting episode which the self-restraint of the gentleman from Kentucky prevented him from mentioning. [Laughter and applause.]

I trust, therefore, in conclusion, that your highness will permit me to introduce the speaker of the house of representatives, the Hon. Mr. McCreary.

Think of it! A free citizen of the State of Kentucky, an undaunted Democrat, standing up in such an august presence and using this language:

The Duke bowed assent, and Mr. McCreary then came forward and said: "Your Imperial Highness—

[Prolonged laughter.]

"We have been deputed by the house of representatives to extend to you and your suite a cordial invitation to visit the capital of this State. We trust that your highness will find it convenient to name a day when it will be agreeable to you to visit us, in order that the representatives of the people of this Commonwealth may have an opportunity of reciprocating that courtesy and hospitality which your imperial father so generously extended to two United States ministers, citizens of Kentucky, and which your people have uniformly shown to all American citizens."

And this, gentlemen, from the speaker of a Democratic house of representatives that had just elected another McCreary to the United States Senate. [Laughter.]

Where, oh, where were the great enemies of truculent sycophancy and flunkyism? Can it be possible that this Democratic legislature of the State of Kentucky had so degenerated at the time that truculent sycophancy was allowed to paralyze its members? [Laughter.]

The Grand Duke replied to both as follows:

"GENTLEMEN: I thank you heartily for the cordial welcome and generous reception which you have accorded me. I thank the people of Louisville for this display of their kind feeling and hospitality, and I thank the legislature and State authorities for the kind invitation they have extended. It is a source of deep and sincere pleasure to me to have been so warmly and hospitably received. I deeply regret that my time is so arranged that I am unable to visit the city of Frankfort or the city of Cincinnati. Permit me again to thank you for your kind and generous reception."

Then the narrative proceeds as follows:

The general then proceeded to introduce the members of the committees and afterwards the other persons present to his highness.

Some time was spent in these introductions, the members of the suite having also to receive the welcomes of the citizens, and a brief interval of informal conversation followed, when the ballroom was thrown open, the dance was announced, and in a few minutes the parlors were comparatively deserted. The duke led the grand quadrille with Mrs. Preston. The ball was the most brilliant that has ever taken place in this capital. It seemed as if all the beauty and fashion of the country had gathered there to honor the royal guest and to do justice to the reputation of the commonwealth.

It was an outpouring of Kentucky's fairest and brighest daughters and her bravest and most gallant and chivalrous sons. It was a right royal welcome, of which the city and the guests may alike be proud.

[Prolonged laughter and applause.]

Then the narrative goes on to describe the banquet and the following day's festivities and visits to the Kentucky Club and the evening at the opera house. Then it says:

They leave behind a most favorable impression of their own intrinsic worth and high character and a knowledge of their courteous manners and good sense which could only have been gained through the intercourse afforded by the visit now brought to a close. The good wishes of the people of Louisville follow them on their way southward.

And so, Mr. Chairman, when the representative of the German people comes to our shores and goes, as I trust he will, to the Commonwealth of Kentucky, noted for its chivalrous sons and its fair daughters, for its kindness and hospitality to strangers, I feel confident that he will receive from the good people of Louisville and of all Kentucky the same cordial, kind, and hospitable greeting which they gave to the Grand Duke Alexis. [Applause.] And I believe that if my genial and humorous friend from Kentucky [Mr. WHEELER] were also present, he would be one of the chivalrous sons who would show the height of his humor by joining in the festivities. [Laughter.]

Now just one further point in reference to the visit of the representative of the German people, and I am done.

It is interesting at this time to call attention to the firm, unbroken friendship that has been maintained between the German people and the people of the United States down to the present time. I would like to read just a few words from an editorial in a German paper—the Sonntagspost, of Chicago—of February 16, 1902, written, I should say, before the outburst of humor on the part of the gentleman from Kentucky had become known to the writer. It is entitled "The Historic Friendship," and is as follows:

"The Influence of the American Revolution upon German Literature" is the title of the terse, half-historical, half-literary essay, of which Prof. James Taft Hatfield, the head of the German department of the Northwestern University at Evanston, and Miss Elfriede Hochbaum, a former pupil of the professor, are the authors. The essay has recently appeared from the press of the Macmillan Company as a reprint from the excellent quarterly, Americana Germanica, which is devoted exclusively to the comparative study of the literary, linguistic, and cultural relations between Germany and America. The German press is giving the pamphlet appreciative notice. In a long discussion of it in the Berliner Tageblatt of January 18 we find the following:

"Just at this juncture it is especially interesting that reference to the old relations between Germany and the Union should be made from the American side. Among the fosterers of these relations we find the poets Lessing, Klopstock, Wieland, Herder, Schiller, Goethe, Seume, and Klinger. The romance of the life of the original Indians, the heroism of the fighters for independence, the tragedy of the slave period and the triumph of ideal of emancipation, all these things have inspired the German poets; all the longing and striving and hard-won victory is reechoed in German literature.

And the literature and history of that period clasped hands. With reference to the American war of independence, Frederick the Great wrote as early as the year 1775 to the Count of Maltzan, the Prussian ambassador at London: "The great question is ever, whether the colonies will not find means to separate themselves entirely from the mother country and found a free republic? This much is certain, almost all Europe takes the side of the colonies and defends their cause, while the cause of the court finds neither patrons nor defenders."

And two years later Wieland writes in the Teutscher Merkur: "Good characteristics circulate about over the world like everything else. At present we see them in the colonies of North America. It is a refreshing sight for the friend of mankind to behold a virtuous people. Hundreds of thousands animated by one all-pervading spirit, with lofty courage steadfastly and immovably upholding the inalienable rights of mankind; a nation every member of which is striving to sacrifice his private interest for the common weal; in which old and young, men and women, think and act like the noblest heroes and heroines in Plutarch."

Baron Steuben, an able man and a Prussian officer, went from words to deeds, and offered his services to Congress as a volunteer in a letter, in which he said:

And, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, before reading this letter I want to say that in my mind it embodies as fine an expression of pure devotion to liberty as can be found in the literature of any age, and as long as a citizen of this Republic lives the name of Von Steuben must always be held in the highest honor, side by side with Lafayette. [Applause.] Here is the letter:

The sole reason which has brought me to this part of the world is the wish to serve a people that are fighting so noble a fight for their rights and their freedom. I ask neither money nor title. * * * If I possess any ability in the art of war, it will be more prized by me if I can make it of service to such a republic as I hope still to see the United States become. I would gladly buy with my blood the honor of some time having my name named among the defenders of your freedom.

Steuben has indeed bought this honor; he has perpetuated his name for all time in the history of the American struggle for independence.

It is indeed of interest at this time to look back upon the old relations between Germany and the United States. If this historic friendship is purged anew from the dross of misunderstanding and distrust, it will indeed be a blessing to both countries.

And as I draw near the close of my time I should like to recall one other historic incident not often alluded to; that when we were seeking the sinews of war to carry on the struggle to preserve this nation in 1861 and the following years, when we could find little or no market for our securities in London, owing to the position taken then by the English Government, and a still smaller market in Paris, it was in Frankfort and Berlin that we got our financial aid. [Applause.]

And so it seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that having traced the history of truculent sycophancy and flunkyism from Thomas Jefferson and Martin Van Buren down to the present time, the gentleman from Kentucky has earned his position as an international humorist. Now, had we not better accept the situation, so long as we can not expect that all countries will immediately adopt our form of government and fall into all our habits? And so long as we are brought into close international relations, let us recognize other forms of government and not fail in national hospitality in extending international courtesies.

Then the greeting which we give to the German prince who is coming here will not be given because he is the brother of an Emperor, not because he is an admiral; it will be given in the spirit of the American people shaking hands with the German people. [Applause.] It is Uncle Sam shaking hands across the sea with his old hereditary friend Unser Wilhelm. [Applause.] And so I trust that whatever has been said by the gentleman from Kentucky in his merry mood will be taken by our guest simply as an instance of the erratic form which American humor sometimes assumes, even in the National House of Representatives. [Prolonged applause.]

Mr. LITTLE. I yield to the gentleman from Nevada [Mr. NEWLANDS] the time remaining to this side for general debate.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I yield five minutes of my time to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. FLEMING].

Mr. FLEMING. Mr. Chairman, I think the House is under obligations to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BOUTELL] for the very thorough and scholarly review he has made of the case he has been discussing. I have enjoyed his remarks. It is very hard to resist the logic of a hearty laugh; but the gentleman has turned entirely away, in his humorous treatment of the case, from one phase of it, to which I think a large number of the members on this side of the House object. This is the first instance, this is the precedent for the United States of America sending a special embassy, at the expense of the public Treasury, to the coronation of a king.

Mr. BOUTELL. Mr. Chairman, I thought I stated that in describing the ceremonies at Russia. What I intended to state was that a special embassy was sent by President Arthur to the coronation of this Czar's predecessor, and that at the time of the coronation, in 1896, General McCook and Admiral Selfridge were sent as special envoys to that country with greetings from the United States.

Mr. FLEMING. I am glad to be corrected, Mr. Chairman, in that particular. The gentleman will find, I am sure, on looking at the stenographic notes of his remarks, that he did not make that statement in the first instance, and I was not informed as to that fact of history.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I wish to say, speaking for myself, and not representing or pretending to represent anyone but myself, that I do not indorse the attitude taken in the speeches made by the gentleman from Kentucky upon this subject. I wish to say, however, to his credit that not since the opening day of this Congress has any man on the Democratic side or the Republican side made a speech which, as a speech, excelled in merit and power that made by the gentleman from Kentucky. I further compliment him on the coolness with which he behaved in subsequent controversies on the floor. I want to compliment him, too, on the courtesy that he showed to other members in replying to their taunting inquiries. But beyond that, I for one do not wish to go.

I shall not vote to create this special embassy nor for it to have any money out of the public Treasury to attend the coronation of the English King. We have a regularly accredited ambassador in England; let his presence suffice. But, Mr. Chairman, I will not condemn in the rough language of the gentleman from Kentucky the distinguished American who occupies the position of Secretary of State in our country. For one I express regret that he was not called earlier to that lofty position, for, unless I am misinformed, if he had occupied that station, our Administration would never have made the fearful blunder it did make in connection with our policy in the Philippines.

Again, Mr. Chairman, so far as the remarks of the gentleman from Kentucky went in making a contemptuous reference, if such it was, to the German Prince, who is to be our guest so soon, I certainly can not agree with him. This House had already passed a bill appropriating money for his entertainment, and when we did that it was equivalent to ratifying the invitation that had been extended by the President. He was then our invited guest, and it was too late for any man to properly open his mouth in condemnation of what had been done or in criticism of the gentleman who was to accept our hospitality.

There was one other point in the remarks of the gentleman from Kentucky to which I can not agree. He expresses disapprobation in strong terms of the President permitting a member of his family to attend, even in a private capacity, the coronation exercises of the King of England. There, again, I wish to dissent. I have read in the papers that the President's daughter had been beseeching him for his consent that she might enjoy this great pleasure and this high honor. The account I read of it said that the President was hesitating as to what his duty was in the premises.

I for one wish to say that I hope the President will give his consent and that his daughter will attend these exercises [applause on the Republican side], believing, as I do, that in all the noble qualities of womanhood, in mental accomplishments, and in graciousness of manner and charms of person she may stand in the presence of crowned heads and show to all the world that the daughter of a plain American citizen whom we have simply elevated to the Presidency is the equal of the daughters of the proudest monarchs on earth. [Loud applause on the Republican side.]

Furthermore, from a political standpoint, I wish to say I would have a contempt for any Republican who would turn Democrat for that reason. [Laughter.] We hope to put a Democrat in the White House at the next Presidential election [derisive laughter on the Republican side]; but I believe if we are to do so we must have better reasons than this—otherwise I would have to despair this far in advance of success in our efforts. [Applause.]

[Mr. NEWLANDS addressed the committee. See Appendix.]

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I had intended to occupy ten or a dozen minutes in explaining briefly the Indian appropriation bill, but it might seem somewhat out of place to discuss that subject this afternoon. [Laughter.] I think I will content myself with the use of the five-minute rule to-morrow to say what I desire to say, perhaps not in connected form, but from time to time as certain provisions are reached, and I will move now that the committee rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. MONDELL, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 11353, the Indian appropriation bill, and had come to no resolution thereon.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. WACHTER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 8652. An act granting an increase of pension to Virginia Terrill;

H. R. 3266. An act granting an increase of pension to James Smith;

H. R. 1484. An act granting an increase of pension to Robert M. Scott;

H. R. 1200. An act granting an increase of pension to Oliver P. Goodwin;

H. R. 6453. An act granting an increase of pension to Ida R. Siegfried;

H. R. 3229. An act granting a pension to Catherine R. A. Ogden;

H. R. 7343. An act granting an increase of pension to Martha V. Keenan:

H. R. 2620. An act granting a pension to Jennie A. McKinley;

H. R. 1324. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles N. Lee;

H. R. 11470. An act making an appropriation for clearing the Potomac River of ice;

H. J. Res. 88. Joint resolution authorizing the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to return bank checks, drafts, certificates of deposit, and orders for the payment of money having imprinted stamps thereon to the owners thereof, and for other purposes; and

H. J. Res. 131. Joint resolution authorizing the transfer to the Library of Congress of the Library of State Reports, etc.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate bills of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and referred to their appropriate committees as indicated below:

S. 592. An act to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Deadwood, in the State of South Dakota—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

S. 2311. An act making appropriation for the improvement of the legation building owned by the United States at Tokyo, Japan—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

S. 3357. An act to authorize Lieut. Commander Asher C. Baker, United States Navy; Frank W. Clarke, curator, United States National Museum, and Henry E. Alvord, William A. Taylor, H. W. Wiley, M. A. Carleton, and John I. Schulte, of the Department of Agriculture, to accept decorations tendered to them, respectively, by the Government of the French Republic—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

S. 1845. An act to amend section 2 of an act entitled "An act to incorporate the convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Diocese of Washington"—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

S. 640. An act to extend the provisions, limitations, and benefits of an act entitled "An act granting pensions to the survivors of the Indian wars of 1832 to 1842, inclusive, known as the Black Hawk war, Creek war, Cherokee disturbances, and the Seminole war," approved July 27, 1892—to the Committee on Pensions.

S. Res. 42. Joint resolution providing for the introduction of testimony in behalf of the defendant in all preliminary hearings of a criminal nature—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

S. 305. An act providing for a monument to mark the site of the Fort Phil Kearny massacre—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 1178. An act providing for an additional judge in the second judicial district—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

S. 1920. An act for the relief of Albert C. Brown—to the Committee on Claims.

S. 173. An act for the relief of the owners of the British ship Foscolia and cargo—to the Committee on Claims.

S. 165. An act to reimburse certain persons who expended moneys and furnished services and supplies in repelling invasions and suppressing Indian hostilities within the Territorial limits of the present State of Nevada—to the Committee on Claims.

S. 169. An act for the relief of Robert D. McAfee and John Chiatovich—to the Committee on Claims.

S. 2705. An act to provide an American register for the barge Admiral Tromp—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

S. 2736. An act to provide for the service of warrants issued by United States commissioners in the district of Minnesota, and for the summary disposition by such commissioners of certain cases connected with Indian liquor traffic—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

REPRINT OF A BILL.

Mr. SOUTHARD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for a reprint of House bill 123. I will say that the bill is still under consideration and the print of it is entirely exhausted.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SOUTHARD], chairman of the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures, asks unanimous consent for a reprint of House bill 123. Is there objection?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. What is the title of the bill?

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman report the title of the bill?

Mr. SOUTHARD. It is the bill (H. R. 123) to adopt the weights and measures of the metric system as the standard weights and measures of the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request?

There was no objection.

ENROLLED BILLS.

Mr. WACHTER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had presented to the President of the United States, for his approval, a bill of the following title:

H. R. 4842. An act for the relief of the trustees of Carson and Newman College, at Jefferson City, Tenn.

LUCY W. SMITH.

By unanimous consent, the Committee on Pensions was discharged from the further consideration of the bill (S. 2692) granting an increase of pension to Lucy W. Smith, and the same was referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

ALEXANDER DAVIDSON.

By unanimous consent, on motion of Mr. POU, leave was granted to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, the papers in the case of the heirs of Alexander Davidson, Thirty-second Congress, no adverse report having been made thereon.

CHARLES SEELEY.

By unanimous consent, on motion of Mr. BINGHAM, leave was granted to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, the papers in the case of Charles Seeley, Forty-fifth Congress, no adverse report having been made thereon.

ENID AND ANADARKO RAILWAY COMPANY, OKLAHOMA TERRITORY.

Mr. LACEY. I desire to call up a conference report which is on the Speaker's table.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa calls up a conference report, which will be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the resolution (H. R. 3104) to grant the right of way through the Oklahoma Territory and the Indian Territory to the Enid and Anadarko Railway Company, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend, and do recommend, to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House agree to the Senate amendment with the following amendments: In line 15, page 20, strike out the word "said" and insert "any."

In line 19, page 21, after the word "Territory" insert "and Oklahoma Territory."

On page 22, add the following to section 23:

"And provided further, That the provisions of this act shall apply also to the Osage Reservation and other Indian reservations and allotted Indian lands in the Territory of Oklahoma, and all judicial proceedings herein authorized may be commenced and prosecuted in the courts of said Oklahoma Territory, which may now or hereafter exercise jurisdiction within said reservations or allotted lands."

JOHN F. LACEY,
C. D. SHELDEN,
JNO. H. STEPHENS,
Managers on the part of the House.

J. V. QUARLES,
W. A. HARRIS,
J. L. RAWLINS,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, is there no statement accompanying this report?

Mr. LACEY. There is a statement.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The statement, I think, is of more value than the report in giving the House an understanding of the matter.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the statement.

The Clerk read as follows:

The effect of the amendment is to make the title of the act conform to the purposes of the bill as amended.

The original bill as it passed the House granted the right of way to a single railway company, but there was pending in the House of Representatives upon the House Calendar a general bill applicable to all railways in Indian reservations in the Indian Territory and Oklahoma, and the Senate has amended the bill by attaching substantially the same general bill as that pending in the House.

The amendment as it passed the Senate contained some clerical errors and failed to cover the reservation in Oklahoma. The amendments proposed in the conference report make the general features of the bill applicable to Indian lands also in Oklahoma.

JOHN F. LACEY,
C. D. SHELDEN,
JNO. H. STEPHENS,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. LACEY. Practically the only amendment is to include the Indian reservation in Oklahoma.

The conference report was agreed to.

And then, on motion of Mr. PAYNE (at 5 o'clock and 8 minutes p. m.), the House adjourned.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting deficiency estimates for the Treasury Department—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, with a draft of a joint resolution, a communication concerning publications of the Geological Survey—to the Committee on Printing, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several Calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. CORLISS, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 5) to authorize the construction, operation, and maintenance of telegraphic cables between the United States of America and Hawaii, Guam, and Philippine Islands, and other countries, and to promote commerce, reported the same with amendments, accompanied by a report (No. 568); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. MONDELL, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 7933) providing for the commutation for town-site purposes of homestead entries in certain portions of Oklahoma, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 569); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. LACEY, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 8326) to set apart certain lands in the Territory of Arizona as a public park, to be known as the Petrified Forest National Park, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 570); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of the following bills; which were referred as follows:

A bill (H. R. 4450) granting a pension to Thomas E. Clark—Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 746) granting an increase of pension to Seth Weldy—Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 8349) granting a pension to John Watts—Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 11495) granting an increase of pension to Mary A. Bailey—Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 11501) for the relief of John Hedrick—Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 11502) for the relief of Mary D. Griffiths—Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (S. 2692) granting an increase of pension to Lucy W. Smith—Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PUBLIC BILLS, MEMORIALS, AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. WOODS: A bill (H. R. 11538) providing the means for acquiring title to two groves of Sequoia gigantea in the State of California, with a view to making national parks thereof—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. JONES of Washington: A bill (H. R. 11539) granting to the State of Washington 50,000 acres of land to aid in the continuation, enlargement, and maintenance of the Washington State Soldiers and Sailors' Home, at Orting, Wash.—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. EDWARDS: A bill (H. R. 11540) to establish an additional land office at Twin Bridges, in the State of Montana—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. DINSMORE: A bill (H. R. 11541) to establish a court of common pleas in the Indian Territory—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. PUGSLEY: A bill (H. R. 11542) for the erection of a public building in the borough of the Bronx, New York City, N. Y.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11543) for the improvement of the harbor at Tarrytown, N. Y.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. MOODY of Oregon: A bill (H. R. 11572) for the relief of certain settlers upon Wisconsin Central Railroad and The Dalles military road land grants—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11573) for the relief of settlers on lands granted in aid of the construction of wagon roads—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. SOUTHARD: A bill (H. R. 11598) to establish a branch home for the wives, widows, and mothers of dependent and deceased soldiers, sailors, and marines—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. RAY of New York: A bill (H. R. 11599) to redivide the district of Alaska into three recording and judicial divisions—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MANN: A joint resolution (H. J. Res. 153) to print 6,000 copies of various reports and documents relating to the construction of an isthmian canal—to the Committee on Printing.

By Mr. TOMPKINS of New York: A joint resolution (H. J. Res. 154) to appoint Robert S. Talbot a chief engineer on the retired list of the Navy—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. WARNER: A concurrent resolution (H. C. Res. 32) to print 5,000 copies of the Annotated Index to the Congressional Series of the United States Public Documents—to the Committee on Printing.

By Mr. CONRY: Memorial relative to an amendment of the Constitution of the United States enabling Congress to enact laws regulating hours of labor—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills of the following titles were presented and referred as follows:

By Mr. ADAMSON: A bill (H. R. 11544) to correct the military record of Thomas J. Morman—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BINGHAM: A bill (H. R. 11545) granting an increase of pension to Caroline R. Boyd—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11546) granting a pension to Edward Bryan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11547) granting an increase of pension to Thomas O. Stevenson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CALDWELL: A bill (H. R. 11548) to remove charge of desertion from the record of John C. Berry—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11549) for the relief of Oliver McGrue—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CANDLER: A bill (H. R. 11550) granting an increase of pension to William G. Gray, of Burnsville, Miss., a veteran of the Indian war—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11551) for the relief of the Masonic lodge at Bexar, Ala.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. DARRAGH: A bill (H. R. 11552) granting a pension to Henry J. Baker—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DINSMORE: A bill (H. R. 11553) for the relief of the estate of Nathan P. English, deceased, late of the county of Washington, Ark.—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also (by request), a bill (H. R. 11554) to amend section 4716 of the Revised Statutes of the United States—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DOUGLAS: A bill (H. R. 11555) granting an increase of pension to Agnes Shearer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GRIGGS: A bill (H. R. 11556) to reimburse W. J. Pool for money paid to the Government as postmaster at Dong, Ga.—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. HILDEBRANT: A bill (H. R. 11557) granting an increase of pension to Henry B. Teetor—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KEHOE: A bill (H. R. 11558) for the relief of James S. Frizzell—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11559) for the relief of Thomas V. Stirman's estate—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11560) for the relief of the administrator of the estate of Marcus L. Broadwell—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11561) for the relief of Joseph B. McClintock—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11562) for the relief of Thomas C. Isgrigg—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11563) for the relief of Ann Stewart, administratrix of William Stewart, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. KNAPP: A bill (H. R. 11564) granting an increase of pension to Bridget Shaver—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KYLE: A bill (H. R. 11565) for the relief of George B. Caldwell, administrator of Hamlin Caldwell, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. LITTAUER: A bill (H. R. 11566) granting an increase of pension to Bezeliel W. Burnham—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LOVERING: A bill (H. R. 11567) granting a pension to Lewis Goulding—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11568) granting an increase of pension to Bernard Glancy—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11569) granting a pension to Isaac E. Shepardson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MARTIN: A bill (H. R. 11570) granting a pension to John Doyle—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MEYER of Louisiana: A bill (H. R. 11571) for the relief of G. P. Work's heirs—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. PADGETT: A bill (H. R. 11574) for the relief of the trustees of the Methodist Church at Prospect, Giles County, Tenn.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. PERKINS: A bill (H. R. 11575) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Judson Knickerbocker—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11576) granting permission to Capt. B. H. McCalla and others to accept presents and decorations tendered to them by the Emperor of Germany and others—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. POWERS of Massachusetts: A bill (H. R. 11577) for the relief of Helen P. Spicer—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. RUCKER: A bill (H. R. 11578) granting an increase of pension to John Gaston—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. RUMPLE: A bill (H. R. 11579) granting an increase of pension to John A. Wright—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SHATTUC: A bill (H. R. 11580) granting a pension to Elizabeth Springer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SHOWALTER: A bill (H. R. 11581) granting an increase of pension to Brice S. Ramsey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SMITH of Illinois: A bill (H. R. 11582) for the relief of Adam Miller—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH: A bill (H. R. 11583) for the relief of Mary J. Warner—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11584) for the relief of Walter Culver—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SOUTHARD: A bill (H. R. 11585) granting an increase to pension to Ignatius Saunders—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TAWNEY: A bill (H. R. 11586) granting a pension to Edward A. Goodfellow—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. THOMPSON: A bill (H. R. 11587) for the relief of Alexander M. Steed, of Clay County, Ala.—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11588) for the relief of Fanny R. Bonner, of Clay County, Ala.—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11589) for the relief of Thomas Bonner, jr., of Clay County, Ala.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. TIRRELL: A bill (H. R. 11590) granting a pension to Nancy E. Hardy—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. TOMPKINS of New York: A bill (H. R. 11591) for the relief of Stanley & Patterson, and to authorize a pay director of the United States Navy to issue a duplicate check—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. VAN VOORHIS: A bill (H. R. 11592) for the relief of Cicero McCamick, alias William Rone—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. YOUNG: A bill (H. R. 11593) for the relief of the heirs of Dr. Samuel E. Hall, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BABCOCK: A bill (H. R. 11594) granting an increase of pension to Sarah E. Morrow—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MOON: A bill (H. R. 11595) granting a pension to Peter Anderson, of Tracy City, Tenn.—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11596) granting an increase of pension to Inez Clift—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MORGAN: A bill (H. R. 11597) granting a pension to Sarah E. Compton—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. ACHESON: A bill (H. R. 11600) granting an increase of pension to Gibson Helms—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11601) granting an increase of pension to Jane Workman—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11602) to correct the military record of William Murphy—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER: Petition of Henry W. Cressey Post, No. 42, Tomah, Wis.; Joseph A. Mower Post, No. 10, Austin, Tex.; Tecumseh Post, No. 39, Tecumseh, Okla.; Barlow Post, No. 434, Barlow, Ohio; Wallace Post, No. 95, Flat Rock, Mich.; Lieutenant Kinkead Post, No. 293, Houtsdale, Pa.; H. S. Burnett Post, No. 278, West Bay City, Mich., and Monroe Post, No. 100, Casey, Ill., Grand Army of the Republic, for investigation of the administration of the Bureau of Pensions—to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. ACHESON: Resolutions of Typographical Union No. 7, of Pittsburg, Pa., in favor of the exclusion of Chinese laborers—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of Carpenters and Joiners' Union No. 541, of Washington, Pa., and United Brewery Workmen No. 22, of Uniontown, Pa., favoring an educational test in the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. ADAMS: Petition of Engineers' Club of Philadelphia, Pa., favoring a national park reservation in the Appalachian Mountains—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. BINGHAM: Resolution of the board of supervisors of Mohave County, Ariz., urging Congress to fix an equitable tax valuation upon the property of the Santa Fe Pacific Railway Company's property in Arizona—to the Committee on Pacific Railroads.

By Mr. CANNON: Petition of S. C. Rutherford and others, asking that Mrs. Elenora Norton be pensioned as the dependent sister of Edward Troup, of Company A, Seventy-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Pallissard Post, No. 496, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Illinois, for investigation of the administration of the Bureau of Pensions—to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. BURGESS: Petition of citizens of Austin and Colorado counties, Tex., asking for the passage of a resolution of sympathy with the Boers—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. CONRY: Resolution of Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of Boston, Mass., urging the employment of union men in the construction of the naval dry dock at New Orleans, La.—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. CORLISS: Petition of Stove Mounters' Union No. 1, of Detroit, Mich., praying for the further restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of National Building Trades Council of America, Photo-Engravers' Union No. 12, and Typographical Union No. 21, of Detroit, Mich., concerning the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. DARRAGH: Papers to accompany House bill 6685, granting increase of pension to David Herren—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, papers to accompany House bill 6697, for the removal of the charge of desertion from the military record of Joseph B. Bailey—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, papers in support of House bill 10545, granting an increase of pension to Samuel P. Brockway—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DOUGLAS: Resolutions of the Church Association for the Advancement of the Interests of Labor, of New York City, favoring the creation of a department of commerce—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. DRAPER: Petition of Shirt Waist and Laundry Workers' Union No. 8, of Center Island, N. Y., favoring the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of the board of supervisors of Mohave County, Ariz., protesting against any legislation exempting the Santa Fe Pacific Railway Company from taxation in Arizona Territory—to the Committee on Pacific Railroads.

By Mr. FOSS: Resolutions of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation, favoring the passage of a bill to provide for the enrollment of a United States Naval Reserve—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolution of Marine Cooks' Protective Association No. 143, Chicago, Ill., for exclusion of Chinese—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of Union No. 416, of Chicago, Ill., H. B. Ware, secretary, for an educational test in the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. GILLET of New York: Petition of Abram Allen Post, No. 194, Grand Army of the Republic, of Canisteo, N. Y., for investigation of the administration of the Bureau of Pensions—to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. GRAHAM: Resolution of board of supervisors of Mohave County, Ariz., in opposition to the measure exempting the Santa Fe Pacific Railway Company from taxation in the Territory of Arizona—to the Committee on Pacific Railroads.

Also, resolutions of the Engineers' Club of Philadelphia, Pa., for scuring a national forest reserve in the Appalachian Mountains—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts: Resolution of R. A. Peirce Post, No. 190, Grand Army of the Republic, of New Bedford, Mass., favoring the construction of war vessels in the Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolution of the general court of Massachusetts, relative to an amendment to the Constitution empowering Congress to regulate the hours of labor—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HEMENWAY: Petitions of Charles E. Sutton, Henry J. Harting, Frank Gerard, and other citizens, of Evansville, Ind., concerning second-class mail matter—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, resolution of Grand Army of the Republic Post No. 262, of Newburg, Ind., favoring the building of vessels in the United States navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. HENRY of Texas: Petition of members of the Texas Volunteer Guard and citizens of Waco, Tex., urging the passage of House bill 9972, increasing the efficiency of the militia—to the Committee on Militia.

By Mr. HITT: Petition of Division No. 76, Order of Railroad Telegraphers, Chicago and Northwestern Railroad, favoring an educational test in the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolutions of Cigar Makers' Unions No. 455, of Marengo, Ill., and Sterling, Ill., in favor of the exclusion of Chinese laborers—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. KNAPP: Papers to accompany House bill 11564, granting a pension to Bridget Shaner—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LACEY: Resolution of Coal Hoisters' Union No. 43, of Pekay, Iowa, favoring the construction of war vessels in Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. LANDIS: Petition of Post No. 162, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Indiana, for investigation of the administration of the Bureau of Pensions—to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. LINDSAY: Petition of Boot and Shoe Workers' Union No. 160, of Brooklyn, N. Y., favoring the continuation of the exclusion law against Chinese laborers—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of G. K. Warren Post, No. 286, Grand Army of the Republic, of Brooklyn, N. Y., in regard to employees in navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. LITTAUER: Papers to accompany House bill 11566, granting an increase of pension to Bezeliel W. Burnham—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LLOYD: Petition of Grand Army post at Macon, Mo., asking for the granting of a pension to Lewis Fishbaugh—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of citizens of Adair County, Mo., asking that a pension be granted to Sitha J. Sholley—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LOUD: Resolution of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, approving the reorganization of the consular service—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, relative to the exclusion of Chinese—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of the Chamber of Commerce of San Francisco, Cal., favoring a light and fog-signal station at Point Buchon, California, and also at a point on Karquines Strait, California—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. MANN: Petition of the Chicago Ministerial Union of the Congregational Churches, in opposition to the reenactment of Chinese-exclusion law—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of Iron Molders' Unions Nos. 168 and 275, of Chicago, Ill., favoring restriction of undesirable immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. MARSHALL: Petition of James Andrews and citizens of Drayton, N. Dak., praying for the enactment of a law against polygamy—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, resolutions of J. B. McPherson Post No. 2, of Bismarck; Typographical Union of Grand Forks, and Winfield Scott Council, No. 4, of Steele, N. Dak., favoring the building of war ships in the navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. MARTIN: Petition of citizens of Butte County, S. Dak., in relation to the leasing of public lands and the homestead law—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. McCLELLAN: Resolution of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation, in favor of the policy of commercial treaties—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. McDERMOTT: Petition of Henry W. Moser and others, of the Ninth Congressional district of New Jersey, favoring the adoption of an antipolygamy amendment to the Constitution—to tho Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Boxmakers and Machine Workers' Union No. 87, of Jersey City, N. J., for restriction of immigration, etc.—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolutions of National Building Trades Council and Cigar Makers' Union No. 8, of Hoboken, N. J., favoring the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of National Building Trades Council of America, favoring the irrigation of the arid lands of the United States—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

By Mr. MINOR: Petition of Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers of Green Bay, Wis., Division 297, for the restriction of illiterate immigrants—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolution of Green Bay Division, 297, Locomotive Engineers, favoring the building of vessels in the United States navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. MOON: Papers to accompany House bill 1595, granting a pension to Peter Anderson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, papers to accompany House bill 1262, to muster in and muster out Milroy Home Guards—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. MORGAN: Papers to accompany House bill 11597, for the relief of Sarah E. Compton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. OTEY: Petition of Thomas T. T. Tabb, trustee for his wife, Mary A. Tabb, of Goochland County, Va., praying reference of war claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. OTJEN: Resolution of Marine Cooks' Association No. 52, of Milwaukee, Wis., favoring the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of Division 66, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, of Milwaukee, Wis., for the passage of laws which will prevent the immigration of persons who can not read—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of E. W. Clarke and other citizens of Milwaukee, Wis., in relation to second-class mail matter—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. PRINCE: Petition of M. P. Mass and 40 other citizens of Sterling, Ill., and vicinity, asking for legislation on House bills 178 and 179, for reduction of tax on whisky—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. PUGSLEY: Papers giving the military record of Charles Sabin Taft, late acting assistant surgeon, United States Army, to accompany House bill 9948, granting a pension to Sarah Frances Taft, his widow—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. RAY of New York: Petition of citizens of Binghamton, N. Y., favoring the present law relating to second-class mail matter—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, resolution of Empire Association of Car Workers, Norwich, N. Y., favoring exclusion of Chinese laborers—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of Cigar Makers' Union No. 265, of Haverly, N. Y., and Garment Workers' Union, Binghamton, N. Y., favoring a further restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana: Petition of the Trades and Labor Council of Fort Wayne, Ind., asking for the repeal of the desert-land act and the commutation clause of the homestead act, etc.—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, resolution of Indianapolis Division No. 11, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, of Indianapolis, Ind., favoring bill to limit the power of Federal courts in granting injunctions in trade disputes—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Willard Smith, of Fort Wayne, Ind., favoring the election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people—to the Committee on Election of President, Vice-President, and Representatives in Congress.

By Mr. RUMPLE: Resolution of the Amalgamated Wood Workers' Union No. 92, of Clinton, Iowa, for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law and favoring an educational test in the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. SELBY: Resolution of Cigar Makers' Union No. 114, of Jacksonville, Ill., in favor of the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. SHATTUC: Petition of Retail Grocers' Association of Cincinnatti, Ohio, in support of Senate bill 2987 and House bill 9352, for the protection of the public against impure food—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, papers to accompany House bill 2644, granting a pension to William Bode—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH: Resolutions of Trades and Labor Council, Wood Carvers' Association, and Coopers' Union No. 67, of Grand Rapids, Mich., in favor of the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of Coopers' Union of Grand Rapids, Mich., for an educational test in the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. SPERRY: Resolution of Carpenters and Joiners' Union of Meriden, Conn., praying for the further restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolution of Cigar Makers' Union No. 39, of New Haven, Conn., favoring the passage of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of Carpenters and Joiners' Union No. 920, and Iron Molders' Union No. 74, of Meriden, Conn., favoring the construction of war vessels in Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. SULZER: Petition of Lithographers' Protective and Beneficial Association, in opposition to House bill 5777, amending the copyright law—to the Committee on Patents.

Also, petition of the publisher of La Colonial, Habana, Cuba, relating to commercial reciprocity with Cuba—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the board of supervisors of Mohave County, Ariz., in opposition to legislation exempting the Santa Fe Railway Company from taxation in Arizona Territory—to the Committee on Pacific Railroads.

By Mr. THAYER: Resolution of Brewery Workers' Union No. 136, of Worcester, Mass., praying for the further restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. UNDERWOOD: Petition of the estate of John De Armond, of Jefferson County, Ala., for reference of war claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of the estate of L. J. Land, of Jefferson County, Ala., for reference of war claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of the estate of William C. Eubank, of Jefferson County, Ala., for reference of war claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. VAN VOORHIS: Petition of certain citizens of Muskingum County, Ohio, asking that the matter pertaining to the exclusion of Chinese be carefully considered before being enacted into a law—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of Plasterers' Union No. 85, of Cambridge, Ohio, for the further restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of officers of the Ohio National Guard, favoring House bill 9972, increasing the efficiency of the militia—to the Committee on Militia.

Also, papers to accompany House bill relating to the correction of the military record of Cicero McCammick, alias William Rone—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WANGER: Resolution of the Engineers' Club of Philadelphia, Pa., in favor of the Appalachian National Park Association—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, resolution of Cigar Makers' Union No. 232, of Sellersville, Pa., for an educational test in the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of H. O. Wilbur and 73 other citizens of Bryn Mawr, Pa., for an amendment to the National Constitution defining legal marriage to be monogamic—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Cigar Makers' Union No. 232, of Sellersville, Pa., favoring the continuation of the exclusion law against Chinese laborers without limit of time—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. WILSON: Petition of United Garment Workers' No. 5, of Brooklyn, N. Y., in favor of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

SENATE.

THURSDAY, February 20, 1902.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when, on request of Mr. CULLOM, and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the Journal will stand approved.

RURAL FREE-DELIVERY DIVISION.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Postmaster-General, transmitting, in response to a resolution of the 13th instant, the names of employees in the rural free-delivery service, with date of appointment, term of fervice, and State from whence appointed, etc.; which, on motion of Mr. GALLINGER, was, with the accompanying paper, ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

PRESERVATION OF THE BUFFALO.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the the Senate a communication from the Secretary of Agriculture, transmitting, in response to a resolution of the 30th ultimo, certain information with reference to the preservation of the buffalo or American bison in the United States and the Dominion of Canada; which was referred to the Committee on Forest Reservations and the Protection of Game, and ordered to be printed.

SHIP GLASGOW.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting the conclusions of fact and of law filed under the act of January 20, 1885, in the French spoliation claims, set out in the findings by the court relative to the vessel ship Glasgow, M. Alcorn, master; which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. C. R. MCKENNEY, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore.

A bill (H. R. 1200) granting an increase of pension to Oliver P. Goodwin;

A bill (H. R. 1324) granting an increase of pension to Charles N. Lee;

A bill (H. R. 1484) granting an increase of pension to Robert M. Scott;

A bill (H. R. 2620) granting a pension to Jennie A. McKinley;

A bill (H. R. 3229) granting a pension to Catherine R. A. Ogden;

A bill (H. R. 3266) granting an increase of pension to James Smith;

A bill (H. R. 6453) granting an increase of pension to Ida R. Siegfried;

A bill (H. R. 7343) granting an increase of pension to Martha V. Keenan;

A bill (H. R. 8652) granting an increase of pension to Virginia Terrill;

A bill (H. R. 11470) making an appropriation for clearing the Potomac River of ice;

A joint resolution (H. J. Res. 88) authorizing the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to return bank checks, drafts, certificates of deposit, and orders for the payment of money having imprinted stamps thereon to the owners thereof, and for other purposes; and

A joint resolution (H. J. Res. 131) authorizing the transfer to the Library of Congress of the library of State reports, etc.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. HEITFELD presented a petition of G. A. Hobart Post, No. 27, Department of Idaho, Grand Army of the Republic, of Nampa, Idaho, praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. FOSTER of Washington presented petitions of Farragut Post, No. 15, Department of Washington, Grand Army of the Republic, of Port Townsend, and of Longshoremen's Local Union No. 240, American Federation of Labor, of Port Hadlock, all in the State of Washington, praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented a petition of Mount Tacoma Lodge, No. 192, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, of Tacoma, Wash., praying for the passage of the so-called Hoar anti-injunction bill, to limit the meaning or the word "conspiracy" and the use of "restraining orders and injunctions" in certain cases; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. GALLINGER presented petitions of sundry citizens of Peterboro, and of the Woman's Christian Temperance Unions of Meredith, Epping, North Charlestown, Peterboro, Plymouth, and North Weare, all in the State of New Hampshire, praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. HOAR presented petitions of comrades of R. A. Pierce Post, No. 190, of New Bedford; of Alfred C. Monroe Post, No. 212, of East Bridgewater; of Berkshire Post, No. 197, of Pittsfield, all of the Department of Massachusetts, Grand Army of the Republic; of Horse Shoers' Local Union No. 5, of Boston; of Musicians' Protective Local Union No. 138, of Brockton; of Printing Pressmen's Local Union No. 102, of Brockton; of Stationary Firemen's Local Union No. 85, of Fitchburg; of Local Union No. 224, International Association of Machinists, of Westfield; of Horse Nail Workers' Local Union No. 6313, of Boston; of International Engineers' Local Union No. 52, of Lynn; of Lawrence Typographical Union No. 51, of Lawrence, and of the Pattern Makers' Association of Boston, all of the American Federation of Labor, in the State of Massachusetts, praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented petitions of Boot and Shoe Workers' Local Union No. 238, of New Bedford; of Carpenters' District Union of Boston; of Cigar Makers' Local Union No. 206, of North Adams; of Edgemakers' Local Union No. 118, of Brockton; of Boot and Shoe Workers' Local Union No. 230, of Conway, and of Boot and Shoe Makers' Local Union No. 244, of Natick, all in the State of Massachusetts, praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. KEAN presented the memorial of Anna Rice Powell, of Plainfield, N. J., remonstrating against the regulation and control of vice by the board of health of Manila; which was referred to the Committee on the Philippines.

He also presented a petition of the Central Labor Union, American Federation of Labor, of Trenton, N. J., and a petition of the Essex Trades Council, of Newark, N. J., praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. WARREN presented a memorial of the National Live Stock Exchange, of Chicago, Ill., remonstrating against prohibitive taxation or restrictions against coloring butterine and depriving the laboring man of a cheap, nutritious, and wholesome article of food; which was referred to the Committee on Manufactures.

He also presented a petition of the Merchants' Exchange, of San Francisco, Cal., praying for unrestricted entrance into the United States of all merchants and members of the mercantile class of Chinese, but barring the class of coolie labor; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. WETMORE presented petitions of Cigar Makers' Local Union No. 96, of Pawtucket; of Journeymen Bakers' Local Union No. 361, of Pawtucket, and of Local Union No. 99, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, of Providence, all in the State of Rhode Island, praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. FRYE presented a petition of the Atlantic Coast Seaman's Union, of Portland, Me., praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. MCMILLAN, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 3865) to establish light-houses at the mouth of Boston Harbor to mark the entrance to the new Broad Sound Channel; and

A bill (S. 3491) providing for a light and fog-signal station on or near Crisps Point, Lake Superior, Michigan.

Mr. McMILLAN, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 329) to amend section 10 of an act entitled "An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1899, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was agreed to, and the bill was indefinitely postponed.

Mr. MALLORY, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3312) for the establishment of a light-house at the mouth of Oyster Bayou, near the Louisiana coast, in the Gulf of Mexico, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 199) for the establishment of a light station on Bluff Shoal, Pamlico Sound, North Carolina, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PETTUS, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3612) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Charles J. Clark, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3415) to correct the military record of Gideon Howell, alias Judson Howell, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was agreed to, and the bill was indefinitely postponed.

Mr. DEBOE, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2082) granting an increase of pension to Louise Ward, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2878) to provide for the construction of a light-house and fog signal at the Pollock Rip Shoals, on the coast of Massachusetts, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was agreed to, and the bill was indefinitely postponed.

He also, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5957) granting an increase of pension to Wright H. Auchmoody, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. NELSON, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 3746) to amend section 2593 of the Revised Statutes relating to ports of entry; and

A bill (S. 905) for the relief of Lindley C. Kent and Joseph Jenkins, as the sureties of Frank A. Webb.

Mr. KITTREDGE, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5106) for the relief of Rasmussen & Strehlow, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. FORAKER, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1881) to correct the military record of Peter Connell, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. CLARK of Montana, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2979) to ratify an agreement with the Indians of the Crow Reservation in Montana, and making appropriations to carry the same into effect, reported it with amendments to the preamble, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. CLAY, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 61) to authorize the establishment of a live-saving station at or near Bogue Inlet, North Carolina, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PERKINS, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 344) to amend the Revised Statutes of the United States relating to the carriage of refined petroleum, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was agreed to, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. MASON, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7675) to construct a light-house keeper's dwelling at Calumet Harbor, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3651) appropriating the sum of $3,000 a year for the support and maintenance of the permanent International Commission of the Congresses of Navigation, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. MARTIN, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 1568) to restore Henry D. Hall to the Revenue-Cutter Service; and

A bill (S. 3361) providing for the removal of the port of entry in the Albemarle collection of customs district, North Carolina, from Edenton, N. C., to Elizabeth City, N. C.

Mr. HAWLEY, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3129) for the authorization of the erection of buildings by the international committee of Young Men's Christian Associations on military reservations of the United States, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. CLAY, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1545) to establish a marine hospital at Savannah, Ga., reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

WEST FORK OF WHITE RIVER, INDIANA.

Mr. DEPEW, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3118) to declare the west fork of White River above the south line of Marion County and to the source of said river, in the State of Indiana, to be not a navigable stream, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. FAIRBANKS subsequently said: I move to recommit to the Committee on Commerce the bill (S. 3118) to declare the west fork of White River above the south line of Marion County and to the source of said river, in the State of Indiana, to be not a navigable stream.

The motion was agreed to.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. MORGAN introduced a bill (S. 4062) for the relief of the estate of Alfred Hambrick, deceased; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. McLAURIN of Mississippi introduced a bill (S. 4063) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Greenville, county of Washington and State of Mississippi; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. CLAPP introduced a bill (S. 4064) granting a pension to Betsy Gumm; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. GAMBLE introduced a bill (S. 4065) to remove the charge of desertion from Thomas Colahan; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. BURTON introduced a bill (S. 4066) granting a pension to Florence E. Wilbur; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4067) granting an increase of pension to Julia L. Gordon; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. HOAR introduced a bill (S. 4068) to redivide the district of Alaska into three recording and judicial divisions; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. TILLMAN introduced a bill (S. 4069) to establish a fish hatchery and fish station in the State of South Carolina; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Fisheries.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4070) to provide for refunding internal-revenue taxes paid upon legacies and bequests for uses of a religious, literary, charitable, or educational character, or for the encouragement of art, under the war-revenue act of 1898; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4071) granting an increase of pension to George C. Tillman; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. MARTIN introduced a bill (S. 4072) granting an increase of pension to Samuel J. Lamden; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. MASON (by request) introduced a bill (S. 4073) to establish an executive department of physical culture; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4074) for the relief of Thierman & Frost; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4075) granting a pension to Henry R. Gibbs; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4076) to provide for the construction of a sea wall and grand boulevard from the old Naval Observatory site around the Potomac Flats and across the Anacostia River, in the District of Columbia, without issuing interest-bearing bonds; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. MITCHELL introduced a bill (S. 4077) for the relief of Mrs. Libbie Arnold; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

AMENDMENTS TO BILLS.

Mr. KEAN submitted an amendment, proposing to make the salary of the chief of the division of maps and charts, Library of Congress, $3,000 per annum, intended to be proposed by him to the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. KITTREDGE submitted an amendment, proposing to appropriate $25,000 for support, maintenance, and incidental expenses of the asylum for insane Indians at Canton, S. Dak., intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. McENERY submitted an amendment, intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 8587) for the allowance of certain claims for stores and supplies reported by the Court of Claims under the provisions of the act of March 3, 1883, and commonly known as the Bowman Act; which was referred to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MASON submitted an amendment, proposing to make the salary of the chief of the division of public surveys, General Land Office, $2,500 per annum, intended to be proposed by him to the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

PORTRAITS OF SENATORS OF FIRST CONGRESS.

Mr. HOAR submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Library be directed to inquire and report to the Senate as to the expediency of providing a suitable place in the Senate wing of the Capitol for receiving the portraits of the Senators of the United States during the First Congress under the Administration of President Washington, provided the same shall be presented by the several States or by individuals.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVAL.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on the 19th instant approved and signed the act (S. 1970) to provide an American register for the barkentine Hawaii.

PHILIPPINE TARIFF BILL.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The morning business is closed; and the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5833) temporarily to provide revenue for the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President, as I stated yesterday, were it not that my colleague [Mr. TELLER] and some of the minority members of the Committee on the Philippines were insistent that I should discuss the treason and sedition laws of the Philippine Islands and some of the testimony given to the committee by Governor Taft I would not occupy the floor to the exclusion of Senators of much longer service and much greater capability to deal with the question than myself.

But I feel that the treason and sedition laws of the Philippines, if they are an evidence of the character of legislation necessary to reduce the Philippine Islands to a state of peace and to retain peace in them, should be discussed and understood. They may be fairly regarded as a true criterion of the tyrannical character of laws that are necessary to accomplish the end in view.

I will first call the attention of the Senate to the attitude of the Supreme Court of the United States upon the power of Congress and Territorial governments, such as that in the Philippines, to deal with treason and sedition laws. Divergent as the views of the members of that court may be, I think I am justified in maintaining that so far as legislation that is prohibited by the Constitution is concerned—the prohibitions on Congress contained in the bill of rights—the protection to the people therein conferred, is as applicable to the Territories as to any one of the American States. I have in mind, of course, the so-called "insular cases," and particularly the latest utterances of the court in Downes v. Bidwell.

I would not claim so much, Mr. President, for the decisions of all the judges. We know what the views of four of them are by reading the opinion of Mr. Chief Justice Fuller, whose opinion is concurred in by the three other minority judges. We know that they hold that as soon as territory is acquired by the United States, whether by discovery and occupation, or by war, by treaty, or by purchase, the territory is incorporated into and becomes part of the United States, and every provision of the Constitution that can be applicable to such territory is immediately ex proprio vigore attached thereto; that thereupon the inhabitants of such territory become citizens of the United States, and once a citizen always a citizen, except as the allegiance may be voluntarily thrown off.

Turning to the opinion of Mr. Justice Brown, we discover that while he does not decide in terms that the bill of rights extends of its own force to territory acquired, whether it is territory incorporated into the United States by act of Congress or territory simply appurtenant to the United States, Congress not having legislated for it, he does clearly intimate in it that whenever the question is properly presented to the Supreme Court he will almost certainly hold with the four minority judges that the bill of rights does extend to territories, whatever their relation to the Union may be.

Very briefly, Mr. President, I quote from the opinion of Mr. Justice Brown:

> Thus, when the Constitution declares that "no bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be passed," and that "no title of nobility shall be granted by the United States," it goes to the competency of Congress to pass a bill of that description. Perhaps the same remark may apply to the first amendment, that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people to peacefully assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances."

Not content with that language, which to my mind shows the decided leaning of Mr. Justice Brown, he refers again to the subject, in his opinion, as follows:

> We suggest, without intending to decide, that there may be a distinction between certain natural rights, enforced in the Constitution by prohibitions against interference with them, and what may be termed artificial or remedial rights, which are peculiar to our own system of jurisprudence. Of the former class are the rights to one's own religious opinion and to a public expression of them, or, as sometimes said, to worship God according to the dictates of one's own conscience; the right to personal liberty and individual property; to freedom of speech and of the press; to free access to courts of justice, to due process of law, and to an equal protection of the laws; to immunities from unreasonable searches and seizures, as well as cruel and unusual punishments; and to such other immunities as are indispensable to a free government. Of the latter class are the rights to citizenship, to suffrage (Minor v. Happersett, 21 Wall., 162), and to the particular methods of procedure pointed out in the Constitution, which are peculiar to Anglo-Saxon jurisprudence, and some of which have already been held by the States to be unnecessary to the proper protection of individuals.

It seems to me, Mr. President, that when the opinion of Mr. Chief Justice Fuller is read, concurred in as it is by three of the associate justices, with this opinion by Mr. Justice Brown, there can be little doubt in the minds of intelligent persons that the Supreme Court will hold, whenever the question is properly presented to it, that at least all the personal provisions of the bill of rights are by the Constitution extended to the Territories of the Union, whether they are Territories incorporated into the Union or Territories simply appurtenant.

With so much upon that subject by way of introduction, Mr. President, I call attention to the laws that are the object of the amendment I introduced. It proposes to immediately repeal the treason and sedition laws enacted by the Taft Commission. I want to thank the able and courteous Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER] for causing these laws to be printed and distributed upon the desks of the Senators. They are arranged in parallel columns with the laws of the United States and of States that are supposed to be somewhat cognate. Therefore if Senators have the pamphlet to which I refer—Senate Document No. 173 of the present Congress—there will be but little difficulty in following me.

The first section of the Philippine treason and sedition law is claimed to be identical in substance if not in languge with sections 5331 and 5332 of the United States Revised Statutes. I grant it, with this exception—that there is incorporated in the Philippine act a new and metaphysical sovereignty, a sovereignty new to the people of this country, one that erects itself into the equal of the United States, and undertakes to declare that where there is treason against the United States in the Philippines there also is treason against this new and strange sovereignty called the government of the Philippine Islands.

I challenge the right of the Philippine Commission to enact such a law. In my judgment it is clear, from the Constitution and the nature of the relation of the Territories of whatever character to the Government of the United States, that it is absolutely without the power of any Territory, incorporated or appurtenant, to enact a law declarative of the crime and providing for the punishment of treason.

Let me read the first section of the Philippine law:

> Every person resident in the Philippine Islands owing allegiance to the United States or the government of the Philippine Islands who levies war against them, or adheres to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort within the Philippine Islands or elsewhere, is guilty of treason, and, upon conviction, shall suffer death, or, at the discretion of the court, shall be imprisoned at hard labor for not less than five years and fined not less than $10,000.

It is not astonishing, when we view their other acts, that the members of the Philippine Commission seek to place themselves upon the same pedestal with the Government of the United States; but I assert again that the government of no Territory, whatever its relations to the General Government, has it in its power to create the crime of treason or to declare its punishment.

I do not fail to recognize that the judicial sections of the Constitution are not, as a rule, applicable to the Territories. By reason of the supposed fleeting character of Territorial governments, it would be impossible to appoint judges of Territories with a life tenure, because when the Territories become States the Territorial governments must fall and the terms of all officials theretofore appointed to conduct the affairs of such Territories must end.

By reason of this fact the courts at all times have held that the judicial clauses of the Constitution are not applicable to the Territories. But while this is true, other sections of the Constitution do, either directly or indirectly, control the powers of Territorial courts and Territorial legislative and executive officers.

Let us take the Philippine Islands by way of example. What is the Philippine Commission? It is the representative of the United States in those Islands, nothing more. It is a commission appointed by the President for the purpose of performing the duties in the islands that are incumbent upon Congress, namely, to make needful rules and regulations for their proper management. It is the Army of the United States that is in the islands. Those who wage war or enter into alliances with the enemies of the United States in the Philippine Islands wage war upon the United States, wage war upon the title of the United States to the Philippine Islands. They assail nothing else.

Under the Constitution the crime of treason is the creation of Congress, and the punishment of treason can only be inflicted in accordance with an act of Congress. I call the attention of the Senate to sections 2 and 3 of Article III of the Constitution.

SEC. 2. The trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury; and such trial shall be held in the State where the said crimes shall have been committed; but when not committed within any State—

And of course crimes committed in the Philippine Islands are not committed within any State—but when not committed within any State the trial shall be at such place or places as the Congress may by law have directed.

Proceeding immediately to the third section we find these provisions:

Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court.

The Congress shall have power to declare the punishment of treason, but no attainder of treason shall work corruption of blood, or forfeiture, except during the life of the person attainted.

"The Congress shall have power to declare the punishment of treason." With all the industry displayed by the compiler of the pamphlet to which I have referred, there has been no law inserted from any Territory that declared the crime of treason or provided for its punishment.

Nor is there a law from any Territory that provides against the crime of counterfeiting the coins of the United States or of counterfeiting its paper money or of violating any of the provisions of the customs laws, for the reason that these are crimes and punishments that are peculiar only, and that may be taken cognizance of only by the Congress and courts of the United States. A Territory has no more power to provide a punishment for the crime of counterfeiting the money of the United States or for violating the customs laws of the United States than it has to create the crime of treason, even though it incorporates its own sovereignty into the law that defines treason.

Mr. President, if the Philippine Commission is simply the agent of the Government to make rules and regulations concerning the territory of the United States, then it follows that whatever its laws, they are the acts of the Congress of the United States in so far as they are allowed to stand or are approved by the Congress of the United States. When somebody rises against the army in a Territory it is rising against the United States. You can not imagine an effort to withdraw the Philippine Islands from the sovereignty of the United States by force without its being the levying of war upon the United States.

Starting with the fundamental proposition that the sovereignty of the United States over the Philippine Islands is fixed, that the Commission is there for the purpose of making rules and regulations for their government by authority of the President and the Congress of the United States, whenever any person shall levy war against that Commission, whatever its character, for the purpose of depriving that government of control and regulation over the territory, it is making war upon the United States, and upon the Army of the United States that is there to maintain the sovereignty of this Government over them.

I recall that many years ago a celebrated treason trial, that of Aaron Burr, took place. As I recall, it was charged that it was Burr's purpose to unite a portion of our Southwest Territory with territory belonging to other sovereignties and to erect the combined territory into an independent government. It was to be done, if necessary, by force. It was alleged that he had gathered munitions of war and, in conjunction with others, had arranged to enlist men. For what purpose? Not to take a State out of the Union, but to deprive the Union of a portion of its territory that it might be withdrawn by force from the sovereignty of the United States and erected into another sovereignty. If the charges had been established, Burr would have been guilty of treason, treason against the United States, treason under the definition of the Constitution and as punished under the acts of Congress. He was tried as provided by Congress. No one ever dreamed of trying him in a court down in the territory out of which the new sovereignty was to be created.

The fact that the Commission has united the government of the Philippine Islands with the Government of the United States to make treason cognizable within the islands, and in courts controlled by the Commission, changes neither the rule nor the principle.

The acts of Congress punishing treason are as applicable to the Philippine Islands as to the States. All that is needed to put the Congressional treason laws in operation in the Philippines is for Congress to establish a Federal court within them, or by law to confer jurisdiction upon the Commission's courts to try and determine offenses against the laws of the United States. When that shall be done, then treason as well as all other crimes defined by acts of Congress, except in cases of impeachment, that are committed within the islands can be lawfully tried and offenders punished. But that is what the Commission does not want. It does not want Filipinos who are charged with either treason or sedition tried in Federal courts or under Federal statutes.

For in all such cases they must be tried under the protecting ægis of the Constitution. There must be a common-law indictment, a common-law jury, and no conviction can follow except on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act or on confession in open court. In the Philippines there is neither grand nor petit jury, and the treason law the Commission has enacted permits any irresponsible or vicious person to make the charge, and the trial can be only before a single judge without a jury. The Philippine judges, as admitted by Governor Taft, are appointed, some native and some American, because they are in sympathy with the schemes of the administration in the islands. A pretty show the unfortunate Filipinos will have who are accused of treason. Tried before a Scroggs or a Jeffreys, without jury or constitutional safeguards! The hangman's noose will be in merry demand as soon as the dance of death commences.

When we study the second section of the Commission's act the schemes of the Commission are even more apparent. In that section the Commission has undertaken to define and provide for the punishment of misprision of treason. Let me read it:

Every person owing allegiance to the United States or the government of the Philippine Islands and having knowledge of any treason against them or either of them.

There it is, a distinct and plain proposition. If there is any person within the Philippine Islands owing allegiance either to the United States or to the government of the Philippine Islands who has knowledge of treason against either the United States or the Commission, he is guilty of misprision of treason and must be tried and punished by one of Taft's judges.

I will pass from the treason clauses to call attention to the sedition provisions of this most extraordinary law, and I undertake to show that, except in the first two sections, the Commission has outraged every act that it has attempted to follow. It has deliberately cut out from every law that it pretended to make the basis of this enactment every provision they contained upon which citizens could rely for protection against tyrannical and unconstitutional arrest, against prosecution for mere offenses of the mind, for mere offenses of the thought, as well as for those of a more tangible nature.

For instance, Mr. President, section 3 of the Philippine act is intended to be a transcript of section 5334 of the Revised Statutes. I call the Senate's attention to the peculiar and extraordinary change from the Federal section, and I ask Senators who shall defend these laws to account for the change, if they can, except as the result of a deliberate purpose to create offenses that the statute of the United States never created and that were not within the purview of the statutes which the Commission pretended to follow.

Section 5334 of the Revised Statutes reads:

SEC. 5334. Every person who incites, sets on foot, assists, or engages in any rebellion or insurrection against the authority of the United States, or the laws thereof, or gives aid or comfort thereto.

"Gives aid or comfort" to what? To the setting on foot or engaging "in any rebellion or insurrection against the authority of the United States." If he does that; if one gives aid and comfort to the inciting of rebellion or insurrection, then he is amenable to the punishment that is provided in that section.

Let me show the devilish malignity—and no milder term is, in my judgment, applicable to the mind that conceived the deed—that was displayed by the Commission when they undertook to copy this section of the Revised Statutes. The Commission's production is as follows:

SEC. 3. Every person who incites, sets on foot, assists, or engages in any rebellion or insurrection against the authority of the United States or of the government of the Philippine Islands, or the laws thereof, or who gives aid or comfort to anyone so engaging in such rebellion or insurrection—

The act of Congress declares against giving aid or comfort to rebellion or insurrection, but the act of the Philippine Commission denounces and provides for the punishment of giving aid or comfort to anyone engaging in such rebellion or insurrection or in any attempt at rebellion or insurrection. Is there not a marked difference? This section provides for punishing anyone "who gives aid or comfort to anyone so engaging in such rebellion or insurrection." It is the difference between giving aid and comfort to the thing—the rebellion or insurrection—and giving aid and comfort to some individual engaged in rebellion or insurrection. I can well comprehend a Filipino giving aid to a wounded man; I can comprehend a perfectly loyal Filipino attending an insurrecto, as Philippine patriots are termed, in his sickness, assuaging his thirst, giving him remedies, or binding up his wounds. I maintain that under this section, changed by the Philippine Commission as I have shown, such a person, doing no more than I have suggested, is amenable to the punishment declared; which is "imprisoned for not more than ten years and be fined not more than $10,000."

Will some Senator defending these outrageous laws explain why the change was made? Was it by accident or by design? Was not it the deliberate purpose of the Commission to make everyone amenable to this extreme punishment for simply giving aid and comfort to those inciting insurrection or rebellion, whether the aid or comfort given had reference to the rebellion or not?

There is not much difference, Mr. President, between section 5336 of the Revised Statutes and section 4 of the act of the Philippine Commission, except that the new sovereignty of the Philippine Islands is injected into it, and conspiring against the authority of the United States in the Philippine Islands is declared to be a crime with punishment—that is, conspiring against the United States itself—and, as I have shown, only the Congress of the United States can enact a law of that character.

Mr. President, although there are 15 sections in this conspiracy act of the Philippine Commission, those that I have read are the only sections that bear any relation whatsoever to the United States Statutes.

We now come to sections 5, 6, and 7. It surpasses belief that Americans can tolerate them. They are sections of Spanish acts, taken bodily from the code of Spain for the Philippine Islands. They were enacted either by the Spanish Cortes or some other Spanish authority, for the purpose of terrorizing Filipinos and inflicting upon them the most grievous punishment for offenses that would be offenses in no other country under the sun.

Section 5 has five subdivisions, and it is well worthy of the most careful consideration of Senators. I read:

All persons who rise publicly and tumultuously in order to attain by force or outside of legal methods any of the following objects are guilty of sedition.

To "rise publicly and tumultuously" is fully done when one moves openly and noisily. Now let us see what some of the objects are one can not seek to attain by force or outside of legal methods if he moves to attain them openly and with noise. Mark you, it is not a conspiracy to do unlawful acts that is denounced, nor the doing of an act that is in itself an offense; but the moving or rising to do it, whether it is accomplished or not, or whether a single human being is injured or property in anywise imperiled.

All persons who rise publicly and tumultuously * * * to prevent the insular government, or any provincial or municipal government, or any public official from freely exercising its or his duties.

From "freely exercising its or his duties." It is not difficult to imagine the manner in which a provision of this kind can be extended to imprison some one guilty of no real offense. If the accused rise publicly and noisily to prevent some insular officer from performing some duty he is guilty although the official was never impeded in any way from performing the duty. One may be convicted who never by sign or gesture interfered with an official in any way. The offense consists not in the prevention of an official duty but in rising to prevent its being done. And whether one does rise with such a purpose may so often be determinable only by the thoughts in one's mind at the time that punishment by imprisonment for perfectly innocent thoughts and purposes is not only possible but is highly probable, especially when the courts in which such cases must be tried and the ends to be gained by convictions are considered.

The next clause is even worse.

All persons who rise publicly and tumultuously * * * to inflict any act of hate or revenge upon the person or property of any official or agent of the insular government or of a provincial or municipal government.

How many times have we in our experience known officials so conducting themselves both in public and private as to incite against them feelings of hate and a desire for revenge? If, under this law, an individual should entertain a feeling of hate against a public official and rise to inflict it, whether he succeeded or not, he is guilty of sedition. If the accused does the same thing against a private citizen it is not sedition, but if he attempts it against an official, although the attempt is not incited by official misconduct, or a desire to impede the performance of an official act, the accused is to be adjudged guilty of sedition.

Then, again, paragraph 4 of section 5—

All persons who rise publicly and tumultuously * * * to inflict, with a political or social object, any act of hate or revenge upon individuals or upon any class of individuals in the islands—

Whether they are in the governmental service or not. If a man rises to inflict any act of hate or revenge upon an individual with a "social object" in view, whether he inflicts injury or not, or whether the person the deed is aimed at is an official or not, the accused is guilty of sedition. Mark this: These are intended to be offenses against government and not against individuals as individuals. Nevertheless, private individuals may be risen against, and the offense in doing so is made sedition.

Then section 6 provides:

SEC. 6. Any person guilty of sedition as defined in section 5 hereof shall be punished by a fine of not exceeding $5,000 and by imprisonment not exceeding ten years, or both.

The section 5 referred to in this latter clause contains the paragraphs I have been reading. For these misnamed acts of sedition, acts which do not constitute a conspiracy nor which have resulted in an atom of injury to person or property, may cause the accused to be imprisoned for ten years and to be fined $5,000, or both.

I submit, Mr. President, that never were acts more tyrannical, more clearly unconstitutional, and more destructive of the liberty of the citizen than are those of the Commission to which I have called attention, and I submit that Congress should by a unanimous vote show its abhorrence of them.

The compiler of the pamphlet from which I read does not hesitate to declare that sections 5 and 6, which I have just read—are reenactments, with modified penalties, of articles 236 and 237 of the reform penal code of Spain—

What must have been the penal code of Spain before it was reformed?—

in force in the Philippines at the time of the transfer of sovereignty.

The pamphlet then recites the articles of the Spanish code, to show, I suppose, how close a parallel there is between that and the Commission's new treason and sedition code.

But I can not dwell further on the details of this part of the act.

I now come to section 8, and I recall that the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER] suggested that the Commission had copied this section from the code of Tennessee; that it had probably been prepared by the Hon. Luke E. Wright, a member of the Philippine Commission, from that State. Well, I can imagine the Hon. Luke E. Wright sitting down with section 5555 of the code of Tennessee before him——

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President, if the Senator will allow me to interrupt him, what I said was merely to call attention to the note of the compiler of the statutes on treason and sedition. The Senator will find, on page 14 of the work he has before him, immediately following section 8, the statement made by the compiler to the effect that—

This section was probably drafted by Hon. Luke E. Wright, acting governor of the Philippines, who formerly practiced law in Tennessee.

Mr. PATTERSON. As to the section I read—I may be mistaken—the reference to the Hon. Luke E. Wright was made before this pamphlet was compiled.

Mr. FORAKER. Oh, no.

Mr. PATTERSON. It is immaterial.

Mr. FORAKER. I merely called attention to that statement of the compiler.

Mr. PATTERSON. In any event, the compiler makes this note at the end of section 5555 of the code of Tennessee:

This section was probably drafted by Hon. Luke E. Wright, acting governor of the Philippines, who formerly practiced law in Tennessee. Being familiar with the statutes of that State, he naturally adopted the language employed by the Tennessee legislature in creating an enactment of similar character.

There is a great similarity. But again, Mr. President, you discover the care with which certain words have been eliminated or changed when the Tennessee section was transformed into one of the sections of the treason and sedition law of the Philippines. Section 5555 of the Tennessee code reads as follows:

Whoever shall be guilty of uttering seditious words or speeches—

Mark the next—

spreading abroad false news—

That is eliminated from the Philippine act.

But I will read the section entire without interruption:

SEC. 5555. Whoever shall be guilty of uttering seditious words or speeches, spreading abroad false news, writing or dispersing scurrilous libels against the State or General Government, disturbing or obstructing any lawful officer in executing his office, or of instigating others to cabal and meet together, to contrive, invent, suggest, or incite rebellious conspiracies, riots, or any manner of unlawful feud or differences, thereby to stir people up maliciously to contrive the ruin and destruction of the peace, safety, and order of the Government, or shall knowingly conceal such evil practices, shall be punished by fine and imprisonment.

In the Philippine act there is not only eliminated "spreading abroad false news," but it provides that—

Every person who shall utter seditious words or speeches, write, publish, or circulate scurrilous libels against the Government of the United States or the insular government of the Philippine Islands, or which tend to disturb or obstruct any lawful officer in executing his office, or which tend to instigate others to cabal or meet together for unlawful purposes, or which suggest or incite rebellious conspiracies or riots, or which tend to stir up the people against the lawful authorities, shall be guilty, etc.

There is a wide difference between the uttering of seditious words and speeches that disturb or obstruct the lawful authorities and the uttering of words or speeches that simply tend to do those things. There is a difference—marked, clear, and well-defined. Any number of people may be guilty under the law of the Philippines, but not a hair of their heads could be disturbed under section 5555 of the code of Tennessee, though they were to do identically the same things in the State of Tennessee.

We now come to the act relative to secret societies, and I say that there is no statute in the United States or elsewhere that I have ever seen that is at all parallel with this. The compiler of this pamphlet places section 9 in apposition with section 267 of the laws of Maryland, doubtless to create the impression that section 9 was but a copy of section 267 of the laws of Maryland. Let us see what the Maryland section is:

SEC. 267. If any person or persons within this State shall hold any secret club or association known by him or them to be intended to effect, promote, or encourage the separation or secession of this State from the Government or Union of the United States, etc.

Here the holding of a secret club or association must have for its object an effect upon the State, to withdraw the State of Maryland from the Union, and it is a law that very probably was within the purview of the State to enact. I want to suggest here that while the government of a Territory can not declare the crime of treason and provide for its punishment, such a disability does not apply to States, because a State is a separate and distinct sovereignty. The States, or the people of the States, by the Constitution granted some distinct powers to Congress and reserved all others to the States and to the people. Therefore, a State legislature may define treason against the State. If the treason so declared operates upon the State and affects the State, it is not akin to an act by a Territorial legislature defining and punishing treason against the Government of the United States. But I will read the law of Maryland again:

SEC. 267. If any person or persons within this State shall hold any secret club or association known by him or them to be intended to effect, promote, or encourage the separation or secession of this State from the Government or Union of the United States, every such person, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to confinement in the penitentiary for a term not less than two nor more than six years.

Now, let me read the act of the Philippine Commission:

SEC. 9. All persons who shall meet together for the purpose of forming or who shall form any secret society or who shall after the passage of this act continue membership in a society—

Not a secret society, but in any society—

already formed, having for its object, in whole or in part, the promotion of treason, rebellion, or sedition, or the promulgation of any political opinion or policy, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both.

I have no more doubt than I have of my existence that this law was enacted to meet what is known as the Partido Conservador, the Conservative party of the Philippine Islands, a party which was admitted by Governor Taft to have for its platform, first, peace; the submission of the people of the Philippine Islands to the sovereignty of the United States; to admit that the Philippine Islands are territory of the United States; to use all of their efforts, physical and moral, to induce the Filipinos in insurrection to lay down their arms and recognize the right of government by the United states, and then to agitate peaceably for the independence of the Philippine Islands. That is the platform of the Conservative party. It was an association in existence when these treason and sedition laws were enacted last November. This section was clearly intended to cover that political association and to make those who continued membership in it guilty of sedition against the government of the Philippine Islands.

I say to Senators if such a law as this is to be maintained, it will be to the shame of the Government that gives it countenance. Has it come to this, that within territory owned and controlled by the Government of the United States a member of an association that has for its purpose the promulgation of political opinions or policies, however innocent or patriotic, shall be guilty of sedition? It is a declaration that men must not continue to think; it is an announcement that they must first learn the will of the Government, to find out what political policy or opinion it is willing for them to advocate, then to advocate that, and if they depart from it one hair's breadth to suffer the penalty of imprisonment and fine.

I am happy to say that there is no law in any other country, or in any State or Territory of which I have heard, that is a parallel to this in devilishness and atrocity.

Let us pass from section 9 to section 10, which declares that—

Until it has been officially proclaimed that a state of war or insurrection against the authority or sovereignty of the United States no longer exists in the Philippine Islands—

Now mark, this is the only section that fixes a limit for its operation. Every other section is without limit as to time; and, as Governor Taft stated when he was directly questioned upon the subject, all the other sections of the treason and sedition act will continue in force until they have been properly repealed.

But I must read section 10 in full:

Until it has been officially proclaimed that a state of war or insurrection against the authority or sovereignty of the United States no longer exists in the Philippine Islands, it shall be unlawful for any person—to advocate, orally or by writing or printing or like methods, the independence of the Philippine Islands or their separation from the United States, whether by peaceable or forcible means, or to print, publish, or circulate any handbill, newspaper, or other publication advocating such independence or separation.

To do what?—

In a public meeting of the committee I asked Governor Taft if the wise, the humane, and patriotic speech of the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] should be distributed in the Philippine Islands whether he who engaged in its distribution would not be subject to prosecution and punishment under this section. Immediately protest was made against propounding such a question, and the question was never answered. But I submit to the members of this body that under this section if any person living in the Philippines should be found distributing a copy of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD with the eloquent speeches of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. MONEY] or the opening speech of the Senator from Utah] Mr. RAWLINS] or the speech of my colleague [Mr. TELLER] or the speech of the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] or any of the speeches that have been made in this body upholding the principles of free government, declaring that the principles of the Declaration of Independence were applicable to all the people as well as to the people of the colonies at the time the Declaration was published, he who distributed the RECORDS would be amenable, under this section, and could be arrested, fined, and imprisoned for giving them circulation. No man who understands the force and effect of the English language will or can take issue with that proposition.

Has it not indeed come to a desperate pass in the history of the United States when it is a crime within the jurisdiction of the United States to distribute the speeches that are made by honorable Senators and Representatives in the Congress of the United States or the speeches of other individuals who may agree with them in political views? And the Congress is asked to approve laws such as these. So far as I can, Mr. President, I utter my protest against them.

There are six other sections to this law, all equally detestable with those I have discussed. They are without precedents in the States or the United States. They are sui generis, devised to operate upon a helpless people who, 8,000 miles distant from constitutional relief, must be subjected to death, imprisonment, and fine ad libitum at the hands of some governmental satrap, grossly misnamed a judge, to "make them want peace and want it very badly."

Mr. President, we undertook in this country more than a century ago to enact laws of this character. I will read you the sedition law of 1798, and when the provisions of that law are compared with the laws of the Philippine Commission it will be seen that they are a beacon light of liberty as compared with the acts of the Commission. The sedition laws of 1798 consist of three sections, which I read from Foster on the Constitution:

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That if any persons shall unlawfully combine or conspire together with intent to oppose any measure or measures of the Government of the United States which are or shall be directed by proper authority, or to impede the operation of any law of the United States, or to intimidate or prevent any person holding a place or office in or under the Government of the United States from undertaking, performing, or executing his trust or duty; and if any person or persons, with intent as aforesaid, shall counsel, advise, or attempt to procure any insurrection, riot, unlawful assembly, or combination, whether such conspiracy, threatening, counsel, advice, or attempt shall have the proposed effect or not, he or they shall be deemed guilty of a high misdemeanor, and on conviction before any court of the United States having jurisdiction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $5,000 and by imprisonment during a term not less than six months nor exceeding five years; and further, at the discretion of the court, may be holden to find sureties for his good behavior in such sum and for such times as the said court may direct.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That if any person shall write, print, utter, or publish, or shall cause or procure to be written, printed, uttered, or published, or shall knowingly and willingly assist or aid in writing, printing, uttering, or publishing any false, scandalous, and malicious writing or writings against the Government of the United States, or either House of the Congress of the United States, or the President of the United States, with intent to defame the said Government, or either House of the said Congress, or the said President, or to bring them, or either of them, into contempt or disrepute; or to excite against them, or either or any of them, the hatred of the good people of the United States, or to stir up sedition within the United States, or to excite any unlawful combinations therein, for opposing or resisting any law of the United States, or any act of the President of the United States, and one in pursuance of any such law, or of the powers in him vested by the Constitution of the United States, or to resist, oppose, or defeat any such law or act, or to aid, encourage, or abet any hostile designs of any foreign nation against the United States, their people, or Government, then such person, being thereof convicted before any court of the United States having jurisdiction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $2,000, and by imprisonment not exceeding two years.

Now, I call the Senator's attention to section 3. It contains a provision which is found in every State constitution almost without exception, and in every State statute in connection with the law of libel and slander:

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted and declared, That if any person shall be prosecuted under this act for the writing or publishing any libel aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the defendant, upon the trial of the cause, to give in evidence in his defense the truth of the matter contained in the publication charged as a libel. And the jury who shall try the cause shall have a right to determine the law and the fact under the direction of the court, as in other cases.

Under this law, however libelous were the spoken or written words against which the sedition law of 1798 was aimed, the defendant, when put upon trial, might give in evidence the truth of the libel, and the truth might prove a defense. But nothing of the kind is permitted under the acts of the Philippine Commission. Under them the greater the lie the greater the slander, the greater the offense. A libel is not necessarily untrue. One is guilty of libel at common law when he utters or publishes anything that is defamatory of another if it is spoken or printed maliciously. Under the Philippine statute, however truthful the charge made by an inhabitant of the islands may be, it is no defense nor is it in mitigation that it is true if the statement tends to incite or produce any of the things that are enacted against. Whether his words be true or false, the defendant is guilty of the crime and he must be punished.

We recollect the circumstances under which the sedition laws of 1798 were enacted. John Adams had been elected President. It was believed by the people of the United States, or of most of them, and George Washington concurred in the belief, that France was about to wage war against the United States. Washington wrote a letter in which he gave what he believed was the plan of invasion determined upon by the French directory. The French army was to land on the Southern coast, incite the slaves to rise, establish there the base of supplies, march to the North and wrest the States from the Government and annex them to France. There were in the United States at that time many sympathizers with the French Government. Mindful of the timely and necessary assistance that had been given by France to the efforts of the colonies for their independence, they thought it was the duty of the United States to actively sympathize with and aid France under the directory in its tremendous struggles against Great Britain. The sedition laws were enacted to suppress those sympathizers with France, and the writers of the history of those times point out that it was the sedition laws which caused the downfall of the Federal party. Van Holst was not an admirer of Jefferson. He was an admirer of Hamilton and his theory of government. Speaking of the sedition laws, which I have just read, in his Constitutional History of the United States, Van Holst says:

A small number of the Federalists were anxious for war, and the rest of them considered it at least as probable as the preservation of peace. Warlike preparations were therefore pushed forward with energy. But it was not considered sufficient to get ready to receive the foreign enemy; it was necessary to fetter the enemy at home. The angry aliens were to be gotten rid of while it was not yet too late, and the extreme anti-Federalists were to be deterred from throwing too great obstacles, at this serious time, in the way of the Administration. In the desire to effect both of these things, the so-called alien and sedition laws, which sealed the fate of the Federal party and gave rise to the doctrine of nullification, had their origin.

I may, in this connection, read a letter written by Alexander Hamilton, in which he deprecated and practically denounced the sedition laws. It is a short letter, one to Mr. Wolcott, dated June 29, 1798:

DEAR SIR: I have this moment seen a bill brought into the Senate, entitled "A bill to define more particularly the crime of treason," etc. There are provisions in this bill which, according to a cursory view, appear to me highly exceptionable, and such as, more than anything else, may endanger civil war. I have not time to point out my objections by this post, but I will do it to-morrow. I hope, sincerely, the thing may not be hurried through. Let us not, establish a tyranny. Energy is a very different thing from violence. If we make no false step, we shall be essentially united; but if we push things to an extreme, we shall then give to faction body and solidity.

This was the view of Alexander Hamilton more than a century ago of the sedition laws of that year, laws which, as I suggested, are beacon lights of liberty and independence as compared with the laws enacted by the Philippine Commission.

But, Mr. President, when we consider, in connection with the laws, the tribunals by which those laws are to be enforced, then, indeed, should we shudder at the possible consequences. By what courts are they to be enforced? As testified to by Governor-General Taft—because that is his title in the Philippines; they all denominate him "General"—there is a court of first instance established in each of the provinces to which, as he maintains, peace has been brought. The court of first instance is the nisi prius court, the court in which criminal offenses are tried and in which civil suits of a certain magnitude are originally brought. There is no jury of any kind or character in the Philippine Islands for criminal cases. For the trial of civil suits the judge has it in his power to call to his assistance two inhabitants of the islands, called assessors, that he may receive their advice and counsel. But this is in civil suits only.

Where a person is accused of crime, the penalty of which is death, imprisonment, or fine, he must be tried before a single judge. Governor Taft says that if the punishment of death is to be inflicted, then the record must be taken to the supreme court before the penalty is enforced. Where the punishment is simply imprisonment, however long, or fine, however great, the punishment goes into effect at once. The trial court is practically the court of last resort, for we know that the mass of the population in the Philippines is so poor that it would be utterly impossible for one out of ten thousand, who might be tried, to take an appeal and have his case reviewed by the supreme court of the islands.

Mr. CLAY. Will the Senator from Colorado give us, in the connection in which he is now speaking, an idea of the number of Americans and the number of Filipinos who are judges in the nisi prius courts, and also the number of judges on the supreme bench who are Americans and the number who are Filipinos?

Mr. PATTERSON. There are seven supreme court judges, three of whom, as I understand, are Filipinos and four Americans. About two-thirds of the judges of courts of first instance are Americans and one-third are Filipinos.

Now, consider the geography of the islands. I have never determined precisely, but looking at the map they must extend from north to south not less than 1,500 miles. Most of the different provinces are practically inaccessible from the capital of the islands, Manila. It requires a government vessel in the neighborhood of a month to visit the capitals of the provinces where they may be reached by water. Many of them are not accessible by water. The roads in many of the provinces are almost impassable. Just imagine one of these courts of first instance sitting in an inaccessible province, the judge of the court removed from all influences save the influence that secured his appointment. Fifty or a hundred poor and helpless inhabitants of the provinces are before him charged with the crime of treason and sedition.

However innocent the accused may be, the probabilities are that they will be convicted, conviction to be followed by certain and inexorable punishment. I do not believe you can conceive of a country having a system of laws such as this in which the inhabitants are so perfectly helpless as they are before those tribunals. Courts-martial would be heaven-ordained institutions in comparison with courts such as are provided in the Philippine Islands, under the conditions there existing. They are practically without supervision by a higher authority. Governor Taft admitted that the Commission appointed as judges only those who were in sympathy with its purposes. Its purposes are to force the islanders to a state of peace. Its courts will do their part of the forcing operation.

In these days of trouble and bitterness in the Philippine Islands, I submit that it would be far better for an accused person to be tried by court-martial. A court-martial must necessarily consist of more than one member, and these are bound by obligations of honor that none of them are willing to abandon. With a court-martial the chances of justice would be infinitely greater than under the civil courts of the islands.

When you take into consideration, Mr. President, the tribunals in which these laws are to be enforced, the legal system that prevails, the absence of everything in the form of a jury, the practical impossibility of review, the want of limitation upon the exercise of power by the judges presiding, then you must agree that justice has indeed fled or is likely to flee to "brutish beasts."

Mr. President, in this connection I may discuss the indictment of the people of the Philippines by Governor Taft. I said "indictment of the people." Never have a people been held up to baser scorn and contumely by one who is their ruler for the time being than have the people of the Philippines by the governor-general appointed by the President of the United States. I heard Senators talk about the extension of the franchise to the Philippine people; that we were giving them lessons in free government; taking them by the hand and leading them into the mysteries and benefits of the ballot box; and that within a generation or several generations, under the benign influence of the Taft Commission, they would be raised to the dignity of a higher manhood, and when that time came, when they had been thus qualified by our management, if they then wished to walk alone, in all human probability our Government would help them in the effort.

The franchise! Let me call the attention of the Senate to the franchise. That it is a marvel in its operation I think you will agree with me. How does it operate? I read from part first of the report of the Philippine Commission for the period from December 1, 1900, to October 15, 1901. Those who are granted the franchise must speak, write, and read the Spanish or English language, must be the owner of property of the value of $250, American money, or pay a tax of at least $15. The Commission, writing upon that subject, says, quoting from page 32:

An attempt has been made to ascertain the proportion of qualified electors to inhabitants in the towns thus far organized. Difficulties of communication have rendered this effort only partially successful. Returns have been received from 390 municipalities, showing a total population of 2,695,801 and a total of 49,523 qualified electors, or 18.37 electors per 1,000 inhabitants.

In other words, the right to vote, so far as practical results are concerned, has been granted to something less than 2 per cent of the population—18.37 electors out of 1,000 inhabitants—and that result is declared by the Commission after a zealous attempt to ascertain the proportion of qualified electors to the inhabitants of towns thus far organized. Returns were received from 390 municipalities, showing the total of population 2,695,801, with a total of 49,523 qualified electors, or 18.37 electors for every 1,000 inhabitants; less than 2 per cent.

Governor Taft declared that there were no people in the islands fit for jury duty. He was asked why they did not go to the body of electors, since the body of electors comprised the intelligence of the Philippine Islands, for jurors; and he stated that that could not be done, because they were either corrupt or open to corruption. Those who can not vote, he reasoned, can not be selected for jury service. They also are corrupt and open to corruption. Governor Taft declares that men fitted for suffrage in the Philippine Islands, and to whom suffrage is granted, are not sufficiently honest to perform the duties of jurors.

Mr. President, I beg leave to differ with the honorable governor of the Philippine Islands. I am afraid he was not altogether frank with the committee in giving his reasons for depriving the Filipinos of the right of trial by jury. When these treason laws are read, when the character of the tribunals before which those accused must be tried is taken into consideration, I think it is reasonably clear that juries are denied in criminal cases because the Commission is afraid to trust Philippine juries with the enforcement of the laws extended over them. It wants the administration of justice kept in their own hands. The Commission is determined to say who shall go to prison and who shall pay a fine or who shall suffer death. They realize that the peace of which they speak is a false peace. They realize that the spark of liberty and a desire for independence have been enkindled in the bosom of the great body of the Filipino people, and although the Filipino people may profess a desire for peace now, they can not be trusted to enforce the tyrannical and the drastic laws that the Commission have set in operation against them.

Mr. President, I should like in this connection to call the attention of the Senate to the people of the Philippine Islands. They have been slandered, they have been defamed. They have been proclaimed a mass of besotted ignorants, cruel, treacherous, deceitful, idle, slothful, and corrupt human beings. Think of a human mass of this character, and that the United States have attempted to civilize and elevate it to a level upon which its members will intelligently and faithfully exercise self-government.

I take issue with the defamers of this people. I take issue with them, and I do not depart from governmental sources in sustaining my claims. I will confine myself to the records of the departments of the United States Government in showing that the Philippine people are what their friends believe them to be. I think it is well worth while to give the necessary time to comprehend the picture that the War Department has painted and then compare it with the picture painted by Governor Taft.

I read from a document styled "The People of the Philippines," Document No. 218 of the Fifty-sixth Congress, second session.

Only about a year ago, after we had been in possession of the Philippines for at least two years; after officers of the Army and Navy and private citizens had visited all parts of the Philippines; after American soldiers had been brought into contact with the Philippine people as prisoners of war; after there had been full opportunity to determine whether the Philippine people were treacherous or cruel, whether they were trustworthy and kind; after two years of this experience the War Department gives to the Congress of the United States the conclusion it reached as to the nature and character of the Filipinos. This is the letter of transmittal:

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington, February 15, 1901.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith an article on The People of the Philippines, compiled in the Division of Insular Affairs from standard works and the records of the Department, supplemented by the personal experience of returning officers.

This article, together with the data contained in the recent report of the Philippine Commission, would possibly supply the constantly growing demand for information on this subject, and may possess sufficient interest to warrant publication.

Very respectfully, ELIHU ROOT, Secretary of War.

It is directed to Hon. H. C. LODGE, chairman of the Committee on the Philippines, United States Senate.

Now, Mr. President, we have heard much of the ignorance of those people. This is what the War Department says, speaking of the Tagalogs, who comprise about 2,000,000 of the inhabitants:

Most of them, both men and women, can read and write.

The Visayans are nearly two millions more. They are closely akin and follow closely in the footsteps of the Tagalogs. Most of the Tagalogs at least can read and write.

Governor Taft says this is not true. After compiling from standard authors and authorities; after consulting all that was communicated to the Insular Division of the Department; after consulting with returning officers who had been through the islands, both as travelers and prisoners, the War Department communicates its information to Congress. I place the War Department against the statement of the governor of the Philippine Islands and will let the Senate of the United States judge between them.

Right here let me suggest that one of the most cruel things which this beneficent Government is engaged in doing is crushing out the language of the Philippines. Most of the Tagalos can read and write. So says the War Department. But from 5 to 7 per cent of them speak and write the Spanish language; but most of them do speak and write their own language—a language with a literature, a language in which a number of poems have been composed, in which works of fiction and philosophy have been written, a language which has a literature of substance and beauty. The United States is engaged in crushing out that language by every act that is available to it.

I know of nothing that will more surely breed discontent than efforts to crush out the language of a people. Austria is endeavoring to do it with Hungary, and we know the effort has led to riots in the legislature of that twin Empire. We know it has almost resulted in war between them. The Slavs will not submit to the crushing out of their language.

No man may vote in the Philippine Islands, whatever his intelligence, unless he reads and writes the Spanish language, the language of the tyrant conqueror of the islands. Those who write and read the English language may also vote. But Governor Taft says that the fraction of those who speak the English language in the islands is so small that it is not worth taking into consideration. Those who read and write only the language of the islands, though they may compose poems and write history in that language, are prohibited from the use of the ballot.

It is said we sent over 800 teachers. To do what? To teach them the English language. But we force the Filipinos to pay for their transportation and support without giving them a voice as to what or how they shall teach or in what language. We force them to pay all taxes necessary for the salaries of teachers and the support of the schools to root out their own language and supplant it with that of the new conqueror.

It seems to me, Mr. President, that it is not creditable. There is not much benevolent assimilation about that. It is simply the act of a conqueror, and a conqueror that is disposed to be tyrannical, who cares nothing for the sympathies and yearnings and prejudices and nature of the people over whom it has assumed the right to rule.

Now, let me read further:

Three centuries and over of Spanish subjugation have not been sufficient to materially change their racial characteristics.

Yet we are going to do it in a generation.

Wallace gives them place as the fourth great tribe of the Malay race. The Tagalog possesses—

Mark now—

The Tagalog possesses great self-respect, and in his behavior is quiet and decorous. He treats others with politeness and expects it for himself. Judging of industry as one must judge of it in the Tropics, he may be said to be reasonably industrious, and often works very hard, especially as a casco poleman against the swift current of the Pasig. The wife—

Even a woman there is upon a plane of equality with the man, giving evidence of at least a certain degree of civilization—

The wife exerts great influence in the family, especially in trading and in bargain making; indeed, she may often be called the real head of the house.

Now we come to their treatment of the children.

They treat their children with great forbearance, and manifest great desire to give them a good education. Parental authority continues during the entire life of the parent. Mr. Sawyer states that he has seen a man of 50 years come as respectfully as a child to kiss the hand of his aged parent at the sounding of the vesper bell. Children in return show great respect to both parents, coming to them morning and evening to kiss their hands.

Mr. MCCOMAS. May I interrupt the Senator from Colorado? A moment ago he spoke of the language of the people?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, sir.

Mr. MCCOMAS. What language, do I understand?

Mr. PATTERSON. The Tagalog.

Mr. MCCOMAS. The Senator will remember the statement of Governor Taft that——

Mr. PATTERSON. Oh, of course. Of course the governor took issue on nearly every statement made by the War Department. As I said, it was the War Department with all its opportunities for knowledge, with a careful consideration and sifting of what it had learned and read, against the statements of Governor Taft.

Mr. McCOMAS. If the Senator will allow me, within 20 or 50 miles in various directions there would be ten or fifteen different dialects whereof one person could not understand any other. Is not that true?

Mr. PATTERSON. Oh, yes; he said many things; but, Mr. President, this is the testimony of those who have known the people of the Philippines much longer than Governor Taft, who did not have the same motives to misrepresent them.

Mr. FORAKER. Will the Senator allow me to interrupt him?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BLACKBURN in the chair). Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. PATTERSON. Certainly.

Mr. FORAKER. I wish to know whether we are to understand the Senator has now stated that in his opinion Governor Taft did misrepresent in the testimony he has given?

Mr. PATTERSON. I have stated, Mr. President, that it is the War Department against Governor Taft. I have no personal knowledge.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President, there might very well be a conflict between something coming from the War Department and something said by Governor Taft. That of course is a fact that can be established or not according as the fact may be. But what the Senator has now said is that Governor Taft had motive and purpose for the misrepresentation, as I understood him.

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, sir; that is my judgment.

Mr. FORAKER. That is all I wanted to know.

Mr. PATTERSON. Of course I am entitled to my opinion.

Mr. FORAKER. Of course the Senator is entitled to his judgment, and we are entitled to understand the Senator. We simply wanted to know whether the Senator is now deliberately stating in the Senate of the United States that in his opinion Governor Taft made misstatements purposely in the testimony which he has given.

Mr. PATTERSON. I did not say that. I said that Governor Taft has motives.

Mr. FORAKER. For misrepresentation?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, sir; for misrepresenting the people. Whether those motives operated upon him or not, or have operated upon him, I have not said. Governor Taft appeared before the committee as the advocate of the Administration in supporting, maintaining, defending, and justifying all that has been done in the Philippine Islands by the party and the Administration to which he owes his appointment.

Mr. FORAKER. I did not rise, the Senator will understand, to take any exception to anything he was saying; only to see that we correctly understood him. At another time, when we have opportunity to take the floor, there will be another view taken from that which the Senator has presented.

Mr. PATTERSON. Of course; there has been, right straight along.

Mr. McCOMAS. Will the Senator allow me?

Mr. PATTERSON. Certainly.

Mr. McCOMAS. I believe every word Governor Taft has said, but perhaps the Senator will also include Mr. Worcester, who spent years there, who says these same things, and even in a more extreme form. He says there are about 80 villages only 2 miles apart wherein people can not talk the language of their neighbors. Is that a like motive and not to be believed?

Mr. PATTERSON. That may be; but in England the dialects of a number of the different provinces are so widely different that it is next to impossible for the people of one province to understand the speech of the inhabitants of another. I understand such to be somewhat the case in Germany also.

I do not know anything about Mr. Worcester, however; I am reading from the official records of the War Department; the War Department against the defamers of the people of the Philippine Islands. Upon the one side stands the War Department, with its opportunity for information, with an avowed purpose in sending this contribution to Congress to give to the people of the United States the information which the people have been desiring, with apparently no motive to serve except to perform that important duty. I say, Mr. President, and repeat it, that this communication from the War Department brands as a slander most of what has been said—I particularize in no direction—when holding the Philippine people before the world as cruel, savage, idle, shiftless, and treacherous.

Now, I will proceed a little further. The War Department says:

Palgrave justly says of them—

Let us see what the Department quotes from Palgrave—

"Nowhere are family bonds closer drawn, family affection more enduring, than among the Malay races. His family is a pleasing sight, much subordination and little restraint, unison in gradation, liberty, not license, orderly children, respected parents, women subject but not suppressed, men ruling but not despotic, reverence with kindness, obedience in affection—these form a lovable picture, nor by any means a rare one in the villages of the eastern isles."

Then the War Department continues after the quotation:

It might be well to remark that this is an ideal picture and one only too rarely found among English-speaking people.

I will read further:

The children before attaining the age of puberty are not especially good looking, but are early trained in good manners. They greatly delight in bathing, the water usually averaging a temperature of 85° F. Both sexes and all ages mix indiscriminately in the bath, the adult decently clad, and all behaving themselves with decorum. Nearly every one learns to swim.

Then again:

Among the Tagals courtship is well drawn out.

It would not do to omit courtship.

The "catipado," or desiring-to-be bridegroom, is allowed to assist the girl of his choice in her allotted work, which is husking the rice for the use of the household. This is done in the cool of the day out of doors. A wooden mortar and long heavy pestle is used. It is a well-recognized opportunity for the lover to assist and entertain his sweetheart.

Evidently a quotation is what follows:

Very pretty do the village maidens look as, lightly clothed in almost diaphanous garments, they stand beside mortars plying the pestle, alternately rising on tiptoe, stretching the lithe figure to its full height and reach, then bending swiftly to give force to the blow. No attitude could display to more advantage the symmetry of form which is the Tagal maiden's heritage, and few sights are more pleasing than groups of these tawny maidens husking paddy midst chat and laughter, while a tropical moon pours its effulgence upon their glistening tresses and rounded arms.

I hope that when the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] replies and closes the debate he will bear in mind this glowing picture and not strive to destroy it. But the War Department continues about the Tagalogs:

Hospitality is a leading characteristic of the Tagal, and any observing well-behaved traveler will testify to his kindness and liberality.

Now, then, as to their skill in mechanics:

They are apt as machinists—

Think of it—

They are apt as machinists, and a fair number of engine fitters, turners, smiths, and boiler makers can be found. Under Spanish administration all the engine drivers and firemen were Tagals. There can be found in and around Manila a large number of carpenters, quarrymen, stone masons, and some bricklayers. As early as the time of the landing of Legaspi he found both cannon and cannon foundries. They make their own fireworks and gunpowder. They excel as carriage makers and have many shops on the roads leading out of Manila toward Malabon. Two-wheeled vehicles, called quilez and carromatos, are manufactured in great quantities. They also show talent in sculpture and painting, also great proficiency in carving. They are skillful in hunting and fishing. They make quite good agriculturists, and prepare their rice paddies with great care, and when the time of planting comes the whole population, men, women, and children, turn out to plant the rice, stalk by stalk, in the soft mud. It is a most beautiful sight to look over the broad valleys in time of the rice harvest and see fields swarming with Tagals, all busy at work. The bright colors worn by the women look especially attractive.

Then the War Department speaks of their talent and their love for music:

A writer who knows whereof he speaks gives this testimony concerning the musical talent of the Tagal: "Perhaps the most remarkable talent possessed by the Tagal is his gift for instrumental music. Each parish—

And the number must be almost innumerable—

"Each parish has its brass band, supplied with European instruments, the musicians generally wearing a quasi military uniform. If the village is a rich one, there is usually a string band as well. They play excellently, as do the military bands. Each infantry battalion"—

That is the Filipino battalion—

"Each infantry battalion had its band, whilst that of the peninsular artillery, of 90 performers, under a bandmaster holding the rank of lieutenant, was one of the finest bands I have ever heard. There are few countries where more music could be had gratis than in the Philippines, and for private dances these bands could be hired for very moderate rates."

Then we come to their other acquisitions besides that of reading, which is an item of some importance:

They are by no means void of knowledge of natural history, such as enables them to understand the habits of game, to give names for animals and birds, insects, and reptiles, and to describe in detail their habits. As hunters they are good marksmen. If sent out with two cartridges—

Mark it—

If sent out with two cartridges, they usually come back with two deer or pigs, or a lengthy apology for wasting the cartridge and how it happened. They drive the deer in nets arranged in an acute angle, and then spear them, throwing their weapons with great accuracy. The Tagalogs, though not as industrious as the Ilocanos, yet are very faithful and efficient house servants, though not as good buyers and cooks as the Chinos. As clerks and draftsmen they are reasonably skillful. Usually they write a beautiful hand, and some of them can do splendid work in headings and ornamental title-pages.

Now, let us see something about their honesty. Frederic H. Sawyer, writing in a book entitled The Inhabitants of the Philippines, says upon that subject, and I yet quote from the War Department's letter:

When doing business with the Tagals, I found that the older men could be trusted. If I gave them credit, which was often the case, for one or two years, I could depend upon the money being paid when due, unless some calamity such as a flood or conflagration had rendered it impossible for them to find the cash. In such a case (which seldom happened) they would advise me beforehand, and perhaps bring a portion of the money, giving a pagaré—

That is, a promissory note—

bearing interest for the remainder, and never by any possibility denying the debt. I never made a bad debt amongst them, and gladly testify to their punctilious honesty. This idea of the sacredness of an obligation seems to prevail amongst many of the Malay races, even among the pagan savages, as I had occasion to observe when I visited the Tagbanuas in Palawan (Paragua). They certainly did not learn this from the Spaniards.

Then the Department tells how the Spaniards found it impossible to introduce the bull fight among them. Their nature rebelled against the atrocity of that so-called sport. In literature this is what the War Department says:

The Tagal race possesses but little literature in its dialect, since those who have made advancement along these lines have usually used the Spanish language. In the exhibition of the Philippines at Madrid, 1887, Barranter showed 20 volumes of grammars and vocabularies of the Philippine dialects and 31 volumes of popular native poetry, besides 2 volumes of native plays. We have examples of a high order of mentality among the Tagals when they have had the opportunity for training in the higher branches. The schools of primary instruction show that the children are both eager and apt to learn. The Tagal, doubtless, under American system of education will manifest great advance, but to increase his mentality without proper regard for a proportionate increase in that which pertains to higher standard of integrity and uprightness of character would make him a very undesirable citizen.

Of course the War Department could not end its description without saying something to support the Administration claim that the Filipinos are unfit for self-government.

Mr. President, if that were all it might be possible that the War Department is mistaken, but Prof. Ferdinand Blumentritt, who is given by the Encyclopedia Britannica as the first authority on the Philippines, describes the Christianized Filipinos, numbering more than 6,000,000, as follows:

The main features of Filipino character are quiet docility and ambition, which ranges, through different degrees, from vanity to proud striving after recognition of the Ego, and which is one of the most important physical factors in the Philippine question. This explains their proneness to revenge, which (long reined in and mastered) seeks satisfaction when opportunity offers. Another attribute of the Filipinos has shown itself for the first time in the rebellion against the Spaniards and in the war against the Americans—an attribute which there had been no previous opportunity to observe. This is a self-control which resembles that of northern peoples, and which manifests itself in this: That they restrained themselves, with few exceptions, from satisfying their ancient thirst for revenge on the unfortunates who fell into their hands because they were mindful of "their reputation in Europe."

In fact, the Philippine revolution has not been stained by such cruelties as have the revolutions of European nations. There is still another thing which casts a favorable light upon their national character, namely, the discipline maintained by the former army of rebellion, now the army of freedom, in the Philippine Republic. All who have read the history of the revolts of the Spanish colonies in America will surely remember that the rebels were always in discord, and that their generals betrayed, deserted, and, even in the very presence of the enemy, fought each other. Yet, with few exceptions, those generals belonged to the white race, the creole nobility. In the Philippine army, on the contrary, that was drawn together from so many provinces and whose generals were chiefly Malays, all ran smooth, and, if we except the single case of General Luna (which has not yet been cleared up), there ruled a spirit of subordination and discipline which the Filipinos could not have learned from their former Spanish masters. Germans who have lived both in Japan and the Philippines assert that the Filipino is the equal of the Japanese in many respects and far his superior in a sense of honesty and justice. The character of the Filipino as a host and friend is well known, and I have so often experienced this that I can not sufficiently praise it.

I might supplement this by the reports of Wilcox and Sargent, the one a paymaster in the Navy and the other a cadet. They made a tour of the Philippine Islands, starting while the American Army was occupying the trenches in which the Filipino troops had held the Spaniards—occupying the trenches which the valor and courage of the Filipino soldiers made so easy of conquest. While the forces of the two peoples were facing each other, Sargent and Wilcox, desiring to make a trip through the islands, applied for a permit to Aguinaldo.

It was requested also by General MacArthur and Admiral Dewey, but Aguinaldo declined to give a passport, saying, "You may go; you will be safe; you have nothing to fear." Sargent and Wilcox made a report of their several months' journeyings through eight or nine Filipino provinces. They traveled during the existence of the Filipino republic, with Aguinaldo as its provisional head. These officers made a report to the Navy Department of their observations during the journey. I will read but one sentence, which, it strikes me, is most significant:

The steamer Saturnas, which had left the harbor the day before our arrival, brought news from Hongkong papers that the Senators from the United States at the congress at Paris favored the independence of the islands with an American protectorate. Colonel Tirona considered the information of sufficient reliability to justify him in regarding the Philippine independence as assured and warfare in the island at an end.

In the morning Colonel Tirona resigned his command as one of the Filipino commanders. Let us see what he did:

For this reason he proceeded to relinquish military command he held over the provinces and to place this power in the hands of a civil officer elected by the people. This officer also made a speech, in which he thanked the disciplined military forces and their colonel for the services they had rendered the provinces, and assured them that the war they had begun would be perpetuated by the people of the provinces, where every man, woman, and child stood ready to take up arms to defend their newly won liberty and resist to the last drop of their blood the attempt of any nation whatever to bring them back to their former state of dependence. His speech was impassioned. He then placed his hand on an open Bible and took the oath of office.

This was the action of a Filipino military commander when the false news was brought that the Senators of the United States composing the Paris Peace Commission had arranged for the independence of the Philippine Islands with an American protectorate. He immediately laid down his commission and immediately took the oath of allegiance to what he supposed was the new republic. Doubtless he had in mind the exalted procedure of Washington when the war of the Revolution was brought to a close. This entire report of Sargent and Wilcox should be read. It fully corroborates the printed views of the War Department.

Mr. President, I will not dwell longer upon this feature of the controversy; but, as I have said before, it is well that the American people should have another picture of the Filipino than those painted by his enemies. They are a homogeneous people. They are bound together by racial ties, by religion, and by a fervent and almost universal desire for freedom and independence. Surely these constitute an unusually safe foundation upon which to build a free and independent state.

When the history of the eight months' existence of the Filipino republic is read and understood, there will be found a complete answer to every claim that has been made by the imperialists of to-day that the Filipino is not capable of giving to his own kind a safe, orderly, and law-abiding government. His government may not be a government such as ours, but it will be a government suited to his own convictions and conditions, a government based upon what he has learned since his attention has been turned to the teachings of the American Republic for more than a century.

Do you blame the Filipino because he struggles for that which you taught him to struggle for? Do you blame him because he believes in his heart of hearts that governments should derive their just powers from the consent of the governed? Do you believe him when, through the Federal party, he tells you that no form of colonial government will satisfy him, but that he wants, first, a Territorial government under the Constitution of the United States, and ultimately statehood? That is what is demanded by the intelligent Filipinos who are most friendly to American domination.

The great majority stand upon a higher plane; they know their own resources and possibilities; they have had experiences for a number of years, and we know they have demonstrated that they are self-contained, but they can not restrain the natural promptings of the human heart for liberty and independence. They held their Spanish oppressors as prisoners of war by the thousands and treated them with a humanity that commanded the commendation of the civilized world. These things the Filipinos have learned. They now comprehend their own possibilities in the channels of government, and do you think it possible to eradicate these convictions from their hearts and minds?

You propose to educate them. The more education you give them of the American kind, the more determined will be their stand for all that for which the American people stand. The more the Filipino reads political literature, such as the press of this country is continually publishing, the more restless he will become under the domination of a master—for the attitude of this Government to the Filipinos is that of a master. The attitude of the Administration, as I understand it, is that of the three members of the Supreme Court who concurred in the decision rendered by Mr. Justice White. No man can read that decision without concluding that they hold that Philippine territory is simply appurtenant and may be controlled by Congress to the same extent and in the same way that the Government controls its other property; as it manages its horses, its buildings, and munitions of war. The islands and their population are property within the control of Congress, and there is no limitation upon its power over them.

There is no suggestion in their opinion, as there is in the opinion of Mr. Justice Brown, that there are certain natural inherent rights which the Constitution guarantees the inhabitants, and which should and will be enjoyed by inhabitants of the islands. There is nothing of the kind in the opinion written by Mr. Justice White. It is after the plan of that opinion that the Administration is govering.

Governor Taft was asked whether he would favor a declaration by the American Congress that the Filipinos were entitled to and should have Territorial government as enjoyed by other Territories under the Constitution, and he said that he would not—not even a Territorial form of government, a government affording the people constitutional protection.

Mr. President, I will refer briefly to another topic justified by the statements of Governor Taft before the committee. It relates to the condition of the insurrection now in the Philippine Islands. He states that the insurrection is suppressed in all but three of the provinces. He states that there are little more than from two to three thousand Filipinos in insurrection. He states that he feels as safe in the pacified provinces as he would on the streets of Washington. If this be true, what justification is there for the odious and unconstitutional treason and sedition laws, especially when by the terms of the act they are operative only in the alleged pacified provinces?

In that connection I would refer to the Federal party, and emphasize what I said upon a former occasion, that the Federal party is the right hand of the Philippine Commission in the Philippine Islands. This is what the Philippine Commission says, on the very first page of its report, about the Federal party:

An account of the feeling of the Filipino people, which made the Federal party possible, will be found in an appended report of Dr. Pardo de Tavera, some time its president, and Señores Benito Legarda and Jose Luzuriaga, members of the party, all of whom are now members of the Commission (Appendix A).

All members of the Commission of which Governor Taft is the head. Then the report proceeds:

It was organized to secure peace for this country under the sovereignty of the United States. The party spread like wildfire through the archipelago, and there are now few towns in any of the provinces which have not their Federal committees. Its members were most active and effective in inducing insurgent leaders to surrender.

It does not seem unreasonable to ask the Senate to lend ear to what this Federal party urges. The three leaders are members of the Philippine Commission. It was organized, if not by the procurement, at least with the approval of Governor Taft and the other members of the Commission. The Commission leaned upon it as a staff, and it supported them in their early efforts. It was this Federal party that, after armies had swept over the islands like besoms of destruction, induced the people to accept the Government of their oppressors, advocating peace in the islands, with recognition of the sovereignty of the United States. There are over 150,000 members of this party in the Philippines, most of the members the intelligent, Spanish-speaking, and Spanish-writing Filipinos, and the testimony of Governor Taft is that the Filipino looks with peculiar reverence upon the intelligent members of his race. These Federalists have done yeoman service toward stable peace in the conquered islands.

Therefore it seems to me that when they, in the most solemn way possible, tell you what they desire, what the Filipino people will endure, what they will not endure, tell you the inevitable result of one course of conduct and the result of another course of conduct in the islands, you should, above all others, listen to this party through its representatives.

Now, what do they say? I trust the Senate will bear with me while I read with some detail the statements of the communication to Congress, of which Governor Taft was the bearer, delivered to the War Department and communicated by the War Department to Congress. Governor Taft and the Commission give faith and credit to this party. They have practically said to the leaders of this party: "We are your friends. We stand for your promises. We will use our influence to secure all that you promised to the Filipino people to induce them to join with you in abandoning the struggle for independence and to submit to the sovereignty of the United States."

In their petition they say to Congress:

PETITION FOR ANNEXATION AND FORM OF GOVERNMENT.

The Federal party has made an exhaustive study of the sentiments of the Filipino people.

The Federal party has made an exhaustive study of the sentiments of the Filipino people. Which is entitled to the greatest credit? The statements of this Federal party, made through its recognized leaders, who are Filipinos of the Filipinos, and who know their people, their hopes, and their aspirations.

The Federal party has made an exhaustive study of the sentiments of the Filipino people, as well as those animating the American people, with respect to determining the future of these islands.

From the mass of data which the Federal party has had before it, and seriously and formally considered, it is clearly deduced that the intention of the Americans and Filipinos is to constitutionally—

That is, what they say is clearly deduced—

is to constitutionally join the Philippines to America in such a way that the former may never be separated from the latter nor the latter disunited from the former.

Then they insert this quotation from the Constitution of the United States, which in their own printed copy is in small caps, so as to emphasize it.

"In order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defence, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty" are the principles in which the policy which should be followed in the Philippines should be inspired without the loss of a moment.

Now, listen—

To make of the Philippines a colony of the United States or to grant independence to the Philippines—

Putting one upon an equality with the other—

To make of the Philippines a colony of the United States or to grant independence to the Philippines would be to hand the islands over to disorder and to anarchy, to destruction and to chaos.

This bill, which the majority will vote for, is based upon the theory that the Philippine Islands are as foreign territory; that the Constitution does not extend to them; that they are territory appurtenant and not territory that has become a part of the United States. It is founded upon the fact that the Philippines are but colonies of the United States, and their inhabitants subjects and not citizens.

It is because of this that Congress imposes a tariff upon goods imported into the islands from the United States and upon goods brought from the islands into the United States. This alone makes them a colony within the European standard of colonies, and Congress has assumed to govern them precisely as Great Britain governs its colonies or Germany or France theirs. Listen again to what the Federal party declares about the effect of governing the islands as a colony:

To make of the Philippines a colony of the United States or to grant independence to the Philippines would be to hand the islands over to disorder and to anarchy, to destruction and to chaos.

Are the Senators upon the other side willing in the face of this warning to assume the risk that the statement of the Federal party is untrue?

It may be that you have confidence that the Army, if the peaceful Filipinos again rise when they learn that you treat their appeal with contempt, will overcome them again. It may be that you can again raise the Philippine army to 70,000 and stamp out whatever opposition may arise out of your present course. You may be right, but either the consequences or the alternative should warn you to desist.

What perfidy is there not, Mr. President, in such a course? The Federal party gained its strength and influence through its representations to intelligent Filipinos that should they join the party and acknowledge the supremacy of the United States a Territorial government, guarded by the Constitution, and ultimately statehood, would be granted to them.

Statehood, when? In generations from now, or in the life of those who are making the sacrifices for statehood? A government under the Constitution for their children's grandchildren or for themselves within a reasonable limit of time, having in mind the ordinary length of human life? It was by these representations the Federal party was strengthened. It was by these representations that the peace you have in the islands now exists.

The petition further recites:

In behalf, then, of the Federal party, this convention has the honor to very respectfully present to the Congress the following petition, praying a declaration by the Congress of the United States to the effect that the Philippine Islands, as they are described in the treaty of Paris and subsequent conventions with Spain, are an integral part of the Republic of the United States of North America, the said Philippine Islands constituting a Territory with the rights and privileges which the Constitution of the United States grants to the other Territories, such as that of becoming eventually a State of the Union.

If the Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART] were here, I should remind him of the speech he made day before yesterday. He said: "Of course, we will give the Filipinos a Territorial form of government. Of course we will." But when I asked Governor Taft whether he would favor Congress making this declaration, even eliminating from it all reference to statehood, his answer was that he would not. The exact question propounded to Governor Taft was: "Now, eliminating from the proposition all question of statehood, would you favor a declaration by Congress that the said Philippine Islands should constitute a Territory of the United States, with the rights and privileges which the Constitution of the United States grants to the other Territories?" And his reply was that he would not.

For myself, Mr. President, I heartily support the minority bill offered as a substitute for that of the majority. It proposes, in short, to grant independence to the Philippines, this Government to retain control until their inhabitants form a stable government of their own. It insists that all in the islands shall be given like protection; that this country shall have such coaling stations and such other facilities as may be needed to advance our Western commerce. Pursuing this course, we will not be troubled with questions of statehood and constitutional Territorial government for the Philippines, nor by fears of uprising to throw off our colonial system. By such a course the Constitution will continue unimpaired and our country and its institutions will continue in the future as they have in the past to receive the blessings and prayers of the liberty loving in every land. I do not want the Philippines either as States or Territories, and still more do I deprecate their retention as colonies. The Filipinos have earned their independence. I believe they can form a stable republican government, not as perfect as ours, but perfect enough for themselves, for it will be after their kind and they will in the end perfect it so as to meet all the requirements of an Asiatic, liberty-loving people.

Mr. President, I have occupied more time, under the circumstances, than I should. I have not gone at all into events antedating the President's order directing the American Army to proceed to subjugate the Philippine Islands. I believe the United States should release that which was secured through perfidy and the strong arm of an invading army. It should release the 8,000,000 of people, 6,000,000 of whom are Christians. Christians.

Christian natives! Christians! The trouble may be that they are not Protestant Christians.

The suggestion may cause a smile, but I have it in my mind that if the 6,000,000 Christian Filipinos had learned their Christianity in the sanctuaries of the Methodist, Baptist, and Presbyterian churches, and if such Filipinos were as well founded in the cardinal virtues of Christianity as are the Filipinos to-day, there would be such an uprising by the Methodists, Presbyterians, and Baptists in the United States against the cruel, unconstitutional, and relentless policy of the Administration in dealing with their people that there would be but few members of Congress who would face the consequences.

But they are not Protestant Christians. Nevertheless, Mr. President, they are founded in the virtues of Christianity. They have acquired self-restraint, the domestic virtues, a fair degree of honesty. They love their neighbors as nearly as the average Christian loves his neighbors. They display a desire for freedom and independence that could only have been inspired in schools of the highest politics and have emanated from the teachings of such masters as Washington, Jefferson, and Madison, backed with the best thoughts and grandest impulses of all true lovers of liberty in the American Union.

I will not occupy more time. I have said more than I expected to say. If I have expressed my honest and my deepest convictions upon this most vital question as one of the representatives of my State upon the floor of the Senate, I have but done my duty.

Mr. NELSON obtained the floor.

Mr. LODGE. Will the Senator from Minnesota yield to me for a moment to make a motion?

Mr. NELSON. Certainly.

Mr. LODGE. I move that when the Senate adjourns to-day it be to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, it is my purpose, for a few moments, to discuss some of the constitutional questions involved in the proposed legislation. I find that much confusion exists as to to the constitutional powers of and the constitutional limitations imposed upon Congress in legislating for our territorial possessions.

But before I proceed with that discussion I can not help calling attention to one fact. We have had attacks made indirectly upon our soldiers in the Philippines; we have had attacks made upon our government in those islands; but it remained for the Senator from Colorado [Mr. PATTERSON] to characterize as an act of tyranny and despotism the fact that we have sent American teachers there to teach the Filipinos the English language, and tax them for that purpose.

A large number of our great Northwestern States have been settled by men and women speaking a foreign tongue. We have taxed them to teach them in American schools the English language, and not a single one of them within my knowledge has ever protested that it was an act of tyranny or despotism. And what we have done in the great Northwestern States to develop them—the States of Wisconsin, Iowa, Michigan, and Minnesota, in teaching our large foreign population the English language and taxing them for that purpose—we certainly have the right to do in the Philippine Islands, and it is no more despotism in one case than in the other.

I was not surprised, after the Senator from Colorado had advanced that idea, that he was the first Senator to inject the sectarian question into this discussion. One follows the other inevitably, and I was not at all surprised at it. It is not, as the Senator intimates, a Protestant scheme to give them the benefits of an English education. It is for the purpose of civilizing them and making good citizens, fit for free government. Attendance is not compulsory. The Filipinos are eager to learn English, and I would remind the Senator that they complain far more of the friars than the English schools.

No one can now be found to deny the Federal Government the power and right to acquire territory by conquest or treaty. And yet this power is nowhere in the Constitution given in express terms. It is one of the implied powers growing out of the power to make war and enter into treaties. It is one of the powers inherent in every organized and independent government, of which no government can afford to divest itself without crippling its capacity for self-preservation. Wars may come upon even the most peaceful nation, and war may lead to conquest, and such conquest can not oftentimes be relinquished without either suffering in compensation or in indemnity for future aggression or danger. (American Insurance Company v. Canter, I Peters, 540.)

The power of acquiring involves the power of holding, and from these twofold powers springs, as a necessary and inevitable consequence, the power of governing and of legislating for the territory acquired and held. This power of governing and legislating is not only derived from this source, but also rests upon and is derived from the express language of the Constitution:

> Congress shall have power * * * to make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory * * * belonging to the United States. (Par. 2, sec. 3, art. 4; Sere v. Pitot, 6 Cranch, 337; Am. Ins. Co. v. Canter, I Peters, 540.)

This is the clear and emphatic language of the Constitution.

The people of the ceded territory, through the act of cession, sever their political connection, but do not thereby divest themselves of those rights and immunities given them by their local laws for the protection of their person and property. These laws remain in force until changed or abrogated by the nation to whom they are ceded. The people of such territory do not, though ceded to a self-governing nation, such as ours, thereby ipso facto become entitled to self-government, nor do they become vested with any political rights except such as may be conferred upon them by Congress. (Story Const., sec. 1324 and 1325.)

Until Congress intervenes by appropriate legislation the government of the acquired territory remains under the control of the President, as the head of the executive department and as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy. Such a government—and I wish to call the attention of the Senator from Colorado to it—is a valid and constitutional government, resting upon the right of conquest and acquisition. It was so held in the case of California, which was taken possession of by our military authorities in 1846 and remained under the control of the President till it was admitted as a State in 1850 (Cross v. Harrison, 16 Howard, 164); and it was so held in the case of New Mexico (Leitensdorfer v. Webb, 20 Howard, 176).

California never had a Territorial government. It remained under the control of the War Department, the executive department of the Government, from the time we got it in 1846 until it became a State in 1850, and our Supreme Court held that that was a constitutional and valid government.

This implied power was expressly conferred upon the President by act of Congress in the case of Louisiana in 1803 and in the case of Florida in 1819. The amendment to the Army bill of the Senator of Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] is a counterpart of this act, and neither of them confer any other or greater power upon the President than he is vested with under the Constitution, independent of statute, as decided by our Supreme Court in Cross v. Harrison, 16 Howard, 164.

We are now about to legislate for the Philippine Islands—one of our recent territorial acquisitions—and the question before us is not, as some suppose, whether the Constitution, or any part of it, extends by its own force, independent of legislation, to the islands. That question properly occurs after cession and before legislation, and has been settled by our Supreme Court.

The Constitution gives Congress the power, within certain limits, to legislate for the United States and all their territorial possessions. Congress assumes the power to legislate for the Philippines because they are a part of the territory of the United States. And in thus assuming to legislate the question arises: What are the powers of Congress in the premises and what, if any, are the limitations upon such power? These limitations may come from two sources, the treaty of cession and the Constitution.

> This Constitution * * * and all treaties made or which shall be made under the authority of the United States shall be the supreme law of the land (par. 2, Art. VI)— is the language of the Constitution. The power to legislate and govern comes from two sources, the treaty and the Constitution, with the Constitution paramount in case of conflict. Such being the case, the first question that arises is, What are the mandates and powers of the treaty? And, in considering this matter, it will instruct and throw some light on the subject to consider the several treaties of cession that our Government has entered into during the period of its existence.

By the treaty of April 30, 1803, with France, ceding Louisiana to the United States, it was provided by article 3 as follows:

> The inhabitants of the ceded territory shall be incorporated in the Union of the United States and admitted as soon as possible, according to the principles of the Federal Constitution, to the enjoyment of all the rights, advantages, and immunities of citizens of the United States; and in the meantime they shall be maintained and protected in the free enjoyment of their liberty, property, and the religion which they profess.

By the treaty of February 22, 1819, with Spain, in article 6 it was provided as follows:

> The inhabitants of the territories which His Catholic Majesty cedes to the United States by this treaty shall be incorporated in the Union of the United States as soon as may be consistent with the principles of the Federal Constitution, and admitted to the enjoyment of all the privileges, rights, and immunities of the citizens of the United States.

By the treaty of February 22, 1848, with Mexico, it was provided by article 9 as follows:

> The Mexicans who, in the Territories aforesaid, shall not preserve the character of citizens of the Mexican Republic, conformably with what is stipulated in the preceding article, shall be incorporated into the Union of the United States, and be admitted at the proper time (to be judged of by the Congress of the United States) to the enjoyment of all the rights of citizens of the United States, according to the principles of the Constitution, and in the meantime shall be maintained and protected in the free enjoyment of their liberty and property, and secured in the free exercise of their religion without restriction.

In each of these cases the inhabitants of the ceded territory were, by the terms of the treaty, vested with all the privileges, rights, and immunities of citizens of the United States. There was no exception as to any class of inhabitants, and yet our Government has, persistently and from the very outset, denied the rights, privileges, and immunities of citizenship to the various Indian tribes who occupied the ceded territory and who constituted, at the time of the cession, the greater number of the population in these possessions.

In the case of the Indians, the practice and rule which had been applied to them in the original thirteen colonies and the Northwest Territory—of denying them all rights of citizenship and treating them as an inferior class, to be specially governed and controlled distinct from the rest of our people—was applied to the Indians in these several territorial acquisitions. The Indians were not considered a part of the inhabitants provided for in the treaty. And this has been repeatedly held by our highest court as neither an invasion of the Constitution nor the treaties.

Even the fourteenth amendment has failed to ingraft the right of citizenship upon the Indian. (Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U. S., 94, and cases there cited.) In these cases there was no express limitation either by Constitution or treaties. The limitation engrafted was wholly a matter of implication and judicial construction.

In the case of the Alaska cession and the Hawaiian annexation there are exceptions and reservations as to rights of citizenship. In this respect, a marked departure from our former treaties:

By the treaty of March 30, 1867, with Russia, ceding Alaska, it was provided by article 3 as follows:

The inhabitants of the ceded territory, according to their choice, reserving their natural allegiance, may return to Russia within three years; but if they should prefer to remain in the ceded territory they, with the exception of uncivilized native tribes, shall be admitted to the enjoyment of all the rights, advantages, and immunities of citizens of the United States, and shall be maintained and protected in the free enjoyment of their liberty, property, and religion. The uncivilized tribes will be subject to such laws and regulations as the United States may from time to time adopt in regard to aboriginal tribes of that country.

By the joint resolution of July 7, 1898, annexing Hawaii, it was provided, among other things, as follows:

That said cession is accepted, ratified, and confirmed, and that the said Hawaiian Islands and their dependencies be, and they are hereby, annexed as a part of the territory of the United States and are subject to the sovereign dominion thereof, and that all and singular the property and rights hereinbefore mentioned are vested in the United States of America

The existing laws of the United States relative to public lands shall not apply to such lands in the Hawaiian Islands, but the Congress of the United States shall enact special laws for their management and disposition: Provided, That all revenue from or proceeds of the same, except as regards such part thereof as may be used or occupied for the civil, military, or naval purposes of the United States, or may be assigned for the use of the local government, shall be used solely for the benefit of the inhabitants of the Hawaiian Islands for educational and other public purposes. * * * The municipal legislation of the Hawaiian Islands, not enacted for the fulfillment of the treaties so extinguished, and not inconsistent with this joint resolution nor contrary to the Constitution of the United States, shall remain in force until the Congress of the United States shall otherwise determine.

Until legislation shall be enacted extending the United States customs laws and regulations to the Hawaiian Islands the existing customs relations of the Hawaiian Islands with the United States and other countries shall remain unchanged. * * *

There shall be no further immigration of Chinese into the Hawaiian Islands, except upon such conditions as are now or may hereafter be allowed by the laws of the United States; and no Chinese, by reason of anything herein contained, shall be allowed to enter the United States from the Hawaiian Islands.

In the case of Alaska it will be observed that the uncivilized native tribes are excepted from the "advantages and immunities of citizens," and that they "will be subject to such laws and regulations as the United States may from time to time adopt in regard to aboriginal tribes of that country."

In the case of Hawaii "the municipal legislation," limiting suffrage and citizenship as it does, "shall remain in force until the Congress of the United States shall otherwise determine."

It thus appears in the case of Alaska, under the terms of the treaty, the uncivilized native tribes, and in the case of the Louisiana, Florida, and Mexican cessions, by implication and judicial interpretation, the native Indian tribes, are held and deemed to be outside of the pale of American citizenship. In these cases the consent of the governed has never been invoked. And it is difficult to see, and there can be no sound reason given why there is any constitutional obligation to apply a different rule to the uncivilized tribes of the Philippine Islands, especially as the treaty of cession does not invoke a different rule, but leaves the whole matter with Congress.

The civil rights and political status of the native inhabitants of the territories hereby ceded to the United States shall be determined by the Congress—is the language of the Spanish treaty of cession.

The very grounds and arguments that exist for excluding the Indians west of the Mississippi River from the pale of citizenship exist with equal force in case of the uncivilized tribes of the Philippine Islands. They are as savage, as ignorant, as brutal, and as little fitted for self-government as most of our Indian tribes, and it is no more unjust to deprive the former of citizenship than the latter.

There is no more ground for holding that the fourteenth amendment applies to the uncivilized tribes of the Philippine Islands than there is in holding that it applies to the uncivilized or partially civilized Indian tribes here in our home country. The Constitution no more breathes the life of citizenship into the uncivilized tribes in one case than in the other.

In all these cases of cession the consent of the people in the ceded territory was neither given nor asked; nor until in the case of the recent cession from Spain has the point been seriously made that the consent of the people of the ceded territory should be invoked. And yet the sovereignty of France over Louisiana, of Spain over Florida, and of Russia over Alaska was in neither case more pronounced nor more perfect than in the case of Spain over Porto Rico, and the Philippine Islands at the time Dewey entered Manila Bay. Russia had but a scant occupation in Alaska and France but a slight foothold in Louisiana.

But to recur to the main question: The treaty of Paris, as we have seen, gives Congress plenary power to fix the "civil rights and political status of the native inhabitants." There is no limitation to this jurisdiction and authority unless it is found in the Constitution. The pertinent question, then, is to ascertain what are the constitutional limitations upon the power of Congress, if any.

So far as the proposed legislation for the Philippines is concerned, the direct question of constitutional limitation may fairly be grouped under two heads—taxation and civil and political rights. What limitations are there, if any, upon the power of taxation in all its forms?

And what limitations are there, if any, on the right of fixing political and civil rights of the inhabitants?

First as to the question of taxation: To fully understand and comprehend the provisions of the Constitution relating to this subject, both in respect to direct and indirect taxes, let us first glance at the evils existing under the Articles of Confederation, which it was intended to cure. These articles laid down the following rules touching taxes, direct and indirect:

Article VIII contains the only rule as to direct taxes, which is as follows:

All charges of war, and all other expenses that shall be incurred for the common defense or general welfare, and allowed by the United States, in Congress assembled, shall be defrayed out of a common treasury, which shall be supplied by the several States, in proportion to the value of all land within each State, granted to or surveyed for any person, as such land and the buildings and improvements thereon shall be estimated, according to such mode as the United States, in Congress assembled, shall from time to time direct and appoint. The taxes for paying that proportion shall be laid and levied by the authority and direction of the legislatures of the several States, within the time agreed upon by the United States, in Congress assembled.

It will be perceived that the taxation provided for under this article was to be levied by the States, but was to be "in proportion to the value of all land within each State, granted to or surveyed for any person, as such land and the buildings and improvements thereon shall be estimated, according to such mode as the United States, in Congress assembled, shall from time to time direct and appoint." The following provisions contain the rule as to indirect taxes:

Article IV, section 1:

* * * And the people of each State shall have free ingress and regress to and from any other State, and shall enjoy therein all the privileges of trade and commerce, subject to the same duties, impositions, and restrictions as the inhabitants thereof, respectively: Provided, That such restrictions shall not extend so far as to prevent the removal of property imported into any State to any other State of which the owner is an inhabitant: Provided, also, That no imposition, duties, or restriction shall be laid by any State on the property of the United States, or either of them.

Article VI, section 3:

No State shall lay any imposts or duties which may interfere with any stipulations in treaties entered into by the United States in Congress assembled with any king, prince, or state, in pursuance of any treaties already proposed by Congress to the courts of France and Spain.

Article IX, section 1:

* * * No treaty of commerce shall be made whereby the legislative power of the respective States shall be restrained from imposing such imposts and duties on foreigners as their own people are subjected to, or from prohibiting the importation or exportation of any species of goods or commodities whatsoever; * * *.

These articles, which I have quoted—and they are all which bear on this question—show that each State, under the Articles of Confederation, had the right to levy such imposts and duties as it saw fit, subject to three restrictions:

(1) It could lay no greater duty, imposition, or restriction as against the inhabitants of other States than against its own;

(2) It could levy no duty or imposition on the property of the United States or of any State; and

(3) It could lay no impost or duty which would interfere with the stipulations of any treaty entered into by the United States.

But this last restriction was again modified and restricted by prohibiting the Federal Government from entering into any treaty curtailing the power of the State to levy "such imposts and duties on foreigners as their own people are subjected to." Subject to these restrictions and modifications, it is apparent that under the articles of confederation each State could have its own distinct system of duties and imposts. In other words, there could be, as there in fact was, as many different tariff rates as there were States.

It was this evil, then, that the Constitution attempted to remedy and cure. The great object to be attained was a uniformity of duties and imposts as between the States—one system of indirect taxes for all the States instead of thirteen separate and distinct systems. It was a question of adjusting and settling the differences between the States as to taxation. If this fact is kept in view, the provisions of the Constitution become free from doubt and are susceptible of the interpretation which I suggest.

The power to lay and collect taxes of all kinds is conferred upon Congress in the following provision of the Constitution:

The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises, to pay the debts and provide for the common defence and general welfare of the United States; but all duties, imposts, and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States. (Par. 1, sec. 8, Art. I.)

Four classes of taxes are covered by this grant of power: "Duties," "imposts," "excises," and all other kinds of taxes. The first three embrace indirect taxes; the last embraces direct taxes and also all other taxes not included in the first three. These three seem to cover all forms of indirect taxation. So that it is not easy to see what else than direct taxes can be covered by the general term "taxes." If there are any other than direct taxes included under the term, the Constitution contains no direction as to how such taxes shall be levied. (Hylton v. United States, 3 Dalles, 171.)

The Constitution lays down the following rule as to direct taxes:

Representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several States, which may be included within this Union, according to their respective numbers * * *. (Par. 3, sec. 2, Art. I.)

This provision has been modified as to the apportionment of Representatives among the several States by the provisions of section 2, fourteenth amendment, but not as to taxes.

Paragraph 4, section 9, Article I, lays down this further rule as to direct taxation:

No capitation or other direct tax shall be laid unless in proportion to the census or enumeration hereinbefore directed to be taken.

It will be perceived, then, from an examination of these several provisions of the Constitution which I have just quoted, that the general power to lay and collect direct and indirect taxes is governed and restricted by two distinct rules, to wit:

(1) Direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers—that is, according to population; and

(2) Indirect taxes must be uniform throughout the United States—that is, throughout the several States of the Union.

By paragraph 1, section 2, Article I, provision was made for "Representatives" in Congress from the several States, not from any Territories, and by paragraph 3 of the same section these "Representatives" and "direct taxes" were apportioned among the several States * * * within the Union according to population, and provision was made for ascertaining the population, in part by an artificial system of enumeration in which "three-fifths of all other persons," to wit, slaves, were to be counted.

Not only the express language but the peculiar system of enumeration, designed to adjust the political balance between the slave and the free States, made it evident that the rule as to direct taxes was a rule for the protection of the States as against each other—a rule of equality between the several States.

These provisions of the Constitution, relative to direct taxes, contain no rule or direction for laying a direct tax in the Territories. A direct tax, levied upon and apportioned among the several States, would be valid if the Territories were entirely omitted and paid no part of it.

The rule of equality between the States would not thereby be violated. The power to lay a direct tax in the Territories is embraced in the general power to lay and collect taxes, minus the rule of apportionment governing the States, and also in the general power given to Congress over the Territories of the United States, but the form in which this power is thus given shows that it is a discretionary and not a mandatory power. Congress can lay a direct tax in the Territories without imposing at the same time a similar tax on the States, and it can impose such a tax on the States without including the Territories.

The rule of uniformity, prescribed as to indirect taxes, was, if we keep in view the evils of the Articles of Confederation, evidently designed to prevent the people of one State from having a preference over the people of other States in respect to indirect taxes. It was not to protect the States against Territories, but to protect the States against each other, and to put them, as against each other, on a footing of equality. The rule of uniformity was invoked for the protection of the States against each other and as an antidote to the evils of the Confederation, and therefore it is evident that the rule was intended to be limited to the States.

This view becomes apparent if we consider the provision of paragraph 6, section 9, Article I, which is as follows:

No preference shall be given by any regulation of commerce or revenue to the ports of one State over those of another, nor shall vessels bound to or from one State be obliged to enter, clear, or pay duties in another.

This paragraph contains no inhibition as to any Territorial ports, nor as to vessels bound to or from a Territorial port. Congress can give a preference to a Territorial port and can oblige vessels to enter, clear, or pay duty in such a port without violating the Constitution. And hence it follows that there were no constitutional inhibitions to the provision of article 7 of the Louisiana treaty, giving Spain and France special privileges for twelve years in the port of New Orleans and other ports of the ceded territory. This is the provision of the treaty on this point:

* * *; it has been agreed between the contracting parties that the French ships coming directly from France or any of her colonies, loaded only with the produce and manufactures of France or her said colonies, and the ships of Spain coming directly from Spain or any of her colonies, loaded only with the produce and manufactures of Spain or her colonies, shall be admitted during the space of twelve years in the port of New Orleans, and in all other legal ports of entry within the ceded territory, in the same manner as the ships of the United States coming directly from France or Spain, or any of their colonies, without being subject to any other or greater duty on merchandise or other or greater tonnage than that paid by the citizens of the United States. During the space of time above mentioned no other nation shall have a right to the same privileges in the ports of the ceded territory.

That the rule of uniformity was intended to be limited to the States is further apparent from what transpired in the constitutional convention in respect to paragraph 6, section 9, Article I, and paragraph 1, section 8, Article I. The latter paragraph was reported to the convention as clause 1, section 1, Article VII, in the following words:

The legislature shall have power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imports, and excises, to pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States (Meigs, 132).

And as such it was referred to the committee on style, and the former paragraph was reported to be inserted after the fourth clause of Article VII in these words:

Nor shall any regulation of commerce or revenue give preference to the ports of one State over those of another, or oblige vessels bound to or from any State to enter, clear, or pay duties in another; and all tonnage, duties, imports, and excises laid by the legislature shall be uniform throughout the United States (Meigs, 174-175).

After striking out the word "tonnage" the paragraph was thus adopted. But afterwards, on the 14th of September, during the comparison by the convention of the report of the committee on style, the words—and all duties, imposts, and excises laid by the legislature shall be uniform throughout the United States—were dropped and the paragraph was finally adopted in the form in which it appears as paragraph 6, section 9, Article I; and the substance of the words thus dropped were added to said clause 1, section 1, Article VII, and the same was then put in the form in which it now appears as paragraph 1, section 8, Article I (Meigs, 133, 175).

This clause of uniformity, as it first appeared in the convention, was thus a part of that paragraph in the Constitution which, in express terms, aimed to protect the States against each other. With the thought of providing that—

No preference shall be given by any regulation of commerce or revenue to the ports of one State over those of another; nor shall any vessel bound to or from one State be obliged to enter, clear, or pay duties in another—came the thought that—

All duties, imposts, and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States.

Thus making it evident that the protection of the States as against each other was the object in view. As further evidence that the rule of uniformity was invoked for the protection of the States, I call your attention to the fact that the general power to lay and collect "duties," a term which covers impositions on both exports and imports, is limited by the following provision of the Constitution:

No tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any State. (Par. 5, sec. 9, Art. I.)

This contains no inhibition as to a duty on exports from a Territory. There is nothing here to prevent Congress laying a duty on exports from New Mexico, Alaska, or Porto Rico, or either of them. This destroys the rule of uniformity as to Territories.

To still further strengthen and fortify the rule of uniformity in its operation among the several States, we find paragraph 2, section 10, Article I, which is as follows:

No State shall without the consent of Congress lay any impost or duties upon imports or exports except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws; and the net produce of all duties and imposts laid by any State on imports or exports shall be for the use of the Treasury of the United States, and all such laws shall be subject to the revision and control of the Congress.

In this connection and as bearing on the question under discussion it is well to consider the provisions of paragraph 3, section 8, Article I, of the Constitution. By this paragraph the power is given Congress:

To regulate commerce (1) with foreign nations, (2) and among the several States, (3) and with Indian tribes.

It will be observed that nothing is said in this provision about regulating commerce between the several States and the Territories of the United States. Whatever power Congress may have in that respect must either come by implication from the provision I have quoted or else it must be found, which is more reasonable, under the general grant of power to make all needful rules and regulations touching the Territories of the United States.

On the whole, then, the conclusion seems justly warranted that the rule of uniformity prescribed for indirect taxes was a rule intended and designed for the protection of the several States as against each other and for the purpose of putting them on a footing of equality, and thus to remedy and cure the great evils that had existed under the peculiar provisions of the Articles of Confederation.

And from this it follows, as a necessary consequence, that Congress is not obliged to apply the rule of uniformity in laying and collecting duties, imposts, and excises in the Territorial possessions of the United States. That in respect to such possessions Congress is vested with a discretionary power, both as to rate of duty and regulation of commerce or revenue. I am strengthened and confirmed in the views I have expressed and in the conclusions to which I have come by the following pertinent and interesting words of Judge Story:

Having endeavored to point out the leading distinctions between direct and indirect taxes, and that duties, imposts, and excises, in the sense of the Constitution, belong to the latter class, the order of the subject would naturally lead us to the inquiry why direct taxes are required to be governed by the rule of apportionment, and why "duties, imposts, and excises" are required to be uniform throughout the United States. The answer to the former will be given when we come to the further examination of certain prohibitory and restrictive clauses of the Constitution on the subject of taxation. The answer to the latter may be given in a few words.

It was to cut off all undue preferences of one State over another in the regulation of subjects affecting their common interests. Unless duties, imposts, and excises were uniform the grossest and most oppressive inequalities, vitally affecting the pursuits and employments of the people of the different States, might exist. The agriculture, commerce, or manufactures of one State might be built up on the ruins of those of another, and a combination of a few States in Congress might secure a monopoly of certain branches of trade and business to themselves, to the injury, if not to the destruction, of their less favored neighbors.

The Constitution, throughout all its provisions, is an instrument of checks and restraints, as well as of powers. It does not rely on confidence in the General Government to preserve the interests of all the States. It is founded in a wholesome and strenuous jealousy, which, foreseeing the possibility of mischief, guards with solicitude against any exercise of power which may endanger the States, as far as it is practicable. If this provision as to uniformity of duties had been omitted, although the power might never have been abused to the injury of the feebler States of the Union (a presumption which history does not justify us in deeming quite safe or certain), yet it would of itself have been sufficient to demolish, in a practical sense, the value of most of the other restrictive clauses in the Constitution.

New York and Pennsylvania might, by an easy combination with the Southern States, have destroyed the whole navigation of New England. A combination of a different character between the New England and the Western States might have borne down the agriculture of the South, and a combination of a yet different character might have struck at the vital interests of manufacture. So that the general propriety of this clause is established by its intrinsic political wisdom, as well as by its tendency to quiet alarms and suppress discontents. (Story on Constitution, Ch. XIV, sec. 957, Vol. I.)

This is Story's Commentary on the Constitution, and it is evident from this language that he regarded the provision of uniformity inserted in the Constitution as designed for the protection of the States against each other and nothing more.

I am aware that there is an apparent conflict between these views and the opinion of the court in the case of Loughborough v. Blake (5 Wheaton, 317), but, if it be noted that this case involved simply the validity of a direct tax in the District of Columbia, it will readily be seen that the constitutional rule of uniformity as to indirect taxes had no relevancy and was not involved in the case.

The question at issue was whether Congress had a right to levy a direct tax in the District; not even the rate of the tax was in issue. The validity of the tax, especially where the rate was not involved, was properly sustained on two grounds:

1. On the general grant of power to lay and collect taxes; and
2. On the grant of exclusive legislative jurisdiction over the District of Columbia.

The tax was not a tax involving, in any sense, the rule of uniformity, and hence the expression of the court, as to the territorial extent to which the rule of uniformity applied, was outside of and foreign to the issues of the case.

I shall now pass on to consider the question of the limitations upon the power of Congress to legislate in respect to citizenship and civil and political rights. To arrive at a proper solution it is well, first, to consider the civil and political status of the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands, after cession and before Congressional legislation.

It is a principle of international law that mere annexation, in the absence of treaty provisions therefor, does not of itself necessarily imply a naturalization of the people of the Territory annexed, and does not confer upon them the full political rights of citizenship. (2 Wharton, sec. 187 and note; 1 Halleck, p. 433, sec. 31, chapter 12.)

The municipal laws of such territory relative to private rights, touching person and property, remain in force till abrogated or changed by the annexing nation. These laws the people of such territory carry with them (American Insurance Company v. Canter, 1 Peters, 542); but they bring with them no political rights and are possessed of none till expressly conferred upon them by their new superior. They owe allegiance to the new government and are entitled to its protection, but are not entitled to those rights of citizenship of a purely political character, such as that of suffrage or right to hold office or right of representation. These are general principles of international law, and there is nothing in conflict with them found in our Constitution. (2 Halleck, 480–481.)

Those fundamental rights of the Constitution relating to the protection of person and property, at home and abroad, those rights that are common to all citizens—men, women, and children alike—come to the people of the annexed territory by virtue of their new allegiance, to which it is a complement without any further affirmative legislation, for no legislation can deprive them of those rights.

The term "citizen," found in the Constitution and in the fourteenth amendment, is used in a general sense, implying a membership of the nation. Minors and women, as well as men, are citizens in this sense—are members and part and parcel of the political community. The term "citizen" is used in the same sense as the term "subject" in monarchical forms of government. Whoever owes allegiance to our Government is entitled under the Constitution to protection in such citizenship and the rights that appertain thereto.

There are many privileges and immunities that are common and pertain to all classes of citizens, but such a right as that of holding office or of suffrage is not one of these privileges and immunities, not even since the adoption of the fourteenth amendment. Neither at the time of the adoption of the Constitution nor at the time of the adoption of the fourteenth amendment was suffrage coextensive with citizenship. Neither the Constitution nor the fourteenth amendment made all citizens voters. (Minor v. Happersett, 21 Wall., 162; Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U. S., 94; U. S. v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S., 542.)

Prior to the adoption of the fourteenth amendment it was the doctrine that there was no such thing as a citizen of the United States independent of State citizenship; that only those persons were citizens of the United States who were citizens of a State; that if a person was not the citizen of a State he could not be a citizen of the United States, and hence, that a citizen of a Territory or of the District of Columbia was not a citizen of the United States.

One object of the fourteenth amendment was to establish the fact that a person could be a citizen of the United States without being a citizen of a particular State. But the chief purpose of the amendment was to make the negro a citizen, and thus place him within the pale of the protection of the Federal Government against hostile action on the part of the State. (Strauder v. West Virginia, 100 U. S., 303.) There is still a State citizenship and a Federal citizenship, with separate and distinct privileges and immunities as to each. The fourteenth amendment merely prohibits the States from abridging the privileges and immunities of Federal citizenship:

* * * No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws. (Sec. 1, Art. XIV.)

is the language of the amendment. This is an inhibition against denial of Federal "privileges and immunities," not State "privileges and immunities." And Federal "privileges and immunities" are those which are common to all citizens under the Constitution of the United States, without regard to age, sex, or condition.

As to the "privileges and immunities" of the States, the constitutional rule is that a State must accord the same privileges and immunities to the citizens of other States that it accords to its own. It need not accord such privileges and immunities, so far as they differ from Federal privileges and immunities, to the citizens of Territories. This is the constitutional provision:

The citizens of each State shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States. (Sec. 2, Art. IV. See Slaughterhouse cases, 16 Wall., 36.)

This provision does not include nor apply to the citizens of Territories. The "privileges and immunities" of the States are the civil rights conferred upon and given to its citizens, and they do not depend for their existence upon the Constitution and laws of the United States.

The "privileges and immunities" of the United States are those fundamental civil rights relating to person and property designed for the protection of the Federal citizen under the allegiance due from him to the Federal Government and as a compensation therefor. We are citizens of and owe allegiance to both our State and Federal Government, and each confers upon us special privileges and immunities.

The inhibitions of the Constitution, to which I have thus briefly called your attention, are inhibitions upon the States, not inhibitions upon Congress or its power to legislate. They in no wise restrict the power of Congress to legislate with reference to the political rights of the people of acquired territory. Congress may confer or deny the right to hold office, the right to vote, and the right of legislative representation, and other rights of a political character, including the right of local self-government. But Congress is inhibited, under the Constitution, from passing laws hostile to or in abridgment of the following provisions of the Constitution:

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for the redress of grievances. (First amendment.)

The right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed. (Second amendment.)

No soldier shall in time of peace be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner, nor in time of war but in a manner to be prescribed by law. (Third amendment.)

The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated, and no warrant shall issue but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched and the persons or things to be seized. (Fourth amendment.)

Nor shall any person be subject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy in life and limb, nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation. (Fifth amendment.)

The privileges of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended unless when in cases of rebellion or invasion the public safety may require it. No bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be passed. (Sec. 9, Art. I.)

Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted. (Eighth amendment.)

Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the parties shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States or any place subject to their jurisdiction. (Thirteenth amendment.)

These provisions of the Constitution are fundamental—the very groundwork of free government and personal liberty, and the common property and heritage of all the people of our country. Congress can not abridge these rights and immunities anywhere. (Murphy v. Ramsay, 114 U. S., 44, 45.)

The right of trial by jury—and I say this in reply to the contention of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. PATTERSON] that we have no right to deprive the Filipinos of the benefit of jury trial—right of trial by jury is not, under all circumstances and conditions, an absolute constitutional privilege and immunity.

Our Supreme Court has held that neither under the seventh nor under the fourteenth amendment are the States restrained from denying jury trial in common-law actions in State courts, and that the provisions of the seventh amendment do not apply to State courts. (Walker v. Sauvinet, 92 U. S., 90; Missouri v. Lewis, 101 U. S., 22). In this last case—and I call the attention of the Senator from Colorado to this language—the Supreme Court, among other things, says:

There is nothing in the Constitution to prevent any State from adopting any system of laws or judicature it sees fit for all or any part of its territory. If the State of New York, for example, should see fit to adopt the civil law and its method of procedure for New York City and the surrounding counties, and the common law and its method of procedure for the rest of the State, there is nothing in the Constitution of the United States to prevent its doing so. * * * Each State prescribes its own modes of judicial proceeding.

If diversities of laws and judicial proceedings may exist in the several States without violating the equality clause in the fourteenth amendment, there is no solid reason why there may not be such diversities in different parts of the same State. * * * If a Mexican State should be acquired by treaty and added to an adjoining State or part of a State in the United States and the two should be erected into a new State, it can not be doubted that such new State might allow the Mexican laws and judicature to continue unchanged in the one portion and the common law and its corresponding judicature in the other portion. Such an arrangement would not be prohibited by any fair construction of the fourteenth amendment. Neither are the restrictions or inhibitions of the fifth and sixth amendments, relating to criminal prosecutions, any limitations upon the State governments and State courts. (Twitchell v. Commonwealth, 7 Wall., 321.)

There are several cases that hold that the right of trial by jury, in both civil and criminal cases, is given by the Constitution in our Territorial courts. But an examination of these cases, and the facts upon which they were based, will show that in all these cases the Constitution, the laws and jurisprudence of the United States—the common-law system—had been extended to the Territories. In the first case on this subject the court evidently based its decision on this ground. This is the language of the court on this point:

By the seventh article of the amendments of the Constitution it is declared, "In suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed $20, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved." The organic law of the Territory of Iowa, by express provision and by reference, extended the laws of the United States, including the ordinance of 1787, over the Territory, so far as they are applicable. The act under which the above proceeding was had prohibited the trial by jury in matters of fact on which the suits were founded. In this respect the act was void. (2 Howard, p. 460; Webster v. Reid, 2 Howard, p. 437.)

In the following cases from Utah, to wit, Reynolds v. United States (98 U. S., 145), Springfield v. Thomas (166 U. S., 707), Thompson v. Utah (170 U. S., 343), it is to be noted as a controlling fact that by the organic act of the Territory the Constitution and laws of the United States were extended to the Territory in these express words:

SEC. 17. And be it further enacted, That the Constitution and laws of the United States are hereby extended over and declared to be in force in said Territory of Utah, so far as the same or any provision thereof may be applicable.

Manifestly this made the Constitution and laws of the United States controlling in the jurisprudence of Utah a part of its municipal law, and therefore the right of trial by jury could not be questioned or denied.

The case of Callan v. Wilson (127 U. S., 550) was a case involving the right of trial by jury in a criminal case in the District of Columbia. The District had been given a Territorial form of government in 1871. In section 33 of the act giving it such a form of government is this provision:

* * * And the Constitution and all the laws of the United States which are not locally inapplicable shall have the same force and effect within the said District of Columbia as elsewhere within the United States. (16 U. S. Stat., p. 426.)

This provision was not repealed by the act of 1874, changing the system of government, nor by the act of 1878, establishing the present system of government, and remained in force when this case was decided, and is still in force.

The constitution of Utah, after it became a State, provided for the trial of persons accused of crime upon information instead of indictment, and by a jury of 8 instead of 12, except in capital cases. The Supreme Court of the United States held that these provisions were not in conflict with any of the provisions of the Constitution of the United States, and particularly not in conflict with the fourteenth amendment, and that these provisions of the constitution of Utah were not an abridgement of the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States. (Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S., 581.)

It appears, then, that in all cases passed upon by the Supreme Court involving the right of trial by jury in the Territories and the District of Columbia the Constitution and laws of the United States had been duly extended thereto by act of Congress and were a part of the local jurisprudence, and under these circumstances there was ample ground for maintaining the right of trial by jury.

But these cases, in view of these facts, can not be said to furnish the rule or lay down the law for the Philippine Islands or cases of that kind. These islands, when they were annexed, had a system of municipal laws based upon the civil law and the laws of Spain, which they brought with them and which remain in force till changed or abrogated by Congress. Congress can permit them to retain and remain under this system of local municipal law.

If under this system trial by jury is not in vogue, as under the common law, the citizens of the Philippine Islands can not claim that the lack of jury trial is depriving them of due process of law, for they retain the same procedure to which they are accustomed and which they have always had. If a State can, without violence to the Constitution, deprive its citizens of the right of trial by jury, as the Supreme Court, in Missouri v. Lewis and Maxwell v. The Warden, says it can, it is difficult to see why Congress can not give the people of the Philippines the same privilege, and permit them to retain the form of procedure in vogue under the civil law.

In concluding this discussion, I may be permitted to quote the following comprehensive and instructive words of our Supreme Court in the case of Murphy v. Ramsey, 114 U. S., 44-45:

The people of the United States, as sovereign owners of the national Territories, have supreme power over them and their inhabitants. In the exercise of this sovereign dominion they are represented by the Government of the United States, to whom all the powers of government over that subject have been delegated, subject only to such restrictions as are expressed in the Constitution, or are necessarily implied in its terms, or in the purposes and objects of the power itself; for it may well be admitted in respect to this, as to every power of society over its members, that it is not absolute and unlimited.

But in ordaining government for the Territories and the people who inhabit them all the discretion which belongs to legislative power is vested in Congress, and that extends, beyond all controversy, to determining by law, from time to time, the form of the local government in a particular Territory and the qualification of those who shall administer it. It rests with Congress to say whether, in a given case, any of the people resident in the Territory shall participate in the election of its officers or the making of its laws, and it may, therefore, take from them any right of suffrage it may previously have conferred, or at any time modify or abridge it, as it may deem expedient.

The right of local self-government, as known to our system as a constitutional franchise, belongs, under the Constitution, to the States and to the people thereof, by whom that Constitution was ordained, and to whom by its terms all power not conferred by it upon the Government of the United States was expressly reserved. The personal and civil rights of the inhabitants of the Territories are secured to them, as to other citizens, by the principles of constitutional liberty which restrain all the agencies of government, State and national; their political rights are franchises which they hold as privileges in the legislative discretion of the Congress of the United States.

Mr. President, I can not help, in view of the remarks which I listened to this morning on the part of the Senator from Colorado, calling attention to the fact that all his discussion and all his argument was based on an utter misapprehension of the case. Congress has not yet established a territorial or any other kind of government in the Philippine Islands. That government is to-day exactly as the government of California was from 1846 to 1850. It is a government under the control of the executive department of the Government—under the War Department. We acquired those islands through war, by conquest, by cession, and by treaty, and we are holding those islands to-day, not through any governmental establishment created by Congress, but they are held and governed by the executive department of this Government.

The President himself, without the intervention of any commission, without even the intervention of the Secretary of War—the President himself, as the head of the executive department and the Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, has the right to govern and control those islands until Congress establishes a government there. The case is in principle exactly analogous to the case of New Mexico and the case of California. The Senator from Colorado might as well contend that the government in California which existed prior to 1850 was a usurpation and an unconstitutional government.

The Philippine Commission is simply an adjunct. It is simply an aid to the President of the United States, and whatever acts they perform and whatever acts the Secretary of War performs are acts of the executive department of this Government. They are simply a part and parcel of the executive governmental machinery.

Now, while these islands are in that condition and before Congress has legislated in the premises, it is idle for the Senator to discuss the principles of a Territorial government such as we have in some of our organized Territories. We have a right to establish a Territorial government in the Philippine Islands if we see fit to do so, and we have a right not to establish a Territorial government. We have the right to hold those islands under the Constitution as we hold them to-day. The only limitations upon the power of the executive department are the limitations contained in the constitutional inhibitions to which I referred in my remarks a few moments ago—the bill of rights, as it is sometimes called.

But, Mr. President, there is another question connected with this subject. The whole argument on the other side in regard to the Philippine Islands is based upon the assumption that we are to judge matters over there by the conditions which prevail in a state of peace. Insurrection has prevailed in that country, and is prevailing there now in a small degree. While those islands are in a state of insurrection, while we have an army there and have to resort to military power for their government, it is futile and idle for Senators to assume, to hold up the standard which regulates and controls a government where there is no war, and where civil government has been established as in our organized Territories here at home.

I have heard a good deal in the way of attack this morning upon the American school system, and our poor soldiers in the Philippines have been attacked and accused of brutality. The Senators in this Chamber who see fit, by innuendo, directly or indirectly to slander the American soldiers know little what they do. There is no more patriotic, no more law-abiding citizen in this country than the American soldier. This country has never been in danger of losing its liberties through its Army.

At the close of the civil war, Mr. President, there were a million men, trained veterans, who came back to the walks of civil life trained in all the hardships of actual warfare. Some of them marched proudly down yonder avenue. They all came back into civil life. Did they come there threatening the liberties of the American people? Did they come there jeopardizing the Constitution of the United States? Did they come there bringing contention and destruction in the body politic? Why, Mr. President, the great historian, Macaulay, tells us about the old soldiers of Oliver Cromwell, when the Stuarts came back into power in England and the old Puritan army was disbanded.

The Stuarts and the cavaliers had great fears that those old veterans would become a disturbing element in the body politic in the various communities of England, and Macaulay says that their fears proved utterly groundless—that if you traveled through England in those days and came to one of those little rural villages and found an industrious carpenter, a thrifty blacksmith, or a prosperous bricklayer anywhere you would find that he was one of Oliver Cromwell's old soldiers. And, Mr. President, when these old veterans of ours came back to the walks of civil life they came as good citizens, as untarnished and as pure and as loyal to the flag as when they went forth to do battle for their country, and such has been their record since the great war.

Talk about militarism! Senators do not know how our poor soldiers feel when they are away, fighting the battles of the country. As they sit around their camp fires and bivouacs after a long march or a fierce struggle, they think and talk of the loved ones at home and hope to soon meet them again; they pull from their pockets letters which they have received from their loved ones at home and have carried in their pockets for many a day, and they read them over again to themselves and to one another. Then they join in singing those good old songs, "Do they miss me at home?" and "The girl I left behind me." Senators, there was another song we sometimes sang in those days around our camp fires. It was this song of the great war:

Just before the battle, mother,
I am thinking most of you.
* * * *
Tell the traitors all around you
That their cruel words we know
In every battle kill our soldiers
By the help they give the foe.

What we sang in those sad and stormy days I have no doubt our soldiers in the Philippine Islands have sung on the tented field and in the bivouac many a time.

My friends, you can repress a general from expressing his opinion about this question, but our brave soldier boys around their camp fires in the Philippine Islands will criticise you, and pass judgment on you fearlessly, impartially, and without mercy and you can not repress them. The American soldier has a mind of his own and is always an American citizen.

Senators talk about our possessions in the Orient as if they were of no consequence. Why, there are the Philippine Islands, with Manila, a city of 300,000 inhabitants, our possession, right in the center of a great beehive of humanity. To the northeast is Japan, with 40,000,000 or 50,000,000 inhabitants; to the north is China, with 300,000,000 or 400,000,000; to the northwest is British India, with Siam and Cambodia, and to the south and southeast are the Dutch East Indies, the islands of Borneo, Sumatra, and Java.

Right in the center of that great beehive of humanity are our possessions and our flag. They are of immense value to us commercially. Not only so—though that is of great importance to us—but the recent outbreak in China, the Boxer rebellion, shows the great advantage the possession of the Philippines gave us in protecting our people and our interests in the Orient. Because of our possessions in the Philippine Islands, when that outbreak occurred we were the first, or among the first, who were able to send troops and ships there to protect our missionaries and our representatives.

The first soldiers in that expedition were ours; and the soldier who first planted a flag on the walls of Pekin was an American soldier carrying the Stars and Stripes. He planted our banner on the ramparts of those walls. Had we not been in the Philippines it would have taken us six months or more to have got our army to China.

We are in the Philippines, Mr. President, and I want to tell Senators on the other side that the people of this country, whatever else they may do, will never consent to pull down the American flag in those islands; they will never consent to abandon those islands.

As to the talk which we hear about tyrants and tyrannizing, when did it come to pass that the American people came to be a set of tyrants? When did it come to pass that our soldiers became brutes in the Philippine Islands? Such charges are slanders upon the American nation. We are a nation possessed of the highest degree of liberty, of education, and intelligence, and it is a slander upon us to say that we are not as competent as any nation on the face of the earth to give the Filipino people the blessings of liberty, of free and good government.

What would have taken place in case we had abandoned Manila? The German fleet was there, and within sixty hours after we left that country would have been seized by Germany or some other European power. I take it there is no man in this Chamber who would be willing to admit that the American people can not do more and are not competent to do more for the people of the Philippine Islands than any nation of the Old World in securing them the blessings of a good government.

Look at the colonial governments, with the exception of those of England; look at their forms of government. None of the European governments has treated its colonies as the American people are treating the Philippines, or as England has treated her colonies.

What is the position of Senators on the other side? That we must first establish a stable government there, and then what? Then give them their independence. Then what? Then protect them—exercise a guardianship over them. Now, Senators, if the Philippine Islands are entitled to absolute independence, what business is it of ours to establish a stable government? If they are entitled to and are competent to govern themselves, we have nothing to do with their kind of government, whether it be a stable or an unstable government, and we certainly have no business to exercise a protectorate over them.

If we are to exercise a protectorate over that country—that is, protect them against the attacks and inroads of foreign nations—it will be our duty to establish and maintain a stable government that will protect life, liberty, and property in that country. No one will assert for a moment that we can exercise protection over a nation or a race who fail to give due protection to life and property of other nations. The very idea of a protectorate implies that there must be a proper and lawful government there. Something besides chaos and disorder.

Mr. President, what is a protectorate? We can not protect the Filipinos by moral suasion. I never knew of a protectorate 7,000 or 8,000 miles away that was managed by a moral suasion. If we are to have a protectorate there, Mr. President, we shall need fortifications there; we shall need a naval station; we shall be required to have a part of our Navy there and to maintain an army there. Is that constitutional?

I want these gentlemen who are so careful about violating the Constitution to answer me and tell me under what provisions of the Constitution we are to exercise a naked protectorate in the Philippine Islands after we have given them up and have abandoned them. Talk about militarism! Can you conceive of a purer state of militarism than a militarism which consists in simply standing as a guard, with a musket and a loaded cannon, to protect these people? And yet that is the whole programme here.

"This bill of taxation is unconstitutional." "You must tell the Filipinos that they can stand alone." "Give them their independence; but after you do it you must continue to protect them;" that is, continue to prevent other nations from touching them. What a hard task it will be! We have enough tasks in exercising a protectorate under the Monroe doctrine on the Western Hemisphere.

I do not think we want to assume a guardianship as protectors in the distant Orient, 8,000 miles from our shores, in the midst of the densest beehive of humanity on the face of the habitable globe. But if we are to keep an army and navy there, if we are to have fortifications there. if we are to maintain a naval station there, if we are to protect anybody in that country, let it be under our flag, under our dominion, where we can exercise, not the care of a policeman, but the care of a good father.

Mr. McCUMBER obtained the floor.

Mr. BACON. Will the Senator from North Dakota pardon me for a moment? I wish to offer an amendment.

Mr. McCUMBER. Certainly, with pleasure.

Mf. BACON. I present an amendment, giving notice that I will offer it at the proper time. I ask that it may be now read and ordered to be printed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the amendment will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

An amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. BACON to the bill (H. R. 5833) temporarily to provide revenue for the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes.

Amend by inserting the following sections at the end of section 7:

SEC. —. That when armed resistance to the authority of the United States shall have ceased within said islands and peace and order shall have been restored therein it is the purpose and intention of the United States, so soon thereafter as the same can be practically and safely accomplished, to provide the opportunity and prescribe the method for the formation of a government by and of the people of the Philippine Islands, to be thereafter independently exercised and controlled by themselves, it being the design of the United States to accord to the people of said islands the same measure of liberty and independence which have been pledged by the Congress of the United States to the people of Cuba.

SEC. —. That when a stable government shall, by the method aforesaid, have been duly formed and erected in said islands, competent and worthy, in the judgment of the United States, to exercise the powers of an independent government and to preserve peace and maintain order within its jurisdiction, it is the purpose and intention of the United States, reserving to themselves only such harbors and tracts of land as may be needed for coaling stations or other Governmental purposes, to transfer to said government, upon terms which shall be reasonable and just, all rights and territory secured in said islands under the treaty with Spain, and to thereupon leave the dominion and control of the islands to their people.

SEC. —. That when said government has been thus formed and set up in the Philippine Islands and approved by the United States, it is the design and intention of the United States, through such means and measures as may be deemed most efficient and appropriate, to secure the guaranty of the continued independence of the same.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be printed and lie on the table.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, under the present arrangement but to-morrow and the next day can be devoted to any addresses which will last for a period longer than fifteen minutes. It is because of that fact that I excuse myself for addressing the Senate on this subject so late in the afternoon.

The final decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the insular cases has put to rest all manner of quibbling as to what the status of the Philippine Archipelago is at the present time. We need not agree with the reasoning by which this court arrives at its conclusions. We may not even be able to see any great consistency in the several opinions of the members of that court, nor agree fully with the process by which seeming divergent theories could arrive at a common conclusion.

Our national structure rests upon absolute obedience to the will of the majority in judicial as well as in political matters. We are treating now, not with theories, but with conditions—conditions that confront us now, and not theories which might not have been fully considered or digested two or three or four years ago. I will not go into those matters which occupied the attention of the Fifty-sixth Congress. The bill before us is a bill to obtain revenue to carry on the government in the Philippine Islands. The provisions of that bill have been so ably defended, and their necessity so clearly demonstrated by the report of the committee, that comparatively no argument has been urged against them, except as they incidentally touch upon the greater question of our present or future attitude toward the people of the archipelago. I am therefore disposed to deal with but one single proposition which comes from the other side of the Chamber—the proposition that we shall at this time determine what shall be our future policy in the Philippine Islands.

Straight and square have the opposite side of the Chamber presented the question and demanded an answer: Why do you not now determine upon an absolute policy with reference to the islands and the people therein, and declare to those people what your policy shall be? Why do you not promise them that at a specified future time you will grant them absolute independence, or inform them that you will hold them as a colonial possession; or, if you do not hold them as a colonial possession, that you will organize them into a territory which shall ultimately be taken into the sisterhood of States? The question, I admit, is clear cut and definite. I venture to say, however, that there has not been a single good reason proposed by those who ask this question why it should be answered to-day. There has been no good reason given why this Government should, in the experimental stage of its labors for the advancement of these people, for their education and development, the result of which endeavor is as yet wholly unknown, make a specific declaration of just what it will do in the future with reference to them.

Why should this Government now promise to create a new State and make of an oriental people, differing from us in every trait of character, in education, in environment, in history, in institutions, an integral part of the United States? Who to-day would dare to say "yes" to that proposition? On the other hand, what man is so filled with prophetic wisdom as to say: No; it shall not be done in seventy-five or one hundred years from to-day. To-day we are solving that very question, and when we have arrived at the solution we shall answer. To-day we are experimenting with these people in first giving them limited self-government. To-day we are sowing the seeds of the principle of self-government. To-day we are sowing the seeds of public education in the 800 educators we are planting in those islands. To-day we are leveneing the whole archipelago with the principles of self-sustaining American character, upon which alone self-government must ever rest.

What the result may be no man on earth can with certainty declare, and until he can so declare it would be worse than folly to say what our future action or decision should be. It would be a double folly, because it would not only commit us to a course which might be a curse rather than a blessing to either people, but might also force upon us the alternative of either doing this or sacrificing our national honor in breaking our national compact. For my own part, I can answer that, if the people of those islands shall become fitted for American citizenship, if, in the great future, they will have reached that height in mental and moral character so that their admission to our statehood would not deteriorate from the high character of our people as a whole, then I certainly would admit them, but until they have reached that standard then I would say "No." I have some doubts whether the race of people now inhabiting the Philippine Islands can ever be raised to the standard which would justify their admission as a State to this Government. I do not believe it will ever be advisable to add to our State citizenship any oriental people who can not assimilate with our Caucasian race. But I do not know this; I may be in error, and if I am I certainly would not wish to bind the future by a present declaration that they should never be admitted.

But when the time of final decision arrives, when we have all the necessary information and proper wisdom to act on the matter, when all these forces for the enlightenment and uplifting of these people have had time to operate upon their character and quality, then let the American people of that time answer the question. What right have we in this experimental stage of their development to bind the hands of the future American people, who, in all probability, will be better equipped with facts and conditions to answer that question? What right have we to usurp their function by prematurely pledging for them and imposing upon them any particular course?

What right have we to answer that the American people in the future will be less enlightened or less humane or less just and honest than we are to-day. We are constantly being threatened by the "wrath to come" of the American people for the injustice that we are charged with committing, and yet the very persons who make these threats admit that, if we do not bind these same people, who are to execute the punishment of their dire disfavor, they themselves will carry on the atrocities which we are accused of propagating in the islands. My whole answer to them is: Stop these inconsistent and pessimistic arguments and put your faith in the honor and integrity of the American people of the future. They have never betrayed that trust in the past, and you have no right to assume that they will do so in the future. The same blood that courses in our veins to-day will flow in theirs fifty years from to-day. The same characteristics which we have inherited from our ancestors, their ideas of justice, of law, of order, and of humanity will be inherited by those people who are to follow us.

Shall we give them absolute independence now? Such a proposition no intelligent man dare for a moment advocate. We are bound not alone by the solemn obligation of a treaty to hold at least a quasi sovereignty over them for a definite number of years, but by the greater obligation of our solemn honor to perform every act in our power to uplift and civilize and bring the blessings of peace, commerce, education, and political and religious liberty to them, and to hold and govern them, whether they consent or not, until they have had a full knowledge of our own country, a full knowledge of our form of government, backed by a power to make it strong and absolute, and a full knowledge of the blessings that follow law and order. And if we desist in our efforts before we have done this, we are recreant to our most sacred duty. As I have said before, I know of no influence more potent for good, for civilization, for developing character with a sense of right and justice, than a practical administration by this great country—this exponent of individual rights—of its equal laws, conceived in equity and enforced with rigid justice and equality in all the commercial and business relations in those islands. Fifty years of such influence will produce more advancement and greater civilization than could be evolved by them in a thousand years if left to themselves.

Had we given effective consideration to this well-established principle of trade and business influence in our early legislation for the government and control of our Indian tribes, failure and pauperism would not have been written on every page of our Indian history. Had we forced into the very midst of every tribe free and untrammeled trade opportunities, with the fair results of honest labor kept constantly before their eyes, the comforts and luxuries which invariably follow the wake of persistent effort, I believe the lazy, loafing aboriginal, gorging himself on each ration day and starving until the next, would be unknown. Wherever we have tested this policy we have found it working like magic.

Labor is a civilizer. The development of these islands, the establishment of industries there giving opportunity for labor and demanding it, will of itself generate a demand for better food and more clothing. A higher civilization requires a higher and more extravagant mode of living, and it will make that which to-day is barely useful an absolute necessity to-morrow.

But they tell us that this commercial greed is destroying our every sense of honor and duty. On the contrary, it is well known that commerce and commercial relations are the most potent factors in the world to develop integrity, to create and establish a high sense of social duty. Commercial dishonesty was never known to succeed. The very highest degree of integrity is essential to success in internal or international trade. I might ask these pessimistic prophets of American degeneration whether or not we have dealt justly with Porto Rico. Have we dealt inhumanly with Cuba? Have we devastated Hawaii? Will not the same people whose Congress, with scarce a dissenting voice, voted $2,000,000 of assistance in the island of Porto Rico, presented her with all custom duties on both imports and exports until such time as she might be able to form a proper government, with power to levy and collect a revenue for local government, be trusted in dealing with these islands in the future? In this has our people exemplified a character for oppression and greed toward our new possessions justifying this charge against our integrity, or casting a cloud upon the justice of our future intentions? Exactly what policy the future shall demonstrate to be proper, no man can with absolute certainty affirm. What we can affirm with certainty in the future is this: Whatever is honorable and just; whatever is for the highest welfare of these people in the years to come, be it near or far, our children, the American people, preserving the grand traditions of their fathers, can be trusted to faithfully fulfill.

And when all this has been accomplished, when all the forces we have put in motion there for the benefit of these people have had time to operate upon them, then let the Filipino people come to us and say: Your government has been a failure. And then, and not until then, will it be time for us to answer. It may be that, when we reach that time, the question will have solved itself. It may be that the question will not then be asked. I believe myself that it will not, but no political party can, without gross assumption, answer it to-day.

I have listened with interest to the reports of the governors of the provinces in which civil government has been established.

I may agree with much that has been said on the other side as to the amount of credence to be given to these reports. I have learned that it is the rule rather than the exception to exaggerate matters, and I take these reports with some due and proper allowance. Their views are certainly extremely roseate, and I am free to say that I think they may be taken with proper allowance. I believe their enthusiasm has led them into an overestimate of the patriotic feelings and inclinations of the Filipino people toward the United States.

War, as such, is over in the Philippine Islands. The volcano no longer emits flame from its crater, but that the fire is dead or the ashes cold not even the most optimistic reasoning, based upon the facts, can fully sustain. Though practically over, it is certainly too recent to be so soon forgotten by the combatants. It was waged on the part of the insurgents with as much desperation as their strength could maintain. Blood has flowed freely from Filipino veins. Their losses will probably never be known.

In the early part of the war, while opposing our advance in nearly solid phalanx against our modern and perfect implements of war, their slaughter must necessarily have been great, and the animosities of the survivors, living yet upon the memories of these battles and the sorrows for the dead, can not be extinct. We have no right to expect it. It would be contrary to all human impulses and emotions to be so. No matter how kind, how generous, how noble, or how sympathetic our conduct toward these people may be, their wounds can not be healed in one year or two years. Our knowledge of human nature, of human animosities and hatreds, is an insurmountable barrier against such a conclusion. The smart of defeat can not be smothered in a day by any act of ours.

Because there is still insurrection in the islands our friends on the other side of the Chamber claim that our course there has been a failure. That we have done so well, that we have established order so thoroughly in those islands, seems to me one of the grandest achievements I have ever read of in history.

In all but fourteen of these provinces, as I remember, civil local governments have been established, and the governors report a very strong desire on the part of the Filipino people for American sovereignty. Such assumed love and devotion to our institutions by a people still bleeding from the wounds of a lost battle must not be taken too seriously. I can not but believe that it is more lip service than heart devotion. The necessity of an army there of some 40,000 or even 30,000 soldiers to-day rather negatives the assumption.

If these governors' reports are entitled to absolute verity as to the patriotic condition of the people of their provinces, their absolute and sympathetic accord and harmony with our sovereignty, then there could be no necessity for an army in the provinces in which civil governments have been established. Does any person on either side of the Chamber feel that it would be safe to rely upon these reports and withdraw our armies from these sections? If we could build an insurmountable wall around the still hostile provinces, so that their rebellious influences could not be exercised in those provinces in which civil governments have been established, and then withdraw our armies wholly from the latter, how long would those civil governments sustain themselves without the strong arm of the military power? How long before anarchy would prevail? On the other hand, who is there so audacious as to declare that these reports are wholly without any foundation; that they are chimerical, and fanciful only?

You must admit that for the most part or the greater part, at least, they are correct and as intelligent men see the facts before you. Some credence must be given to them, and if they are but half true a most wonderful success has been achieved. If they are but half correct, a progress far beyond our hopes has been attained in securing law and order and good will, and more has been accomplished by us than history has ever recorded before under like conditions. Our position in the Philippine Islands is an uncommon one.

Blood has flowed before our guns, but behind we have left the flowers of peace and prosperity and good order. We have done what no other nation on earth has ever done before. We have protected those people as no people have ever been protected before. We have given evidences of our good will and generous conduct to them as have never before been given to a vanquished army.

We have shown our good will; we have shown that our intentions are for the uplifting and for the development, moral and material, of these people. The establishment of 800 schools in those islands are monuments to the fidelity of our purpose, which can not be gainsaid and must be felt even in the islands by every inhabitant thereof. They are living principles of good will and national friendship.

The Filipino people can not but understand and comprehend that no people educates or desires to educate another people whom they purpose to rob and enslave or wrong in any manner. You talk about granting them absolute independence; about withdrawing our armies. You say we have no right there, and hence our only honorable course would be to withdraw. If you would do that, then you would break the solemn obligation entered into between this country and Spain within four years from its enactment. By your very votes—and I refer to our Democratic members more particularly in this—you imposed a condition upon us which guaranteed certain privileges and obligated us to do that which you would now deprive us of the power to carry out.

By Article IV of the treaty you provided:

> The United States will, for the term of ten years from the date of the exchange of the ratifications of the present treaty, admit Spanish ships and merchandise to the ports of the Philippine Islands on the same terms as ships and merchandise of the United States.

Can you now by your act dishonor that obligation by any agreement with the Filipino people, whereby you surrender the power of enforcement, and if you retain the power of interference to uphold that article of the treaty, then your grant of independence is a farce. Absolute independence is wholly at variance with the right to coerce for any purpose whatever. You can not in one breath declare to them that they are an absolute independent people, with power to conduct without interference their internal government and external relations, and in the next breath command them to insure your decree in their internal affairs, and to carry out your compact with another country to which they were not a party. By your own argument you not only destroy your conclusion, but divulge the inconsistency of your vote on the treaty, which your proposed action would now destroy.

By Article III of the treaty you provide:

> Spain cedes to the United States the archipelago known as the Philippine Islands.

When you voted for that article in the treaty you voted for American sovereignty over these islands.

By Article IX you guaranteed that Spanish subjects might remain in the territory or remove therefrom, retaining in either event all their rights of property and the right to carry on their industry, commerce, or professions, being subject in respect thereof to such laws as are applicable to other foreigners. When you voted for that you voted for American supervision for not a definite time, but for an indefinite period.

By Article X you agreed that—

> The inhabitants of the territories over which Spain relinquishes or cedes her sovereignty shall be secured in the free exercise of their religion.

Mr. President, can this be fulfilled by an edict? Can we carry that into effect and guard it by a simple declaration? Can we control it without an interference which is out of harmony with the absolute independence of the Philippine Archipelago?

By Article XI you granted them certain rights in respect to the civil and criminal jurisdiction of courts and their right to appear before such courts.

When you voted for that article, you voted for American supervision, that they might have their rights before any and all courts. Make them independent, and they may not wish any courts. Make them independent, and what power have you to decree that they shall organize courts for any purpose whatever?

By Article XIII you agreed to secure them for a period of ten years in their acquired patents.

By Article XIV you guarantee that Spain shall have the power to establish consular officers in the ports and places of the territory. Suppose that they refuse after they are independent? Suppose they say, "We are not bound by a treaty which you made with another country to which we were not subject at the time?" What power would we have of enforcing it after granting independence?

By Article XVI of that treaty it was declared that obligations assumed by the United States with respect to Cuba should be limited to the time of its occupancy thereof, thus inferentially agreeing that, with respect to the other territory ceded, including the Philippine Islands, it should not be limited to such occupancy. When you voted for all of these articles, you voted for interference, if necessary, to carry them into effect. When you voted for the articles pertaining to life and liberty and security of property, you voted for American supremacy for such future time as those rights might be absolutely secure, and until they have been secured and this country can say to an absolute certainty that they have been, you have no right to release your sovereignty or promise to release it.

I am surprised to hear Senators who voted for this treaty—a treaty which absolutely conveyed the sovereignty of the islands to the United States, and which bound us by every precept of national integrity to perform acts to enforce conditions and regulations which could be performed upon no other theory than that our sovereignty was complete, now assert that at the time we entered into that treaty these islands were an independent country. If they were an independent country at that time, then why did you vote for that treaty? If they were an independent nation, what right had you, by solemn obligation, to accept sovereignty over them? What greater right would you have to accept sovereignty over them than you would have to accept sovereignty over Canada in a compact made between this country and Spain? Your position that you could release them after a while is inconsistent with the very terms that that compact contained, which forbade your releasing them upon any terms until at least you were able to guarantee every condition that was contained in that treaty.

I can not understand how Senators can now take the position, "I voted for this treaty and yet at the same time I knew that I was taking a sovereignty over people against whom I had no right or authority to exercise that right of sovereignty." That is the position they are placed in in their argument upon this proposition.

It does not do to answer that we could accept a temporary sovereignty and then release them. If they were an independent people at that time, we had no more right to hold a sovereignty over them one second than we had to hold it for a thousand years. If you question the right to accept sovereignty over them, if you insist that they were an independent nation at that time, free from Spain, then certainly it seems to me that you were derelict in your honorable duty toward an independent country to have assumed authority over them.

I am not prepared to agree with the contention on this side of the Chamber the other day, if I understood the proposition, that the acknowledgment of any country is a necessary prerequisite to independence of another. I believe a nation, under the rule of international law, may be an independent people without their independence being acknowledged by any other country on the face of the earth. However, it is not their declaration of independence that makes them such, and this is doubly true when any province or State declares itself to be independent of another to which it held formerly allegiance.

The rule may not be different, but the presumption is different. When a nation has been independent of another and is thought to be subjected to it by conquest the presumption is always in favor of its independence until it has been actually subjugated. On the other hand, when a country is a part of another, the presumption is that it belongs to the mother country until it has absolutely expelled her power from its shores and from every portion of its territory.

The Declaration of Independence did not make us an independent people, nor did the acknowledgment of France operate as such. We were only independent when we had succeeded in dislodging the enemy from our territory. After the surrender at Yorktown, with or without admission of independence by other countries, no person could have justly questioned our absolute independence at that time. Prior to the battle of Manila it may be admitted that the greater portion of the Philippine Islands were in the control—semi or actual—of the insurgents; but their principal seaport, the principal city, was still held by the Spaniards. Spain was still enabled to cut off their relations with the balance of the world. With a Spanish fleet capable of surrounding her, with the principal seaport in the hands of the enemy, much stronger than herself, she could hardly claim that her temporary control of the greater portion of almost inaccessible provinces was equivalent to a final separation from the mother country, or equivalent to a defeat of Spain in the contest.

Mr. President, we have been accused time and again here of subjugating all of our better impulses, our ideas of honesty, our sympathy, toward a foreign people to the one idea of trade relations. While I do not consider it pertinent to this question, it has been discussed so often that I wish to say only one word in reference to it before closing.

I can see no reason in the world why we may not, even while we are conducting a war in the Philippine Islands, keep our eyes constantly upon trade with foreign countries.

I was more than glad to see in the morning papers the note from our Secretary of our State which was sent to the Chinese and Russian Governments holding to the strict terms of the understanding lately entered into by the powers in China. When he did that he knew the condition of trade relations by which we are confronted, as it seems to me every American does.

It may be true that the enormous expenditures attendant upon a war in the Philippine Islands may be so great that many years of prosperous trading would be required in those islands and in the Orient to repay the sum expended. This war, however, is not a war for revenue. It is carried on to fulfill an obligation resting upon our people—an obligation which the treaty-making power of the United States forced upon the country. Commercial prosperity and advanced commercial relations will, however, follow our occupation of the Philippine Islands. Proximity to any country, as is well known, is an incentive to and stimulates trade with such country. It is most natural to trade with one's nearest neighbor, whose influence is ever present where the trade relations are favorable. It has been demonstrated time and again that even the establishment of banks by the citizens of any country in the Oriental regions has, by reason of that fact alone, stimulated trade with such country. One can not belittle the future Oriental trade. It may be that those people to-day can purchase relatively but little, and that they need but little; but they are being hemmed in, surrounded by the Christianizing influences of every enlightened country in Europe, and their demands are bound to grow in proportion to the advance of such influence.

To-day the great commercial powers of the world are bending every effort to inclose and hold for the respective commerce vast tracts of this great field of consumption. England holds and pours out her surplus upon India. Russia is crowding upon Manchuria and Persia. China and the Orient—no place on the face of the earth offers the possibilities for future trade as does this region.

Mr. President, we know to-day that we are becoming the greatest export nation upon the face of the earth. Our exports now are not only agricultural products, but they are manufactured products. The continued prosperity of our people demands a continued policy which shall open up new fields for new products. It is useless to say that these people buy but little. Where will our trade pay? To-day we can sell our agricultural products in great quantities to Great Britain, because she raises but little herself; but we can not sell to her our manufactured products and at the same time sustain our own country and keep up the high prices which are paid to labor here.

We can not trade agricultural goods with an agricultural country or manufactured goods with a manufacturing country. We must find territory which does not produce or produces but a limited amount of the goods we desire to export. We can not sell wheat to Egypt or Russia or the Argentine Republic. Great Britain to-day can not place any ban against our agricultural products, because she needs them and must have them, because they can not be raised there in sufficient quantities, but whenever we invade the markets of Germany or Great Britain or France with manufactured products they can, for self-protection, raise the wall of duties against us, so as to cut off our field there entirely. We can not sell manufactured fabrics to England or Germany. The world knows this law of trade and it knows the present trade conditions. The world is not one-hundredth part so large as it was a century ago, and the commercial eye of man scans its every foot.

Our Asiatic trade is in its infancy. It is destined—if the interest of the Government is properly directed toward it—to soon become a giant in its proportions. The business men of the country see this. President Hill, of the Great Northern, who has given a life study to the industrial conditions of the world, and whose great success as a business man and financier has shown him to be a thoroughly practical man, and never a mere theorist, is about to place upon the Pacific ships of the greatest carrying capacity ever built, purely for the oriental trade. The great question affecting America to-day is what to do with our surplus in agricultural and manufactured goods.

Unless the surplus can be forced into foreign markets it must disastrously affect the price here. It therefore follows that a newly discovered or created field of consumption, such as China or Japan, in which the demand for our surplus can be developed to an enormous extent must be wonderfully beneficial to the American people. Let Japan, the Philippines, and China, with its 400,000,000 people, take the wheat from the Pacific States alone, which need be shipped only across one ocean, and we have disposed of our surplus. Compared with rice, wheat is a far better article of food, and with freight rates that will enable us to compete with the rice market of China there is no reason in the world why the oriental people should not in the near future demand and consume every bushel of our grain above what is needed for home consumption.

Mr. President, I have a table here which I will ask also to be made a part of my remarks, showing the imports of the world into the Orient alone. I note by this table that the total amount of imports for one year, 1900, was $1,125,882,000. The United States exported into that country $60,500,519 of this trade, or only about 5.3 per cent of the whole.

Considering our importance both as an exporter of manufactured and agricultural products, considering the enormous trade that there was, of over a billion and a quarter in imports alone, in that country in 1900 (and it has been very much more in the last two years), is there not a field of itself worthy of the careful consideration of the American people?

ASIATIC IMPORTS.

[Figures taken from official reports of each country at latest date obtainable.]

Countries.	Year.	Total.	From United States.	United States' share.
				Per cent.
Aden	1900	$14,448,000	$851,753	5.8
China	1900	161,353,000	11,081,146	6.8
British East Indies:
India	1900	377,950,000	7,508,120	1.9
Ceylon	1900	40,779,000	212,300	.5
Straits Settlements	1900	57,044,000	937,600	1.6
Dutch East Indies	1900	76,911,000	1,994,858	2.5
French East Indies	1900	37,170,000	118,102	.3
Hongkong	1900	[a]125,000,000	9,373,239	7.5
Japan	1900	143,630,000	26,492,235	18.4
Korea	1900	5,359,000	130,297	2.4
Russia (Asiatic)	1898	14,458,000	1,339,558	9.6
Siam	1900	12,644,000	164,311	1.2
Turkey (Asiatic)	1898	32,500,000	241,000	.7
Persia	1899	26,600,000
Total for Asia		1,125,882,000	60,500,519	5.3
British Australasia [b]	1900	270,223,000	28,175,683	10.4

[a] Estimated. [b] Intercolonial trade omitted.

But, Mr. President, commercial aggrandizement is not the object, but a mere incident of our occupancy and sovereignty of these islands. As such incident it has its place and may, with entire propriety, be considered.

Far higher and overshadowing commercial considerations is our threefold duty—duty toward the people of the Philippine Islands, duty we owe to the world, and duty we owe to ourselves. When that duty has been wholly performed and we have done to the utmost all that effort and example can do for the betterment of these people, then will be the time for final decision as to our future relation.

But if the time comes when we can honorably say to these people, "Go," that time will be when we can also say, "Go in peace, with a steadfast faith and assurance in your ability to maintain a self-governing republic, which will be an honor to the name, a lesson to the world, and a pride to our own country, which established and guarded it in its infant weakness."

Mr. BATE obtained the floor.

Mr. TELLER. I do not suppose the Senate wants the Senator from Tennessee to go on at this late hour. I suggest that we either take an adjournment or go into executive session.

Mr. BATE. The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] told me just now that he desires an executive session. I have no objection to going on now, if that is the wish of Senators.

Mr. LODGE. I do not want, of course, to press the Senator from Tennessee to speak this evening if he does not desire to do so, but we have only two days before the day which is to be devoted to fifteen-minute speeches, and the indications to me are that there are a number of Senators who desire to speak. I am anxious that——

Mr. BATE. I understand that the Senator from Massachusetts who has the bill in charge proposes that the Senate shall meet to-morrow at 11 o'clock.

Mr. TELLER. That has been already done.

Mr. BATE. I was not aware of it.

Mr. LODGE. That has been agreed to.

Mr. BATE. Very well.

Mr. TELLER. I think we ought to give the Senator from Tennessee an opportunity to go on to-morrow morning.

Mr. LODGE. Very well. I desire to consult the convenience of Senators. Unless there is some other Senator who would like to go on at this time I will move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. BATE. I have the floor, I understand.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will recognize the Senator from Tennessee in the morning.

Mr. SPOONER. I wish to give notice that after the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BATE] shall have concluded his remarks to-morrow I shall ask to be recognized.

MISSOURI RIVER BRIDGE AT KANSAS CITY, MO.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 3107) to authorize the construction of a bridge over the Missouri River at or near the city of Kansas City, Mo. It is a very short bill, and will take but a very few moments. It has been favorably reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Massachusetts withdraw his motion?

Mr. LODGE. I will withdraw it temporarily. I shall make no objection to the consideration of the Senator's bill, but I desire to say that I shall renew my motion for an executive session after that bill shall have been concluded.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3107) to authorize the construction of a bridge over the Missouri River at or near the city of Kansas City, Mo., which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 3, on page 2, line 19, before the word "feet," to strike out "fifty" and insert "fifty-two;" in the same line, after the word "above," to insert "the;" in the same line, after the word "high-water," to strike out "mark, as understood at the point of location, to the lowest member of the bridge superstructure, and shall have at least one channel span of not" and insert "grade line for bridges as established by the Missouri River Commission, nor shall any of its spans over the waterway be;" in line 24, after the word "feet," to insert "in the;" in the same line, after the word "clear," to stride out "channel way, all other spans over the waterway to have clear channel way of not less than 300 feet" and insert "between the piers or the piers and abutments;" in line 8, on page 3, after the words "spans of," to strike out "not less than 200 feet in length in the clear on each side of the central or pivot pier of the draw" and insert "such clear width of opening as the Secretary of War shall prescribe, and the next adjoining spans to the draw shall also be of such length as he shall prescribe;" so as to read:

That if said bridge shall be made with unbroken and continuous spans it shall not be of less elevation in any case than 52 feet above the high-water grade line for bridges as established by the Missouri River Commission, nor shall any of its spans over the waterway be less than 400 feet in the clear between the piers or the piers and abutments, and the piers of said bridge shall be parallel with the current of said river, and the bridge itself at right angles thereto as near as may be: Provided, That if said bridge be constructed as a drawbridge, it shall be constructed as a pivot drawbridge, with a draw over the main channel of the river at an accessible and the best navigable point, and with spans of such clear width of opening as the Secretary of War shall prescribe, and the next adjoining spans to the draw shall also be of such length as he shall prescribe; and said spans shall not be less than 10 feet above extreme high-water mark, measuring to the lowest member of the bridge superstructure, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at the end of section 3, on page 3, line 23, to insert:

Provided further, That after the completion or during the construction of said bridge, if in the opinion of the Secretary of War it is necessary for the safety and convenience of navigation under said bridge to build accessory works, such as dikes, booms, or other structures, in order the more effectually to preserve the free navigation of the river, such structures as may receive the approval of the Secretary of War shall be built and maintained by the owners of said bridge.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. LODGE. I renew my motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After seven minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 22 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Friday, February 21, 1902, at 11 o'clock a. m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate February 20, 1902.

BOARD OF VISITORS.

I nominate as members of the Board of Visitors to the United States Naval Observatory, Charles A. Young, a citizen of Princeton, N. J., for a term of three years; Ormond Stone, a citizen of Charlottesville, Va., for a term of three years, and Charles F. Chandler, a citizen of New York City, N. Y., for a term of two years.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

Capt. Philip H. Cooper, to be a rear-admiral in the Navy, from the 9th day of February, 1902 (subject to the examinations required by law), vice Rear-Admiral William T. Sampson, retired.

Capt. George H. Wadleigh, to be a rear-admiral in the Navy, from the 9th day of February, 1902, vice Rear-Admiral Bartlett J. Cromwell, retired.

Lieut. Commander Charles W. Bartlett, to be a commander in the Navy, from the 9th day of October, 1901, vice Commander Uriel Sebree, promoted.

Lieut. (Junior Grade) Fritz L. Sandoz, to be a lieutenant in the Navy, from the 9th day of October, 1901, vice Lieut. Thomas W. Ryan, promoted.

Lieut. (Junior Grade) Frank Lyon, to be a lieutenant in the Navy, from the 17th day of December, 1901 (subject to the examinations required by law), vice Lieut. Walter J. Sears, promoted.

Lieut. (Junior Grade) John McC. Luby, to be a lieutenant in the Navy, from the 17th day of December, 1901, vice Lieut. Frank Lyon, an additional number in grade.

Lieut. (Junior Grade) Arthur G. Kavanagh, to be a lieutenant in the Navy, from the 27th day of December, 1901 (subject to the examinations required by law), vice Lieut. Edward H. Scribner, promoted.

Lieut. (Junior Grade) Carlton F. Snow, to be a lieutenant in the Navy, from the 28th day of December, 1901 (subject to the examinations required by law), vice Lieut. Frank M. Bennett, promoted.

Lieut. (Junior Grade) Henry T. Baker, to be a lieutenant in the Navy, from the 15th day of January, 1902, vice Lieut. John A. Bell, promoted.

Rev. Bower Reynolds Patrick, a citizen of Minnesota, to be a chaplain in the Navy, to fill a vacancy existing in that Corps.

POSTMASTERS.

Frank F. Crowe, to be postmaster at Montevallo, in the county of Shelby and State of Alabama. Office became Presidential January 1, 1902.

Laura G. Crable, to be postmaster at Tombstone, in the county of Cochise and Territory of Arizona. Office became Presidential January 1, 1902.

Eben B. Trask, to be postmaster at Plant City, in the county of Hillsboro and State of Florida. Office became Presidential January 1, 1902.

F. J. Allen, to be postmaster at East Point, in the county of Fulton and State of Georgia. Office became Presidential January 1, 1902.

Hans Keiser, to be postmaster at Elgin, in the county of Fayette and State of Iowa. Office became Presidential January 1, 1901.

Isaac Foster, to be postmaster at Gladwin, in the county of Gladwin and State of Michigan. Office became Presidential January 1, 1902.

Max V. Robinson, to be postmaster at Fairfax, in the county of Atchison and State of Missouri. Office became Presidential January 1, 1902.

George C. Reed, to be postmaster at Park Ridge, in the county of Bergen and State of New Jersey. Office became Presidential January 1, 1902.

Harry C. Butler, to be postmaster at Anson, in the county of Jones and State of Texas. Office became Presidential January 1, 1902.

Berry McGee, to be postmaster at Italy, in the county of Ellis and State of Texas. Office became Presidential January 1, 1902.

Andrew J. Prince, to be postmaster at Pratt City, in the county of Jefferson and State of Alabama, in place of Andrew J. Prince. Incumbent's commission expired February 16, 1902.

David L. Clinton, to be postmaster at Clintonville, in the county of New Haven and State of Connecticut, in place of David L. Clinton. Incumbent's commission expires February 25, 1902.

John W. Garwood, to be postmaster at Monticello, in the county of Jefferson and State of Florida, in place of John W. Garwood. Incumbent's commission expired January 21, 1902.

Mitchell G. Hall, to be postmaster at Cordele, in the county of Dooly and State of Georgia, in place of Mitchell G. Hall. Incumbent's commission expired January 14, 1902.

Thomas W. Price, to be postmaster at Astoria, in the county of Fulton and State of Illinois, in place of Thomas W. Price. Incumbent's commission expired January 14, 1902.

Lewis A. Castle, to be postmaster at Wyoming, in the county of Stark and State of Illinois, in place of Lewis A. Castle. Incumbent's commission expired February 18, 1902.

Clarkson D. Overman, to be postmaster at Fairmount, in the county of Grant and State of Indiana, in place of Clarkson D. Overman. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1902.

James A. Rose, to be postmaster at Chickasha, in the Chickasaw Nation, Indian Territory, in place of James H. Miller. Incumbent's commission expires February 25, 1902.

E. T. Roland, to be postmaster at Eldon, in the county of Wapello and State of Iowa, in place of William G. Crow. Incumbent's commission expired January 19, 1902.

L. E. Hulse, to be postmaster at Keota, in the county of Keokuk and State of Iowa, in place of Hanno P. Newton. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1902.

Milton A. McCord, to be postmaster at Newton, in the county of Jasper and State of Iowa, in place of Milton A. McCord. Incumbent's commission expired January 21, 1902.

Ludlow F. Petty, to be postmaster at Shelbyville, in the county of Shelby and State of Kentucky, in place of Ludlow F. Petty. Incumbent's commission expired February 16, 1902.

Arthur Bliss, to be postmaster at Andover, in the county of Essex and State of Massachusetts, in place of Arthur Bliss. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1902.

Joseph M. Hollywood, to be postmaster at Brockton, in the county of Plymouth and State of Massachusetts, in place of Joseph M. Hollywood. Incumbent's commission expired May 17, 1901.

Arthur P. Wright, to be postmaster at East Pepperell, in the county of Middlesex and State of Massachusetts, in place of Arthur P. Wright. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1902.

John F. Freese, to be postmaster at East Walpole, in the county of Norfolk and State of Massachusetts, in place of John F. Freese. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1902.

Dexter Grose, to be postmaster at North Abington, in the county of Plymouth and State of Massachusetts, in place of Dexter Grose. Incumbent's commission expired May 18, 1901.

Walter N. Beal, to be postmaster at Rockland, in the county of Plymouth and State of Massachusetts, in place of Walter N. Beal. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1902.

Serbertrum E. Bliss, to be postmaster at South Hadley Falls, in the county of Hampshire and State of Massachusetts, in place of Serbertrum E. Bliss. Incumbent's commission expired January 21, 1902.

Harry S. Tripp, to be postmaster at Spencer, in the county of Worcester and State of Massachusetts, in place of Harry S. Tripp. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1902.

William M. Beekman, to be postmaster at Charlotte, in the county of Eaton and State of Michigan, in place of William M. Beekman. Incumbent's commission expires February 25, 1902.

Stephen R. Allen, to be postmaster at Homer, in the county of Calhoun and State of Michigan, in place of Stephen R. Allen. Incumbent's commission expired February 18, 1902.

William G. Hudson, to be postmaster at Ludington, in the county of Mason and State of Michigan, in place of William G. Hudson. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1902.

Calvin A. Palmer, to be postmaster at Manistee, in the county of Manistee and State of Michigan, in place of Calvin A. Palmer. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1902.

Edwin S. Williams, to be postmaster at Niles, in the county of Berrien and State of Michigan, in place of Edwin S. Williams. Incumbent's commission expired February 18, 1902.

Hannibal A. Hopkins, to be postmaster at St. Clair, in the county of St. Clair and State of Michigan, in place of Hannibal A. Hopkins. Incumbent's commission expires February 25, 1902.

Frederick Kruger, to be postmaster at St. Ignace, in the county of Mackinac and State of Michigan, in place of Frederick Kruger. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1902.

Charles Brown, to be postmaster at Vicksburg, in the county of Kalamazoo and State of Michigan, in place of Charles Brown. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1902.

Henry Loss, to be postmaster at Wayne, in the county of Wayne and State of Michigan, in place of Henry Loss. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1902.

John J. Davis, to be postmaster at White Pigeon, in the county of St. Joseph and State of Michigan, in place of Fred C. Hotchin. Incumbent's commission expires February 25, 1902.

James Ruane, to be postmaster at Slayton, in the county of Murray and State of Minnesota, in place of James Ruane. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1902.

Annette Simpson, to be postmaster at Pass Christian, in the county of Harrison and State of Mississippi, in place of Annette Simpson. Incumbent's commission expired February 18, 1902.

Aaron M. Storer, to be postmaster at Kosciusko, in the county of Attala and State of Mississippi, in place of Aaron M. Storer. Incumbent's commission expired January 14, 1902.

Joseph H. Handel, to be postmaster at King City, in the county of Gentry and State of Missouri, in place of Joseph H. Handel. Incumbent's commission expired January 21, 1902.

William C. Gaston, to be postmaster at Keytesville, in the county of Chariton and State of Missouri, in place of William C. Gaston. Incumbent's commission expired February 16, 1902.

August Schneider, to be postmaster at Weston, in the county of Platte and State of Missouri, in place of August Schneider. Incumbent's commission expired January 31, 1902.

Maurice Deering, jr., to be postmaster at Marysville, in the county of Lewis and Clarke and State of Montana, in place of Maurice Deering, jr. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1902.

John Peters, to be postmaster at Albion, in the county of Boone and State of Nebraska, in place of John Peters. Incumbent's commission expired February 8, 1902.

Frank W. Wake, to be postmaster at Genoa, in the county of Nance and State of Nebraska, in place of Frank W. Wake. Incumbent's commission expired February 16, 1902.

F. W. Barnhart, to be postmaster at Hartington, in the county of Cedar and State of Nebraska, in place of Thomas B. A. Watson. Incumbent's commission expired February 11, 1902.

Walter H. Andrews, to be postmaster at Lexington, in the county of Dawson and State of Nebraska, in place of Walter H. Andrews. Incumbent's commission expires February 23, 1902.

Thomas F. Austin, to be postmaster at Millville, in the county of Cumberland and State of New Jersey, in place of Joseph D. Troth. Incumbent's commission expired January 12, 1902.

Frank Wanser, to be postmaster at Vineland, in the county of Cumberland and State of New Jersey, in place of James J. Hunt. Incumbent's commission expired February 18, 1902.

Henry H. Smith, to be postmaster at Worcester, in the county of Otsego and State of New York, in place of Henry H. Smith. Incumbent's commission expires February 22, 1902.

Anna Callahan, to be postmaster at Casselton, in the county of Cass and State of North Dakota, in place of John F. Callahan. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1902.

Thomas W. Millham, to be postmaster at Ellendale, in the county of Dickey and State of North Dakota, in place of Fred S. Goddard. Incumbent's commission expires February 25, 1902.

Charles S. Dunn, to be postmaster at Lockland, in the county of Hamilton and State of Ohio, in place of Charles S. Dunn. Incumbent's commission expired January 12, 1902.

S. E. Nimmons, to be postmaster at Plymouth, in the county of Richland and State of Ohio, in place of George W. Hofman. Incumbent's commission expired January 12, 1902.

James W. Bartlett, to be postmaster at Doylestown, in the county of Bucks and State of Pennsylvania, in place of James W. Bartlett. Incumbent's commission expires February 22, 1902.

C. A. Wishart, to be postmaster at Dunbar, in the county of Fayette and State of Pennsylvania, in place of George H. Swearingen. Incumbent's commission expired June 16, 1901.

Charles Seger, to be postmaster at Emporium, in the county of Cameron and State of Pennsylvania, in place of Charles Seger. Imcumbent's commission expired January 10, 1902.

Benjamin F. Davis, to be postmaster at Freeland, in the county of Luzerne and State of Pennsylvania, in place of Benjamin F. Davis. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1902.

Delazon P. Higgins, to be postmaster at Lewisburg, in the county of Union and State of Pennsylvania, in place of Delazon P. Higgins. Incumbent's commission expired July 8, 1901.

George W. Schoch, to be postmaster at Mifflinburg, in the county of Union and State of Pennsylvania, in place of George W. Schoch. Incumbent's commission expired January 31, 1902.

Joseph E. Euwer, to be postmaster at Natrona, in the county of Allegheny and State of Pennsylvania, in place of Joseph E. Euwer. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1902.

Frederick H. Bartleson, to be postmaster at Sharpsville, in the county of Mercer and State of Pennsylvania, in place of Frederick H. Bartleson. Incumbent's commission expires February 25, 1902.

John W. Cass, to be postmaster at Woonsocket, in the county of Providence and State of Rhode Island, in place of John W. Cass. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1902.

Samuel G. Dewell, to be postmaster at Pierre, in the county of Hughes and State of South Dakota, in place of Samuel G. Dewell. Incumbent's commission expired February 11, 1902.

A. M. Hughes, to be postmaster at Columbia, in the county of Maury and State of Tennessee, in place of Hugh F. Fariss. Incumbent's commission expired February 2, 1902.

Harry A. Griffin, to be postmaster at Galveston, in the county of Galveston and State of Texas, in place of Harry A. Griffin. Incumbent's commission expired February 19, 1902.

Dan Peaslee Webster, to be postmaster at Brattleboro, in the county of Windham and State of Vermont, in place of Dan Peaslee Webster. Incumbent's commission expires February 25, 1902.

N. Clifford Nichols, to be postmaster at Leesburg, in the county of Loudoun and State of Virginia, in place of N. Clifford Nichols. Incumbent's commission expired February 11, 1902.

Charles T. Holtzman, to be postmaster at Luray, in the county of Page and State of Virginia, in place of Charles T. Holtzman. Incumbent's commission expired February 16, 1902.

William L. Mustard, to be postmaster at Pocahontas, in the county of Tazewell and State of Virginia, in place of William L. Mustard. Incumbent's commission expired February 16, 1902.

George N. Lamphere, to be postmaster at Palouse, in the county of Whitman and State of Washington, in place of George N. Lamphere. Incumbent's commission expired January 22, 1902.

Albert S. Dickinson, to be postmaster at Waitsburg, in the county of Wallawalla and State of Washington, in place of Albert S. Dickinson. Incumbent's commission expired January 22, 1902.

Alonzo E. Linch, to be postmaster at Moundsville, in the county of Marshall and State of West Virginia, in place of Alonzo E. Linch. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1902.

Alexander Clohan, to be postmaster at Martinsburg, in the county of Berkeley and State of West Virginia, in place of Alexander Clohan. Incumbent's commission expires February 22, 1902.

Matthew J. Connors, to be postmaster at Hurley, in the county of Iron and State of Wisconsin, in place of Matthew J. Connors. Incumbent's commission expired January 12, 1902.

F. A. R. Van Meter, to be postmaster at New Richmond, in the county of St. Croix and State of Wisconsin, in place of Thomas Porter. Incumbent's commission expired January 12, 1902.

Lewis S. Fisher, to be postmaster at Sparta, in the county of Monroe and State of Wisconsin, in place of Lewis S. Fisher. Incumbent's commission expired January 12, 1902.

Fred C. Furth, to be postmaster at Pine Bluff, in the county of Jefferson and State of Arkansas, in place of Louis Altheimer, resigned.

D. W. Rathbun, to be postmaster at Marion, in the county of Linn and State of Iowa, in place of John S. Willard, removed.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate February 17, 1902.

POSTMASTERS.

Harry W. Rankin, to be postmaster at Hempstead, in the county of Waller and State of Texas.

Thomas L. Ball, to be postmaster at Decatur, in the county of Wise and State of Texas.

Henry A. Cady, to be postmaster at Ballinger, in the county of Runnels and State of Texas.

Joel D. Cranford, to be postmaster at Mineral Wells, in the county of Palo Pinto and State of Texas.

Theodore Ray, to be postmaster at Midland, in the county of Midland and State of Texas.

Joseph E. Roach, to be postmaster at Atlanta, in the county of Cass and State of Texas.

Robert C. May, to be postmaster at Leonard, in the county of Fannin and State of Texas.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate February 20, 1902.

APPOINTMENT IN THE ARMY—GENERAL OFFICER.

To be brigadier-general.

Col. Francis L. Guenther, Artillery Corps, February 13, 1902.

PROMOTION IN THE NAVY.

Lieut. Commander Henry McCrea, to be a commander in the Navy, from the 9th day of February, 1902.

APPOINTMENT IN THE NAVY.

Mr. Walter E. Griffin, a citizen of Michigan, to be an assistant surgeon in the Navy, with the rank of lieutenant (junior grade).

REGISTER OF THE LAND OFFICE.

Anton H. Classen, of Oklahoma Territory, at present receiver of public moneys at Oklahoma, Okla., to be register of the land office at said place.

RECEIVERS OF PUBLIC MONEYS.

C. Frost Liggett, of Colorado, to be receiver of public moneys at Lamar, Colo.

George A. Smith, of Utah, to be receiver of public moneys at Salt Lake City, Utah.

Henry G. McCrossen, of Wisconsin, to be receiver of public moneys at Wausau, Wis.

POSTMASTERS.

Henry B. Rollinson, to be postmaster at Rahway, in the county of Union and State of New Jersey.

Edwin D. Goodell, to be postmaster at Brookfield, in the county of Worcester and State of Massachusetts.

Woodbury Marson, to be postmaster at Booth Bay Harbor, in the county of Lincoln and State of Maine.

George L. Stoughton, to be postmaster at Westerville, in the county of Franklin and State of Ohio.

Harry B. Ward, to be postmaster at Duquoin, in the county of Perry and State of Illinois.

Frank J. Cory, to be postmaster at Watertown, in the county of Codington and State of South Dakota.

Alfred R. Messler, to be postmaster at Upper Mont Clair, in the county of Essex and State of New Jersey.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, February 20, 1902.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the Indian appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York moves that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the Indian appropriation bill, being the bill H. R. 11353.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, Mr. MONDELL in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the Indian appropriation bill, under the five-minute rule.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that I may proceed, not to exceed ten minutes, before we begin the reading.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that he may proceed ten minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have no doubt, Mr. Chairman, that the committee and the House could derive some amusement and pleasure and possibly information by listening to the continuance of such speeches as we have heard in the House for the last two days; but I notice in the morning paper's report of last night's gathering of the representatives of an organization—than which there is none more honorable in this country—that the Chief Executive of this country, preaching what he practices, stated that it should be our desire to place even before glory "duty;" and so, Mr. Chairman, I think it is not inappropriate to turn aside from the consideration of princes, past and present, and of money questions, mostly of the past, and various other subjects, relating to the past, the present, and the future, and devote our attention for a few minutes to the dry details of an Indian appropriation bill.

The bill now presented, Mr. Chairman, carries appropriations aggregating $8,400,000, in round numbers, or one and three-quarters million dollars less than was appropriated in the last annual appropriation bill. These reductions are made mainly in the items for treaty stipulations, which this year carry one million two hundred thousand less than last year; for the support of the Dawes Commission and the continuance of its work, for which $210,000 less is appropriated this year; $100,000 less for the general school fund; and $100,000 less for the town-site work in the Indian Territory; $100,000 less for miscellaneous support, and $75,000 less for the current contingent expenses of the Department.

The increases are about $90,000 and are practically entirely within the heading of miscellaneous gratuities, and all of that increase is more than accounted for by the single item of $100,000 for the benefit of the Mission Indians in Southern California, which we deem to be necessary to transfer the Indians of that tribe from their present location at Warner's ranch, the highest court having decided that they have no title there, and providing some other reservation for them in the vicinity of the present ranch, where they would not be subject to climatic changes and would be surrounded by all the conditions that have surrounded them for generations.

While the Book of Estimates calls for appropriations of $1,000,000 less than is carried in this bill, there came to us as subsequent estimates from the Treasury Department and recommendations directly from the Secretary of the Interior covering substantially all that is included in this bill.

I think there are but one or two items in the bill that have not come to us through the regular channel of estimates from the Treasury Department or by the approval of the Secretary of the Interior.

There is included in the bill several legislative provisions. They are with one exception set out in the report which accompanies the bill, and that exception was an inadvertence. There are certain provisions in the bill which are susceptible to a point of order if any gentleman desires to make it. We have not attempted to conceal the existence of these items in the bill. There is no item in the bill, however, that the committee for whom I speak do not consider essential to the best interests of the Indians. I think, Mr. Chairman, that is all I care to say at the present moment. From time to time as the bill is read, if there is any specific information that is desired by any member of the committee or of the House on any special item, I would be glad to give it.

Mr. SULZER. I would like to ask the gentleman a question. Is there anything in this bill that allows the Indians on the reservations in the State of New York to sell their lands?

Mr. SHERMAN. There is not.

Mr. SULZER. That is all I wanted to know.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I have prepared several tables showing the amounts of various appropriations for the past ten years under various heads other than treaties, which I will not take the time to read, but will print. I think they may be of use in considering needed appropriations in future years. I also desire to print an agreement made by the board of county commissioners of Jackson County, Kans., to keep in repair certain bridges, for the construction of which we appropriate in this bill.

Current and contingent expenses.

Year.	Number of agents.	Amount paid agents.	Amount paid interpreters.	Number of inspectors.	Amount paid inspectors.	Inspectors' traveling expenses.	For superintendent schools.	Superintendent schools, traveling expenses.	Buildings and repairs, agencies.	Contingencies of service.	Citizens' commission.
1892	58	$92,200	$25,000	5	$15,000	$8,000	$4,000	$2,000	$30,000	$45,000	$5,000
1893	57	86,600	20,000	5	15,000	8,000	3,500	2,000	20,000	40,000	5,000
1894-95	57	86,600	10,000	5	12,500	7,000	3,000	1,000	44,000	40,000	4,000
1896	57	86,500	10,000	5	12,500	7,000	3,000	1,000	25,000	40,000	4,000
1897	56	85,000	12,000	5	12,500	7,000	3,000	1,500	30,000	40,000	4,000
1898	56	86,500	12,000	5	12,500	7,000	3,000	1,500	30,000	40,000	4,000
1899	56	85,000	12,000	8	20,000	12,000	3,000	1,500	30,000	40,000	4,000
1900	56	85,600	10,000	8	20,000	12,800	3,000	1,500	35,000	40,000	4,000
1901	53	83,150	8,000	8	20,000	12,800	3,000	1,500	45,000	50,000	4,000
1902	49	67,600	7,000	8	25,000	12,800	3,000	1,500	35,000	40,000	4,000

Miscellaneous supports.

Tribe.	1892.	1893.	1894-95.	1896.	1897.	1898.	1899.	1900.	1901.	1902.
Apaches, Comanches, etc		$125,000	$110,000	$110,000	$100,000	$100,000	$100,000	$75,000	$50,000	$50,000
Arapahoes and Cheyennes	$240,000	65,000	90,000	90,000	90,000	90,000	90,000	100,000	80,000	70,000
Chippewas:
Superior	6,000	6,000	7,125	7,125	7,125	7,125	7,125	7,125	7,000	7,000
Red Lake	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	----------	----------
White Earth	10,200	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	----------	----------
Turtle Mountain	13,000	13,000	13,000	18,000	13,000	13,000	13,000	13,000	13,000	13,000
Oregon	6,000	6,000	6,000	6,000	6,000	6,000	6,000	6,000	5,000	5,000
Dwamish	7,000	7,000	7,000	7,000	7,000	7,000	7,000	7,000	5,000	5,000
Flathead (Carlos band)	12,000	12,000	12,000	12,000	12,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	8,000	8,000
Do	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	8,000	8,000
Hualapais	7,500	7,500	7,500	7,500	7,500	7,500	7,500	7,500	5,000	5,000
Apaches (Arizona)	190,000	200,000	185,000	225,000	225,000	225,000	225,000	225,000	225,000	225,000
Shoshonis and Bannocks	13,000	13,000	10,000	10,000	13,000	13,000	30,000	30,000	35,000	25,000
Seminoles (Florida)	6,000	6,000	6,000	6,000	6,000	6,000	6,000	6,000	----------	----------
Shoshonis (Lemhi)	14,000	14,000	13,000	13,000	10,000	13,000	13,000	13,000	13,000	13,000
Klamaths	5,000	5,000	5,000	5,000	5,000	5,000	5,000	5,000	5,000	5,000
Kansas	2,500	2,500	2,500	2,500	2,500	2,500	2,500	2,500	2,500	2,500
Kickapoos (Oklahoma)	5,000	5,000	5,000	5,000	5,000	5,000	5,000	5,000	5,000	5,000
Makah	4,000	4,000	4,000	4,000	4,000	4,000	3,000	3,000	3,000	3,000
Nez Percé (Joseph's band)	12,000	12,000	10,000	10,000	7,500	7,500	7,500	7,500	4,000	4,000
Nez Percé (Indian Territory)	6,500	6,500	6,500	6,500	5,000	5,000	5,000	5,000	3,000	3,000
Ponca	18,000	18,000	15,000	15,000	15,000	15,000	15,000	15,000	15,000	15,000
Quinaielt and Quileute	4,000	4,000	3,000	3,000	3,000	3,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000
Shoshoni (Wyoming)	23,000	15,000	15,000	15,000	20,000	20,000	20,000	25,000	25,000	25,000
Shoshoni (Nevada)	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	12,000
Sioux Devils Lake	6,000	6,000	6,000	12,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	20,000	10,000
Sklallam	4,000	4,000	1,500	1,500	1,500	1,500	----------	----------	----------	----------
Tonkawa	5,000	5,000	4,000	4,000	4,000	4,000	2,000	2,000	1,000	1,000
Walla Walla, etc	6,500	6,500	6,500	6,500	5,000	5,000	5,000	5,000	5,000	5,000
Yakimas	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	8,000	8,000	8,000	8,000	5,000	8,000
Mission	----------	----------	10,000	10,000	10,000	10,000	3,000	3,000	1,500	3,000

General incidental expenses.

State.	1892.	1893.	1894-95.	1896.	1897.	1898.	1899.	1900.	1901.	1902.
Arizona	$20,000	$20,000	$18,000	$1,500	$1,500	$1,500	$1,500	$1,500	$1,500	$1,500
California	128,000	34,000	23,000	21,000	21,000	21,000	21,000	21,000	15,000	15,000
Colorado	1,500	1,500	1,500	1,250	1,500	1,500	1,500	1,500	1,000	1,000
Idaho	1,000	1,000	800	800	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000
Montana	4,000	4,000	3,000	2,500	2,500	2,500	2,500	2,500	8,500	8,500
Nevada	22,500	22,500	19,000	16,000	16,000	16,000	16,000	16,900	14,900	12,900
North Dakota	1,500	1,500	1,500	1,500	1,500	1,500	1,500	1,500	1,500	1,500
New Mexico	5,000	5,000	4,700	1,000	1,500	1,500	1,500	1,500	1,500	1,500
Oregon	16,000	16,000	15,000	12,000	12,000	12,000	12,000	12,000	10,000	10,000
South Dakota	3,500	3,500	2,500	2,500	3,500	3,500	3,500	3,500	3,500	3,500
Utah	8,000	8,000	8,000	7,000	7,000	3,000	3,000	3,000	1,000	1,000
Washington	16,000	16,000	16,000	14,000	14,000	14,000	14,000	14,000	17,000	17,000
Wyoming	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,900	1,000	1,000

Indian schools, support.

Act.	Year.	Amount.
July 13, 1892	1893	$1,075,000
March 3, 1893	1894	1,075,000
August 15, 1894	1895	1,000,000
March 2, 1895	1896	1,164,350
June 10, 1896	1897	1,235,000
June 7, 1897	1898	1,200,000
July 1, 1898	1899	1,100,000
March 1, 1899	1900	1,100,000
May 31, 1900	1901	1,200,000
March 3, 1901	1902	1,220,000
Total		11,389,350

ALBUQUERQUE SCHOOL.

1893	$60,000.00
1894	50,550.00
1895	43,250.00
1896	53,100.00
1897	55,300.00
1898	55,300.00
1899	68,300.00
1900	53,800.00
1901	53,500.00
1902	58,100.00
Total	551,200.00

BANNING SCHOOL.

1893	$12,500.00
1894	12,500.00
1895	12,500.00
Total	37,500.00

BLACKFEET AGENCY SCHOOL.

1893	$12,500.00
1894	12,500.00
1895	12,500.00
Total	37,500.00

CARLISLE SCHOOL.

1893	$106,000.00
1894	106,000.00
1895	105,000.00
1896	102,000.00
1897	111,000.00
1898	111,600.00
1899	111,600.00
1900	150,000.00
1901	150,000.00
1902	150,000.00
Total	1,203,200.00

CARSON SCHOOL.

1893	$24,000.00
1894	22,500.00
1895	25,375.00
1896	23,175.00
1897	23,175.00
1898	29,350.00
1899	29,350.00
1900	41,550.00
1901	40,900.00
1902	53,200.00
Total	312,575.00

CHAMBERLAIN SCHOOL.

1897	$25,000.00
1898	29,900.00
1899	19,900.00
1900	18,900.00
1901	26,100.00
1902	41,300.00
Total	161,100.00

CHEROKEE SCHOOL.

1893	$18,560.00
1894	14,760.00
1895	17,560.00
1896	23,745.00
1897	29,350.00
1898	32,350.00
1899	28,350.00
1900	27,850.00
1901	27,850.00
1902	30,350.00
Total	250,725.00

CHILOCCO SCHOOL.

1893	$62,110.00
1894	44,750.00
1895	61,950.00
1896	61,450.00
1897	64,000.00
1898	65,250.00
1899	77,750.00
1900	66,750.00
1901	86,600.00
1902	81,600.00
Total	672,210.00

CLONTARF SCHOOL.

1893	$15,000.00
1894	15,000.00
1895	15,000.00
Total	45,000.00

FLANDREAU SCHOOL.

1893	$20,000.00
1894	22,000.00
1895	29,150.00
1896	29,550.00
1897	80,850.00
1898	44,900.00
1899	69,900.00
1900	47,850.00
1901	69,750.00
1902	78,250.00
Total	492,200.00

FORT MOJAVE SCHOOL.

1893	$32,500.00
1894	26,750.00
1895	28,050.00
1896	27,550.00
1897	29,550.00
1898	43,550.00
1899	31,550.00
1900	36,550.00
1901	32,050.00
1902	43,550.00
Total	331,650.00

FORT TOTTEN SCHOOL.

1893	$54,300.00
1894	41,880.00
1895	44,580.00
1896	42,580.00
1897	44,850.00
1898	48,350.00
1899	48,350.00
1900	55,150.00
1901	62,050.00
1902	48,350.00
Total	490,440.00

GENOA SCHOOL.

1893	$63,000.00
1894	57,775.00
1895	61,950.00
1896	52,600.00
1897	65,300.00
1898	62,800.00
1899	62,800.00
1900	59,300.00
1901	85,800.00
1902	52,800.00
Total	624,125.00

GRAND JUNCTION SCHOOL.

1893	$29,000.00
1894	25,675.00
1895	28,235.00
1896	29,050.00
1897	27,550.00
1898	34,250.00
1899	28,550.00
1900	36,550.00
1901	54,325.00
1902	39,725.00
Total	332,910.00

HAMPTON SCHOOL.

1893	$20,040.00
1894	20,040.00
1895	20,040.00
1896	20,040.00
1897	20,040.00
1898	20,040.00
1899	20,040.00
1900	20,040.00
1901	20,040.00
1902	20,040.00
Total	200,400.00

HAYWARD SCHOOL.

1900	$60,000.00
1901	38,675.00
1902	22,675.00
Total	121,350.00

KICKAPOO SCHOOL.

1899	$15,000.00
1900	12,190.00
1901	18,360.00
1902	14,495.00
Total	60,045.00

LAWRENCE SCHOOL.

1893	$90,000.00
1894	87,000.00
1895	87,000.00
1896	86,300.00
1897	90,500.00
1898	102,500.00
1899	94,000.00
1900	112,000.00
1901	122,200.00
1902	140,200.00
Total	1,011,700.00

LINCOLN INSTITUTE.

1893	$33,400.00
1894	33,400.00
1895	33,400.00
1896	33,400.00
1897	33,400.00
1898	33,400.00
1899	33,400.00
1900	33,400.00
Total	267,200.00

MANDAN SCHOOL.

1902	$50,000.00

MORRIS SCHOOL.

1900	$48,550.00
1901	34,450.00
1902	33,550.00
Total	116,550.00

MOUNT PLEASANT SCHOOL.

1893	$25,000.00
1894	27,375.00
1895	27,500.00
1896	29,050.00
1897	67,550.00
1898	35,400.00
1899	62,100.00

1900	$54,800.00
1901	73,300.00
1902	67,050.00
Total	469,125.00

PERRIS SCHOOL.

1893	$15,000.00
1894	22,200.00
1895	23,200.00
1896	22,900.00
1897	33,550.00
1898	27,081.35
1899	27,550.00
1900	27,550.00
1901	27,550.00
1902	27,050.00
Total	253,631.35

PHOENIX SCHOOL.

1893	$38,675.00
1894	36,550.00
1895	30,210.00
1896	44,750.00
1897	45,350.00
1898	104,600.00
1899	131,200.00
1900	112,200.00
1901	109,700.00
1902	118,000.00
Total	771,235.00

PIERRE SCHOOL.

1893	$33,200.00
1894	28,550.00
1895	27,550.00
1896	27,550.00
1897	28,550.00
1898	27,050.00
1899	28,550.00
1900	28,550.00
1901	28,550.00
1902	35,550.00
Total	293,650.00

PIPESTONE.

1893	$15,000.00
1894	15,020.00
1895	12,220.00
1896	14,225.00
1897	20,400.00
1898	30,400.00
1899	49,075.00
1900	32,550.00
1901	27,550.00
1902	38,550.00
Total	254,960.00

PUYALLUP SCHOOL.

1899	$20,000.00

RAPID CITY SCHOOL.

1897	$25,000.00
1898	31,400.00
1899	18,400.00
1900	22,400.00
1901	18,900.00
1902	42,700.00
Total	158,800.00

RIVERSIDE SCHOOL.

1901	$75,000.00
1902	135,400.00
Total	210,400.00

RENSSELAER SCHOOL.

1893	$8,330.00
1894	8,330.00
1895	8,330.00
Total	24,990.00

ST. IGNATIUS MISSION.

1893	$45,000.00
1894	45,000.00
1895	45,000.00
Total	135,000.00

SAC AND FOX, IOWA, SCHOOL.

1897	$35,000.00
1898	14,525.00
1899	15,525.00
1900	15,525.00
1901	13,925.00
1902	14,125.00
Total	106,625.00

SALEM SCHOOL.

1893	$53,750.00
1894	48,500.00
1895	45,250.00
1896	44,250.00
1897	46,850.00
1898	71,700.00
1899	74,700.00
1900	92,600.00
1901	$115,527.00
1902	106,300.00
Total	699,427.00

SANTA FE SCHOOL.

1893	$45,000.00
1894	34,550.00
1895	28,550.00
1896	29,750.00
1897	40,000.00
1898	62,850.00
1899	50,050.00
1900	57,800.00
1901	69,900.00
1902	67,300.00
Total	485,750.00

SHOSHONE RESERVATION SCHOOL.

1893	$20,500.00
1894	24,875.00
1895	22,875.00
1896	27,550.00
1897	30,450.00
1898	26,950.00
1899	39,125.00
1900	37,125.00
1901	35,725.00
1902	35,625.00
Total	300,800.00

SCHOOLS IN STATES.

1893	$75,000.00
1894	75,000.00
1895	9,246.57
Total	159,246.57

SOUTHERN UTE SCHOOL.

1900	$25,000.00
1901	9,690.00
1902	9,690.00
Total	44,380.00

TOMAH SCHOOL.

1893	$25,000.00
1894	21,770.00
1895	19,200.00
1896	18,900.00
1897	19,100.00
1898	35,275.00
1899	38,275.00
1900	46,550.00
1901	38,725.00
1902	42,175.00
Total	304,970.00

HACKBERRY TRUXTON CANYON SCHOOL.

1900	$60,000.00
1901	23,675.00
1902	39,550.00
Total	123,225.00

ONIEDA SCHOOL.

1898	$1,000.00

UMATILLA SCHOOL.

1894	$6,000.00
1895	6,000.00
Total	12,000.00

WABASH SCHOOL.

1893	$10,020.00
1894	10,020.00
1895	10,020.00
Total	30,060.00

INDIAN SCHOOL MANUFACTURES.

1901	$10,000.00
1902	10,000.00
Total	20,000.00

INDIAN SCHOOL STOCK CATTLE.

1893	$20,000.00
1894	25,000.00
1895	20,000.00
1896	20,000.00
1897	15,000.00
1898	15,000.00
1899	10,000.00
1900	10,000.00
Total	135,000.00

INDIAN SCHOOL TRANSPORTATION.

1893	$40,000.00
1894	40,000.00
1895	35,000.00
1896	30,000.00
1897	35,000.00
1898	35,000.00
1899	35,000.00
1900	35,000.00
1901	40,000.00
1902	40,000.00
Total	365,000.00

INDIAN SCHOOL BUILDINGS.

1893	$100,000.00
1894	40,000.00
1895	40,000.00
1896
1897	140,000.00
1898	200,000.00
1899	200,000.00
1900	300,000.00
1901	240,000.00
1902	240,000.00
Total	1,500,000.00

The total annual appropriations for the support of Indian schools made by the Government since 1877, will be found on page 39 of the Commissioner's last annual report.

Referring to question 6.—The deficiency bills of each year contain small appropriations for schools which arise in the settlements of accounts, but these as a rule are trivial.

Number of employees at Indian agencies, 1900.

ARIZONA.

Colorado River	11
Fort Apache	18
Pima	13
San Carlos	35

CALIFORNIA.

Hoopa Valley	13
Mission Tule	5
Round Valley	3

COLORADO.

Southern Ute	10

IDAHO.

Fort Hall	17
Lemhi	11
Nez Perce	11

IOWA.

Sac and Fox	3

INDIAN TERRITORY.

Quapaw	8
Union	7

KANSAS.

Pottawatomie	7

MONTANA.

Blackfeet Agency	28
Crows	34
Flathead	16
Fort Belknap	24
Fort Peck	30
Tongue River	8

MINNESOTA.

Leech Lake	21
White Earth	16

NORTH DAKOTA.

Devil's Lake	22
Fort Berthold	37
Standing Rock	45

NEW MEXICO.

Mescalero	1
Navaho	18
Pueblo	8
Jicarilla	13

NEVADA.

Western Shoshone	10
Nevada Agency	6

NEW YORK.

New York Agency	2

NEBRASKA.

Omaha and Winnebago	17
Santee	18

OHIO.

Sac and Fox	7

OKLAHOMA.

Cheyenne and Arapaho	51
Kiowa	38
Osage	27
Ponca	16
Pawnee	12
Otoe	11
Oakland	1

OREGON.

Grand Ronde	5
Klamath	12
Siletz	6
Umatilla	9
Warm Springs	9

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Cheyenne River	34
Crow Creek	26
Lower Brulé	16
Pine Ridge	63
Rosebud	51
Sisseton	1
Yankton	28

WASHINGTON.

Colville	25
Neah Bay	10
Puyallup	6
Tulalip	18
Yakima	13

WISCONSIN.

Green Bay	33
La Pointe	11

WYOMING.

Shoshone	24

UTAH.

Uintah	16
Ouray	14

NOTE.—Above are the number of employees at each agency, with the exception of the Indians employed as police.

Be it known that Jackson County, State of Kansas, hereby promises, agrees, and pledges itself, by and through the undersigned, county commissioners of said county, to keep in repair at its own expense any and all bridges that may be constructed and erected by the General Government over the creeks and streams running through the Pottawatomie Indian Reservation located within said Jackson County, State of Kansas.

JOHN C. FRANZ, Chairman.
H. H. POSTON,
W. PARMENTER,
Board of County Commissioners of said Jackson County, State of Kansas.

Dated at Holton, Jackson County, State of Kansas, this 17th day of December, A. D. 1901.

Attest:
[SEAL.] J. W. ATWATER,
County Clerk.

The Clerk, proceeding with the reading of the bill, read as follows:

At the Pottawatomie and Great Nemaha Agency, Kans., $1,200.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read the amendment, as follows:

In line 12, page 4, strike out the word "two" and insert "five."

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Chairman, the word "two" was inserted by mistake. This item was raised to $1,500 last year and should be for that amount in this bill.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

At the Standing Rock Agency, N. Dak., $1,800.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment:

On line 2, page 5, insert:
"Tongue River Agency, Mont., $1,500."

It was agreed upon by the committee, but by mistake it was not included in the bill.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

At the White Earth Agency, Minn., $1,800.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I move to amend, after the word "dollars," in line 10, page 5, by inserting the following:

At the Yakima Agency, Wash., $1,600.

Mr. Chairman, I was very much surprised to find that the bill omitted the amount for this agency. Of course I understand the rules relating to secrecy in the consideration of appropriation bills. I had received no intimation from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs that an agent was not needed at this point, and in conversation with some of the officials of the Indian Department some time ago that statement was made that the discontinuance of our agent was not thought of. Of course these officials did not speak with authority, but they did speak with knowledge of the conditions, and I never dreamed of such action.

It is fair to the House to say that when the bill was reported I consulted the Commissioner of Indian Affairs relating to the Yakima Agency, and he said he did not consider an agent necessary at this point. He stated that the special agent and inspectors of the Department had reported to him that it would be better to have a bonded superintendent of Indian schools in charge of this reservation. It is but fair also to say that he stated that it had been the experience of the Department that they got more satisfactory service from the bonded superintendents than through the Indian agents, and it was their policy to abolish the agents as fast as possible.

I desire to state that there are about 2,000 Indians at the Yakima Agency. There have been 2,700 allotments made to the Indians. In the reservation proper there are about a million acres of land. It was found that a mistake in the boundaries had been made, and upon investigation it was ascertained and determined by the Department that about 300,000 acres more of timber and grazing land should be included in the Yakima Reservation. The Government is endeavoring to make arrangements by which it shall secure title to the land and also to the unallotted lands of the reservation. It seems to me an agent could look after the interests of the Indians much better than a bonded superintendent. It is fair to say that the Commissioner of Indian Affairs says that the bonded superintendent can do and perform the duties of agent the same as the agent himself. There are other matters in connection with these Indians which seems to me make it certain that if any Indians in the country need an agent these Indians do.

I presume that about one-half of these Indians are what are commonly known as blanket Indians. In other words, they have not yet fully adopted the manners, customs, and habits of civilized people, nor of the white men surrounding them. They are within 4 miles of North Yakima. These Indians give the Government considerable trouble in connection with the sale of whisky and other intoxicating liquors. An agent could look after these matters better than a bonded superintendent. Furthermore, their land is arid land. Irrigation ditches have been constructed, and are being constructed, for the purpose of irrigating the Indian lands. Much of their lands are leased. Each man, woman, and child has 80 acres. The interests of the women and children must be looked after. Their lands must be leased and the rents collected. I believe that the interests of the Indians require an agent to look after the disposition, handling, and care of the lands, as well as the many other matters that come up in connection with them. These are the facts, conditions, and circumstances surrounding the Yakima Indian Agency. It seems to me they warrant, yes, demand the maintenance and existence of an agent there. I want to say frankly that all I desire is the good of the Indians. I do not profess to know as much about the difference between the requirements that necessitate an agent and those that necessitate only a bonded superintendent as the experts of the Department, nor as much as the Commissioner himself.

I do not know what the special requirements are at these different agencies, where an agent is maintained instead of a bonded superintendent. I do not know wherein they differ from our agency. I can not conceive of conditions, circumstances, or facts connected with the other Indian agencies that would make it more important or necessary to maintain an agent at those points than at the Yakima Agency. If this agency is abolished, I believe the Government will realize the injury done before the year is past. I hope the committee will not oppose this amendment, and I insist that the amendment should be adopted.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, the committee gave considerable attention to the question of agencies, and after a full hearing by the subcommittee at the Indian Office and a consideration of all the facts presented by the Commissioner we found that it was possible to dispense with five agencies, of which this is one. There are in the neighborhood of 2,000 Indians at this agency and in the neighborhood of 200,000 acres of allotted land.

The Indians raise their own crops; they do more or less labor for others outside of the reservation. They are quite as capable, many of them, of taking care of themselves as any white people in this country. It is the opinion of the Department that the duties of the agency can be performed by a bonded superintendent, and that the interests of the service, instead of being injured, will be subserved by doing away with the agency at Yakima. I trust therefore the amendment will not prevail.

The question being taken on the amendment of Mr. JONES of Washington,

The CHAIRMAN. The ayes appear to have it.

Mr. SHERMAN. I call for a division.

The question being again taken, there were—ayes 8, noes 33.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

For pay of 41 agents of Indian affairs at the following-named agencies, at the rates respectively indicated, namely:

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask unanimous consent to amend the paragraph just read by making "41," in line 2, page 2, read "42," and making the total in line 12, page 5, $67,300. This is made necessary by the amendment already adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendments proposed by the gentleman from New York will be agreed to.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

For pay of eight Indian inspectors, one of whom shall be an engineer competent in the location, construction, and maintenance of irrigation works, at $2,500 per annum each, $20,000: Provided, That the Indian inspector located in the Indian Territory, under the provision of section 27 of the act of Congress approved June 28, 1898, while assigned to such duty, may be designated as commissioner for the Indian Territory, and shall be allowed for compensation $3,500 per annum, together with all traveling expenses and $8 per diem while on duty and under such assignment.

Mr. SHERMAN. I move to amend by striking out the proviso just read. It is an error that it was printed here. It was voted down in the committee.

Mr. LITTLE. That is right.

The motion of Mr. SHERMAN was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For contingencies of the Indian Service, including traveling and incidental expenses of Indian agents and of their offices, and of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs; also traveling and incidental expenses of 5 special agents, at $3 per day when actually employed on duty in the field, exclusive of transportation and sleeping-car fare, in lieu of all other expenses now authorized by law; and expenses of going to and going from the seat of government, and while remaining there under orders and direction of the Secretary of the Interior, for a period not to exceed twenty days; for pay of employees not otherwise provided for, and for pay of the 5 special agents, at $2,000 per annum each, $40,000.

Mr. LITTLE. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add after the word "offices," in line 23, the following:

"And to enable said Commissioner to examine and report the feasibility and expediency of educating Indians in schools upon the reservations and in the communities where said Indians reside, and to submit the best plan, in his judgment, to accomplish this end to the next session of Congress."

Mr. SHERMAN. I desire to reserve a point of order on that amendment. I did not know that the gentleman intended to present it at this time.

Mr. LITTLE. I do not think it is subject to a point of order, but I have no objection to the gentleman's reserving the point. I would like to be heard for a moment.

Mr. Chairman, my purpose in this amendment is in a measure to carry out the wishes of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs. I do not mean that he has recommended this mode of proceeding; but anyone who will read the report of the Commissioner will see that he very earnestly advocates the education, as far as possible, of the Indians upon the reservations and in the communities in which they reside. In that expression of opinion I most heartily concur.

Now, the only effect this amendment can have is to furnish to Congress at its next session such information and such recommendations as the Commissioner of Indian Affairs may make. It does not bind Congress to any particular line of proceeding. It simply seeks information upon this subject. I believe that if we had more schools on the reservations—more day schools, more industrial schools—where the scholars would be brought into contact with the home Indians, this system would have a decided tendency to elevate the condition of the Indian tribes.

Mr. SHERMAN. Will the gentleman yield a moment?

Mr. LITTLE. Certainly.

Mr. SHERMAN. The amendment, as I understand, contemplates no additional expense?

Mr. LITTLE. None whatever.

Mr. SHERMAN. It appropriates no money?

Mr. LITTLE. None.

Mr. SHERMAN. Does the gentleman, after a careful reading of the last report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, where this entire school subject is discussed very fully, think that this amendment is really necessary?

Mr. LITTLE. I really do.

Mr. SHERMAN. Very well; then I will withdraw my point of order.

Mr. LITTLE. I feel sure that the adoption of the amendment can not work harm in any way. I believe it will give us information that we ought to have; and if there should be any change in our educational policy upon the reservations, this information will enable us to make that change intelligently.

Mr. CANNON. Let us hear the amendment read again.

The amendment was again read.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I think this should be adopted without division.

Mr. CANNON. Why so?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. The Secretary of the Interior, in speaking of the report made by Mr. Jones, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, adopted the ideas of Mr. Jones that these Indians should be educated on the reservations, and not sent away to these contract schools. Now, if we are to put that into effect, I know of no better way to begin it than by requiring these men sent out by the Government to investigate Indian affairs to report to Congress the best means of accomplishing that end, if that is the end to be accomplished. It is the end to be desired, in my judgment, and is very desirable and necessary for the education of the Indian. If that is to be accomplished, we should make a beginning at some time, and it will not cost the Government one dollar more, and these Indian inspectors sent out to investigate Indian affairs will take up this subject in connection with other subjects, and report to Congress the best means of accomplishing that result.

Mr. CANNON. If the gentleman will permit me?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Certainly.

Mr. CANNON. As I understand it, since 1896 we have not been doing anything else but supporting boarding and day schools on the reservations. As I understand the report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, there is now substantially on the various reservations industrial and day schools sufficient to accomodate the whole number of children of school age. Now, it has gone beyond the era of investigation. We have had investigation for eight or ten or twelve years past, as I understand it—nothing else but investigation—and that investigation has ripened into a policy, a policy which has covered the expenditure of money—millions of dollars—on school facilities sufficient for the purpose, run by the Government, to care for the children. Am I right about that?

Mr. SHERMAN. The gentleman in the main is correct, but the purpose of this amendment, as I understand it, is to draw a distinction between the nonreservation and the reservation schools. There are gentlemen who contend that equally good results are not obtained in the nonreservation schools. I think the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STEPHENS] is in error in assuming that the report of the Commissioner maintains that efficient work is not obtained in the nonreservation schools. On the contrary, as I read his report, he expressly commends nonreservation schools, and says that the work they are doing is most beneficent and efficient work, describes what that education is, and tells why, in his judgment, that education produces results that can not be produced in a reservation school pure and simple. I think the gentleman is in error. I dislike to disagree with my friend from Arkansas [Mr. LITTLE], but, I think, in the last report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs this entire subject is discussed as fully and all of the conditions are set forth as clearly as it would be possible to set them forth after another examination.

Mr. LITTLE. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will permit me, I do not want the purpose of the amendment that I offer misunderstood. We have the recommendation in a general way from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs. The principal object of this amendment is to give us more detailed information as to the condition of the reservation, with a view that we may take additional steps in education at and near their homes. Now, do not understand me to say that good results are not accomplished by nonreservation schools; but I think they have gone far enough, as you will find in the report of the Commissioner—I do not happen to have it before me—where he says things that rather concur with me, that these nonreservation schools, in a large measure, have not produced the results desired and hoped for, and he believes that it is wise to begin the more extensive education of these Indians upon their reservations, at their homes, and in that way you will build up the entire sentiment of the tribe.

You take a boy and girl from their homes and put them into nonreservation schools, and when they go back they are so far out of joint with their tribes that neither the child nor the parents are satisfied. I do not pretend to say that the purpose of this amendment will change the present purpose of Congress, but it is additional information we may get without any material additional expense under the appropriation asked here. It is information that I want us to get if we can do it, and it will be for Congress to say as to whether they want to increase the reservation school or not.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] is correct that upon the reservations we have day schools and industrial schools, but no one can maintain that there are enough of those schools to accommodate the children on the reservations. There may be some reservations where it is wholly impracticable to do this. That is what I want to know, and if the Department needs money to build smaller schools similar to the smaller schools of the country, I would like to see that done. In fact, I do not see how that amendment can, in any view of this subject, do any harm; all it can do is to give us additional light on the subject, and for the Commissioner to make such recommendations in the line he expresses in his report, if he sees proper, that we may enlarge at least that branch of the education, whether we diminish from the nonreservation schools or not. I believe we ought to have this amendment, and I hope that the point of order will not be pressed.

The CHAIRMAN. The time for debate on this amendment is exhausted.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I move to strike out the last word. I hope there will be no objection to the amendment of the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. LITTLE]. Mr. Chairman, yesterday I discussed under the general debate the necessity which I believe existed for commencing to prepare for the abandonment of nonreservation schools. I believe the amendment of the gentleman from Arkansas should be adopted. It merely directs the Commissioner to report as to the advisability of establishing additional schools upon the reservations. Nobody who has read the report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs can fail to be impressed with his language upon this subject. After reviewing the conditions under which an Indian is transplanted from his home on the reservation to the nonreservation school, he uses this language:

> Here he remains until his education is finished, when he is returned to his home—which by contrast must seem squalid indeed—to the parents whom his education must make it difficult to honor, and left to make his way against the ignorance and bigotry of his tribe. Is it any wonder he fails? Is it surprising if he lapses into barbarism? Not having earned his education, it is not appreciated; having made no sacrifice to obtain it, it is not valued. It is looked upon as a right and not as a privilege. It is accepted as a favor to the Government and not to the recipient; and the almost inevitable tendency is to encourage dependence, foster pride, and create a spirit of arrogance and selfishness. The testimony on this point of those closely connected with the Indian employees of the service would, it is believed, be interesting.

With that language incorporated in the report of the Commissioner, I believe that every member of this House should be anxious to secure that information. It can do no harm, and it may be of great good and of much advantage, not merely to the members of the House, but to the members of the committee who are charged with the duties of framing legislation for the Indian school service. I hope the amendment will be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. LITTLE].

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

> To enable the Secretary of the Interior to employ practical farmers and practical stockmen in addition to the agency farmers now employed, at wages not exceeding $75 each per month, to superintend and direct farming and stock raising among such Indians as are making effort for self-support, $75,000.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, I want to reserve a point of order to ask a question.

I see here the item, wages of farmers, not exceeding $75. I believe heretofore the amount has been $65.

Mr. SHERMAN. Heretofore it has been that. I think I can explain that to the satisfaction of the gentleman. Heretofore the wage of these farmers has been $65, as the gentleman states. There are altogether about 100 of these farmers employed. It has been impossible for the Commissioner at all times to find farmers who would fill these positions in certain parts of the country at the maximum rate of $65. In other parts of the country he succeeded in procuring them at $25 a month. There was a time during the last fiscal year when there were 23 vacancies in this force by reason of the fact that the Secretary was unable to find efficient, practical, useful farmers to fill those positions who would take them and perform the service for $65 a month, and for that reason we have increased the maximum to $75 a month and increased the total of the appropriation accordingly.

Mr. CANNON. I do not desire to make the point of order, especially after the committee has made the investigation; but I believe, nevertheless, that neither for $65 nor $75 can you get a farmer who will earn his salt. I do not think you could for $175 a month. Still we have had the farmer through all the years, and we have him now. I would rather have a good farm hand who would do the work, because that is what it amounts to, and you could get a farm hand for $20.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I do not know as it is pertinent to this bill, but I do not like to allow so sweeping an indictment of the agriculturists of the country as my friend makes. I do not think he wishes to be understood as having it so broad as his language seems to imply.

The fact remains, Mr. Chairman, that in actual practice the Commissioner, with the funds on hand, has been unable to find competent men to fill these positions for the maximum salary he has been permitted to pay; and therefore it seemed to the committee that there could be no more conclusive argument that the increased salary was necessary. It has not been our experience around Washington, I think, that we could not find people to accept the positions, no matter what the salary was; but the Commissioner's experience in this line has been somewhat different.

Mr. CANNON. Perhaps I ought to have made myself better understood. I would not antagonize the conclusion of the Committee on Indian Affairs that the salaries ought to be increased from sixty-five to seventy-five dollars a month; but what I had in my mind to say, which I will now say, was that the whole system of furnishing farmers to instruct Indians in agriculture—Indians who will not work, to be instructed by a farmer who will not work—is worse than useless in its practical results.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman insist on his point of order?

Mr. CANNON. Oh, no; I do not feel at liberty to do that. I will not antagonize a committee that has a system and does not propose to abolish it.

The Clerk read as follows:

CHIPPEWAS OF MINNESOTA, REIMBURSABLE.

> Advance interest to the Chippewa Indians in Minnesota, as required by section 7 of "An act for the relief and civilization of the Chippewa Indians in the State of Minnesota," approved January 14, 1889, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, in the manner required by said act (reimbursable), $90,000.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word, for the purpose of asking a question. What is this money to be reimbursed from, and how?

Mr. SHERMAN. It is to be reimbursed under the provisions of the act referred to therein, which is an act to confirm the Chippewa treaty, and the money arises from the sale of timber and timber lands. Up to the present time there has been received from this source about $1,400,000, and there has been disbursed about $2,800,000, which is about twice as much as received. The act confirming the treaty provides in section 7:

> That all money accruing from the disposal of said lands in conformity with the provisions of this act shall, after deducting all the expenses of making the census, of obtaining the cession and relinquishment, of making the removal and allotments, and of completing the surveys and appraisals in this act provided, be placed in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of all the Chippewa Indians in the State of Minnesota as a permanent fund, which shall draw interest at the rate of 5 per cent per annum, payable annually for the period of fifty years, after the allotments provided for in this act have been made, and which interest and permanent fund shall be expended for the benefit of said Indians in manner following:

One-half of said interest shall, during the said period of fifty years, except in the cases hereinafter otherwise provided, be annually paid in cash in equal shares to the heads of families and guardians of orphan minors for their use; and one-fourth of said interest shall, during the same period and with the like exception, be annually paid in cash in equal shares per capita to all other classes of said Indians; and the remaining one-fourth of said interest shall, during the said period of fifty years, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, be devoted exclusively to the establishment and maintenance of a system of free schools among said Indians, in their midst and for their benefit; and at the expiration of the said fifty years the said permanent fund shall be divided and paid to all of said Chippewa Indians and their issue then living, in cash, in equal shares:

Provided, That Congress may, in its discretion, from time to time, during the said period of fifty years, appropriate, for the purpose of promoting civilization and self-support among the said Indians, a portion of said principal sum, not exceeding 5 per cent thereof. The United States shall, for the benefit of said Indians, advance to them as such interest as aforesaid the sum of $90,000 annually, counting from the time when the removal and allotments provided for in this act shall have been made, until such time as said permanent fund, exclusive of the deductions hereinbefore provided for, shall equal or exceed the sum of $3,000,000, less any actual interest that may in the meantime accrue from accumulations of said permanent fund; the payments of such interest to be made yearly in advance, and, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, may, as to three-fourths thereof, during the first five years be expended in procuring live stock, teams, farming implements, and seed for such of the Indians to the extent of their shares as are fit and desire to engage in farming, but as to the rest, in cash; and whenever said permanent fund shall exceed the sum of $3,000,000 the United States shall be fully reimbursed out of such excess for all the advances of interest made as herein contemplated and other expenses hereunder.

So that it amounts to this: up to the present time they have been paid, as advances, about $3,000,000, which, if this timber and these lands are properly sold, will eventually all come into the Treasury. We have already paid something over $2,000,000 directly to the Indians or for their support. There is a considerable amount paid for the surveys and allotment and all that. So that of the $2,800,000 now paid, nearly $2,500,000, or the greater part of the amount paid under the act and treaty, will eventually be repaid to the Indians.

Mr. CANNON. Well, if I understand then, almost three millions that has been advanced from the United States Treasury, reimbursable from the sale of the timber.

Mr. SHERMAN. That is correct.

Mr. CANNON. And it has been reimbursed in part, and they are still in arrears over a million.

Mr. SHERMAN. That is correct.

Mr. CURTIS. I will state to the gentleman that it is estimated that the timber is worth from ten to fifteen millions of dollars.

Mr. CANNON. Now, I understand, further, that this $3,000,000 was expected to go into the Treasury and the Indians get the interest, but instead of that they have gotten almost the three millions. Now, does my friend think that the time will ever come when that will be reimbursed?

Mr. SHERMAN. Oh, yes. I do, because there seems to be no possible question but that these timber lands are worth vastly more than this sum. They have been estimated at something over $10,000,000; but all the sales have been tied up for a year or two pending an investigation of alleged frauds in reference to the sale of them, and pending the consideration of an amendment to the act under which they are sold. Therefore for about two years nothing has come into the Treasury from these sales. I have no doubt but that eventually all of this $3,000,000 will be repaid to the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. CANNON. I am very glad to hear the gentleman say so, because, first, I had an impression that they never would pay it; second, long before it could be untangled and the machinery could be put in motion with which it would be paid that the good people of the United States—I was going to say of Minnesota, but I will not, because Minnesota has no monopoly of good people—will have found with covetous eyes that the remainder of the timber up there ought to be used for commercial purposes, and that the timber would disappear under legislation or administration, more probably both, and that the United States would pocket the loss to the extent of the loss of the timber, and that finally, in the not far-distant future, it will be thrown open to free homes.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think I have stated to the gentleman on some former occasion when this same subject was up, when an Indian appropriation bill was under consideration, that I questioned whether enough would ever come from these sales to make the Government good; but I said that when there was what seemed to me a defective law, or rather a careless administration, to use a rather mild term; but the defects of administration seem to have been cured, and in my judgment the time is not far distant when the defects of the law will be cured.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois withdraw his amendment?

Mr. CANNON. Yes.

The Clerk read as follows:

CREEKS.

That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to place upon the books of the Treasury to the credit of the Muscogee or Creek tribes the sum of $999,368, being in full for the permanent annuities guaranteed them by the treaties of August 7, 1790, June 16, 1802, June 24, 1826, August 7, 1856, and June 14, 1866, to be added to the Creek general fund already to the credit of said nation, and to draw interest at 5 per cent per annum until drawn out of the Treasury for the purpose named in the agreement with the Muscogee or Creek tribe of Indians ratified by act of March 1, 1901.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, I will reserve a point of order on that paragraph for the purpose of asking a question.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think I can explain it before the question is asked, as I think I anticipate the question. Under the several treaties there are many items of payments that we must make to this tribe, and it has been thought wise, and recommended by the Department, that instead of appropriating year after year, as we have been doing, these funds, we should capitalize the fund upon the basis of 5 per cent, the amount of these several obligations amounting to not quite $50,000 a year, and put this money in the Treasury, pay them 5 per cent annually, and hereafter there will be no provision in the appropriation bill under the treaties for the Creeks.

It is simply a question whether we shall continue to pay item by item $50,000 each year, or capitalize it and put it into the Treasury now and have the interest paid out to them every year under the provision of the several treaties.

Mr. CANNON. Does the gentleman know the amount of the general fund?

Mr. SHERMAN. Already in the Treasury? Something over a million dollars.

Mr. CURTIS. I would like to read section 27 of the Creek agreement ratified by the act of March 1, 1901. It provides:

All treaty funds of the tribe shall hereafter be capitalized for the purpose of equalizing allotment, and for the other purposes provided in this agreement.

That is simply carrying out, in addition to what the chairman of the committee has said, the provision of the treaty.

Mr. CANNON. Why should it be capitalized at 5 per cent?

Mr. SHERMAN. If you capitalize it at 4 per cent per annum, it makes the principal sum so much more. It is as long as it is broad, whether you capitalize it at 5 per cent or 4 per cent; at 4 per cent it takes so much more money to pay the principal sum.

Mr. CANNON. The interest on this sum at 5 per cent equals the appropriation that is made to them under the treaty?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, and has been made for many years.

Mr. CANNON. It is to be made in perpetuity?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, or until such time as the United States may pay it out of the Treasury to them.

The Clerk, proceeding with the reading of the bill, read as follows:

For subsistence of the Sioux, and for purposes of their civilization, as per agreement ratified by act of Congress approved February 28, 1877, $850,000: Provided, That this sum shall include transportation of supplies from the termination of railroad or steamboat transportation; and in this service Indians shall be employed when practicable: And provided further, That the number of rations issued shall not exceed the number of Indians on each reservation, and any excess in the number of rations issued shall be disallowed in the settlement of the agent's account: Provided further, That the unexpended balance for the fiscal year 1902 is hereby appropriated and made available for 1903.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the gentleman in charge of the bill, if this is a reappropriation, if he knows about the amount reappropriated?

Mr. SHERMAN. My recollection is that it is between twenty and thirty thousand dollars. I thought I had the memorandum here, but I have not. It is not a large sum.

The Clerk read as follows:

WINNEBAGOES.

For interest on $804,909.17, at 5 per cent per annum, per fourth article of treaty of November 1, 1837, and joint resolution of July 17, 1862, $40,245.45; and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby directed to expend said interest for the support, education, and civilization of said Indians.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on lines 13, 14, and 15, after the word "cents," for the purpose of asking a question. What is the necessity for this legislation; how does it change the treaty, if at all? I apprehend, although I have not examined the treaty, that it is for subsistence, tools, etc. Now, if you divert it to subsistence, support, education, and civilization, and blow it in for that purpose, will you not have then, from the standpoint of humanity, to support the Indians?

Mr. SHERMAN. I have absolutely no memorandum about it and no recollection about it. I suppose it is the same language as that in the last bill.

Mr. CANNON. I think not. Suppose we let it pass until the end of the bill?

Mr. SHERMAN. Very well. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Chairman, that we may pass over this item until we reach the end of the bill, and return to it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that the paragraph just read be passed until the end of the bill is reached, and then return to it. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

For payment per capita, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, to certain Creek Indians, or their heirs, who removed themselves from east of the Mississippi River to the Creek Nation, in the Indian Territory, and subsisted themselves for one year, in accordance with the twelfth article of the treaty with the Creek Nation, proclaimed April 4, 1832, as exhibited in Senate Executive Document No. 198, Fiftieth Congress, first session, $12,220, to be immediately available.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, I desire to make a point of order beginning at line 21 to the close of the paragraph. I think on examination——

Mr. CURTIS. I think, Mr. Chairman, the item is subject to a point of order, but as it was the last of the claims of that kind against the Government, and as we had entered into a treaty with the Indians looking to the settlement of the affairs of said tribe as soon as possible, the committee thought it best to put this item in the bill at this time. I desire to have read as a part of my remarks a letter from the chief of the tribe in regard to this item.

The Clerk read as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 19, 1903.

SIR: I notice an item in the pending Indian appropriation bill providing for the reimbursement of certain Creek Indians, as per treaty stipulations, for which, on behalf of said Indans, I beg to thank you and your honorable committee. That item is just, and I trust it may be permitted to remain in the bill. The Indians for whom this appropriation is intended removed themselves from east of the Mississippi and subsisted themselves for one year thereafter, and they are the last of all so removed who have not been reimbursed. All others have been paid according to treaty stipulations, and it is but common justice and fair dealing to treat these remaining few likewise.

Should the legality of justice of this item be called in question by members of the House, I trust you will refer them to the Creek treaty of 1832, and the reports of the honorable Secretary of the Interior and Commissioner of Indian Affairs, of date June 19 and 20, 1888, as printed in Senate Executive Document 198, first session Fiftieth Congress. These reports and the treaty show that the claim is just and ought to be paid. I hope, therefore, that Congress will make the appropriation, so as to enable us poor orphans to start even with our white brothers in the race of life.

Very respectfully,

P. PORTER,
Principal Chief Cherokee Nation.

Hon. JAMES S. SHERMAN,
Chairman Indian Committee, House of Representatives.

Mr. CANNON. I will say to my friend that I have examined the document referred to. If we have to give gifts, I think it is well to give them where needed, to the wards of the nation, as we do here in these miscellaneous items by wholesale. Taking into consideration the condition of the Creeks and the civilized tribes, they are very well off—much better off than the average white man is from a property standpoint—taking the average all over the United States.

After an examination of this document I have no hesitation in saying that the provision is subject to a point of order, and as this is a continuing appropriation, dating back to 1836, which was available up to 1882 under the treaty, in pursuance of which these amounts were paid, it seems to me that this legislation ought not to be had.

Mr. CURTIS. They have all been paid except this bunch of claimants. The provision is no doubt subject to a point of order. We provided in 1901 that this claim and other claims of this class of the Creek Indians should be referred to the Senate as referees; but, as I have remarked, we inserted this provision in this bill because it was represented to the committee that this was the last claim of this class.

Mr. CANNON. Well, upon this document, to which the gentleman refers, no Senate and no auditing officer, in my judgment, would ever pass a cent of these claims.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois withdraw his point of order?

Mr. CANNON. No, sir.

Mr. CURTIS. The provision is undoubtedly subject to a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the support and civilization of the Mission Indians in California, $100,000, to be immediately available: Provided, That out of said sum the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to purchase a suitable tract of land in southern California and to locate thereon such Mission Indians heretofore residing or belonging on the Rancho San Jose del Valle, or Warners Ranch, in San Diego County, Cal., and such other Mission Indians as may not be provided with lands elsewhere, as the Secretary of the Interior may see fit to locate thereon. And the Secretary of the Interior may at any time, in his discretion, cause the land so purchased to be allotted in severalty to the Indians located thereon, under the provisions of the act of Congress entitled "An act to provide for the allotment of land in severalty to Indians on the various reservations and to extend the protection of the laws of the United States and Territories over the Indians, and for other purposes," approved February 8, 1887, in such quantities and to such classes as he may deem expedient: Provided further, That of said amount a sum not exceeding $30,000 may be expended, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, in the removal of said Indians to the said tract, and in the purchase of such building materials, agricultural implements, harness, subsistence supplies, and other necessaries as may be required to properly establish the Indians at their new location.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, I desire to reserve a point of order on this paragraph. In the first place, let me ask how many of these Indians are there?

Mr. SHERMAN. Between two and three hundred.

Mr. CANNON. What is the necessity for purchasing land for them?

Mr. SHERMAN. I explained that matter briefly in a few remarks I made before this bill was taken up. I believe the gentleman was not in the House at the time.

Mr. CANNON. I was not.

Mr. SHERMAN. These Indians have lived for many generations upon property which is known as Warners Ranch, in southern California. Litigation which has covered a period of some years has been finally determined in the appellate court adversely to the Indians, in favor of a man whose name I do not recall, who, as the decision held, owns the fee to the ranch. This decision was made some months ago, and the owner of the land was about to eject the Indians; but he was prevailed upon to permit them to stay there by sufferance until Congress took some action.

The Indian Commissioner in his report, on page 114 and subsequent pages, goes quite fully into a discussion of this matter. An inspector who has been detailed to investigate has made a special report, which is embraced in House Document 119 of the present session of Congress. In that document the inspector reports that there is no available public land in southern California where these Indians could be located. Whatever public land remains in that part of the country is barren, rugged, unproductive. The Indians could not subsist upon it.

The inspector further reports that it would be very expensive to move these Indians from California to some other part of the United States where we have land. Besides, they have lived for generations in that climate and in those environments, and it would he a very great damage to them to attempt to remove them. He reports upon several proposed new locations for the Indians. His report covers offers from eight or ten owners of land at various prices; and this unquestionably is the most advantageous offer that the Government has received. There is no question that this is purely and simply a gratuity, but these Indians must receive help from the Government or they will absolutely starve to death. It has seemed to us that this is the most feasible and economical way in which to dispose of the matter.

Mr. CANNON. The litigation is now ended?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes.

Mr. CANNON. The question has gone to the court of last resort?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes.

Mr. CANNON. And the Indians are to be ejected?

Mr. SHERMAN. They are to be ejected.

Mr. CANNON. Are they to be removed down onto arid lands?

Mr. SHERMAN. Oh, no. The report sets out how much of the land is timber land, how much has water on it, and how much has been cultivated. It would appear from the report that these 2,500 acres are reasonably worth all that is asked for them—$70,000. Thirty thousand dollars is to defray the expenses of moving them and for temporary subsistence.

Mr. CANNON. Then the gentleman is of opinion that this gratuity will end the matter. In other words, that we are not to enter upon irrigation and all that sort of thing.

Mr. SHERMAN. Oh, no; these Indians have been self-supporting. We have never given them anything. They have supported themselves for generations, and it may be that for one more year we might be asked to appropriate a very small sum to help them out, but even that I question. I am perfectly clear in my own mind that after twelve or twenty-four months they will be self-sustaining, the same as they have been heretofore.

The Clerk read, as follows:

For the purpose of removing intruders and placing allottees in unrestricted possession of their allotments, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior and to be immediately available, $15,000; in all, $110,000: Provided, however, That it shall hereafter be unlawful to remove or deport any person from the Indian Territory who is in lawful possession of any lots or parcels of land in any town or city in the Indian Territory which has been designated as a town site under existing laws and treaties, and no part of this appropriation shall be used for the deportation or removal of any person from Indian Territory: Provided, That the just and reasonable share of each member of the Chickasaw, Choctaw, Creek, and Cherokee nations of Indians, in the lands belonging to the said tribes, which each member is entitled to hold in his possession until allotments are made, as provided in the act entitled "An act for the protection of the people of the Indian Territory, and for other purposes," approved June 28, 1898, be, and the same is hereby, declared to be 320 acres for each member of the Chickasaw Nation, 320 acres for each member of the Choctaw Nation, 100 acres for each member of the Creek Nation, and 120 acres for each member of the Cherokee Nation.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. CURTIS. I offer the following amendment: In line 16, after the words "one hundred," add the word "sixty," making it read "160 acres."

Mr. LITTLE. I would suggest that was the agreement of the committee. It is a misprint in the bill.

Mr. CURTIS. Yes; it was left out by mistake.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 16, on page 37, after the words "one hundred" insert the word "sixty;" so as to read "160 acres."

Mr. CURTIS. Also the following amendment: In line 17, after the words "one hundred," I move to strike out the word "twenty," making it read "100 acres." That was the agreement of the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendments offered by the gentleman from Kansas.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN. I offer the following amendment, to correct a typographical error.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 36, in line 23, strike out "ten" and insert in lieu thereof "sixty;" so as to read "$160,000.

Mr. SHERMAN. It simply corrects the total.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to cause to be assembled at the city of St. Louis, in the State of Missouri, at such time and for such period as he may designate, and as a part of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, to be held at the city of St. Louis, in the State of Missouri, pursuant of an act of Congress entitled "An act to provide for celebrating the one hundredth anniversary of the purchase of the Louisiana territory by the United States by holding an international exhibit of arts, manufactures, and the products of the soil, mine, forest, and sea in the city of St. Louis, in the State of Missouri," approved March 3, 1901, such representatives of the different Indian tribes and such exhibits from Indian agencies, schools, and archives as he may deem advisable or necessary to illustrate the past and present conditions of the Indians and the Indian tribes of the United States and progress made by such in education, art, and industry, and the methods of education and government, and such other matters and things as will fully illustrate Indian advancement in civilization, the details of which shall be in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior. And for the purposes of carrying into effect this provision, the sum of $40,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated out of money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated; but the Secretary of the Interior is hereby prohibited from making, or causing to be made, any expenditure or creating any liability on behalf of the United States in excess of the sum hereby appropriated.

Mr. CANNON. I make a point of order on that paragraph. It covers new legislation, and is therefore not in order on the bill; second, if it were in order, it does not belong to this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from New York care to discuss the point of order?

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not care to discuss the point of order. Of course what is proposed is antagonistic to the rule; there is no question about that; but the appropriation is the same as made for other expositions. It is appropriated on the same bill as was the money for the exposition at Omaha, for the exposition at Chicago, and, if my memory is correct, also at Nashville. Of course I concede that the point of order is well taken if the gentleman insists upon it.

Mr. CANNON. It seems to me that we better keep the expositions free of this and under one set of appropriations, in one bill, so that we may know where we are at.

Mr. SHERMAN. If the gentleman will permit me to ask this question: The purpose of his point of order, then, is to strike the provision from this bill? It does not indicate that the gentleman is opposed to the general proposition of appropriating for this purpose at the St. Louis Exposition, or does the gentleman prefer not to answer that question?

Mr. CANNON. I have no objection to answering it. I am perfectly willing, on full consideration, taking into view the legislation that has been had and the necessities of the exposition, and seeing how much it is going to cost in addition to what we are already committed to, I am perfectly willing, with other members of the House, to consider it. Just how much sense there is in exhibiting the progress in civilization of the Indian I do not know. How far it might be a drawing card to help the gate receipts would be another question.

Mr. SHERMAN. It would draw all right.

Mr. CANNON. I really have no antagonism to this provision, but I think that all the expeditures ought to be considered together as a whole; that is all.

Mr. SHERMAN. I am glad to know that is the position of the gentleman.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the Chair understand that the gentleman insists on the point of order?

Mr. CANNON. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained.

The Clerk read as follows:

For pay of physician, New York agency, $600.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I offer the amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend by adding after line 7, on page 39, the following:

"To enable the Secretary of the Interior to remove certain Indians now residing in the vicinity of Missouri and Wenatchee, in the State of Washington, known as Wenatchi, to the Colville Indian Reservation, and to properly establish and temporarily maintain them, the sum of $12,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be immediately available."

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to reserve a point of order, but will not absolutely make it until the gentleman has an opportunity to make an explanation of his amendment.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. Chairman, there are 82 families of these Indians, consisting of 166 persons, according to the report of the special agent who has investigated their condition. They are located on the Wenache and Columbia rivers, in the north central part of the State of Washington, in a dry, arid region. Quite a number of these Indians have settled upon Government lands and some of them have proven up. Others have not. The lands upon which they have settled, however, are of very little value without irrigation, and a great many of them are incapable of being irrigated; so that these Indians are upon lands that are almost wholly unproductive.

I have here the letter of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to the Secretary of the Interior, which was transmitted to Congress about the 20th of January, in which he sets out the condition of these Indians and very urgently recommends this appropriation. In fact, he was so urgent in the matter that he recommended that it be submitted by a separate bill, in the hope that it would be gotten through before it could be made available in the Indian appropriation bill. I think, however, if we can get it on this bill, we will probably have the money available more quickly than by a separate bill.

The statement of the Commissioner is that the condition of these Indians at the present time is deplorable. They are poor, unclothed, and, as I said, can make nothing off of their farms, and it is a matter of absolute necessity to make some provision for their future sustenance.

Now, the object is to transfer these Indians from where they now are onto the Colville Indian Reservation. The securing of the lands for the Indians will not cost the Government a cent. The lands of this reservation were set aside by Executive order in 1872 for the benefit of the Colville Indians and "such other Indians as the Government might see fit to place there." According to the report of the special agent, these Indians are willing to remove to the Colville Indian Reservation. They can get good lands there that they can farm, and in that way sustain themselves.

I agree with the statement of the Commissioner in his letter, that it is the policy of the Department to make the Indians support themselves as much as possible; that it is the policy of the Department not to render assistance to Indians except where it is absolutely necessary. In this case it seems that it is absolutely necessary that the Government should render some assistance to these Indians by transferring them from the lands they now occupy to lands upon the Colville Indian Reservation. It is necessary, of course, that some amount should be provided for the purchasing of tools and implements to be used upon the farms, and a small amount, as the Commissioner says here, for their sustenance for about six months.

In addition to the report of the special agent, the Department ordered the Indian agent of the Colville Indian Reservation to go down and look into the condition of these Indians. He did that, and reported their condition, as the Commissioner says, to be deplorable; that they are poor, that they need some assistance, and he also made careful detailed estimates as to what would be absolutely necessary for the care, encouragement, and aid of these Indians for the first six months. That estimate was a little over $15,000. The Commissioner has gone over it carefully, and has cut out such items as he thought could be dispensed with, and he says he believes if they are removed from where they are to the Colville Indian Reservation and sustained for six months, they can then care for themselves, and he urges that this be done. He believes that $12,000 is sufficient for this purpose.

It seems to me that this provision ought to be placed in this bill here. It does not require any expenditure upon the part of the Government for the purchase of land upon which to locate these Indians, but it simply provides for the removal of the Indians and for their sustenance for about six months. From what I know of the country there I am satisfied that the Commissioner is right. The Government will be put to no further expense for these Indians. They will care for and maintain themselves. The Commissioner says this money ought to be made available at once, so as to be used before the crop season opens up this year. This should be done. They should be placed on this reservation in time to erect their houses and plant their crops for that year. I trust the point of order will not be insisted upon, and hope this amendment will be adopted.

Mr. SHERMAN. I desire to ask the gentleman about two questions. I understand from your remarks that it is not necessary for us to purchase any land. That this is purely an Executive order reservation to which the Indians are to be removed, and that they have the right to put them there.

Mr. JONES of Washington, That is correct.

Mr. SHERMAN. And, further, that after they are there and have a little bit of a start it will not thereafter be necessary for us to appropriate anything for their assistance.

Mr. JONES of Washington. That is my judgment, and that is the judgment of the Department.

Mr. SHERMAN. I withdraw the point of order, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken; and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to have printed with my remarks a letter from the Commissioner relating to this matter.

There was no objection.

The letter is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
OFFICE OF INDIAN AFFAIRS,
Washington, January 11, 1902.

THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.

SIR: The office has the honor to invite your attention to the matter of securing an appropriation from Congress for the purpose of defraying the expenses of removing the Wenatchi Indians from their present location on the public domain in the vicinity of Mission and Wenatchee, Wash., to the Colville Reservation in said State, and for the purpose of establishing them thereon and subsisting them for a short period.

The deplorable condition of this band of Indians has been frequently brought to the attention of this office during recent years, and in January, 1900, Special Allotting Agent W. E. Casson was sent among them for the purpose of assisting them in their land matters and to make additional allotments to them on the public domain under the fourth section of the general allotment act approved February 8, 1887.

During the summer of that year Mr. Casson submitted several full and detailed reports respecting these Indians, in which he made it clear that it was impossible to provide any considerable number of these Indians with lands suitable for homes in that locality. He suggested as the only solution of the land problem of said Indians their removal to the Colville Indian Reservation. He stated that the Indians themselves had expressed a desire to remove to that reserve. Subsequently the matter was taken up by this office and correspondence had with Agent Anderson, of the Colville Agency, respecting the matter of such removal. The office became fully convinced that at least a portion of the Wenatchi Indians should be allowed to go to the Colville Reservation, where an abundance of suitable land could be found for them upon which they could establish homes and become independent and self-supporting. The fact that they would then be under the protecting care of an Indian agent who could give them counsel and advice in the conduct of their affairs was an additional reason for favoring such removal.

With a report dated June 23, 1900, Mr. Casson submitted a list containing the names of the Wenatchi Indians, 166 in all. From this list it appeared that fully one-half held lands. A considerable number of the heads of families had a number of years previously entered lands under the homestead laws, although in but few cases had the Indians made their final proofs. Mr. Casson assisted them in perfecting their entries so far as practicable. He made but eighteen allotments under the fourth section.

In considering the question of removing these people to the Colville Reservation, the office at first contemplated the removal only of those who had no lands where they are now located. After full consideration and considerable correspondence it became apparent that the undertaking had developed into a much larger and more extensive one than had been anticipated. With an inconsiderable number of exceptions, the lands now held by the Wenatchi are of little value and unsuitable as homes, and both Agent Anderson and Mr. Casson express the opinion that it would be better to permit practically the entire band to surrender the lands now held by them and remove to the reservation.

There were not sufficient funds at the disposal of the office to defray the expense of removal and of subsisting and giving the Indians a proper start on the reservation if a majority of the band were to be removed, and the matter of effecting the removal last year was therefore abandoned. Under date of June 7, 1901, however, Agent Anderson was informed that it was the purpose of the office to ask Congress for a small appropriation to defray the expenses incident to the removal, and in order that the Department might have definite information he was instructed to visit the Indians and ascertain their actual needs, find out what ones would probably require assistance, and what things they would require in the way of implements and utensils and provisions. He was told that assistance should be limited so far as it possibly could be, but that it was recognized if these Indians were removed that it would be necessary to subsist them at least during a portion of the first year, and also to provide them with houses, some fences, and farming implements, etc. The office indicated, however, that he should impress upon the Indians the fact that they would be expected to depend upon their own resources so far as possible, and that it was not the purpose of the Department to aid them further than was absolutely necessary to give them a start in their new homes.

The office is now in receipt of a report from Agent Anderson, dated December 30, 1901, transmitting a detailed estimate of the things needed by these people in order to properly establish them in their new homes and give them an opportunity to prepare themselves for future self-support. The agent's estimate is based on the assumption that all of these Indians will remove, there being 82 families, comprising 162 persons.

His total estimate amounts to $15,636.25, of which amount $1,475 is for subsistence supplies for a period of six months. The largest single items in the estimate are those for wagons, harness, and farming machinery.

In submitting this estimate, Agent Anderson states that these Indians are all very poor—in fact, poorer than any band of Indians connected with the Colville Agency—and that if they are removed it will be necessary to subsist them during at least a portion of the first year. He states that he is unalterably opposed to the issue of rations excepting to Indians who, by reason of age or other good cause, are unable to provide for themselves.

He adds that inasmuch as the facts relating to the unfortunate condition and situation of the Wenatchi Indians are so well known to the office it will be unnecessary for him to enter into details in that connection. He says their condition is indeed unfortunate and deplorable, and he earnestly urges the necessity of removing them from their present location at the earliest practicable date, and expresses the hope that Congress, through the efforts of this Department, may be induced to make a sufficient appropriation to accomplish that end.

The list of articles needed in the event of removal, submitted by Agent Anderson, has been carefully examined, and it is deemed proper to state that the estimate for subsistence supplies is very conservative. Some of the other articles named, however, it is believed the Indians could get along without, while as to others it is thought they can be purchased at a smaller cost than indicated in the agent's estimate. Again, the agent assumes that all of the Indians will remove, and his estimates are on the basis of 82 families. The latter number is considered to be rather large, and it is also doubtful whether all the Wenatchi will remove. If they do, the office feels that some of them who hold lands at present of considerable value where they are should be required to dispose of the same and use the proceeds in establishing themselves on the Colville Reservation. The office is opposed to helping Indians where they can help themselves.

As a general proposition this office has for a number of years been opposed to the further colonization of Indians upon reservations, believing that they will more successfully and satisfactorily work out the problem of their civilization intermingled with the whites on the public domain. It is felt, however, that the case of the Wenatchi is an exceptional one, and that their future welfare depends upon their being located somewhere upon lands where they can make homes for themselves and procure the means of livelihood. This, apparently, they will never be able to do where they now reside.

Another feature of their case is the fact that the local authorities in the vicinity of Wenatchi and Mission are unable or disinclined to prohibit the sale of intoxicating drinks to these Indians, and their condition in this particular is becoming daily more deplorable. On the Colville Reservation it would be difficult to procure liquor, and, besides, they would be under the care of the Indian agent, whose duty it would be to prevent the sale of liquor to them.

The Colville Reservation was set aside by Executive order dated April 9, 1872, for the use of certain tribes of Indians therein named and "such other Indians as the Department of the Interior may see fit to locate thereon." Should the proposed appropriation be made the Department could therefore authorize the removal of these Indians to that reservation.

While it is believed that the estimate of Agent Anderson is not excessive, and that all of the money could be used to good advantage in establishing the Wenatchi on the Colville Reserve, it is thought that by the exercise of reasonable economy $12,000 will be sufficient to accomplish the purpose. The office has therefore prepared a draft of a bill, in duplicate, providing for the appropriation of said amount. In this connection the office desires to urge the importance of securing this appropriation in ample time to effect the removal during the coming spring. The appropriation should therefore be available not later than the 1st of April next. If, however, the appropriation should be carried as an item in the Indian appropriation bill, it is feared it would be too late to effect the removal this year.

It is therefore recommended that Congress be urged to pass the proposed bill as an independent measure at an early day in order that this matter may be taken up by this office and the removal accomplished in good season during the coming spring so that the Indians may be enabled to raise at least some of the necessaries of life the present year in their new homes.

This subject was discussed by the office in its annual report for 1900, page 174, and again in the annual report for 1901, page 166, to which attention is respectfully invited.

Two copies of this report are herewith inclosed.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. A. JONES, Commissioner.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I suggest that we go back to page 25, on which lines 13, 14, and 15 were temporarily passed over. I find on examination, that these lines are similar to the language contained in previous appropriation bills, and the provision is under the treaty.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois insist on the point of order?

Mr. CANNON. No; the gentleman has explained that it is not new legislation. I had marked it, and marked it in error.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

For construction of ditches and reservoirs, purchase and use of irrigating tools and appliances, and purchase of water rights on Indian reservations, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior and subject to his control, $150,000: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior may employ such number of superintendents of irrigation, who shall be skilled irrigation engineers, not to exceed two, as in his judgment may be necessary to secure the construction of ditches and other irrigation works in a substantial and workmanlike manner.

Mr. CANNON. I move to strike out the last word, for the purpose of asking the gentleman what necessity there is for the increase for $50,000 which is provided for here.

Mr. SHERMAN. The necessity for it is, the work which has heretofore been done has been very valuable, and the bureau believed that an additional sum could be expended to the advantage of the Government and the Indians. The Commissioner appeared personally before the sub and full committee, and explained in detail what work they had done and what they had in contemplation. The Commissioner's last annual report is quite full on this subject.

Mr. CANNON. Then, this is in continuation of a public work in progress?

Mr. SHERMAN. Oh, yes, indeed.

Mr. CANNON. And is purely from a charitable standpoint for the irrigation of lands upon which are wards of the nation?

Mr. SHERMAN. It is a little more than purely charitable, from a practical and business standpoint, because it eventually makes self-sustaining Indians for whom we are obliged now to make appropriation—obliged as we are obliged to make any gratuitous appropriation.

The Clerk read as follows:

To enable the Secretary of the Interior to begin the preliminary work in the construction of a reservoir on the Gila River, in the Territory of Arizona, at a favorable point near the San Carlos Indian Agency, for storing the flood waters of said river, said water to be used for the benefit of the Indians on the Gila River and such others as may be allotted land there, the excess of waters to be used for reclaiming vacant public lands and supplying present appropriated water rights. The Secretary of the Interior is also authorized to acquire and prepare the dam site, and do such detailed work as may be necessary for preparing specification for advertising for bids for the various classes of work connected with the construction of the dam and its appurtenances, and to prepare plans and estimates of cost of construction (with Indian labor, so far as the same can be profitably used), and designate the vacant public lands which can be irrigated from the stored water of said reservoir; the sum of $50,000 is hereby appropriated, or so much thereof as may be necessary. The Secretary shall report fully at the next session of Congress as to the details herein enumerated as to the cost and benefits of said works and of bids received for the construction and completion of said reservoir.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, on that paragraph I desire to make the point of order. It is not work authorized by existing law.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. The gentleman, I trust, will reserve the point of order.

Mr. CANNON. Yes; I will reserve the point of order.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, the day before yesterday the gentleman from Arizona by unanimous consent was given thirty minutes to discuss this provision.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois wish to discuss the point of order?

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. He reserves the point of order, and I have thirty minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois reserves the point of order?

Mr. CANNON. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. According to previous arrangement the gentleman from Arizona is recognized for thirty minutes.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Mr. Chairman, I see the gentleman who has reserved the point of order is retiring.

Mr. CANNON. I will return in a moment, I will say to my friend.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. This is an appropriation for the purpose of providing a large number of peaceful Indians on the Gila River, in Arizona, with the means of making a living. There are some six or eight thousand such Indians in Arizona who have for ages made their living by means of artificial application of water to the soil. They have been peaceful Indians. Being such, they have received less recognition at the hands of the Government than have those whose lives have been spent in lawless and bloody pursuits.

Their condition excites our sympathy and demands our aid. Their ancestors cultivated the fields, over which they now roam penniless and helpless, yet willing to provide for themselves the necessaries of life if only given the chance. They can not live without water. Their former supply has been cut off, and the law protects the appropriators. This condition confronts us: Several thousand Indians without means of support, every one of whom will become a charge on the Government, can be made self-supporting at no cost to the Government. What course is dictated by common business sense, by statesmanship, by humanity?

The fear that some white men may be benefited must not blind our Indian devotees to the real advantages which the Indian will secure under this appropriation.

I am convinced that my friend from Illinois has raised the point of order on this item in the bill through fear that Congress may by favorable action on it commit, in a way, the country to the general project of irrigating the arid lands of the Western States and Territories. I here disclaim any such purpose in this item of this bill. It was put on the bill in committee on my motion, but I never imagined that it could be construed as a precedent for general irrigation of the arid region. Nor can it be reasonably so construed by any man.

It is true that if this appropriation is allowed and the dam finally built it will not only supply these 6,000 or 8,000 Indians with ample water for every want, with no expense to the Government, but will in addition reclaim sufficient land to pay every dollar the Government advances in this humane and urgent cause. I do not deny that the white man will be benefited ultimately by this work. On the contrary, many will be benefited, but at their own cost, and I am glad to know that they will.

The white man must pay for what he gets, and under this measure will also pay for what the Indian gets, and still your opposition is so determined that you attempt to strike the measure down by a "point of order" instead of taking the sense of the House by a motion to strike out the clause. I am willing to submit this question to a vote of the House. You are not. You have, or think you have, the parliamentary advantage of me. If the gentleman will withdraw his point of order and move to strike out the appropriation, I shall be content with whatever result the vote on that motion discloses.

Mr. Chairman, these Indians to be benefited by this item are not savages in the sense that the Apache is a savage. They have climbed a rung or two upward and their further elevation is not hopeless. Something can be made of them by giving them a chance to work. Withholding this chance they must starve or steal. It is with you. The small advance they have made you are not only stopping, but are in cold blood relegating them to a condition of enforced savagery and necessary lawlessness. They have lived on these lands for several hundred years.

There is no place to send them. They can not support themselves on this land, and there remains no better land to give them. What are they to do, and what are you doing? Not being able to move them, and they being unable to move themselves; not willing to give them without cost all that is necessary for their support, and they unable of themselves otherwise to get it, the case becomes pathetic, and your action may furnish you what consolation it can. I have not been an Indian sentimentalist, but I am possessed of an ordinary share of human sympathy.

Mr. Chairman, I repeat we can without one cent of cost to the Government supply these Indians with water and prevent for all time any possible demand on the Treasury for their support. Not only this, we can gather similar tribes of peaceful and willing Indians there and supply them all from this great reservoir, and thus reduce your annual appropriations for the support of Arizona Indians, and after all this is done more than 100,000 acres of new land, at a cost of less than $10 an acre, can be reclaimed, and all the water rights under the Florence Canal maintained at necessary flow and the United States not lose a dollar, but, on the contrary, place in her Treasury an amount of cash exceeding her original outlay by several millions of dollars. What is the matter? Is it possible that a man can be found to oppose such a beneficence. Yet you throw away millions of dollars in this very bill to civilize and educate the Indian.

Mr. Chairman, in this measure I present the only practical way to educate or civilize the Indian. He must work to live. Give him the chance to work, and if he idles let him starve. Surround him with the daily evidence of civilization. Let these particular Indians see their white neighbors, with more burdens to bear, carving their way to better conditions. Let them see the white man's home, his comforts, his schools, his churches, his stores, shops, fields, and granaries, built and sustained in conditions similar to his, and if civilization is possible to him, he will thus, and thus only, obtain it. Measuring my words, I assert with emphasis that any dollar spent in the line of this appropriation is worth more to the cause of Indian education than any ten dollars named in this bill.

This is no scheme to irrigate the arid lands. Allay such fears. A bill for that purpose will be brought before this House and the Senate, and it has my warmest sympathy and will receive my ardent support. This is simply now and here a question of humanity, of justice, of right, and of expediency as well. I wish to appeal to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] not to press his point of order against this provision. If he could only see this as I see it, I know that his heart, so full of the best impulses of our nature, would relent at beholding the misery and wretchedness which his act is sure to perpetuate. I know if he could see as I see the happy costless homes this measure will build for the homeless in his district as well as mine his great affection for our race would overcome his sense of duty and let this measure "have its perfect work."

Let me commend to my friend facts and considerations which he will find hard to resist. They are strongly recommended to our favorable consideration.

Mr. BELL. Who recommended it?

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. It is contained in a publication of the Department of the Interior entitled "Water-Supply," Irrigation Papers, United States Geological Survey, No. 33, and deals with the storage of water on Gila River, Arizona. On page 92 of the report, where a summary of the whole report is found, the following language is used in speaking of the San Carlos Reservoir:

The greatest economy to the Government, whether the relief of the Indian alone is considered or the general development of the arid lands in the neighborhood of the reservation is taken as a basis, lies in the construction of a large reservoir. It is shown that the Government can build such a large reservoir, give water to the Indians without charging them for it, and sell the remainder of the water impounded at such figure as would rapidly return all the original investment made by the Federal authorities.

5. In the event of the construction of a large dam there will be built up in the valley of the Gila River, where a desert now exists, a community of fully 40,000 souls, and the creation of many million dollars of taxable wealth without permanent outlay on the part of the Government.

6. The cost per acre-foot of storage capacity of the dams as planned in this report at the three principal reservoir sites upon which estimates have been made is as follows:

Cost per acre-foot of water stored.

Location.	Amount.	Cost per acre-foot.
	Acre-feet.
The Buttes	174,040	$15.19
Riverside	221,138	9.01
San Carlos	241,396	4.30

From this it will be seen that the cost of storing water at The Buttes per acre-foot is 3.5 times the cost at San Carlos, and that the cost at Riverside is 2.1 times the cost at San Carlos.

And speaking further on this question the report, on page 93, says:

The argument in favor of the construction of a reservoir for the storage of the waters of the Gila River by the United States Government is stronger, perhaps, than for any other project in the country.

1. The Government has expended large sums of money for the introduction of irrigation on the Indian reservations where it is desired to educate the Indian into agricultural habits as a means of his civilization.

This is a well-established and wise public policy, and has already been productive of much good, but is always in the nature of an experiment, and more or less difficulty and uncertainty is attendant upon the attempt to induce the Indians to accept this mode of livelihood. In the present case we have a tribe of Indians who have for centuries been engaged in agriculture by irrigation, and who were, until recently, the only successful irrigators in Arizona. These Indians have been deprived of their water supply through the agency of the white man, directly encouraged by the United States Government. It is an imperative obligation of honor that their supply should be restored to them, and the only practical means of this restoration is by storage on the Gila River.

If the humanities are unavailingly appealed to, let us look at the problem from the modern, heartless, commercial standpoint and we will find cogent reasons for action, and I therefore submit from the same report a Financial summary of results.

Total water supply to be delivered to the point of diversion from San Carlos reservoir for irrigation each year	acre-feet	241,396
Ultimate requirement for Indians	do	40,000
Remainder available for irrigation of public domain or private lands	acre-feet	201,396
Assume a duty of water of 2 acre-feet or 24 inches in depth used each year on each irrigated acre; this would permit the irrigation of lands outside the reservation to the extent of	acres	100,698
There are 389,211 acres of arid public land in the district to be supplied from this system. Assume that the water is given to the Indians without cost to the Government and that these 100,698 acres must pay the total cost of the works, then the necessary charge per acre for the remaining water rights to be sold would be		$10.24
It is believed that the public lands with this water right could, at this rate, be sold within a year.
If 3,000 Indians have to be fed by the Government at a cost per ration per day of 10 cents, the annual expenses would be		$109,500
The capitalization of $109,500 at 4 per cent would represent the practical permanent expense of feeding these tribes. This is equivalent to a permanent Government debt, which would be liquidated by this construction, of		$2,737,500
The value of the 100,698 acres of irrigated public lands that would be taxable would be $50 per acre, or a total of		5,034,900
The saving, without expense to the Government, by irrigation of 20,000 acres of lands belonging to the Indians has been shown to be		2,737,500
Total increase in value, without public expense		7,772,400

There will also be a large increase in value of taxable town property, not estimated upon.

Observing what has been said, we are ready for the recommendations contained in the last of the report, which is using its very language, "Construct the San Carlos dam."

Mr. Chairman, it is proven to a demonstration that this work can be accomplished without expense to the Government and in doing it give the Indians free water for all time.

Mr. PALMER. Will their other land be sold?

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. It may be and it may well be, the proceeds being applied to the payment of expenses incurred by the Government in building the dam.

What more can I say, with the point of order still being pressed by the gentleman from Illinois. Is it possible that he can do any act which will condemn six or eight thousand Indians to possible starvation, retard the development of our common country, lock the desert against home invasion, when by a word he can change the picture to homes of plenty for those now hungry, schools for children now ignorant, and open up the waste places to man's happy habitation without one dollar of expense to our Government? I am sure that he feels that this is only an entering wedge to the great problem of national irrigation. I know he is impelled by a high sense of duty in his objection to that great enterprise and to everything advancing the possibilities of its success at this time.

If this were a scheme or a bill or a measure looking to the irrigation of the arid lands, I would agree with my friend that it should come from the committee as an independent bill and be considered by the House in the regular way. But this is not such. It is sui generis, unlike any other case in the United States. This work will be done one of these days. Why not do it now? If private capital shall finally do it, which is hardly possible, what will become of these wards of the Government which you profess to care for in this bill? They will cost more, yea, a thousand times more, than this dam can ever cost. This is an urgent necessity. It should not be permitted to pass another day without favorable action. I sincerely hope the gentleman from Illinois will withdraw his point of order, though I do not concede that the point is good.

Mr. CANNON. I would be glad to have unanimous consent for a very few minutes to reply to the gentleman, reserving my point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. How much time does the gentleman require?

Mr. CANNON. Not over ten minutes, and I do not think that I will take so much as that.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that he may be allowed ten minutes' time in which to speak on a point of order. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, an appeal, made, I have no doubt, in good faith, of the kind that the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. SMITH] has made, is always effective, and sometimes runs away with the judgment by exciting the sympathies. That there are Indians in Arizona there is no doubt; that they are as well off there as the average in other Territories, substantially, there is no doubt; better off in many respects than the Indians way up toward the northern boundary, the forty-ninth parallel, and not perhaps as well off as the Indians are in New York, where for many generations they have lived with the humane white farmer all about them; but I never have understood that even with all that good chance and good provision for them that they are entirely self-supporting or entirely the equal of the white farmer around them.

Now, I want the attention of the committee just for a moment to see what this proposition is. I hold in my hand Water Supply and Irrigation Papers, issued by the United States Geological Survey, No. 33. I have not been able to read it very closely, and yet I have dogeared it. I have done for this investigation what we are all compelled to do, with so many things to do; taken a hop, skip, and jump through it, and I find substantially the following facts to be true: This is to construct, I believe, if it should go on, a reservoir at a favorable point near the San Carlos Indian Agency for storing the flood waters of the river, and so on, and so on. Now I believe if this appropriation is made it is first proposed in the beginning to constuct what is called the San Carlos dam. The San Carlos dam, according to the estimate here, would cost $1,038,000 in round numbers. That is for the mere dam, without anything else now for irrigation. I read on a little further in this report and I find that this reservoir will last, when the dam is constructed, twenty-nine years in round numbers. That is to say, that the silt from the river will fill it up in twenty-nine years.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. At what height of dam is that?

Mr. CANNON. Well, I think 150 feet. I am not sure as to that, but as it is proposed to make it.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. I read sixty-three years in the report.

Mr. CANNON. Look at page 77.

Mr. CURTIS. It is on page 40.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. All right; go ahead. I did not want to interrupt further than to find the data.

Mr. CANNON. Twenty-nine years. Well, now, the man who makes this report says:

Oh, yes, we ought to look out now, and if we start this irrigation work it would be the height of cruelty not to continue it later on, because it would just go out—snuff out like a candle.

And so he turns round and says:

When that is gone we can build a dam at Riverside that will cost $1,992,000, that the cost per acre-foot there will be $9.01, that the cost per acre-foot to irrigate the first would be $8.60, and when that fills up, still we can build a dam at the Buttes to cost $2,643,000.

Now, irrigated from the above reservoir would be 87,000 acres; needed for the Indians, 20,000 acres. Now, there is a good deal of sympathy for Lo, the poor Indian, but there is a good deal more for committing the Government there to the irrigation for the white man.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. I would suggest to the gentleman if you will take every figure you have named right now and support these Indians without it, going to the expense that your ingenuity has driven you, that you will find for the keeping of these Indians the investment necessary to build every one of them would be a very light cost, take it even then.

Mr. CANNON. I will take it for the support of the Pima Indians, and those are the Indians, I take it.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. They are the Pimas and Maricopas and two or three peaceful tribes.

Mr. CANNON. Was it $10,000?

Mr. CURTIS. Ten thousand dollars we appropriated for them a few years ago.

Mr. CANNON. And I believe that has not all been expended.

Mr. CURTIS. No, sir.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. You are talking about a different reservation. Let us not get off into something that we do not understand. Will my friend from Kansas [Mr. CURTIS], in saying $10,000 for the Pimas, please tell me on what reservation?

Mr. CURTIS. On the Pima Reservation.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Where is the Pima Reservation?

Mr. CURTIS. There are 7,500 of those Indians, and they are the Indians referred to in the report. The reservation is about 37 miles below the San Carlos dam site.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Where is the Pima Reservation?

Mr. CURTIS. I say 37 miles below San Carlos.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. I say the Pima Reservation is not within 120 miles of San Carlos, and is not on the Gila River at all.

Mr. CURTIS. That is so much worse for your proposition. Then you would have to carry the water 120 miles; but if you will read page 18 of the report on your desk you will find the Pima Indians are located on Gila River.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. It has never been proposed to do that. They are on another river, and you would have to cross three mountain ranges to get there.

Mr. CURTIS. Then you are referring to another band of Indians.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. I am referring to the same Pimas that are mentioned in the appropriation bill as the Pima Reservation.

Mr. CANNON. After all said and done, with the mildness of the climate, I believe the Indians now in Arizona, so far as comfort is concerned, are better off than the average Indians are in the United States. Now, I want to say another thing, that with white people helping them by grants from the Treasury of the United States has a tendency to pauperize them.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Yes; it does, and that is what I am opposed to.

Mr. CANNON. I am speaking of white people. How in the name of all that is good, following the policy that we have, do you expect the Indian will rise superior to the white man, and that he will be civilized, when under similar conditions the white man will be pauperized?

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. That principle would strike out every appropriation in this bill, I submit.

Mr. CANNON. I understand that, and I understand what the sentiment is that is touched so artfully by the humanitarians throughout the country who do not understand much about the subject. You can not strike it out, and therefore we will go on pauperizing the Indian.

Well, now, as we pauperize the Indian, I would sooner pauperize him by the appropriation of $10,000 every year, or $10,000 every two years, than to enter upon this scheme of irrigation that inside of sixty years will involve the building of three dams, one at a cost of over a million dollars, another at a cost of $2,000,000, and another at a cost of nearly $3,000,000, besides the employees, besides the maintenance, and besides other things that are a great deal more for the benefit of the white man than of the Indian.

Now to my point of order. This work is not authorized by existing law. It is authorized by this legislation. Not only for the Indians, but the excess of water is to be used for reclaiming vacant public lands and supplying present appropriated water rights. We are going to condemn present appropriated water rights, or buy them, and so on, and so on. It is legislation from beginning to end, coupled with appropriation, and therefore is amenable to the rule.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Mr. Chairman, on that question I wish to say that it is not new legislation except at the point indicated, and I will move to amend by striking out the particular words the gentleman has named. It can not be otherwise subject to the point of order, because every single line in this provision is in it by virtue of or in continuance of appropriations heretofore made. The money has been appropriated three separate years for the investigation of this question of the supply of water to these Indians.

This has continued from year to year. It has been again incorporated in the bill just as a hundred other items have been placed in it, and if this provision is subject to a point of order every page has provisions likewise subject to the very same point. I claim that, appropriations having heretofore been made for this identical purpose, an appropriation in continuance of that purpose is within the rule and the point of order can not be maintained. It is not new legislation, for other appropriation bills carried money for the same purpose—the same work, the same scheme, the same thing.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman desire to be heard further on the point of order?

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Except what I have stated, it has been carried in the appropriation bill from year to year, certainly for two Congresses, and has just the same claim to remain in the bill as any one of the preceding dozen items or dozen pages.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from New York [Mr. SHERMAN], chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. SHERMAN. Why, Mr. Chairman, I simply offer a single suggestion. At least twice before there have been appropriations for surveying the Gila River. The surveys have been made. Reports are now before Congress for its action. This section of the bill proposes, in pursuance of those surveys, of that investigation, and of those reports, to make contracts for the work covered by those surveys and those reports. It also, of course, provides for further investigations of the same subject.

It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that the appropriations heretofore made have already inaugurated a public work, and that the appropriation here contemplated is a continuation of that public work.

The CHAIRMAN. This paragraph proposes the beginning of preliminary work for the construction of a reservoir on the Gila River in Arizona. It also authorizes the Secretary of the Interior—

To acquire and prepare the dam site, and do such detailed work as may be necessary for preparing specification for advertising for bids for the various classes of work connected with the construction of the dam and its appurtenances, and to prepare plans and estimates of cost of construction (with Indian labor, so far as the same can be profitably used), and designate the vacant public lands which can be irrigated from the stored water of said reservoir.

It also provides that this shall be done for the storing of the flood waters of the Gila River for the benefit of the Indians. And further, "the excess waters to be used for reclaiming vacant public lands and supplying present appropriated water rights." The Chair knows of no existing law which authorizes an appropriation for the purpose of reclaiming public lands or for the purpose of furnishing waters for the irrigation of lands in private ownership, as is undoubtedly contemplated by the provision. The chairman of the committee and the gentleman from Arizona have stated that this provision is, in their opinion, simply a continuation of a work heretofore authorized, an appropriation having heretofore been made for a survey of and report upon a dam at the point contemplated in this provision. It was held in a very notable case that the making of a survey to ascertain the feasibility of proposed public works was not such a beginning of work as would authorize an appropriation in an appropriation bill. That ruling was made February 14, 1899, and the Chair will ask the Clerk to read it.

The Clerk read as follows:

On February 14, 1899, the sundry civil appropriation bill was under consideration in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, when Mr. WILLIAM P. HEPBURN, of Iowa, offered an amendment authorizing the President to purchase land necessary to construct the Nicaragua Canal; authorizing the President to direct the Secretary of War to construct the canal of a certain specified capacity; appropriating $115,000,000 for the work, and specifying various details relating to the administration of the work.

Mr. JOSEPH G. CANNON made a point of order against this amendment, as follows:

First, the amendment is not germane; second, the amendment is obnoxious to Rule XXI, in this, that it proposes legislation; third, that it appropriates money not authorized by existing law; fourth, it appropriates money not in pursuance of a public work or object in progress.

Mr. HEPBURN thereupon cited the act of March 2, 1895, whereby Congress had appropriated for a board of engineer officers to inspect and report on the feasibility, permanence, and cost of construction and completion of the canal; and the act of 1898, whereby provision was made for continuing the surveys and examinations—

After debate, and on February 15, 1899, the Chairman ruled:

The committee will observe that the point raised by the gentleman in charge of the bill does not affect the merits of the bill relating to the construction of the Nicaragua Canal. The point raised is one purely of a parliamentary character, and simply relates to the construction of the rule that was invoked by the gentleman who has the appropriation bill in charge. The bill, as the committee will remember, is a general appropriation bill, and when we reached the point on page 74 indicated by the Clerk the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HEPBURN] arose and presented an amendment, which has been read from the Clerk's desk, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] raised the following points against it. He said:

"Mr. Chairman, I desire to make the point of order against this amendment. First, the amendment is not germane; second, the amendment is obnoxious to Rule XXI in this, that it proposes legislation; third, that it appropriates money not authorized by existing law; fourth, it appropriates money not in pursuance of a public work or object in progress."

The rule referred to by the gentleman reads as follows:

"2. No appropriation shall be reported in any general appropriation bill, or be in order as an amendment thereto, for any expenditure not previously authorized by law, unless in continuation of appropriations for such public works and objects as are already in progress; nor shall any provision changing existing law be in order in any general appropriation bill or in any amendment thereto."

The gentleman from Iowa who offered the amendment, in answer, insisted that the amendment is permissible because it is in continuation of public works already in progress; and in support of that he cited to the Chair a law that was adopted by Congress in 1895 providing for surveys and a supplementary law of 1898 making additional appropriation. In regard to determining whether this law can be construed as having established the public works, namely, the construction of this canal, it is important to examine the language itself. The committee will note that it says "for the purpose of ascertaining the feasibility and cost of the construction and completion of the Nicaraguan Canal, etc., $20,000 dollars are appropriated." The language clearly indicates that it is for the purpose of ascertaining facts that will guide the action of Congress in the future, without committing it to any policy whatever.

Now, the amendment of 1898 does not enlarge the scope or purpose for which the original appropriation was made. It simply increases the amount, but limits it to these purposes, namely, to ascertaining a state of facts that can be used for the public hereafter. The wisdom of that will be noted on reflection, because of the wide divergence of opinion as to the manner in which this Nicaragua Canal should be constructed, whether by private enterprise or by the Government guaranteeing the bonds that should be issued, or whether the Government should take a copartnership with private individuals; or, as proposed by the gentleman from Iowa, take the construction upon itself and obtain the control and sovereignty over the territory through which the canal is to be constructed.

So that to the Chair it is entirely clear that the law cited by the gentleman from Iowa is not susceptible of the construction suggested by him, but is to ascertain the facts, leaving the Government of the United States entirely clear hereafter to determine whether it will embark in such an enterprise or not. Indeed, the Chair is fortified in this by the amendment sent to the Clerk's desk by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HEPBURN], which provides that the President shall be authorized in the first instance to purchase territory, and, in the second, to direct his Secretary of War to go on and take all the preliminary steps necessary for the construction of the canal itself. So that, as the Chair construes it, the very amendment offered by the gentleman is a refutation of the statement that the preliminary legislation appropriating in 1895 $20,000, and in 1898 $150,000, commits the Government to the construction of this canal.

Now, on this part of the rule the Chair is fortified by previous decisions on other questions. As has been stated by several gentlemen, this rule, invoked by the gentleman from Illinois, has been the rule in this House for more than a generation, and there have been repeated rulings on the identical point raised that the Chair is now considering. As late as the Forty-fifth Congress, Mr. Carlisle, of Kentucky, one of the ablest parliamentarians who has ever presided over this body, was called upon to pass upon this question. While the committee were considering an appropriation bill, Mr. Ryan, of Kansas, offered the following amendment, to be incorporated into the bill:

"Fifty thousand dollars for a building at Topeka, Kans., of the kind and for the uses provided in the act of Congress entitled 'An act to authorize the purchase of a site for a public building at Topeka, Kans.,' approved March 3, 1875, and such building shall not exceed in cost the sum of $200,000."

Mr. Atkins, of Tennessee, raised the point of order that under this rule, invoked by the gentleman from Illinois, it was not a proper amendment, and Mr. Carlisle, after discussion, ruled that it was not. Mr. Ryan in his argument showed that Congress had already authorized the purchase of a site, and that $10,000 had been appropriated for that purpose, and that the jurisdiction of the site had been given by the State of Kansas to the United States Government.

But Mr. Carlisle held that the purchase of a site did not authorize the construction of a building upon it, although the purpose for which the site was bought was the construction of a public building; and he held that the amendment was not in order. There was no appeal from that decision.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk has read enough of the decision to indicate on what grounds the decision was rendered, and as bearing directly on this point calls the attention of the committee to the legislation which provided for the survey on the Gila River in Arizona. The Chair will have read the former legislation.

The Clerk read as follows:

For ascertaining the depth of the bed rock at a place on the Gila River, in Gila County, Ariz., known as The Buttes, and particularly described in Senate Document No. 27, Fifty-fourth Congress, second session, and for ascertaining the feasibility and estimating in detail the cost of the construction of a dam across the river at that point for purpose of irrigating the Sacaton Reservation, and for ascertaining the average daily flow of water in the river at that point, $20,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, the same to be expended by the Director of the United States Geological Survey under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed as in any way committing the United States to the construction of said dam.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will note that the proviso in this legislation is very similar to the proviso contained in the legislation on which the former ruling was made—that nothing therein contained should pledge the United States to the construction of a dam at that point.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. I would suggest to the Chair just at that point that that was a proviso put in as an amendment by the Senate, after it passed the House entirely, and consequently the rule here would not apply to that part of it.

The CHAIRMAN. With regard to that, the Chair would say it is immaterial at what point in the history of that legislation the amendment was adopted. It is the law. It voiced the will of Congress. So that the question as to whether or not a former survey pledged the Government to a continuation of the work, it seems to the Chair, is clearly settled by the language of the legislation itself as well as by the decision already quoted.

Now, even though there were legislation providing for the reclamation of public lands, which there is not, even though there were legislation providing for expenditures for the purpose of providing waters for the irrigation of private land, it would be a grave question whether an appropriation for those purposes would be germane to an Indian appropriation bill. In view of all these facts the Chair believes that the provision is very clearly subject to a point of order, and the point of order is therefore sustained.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. If an amendment were offered by me, putting in this paragraph, with the exception of the words "and such others as may be allotted land there, the excess of waters to be used for reclaiming vacant public lands and supplying present appropriated water rights," leaving out that part of the paragraph that was referred to by the gentleman from Illinois, as I understand the Chair's ruling, that would not change it?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair does not care to decide in advance upon any amendment that may be offered.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Then, Mr. Chairman, I move to amend the bill by inserting all of that paragraph which has just been read, from line 4 to the end of the page, excluding therefrom the words "and such others as may be allotted land there, the excess of waters to be used for reclaiming vacant public lands and supplying present appropriated water rights," so it will be the same as the original bill with those words excluded from it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Arizona offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend by inserting on page 40, after the word "manner," in line 3, the following:

"To enable the Secretary of the Interior to begin the preliminary work in the construction of a reservoir on the Gila River in the Territory of Arizona, at a favorable point near the San Carlos Indian Agency, for storing the flood waters of said river, said water to be used for the benefit of the Indians on the Gila River; the Secretary of the Interior is also authorized to acquire and prepare the dam site, and do such detailed work as may be necessary for preparing specification for advertising for bids for the various classes of work connected with the construction of the dam and its appurtenances, and to prepare plans and estimates of cost of construction (with Indian labor, so far as the same can be profitably used), and designate the vacant public lands which can be irrigated from the stored water of said reservoir; the sum of $50,000 is hereby appropriated, or so much thereof as may be necessary. The Secretary shall report fully at the next session of Congress as to the details herein enumerated as to the cost and benefits of said works and of bids received for the construction and completion of said reservoir."

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, I make the same point of order to this amendment that I made to the original paragraph, for the same reasons, and the additional reason that it is not germane and not authorized by law.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Arizona wish to be heard further on the point of order?

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. I want to say one word, Mr. Chairman. I could not hear very well the canal decision which was read by the Clerk. This is in the nature of a continuing work, and differs from the canal bill. The only purpose from the start, evidently, in that measure and in the subsequent one, as I understand it, at the last session of Congress, was an effort to ascertain data, and the work was done for the purpose of ascertaining data looking to the construction of a dam across the Gila River and to supply water to the Indians. Now, for three or four years this work of investigation has gone on for no purpose other, and the intent of Congress being nothing else, except the ultimate construction of the dam, and this is going no further than to say what the dam will cost. It is only continuing this work on the same river and for identically the same purpose.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair endeavored to be as clear and explicit as possible on the point as to whether or not the former survey pledged the Government to a continuation of work at that point and, following former rulings and the plain provisions of the statute, held that it did not so pledge the Government. The language of the legislation itself clearly indicates that it was not intended that that legislation should pledge the Government to a continuation of the work. It says that "nothing herein shall be construed to in any way commit the United States to the construction of said dam."

So that it seems to the Chair that there can be no controversy on that point. Now, the question is as to whether the elimination of the words in the former paragraph, omitted in the gentleman's amendment, so changes the character of the proposed legislation as to bring it within the rule.

While legislation providing for general irrigation on Indian reservations, to be expended at the discretion of the Commissioner or the Secretary, might be held to be germane, it is very questionable whether a provision for a specific irrigation work is not subject to a point of order. In a ruling made a few days ago on the urgent deficiency bill it was held that a paragraph providing for the establishment of an Army post was subject to a point of order, but that an amendment providing in general for the shelter of troops was not. The Chair calls the gentleman's attention to the fact that there is in his amendment a provision authorizing and instructing the Secretary to "designate the vacant public lands which can be irrigated from the stored water of said reservoir," clearly indicating the purpose of the amendment to provide water for lands other than lands of the Indians; and as there is no law authorizing this class of expenditures, the Chair holds that the point of order is well taken, and the point of order is therefore sustained.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 41, after the word "dollars," line 5, insert:

"For survey of lands in the Pine Ridge and Standing Rock Indian reservations in South Dakota, and for examination in the field of surveys, the sum of $22,000 to be immediately available, and for clerical work and stationery in the office of the Surveyor-General, required on surveys within the Pine Ridge and Standing Rock Indian reservations in South Dakota, the sum of $3,200; in all, $25,200."

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from South Dakota wish to be heard on the amendment?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I do not, unless some question is raised in regard to it.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, per capita, to the members of the Eastern Shawnee and Seneca tribes of Indians, in the Indian Territory, all moneys placed to the credit of said tribes upon the books of the Treasury, and all trust funds held for said tribes by the Government in lieu of investments.

Mr. BENTON. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out all after "that," in line 20, page 41, ending with the word "investment," in line 1, page 42, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"That the following sums placed upon the books of the Treasury by the Indian appropriation act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat., 1062, 1068), to the credit of the tribes named, being in full for permanent annuities guaranteed by treaties to said tribes, shall draw interest at the rate of 5 per cent per annum from July 1, 1902, namely: Seneca fund, $73,800; Eastern Shawnee fund, $20,600; and a sum sufficient to pay the interest on the same for the fiscal year 1903 is hereby appropriated. And the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized in his discretion to pay per capita to the managers of the Eastern Shawnee and Seneca tribes of Indians in the Indian Territory the principal of these sums placed to the credit of said tribes on the books of the Treasury."

Mr. SHERMAN. If I understand the amendment correctly, it is simply a change of phraseology?

Mr. BENTON. The object of the amendment is this: The Secretary of the Interior tells us that the amount of money named in this amendment to the bill will not draw interest after the 1st of July. By this amendment I propose that after the 1st of July the Secretary of the Interior be authorized to pay 5 per cent interest on the full sums to the Indians in lieu of what has been provided for in the act, also to authorize the Secretary to pay, in his discretion, the whole sum to these Indians in cash.

Mr. SHERMAN. Then you propose to put this money into the Treasury, as other Indian funds are placed there, except that you leave it to the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior to pay out the principal?

Mr. BENTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHERMAN. Can the gentleman tell me if there is any other Indian funds, the principal of which is left to be paid out solely in the discretion of the Secretary of Interior?

Mr. BENTON. No, sir.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think we ought not to single out this fund and leave its payment solely in the discretion of the Secretary. Let Congress say when the principal shall be paid.

Mr. BENTON. That is exactly what I wanted; but I had to make my peace in another quarter. [Laughter.]

Mr. SHERMAN. Well, the gentleman is "up against" making peace in this quarter. [Laughter.]

Mr. BENTON. So far as I am concerned, I would rather that the provision should be adopted as it is in the bill, namely, that—the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay per capita to the members of the Eastern Shawnee and Seneca tribes of Indians in the Indian Territory all moneys placed to the credit of said tribes upon the books of the Treasury.

Mr. FITZGERALD. It would appear that we shall oblige the gentlemen from Missouri [Mr. BENTON] by voting down his amendment. [Laughter.] He will then get what he wants.

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not care particularly about the matter.

The question being taken on the amendment of Mr. BENTON, it was adopted, there being ayes 15, noes 1.

Mr. BENTON. I desire to call the attention of the chairman of the committee to another amendment which I think it proper should be inserted at this point. I ask the Clerk to read it.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "investments," in line 1, page 42, insert the following:

"And the act of the councils of the Eastern Shawnee and of the Seneca nations or tribes of the Indian Territory, providing for the allotment of lands to certain minor children, and for other purposes, passed, respectively, on the 2d day of December, 1901, and the 8th day of January, 1902, are hereby ratified and approved."

Mr. SHERMAN. I desire to reserve a point of order on this amendment. I would like to ask the gentleman from Missouri whether he did not offer this identical amendment in committee, and was it not voted down?

Mr. BENTON. No sir. The committee had not the necessary information on the subject, and I declined to press the amendment.

Mr. SHERMAN. Oh, yes; I remember now.

Mr. BENTON. I do not want to press this amendment until the gentleman from New York [Mr. SHERMAN] and the committee generally understand why it is presented.

In 1887 the Government allotted lands to these Indians in severalty. After each one had received his allotment of 160 acres there was left to the Eastern Shawnees about 2,000 acres, and to the Senecas about 14,000 acres. Since that time children have been born to these Indians.

The Government is now paying for a clerk, $1,000; for an industrial farmer, $500; for a patrolman or policeman, $600, besides his rations and clothing; for a hostler, $360, making a total of $2,560. All the money that these people of both tribes get is $4,720, being the interest on the money covered by the provision we have just voted upon. The $2,560 expended for the care of these lands by the employment of a clerk, a patrolman, a hostler, and an industrial farmer comes out of the Government. The parents of the Indians that have been born since 1886 desire that allotments shall now be made to their children. To this end——

Mr. CURTIS. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. BENTON. Yes.

Mr. CURTIS. How much surplus land is there on the reservation?

Mr. BENTON. Fourteen thousand acres in the Seneca Reservation and 2,000 acres in the Shawnee.

Mr. CURTIS. Will there be any left after the allotments?

Mr. BENTON. There will be about 2,200 acres of land left in the Seneca Reservation and a few acres in the Shawnee Reservation. That is not land, however; it is rocks on the bluff over the Grand River.

Mr. CURTIS. What does the act of the council provide shall be done with that land?

Mr. BENTON. It provides that it shall be sold for the benefit of the tribe. I will ask, Mr. Chairman, that I may be permitted to insert the acts of these two councils in the RECORD, and for the information of the gentlemen I will read.

Mr. CURTIS. If the gentleman reads the act it will answer my question, but what I would like to know is whether the act provides for anything else——

Mr. BENTON. The act provides that the land shall be divided up, giving each Seneca Indian born since 1887, 120 acres of land, and to each Shawnee Indian minor 60 acres. I will insert these two acts. During the last three months the council of the Senecas and the council of the Eastern Shawnees—and I have the two acts here signed by the chiefs and secretaries—have passed such acts, and this amendment which I offer to the bill at this time is for the purpose of indorsing the acts of the councils, which will save the Government about $6,000 or $7,000 in sending surveyors and other officers down there to allot this land. That is all it does. It simply saves the Government that much money by adopting in this bill the act of the two councils, and allots their surplus lands.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BENTON. I desire, in connection with my remarks, to insert in the RECORD the two acts of these two councils.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman asks unanimous consent to insert certain papers in the RECORD. If there is no objection, it will be so ordered.

The papers are as follows:

An act providing for the allotment of lands to certain minor children, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the council of the Eastern Shawnees of the Indian Territory:

SECTION 1. That allotments of not less than 60 acres from the surplus or unallotted lands of the tribe be given to each minor child who has received no allotment of land and who shall be upon the roll of the tribe at the time of said new allotment of land, the remainder of the surplus land, if any, to be sold by deed signed by the chief and witnessed by the secretary, and the proceeds used in the liquidation of tribal indebtedness and in paying the expenses of the new allotment.

SEC. 2. The allotment so made shall be subject to all of the restrictions imposed by an act of Congress approved February 8, 1887, entitled "An act to provide for the allotment of lands in severalty to Indians on the various reservations and to extend the protection of the laws of the United States and the Territories over the Indians, and for other purposes."

SEC. 3. This act to take effect and be in force from and after its ratification by the Congress of the United States.

Passed the council December 2, 1901.

ANDREW DUSHANE, Chief.
JOHN L. PROPHET, Secretary.

An act providing for the allotment of lands to certain minor Senecas, and for other purposes.

Whereas the Seneca Nation of the Indian Territory is possessed of sufficient surplus land to provide allotments to all of their children who have not heretofore received allotments therefrom:

Be it enacted by the council of the Seneca Nation of the Indian Territory, That allotment of not more than 120 acres of land from the surplus or unallotted lands of the tribe be made to each minor child who may be upon the rolls of the tribe at the time of such allotment and to whom no allotment of lands has heretofore been made; said allotments shall be as nearly equal in value as the same can be made, and shall be made from the best agricultural lands obtainable along the valley of the Elk River and in such other places as shall not impair the value of the remaining surplus land; the same shall be made under the direction of the acting United States Indian agent for the Quapaw Agency; and the lands so allotted shall be conveyed by deed signed and acknowledged by the principal chief, and shall be subject to all the restrictions provided in an act of Congress entitled "An act to provide for the allotment of lands in severalty to Indians on the various reservations, and to extend the protection of the laws of the United States and the Territories over the Indians, and for other purposes," approved February 8, 1887.

SEC. 2. After making of said allotments the remaining surplus lands may be leased or sold by the chief, with the approval of the council, on the best possible terms, the proceeds to be used in defraying the expenses incident to allotment and in the liquidation of indebtedness of the tribe which they are legally or in honor bound to pay; the surplus, if any, to be deposited with the acting United States Indian agent for the Quapaw Agency, to be by him paid per capita to all persons upon the roll of the tribe.

SEC. 3. That this act shall take effect and be in force from and after its approval by the Congress of the United States.

Passed the council January 8, 1902.

MITCHELL SPICER,
Principal Chief.
EDWD. MINGO,
Second Chief and Secretary.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the surplus or unallotted lands of the Confederated Wea, Peoria, Kaskaskia, and Piankeshaw tribe of Indians, and of the Western Miami tribe of Indians, in the northeastern part of the Indian Territory, may be sold on such terms and conditions as the President and the adult members of said tribe may mutually agree upon, the proceeds thereof to be divided according to ownership, as set forth in the act approved March 2, 1889, entitled "An act to provide for allotment of land in severalty to United Peorias and Miamies in Indian Territory, and for other purposes."

Mr. MILLER. I offer the following amendment, which I ask the Clerk to read.

The Clerk read as follows:

On line 15, page 42, strike out the word "divided" and insert in lieu thereof the words "paid per capita;" so that it will read, "The proceeds thereof to be paid per capita according to ownership.

Mr. SHERMAN. If the gentleman will yield, I would like to ask a question.

Mr. MILLER. Yes.

Mr. SHERMAN. These Indians are self-supporting?

Mr. MILLER. Yes.

Mr. SHERMAN. They receive no gratuity from the Government?

Mr. MILLER. No.

Mr. SHERMAN. They have their allotments?

Mr. MILLER. Yes.

Mr. SHERMAN. And this is simply to permit them to sell land they do not require for their allotments, and that the money be paid to them?

Mr. MILLER. Yes.

Mr. SHERMAN. Very well; I have no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the gentleman from Kansas.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

To maintain at the city of Omaha, Nebr., in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, a warehouse for the receipt, storage, and shipping of goods for the Indian Service, $10,000: Provided, That so much of the act of June 7, 1897, entitled "An act making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses and fulfilling treaty stipulations with the Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898," as provides that the city of Omaha shall provide, equip, and furnish a building suitable for this purpose free of cost to the United States is hereby repealed.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, the quotation in line 4 of page 43 should be after the word "United States" in line 6. That is a mistake of the printer, and I ask unanimous consent that the Clerk make the correction.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection it will be so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. SHERMAN. Also, in line 10, on page 42, the fifth word should be "unallotted." It is "unlotted." I ask that this correction be made by the Clerk.

The CHAIRMAN. If there is no objection, the order will be so made.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the $10,000, or so much thereof as may be available, reserved by act of March 3, 1901, out of the amount appropriated for payment of the judgment in favor of the New York Indians, to pay expenses necessary to ascertain the beneficiaries of said judgment, may be used for the employment of the clerical force necessary therefor in the Office of Indian Affairs.

For the resurvey and marking of the southern and western boundaries of the Uintah Indian Reservation from the initial point on Green River to the intersection of said boundary line with the range line between ranges 6 and 7 east of Sac and Lake meridian, Utah, an estimated distance of 135 miles, at $40 per mile, and for the field examination of said resurvey, $6,000.

Mr. MARSHALL. I offer the following amendment, and ask the Clerk to read it.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "dollars," in line 22, page 43, add as follows:

For the resurvey of the outboundaries of the Devils Lake Indian Reservation and the resurvey of the interior, standard, meander, and section lines (including the survey and subdivision of the old Fort Totten Military Reservation) and for the office work and field examination of said surveys and resurveys, $12,000.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. MARSHALL].

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For pay of one special attorney for the Pueblo Indians of New Mexico, $1,500, and for necessary traveling and incidental expenses of one special attorney for the Pueblo Indians of New Mexico, $500: Provided, That of said amount the sum of $200, or so much thereof as may be necessary, shall be available for expenses incurred by said attorney during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903; in all, $2,000.

Mr. RODEY. Mr. Chairman, I should like to ask the chairman of the committee why the salary of the Pueblo Indian agent for New Mexico is not provided for in the appropriation?

Mr. SHERMAN. I did not catch the question of the gentleman.

Mr. RODEY. Why is the pay for the Pueblo Indian agent for New Mexico left out?

Mr. SHERMAN. It was not estimated for. The Department saw no necessity for an agent. Whatever the duties are there, they are discharged by the superintendent of schools. The salary of the agent was not estimated for and not asked for by the Department.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to pay to the Otoe and Missouria tribe of Indians of Oklahoma, immediately upon the passage of this act, the sum of $50,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, out of any money to their credit in the Treasury of the United States, under such regulations as he may prescribe, in the settlement of their claim for lands sold for them in the State of Nebraska.

Mr. LACEY. I move to strike out the last word, for the purpose of asking the gentleman from Kansas if he knows the full amount realized out of the compromise, and whether it has been paid?

Mr. CURTIS. We are informed by the Commissioner that about $111,000 has been derived from the compromise, and I understood that it had been paid, but I have not the information direct.

Mr. LACEY. Why, then, do you provide only for the payment of $50,000?

Mr. CURTIS. Under the agreement about $54,000 was to be paid—that is, the amount of accumulated interest, which was $54,000, but the tribe will be satisfied with $50,000. They want the remainder of the money to stay in the Treasury and draw interest, as their other funds do.

Mr. LACEY. At what rate of interest?

Mr. CURTIS. I think 5 per cent.

Mr. LACEY. I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized, with the consent of the tribe, to distribute the cattle belonging to the Crow tribe, known as the "common herd" and held as such under the ninth article of the agreement with said tribe of December 8, 1890, ratified by the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat., 1041), among the members of said tribe, to be held by them as individuals in the same manner as their other individual stock is held, after which the common herd shall cease to exist. The Secretary of the Interior is also authorized to distribute among the tribe per capita all of the money due or to become due said Indians from sales from the common herd, known as the "Crow herd fund:" Provided, That the distribution of the cattle and payment of the money shall be made at such time and under such regulations as the Secretary of the Interior in his discretion may prescribe. That the funds now in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Crow Indians in Montana, or any portion of it, may, with the consent of the tribe, be used by the Secretary of the Interior, in his discretion, in the purchase of stock cattle to be distributed among the members of the tribe under such regulations as he may prescribe.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I offer the amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The amendment was read, as follows:

On page 47, after the word "prescribed," in line 6, insert "to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to pay the claim of Josef Stainer for labor and material used in making repairs to school buildings Nos. 1, 2, and 3, at Cheyenne River Indian Agency, S. Dak., damaged by wind storm and cyclone on the night of July 19, 1892, approved by the Secretary of the Interior, $278.37, to be paid from unexpended balance of appropriation 'Education Sioux Nation.'"

Mr. SHERMAN. I reserve the point of order upon that amendment. I should like to hear what the gentleman has to say.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I hope the gentleman will not insist on his point of order upon this amendment. It simply provides an appropriation to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to pay a bill that has been allowed by the Interior Department, but owing to a technicality the Treasury Department think they have no authority to pay it. I would like to have read two communications bearing upon the subject, which explain very fully the nature of the claim.

The Clerk read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, January 29, 1902.

THE COMMISSIONER OF INDIAN AFFAIRS.

SIR: I am in receipt of your report of the 15th instant, on the application of Hon. CHARLES H. BURKE, of the 16th ultimo, for review of the Department's action of May 13, 1901, on the claim of Josef Stainer for material and labor furnished in the repair of certain school buildings at the Cheyenne River Agency, S. Dak., in July and August, 1892.

The facts and a full statement of the case were set out in your letter of May 9, 1901, but the same were not deemed sufficient to justify an allowance of the claim by the Department, notwithstanding your favorable recommendation for its payment, and the same was returned to your office without approval.

On a review of the facts then submitted and further examination of the case, and of the statement of Mr. BURKE, from all of which it appears that the Government received full value of the claim, and that the same was not at the time allowed on the technicality that the buildings were damaged by a cyclone "during the erection of the buildings and before their completion and receipt by the Government;" and that the claim was not a proper one for the consideration of your office, but was a matter for Congressional action.

The facts are that the buildings were originally erected by Mr. Stainer under a contract with your office, and were completed and ready for delivery to the Government within the period specified in the contract, and notice thereon given to the Indian agent in charge, the keys being turned over to him on the date of completion; but that owing to some delay in the appointment of an inspector to examine the buildings preparatory to their transfer to the Government the same were not formally turned over.

During this period of delay the buildings were damaged by a cyclone, and Mr. Stainer was called upon to repair the damage, which he did at an expense of $278.37, for which he now asks reimbursement.

It appears that the buildings were constructed and completed and ready for delivery, in accordance with the terms of the contract, eight days before the cyclone by which they sustained the damage referred to. I am, therefore, of the opinion that Mr. Stainer is entitled to compensation for the repairs thus required of and made by him, and authority is granted for the settlement of his claim, payable from the appropriation "Education, Sioux Nation."

The papers submitted are returned herewith.

Very respectfully,

THOS. RYAN, Acting Secretary.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. The letter just read very fully sets forth the facts in the case. I ask that the other letter may be printed in the RECORD. I ask unanimous consent that that may be done.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the paper presented by the gentleman from South Dakota will be printed in the RECORD, as desired.

There was no objection.

The letter is as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF AUDITOR FOR THE INTERIOR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., February 15, 1902.

SIR: Replying to your oral request for information concerning a claim of Josef Stainer, I have the honor to advise you that there is now pending in this office for examination and settlement a claim of said Josef Stainer for labor and material used for making repairs to school buildings Nos. 1, 2, and 3, at Cheyenne River Agency, S. Dak., damaged by windstorm and cyclone on the night of July 19, 1892. This work was done by Mr. Stainer from July 25 to August 12, 1892. The claim has been approved by the Secretary of the Interior in the sum of $278.37, as will appear from letter of the Secretary of the Interior addressed to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, dated January 29, 1902, copy of which is inclosed herewith.

If this claim is examined and settled in this office at the present time, and it is found that it can be allowed, it will have to be reported to Congress under section 2 of the deficiency appropriation act of July 7, 1884 (23 Stat., 254), and can then be paid only after an appropriation shall have been made therefor.

Respectfully,

R. S. PERSON, Auditor.

Hon. CHARLES H. BURKE,
House of Representatives.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I believe that ought to have gone, as a separate bill, to the Committee on Claims. It seems to me it is a claim pure and simple; but the justice of it is so apparent that I shall not insist on the point of order, and I withdraw it.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from South Dakota.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For support of 150 pupils at the training school at Cherokee, N. C., $25,050; for pay of superintendent of said school, $1,500; for general repairs and improvements, $2,000; for heating plant, $2,500; for erection of girls' dormitory, $10,000, to be immediately available; in all, $40,350.

Mr. SHERMAN. I desire to offer an amendment to correct a mistake in the computation.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 48, in line 14, strike out "forty thousand three hundred" and insert "forty-one thousand."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For support of Indian industrial school at Carlisle, Pa., for transportation of pupils to and from said school, and for general repairs and improvements, $149,000; for additional salary of any military officer of Carlisle Indian School while acting as superintendent of said school, $1,000; in all, $150,000.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate on this amendment is exhausted.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Mr. Chairman, I have been so opposed to the education of Indians under this provision that I would like to move to strike out the paragraph.

I do not want to detain the committee, but it is a motion which I have made ever since I have been here, particularly as to the Carlisle and the Hampton schools. I would like to raise the point of order against the "transportation of pupils to and from said school" and for "additional salary of any military officer of Carlisle Indian School." Is not that new legislation? It is certainly as new as the legislation touching the Gila River dam.

Mr. SHERMAN. Well, it is the same as for several years.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. There is no law for it.

Mr. SHERMAN. There is no change in any particular from the law of last year, neither in phraseology nor amount.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Just a word, and I will not detain the committee. I move to strike out the section. I have always been opposed to this policy of educating an Indian at a distance from his native place, removing him from his regular environment, and bringing him up within an atmosphere that can never possibly aid him in his future struggle for bread.

I think the experience of all men with the actual Indian returned to his former surroundings will bear me out in the assertion that this foreign education has done the Indian boy or girl no earthly good, nor has their return aided or honored their tribe or benefited the community.

Isolate them in their youth, educate and clothe them, return them to the reservation, and their subsequent history is known to all men who know poor human nature, whether they ever saw an Indian in their life or not. What is the result? He learns cleanliness and returns to his Indian home with its dirt, its squalor, and its vermin. What is left to him or her? The suggestion is enough. The boy has learned to read and write, to cipher, and sing a song and smoke cigarettes, as suggested to me by my friend here; and we are spending these hundreds and thousands of dollars, and I hear no protest from my friend from Illinois.

Mr. CANNON. Will my friend allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Certainly.

Mr. CANNON. Commencing in 1886, by a report I made, in connection with other members of a special committee, after full examination, no Congress has passed—and I have been in from that time to this—but what I have protested, and I now protest, that I think it is the highest character of cruelty to take people——

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. I am glad to hear the gentleman say so.

Mr. CANNON (continuing). And give them a finished education that do not know how to work, and send them back to the tribes, where it is a matter of pride that the young men there put on the blanket, and in many instances the young woman shall be prostituted.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. I am glad to see that the gentleman feels in this exactly as I do. I wish in all that time, with his great, and justly great, influence in this House, he had long ago persuaded it to quit this sort of business.

Now, gentlemen, this sort of education does no earthly good. These children are taken away from their native place, without consent of their friends, and against the natural and often expressed opposition of the parents. They may obtain some sort of consent, but never the free, voluntary will of any one of them. They are brought here by force; they are educated by force; they are made a show of by force, and humane and misguided people take great delight in showing him with his cut-off hair and new clothes as evidence conclusive of his ultimate betterment in life.

Look at them, Mr. Chairman, when they go back from these schools. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] has stated with great power and force what their condition is sure to be. I protest here in the name of the Indian himself, in the name of the boy and the girl, for the Lord's sake and humanity's sake educate them in the environment where they have to live; quit this business of taking them off to the East and teaching them songs and the multiplication table and algebra, and even higher education.

What good does such education do them either East or West? They can do the East no good by it. They can do no good in the East with it. It destroys their ability to live in happiness or peace among their own. What good does it do his tribe? But where you have a school, where he can see it close to the white man's home, where he sees the work going on, where there is the church, the plow, the anvil, and the schoolhouse, it does him good or may do him good.

Let him see how education is obtained, let him see every day what civilization means, and then he himself will in time probably want to learn to read. I would not give one good working Indian for the sweetest songster among them all. He will do more to elevate his tribe than all the philosophy, all the mathematics and geometry you may teach him in a thousand years. The best Indian that I ever saw on the San Carlos Reservation—and he had the best schooling for what lay before him in life, and that was four years in the penitentiary [laughter], where he learned discipline—learned to work and obtained something to live upon.

This school at Carlisle and every one like it is the outgrowth of sentimentalism. The motives and principles actuating these people are of the very highest, but their knowledge of the question is of the very narrowest. Now, Mr. Chairman, this appropriation ought to be stricken from the bill. The Government ought not to pay one cent for this Carlisle school. The children ought to be kept and educated near the reservation.

Mr. LACEY. Will the gentleman allow me a question?

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Certainly.

Mr. LACEY. Did the gentleman ever visit the Carlisle school?

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. I never have.

Mr. LACEY. I advise the gentleman to go there.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Did the gentleman from Iowa ever visit the San Carlos Reservation?

Mr. LACEY. I never have.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Then I advise the gentleman to go there [laughter] and learn something about an Indian.

Mr. LACEY. I made the suggestion to the gentleman in good faith, for I have heard him make this same speech, or one like it, a number of times.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise to oppose the amendment offered by the gentleman from Arizona. The report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs for this year is the strongest argument in favor of the continuance of the present Indian-school policy. The Commissioner, in his report, says the object of education is civilization, the object of civilization is to make the Indian self-reliant, self-supporting, and independent of further bounty on the part of the General Government. The present system of industrial schools is for this purpose, and the result seems to indicate that it is successful.

In reference particularly to nonreservation schools he says:

The class of largest Government Indian schools is located off the reservations and usually near large cities and centers of wealth and culture. These schools are supported by transfers from the reservation day and boarding schools, although many children are taken directly from the camps. They correspond more nearly with the great industrial and reform schools of the States. Military discipline is maintained and thorough obedience to civil authorities inculcated. Literary training is subordinated to that for the industries. The majority is equipped with shops for shoe and harness making, carpentry, blacksmithing, wagon making, and the teaching of other useful trades. Several have large domestic buildings adapted for the teaching of elementary and scientific cooking to the girls. These establishments are modeled after the most approved method.

Connected with the largest of these institutions is the "outing system" of placing boys and girls for stated periods with families throughout the surrounding country. Here they are taught the duties of farm hands and domestics. In these good homes they are in constant touch with the highest type of the American farmer. The sturdy integrity of this class is impressed by every-day example. They receive a certain compensation for their work, which is deposited to their credit with the school, and the value of labor and money is taught them. Many, at the same time, attend the white public schools. When the "outing system" can be adopted, through the cooperation of the white people, it forms a happy medium of imparting the lesson of Americanism.

Mr. Chairman, the Commissioner argues that the environment of the reservation is not productive of the advancement of the Indian, but the reverse. He says:

The industrial feature of Indian schools does not appeal to him, as the savage rarely earns his living by the sweat of his brow. The women of the tribe are generally the breadwinners when manual labor is required.

Now, Mr. Chairman, during the last year, less than twelve months ago, the various superintendents of schools have been called upon to make investigation and report the result of a school system, both as to reservation and nonreservation, day and boarding school. They were asked to classify the students under three heads, "Excellent," "Fair," and "Poor;" and here is the result:

On April 15, 1901, a circular was addressed to all "Indian agents and bonded superintendents of reservations," stating:

"In order that this office may form a just estimate of the relative merits of the different methods of educating Indian children and the value of those methods in their relation to after effects upon the character and life of those who have attended the reservation and nonreservation schools, you are directed, immediately upon receipt of this circular, to make a careful canvass of all returned pupils from nonreservation schools now living upon the reservations under your charge, and upon the within blank give their names and the information as indicated on same.

"You will be careful to give briefly your estimate of their character and conduct with reference to the results of their educational course at the school attended, using the following terms in their arbitrary sense, as follows: 'Poor,' that the returned pupil has not been, so far as his life and actions are concerned, in any manner benefited by the education which the Government has given him; 'fair,' that while the results of his education have not been good, they have yet raised him somewhat above the level of Indians in the same environment; 'good,' that the returned student has made such average use of the advantages and facilities given him at the schools attended that he may be said to compare favorably with white boys and girls under similar circumstances; that his course of life and actions since his return to the reservation indicate that his career is that of the average white man; 'excellent,' that the results of the educational methods in his particular case have demonstrated that he has taken full advantage of them and he stands out above the average of returned students, and would be classed, if in a white neighborhood, as a man elevated somewhat above those with whom he is brought in contact."

From the data thus obtained statistics relating to returned Indian pupils were collated, from which it appears that the Government officials, who are thrown in immediate contact with this class of Indians, rate 10 per cent as "excellent," the results of the educational methods demonstrating that they have taken full advantage of them, standing out above the average returned pupils, and would be classed, if in a white neighborhood, as men and women elevated somewhat above those with whom they are brought in contact; 76 per cent compare favorably with white boys and girls under similar circumstances, and indicate by their actions, since their return to the reservations, a career similar to that of the average white man; 13 per cent have raised themselves somewhat above the level of the Indians in the same environment, but the results of whose education can not be said to be good; 1 per cent have not been, so far as their lives and actions are concerned, in any way benefited by the education which has been given them.

The plan of the Indian Department relative to the civilization of these people is predicated upon the theory outlined. This plan was practically begun about twenty-one years ago, when there were not 5,000 children in all the Indian schools. Taking this into consideration, the results of one generation are conclusive that the time is not far distant when the Indian will have so advanced that his education may safely be turned over to the States, with whose population the adults will be rapidly assimilating.

Now, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Arizona inveighs against theory and sentimentalism. Mr. Chairman, the statistics taken from the returns of the superintendents of every grade of school in this country bear out the assertion that the education so far provided for the Indian is far above their expectations, and if continued will bring about the result most desired, the ultimate welfare of the Indians themselves. I trust the amendment of the gentleman from Arizona will be voted down.

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Chairman, I believe debate on the amendment is exhausted. I therefore move to strike out the last word.

My friend from Arizona [Mr. SMITH] has been side by side with the Indian problem in its worst form—the Apache form. He has seen the Indian in his worst capacity, in his most cruel and wicked state. He measures the entire Indian race by the lowest of all standards. And yet the very Apache himself, when "caught young" and taken to Carlisle, has shown a development that is remarkable.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. What does he show after he gets back?

Mr. LACEY. I first went to Carlisle with some prejudice—a prejudice generated by the gentleman from Arizona—for I knew his usual fairness, and I had heard him describe these Indians in his graphic way. Therefore the first persons I saw at Carlisle were the Apaches. I asked Captain Pratt to show me one of the "Gila monsters" from Arizona—the Apaches. He took me round and introduced me to an Apache boy, and then to some others of the same tribe, and after that to some Apache girls. And I was astonished, Mr. Chairman, to find that the kindest, the best, the most agreeable faces I saw in that school were upon Apache shoulders. This was an entire surprise to me.

Since then I have visited that school repeatedly; and to say to me or to you, Mr. Chairman, or to the American people generally, that to withdraw a savage from his unwholesome environment and place him for four years in such surroundings as those at Carlisle—to give the girls summer outings among the Quaker families of that country—is injurious to them, is to fly in the very face of our civilization. Those girls are sent out in the summer. They go into Quaker families; that is, they generally prefer the Quaker families. They learn to churn; they learn to sew; they learn to knit; they learn to keep house. When the fall comes they go back to school. They are thus thrown into surroundings that they have never seen before.

It is true that the attempt is perhaps made to elevate them too fast. Therefore my friend says that the best school for the Indian is four years in the penitentiary.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. I beg the gentleman's pardon. I never made such a statement.

Mr. LACEY. Did not the gentleman say that the best education for the Indian was the education in the penitentiary?

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. I said that the best Apache I ever saw—the best natured and the best educated—was one who had spent four years in the penitentiary.

Mr. LACEY. And does not the gentleman hold that there is a still better than the educated Apache—the dead Apache?

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. I will not dispute the gentleman's word on that point.

Mr. LACEY. My friend's solution of the Indian problem is the penitentiary on the one hand, or the grave on the other.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Or raising them in a hothouse.

Mr. LACEY. That is the very cheerful view that the gentleman takes of the situation. We owe an obligation to this race. We are occupying soil that belonged to them. We have treated with them; we have endeavored to elevate them in times past. The blood of some of the best men who ever sat in the House of Representatives has been mingled with the blood of the Indian. A gentleman from Virginia, a leader on one side of this House, not very long ago traced his ancestry to Pocahontas, and he did it proudly.

I say, then, that there is no natural hostility to the Indian tribes among the white people except that which is generated by being brought side by side with them in their savage state. Does it follow, because of the characteristics that the Indian exhibits in the savage condition, that an Indian who has spent four years in the penitentiary is better educated than one trained at such a school as Carlisle?

I have advised the gentleman from Arizona to visit Carlisle. I would be glad to have him go there, because he is a gentleman of ability and culture; and I believe that the cloud of prejudice which has obscured his vision in the past would fade away if he should spend a few days in the wholesome surroundings of that splendid school, which is a credit to the people of the nation.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. But what becomes of those children after they leave the school?

Mr. LACEY. When the Apache children go back to Arizona of course they encounter difficulties; and some other people encounter difficulties when they go to Arizona and other parts of the Far West.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. What becomes of these children, now that they are educated at Carlisle? That, I grant, is all right if it helps them. But what becomes of those that are educated and are done with the school?

Mr. LACEY. The gentleman says if you take them back to Arizona——

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. I am not talking about Arizona; I am talking about these children.

Mr. LACEY. Well, then, North Dakota or any other country. When you take them back, he says, they descend once more to their old level, or even worse, and therefore what is his remedy? His remedy is to educate them in the very environments which drag them down after they come back from Carlisle. He proposes that they shall never rise lest they may fall.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, while I have advocated the abandonment of these nonreservation schools, I do not believe that we should refuse to appropriate for those that exist, unless some provision is made for the Indians being educated at them. Anybody who reads the report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs for the present year will find himself in a state of considerable confusion.

Those parts which have been quoted by my colleague from New York [Mr. SHERMAN] are undoubtedly there; but, Mr. Chairman, the opening part of that report is directly contradictory to the portions my colleague has read. Nobody believes that the Commissioner of Indian Affairs ever prepared that entire report himself. It would be impossible for the head of any great bureau of the Government to do that, so the only method of finding out what the Commissioner himself believes is to determine what portion of the report he wrote. I hold in my hand the proceedings of the nineteenth annual meeting of the Lake Mohonk Conference of Friends of the Indians, held in October, 1901.

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs made an address at that meeting. So did the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, and as the result of a taunt made by the chairman at that meeting the Commissioner has put verbatim into his report the speech which he made on that occasion. I assume that the Commissioner wrote that speech, anyway, although he did not write all the rest of his recommendations in his report. Let us look at what he says, and anybody who has the report of the Commissioner for this year before him can follow, and he will find out that I am reading exactly from the Commissioner's report, although I do not hold it in my hand:

Further observation and reflection leads to the unwelcome conviction that another obstacle may be added to those already named, and that is education. It is to be distinctly understood that it is not meant by this to condemn education in the abstract—far from it; its advantages are too many and too apparent to need any demonstration here. Neither is it meant as a criticism upon the conduct or management of any particular school or schools now in operation. What is meant is that the present Indian educational system, taken as a whole, is not calculated to produce the results so earnestly claimed for it and so hopefully anticipated when it was begun.

No doubt this idea will be received with some surprise, and expressions of dissent will doubtless spring at once to the lips of many of those engaged or interested in Indian work. Nevertheless, a brief view of the plan in vogue will, it is believed, convince the most skeptical that the idea is correct.

There are in operation at the present time 113 boarding schools, with an average attendance of something over 16,000 pupils, ranging from 5 to 21 years old. These pupils are gathered from the cabin, the wickiup, and the tepee.

Partly by cajolery and partly by threats; partly by bribery and partly by fraud; partly by persuasion and partly by force, they are induced to leave their homes and their kindred to enter these schools and take upon themselves the outward semblance of civilized life. They are chosen not on account of any particular merit of their own, not by reason of mental fitness, but solely because they have Indian blood in their veins. Without regard to their worldly condition; without any previous training; without any preparation whatever, they are transported to the schools—sometimes thousands of miles away—without the slightest expense or trouble to themselves or their people.

The Indian youth finds himself at once, as if by magic, translated from a state of poverty to one of affluence. He is well fed and clothed and lodged. Books and all the accessories of learning are given him and teachers provided to instruct him. He is educated in the industrial arts on the one hand, and not only in the rudiments but in the liberal arts on the other. Beyond "the three r's" he is instructed in geography, grammar, and history; he is taught drawing, algebra and geometry, music, and astronomy, and receives lessons in physiology, botany, and entomology.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. No wonder they look so pretty to my friend Mr. LACEY.

Mr. FITZGERALD. What a picture of the noble red man!

Matrons wait on him while he is well and physicians and nurses attend him when he is sick. A steam laundry does his washing and the latest modern appliances do his cooking. A library affords him relaxation for his leisure hours, athletic sports and the gymnasium furnish him exercise and recreation, while music entertains him in the evening.

He has hot and cold baths, and steam heat and electric light, and all the modern conveniences. All of the necessities of life are given him and many of the luxuries. All of this without money and without price, or the contribution of a single effort of his own or of his people. His wants are all supplied almost for the wish. The child of the wigwam becomes a modern Aladdin who has only to rub the Government lamp to gratify his desires.

Early in the day I read the following portion from the Commissioner's report, but I think it fits in here very nicely.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I ask unanimous consent that my time be extended. I think this contribution should come in at this time.

The CHAIRMAN. How much time does the gentleman desire?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I will be content with five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that his time be extended for five minutes. [After a pause.] There being no objection, the gentleman may proceed.

Mr. FITZGERALD—

Here he remains until his education is finished, when he is returned to his home—which by contrast must seem squalid indeed—to the parents whom his education must make it difficult to honor, and left to make his way against the ignorance and bigotry of his tribe. Is it any wonder he fails? Is it surprising if he lapses into barbarism?

Not having earned his education, it is not appreciated; having made no sacrifice to obtain it, it is not valued. It is looked upon as a right and not as a privilege; it is accepted as a favor to the Government and not to the recipient, and the almost inevitable tendency is to encourage dependence, foster pride, and create a spirit of arrogance and selfishness. The testimony on this point of those closely connected with the Indian employees of the service would, it is believed, be interesting.

It is not denied that some good flows from this system. It would be singular if there did not after all the effort that has been made and the money that has been lavished. In the last twenty years fully $45,000,000 have been spent by the Government alone for the education of Indian pupils, and it is a liberal estimate to put the number of those so educated at not over 20,000.

Mr. SHERMAN. Will the gentleman yield there for a question?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Yes.

Mr. SHERMAN. Does he not know that the Commissioner's report which he has before him places the number of pupils in the schools last year alone at 27,500.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I suppose this means those who have completed education in these nonreservation schools—so-called returned pupils.

If the present rate is continued for another twenty years, it will take over $70,000,000 more.

I commend that to the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, although neither of us may be here at the end of that time.

But while it is not denied that the system has produced some good results, it is seriously questioned whether it is calculated to accomplish the great end in view, which is not so much the education of the individual as the lifting up of the race.

It is contended, and with some reason, that with the same effort and much less expenditure applied locally or to the family circle far greater and much more beneficent results could have been obtained, and the tribes would have been in a much more advanced stage of civilization than at present.

On the other hand, it is said that the stream of returning pupils carries with it the refining influence of the schools and operates to elevate the people. Doubtless this is true of individual cases, and it may have some faint influence on the tribes, but will it ever sufficiently leaven the entire mass? It is doubtful. It may be possible in time to purify a fountain by cleansing its turbid waters as they pour forth and then returning them to their original source, but experience is against it. For centuries pure fresh-water streams have poured their floods into the great Salt Lake, and its waters are still salt.

Now, Mr. Chairman, this is the part of the report of the Commissioner, which is of his own creation. These are his opinions, not the opinions of a lot of subordinates who have made a fad of Indian education, and think they know more about it than all the men who ever lived, and all the men who ever will live.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. And who all of them make their living out of it.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I have stated earlier to-day, and I stated yesterday, that in my opinion the time has come to stop—to begin to prepare to abolish these schools. This school, unfortunately in my opinion, has a capacity for some 1,700 pupils, including those placed under the outing system. Those pupils must be provided for. They should not be left unprovided for; but I should be glad to vote now to spend money to erect schools on the reservations or adjacent to the reservations, schools that would take care of the pupils in this and every other nonreservation school at a distance, and to give that and all similar schools away. I believe if that were done the Indian would be benefited more than we can at all estimate. [Applause.]

Mr. MORRELL. Mr. Chairman, in support of what has just been said by the gentleman from Arizona, I should like to say that practically the same conditions exist, and the result has been the same, in the Standing Rock Reservation, in North Dakota, in regard to pupils returned from the Eastern schools. I have visited different reservations at various times, and at the last visit that I paid to the Standing Rock Reservation an Indian dance took place. These dances are only allowed on particular occasions, when the agent gives special permission. At these dances the Indians wear their tribal costumes, and at this particular dance at which I was present the Indian who went to the greatest extreme in the dance, who wore the least clothing, and who was to all intents and purposes the most ferocious of any of those engaging in the dance, was a high-honor man from one of the Eastern universities. That is just an example.

In conversation with the Indian agent and in conversation with the military authorities, it was their universal opinion that the Indians who returned from the Eastern schools relapsed in a very short time, after they had become disgusted with their coming back to their home surroundings, into a worse state of barbarism than those who were living on the reservation. At this particular reservation, at Standing Rock, there were 253 self-supporting Indians—Indians who did not cost the Government one cent for their support. As far as I could learn, there were none of those who had returned from Eastern schools. They were all those who had been brought up in the schools on the reservations.

Now, I understand it is the policy of the Government, as soon as possible, to divide these lands in severalty. If they are divided in severalty, that means that the Indian will have to engage in farming or stock raising. To what extent does the education that these Indians receive at the Eastern universities fit them for taking up this farm life? Very little. The education that they get in these universities gives them the skill to operate intricate machinery and possess a knowledge of the different sciences, and, as has just been explained by the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD], they are made so dependent upon the luxuries of the twentieth century that they are practically unfitted to go back and engage in farming. Therefore I should like to say that, from my own personal observation and from what I have learned from questioning those who have had great experience in these matters, I am heartily in accord with the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. LITTLE. I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I feel that I ought at this time to say something, not so much in justification of this bill, but to indorse the purpose as announced by a number of gentlemen on this floor, to inaugurate a policy, in so far as it can be done practically, to force the education of the Indians upon the reservations, or, if upon alloted lands, then in the communities in which they live.

I realize, evidently as the House realizes, that we can not at this time with one blow strike down these schools mentioned in the bill. I had the honor, and was pleased that it was adopted, to offer an amendment to this bill directing the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to give to Congress a detailed report at its next session of the conditions upon the various reservations in the country where it is feasible and practical to carry out a system of schools upon the reservations. There are two extremes, both of which are wrong in this discussion. The schools we have are doing much good. Conditions are different in nearly every reservation. Conditions that suit one do not meet the necessities of the other.

But I believe it to be the true policy, as indicated by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, that where it can be done the school ought to be carried to the Indian rather than the Indian to the school. The common schools throughout the country seem to meet the demands of the great population of our white people, and where it can be done, why not inaugurate a system of day schools, or industrial schools, on the reservations, in the midst of the Indian settlements, where the contrast will not be so great between the child, as now when he returns from school, and the parent, and enable the one who is being educated to uplift the entire tribe? I think that to be the best policy, and I think it can be done and produce much greater and more desirable results with half the expenditure that we are now making under the present system.

I have no hesitancy in saying that when I feel I have sufficient information that we can go along fairly and justly and properly in this direction with the Indians, so far as what little effort I can make to put it in that direction, I will use it to force the local education of the Indians. When we do that we will begin putting around them the environments of citizens in the midst of the tribe, where the parent is not embittered by taking the children away from them for years, so that they may not be seen by them, and where they can themselves visit the little schoolhouse, see the advancement of their children, where they can go to and fro if necessary, and if necessary have compulsory attendance in certain instances. If we do that, we will begin to build up a spirit of advancement in the tribe that will after a few years control.

I indorse most heartily the sentiment that is expressed about the boy on the return to his tribe—he can bring the tribe up to his standard, and not go to theirs. But a system can be inaugurated in connection with these schools to have industrial or day schools, and when a boy exhibits special or requisite qualities he could be educated in some advanced school, and return to his reservation as a teacher and uplifter of his people. That is done under the present system in many instances, and I believe if we could break down the environment that stands behind these big schools and adopt a practical, earnest policy it would elevate the entire tribes of Indians.

I believe when that can be done it will result, in a few years, in very great good to the Indians and a great reduction in expenses. When we have full details and we can have full knowledge of conditions in the various tribes we can proceed with safety. That is the view of the Commissioner, and I believe it is the sentiment of the House, and when we can get a recommendation we ought, rather than pull down, to add to the reservation schools, both industrial and day schools, and I believe that when we have done that we will save the country half the expense carried in this bill and do double the amount of good that we do under the present system. [Loud applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Arizona.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

For support of 600 Indian pupils at the Indian school at Chilocco, Okla., $100,200; for pay of superintendent at said school, $2,200; for general repairs and improvements, $3,000; for addition to boys' dormitory, $4,500; for additional building, $40,000; improving steam plant, $7,500; machine shop, $2,000; in all, $140,400.

Mr. SHERMAN. I offer an amendment simply to correct the computation.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 49, line 12, strike out "one hundred and forty" and insert in lieu thereof "one hundred and fifty-nine."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For support and education of 300 Indian pupils at the Indian school, Genoa, Nebr., $50,100; for general repairs and improvements, $5,000; for pay of superintendent of said school, $1,700; for boiler house and boilers, $10,000; in all, $66,800.

Mr. BELL. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add as a separate paragraph, between lines 21 and 22, on page 50, the following:

"For support and education of 175 Indian pupils at the Indian school at Grand Junction, Colo., $29,225; for pay of superintendent at said school, $1,500; for general repairs and improvements, $3,500; for laundry, $2,500; for improvement of water system, $8,000; for improving the sewerage system, including purchase of land, or rights of way, if necessary, $10,000, or so much thereof as may be required: Provided, The Secretary of the Interior shall thoroughly investigate sewer conditions at this school, and if deemed advisable maintain the present arrangements, with such improvements as may be deemed essential; in all, $54,725."

Mr. BELL. Mr. Chairman, this provision belonged in the bill originally, but because of some dispute about the conditions of the sewer system it was left out of the bill until information could be obtained. Since the bill was formulated the necessary information has been gotten, and this amendment has been drawn and is recommended by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs with the approval of the Committee on Indian Affairs, as I understand it.

Mr. SHERMAN. That is correct.

Mr. BELL. There is no objection to it from the Committee on Indian Affairs, and it is the wish of the Indian Department that it be passed in this way. It is one of the standard schools, with 175 pupils, well equipped, and it was simply left out, as I say, awaiting information which the committee wanted.

The question was taken; and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the support and education of 120 Indian pupils at the school at Hampton, Va., $20,040.

Mr. LITTLE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out this provision. This is a motion that I have had the honor to make for about three years. It is not a Government school and not under the supervision of the Government, but is a contract school, and, in my opinion, in opposition to the existing law, and ought to be stricken out.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I differ in the conclusion of the gentleman from Arkansas, although not in his statement of facts. It is a contract school; it is a school in which are educated four times as many colored boys and girls as there are Indians; but, Mr. Chairman, it is one of the best manual training schools in this country. Many members of the committee have been there on more than one occasion.

I have been there two or three times myself, and the conclusion I reached after being there, Mr. Chairman, was that the education of Indians there in connection with the colored children was to the advantage of the Indians, and, as a matter of fact, we appropriate much less for the support of the same number of Indians than we appropriate in any other Government school. It costs us less to educate the Indians at Hampton than in any of our own schools, for the reason that the school is largely supported by charity and that charity is extended frequently to a large extent by reason of the fact that there are Indians there as well as colored children.

I think the school is doing a splendid work, and many of the pupils are from the Southern States, where the climate differs from that where most of the other schools are situated; and it is better for the health of the pupils that they should be located there than to be sent to the Carlisle school or any other school north of Mason and Dixon's line.

Mr. LITTLE. May I interrupt the gentleman?

Mr. SHERMAN. Certainly.

Mr. LITTLE. I would like to ask if this provision is not in direct contradiction to the announced policy of Congress against contract schools?

Mr. SHERMAN. No; the Government has never made any declaration against contract schools. It has made a declaration against sectarian schools.

Mr. LITTLE. That is the same thing by a different name.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think this is in no sense a sectarian school.

Mr. LITTLE. The purpose of the Government by that declaration was simply to put the school in the hands of the Government officers who would handle and dispose of the money appropriated for the school.

Mr. SHERMAN. The distinct declaration was that the Government should not hereafter appropriate for sectarian schools.

Mr. LITTLE. That is true.

Mr. SHERMAN. I hope the amendment will not prevail.

Mr. LITTLE. I think this comes very near, if not quite, being a sectarian school.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Arkansas withdraw his amendment?

Mr. LITTLE. Oh, no.

The CHAIRMAN. What is the gentleman's amendment?

Mr. LITTLE. To strike out lines 22, 23, and 24 on page 50 of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 50 strike out the last three lines.

The question was taken, and the amendment was not agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For support and education of 750 Indian pupils at the Indian school, Haskell Institute, Lawrence, Kans., for transportation of pupils to and from said school, $130,250; for pay of superintendent at said school, $2,000; for tile draining farm, $5,000; for construction of cisterns, $3,000; for boring deep wells, $3,000; for general repairs and improvements, $10,000; in all, $153,250.

Mr. BOWERSOCK. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment:

In line 22, after the words "ten thousand dollars," insert "for the purchase of 328 acres of improved land, more or less, adjoining land now belonging to the United States, $30,000, to be immediately available."

And change total to read "in all, $183,250."

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order on that——

Mr. CURTIS. This is not subject to a point of order, Mr. Chairman; this is the same amendment that was agreed to in the committee, but the item was not inserted in the bill because we wanted to get an option on the land.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I withdraw the point of order.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. The speech of my friend from Iowa [Mr. LACEY] has probably impressed on the mind of the House a false idea of my attitude in regard to the question of Indian education. I shall not detain this committee long with an explanation. I have always been a very ardent advocate for what I considered the sensible education of the Indian.

I have been a determined enemy of what I call his sentimental and foolish education. I have not lived only among the Apache Indians or in their neighborhood, for around me everywhere are Indians whose just boast is that they have never seen the color of a white man's blood. They represent the pastoral, peaceful, kindly, humane Indian. That is the one I was speaking for this morning. It is the one for whose sensible education I was trying to provide; but I found the rule of this House prevailed against me. It has not been invoked, however, in opposition to this beautiful warm-bath education, this hothouse education, of which my friend from Iowa is so ardent an advocate.

My idea has always been and is now to educate the Indian at home, to educate him in the environment in which he is to make his living; to raise the tribe in this way at once, if we can ever raise it; to keep the Indian associated with those who have done something toward his education, and not let him drift back to mendicancy and dirt and filth and beggarly degradation.

I have pressed the question on my friend from Iowa, What becomes of the young Indian educated according to his system? He has never answered that question. The answer which the chairman of the committee has undertaken to give comes altogether from men and women who are making their living out of this system of education. I have sought to bring out the results of the education gentlemen talk about, after these Indian youths have left school.

That is the system which I inveigh against. Indian youths so educated can do no good in white communities; they can do no good at home. By such education you make of Indians unhappy men and women Indians. You place them in a position where they can not make their living. You condemn them to everlasting degradation when they get back among their people at home. I am as much a friend of Indian education as my friend from Iowa is. We proceed on very different lines.

Mr. LACEY. In reply to my friend from Arizona [Mr. SMITH] I wish to say we do not proceed on entirely different lines. I am as heartily in favor of the local education of the Indian as he is. I believe it is essential that we should bring education to the home of the Indian. But because we want to continue to educate the Indians at home, on the reservations, it does not follow that the plan of selecting young Indians and giving them the opportunities they have had at our general training schools should be abandoned. If the Indian boy or the Indian girl attend school near their homes, then, at night or on Sundays, they are back with their families, so that indirectly the entire family shares the benefit of the education that the children are receiving.

I do not wish this committee to understand for one moment, as my friend assumes, that those who are in favor of the Carlisle school are opposed to the local education of the Indian. Not at all. Such schools as that at Carlisle are really an adjunct to the local education of the Indian. The local education is the important thing after all. You must bring to the Indian children in their home communities the opportunity for education if you would elevate the entire race.

The boys who are educated in the home school have, during the evenings or on holidays, the opportunity to do something else than study their books. They have the opportunity to continue that family relation which will be elevated and benefited by the education that the Indian boy or the Indian girl receives in the local school. So that it does not at all follow that if you are in favor of the local schools you should desire to break down these central schools; nor does it follow that because you are in favor of the central schools the local schools should be abandoned. These two classes of schools should move hand in hand.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Chairman, I do not know anything about the Indians on the reservations. I live within a few miles of a school in which there are 1,100 Indian youth—the Carlisle School; and I think if the gentleman from Arizona would visit that school several times he would change his opinion. The young Indians are brought there with the blankets on them. Some of such youths graduated last year in the senior class of Dickinson College. They go away from that institution well educated. While there they come into contact with our civilization. They get an education outside of that which they would get on the reservations—education by observation. During the summer months—the vacation months—the demand from the farmers and business men of that vicinity for these Indian boys and girls is so great that Colonel Pratt can not supply it. They are taken out of the institution and placed in the homes of the white people of the neighborhood.

Thus they go into the homes of the farmers—some of the best in the Cumberland Valley. They go into our banks, our mercantile houses. They see how the white people live. At the end of four years these Indian boys and girls have been thoroughly educated, not only in book knowledge, but in the industrial arts. They become fine mechanics, wagon makers, harness makers; they become adepts in all the trades that are carried on in that great institution. Colonel Pratt, an officer of the Regular Army, who is in charge of the institution, says in his report that 92 per cent of all the boys and girls educated there become useful citizens. Not many of them (there may be a few) go back and take up the tribal relation.

Now, Mr. Chairman, after that careful education, after they have lived like our people, educated by observation and by teachers in that school, if that will not civilize and make citizens out of these Indians, what in the name of God will do it? The gentleman has tried the schools in the reservations of the tribes. I make no opposition to them, but just so long as these people are kept in these schools on the reservation they will hold fast to their tribal traditions. Take 1,000 white boys and girls from the civilized part of the country and put them on a reservation of 100,000 acres and fence them in, and by the time they reach the age of 20 or 25 they will have lost all the good they would have received if they had been raised and educated at the home they came from.

Now, with the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LACEY], I have always voted and will vote to support these schools on the reservations. They can go so far, but no further; but do not take away these higher schools, which means an education for the Indians which you can never give them in the schools on the reservations. Does he tell me that the schools on the reservations could educate the Indian boy so that he could pass through the Dickinson College at Carlisle and graduate with high honors? That is not an uncommon thing for him to do to-day, and if I had time to furnish statistics, I could show you that the Indian boys all through our country and in other parts of this country are in banking institutions, they are carrying on trades, and I am one of the men who believe, and always have, if you are going to break up these tribal relations and lift these Indians out of the place they have been in for a hundred years, that the way to do it is to take their children who want to go and educate them to a higher life and higher civilization.

I would refer the gentleman to the report of Colonel Pratt on the Indian schools. If the gentleman will read that, he will find that a tab is kept on every boy and girl in that school, and if you will refer to Colonel Pratt, he will tell you where they are and what they are doing. Now, I visit that school frequently. I have seen Indian boys come in there right from the Pawnee Indians, without any knowledge hardly of the life that we lead, and I say that when they retire from there in four or five years they are citizens fully equipped for the battle of life. I hope the gentleman will not try to break up these schools. This school that I refer to is not in my district, but it is right next to me and I have seen enough of it from observation of what is done there and by visits paid to the school, to know that the work they are doing there can not be done for the Indians in the schools on the reservations.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

The Clerk read as follows:

For support and education of 300 Indian pupils at the Indian school, Mount Pleasant, Mich., $50,100; for pay of superintendent of said school, $1,700; for general repairs and improvements, $2,000; for enlarging school buildings, $8,000; in all, $61,800.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I offer the following amendment, which I will ask the Clerk to read:

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 23, page 52, after the word "dollars," add:

"Provided, That no part of the sum herewith appropriated for pay of superintendents shall be paid to the present occupant of that office."

Mr. SHERMAN. I raise a point of order against that provision.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman wish to discuss the point of order?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I ask the gentleman to reserve his point.

Mr. SHERMAN. Very well; I will reserve my point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman wish to discuss the point of order?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I will first discuss the fact, and then if anyone insists on the point of order, I will do so at that time. I think that the facts when disclosed will convince the gentleman that he should not insist upon his point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman insist upon his point of order?

Mr. SHERMAN. I reserve my point of order and make no objection to the gentleman speaking.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman may proceed.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, this is an unusual amendment, but it is really justified by extraordinary circumstances. It would not have been offered by me if I knew of any other way in which the superintendent of this school could be deprived of his office. He is the man who, according to the official reports on file in the Indian Office, is unfit for any position in the service. He is a man who, while the superintendent of an Indian school, has been responsible for and has permitted, through incompetency and neglect, the debauchery of the pupils under his control.

In the face of an official report sent to the Indian Bureau by one of its inspectors, showing without question this man's responsibility, he was not only not removed from the service, but he was transferred to this, a better, school and his salary raised. Had I known these facts in time, I would have gone to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and insisted upon this man's immediate dismissal. I doubt if it would have done any good, since these facts have been in his possession since June, 1900. And I will say now, Mr. Chairman, that I have only become acquainted with these facts since the session began to-day.

In 1899 the present superintendent of the Mount Pleasant Indian school, located at Mount Pleasant, Mich., was the superintendent of the Shoshone Indian boarding school. He received a salary of $1,400 a year. An indian inspector visited that reservation and reported upon certain abuses existing in that school. He made another visit, some time in May or June, 1900. He found at that time that this superintendent had been transferred from the Shoshone school to the Mount Pleasant Indian school.

In a report which he made to the Department, dated June 4, 1900, contained in Senate Document 201, entitled "Reports and sundry letters and statements of physicians and Indian inspectors relative to the conduct and management of Indian schools, the prevention of tuberculosis and other contagious diseases therein, lack of segregation of healthy children, and the appalling mortality from such and other causes, to accompany Senate resolution No. 125," of the first session of the Fifty-seventh Congress, printed on the 17th of the present month, he calls the attention of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to the condition that existed at the Shoshone school under this man, in order that he might not be in the dark as to his character and ability. He also refers to one C. W. Snyder, an industrial teacher at the Shoshone school.

In the volume of the annual reports of the Department of the Interior for 1900, including the report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, with the indices, it appears that this Snyder was upon the rolls as an employee of the Department on the 30th day of June, 1900, some twenty-six days after this report was made. To-day I telephoned to the Indian Office to ascertain whether this man E. C. Nardin was at present in charge of the Mount Pleasant Training School, and from the office I received the information that he was.

It is with a good deal of delicacy that I approach this subject. There are matters contained in this report that are not only not fit to be mentioned in this House, but are not fit to be printed in any report save under exceptional circumstances.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, if the report of that agent has any reasonable proof at all to depend upon I agree with the gentleman that the person not only ought not to be superintendent of a school, but he ought not to be in the Indian service or in the Government service; and if there is no other way to get rid of him than the one you propose I am for that plan, and I withdraw my point of order. [Applause.]

Mr. FITZGERALD. I just wish to say that although the Commissioner of Indian Affairs said, in his report in 1899, that none but strong Christian characters were placed in charge of the children in these schools, he has known of these infamous practices for almost two years, and the reward for this man's action has been his advancement and increase of salary. It is a disgrace not only to this Government but to civilization, and I hope to God such men will soon be turned out of office.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I should like to ask the gentleman a question. I have not followed his statement exactly, but is that department of the Government under the civil-service law? [Laughter.]

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I know of no law, civil service or other, that will justify the retention in office of a man responsible for this.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I wanted to know how he got there, and how he got promoted; that is all.

Mr. FITZGERALD. My impression is that he is not under the civil-service law.

Mr. GROSVENOR. How did he get out from under it?

Mr. FITZGERALD. He is probably protected either by the Commissioner or by some one whose influence with the Commissioner is so great that he dare not remove him, and the only way to get rid of him is by giving publicity to the facts.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I quite agree with the gentleman, but you will find out that this individual is carefully covered by the civil-service law.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Let me call your attention to the fact that the President of the United States removed a so-called historian from the naval service because he had cast some reflections upon a naval officer. I refer to Maclay.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Yes.

Mr. FITZGERALD. A report on file in the Indian Office for almost two years says:

The Indian police were sent out on this reservation and parents compelled to deliver up their daughters to the guardianship of Superintendent Nardin, who, through incompetency and neglect, permitted them to be debauched.

Mr. GROSVENOR. That is all right. I quite agree with the gentleman, and he need not argue with me about that. What I want is to get the history of this gentleman, where he came from, what he gets, and how he came to be promoted.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I have no way of finding out how he came to be promoted, but if this limitation is put upon this appropriation he will have to get out.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I think you will find you will have to take him out from under the civil service then.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I say this: In my opinion no member of the Indian Affairs Committee is responsible for this. It is information which is embalmed deep in the records of the Department. The Commissioner had this knowledge. The report was made in June, 1900. If the President could remove a laborer, a so-called historian, for an alleged reflection on some naval officer, why not, in the name of God, put out such an official as this?

Mr. GROSVENOR. It could only be done by a repeal of the civil service.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Then it ought to be repealed, if it is necessary, to stop a thing of this kind.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. LACEY. I ask that the gentleman's time be extended.

The CHAIRMAN. For how long does the gentleman ask that the time of the gentleman from New York be extended?

Mr. LACEY. For ten minutes.

Mr. LITTLE. Until he concludes his remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. Unanimous consent is asked that the time of the gentleman may be continued until he concludes his remarks. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I have ascertained further that this man Snyder is evidently still in the Government employ. He was the industrial teacher at the Shoshone Indian school. The report of the Commissioner itself shows that twenty days after this report was made he was still in the service. This report says that after seducing an Indian girl he married her, and was then in the service.

This man Nardin, too, is now in office. When the first report was made to the Commissioner he was removed from the school. He was receiving there a salary of $1,400. He was transferred to the Mount Pleasant school, where he receives a salary of $1,700. Evidently a price was put upon him for permitting, through incompetency and neglect, the debauching these girls.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Will the gentleman state the name of the inspector who made that report?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I do not know.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I would also like to know if a subsequent report was not made by another inspector of this man's character and standing?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I do not know.

Mr. LACEY. This paper is not signed by anybody.

Mr. FITZGERALD. If the man had signed that report he might be involved in a number of libel suits.

Mr. LACEY. Does he not wind up with the statement that this gentleman is a high-toned Christian gentleman?

Mr. FITZGERALD. That was just what I wanted. Now I will read from this report. It is headed "United States Indian Service, Shoshone Agency, Wyo., June 4, 1900:"

I think the Commissioner is to be congratulated for the fortunate changes he has made in the school employees. Everything about the place has taken on a new appearance. Life and vigor have been injected into each department.

The new superintendent seems to be a man of energy and tact, and his management up to present writing promises success.

There is another change, however, which I think should be made.

C. W. Snyder, industrial teacher, should be deposed.

He was there twenty days after this report was made.

He married Viola Hereford, an Indian employee, last October, after seducing her, and they now have a promising child nearly or quite 4 months old.

As will no doubt be remembered, while I was here last October I reported that this school was badly managed; that boys were in the habit of visiting the girls' dormitories during the night, and that the then superintendent and his wife, who was the matron, did not seem to have control of the situation.

I did not enter into details, wishing to avoid as much as possible a scandal on the school; but since coming here this time I learn that the then superintendent, Mr. Nardin, has been promoted and placed in charge of Mount Pleasant Industrial School, Michigan. Thinking that you should know the condition which existed here under Mr. Nardin, I transmit herewith the statements taken at an investigation recently made at the school by United States Indian Agent Nickerson, together with the affidavits of the employees who assisted him.

These findings corroborate my report made last October, and show that this school has educated more girls to harlotry than any similar school in the service.

The Indian police were sent out on this reservation and parents compelled to deliver up their daughters to the guardianship of Superintendent Nardin, who, through incompetency and neglect, permitted them to be debauched. This is plain language, but duty compels me to make it so.

I have no personal enmity against Mr. Nardin; we both came from the same State. He is a scholar, and, I believe, a Christian gentleman—but in the economy of Providence he was not designed to be superintendent of this or any other Indian school.

[Laughter]—

Now I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. LACEY. Read the balance of it to show that it is purely and absolutely a blank charge that is here.

Mr. FITZGERALD. It is in Senate Document 201.

Mr. LACEY—

Respectfully submitted.

——— ———,

United States Indian Inspector.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Oh, well, if the gentleman will go to the Indian Office he will get the name of the inspector.

Mr. LACEY. But we want to get the name from the gentleman on the floor.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I have not got it. This is contained in an official document of the Senate, and if that man had signed that himself he would——

Mr. SHERMAN. If the gentleman from New York will permit me, I will state that I have just telephoned to the Indian Commissioner, and he has never heard of this transaction; there has been no such report made to him, and these facts have been developed before the Senate committee. The inspector is not now in the service.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Oh——

Mr. SHERMAN. He was not in the service when he made such report to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and the Commissioner further tells me that there is not one line in his office charging immorality upon this superintendent or reflecting upon his character in any way.

Mr. FITZGERALD. This report is addressed, I should have said, in justice to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, to his superior, the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. LACEY. It is not signed. It is a blank charge, signed by no one.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I will say to the gentleman from Iowa that if this were in an anonymous report it would justify an investigation. Read the sworn statements of the Indian girls in there, that I would not dare to put in the RECORD.

Mr. LACEY. Sworn before whom? This blank inspector?

Mr. FITZGERALD. No, sir; taken before Indian Agent Nickerson. It refers to this matter in terms. If it is withheld by the Secretary of the Interior, it must be because of his consideration. Here in this same document is proof of another case much worse than this; but the man personally guilty was not prosecuted because he resigned under pressure. It was at the Indian school of the Hualapai Reservation in Arizona.

Mr. HENRY C. SMITH. When?

Mr. FITZGERALD. September 27, 1900, the affidavit is dated.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman has referred to the removal of a man by the name of Maclay, which everybody justifies the President in doing. I sympathize with the gentleman, and if he will prefer charges against this man the President will remove him. That is the way to get him out of the civil service.

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Chairman, this is a very important matter. No one wants to defend any such transaction as is charged here against Mr. Narvin.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I do not charge anybody.

Mr. LACEY. My friend is mistaken when he says that this document shows that this evidence was taken before the Indian agent. It is a blank charge, and the affidavits are not sworn to. He ought to be able, in making a charge of this kind against Superintendent Narvin, of whom I never heard—but he ought to be able to name the party from whom he gets the information. I suggest that by unanimous consent this paragraph be passed over until we dispose of the rest of the bill. We do not want to do any injustice to Superintendent Narvin or anybody else. The gentleman from New York says he never heard of this document until he found it on his desk.

Mr. FITZGERALD. No; I found the document on my desk with a memorandum on it.

Mr. LACEY. Who made the memorandum?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I do not know.

Mr. LACEY. The gentleman doesn't know who fired the document onto his desk?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I have no objection to the suggestion of the gentleman from Iowa that the amendment be passed over for the present.

The CHAIRMAN. Unanimous consent is asked that this paragraph be passed over until the bill is completed. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I wish to state that what I have read is from a Senate document printed at this session of Congress, and this was referred to the Indian Committee of the Senate on the 17th of the present month. I think that when information of that character is contained in such a document it is justification enough for anybody on the floor of this House to bring it to the attention of the House.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I simply want to say two or three words. In my judgment, there is nothing in the civil-service law or in any other statute of this country that will protect any man in any public place under the Government in doing the acts that the gentleman from New York, my colleague, charges were done in this case. I do not believe that a man can be protected under the civil-service law for the fraction of a second, nor do I believe that any man anywhere in the Indian Service could stay in that service for one single day, under any reasonable evidence before the Commissioner of Indian Affairs that he had conducted himself in the manner my colleague indicates this superintendent has.

Mr. Chairman, in my judgment the present Commissioner of Indian Affairs is a clean, capable, upright, careful, painstaking, Christian gentleman. [Applause.] A man than whom no other has ever discharged the duties of that place better; a man who in private and public life is clean, whose record courts scrutiny beneath the rays of the midday sun. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I believe that any person who will present to him a single particle of undisputed evidence or well-sustained evidence that any man under him has conducted himself, either in reference to morality or in reference to finance or in reference to personal deportment, in a manner to bring discredit on the service of the Government, would be instantly discharged.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I think the proper way to dispose of this matter is for the gentleman from New York to withdraw his amendment. I will go with him in the morning to the Indian Office, and I will do anything in my power to see that all these charges are probed to the bottom at the earliest possible moment. If there is anybody in the Indian service who winks at such conduct, I guarantee that he will leave the service before to-morrow night. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. MONDELL, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 11353, the Indian appropriation bill, and had come to no resolution thereon.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bill of the following title; in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 3518. An act granting a pension to Nadine A. Turchin.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

Mr. WACHTER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had presented this day to the President of the United States for his approval bills of the following titles:

H. R. 9312. An act granting an increase of pension to Kate Virginia Dewey Cushing;

H. R. 6459. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary F. Hooper;

H. R. 5002. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas H. McConnaughey;

H. R. 815. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry S. Comer;

H. R. 5259. An act granting an increase of pension to Gustav Schwartz;

H. R. 2628. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew Mulholland;

H. R. 286. An act granting an increase of pension to Lawrentus Lane;

H. R. 6684. An act granting an increase of pension to Marshall Bachelder;

H. R. 5162. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew H. Gifford;

H. R. 2240. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph Church;

H. R. 2429. An act granting an increase of pension to John C. Morrison;

H. R. 2617. An act granting an increase of pension to John Rapple;

H. R. 1728. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. Thompson;

H. R. 5753. An act granting an increase of pension to Emil Frank;

H. R. 4268. An act granting an increase of pension to James D. Woodward;

H. R. 4128. An act granting an increase of pension to David Cupps;

H. R. 2455. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. McClure;

H. R. 3184. An act granting an increase of pension to David Petee;

H. R. 5149. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles E. Bachelder;

H. R. 3413. An act granting an increase of pension to Jedediah S. Vallet;

H. R. 5108. An act granting an increase of pension to Elisha B. Taylor, alias Elisha F. Bisbee;

H. R. 287. An act granting an increase of pension to Leighton J. Folsom;

H. R. 2484. An act granting an increase of pension to Jeremiah Evans;

H. R. 3300. An act granting an increase of pension to George B. Boyd;

H. R. 1374. An act granting an increase of pension to James Willard;

H. R. 2265. An act granting an increase of pension to Martin V. Hathaway;

H. R. 6720. An act granting an increase of pension to George Patterson;

H. R. 3024. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas V. Straw;

H. R. 3511. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary C. Newcomb;

H. R. 5860. An act granting an increase of pension to Edward B. Scott;

H. R. 5147. An act granting an increase of pension to Theodore Lane;

H. R. 2416. An act granting an increase of pension to John B. Wilcox;

H. R. 1285. An act granting an increase of pension to Cyrus Odell;

H. R. 6465. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel Briscoe;

H. R. 6926. An act granting a pension to Mabel H. Lazear;

H. R. 2983. An act to amend an act entitled "An act granting an increase of pension to Frances M. Thompson, approved March 3, 1901;

H. R. 10780. An act to transfer the county of Carroll from the northwestern division of the northern district of Georgia to the northern district of Georgia of the United States district and circuit courts, and for other purposes;

H. R. 2528. An act granting a pension to Helen M. Evans;

H. R. 1017. An act granting a pension to Mary Tripp;

H. R. 4037. An act granting a pension to Julia Maher;

H. R. 3230. An act granting a pension to Catherine Pflueger;

H. R. 2412. An act granting a pension to Helen L. Pepper;

H. R. 2321. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph R. Martin;

H. R. 2607. An act granting an increase of pension to Uriah S. Karmany;

H. R. 7408. An act granting an increase of pension to Levi Cross;

H. R. 2193. An act granting an increase of pension to David A. Ireland;

H. R. 2502. An act granting an increase of pension to Ambrose Burton;

H. R. 4208. An act granting an increase of pension to Susan M. Pardee; and

H. R. 5169. An act granting an increase of pension to Hiram S. Kingsley.

IMPROVING FORT STREET, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following change of reference, which was made without objection:

The bill (H. R. 11477) for improving Fort street between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets northeast, and for other purposes, from the Committee on the District of Columbia to the Committee on Appropriations.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, Mr. LESTER obtained leave of absence for three days, on account of important business.

And then, on motion of Mr. PAYNE (at 4 o'clock and 43 minutes p. m.), the House adjourned until to-morrow at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims transmitting a copy of the conclusions of fact and law in the French spoliation cases relating to the ship Glascow, M. Alcorn, master, against the United States—to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers submitting a draft of proposed legislation relating to bridges over the Illinois and Mississippi Canal—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting documents relating to the claim of William S. Beauchamp—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

ADVERSE REPORTS.

Under clause 2, Rule XIII, adverse reports were delivered to the Clerk, and laid on the table, as follows:

Mr. PARKER, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 1073) granting an honorable discharge to St. J. Gardner, and correcting the date of his muster out from the service, reported the same adversely, accompanied by a report (No. 571); which said bill and report were laid on the table.

Mr. SULZER (by request), from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 139) an act for the relief of Edward Byrne, reported February 18, 1902, adversely, accompanied by a report (No. 564); said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar, pursuant to clause 2 of Rule XIII.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

Mr. CALDWELL, from the Committee on War Claims, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 10763) for the relief of R. T. Priddy, executor of John D. Priddy, deceased, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 572); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. GIBSON, from the Committee on War Claims, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 18) for the relief of the legal representatives of Napoleon B. Giddings, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 573); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CALDWELL, from the Committee on War Claims, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 5720), reported in lieu thereof a resolution (H. Res. 138) referring to the Court of Claims the papers in the case of Fannie Pemberton, accompanied by a report (No. 574); which said resolution and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of the following bills, which were referred as follows:

A bill (H. R. 9948) granting a pension to Sarah Francis Taft, widow of Charles Sabin Taft—Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 11590) granting a pension to Nancy E. Hardy—Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. RODEY: A bill (H. R. 11603) for the erection of a public building at Albuquerque, N. Mex.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11604) to validate certain bonds of the Territory of New Mexico—to the Committee on the Territories.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11605) to validate certain bonds of the Territory of New Mexico—to the Committee on the Territories.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11606) to validate certain bonds of the Territory of New Mexico—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. BLACKBURN: A bill (H. R. 11607) making an appropriation for a public building at Wilkesboro, N. C., and for other purposes—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. PEARRE: A bill (H. R. 11608) authorizing the extension of Kalorama avenue—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. RICHARDSON of Alabama: A bill (H. R. 11609) for the construction of a waterway and barge canal connecting the waters of the Mississippi River with those of the St. Marys River, in the State of Georgia, along the landlocked waters of the coast of Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, and Florida, and a canal from St. Georges Sound, in Florida, to the St. Marys River, in Georgia—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. SOUTHWICK: A bill (H. R. 11610) to prevent the brewing of impure beer—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. BALL of Texas: A bill (H. R. 11611) to divide the State of Texas into four judicial districts—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SCOTT: A bill (H. R. 11612) amending section 4708 of the Revised Statutes of the United States in relation to pensions to remarried widows as amended by an act approved March 3, 1901—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. JONES of Washington: A bill (H. R. 11613) to establish a fish-hatching and fish station in Yakima County, in the State of Washington—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. BABCOCK: A bill (H. R. 11614) to prevent vicious and evilly disposed persons from resorting to the District of Columbia for the purpose of committing crime—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts: Memorial relative to an amendment of the Constitution of the United States enabling Congress to enact laws regulating hours of labor—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BELLAMY: A joint resolution (H. J. Res. 155) granting permission for the erection of a monument in Charlotte, N. C., for the ornamentation of the public grounds in that city—to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. HOWARD: A concurrent resolution (H. C. Res. 33) that the Secretary of War be directed to cause an examination and survey of Oconee River, in Georgia—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. BARTLETT: A concurrent resolution (H. C. Res. 34) for a survey of the Oconee River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. NAPHEN: Memorial relating to an amendment of the Constitution of the United States enabling Congress to enact laws regulating hours of labor—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills of the following titles were presented and referred as follows:

By Mr. BINGHAM: A bill (H. R. 11615) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Wesley Stilwell—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11616) granting an increase of pension to Isaac Harris—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11617) for the relief of Nathan Van Beil, of Philadelphia, and others—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BULL (by request): A bill (H. R. 11618) for the relief of Oliva J. Baker, widow of Julian G. Baker, deceased, late an employee in the navy-yard factory, Washington, D. C.—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. DAVIS of Florida: A bill (H. R. 11619) granting an increase of pension to David A. Frier—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. DAYTON: A bill (H. R. 11620) for the relief of William J. Knott, executor of estate of Samuel Knott, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. EMERSON: A bill (H. R. 11621) to correct the military record of H. J. Rowell—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. FINLEY: A bill (H. R. 11622) to remove the charge of desertion against Frederick Schulte, or Schuldt—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. FOSS: A bill (H. R. 11623) granting an increase of pension to John Blackler—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GRIFFITH: A bill (H. R. 11624) granting an increase of pension to George M. Palmer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HILL: A bill (H. R. 11625) granting an increase of pension to Alexander H. Taylor, late of Company E, of the Twelfth Connecticut Volunteer Infantry, now a resident of Norwalk, Conn.—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KETCHAM: A bill (H. R. 11626) to authorize the Secretary of War to acquire, by purchase or condemnation, Constitution Island, in the State of New York—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. McANDREWS: A bill (H. R. 11627) granting a pension to L. M. Ferrier—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. NAPHEN: A bill (H. R. 11628) to remove the charge of desertion standing against the military record of Michael Clifford, alias Michael Kelleher—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. POWERS of Maine: A bill (H. R. 11629) granting an increase of pension to Sophronia Q. Head—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11630) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of David Hulbert—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. RICHARDSON of Alabama: A bill (H. R. 11631) for the relief of the heirs of Robert Bynum—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11632) for the relief of the heirs of John Smith, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11633) for the relief of the heirs of Horatio Anderson—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11634) for the relief of James R. Nance, of Newmarket, Ala.—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11635) for the relief of the heirs of John Meals, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. ROBERTSON of Louisiana: A bill (H. R. 11636) providing for the transfer of the title of the military reservation of Baton Rouge, La., to the Louisiana State University and Agricultural College—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. RODEY: A bill (H. R. 11637) for the relief of Anastocio de Baca, administrator of Francisco de Baca, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. SCHIRM: A bill (H. R. 11638) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Hyman—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11639) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Thomas Hewing—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11640) granting a pension to John Tufts—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SHATTUC: A bill (H. R. 11641) granting an increase of pension to Samuel B. Loewenstine, late first lieutenant Company

K, First Kentucky Volunteer Infantry—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HENRY C. SMITH: A bill (H. R. 11642) granting an increase of pension to Margaret Fitzpatrick, Hudson, Mich.—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SPIGHT: A bill (H. R. 11643) for the relief of heirs of Mrs. Susan L. Bailey, deceased, of Marshall County, Miss.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. STEWART of New Jersey: A bill (H. R. 11644) granting a pension to Edgar A. Hamilton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TOMPKINS of Ohio: A bill (H. R. 11645) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Wilson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11646) granting a pension to James H. Dickson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11647) to remove charge of "absent without leave" against military record of James W. Byrd and grant him an honorable discharge—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11648) for the relief of Robert W. Caldwell—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WHEELER: A bill (H. R. 11649) for the relief of R. H. Starks—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SMITH of Illinois: A bill (H. R. 11650) to restore and retire, as a captain of cavalry, Thomas J. Spencer, late a captain, Tenth United States Cavalry—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. ACHESON: Resolution of Major Gaston Post, No. 544, Grand Army of the Republic, of Gastonville, Pa., and Tube Workers' Union No. 8077, Washington, Pa., favoring the construction of war vessels in the Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, petition of Coopers' International Union No. 102, Brownsville, Pa.; Tube Workers' Union No. 8077, Washington, Pa.; Mine Workers' Union No. 1315, of Roscoe, Pa., and Tin-Plate Workers' Union No, 30, of Washington, Pa., concerning the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of the Engineers' Club of Philadelphia, Pa., for securing a national forest reserve in the Appalachian Mountains—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. BARTLETT: Resolutions of Simpson Division, No. 210, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Macon, Ga., in favor of laws restricting immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolution of the council of the city of Savannah, Ga., for the establishment of a subtreasury of the United States at Savannah, Ga.—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BULL: Resolution of Journeymen Barbers' Union No. 361, Pawtucket, R. I., favoring the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. BURLEIGH: Petition of Colonel L. H. Kendall Command, No. 106, Spanish War Veterans, Biddeford, Me., for recognition by Congress of the services of Clara Barton in the late war—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, resolutions of Nathan F. Blunt Post, No. 109, of Bingham, Me., and Bath Union, No. 466, of Bath, Me., favoring the building of war ships in the navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. BURK of Pennsylvania: Resolutions of the Merchants' Exchange of San Francisco, Cal., favoring the enacting of a law permitting the mercantile classes of China to enter the United States—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of the board of supervisors of Mohave County, Ariz., protesting against any legislation exempting the Santa Fe Pacific Railway Company from taxation in Arizona Territory—to the Committee on Pacific Railroads.

Also, resolution of the Engineers' Club, of Philadelphia, for a national forest reserve—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. BURKETT: Paper to accompany House bill for the relief of William H. Spradling—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CANDLER: Papers to accompany House bill No. 11551—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. CASSEL: Resolution of Central Labor Union of Lancaster, Pa., in favor of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. CASSINGHAM: Resolution of Central Trades and Labor Council of Coshocton, Ohio, praying for the further restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. CURRIER: Petitions of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Water Village, Nottingham, Tilton, Sanbornville, Wilton, Meredith, Center Sandwich, Plymouth, Wolfboro, Northwood, and Manchester, N. H., for an amendment to the National Constitution defining legal marriage to be monogamic—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DEEMER: Resolutions of Post 66, of Muncy, Pa., Post 258, of Westfield, Pa., and Post 476, of Millerton, Pa., Grand Army of the Republic, favoring the construction of war vessels in Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. EDWARDS: Resolution of Federal Labor Union No. 175, of Kalispell, Mont., favoring the construction of war vessels in Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, petition of Federal Labor Union No. 175, of Kalispell, Mont., favoring the passage of the Chinese-exclusion law—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. EMERSON: Protest of Boston (Mass.) Belting Company, against the enactment into law of House bill 3076—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. ESCH: Resolution of Machinists' Union No. 173, Eau Clair, Wis, favoring the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of the Merchants' Exchange of San Francisco, Cal., for the admission of the mercantile class of Chinese—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. FITZGERALD: Resolution of the board of supervisors of Mohave County, Ariz., urging Congress to fix an equitable tax valuation upon the property of the Santa Fe Pacific Railway Company's property in Arizona—to the Committee on Pacific Railroads.

Also, resolution of Merchants' Exchange of San Francisco, Cal., urging Congress to permit the unrestricted immigration of all Chinese merchants and barring every class of coolie labor—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. FOSS: Resolution of Carpenters and Joiners' Union No. 448, of Waukegan, Ill., praying for the further restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, papers to accompany bill 11623 for the relief of John Blackler—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GIBSON: Petition of Holston Division 239, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Knoxville, Tenn., praying for the further restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. GILL: Petitions of United Mine Workers of Yorkville, citizens of Jefferson County, Ohio Valley Lodge, No. 12, Martins Ferry Branch, No. 73, Bellaire Mine Workers, No. 652, of Klee, Belmont Central Trades and Labor Union, of Bellaire, all in the State of Ohio, favoring the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. GRAHAM: Petition of Keystone Division, No. 293, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, of Allegheny, Pa., for the restriction of illiterate immigrants—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolution of the Merchants' Exchange of San Francisco, Cal., favoring the admission of the mercantile class of Chinese in the United States—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of Mrs. James A. Wilson and others of Allegheny, Pa., for an amendment to the National Constitution defining legal marriage to be monogamic—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. GRIFFITH: Petition of Hiram Williamson Post, No. 465, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Indiana, for investigation of the administration of the Bureau of Pensions—to the Committee on Rules.

Also, resolution of Carriage and Wagon Makers' Union No. 71, of Lawrenceburg, Ind., urging legislation to exclude the Chinese from this country—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of Carriage and Wagon Makers' Union No. 71, of Lawrenceburg, Ind., praying for the further restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. HEMENWAY: Resolution of Potters' Union No. 5, Evansville, Ind., and Post No. 520, Grand Army of the Republic, of Oakland City, Ind., favoring the building of vessels in the United States navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolutions of Leather Workers' Union No. 59 and Leather Workers of Horse Goods, of Evansville, Ind., for the further restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. HENRY of Connecticut: Petition of Samuel Brown Post, No. 56, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Connecticut, for investigation of the administration of the Bureau of Pensions—to the Committee on Rules.

Also, petition of citizens of Hartford, Conn., in behalf of statistical information relative to marriage and divorce—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HILL: Papers to accompany House bill 11625, for the relief of Alexander H. Taylor—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. JACKSON of Kansas: Resolution of the Industrial Council of Pittsburg, Kans., favoring the exclusion of Chinese—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. KAHN: Resolution of Coal Yard Teamsters' Union No. 285, of San Francisco, Cal., for an educational test in the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolutions of Marine Cooks and Stewards' Association of the Pacific Coast, and Sailors' Union of the Pacific; Metal Workers' Union No. 27; Coal Yard Teamsters' Union No. 285; Butcher Workman's Protective Union No. 115; Cigar Makers' Union 469; Leather Workers' Union No. 9; San Francisco Lodge, No. 68, Association of Machinists, urging the passage of House bill No. 9330, favoring the continuation of the exclusion law against Chinese laborers—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of the Sailors' Union of the Pacific, protesting against the passage of House bill No. 9685—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. KETCHAM: Petition of the United Garment Workers of America No. 84, of Wappingers Falls, N. Y., favoring an educational test in the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolutions of Cigar Makers' Union No. 84, of Saugerties, N. Y., and Queen City Lodge, No. 2, Amalgamated Iron, Steel, and Tin Workers, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., in favor of the exclusion of Chinese laborers—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. LACEY: Petition of John Gilman, of Oskaloosa, Iowa, praying for the enactment of a law against polygamy—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, resolutions of the Merchants' Exchange of San Francisco, Cal., favoring the admission of certain classes of Chinese—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. LINDSAY: Resolutions of the New York division of the American Wire Weavers' Protective Association, for an educational test in the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolution of the American Wire Weavers' Protective Association of New York, in favor of the exclusion of Chinese laborers—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. LONG: Papers to accompany House bill 6105, for the relief of E. J. Essex—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, resolutions of Thomas W. Sweeney Post, No. 361, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Kansas, for the building of war vessels in the United States navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. MANN: Resolutions of Cigar Makers' Union No. 247, Blue Island; Carpenters and Joiners' Union 199, South Chicago; Glass Workers' Union No. 4, Chicago Heights, Ill., in favor of the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. MAYNARD: Petitions of Typographical Union No. 353 and Cigar Makers' Union No. 412, of Newport News; Machinists' Union No. 441, of Portsmouth; Seamen's Union of Norfolk; Shipbuilders' Union of Portsmouth, State of Virginia, and report of the Chamber of Commerce of New York, relating to Chinese exclusion—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of Bricklayers and Masons' International Unions of Newport News and Norfolk, Va., urging the employment of union men in the construction of the naval dry dock at New Orleans, La.—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolutions of Cigar Makers' Unions of Norfolk and Newport News, Va., favoring a further restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of General W. T. Sherman Post, No. 44, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Virginia, for investigation of the administration of the Bureau of Pensions—to the Committee on Rules.

Also, resolutions of Cigar Makers' Union and Cailloux Post, No. 2, Grand Army of the Republic, of Norfolk, Va., relative to the construction of vessels in Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. McDERMOTT: Petition of Twelfth Ward Democratic Club of Jersey City, N. J., asking mediation by the United States in favor of the patriots of the South African republics—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. McRAE: Resolution of Division 182, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, of Little Rock, Ark., for the passage of laws which will prevent the immigration of persons who can not read—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts: Resolution of Cigar Makers' Union No. 324, of Gloucester, Mass., advocating the construction of war vessels in United States navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolution of the Cigar Makers' Union No. 324, of Gloucester, Mass., favoring Chinese exclusion—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of the New England Shoe and Leather Association, favoring amendments to the interstate-commerce laws—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. MORRELL: Resolution of the Engineers' Club of Philadelphia, Pa., in favor of the Appalachian National Park Association—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, petition of Merchants' Exchange of California, relating to the Chinese-exclusion law—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. PALMER: Petition of the Medical Society of Luzerne County, Pa., favoring the passage of House bill 7189, to increase the efficiency of the Marine-Hospital Service—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Cigar Makers' Union 459 and Central Labor Union of Hazleton; Carpenters' and Joiners' Union No. 102, of Wilkesbarre, Pa.; Powder Workers' Union No. 8974, of Wapwallopen, Pa., favoring the passage of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of Cigar Makers' Union No. 459, of Hazleton, Pa., for an educational test in the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. PARKER: Resolution of Essex Trades Council, of Newark, N. J., for exclusion of Chinese—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. PEARRE: Petition of Adam Ault, of Washington County, Md., praying reference of war claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. POWERS of Maine: Papers to accompany House bill to remove the charge of desertion against the record of David Hurlbut—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, papers to accompany House bill 11629, for the relief of Sophronia Q. Head—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PUGSLEY: Petition of citizens of Peekskill, N. Y., for an amendment to the National Constitution defining legal marriage to be monogamic—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, resolutions of the Trades and Labor Council of Peekskill and Union No. 111, of Tarrytown, N. Y., Allied Metal Mechanics, concerning the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of Taxpayers' Alliance, borough of Bronx, urging appropriation for the continuance of the improvement to the Harlem River and ship canal—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. RICHARDSON of Alabama: Pamphlet to accompany House bill 11609, for the construction of a waterway connecting the Mississippi River by land-locked navigation with the land-locked channels of the Atlantic coast—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, papers in support of House bill 9844, providing for the erection of a public building in the city of Florence, Ala.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, petition of John Pettipoole, of Lauderdale County, Ala., for reference of war claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. RIXEY: Petition of citizens of Manassas, Va., for the further restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. RODEY: Resolution of Cigar Makers' Union No. 443, of Albuquerque, N. Mex., in favor of the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. RUSSELL: Resolution of Horseshoers' Union No. 88, of Norwich, Conn., and Post 68, Grand Army of the Republic, of Tomaston, Conn., favoring the construction of war vessels in Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolution of Central Labor Union of Norwich, Conn., favoring the passage of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. RYAN: Resolution of board of supervisors of Mohave County, Ariz., in opposition to the measure exempting the Santa Fe Pacific Railway Company from taxation in the Territory of Arizona—to the Committee on Pacific Railroads.

Also, petition of Buffalo Switchmen's Union, No. 4, Buffalo, N. Y., for the reclassification of post-office clerks—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, resolution of Merchants' Association of New York, favoring commercial reciprocity with Cuba—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolution of N. C. Newerf, of Buffalo, N. Y., for the Government to build, own, and maintain a passenger and merchant marine, and to build 1,000 vessels—to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. SCOTT: Resolution of the Topeka (Kans.) Commercial Club, condemning the proposed Bowersock land-grazing bill—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. SELBY: Petition of Retall Merchants' Association of Jacksonville, Ill., in support of Senate bill 2987 and House bill 9352, for the protection of the public against impure food—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. SHAFROTH: Resolution of the State board of horticulture of the State of Colorado, against the destruction of useful birds—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of W. W. Hocking and other citizens of Boulder, Colo., for an amendment to the national Constitution defining legal marriage to be monogamic—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, resolutions of Colorado State Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, favoring the irrigation of the arid lands of the United States—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

By Mr. SHATTUC: Petition of Sign Writers' Union No. 224, Cincinnati, Ohio, favoring the building of vessels in the United States navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. SHALLENBERGER: Petition of Beckmark & Norlin and 37 other merchants of Axtell, Nebr., and Charles Perry & Co. and 33 other merchants of Harvard, Nebr., against House bill 6578, known as the parcels-post bill—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, papers to accompany House bill 11218, granting an increase of pension to Reuben W. Bartram—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Post No. 155, of Kenesaw, Nebr., Grand Army of the Republic, favoring the building of vessels in the United States navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. HENRY C. SMITH: Petition of Woodbury Post, No. 45, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Michigan, for investigation of the administration of the Bureau of Pensions—to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. SNOOK: Petition of L. S. Holmes Post, No, 87, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Ohio, for investigation of the administration of the Bureau of Pensions—to the Committee on Rules.

Also, papers to accompany House bill 4217, for the removal of the charge of desertion from the military record of David F. Fortney—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SOUTHARD: Resolution of oil and gas-well workers, of Hammansburg and North Baltimore, Ohio, in favor of the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of Cigar Makers' Union No. 48; Locomotive Firemen's Union No. 2; Photo Engravers' Union No. 15; Coopers' Union No. 6, Iron Molders' Union No. 172, and Laundry Workers' Union No. 1, all of Toledo, Ohio, in favor of the reenactment of Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. SPERRY: Resolution of Union No. 612, of Waterbury, Conn., Amalgamated Society of Engineers, favoring the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. SPIGHT: Papers to accompany House bill 11643, for the relief of the heirs of Mrs. Susan L. Bailey—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. STEELE: Resolution of Iron Molders' Union No. 357, of Montpelier, Ind., favoring the construction of naval vessels at Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolution of Glass Bottle Blowers' Association No. 61, of Gas City, Ind., favoring the enactment of a law excluding the Chinese without limitation from this country—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. SULLOWAY: Petitions of Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Epping, North Charlestown, North Weare, Plymouth, Meredith, Wolfboro, Center Sandwich, Wilton, and Peterboro, N. H., in favor of an amendment to the Constitution against polygamy—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, resolution of Manchester, N. H., Board of Trade, favoring the appointment of a commission to study and report upon the industrial conditions of China and the establishment of a permanent exposition of American products at Shanghai, China—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. SULZER: Petition of International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers No. 3, urging the defeat of Senate bills 2054 and 1466, to regulate wiring in the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. THAYER: Resolution of Brewery Workers' Union No. 135, Worcester, Mass., favoring the construction of war vessels in Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolutions of Carpenters and Joiners' Union No. 877, of Pennsylvania, favoring an educational test in the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. VREELAND: Petition of citizens of Jamestown, N. Y., favoring the election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people—to the Committee on Election of President, Vice-President, and Representatives in Congress.

Also, resolution of Hardwood Finishers' Union No. 94, of Jamestown, N. Y., in favor of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of Hardwood Finishers' Union No. 94, for an amendment to the immigration laws—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolution of Post No. 502, of Angelica, N. Y., Grand Army of the Republic, favoring the construction of naval vessels at Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. WADSWORTH: Resolutions of Coopers' Union No. 48, Niagara Falls, N. Y.; Iron Molders' Union No. 238, Lockport, N. Y., and George Pierce Post, No. 448, of Castile, N. Y., Grand Army of the Republic, favoring the construction of naval vessels at the Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolutions of Coopers' Union No. 48, of Niagara Falls, N. Y., and Carpenters' Union No. 289, of Lockport, N. Y., for an educational test in the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolutions of Lock City Central Labor Union, Industrial Fiber Workers' Union of Lockport, N. Y., and Coopers' Union No. 48, of Niagara Falls, N. Y., in favor of the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. WANGER: Petition of Dr. Louis Jean, M. Lusson, and other citizens of Ardmore, Pa., for the creation of game preserves in Alaska—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, resolutions of George Post Post, No. 79, of Conshohocken, Pa., concerning the construction of Government vessels in navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. WEEKS: Petition of W. A. Dudley and other citizens of Armada, Mich., favoring the election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people—to the Committee on Election of President, Vice-President, and Representatives in Congress.

By Mr. WILSON: Petition of G. K. Warren Post, No. 286, Grand Army of the Republic, of Brooklyn, N. Y., in regard to employees in navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. WOODS: Petition of the Chamber of Commerce of San Francisco, Cal., urging the adoption of the metric system of weights and measures—to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

By Mr. WRIGHT: Resolution of Mallory Post, No. 285, Grand Army of the Republic, of Sayre, Pa., urging that the navy-yards be utilized for the construction of war vessels—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. ZENOR: Petition of William Johnson Post, No. 430, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Indiana, for investigation of the administration of the Bureau of Pensions—to the Committee on Rules.

Also, resolution of Coopers' International Union, of Jeffersonville, Ind., for the enforcement of the postal laws relating to second-class mail matter, and that no repeal or modification of such laws be made—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

SENATE.

FRIDAY, February 21, 1902.

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m.

Prayer by Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN, D. D., Chaplain of the House of Representatives.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

CATALOGUE OF ZONE OF STARS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the Secretary of the Navy, submitting an estimate of appropriation for the preparation of the Astronomische Gesellschaft Catalogue of the Zone of Stars observed at the Naval Observatory principally in 1894 and 1895, $4,000; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3104) to grant the right of way through the Oklahoma Territory and the Indian Territory to the Enid and Anadarko Railway Company, and for other purposes.

The message also returned to the Senate, in compliance with its request, the bill (S. 2802) granting a pension to Martha R. Osbourn.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. FOSTER of Washington (for Mr. KITTREDGE) presented a memorial of the Retail Merchants' Association, of Sioux Falls, S. Dak., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called parcels-post bill; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. BERRY presented the petition of John P. Goshen, of Bald Knob, Ark., praying that he be granted a pension; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. TELLER. I present a concurrent resolution of the legislature of Colorado, favoring the establishment of a department of mines. I ask that it be printed in the RECORD, and referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

There being no objection, the concurrent resolution was referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House concurrent resolution No. 7.

[By Mr. Montgomery, of Teller.]

Whereas the session of the Trans-Mississippi Commercial Congress held in Cripple Creek, Colo., in 1901, unanimously adopted a resolution declaring in favor of a governmental department of mines, with a secretary in charge thereof, who shall be a member of the Cabinet; and

Whereas each of the Senators and Representatives in Congress from the State of Colorado are in favor of such department; and

Whereas bills have been introduced in Congress for the purpose of creating such department; and

Whereas the State of Colorado has as much, if not greater, interest in the promotion of the mining industry than any other State: Therefore,

Resolved, That this house (the senate concurring therein) commend the action of our Senators and Representatives in supporting such measure, and respectfully urge them to use all honorable means to procure the enactment of a law providing for such department, and elevating the great mineral industry from the subordinate place in which it has so long been kept to the commanding position to which it is entitled.

Resolved, That an authenticated copy of these resolutions, when passed, be forwarded by the governor of the State to each of our Senators and Representatives.

B. F. MONTGOMERY,
Speaker of the House.
DAVID C. COATES,
President of the Senate.

Approved this 14th day of February, A. D. 1902, at 9.45 o'clock a. m.

JAMES B. OSMAN,
Governor of the State.
W. H. KELLEY,
Secretary of the Senate.
WILLIAM J. HAMILTON,
Clerk of the House.

Mr. TELLER presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Sugar City, Colo., remonstrating against any reduction being made in the duty on sugar imported from Cuba; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. FRYE presented the petition of Dr. Antonio Josie Amadeo, of Porto Rico, praying for the payment of fees for autopsies performed for the government of Porto Rico prior to July 30, 1898; which was referred to the Committee on Pacific Islands and Porto Rico.

He also presented a petition of Local Lodge No. 65, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, of Osawatomie, Kans., praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a petition of the Grand Lodge, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, of Cleveland, Ohio, praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law, for stricter immigration laws, and for the enactment of legislation providing for the election of United States Senators by a direct vote of the people; which was referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

REPORT OF A COMMITTEE.

Mr. BERRY, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2972) to provide for the building of a water dock at the channel at Ship Island, Mississippi, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was agreed to, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. WELLINGTON introduced a bill (S. 4078) for the relief of Mrs. Celia Ford; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. BLACKBURN introduced a bill (S. 4079) for the relief of Bartholomew Diggins; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

AMENDMENT TO OMNIBUS CLAIMS BILL.

Mr. WELLINGTON submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 8587) for the allowance of certain claims for stores and supples, reported by the Court of Claims under the provisions of the act approved March 3, 1883, and commonly known as the Bowman Act; which was referred to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

TRUSTS AND COMBINATIONS.

On motion of Mr. KEAN, it was Ordered, That public act 190, entitled "An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies," be reprinted.

PHILIPPINE TARIFF BILL.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The morning business is closed; and the Chair lays before the Senate the regular order.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5833) temporarily to provide revenue for the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes.

Mr. BATE. Mr. President, but few incidents, if any, since the days of reconstruction have transpired in this Chamber more fateful and involving more delicate issues and greater results than the ratification of what is known as the "Treaty of Paris." It was in the executive session on the evening of the 6th of February, 1899, that Senators were gathered in groups in this Chamber behind closed doors, sometimes in excited and vigorous discussion and then again consulting in half whispers or being in a dead silence, indicating that something more than ordinary was about to transpire. As I have said, it was a secret executive session. The secrecy, however, has long since been removed, allowing free and open discussion of all that then and there occurred.

There was on this occasion the deepest solicitude shown by the adherents as well as by those who opposed the treaty. While "party" figured considerably in the proposition, it was not governed wholly by it. In the main, Republicans favored and Democrats, with a few exceptions, opposed its ratification—all, however, were desirous of doing that which they believed would be the best for the country. The situation was peculiar and result doubtful. The protocol between Spain and the United States had been agreed upon and signed some time previously and the Commission appointed to settle the terms had made their recommendation and sent to the Senate the treaty for ratification, the President recommending it.

That immediate time, so to speak, was an interregnum of war. The sword had been practically put back in its scabbard, hostile guns had been muzzled, and the bugle sang truce. Troops were called home and companies and regiments mustered out. Soldiers had turned their faces homeward, away from the sound of stirring reveille and soothing tattoo, returning to the quietude of home amid the charms of its sweet domesticities. Recruiting had ceased and whole commands were being mustered out. The war with Spain, forcing her to relax her cruel grip upon Cuba as she struggled to be free, was practically at an end. War, however, was subsequently and unfortunately revived.

About this time some political genius, alike fertile in resources for party policy and commercial advantage, conceived the idea that it would greatly strengthen the party in power to retain possession of the Philippines, as it would furnish a reason for raising more troops and keeping up a large Army, with its immense patronage. It inspired the idea of giving $20,000,000 to Spain for the Philippines, a country and people which she did not own, and from whose curtilage she had been driven by force of arms. This aftermath of $20,000,000 came as a bird of evil omen, of weird form and pestilential breath. Peace for the time held sway and her ministrations were seen and felt by a grateful people. Yet there were mutterings to be heard because of an apparent change in the programme of the Peace Commissioners.

As the public understood it, $20,000,000 were to go to Spain, and the Philippines were to come into our possession. This, then, after all, seemed a purchase, not a conquest. At that time there was not an armed Spanish soldier asserting Spain's authority on those islands. Even Manila, the last stronghold of the enfeebled and decaying Dons, had vanished like a shadow from the grasp of Spain. Armed Spaniards only held Manila while the guns of the fort and the ships gave protection. The dash of Dewey, with his American ships and American guns, had destroyed the Spanish fleet and silenced the batteries of the grim old fort that had, like a sentinel, stood for a century and darkened with its shadow the waters of that oriental bay.

Even the Spanish troops, which had been driven by Aguinaldo into the lines of defense at Manila as their last place of refuge, had been captured by the combined efforts in joint movement of Dewey and Aguinaldo—Americanos and Philippinos—and they were in that movement on Manila as much a unit as were the Greeks when their phalanx had locked shields where the "mountains look on Marathon and Marathon looks on the sea," and in so doing became our allies against the common enemy.

Thus this twenty-million "dicker" had upset the original expectation and changed the current of events and was pregnant with results. For without it the Philippines would have been left to itself. It was the initial to a new departure; this $20,000,000 job was commercial not sentimental, and it was the first step toward a colonial policy, a policy antagonistic to our form of government. It was a strike even at our theory of government. Not only so, but for the time being—for no one believed then it was intended to be a permanent holding—it put us in a hazardous position, because it made us necessarily not only then, but in the future, a participant in that oriental imbroglio known as the "Eastern question," in which all Europe is interested, and liable to be plunged into war at any day, and for that, if nothing else, Americans should have kept out, by obeying the injunction of Washington in his farewell address, and Thomas Jefferson in his inaugural address—"Beware of entangling alliances."

This was the situation as to our relations with the Philippines and Spain when Senators sat in secret legislative conclave in this Chamber on the evening of the 6th of February, 1899, to consider and ratify or defeat the "Treaty of Paris."

At this juncture some incidents in and around Manila occurred, but not of a serious character, although efforts were made by some partisans to magnify the situation and take advantage of it so as to have a bearing in favor of the ratification of the treaty. Under these influences the struggle came on, and after vigorous discussion the treaty was ratified, but by only 2 votes.

The change of one single vote would have brought a tie vote, and under parliamentary usage, a quorum being present, the affirmative proposition on a tie vote loses. So the change of a single vote would have defeated the treaty and left negotiations open to future developments, in which could have been brought about and, no doubt, would have been done, a clear understanding between the two most interested parties—for Spain was out of it—and established relations between the United States and the Philippines, thus preventing hostilities and the long train of unhappy events which for the last three years have marked the course and marred the harmony in this country as well as in the Philippines.

After skirmishing in front before we reached the regular line of battle, in which party lines in the main were observed, we reached the vote on the affirmative proposition to ratify the treaty, it requiring two-thirds of all Senators present, there being a quorum, to ratify the treaty. On the main question there were 57 affirmative votes and on the negative 27, as follows:

On the question, Will the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of the treaty of peace between the United States and Spain, signed at the city of Paris on December 10, 1898?

It was determined in the affirmative, { Yeas ..... 57 / Nays 27

Two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein.

Those who voted in the affirmative are Messrs.—

Aldrich.	Faulkner,	McBride,	Ross,
Allen,	Foraker,	McEnery,	Sewell,
Allison,	Frye,	McLaurin,	Shoup,
Baker,	Gallinger,	McMillan,	Simon,
Burrows,	Gear,	Mantle,	Spooner,
Butler,	Gray,	Mason,	Stewart,
Carter,	Hanna,	Morgan,	Sullivan,
Chandler,	Hansbrough,	Nelson,	Teller,
Clark,	Harris,	Penrose,	Thurston,
Clay,	Hawley,	Perkins,	Warren,
Cullom,	Jones, Nev.	Pettus,	Wellington,
Davis,	Kenney,	Platt, Conn.	Wolcott.
Deboe,	Kyle,	Platt, N. Y.
Elkins,	Lindsay,	Pritchard,
Fairbanks,	Lodge,	Quay,

Those who voted in the negative are Messrs.—

Bacon,	Gorman,	Mills,	Roach,
Bate,	Hale,	Mitchell,	Smith,
Berry,	Heitfeld,	Money,	Tillman,
Caffery,	Hoar,	Murphy,	Turley,
Chilton,	Jones, Ark	Pasco,	Turner,
Cockrell,	Mallory,	Pettigrew,	Vest.
Daniel,	Martin,	Rawlins,

The pairs were as follows:

Mr. Cannon and Mr. PROCTOR with Mr. White.

Mr. WETMORE and Mr. Wilson with Mr. Turpie.

As to this one fatal vote I beg to say: As is seen, it required two-thirds to ratify, and that there were 57 affirmative votes given for and 27 against ratification. Now, take 1 from 57 and it leaves 56; add that 1 to the 27 against it and it would have made 28 votes against the treaty. Twice 28 makes even 56. On the two-thirds requirement this would have left a tie, and the affirmative proposition would have lost because of the tie. So it is seen that one single vote more against this "Treaty of Paris," so fraught with weighty results, could have been changed by a single vote. I know of no vote in my senatorial life, of which I have a right to feel more justly proud than the one I gave against the ratification of this treaty.

Embarrassment followed, and growing out of the changed situation, brought on from the "relics" of the war with Spain and the $20,000,000 "dicker," another war of larger dimensions, of greater cost and greater calamity, and involving great and far-reaching questions. A war as distinct from the one just concluded with Spain for the rescue of Cuba as was one punic war of Carthage different from another, although fought by the same parties. Not only so, but it illustrates to a remarkable degree the selfishness and bad faith of a nation when opportunity offers for the stronger to oppress and destroy the weaker.

At whose instance hostilities commenced, or why commenced, or what untoward incident, if any, precipitated it, I do not care to stop now to inquire; suffice it, there is no act of Congress on the statute books directing or especially declaratory of the when and why of its commencement. The Americans and Filipinos erstwhile were friends, were allies against a common enemy, which had been either captured, as those who were prisoners at Manila, or had been driven from the islands. The influence of the Administration, its machinery and power, in all its active force, stood by the side of those who advocated the ratification of the treaty—else it would have been overwhelmingly defeated.

It was preeminently an Administration measure—a Republican measure. The President appointed the Commission, and he appointed four out of the five, Republicans—leading Republicans—and but one Democrat and he not in accord with his party on the currency question. It was not a party war and should not have been made up as it was—almost exclusively of men of one party. This treaty has been, and is, such a factor in the make-up of our current history and bids fair to enter so essentially in our future life that it is to be regretted that every amendment offered, every motion and word then uttered on that fateful evening, were not taken down and preserved in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD as is done in open session. This treaty has become a pivotal point in our history. It invites a new system, and in doing so strikes at the theory of our Government. It opens the door, and does it rudely, to the temple of our liberty—aye, to the very sanctuary of our altars.

It is a departure from the old landmarks of the fathers—landmarks made sacred by the blood of our Revolutionary ancestry. It is the initial of a new political dogma, inconsistent with our theory of government. It opens up and enters upon a colonial system of government, a system totally inconsistent with our republican form, and stands as a finger board along the great national highway pointing to imperialism.

May I not pertinently ask why did the Administration change its policy soon after this, in calling for the large army to go to the Philippine Islands, from volunteers to regulars, and that, too, just at the time when we wanted them to go to the Philippine Islands? This was another step toward centralization. It took from the governors of States the power to appoint the officers of regiments, and the privates to elect the commanding officers, and gave to the President the right to appoint them.

Ours is a representative government, and those representatives chosen by the people. Such could not be carried out in the Philippines, were it a part of us. Our Declaration of Independence says, "Governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed." Now, the difference that exists between the two peoples, the Anglo-Saxon the one, and the other a mongrel breed in which the Malay is predominant—the white race and yellow race, speaking tongues not only different from ours, but as confused among themselves as those at the tower of Babel, and accustomed to a totally different form of government, with different habits of life, and living 9,000 miles away from us—these facts forbid the idea of their becoming a part of us, or being united with us in a common political destiny.

If a part of the Government, they should help to support it, and under the Constitution taxation must be equal; and we recognize in our form of government that there can be no taxation without representation, and the most advanced imperialist does not wish to see the farce of elections practiced in these islands for representatives in our Congress, and for us to have Filipinos in our Senate and House of Representatives holding a balance of power on important questions governing the policy of our people.

If we take them as a part of us this must follow, or we must change our form as well as theory of government.

This is no fancy sketch, no hobbyhorse with which to frighten children. It is a live, practical, burning question that we, as American citizens, have to face sooner or later, if the present Republican programme is carried out.

Mr. President, it is not incumbent on the opponents of the bill for raising revenues for the Philippine Islands, when insisting upon a strict adherence to the principles of taxation as embodied in the Federal Constitution, to discuss the right of the United States to acquire territory by conquest as the result of war or by treaty at the end of diplomacy. In the case of the Philippines that matter has been settled, at least for the present. But, however much I may regard the acquisition as hurtful to our system of government and destitute of benefit to our people and wrongful to the Philippines, the present is not the time to fully open that discussion nor to propose a remedy for the evils which have sprung from the "treaty of Paris."

I believe, Mr. President, in common with many millions of our fellow-citizens, that the right to constitutional taxation is inherent on all of the people of the United States over whom the American flag floats, and that Congress has no right to deprive any portion of the people whom the flag of our country protects from aggression, of their inalienable right to constitutional taxation; that having, by force of arms, made the Philippine people a part of our fellow-people, Congress has no constitutional power to deny them fellow-citizenship; that fellow-citizenship arises not from treaties, but from our Constitution and laws made in pursuance thereof, and once acquired can not be alienated by the people nor divested by Congress.

From these principles I believe it to be a violation of our theory of Government, as well as the spirit of American institutions, to draw a line of demarcation upon one side of which we recognize the Constitution, with all its privileges in full force and effect, but on the other side we deny its application and withhold all its rights and privileges.

Every citizen readily submits his judgment to the decree of the Supreme Court on controversies between man and man. All recognize that there must be a finality to contentions as to property and the right to property, and that there must be a tribunal which shall decide finally between contestants to cases in that court of final resort.

But in view of the oath which a Senator takes to support the Constitution, I know of no system of ethics or morals which binds a Senator to accept as final and conclusive, reasons and arguments so conflicting and contradictory that the court itself can not reconcile them, and arrives at its conclusions by a bare majority of one, and that one shifts position and runs about among the cases so that neither the people nor the profession of law can be certain of anything except that one man must pay duty on importations and another must not.

Upon that narrow margin of one vote the line between what is constitutional and what is unconstitutional has been drawn, and all the vast rights of personal liberty and territorial government for 10,000,000 of people are to be determined by the opinions and reasoning of a single justice. Upon that narrow brink this bill is rested and the validity of the collection of the millions of dollars which will follow its enactment have the sanction of five against four, and that is a decision by one justice.

The accident of death, followed by the appointment of another justice, may in cases arising in the not distant future upset the foundation of all this legislation and reverse all upon which the majority in this Congress are now rejoicing. That margin is too narrow for the determination of political questions involving the construction of the Constitution by the officers of coequal departments of the Government, charged by the solemnity of their oaths to support the Constitution, and not the reasons; not to be bound by the reasoning and arguments in the opinions of justices by which they reach their conclusions in cases involving property and the right to property.

I can not subscribe to the doctrine of "appurtenant territory" and of millions of people acquired by conquest from the nation over which the Constitution does not extend ex proprio vigore, and that the supreme laws of the land must halt at the confines of appurtenant territory and reaches not a people acquired by conquest, but that all the rights which the Declaration of Independence asserts, and which the Constitution protects and the Union of States defends, are limited to the people of the States and can be enjoyed by the conquered people only at the discretion of Congress.

That numerous and important class of the people who, in the vernacular of politics, are designated as the "plain people" and sometimes as the "common people," as well as some of us who represent them in the Congress, can not follow the metaphysical reasoning which writes 'appurtenant" before territories in the Constitution. They can not understand why the Pacific Ocean can be bridged for the revenue clause to the Hawaiian Islands, but that the revenue laws can not cross the other half of that ocean and bring the Philippines within that equality and conformity of taxation which the framers of the Constitution intended for all parts of America and for all classes of Americans, whether they resided on the continent or on the islands of the oceans over which our flag floated as the emblem of our possession and as warning to all the nations of the earth.

Every citizen understands the necessity for an enabling act by Congress to authorize the change from Territorial to Statal condition, but the authority of the President to establish a government other than military during flagrant war, however deduced by refined reasoning, is incomprehensible by the people who have been taught by their fathers and forefathers that all governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed. A people so instructed and conscientiously believing will always hold a government constructed without representation and suffrage as a practical denial of the great American axioms of government.

The people are too wise to believe in the submission to overwhelming power or consent; but even submission has not been made by the Filipinos, but resistance still files its protest against ownership, whether by conquest or purchase.

The right of the United States to maintain supremacy where its flag floats can not be denied, in view of the bloody precedents which stain so many of the pages of our history. But in every precedent heretofore made our Government has soon returned to American principles by reasserting the right of self-government, with the right of representation in taxation, and that of participation in the framing of legislation.

But those great fundamental principles in American Government, recognized in the eighteenth and enforced in the nineteenth, have been abandoned and discarded in the twentieth century, because the Republican principle of protection to the manufacturers at the expense of consumers would be compromised by the free admission of American products from the Philippines. The principle of reciprocity, so anxiously urged by the late Republican President in his last speech, and opposed by one section of the Republican party to all or any foreign nation which will accept its free-trade provisions, has not been tendered to the American people in the Philippines, but in its stead the formal statements of Dingleyism has been shoved at them and are to be enforced by musket and rifle until they submit to American civilization by "strenuous means."

For the shadow of Spain's sovereignty over the rebellious subjects in the Philippines who had driven her power and her authority into the fortified city of Manila—that last ditch of the expiring monarchy; and for that shadow of right we paid the enormous sum of $20,000,000. That immense amount of money was paid for what Spain could no longer hold, and had no right to sell. Nevertheless, we bought and paid for the archipelago—lands, peoples, volcanoes, and insurgents—a bargain-counter trade on odds and ends which were of no particular good, but it was thought they might be "handy" in the Eastern question.

The new doctrine that there could be in our system two differing and conflicting conditions as to our taxation and trade was not thought of by the people before the conclusion of the treaty of Paris. Had it been suggested and so understood that treaty never would have been ratified. No man had advanced the idea that free trade between the territory to be acquired by that treaty and the United States was impossible, nor did any advocate of the annexation venture to assert that the tobacco and sugar of the archipelago should not compete in the markets of the United States with similar products of this country, or be paralyzed by monopolizing trusts, or that the cheap labor of the islands was to be forbidden to compete with the higher priced labor of the United States was never advanced until the treaty had been ratified.

It was to prevent the effect of the annexation upon the protective policy of the Republican party that the new doctrine was invented that the Constitution of the United States was not self-acting and self-asserting, but that its creature, Congress, must help this creator to go with the flag and cover with the aegis of its protection the new people and country. After the treaty was ratified came the apprehension that the Republican party had, to use a trite expression, "bit off more than it could chew," and then was blossomed out the brand-new construction that only Congress could send the Constitution beyond the States—and forthwith it was added that Congress would not send the Constitution to the people of the new acquisitions except with a string to it, which denied equality of administration, taxation, and citizenship.

The evil consequences of such a construction of the Constitution are not limited or restricted to the territory and people of the Philippines, but inaugurate the supremacy of Congress over the Constitution, and in that changes our theory of government; and that is done solely to guard the Republican policy of protection to manufacturers at the expense of consumers, to the interest of the classes rather than that of the masses.

Mr. President, government and legislation by discretion, whether of one or many men, is despotism. The Czar is not more a despot than a Congressional majority where no controlling influence marks the limits of its powers. It is the limitations of power which distinguishes constitutional from despotic government, and however mild and merciful the legislation may be, if it emanates from mere discretion of an individual or of a congress, it is despotic and utterly un-American.

To that conclusion the policy pursued by the Republican party toward the Philippines has been brought by its desperate effort to protect protection and at the same time exploit the labor and protection of 10,000,000 people in those islands in the interest of the protected classes in this country. So transparent is that motive that any voice raised in behalf of new American methods of government, or in protest against the wrong done to the people in the islands and in the States by this departure from long-cherished principles and precedents, is denounced as aid and comfort to the enemy.

Mr. President, if it be treason to stand firmly and persistently for American principles and precedents, at all times and in all places, let them make the most of it. The Democratic party stands now, as it has always stood, for every principle which animated the souls of the patriots of '76, and if the Filipinos have caught up the echo of those principles across the ocean, what American can deny their righteousness because they are invoked against a greater despotism than the devices of England exerted against the patriots of America? The most partial analysis of the indictments by the colonies of the British administration in 1776 will make so plain the wrongs done to American principles that he who runs may read the strange and unnecessary departure that has been made by the Republican party from every count in the indictment of George III by our forefathers.

That this great archipelago, with all its millions of people, fell to the United States by the results of a war or by purchase does not alter the fact that since the acquisition we have continued to wage war upon them instead of exerting the peaceful methods of conciliation. Conquest, if by that we hold title, with all its cruel appliances, has filled the islands with a standing army, while the open avowal of the purpose to deny that people the same independence which our colonies wrested from England has kept alive the spirit of rebellion against subjugation. Would our ancestors have done less than the Filipinos have endeavored to do in their ardent desire for independence?

If our Revolution required seven years of warfare to gain liberty and independence, how many years will be necessary for the subjugation of 10,000,000 of people 10,000 miles away? And how many hundreds of millions of dollars will it require to pay for a conquest where financial value could be obtained in all its fullness for a quarter's interest on the public debt which is being created to stifle the same—yes, to stifle the same kind of aspirations which fired the hearts of American patriots in theR evolution? In asking for the Filipinos the same measure of rightful government for which our forefathers fought, the Democratic party does no violence to principle or precedent, to the honor or welfare of the American people.

We rather conserve the glorious examples of our forefathers in doing for others as they did for us, and in seeking to plant independence and nationality in the Pacific isles as our forefathers did on the American continent. To say that the Filipinos are not fit for independence is to beg the question and to assert as a fact that which had not been attempted by our Government nor permitted to the people of the Philippines. Government by commissions succeeded government by army, but not once has an effort been made to bring the governed to the realization that future independence and nationality would follow the successful experiment of self-government.

We have banished hope from the Philippine heart and left despair to work out its desperate endeavor.

And now comes the crowning act of wrong and injustice in the bill for raising revenue—to further emphasize the fact that the islands belong to the United States as property, and that the people are not of us as fellow citizens, but pariahs of one colony whose products and labor are taxed both as exports leaving the island and as imports entering the United States.

So far the results of the war with Spain have been wholly sentimental. We freed Cuba from the tyranny of Spain; we have given Porto Rico a Territorial start which may help her people in the future when their old Spaniardism has worn off and Americanism found growth. But the realization of that is in the future. We have carried war into the Philippines, but nothing else so far—the school-teaching is yet a future product. How many millions of dollars have been expended in this sentimental programme of exploitation is not known to the people. But the money value of this war for trade speculation has not put in its appearance so far.

There had been brought into the United States from the Philippines during 1901 products of the archipelago valued at $2,855,685 and the United States had shipped into the archipelago products valued at $2,572,021. During the same year England had landed in the islands products valued at $6,956,145 and received from the islands products valued at $10,704,941. Taking an account of all merchandise, it appears that the archipelago imported value amounting to $30,279,406 and exported values equal to about $23,214,948.

In every feature of these returns it must be noted that the people of the archipelago sell more than they buy; and that, without a protective tariff, their policy, whether it is accidental or not, is the same as that of the Republican party in the United States—of selling as much as is possible and buying as little as is possible—and which the late Republican President deprecated in his last speech as impossible of long duration. But the accuracy of those figures has been controverted, and the War Department has submitted to the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives a letter showing what we get for our investment in the brawn, muscle, and sinews of the Filipinos.

The latest report on that investment is as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington, December 12, 1901.

SIR: In addition to the memoranda and documents already furnished your committee relative to the present Philippine tariff and the customs revenues of the Philippine Islands, I have the honor to inclose herewith extract from the last report made to the Secretary of War by the Philippine Commission. This report covers the period from November 30, 1900, the date of the former report, to include October 15 of this year, and has been sent to the Public Printer for publication.

Your attention is specially invited to the statement of the Commission that under the rules and administration of the old tariff it was difficult to determine the country of origin of importations into the islands, and therefore that Hongkong, the free port, headed the list in 1898, 1899, and 1900, but mainly because of the fact that under the rules then existing a large quantity of merchandise from the United States, England, and the Chinese Empire, amounting to, probably, 70 per cent of the total imports, was credited to Hongkong, having been shipped to Philippine ports from and invoiced there.

The collector states that this merchandise should have been credited to other countries, approximately as follows:

	Per cent.
United States	25
England	25
Chinese Empire	20

The United States, therefore, should be accordingly credited with an approximate total of imports of merchandise during the fiscal year of $3,440,831, which, compared with the annual average under Spanish control, $130,662, shows a gratifying increase.

Very respectfully, ELIHU ROOT,
Secretary of War.

Hon. SERENO E. PAYNE,
Chairman Committee on Ways and Means,
United States House of Representatives.

From that report it appears that England, without a dollar of investment, reaps as much return as the United States with $20,000,000 in the capital stock of the investment, and China is doing almost as well without a penny in the investment.

Such is the official return of the first year of our "investment," as the acquisition of territory and people so termed in the technicality of that commercialism which now engrosses all thoughts and finds development in this bill for raising revenue for the islands, and at the same time securing a better return on the investment by the system of twofold taxation on the same product as an export from the islands and an import into the United States.

It will not be denied that since the United States has firmly fixed its grasp upon the islands its only duty is to do all that is possible for the betterment of the condition of the people, and that money is necessary to build roads, schoolhouses, improve harbors, clear up malarious districts, and make other improvements for the welfare of the people; and that the money necessary to these ends must come from taxation. But this bill shows our inaptitude for colonial government in that it appears American and not Philippines in taxation.

It carries American ideas, principles, and methods to a people who know nothing whatever of American conditions, and however natural it may be that so long as this country governs the island, it should govern on American principles, by American methods, it is not less an anomaly which applies to a people utterly ignorant of our history—those intricate workings of our Government which the enlightened nations of Europe understand most indifferently. On the other hand, neither the Congress of the United States nor the Philippine Commissioners understand the ideas and practices, the Spanish methods, and Philippine conditions which have controlled the thoughts and shaped the habits of that people during the centuries of Spanish dominion.

The Philippines can no more change the ideas and conditions which the centuries have hardened into habits than the Ethiopian his skin or the leopard his spots. The enlightened principles of colonial government seeks the least possible changes in the ways to which the native population has become accustomed, and in that most delicate of all governmental operation, the levying and collection of taxes and the administration of expenses among a strange people, the adaptation of their existing methods addresses itself to the conciliation of the people.

The hundred years during which the people of those islands suffered from Spanish methods of torture must have taught them the subjects and methods of raising money which would bear least upon their energies and their poverty. If that people had had a voice in the imposition of taxation, its hardships, if not avoided, would have been of their own creation and not of ours. As it is, the American Congress stands out in their sight as the source of another oppression by which their means are exploited, as their people have not been skilled by American armies. Our methods have never been with the gloved hand of peace, but always with the mailed hand of war. We have ever shown our purpose to conquer, but not once to conciliate them.

This bill, Mr. President, will become law and be put in force notwithstanding any objections that may be urged against it; but it will not bridge the chasm that separates a people struggling for independence and this Government under the Republican party, bent on conquest, exploitation, and commercialism. The conquest of the islands will be accomplished, but the time required for that end can not now be fixed. A handful of Seminoles in the swamps of Florida baffled the United States for a quarter of a century, and the bill of Florida for her expenses in that war has not yet been paid by the United States.

How long the guerrillas of the fastnesses of the Philippines can hold out no man can do more than conjecture. But long or short, the game is not worth the price this country must pay for it in blood and treasure. Whatever commercial and trade advantages the islands may offer, these can be more easily and more righteously obtained by measures of peace than by the means of war.

It was in this spirit of peace and conciliation that an address was delivered in St. Louis by the Hon. John B. Henderson, an extract from which so well embodies my views that I shall insert it:

Imperialism reverses the entire theory of self-government. It discards the wisdom of our forefathers, repudiates, without charm, the Monroe doctrine, and joins hands with the execrated holy alliance. It rejects the civil quality of men and accepts without protest the oppression and despotism of the sixteenth century. This war on the Philippines brings us back into the shadow of the dark ages. It is a war for which no justification can be urged. As no reason could be assigned for its existence, Congress was ashamed to make up any record of its declaration. It has scarcely a better excuse than the wars of subjugation waged by imperial Rome, whose object was to plunder and enslave the weak, and whose result was, in the language of its own historian, to make a desert and call it peace.

The first fruits of that imperialism of which this colonial system is the forerunner will ripen in this bill, which fosters and protects the interests of the gigantic tobacco trust, which now holds the manufacture of tobacco in its grasp throughout this country and is reported to have lately secured the German Empire also for its preserve.

While one wing of the Republican party, under the chairman of the national committee, advocates the repeal of all duties upon importation which any trust manufactures, the other wing, under the leadership of the chairman of Ways and Means, doubles the duties on tobacco, of which one of the greatest trusts is the sole manufacturer.

It has been said that when two laborers run after one manufacturer the price of labor goes down, but when two manufacturers run after one laborer the price of labor goes up; so when the tobacco planters of these States knock at the door of one great trust they must accept the price which the trust thinks its profits will allow. The exclusion of the Manila tobacco does not help the planters so long as the trusts control the price of the crop. The export duty at Manila impoverishes the planters of the island, and the import duty of the United States does not benefit the planters in this country, for the trust controls the price.

Tobacco has lost its market except as the trust may determine. The same may be said of sugar, whose great trust has successfully defied the antitrust law of Congress. The fall in price of trust-manufactured goods in the last two years can not be accepted as a criterion for the future. An intense public sentiment, alarmed at the great aggregations of capital, demands of Congress legislation which shall control all trusts, and will not be pacified by a sop to Cerberus in a reduction of price, while the agitation by the people demands security against such combinations.

I have not examined the details of this bill, but have accepted the two articles which were used at the other end of this Capitol to taunt the Representatives of tobacco-growing States with the question whether they would be willing to put the tobacco of the Philippines on an exact equality in the markets of the United States with the production of the same article in the States. So long as the tobacco trust exists it matters little about the exact equality in the markets. The price is fixed by the trust, and whether the tobacco is grown by cheap or dear labor, the planters must accept what the trust allows. Hence, free trade with Manila would neither help nor hinder the American planter, bound as he is in the unconscionable grasp of the tobacco trust.

That grasp must be broken; the market must again be opened before either protection or free trade can help the planter. But the bill for the Philippines, with its double taxation on import and export, very clearly indicates that the wing of the Republican party which flaps under the direction of the chairman of the national committee will fall limp and useless and that trusts will continue to flourish so long as the Republican party is in power.

Mr. President, it is futile for the supporters of the existing policy toward the Philippines to attempt to smother American sympathy for the oppressed in any quarter of the globe. That sympathy is ingrained in the American character, and will find its impression alike for the Boers of South Africa as well as the Filipinos. It is by the suggestion of that sympathy that the Democratic party in this country advises the Filipinos to abandon their fruitless struggle with the power and resources of the United States, and to submit to the inevitable and end a guerrilla war which can have no other result than their conquest or their annihilation.

In prolonging the agony of a fruitless war, the Philippines deprive their real friends in this country of all power to consider a different policy from that which most exists. So long as war continues, every American, even while condemning the policy, feels that he must support and sustain the Army and Navy in all efforts to maintain the Government and its authority. It will be wisdom on the part of the Filipinos to lay down their arms, accept amnesty, and calmly await the coming reflection of the American people on the policy which will decide whether their future shall be that of independence with American protection, or nationality. However apparently positive may be the present purpose of this country to hold the islands, there is always working in the public mind that sober second thought which quickly responds to changing conditions.

The protective policy of the Republican party at present demands tariff restriction on Philippine products, but reciprocity is gradually undermining that restrictive policy and, in an indirect way, working toward a more liberal consideration of the interests of all the people. The late Republican President saw and voiced the handwriting on the wall—that this country can not always sell to foreigners and deny them the opportunity to sell to us. Whenever the liberal policy of a tariff for "revenue only" becomes again the fiscal policy of the United States, its reactionary influence will call up for consideration the future of the Philippine Islands. Peace, and immediate peace, is the best policy for the Filipinos, for in politics, as in other matters, he that can wait will win.

But, Mr. President, while I believe that peaceful measures will be the best policy, yet I see no immediate hope of it. The Philippine Islanders ceased their mode of warfare to adopt a guerrilla mode, to which their mountains and rivers and swamps are so well adapted, and can keep it going, as they have done against Spain, for years and years. We have already spent more than $350,000,000 in this ugly Philippine business, and lost, directly and indirectly, 10,000 lives of good and patriotic young men of our country, and the end is not in sight. How long shall we continue this expenditure of lives and money before we even offer to the Filipinos the olive branch of peace?

Mr. President, why can not this mighty Government, which has become the greatest of nations, without the colonial system, let the Filipino leaders be brought together on our motion, and under our auspices organize, and let us say to them, "Make your government to suit you; we will protect you from foreign interference, as we have Cuba, until you get on your feet, and then you must take care of yourselves?" I see no dishonor in our taking the initiative and bringing about the result. It can not be truthfully said that they are incapable of organizing a government, for the reason that the record shows that they had an organized government under Aguinaldo and fought Spain successfully under that government.

Mr. President, paradoxical as it may appear, it is nevertheless morally true that—

History, with all her volumes vast, hath but one page, all over which is written in imperishable characters the warning words, "Be sure your sins will find you out." Retributive justice is among the eternal verities of the Supreme Governor of nations of the world, and from His fiat there is no escape for sinning man or sinning nation.

The ages that have passed enable us to read its illustrations on the pages of Roman history and find its finis on that "field of freedom, faction, fame, and blood." And yet Rome endowed her conquered people with the proud title, "Civis Romanus sum," which since Rome's day, even in the twentieth century, the Republican party denies to every Filipino the name of American. I should like to have some one here tell me, Mr. President, whether the Filipino is a citizen of the United States or of the Philippine Islands. He must be either one or the other. I have heard no man yet distinctly say that he was an American citizen and entitled to the rights of a citizen.

In later times, within the personal knowledge of all, has Germany made the conquered people of Schleswig-Holstein, Germans, and gave to those wrenched from France, in Alsace and Lorraine, the status of all other Germans. Such unifying methods of modern conquest rob defeat of half its mortification and tend toward that conciliation which eventually cements the victors and the vanquished. But at the treaty of Paris the Republican party, then, as now, in power, turned back the pages of history and found the example to follow in that partition of Poland by which an ancient people was wiped from the map of Europe. Following that precedent, the representatives of the United States expunged the Philippine people and left them neither Filipinos nor Americans.

"They are not fit for self-government" was the excuse of the despots of Europe for annihilating the Poles, and in the twentieth century hear the same excuse given for seizing the Philippine Islands and depriving their people of all that makes patriotism respectable. But that excuse was as potent before Dewey's guns opened the way to conquest as it was after Spain sold that to which she had no rightful title. Did the United States pay the $20,000,000 to perfect Spain's title in order that our Government might take by purchase that which had already been wrenched by the victorious Filipinos from Spain's enfeebled grasp?

When the late Emperor of Germany, William I, was crowned King of Prussia, he made the declaration that "Prussia is ready everywhere to protect the right." But it soon became apparent that "the right" was only as he defined it—that is, the right of Prussia to seize the provinces of Denmark and of the German Empire to grab the provinces of France—the right which successful war asserts and maintains against the "consent of the governed."

Now, in contradiction of all the precedents and principles of our history, the United States is made to assert that same right announced by despotism, only our right rests on bargain and sale without the owner's consent, and not that which springs from the blood and iron of nervy soldiers. The splendid glamour of successful war may dignify conquest, but the double and triple negotiations of diplomacy deprive the catastrophe of all its glory, and the splendid record of Dewey at Manila and the glorious victory of Schley off the coast of Cuba are dimmed and impaired in the diplomatic trade at Paris.

The Government of the United States is in the category of holding, as an imperial master, the Filipinos under the muzzle of Gatling guns and demanding tribute or tax, and at the same time denying to them a voice in the Government that taxes them, thus openly and defiantly overriding one of the plainest rights guaranteed by the Constitution, when it says "There shall be no tax without representation." This is not only a palpable denial of constitutional rights, but is a change in the theory of our Government, for it is a popular government and based on the will of the people, expressed through those legal channels provided therefor. It is "a government of the people and for the people," and whenever their voice is throttled it ceases to be an exponent of popular government.

It has been said "the highest type of civilization the world has ever seen is American civilization," and I believe it. The Declaration of Independence is its corner stone and the Constitution is its protecting shield. This civilization was rocked in the cradle of local self-government—States' rights, if you please to so call it. When that local self-government is gone from our country, its epitaph will be written. Then let us, while we may, further strengthen its defenses. Let us build up and not tear down its walls of protection. Let us dig deep the trenches around it and place our sentinels on the ramparts.

But, Mr. President, the last pain growing out of this Philippine war is not yet felt; the last tear of sorrow has not yet fallen; the last agonizing groan has not yet been uttered. We look upon the picture in the Philippines as it now stands and we see instead of the vigorous, healthful, American soldier with full form and ruddy, cheerful face, the shrunken cheeks and shriveled limbs, with hospital near by, floating its yellow flag and visible in its baleful wards "palida mors."

Mr. President, did we not justly claim credit with the civilized world for going to the relief of Cuba when in her helplessness she cried out in agony against the domination and cruelty of Spain? And now, before the detonation of the guns that freed Cuba shall have died away, shall we play with the Philippines the part of Spain to Cuba—only excel her in cruelty and domination over a feeble race of people who have been for years and years striving to be free from the clutches of that same Spain? Both the Philippines and Cuba belonged to Spain and both have been struggling for years to free themselves from the Spanish yoke. Exactly the same principles were involved in each case—human liberty and national independence. Both of them, or a certain part of each, had become our allies and took part with us in the fight.

There was a large class of Cubans who opposed our interference, but we disregarded it and pushed to a successful conclusion and became a protectorate or temporary guardian for Cuba during a pupilage of three years, and then agreed to stand by her for the time being in her peril; and now we so far recognize her nationality as to propose to treat with her reciprocally, provided reciprocity can reciprocate as to certain articles of her produce.

Now, the Philippine Islands held at that time the same relations to Spain as Cuba did—both struggling for individual liberty and national life.

Yet, see the difference in our treatment. The one we have nurtured into national life, the other we have betrayed and deceived, and fain would destroy.

We gave the Philippines the smile of approbation and the hand of friendship, but, to our shame be it said, there was a dagger behind that smile and that hand of pretended friendship unsheathed that dagger and with its glittering steel pierced the poor Filipino's side as he struggled for liberty. He had just beaten the minions of old Spain, and, with our aid, had given the finishing touch to his aspirations by uniting in the capture of the last armed Spaniard on the soil of his hallowed islands.

From the time that Manila was captured by the Americans and Filipinos, in joint and supporting movements, we held possession of the archipelago. If conquest took the title from Spain, if she had any, it was joint title to the United States and the Filipinos. But it was not then desired by us. The country did not want it. It never dreamed of making a permanent lodgment in the Orient, save in a coaling station and a shipyard.

The very idea of so doing brought with it repulsion. But we believed, and had a right to believe, as this archipelago bore similar relations to Spain as did Cuba, that like treatment would follow; and as we had given assurance to the civilized world in the Teller resolution that the United States was not seeking to assert sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over the island of Cuba, but to protect it, and that as soon as peace was restored Cuba should be free, so the civilized world had a right to expect similar treatment by the United States to the Philippine, as that given to Cuba, and only monarchies that believe in a colonial system rejoiced that we did not. With this annunciation as to Cuba it was of easy conclusion that the Filipinos would receive similar treatment.

Instead thereof, this Government assumed entire control of the islands, denying to them even a chance to establish a government of their own. Instead of holding out the olive branch, inviting peace and helping them to get on their feet, we presented the naked sword and the double-shotted Gatling gun, the Mauser and the Maxim, and have given them, with reconcentrado camps, the Spanish inquisition "water cure" and General Bell's celebrated order, almost a facsimile of those of the Duke of Alva, which marked an epoch of cruelty in history. In the name of Liberty are we doing all this? "O Liberty, how many crimes have been perpetrated in thy name!"

Lord God of hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget, lest we forget.

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President, I have sincerely lamented this debate. The bill reported by the majority of the Committee on the Philippines is a bill entirely free from complication; it is simply a revenue bill; and whatever difficulties Senators who are lawyers and other lawyers may have in understanding or reconciling the opinions of the Supreme Justices of the United States in what are called the "Island cases," I take it it may be considered settled by the decision upon the tariff feature of what is known as the Foraker Act that this proposed tax bill is constitutional. I do not intend to spend any time in analyzing those opinions. The decisions are easily understood.

What is the distinction between territory appurtenant or belonging to the United States and territory incorporated into the United States, I do not intend on this occasion to discuss.

Every dollar of tax which is proposed to be collected under this bill is for the support of government in the Philippines, as every dollar of tax proposed by the Foraker act to be collected upon articles going from the United States into Porto Rico and coming from Porto Rico into the United States was for the support of the Porto Rican government.

I had hoped our friends in the minority here, because we are over there and we are attempting to establish a government there, which must be supported, would find it in harmony with their purposes to discuss this bill and record themselves against it, if they are opposed to it, and to allow us who have the responsibility of the present situation in the Philippine Islands, so far as legislation is concerned, to pass it promptly.

But, Mr. President, that was expecting too much, and upon this bill—but not germane to it at all—has gone on here for weeks a debate involving every phase of what may be called the Philippine question. It has been a debate full of vituperation and taunt, and sometimes, Mr. President, there has not been entirely absent insult. That its purpose was ulterior, and that its effect will be bad, I think no man can doubt.

I picked up this morning The Commoner—I can not now place my hands upon the copy of it which I want—in which the distinguished candidate of the Democratic party in the last campaign, and the preceding campaign, comments upon this debate, sets forth the substitute presented by the minority, and remarks that the Democracy in the Senate by this debate and by this substitute are rendering great service to the "party"—to the party!

We have upon our hands, Mr. President—and that distinguished gentleman helped efficiently to put it in our hands—a difficult problem. Never have we had one more difficult, and I think the people of the United States—I may be wrong about it—will in the exigency which confronts us demand of their public servants in the legislative halls and in the Executive chamber a solution of that problem and every phase of it, not with reference to the interest of party, but solely with reference to the interest of the country.

Senators on the other side have been pleased to charge the present situation in the Philippines to the greed and dishonor of Republican leadership. Ugly words have fallen from their lips to us across this Chamber because we chance upon this question to differ with them; and the ugliest, Mr. President, have fallen from the lips of those who but a little time ago were members of the Republican party. Do Senators think because we differ from them that we care less for liberty than they do? Do they think because they do not agree with the policy of the Republican party that they have warrant for denouncing the members of that party and its leadership as being insensible to honor, indifferent to perfidy, controlled by unworthy motives? Do those Senators who a little time ago went out from the party think that all the patriotism, all the love of liberty, all reverence for the Declaration of Independence, all loyalty to the Constitution departed with them?

The Senator from Colorado [Mr. PATTERSON] entertained the Senate yesterday with a speech which, rhetorically, was to be admired. With a portion of his argument I do not disagree; but that Senator saw fit to make an attack upon Governor Taft, who has been testifying before the committee of which the Senator is a member, and to charge him with willful misrepresentation of facts before the committee and with slandering the Filipino people.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. SPOONER. Certainly.

Mr. PATTERSON. I think that statement of the honorable Senator from Wisconsin is a little too broad. I did not charge him with the willful misrepresentation of facts. I did call attention, Mr. President, to statements of facts made by the War Department, and then to his own, and I did say that there was a clash between them, and that it was the War Department against Governor Taft, and that in his statements to the committee he had indicted the entire people of the Philippine Islands for everything that was ignominious and disgraceful.

Mr. SPOONER. Ah, Mr. President, the Senator has forgotten what he said. He said the statements in the document from the War Department conflicted with the statements of Governor Taft before the committee, and that Governor Taft had a motive for misrepresentation.

Mr. PATTERSON. I said there was a motive.

Mr. SPOONER. A motive for misrepresentation.

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, sir.

Mr. SPOONER. Because he appeared as the advocate of the imperialistic policy of the Government.

Mr. PATTERSON. That is a correct statement of what I said.

Mr. SPOONER. Yes; to say that that did not charge Governor Taft with willfully misrepresenting the facts and slandering the Filipino people is evasive.

Governor Taft needs no defense from me. He misrepresented nothing. I have known him many years, Mr. President. I have the profoundest respect and admiration for him, for his great ability, for his patriotism, for his attractive personality. Governor Taft went to the Philippine Islands not because he wished to, not because he desired to rule a people. He went in a spirit of self-sacrifice. He resigned a position which was for life upon the Federal bench in the line of his profession, to which he is devoted. He went there at the request of President McKinley. He went there reluctantly, and only because it was represented to him that by going, by making the sacrifice—and it is in many respects a sacrifice to him—he could do good in this exigency. There is no man more entitled to confidence for ability, patriotism, integrity, and accuracy of statement than Governor Taft.

But what made me particularly deplore the Senator's utterance was not his imputation upon Governor Taft. That takes care of itself. It was the absolutely malign possibility which it contained of doing harm over yonder. Governor Taft is to return there. He is to resume his position as civil governor. He is to take up the work which he laid down when he left there. He is to meet again the Filipino people. He is to go forward in the attempt to win their confidence. Did the Senator realize that his utterance would tend to create a prejudice upon the part of the Filipino people against Governor Taft, to obstruct his efforts and the efforts of the Commission by sending back word to the Philippines that in a public place here he had traduced that people and vilified them?

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. SPOONER. Certainly.

Mr. PATTERSON. I hope the Senator does not claim because Governor Taft is to return to the Philippines, and because he holds the relations to the Philippine people which he does, that therefore criticisms of his statements and criticisms upon his attitude toward the Philippine people, as that attitude is made clear by his own statements and the reports of departments of this Government, should not be indulged in.

Mr. SPOONER. What a Senator will indulge in in this Chamber, Mr. President, is for him to decide. If he thinks it proper to deliver utterances here which elsewhere can not fail to be obstructive and harmful, it is for him to decide.

The Senator from Colorado went further and declared that there are 6,000,000 Christians in the Philippines. "Christians"—"Christians," he said, and that it was his opinion that if those 6,000,000 Christians were Baptists, Methodists, and Presbyterians, the people of the United States would have risen long ago in protest and suppression of the outrages and the cruelties which have been perpetrated upon those 6,000,000 Christians over there.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President, that is not a correct statement.

Mr. SPOONER. I am willing to be corrected.

Mr. PATTERSON. I said the Baptists and the Methodists and the Presbyterians and other denominations, if the Filipinos were Christians who had been taught their Christianity in the sanctuaries of those churches, would have risen almost as one man and one woman to protest against the shooting down of members of their churches in order that they may be brought under subjugation to the people of this country. I did not say the people; I said the members.

Mr. SPOONER. Did the Senator mean to send word to the Filipinos—the 6,000,000 Christians—that the Christian people of the United States, not of their particular sect, cared nothing for outrage, oppression, cruelty, tyranny imposed in the Philippines upon Catholic Christians?

Mr. PATTERSON. That is not what I said.

Mr. SPOONER. Did the Senator mean to give to them over there that impression? If my voice could be heard there in answer to his observation, I should say to them, "That is a slander of the Protestant Christian people of the United States. Do not believe it." I would say to them, Mr. President——

Mr. PATTERSON. May I ask the Senator from Wisconsin a question?

Mr. SPOONER. Certainly.

Mr. PATTERSON. Is it your opinion that if the Filipinos were Methodist and Presbyterian and Baptist Christians the Methodists and Presbyterians and Baptists of the United States would permit, without protest, the subjugation of those people by fire and sword and cannon and all of the other cruelties that are connected with the war of subjugation?

Mr. SPOONER. If that were not my opinion, I would not have begun the utterance of the sentence which the Senator interrupted. The Senator dealt with the Christian sects of the United States. There is no religious division in our polity. In this country every man and woman is at liberty to worship God as he or she chooses. Church and state are separated, and in all this land there has not been found success to any body of our people who sought to create divisions among us along lines of religion. It has been attempted, but the public opinion of the United States would not permit it, and every effort in a little time has fallen under the ban of that public opinion. There has been not much of protest from the Methodists, the Episcopalians, the Presbyterians, or the Catholics of the United States against the policy pursued in the Philippines; and all I cared to note was this—and I did not for one moment think the Senator intended it—that it is very harmful, as I think it entirely unfounded, to send forth from this Chamber to the people of the Philippine Archipelago the suggestion that the Christian sects of the United States care less for their safety, care less for their liberty, care less for their rights because they are Catholics. There is no such prejudice.

Mr. PATTERSON. Just one word, lest there may be some misunderstanding. I am not myself a Catholic.

Mr. SPOONER. I do not care for that.

Mr. PATTERSON. I and mine, so far as they go back, have been members of an orthodox Protestant church.

Mr. SPOONER. I do not care for that.

The Senator from Maryland [Mr. WELLINGTON] said the other day, and that is true, that the Philippine problem is one of the fruits of the war with Spain. He said that the war with Spain was unnecessary; that we could have averted that war. I have no doubt he thinks so. I do not think so. I spend but a moment upon that topic. No man charged with public duty was ever in the world more reluctant to engage his country in a war than was President McKinley. He waited and waited and waited and waited, Mr. President, and negotiated, sometimes amid taunt and insult and charges impeaching his motives, to exhaust the resources of diplomacy in order to avert a war with Spain. I thought once that but for the destruction of the Maine it might have been averted. I do not now believe it. It came. That fact never can be recalled. It is useless to discuss it. It was carried forward, on land and sea, to successful issue, and out of it resulted the treaty of Paris.

Some Senators seem now to take a very different view of the treaty of Paris from that which operated upon them when it was pending in this Chamber. It was ratified, Mr. President. That can not be recalled. The Senator from Maryland voted to ratify it. That can not be recalled.

Mr. WELLINGTON. I agree with the Senator from Wisconsin, if he will permit me.

Mr. SPOONER. Certainly.

Mr. WELLINGTON. I rarely ever interrupt, and I do not like to interrupt him now. I agree with him that it can not be recalled. And I go further. I would give very much, I would to-day give ten years of my life to recall the vote that I gave upon the ratification of that treaty. I want to go further and say again, as I have said before, that the promises which were made to me upon that occasion were broken by the Administration, and if I could now recall my vote I would do so.

Mr. SPOONER. The Senator from Maryland was sent by his great Commonwealth to represent her in part in this Chamber. The function of a Senator in advising and consenting to the ratification of a treaty is independent, under the Constitution, of the Executive who negotiates it. Whether the Senator from Maryland may properly resort to conversations with one who no longer lives to give his version is for that Senator to decide.

Mr. WELLINGTON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. SPOONER. Certainly.

Mr. WELLINGTON. I merely desire to state that I now say nothing of the late President of the United States that I did not say when he was living. I make no accusations against the dead that I would not make if he were living and in the Presidential office to-day.

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President, the Senator from Maryland must have known that when territory is acquired by the United States, there is but one power under our Constitution which can define the public policy in regard to it, which can dispose of it either absolutely or qualifiedly, and that is the Congress of the United States.

Mr. WELLINGTON. Mr. President, once more. I shall not interrupt the Senator again. If he contends that that is the doctrine, that territory once acquired can not be given away or alienated by any other power than the Congress of the United States, how does it come that a part of our northern possessions, without any action of Congress, without any treaty, was alienated to England by the modus vivendi?

Mr. SPOONER. It was not. That is the way it comes.

Mr. WELLINGTON. It was not?

Mr. SPOONER. No; it was not.

Mr. WELLINGTON. Does not England hold it to-day?

Mr. SPOONER. That is a temporary arrangement—a modus vivendi.

Mr. WELLINGTON. Yes; but England holds it to-day.

Mr. SPOONER. But my proposition was this: That the Senator knew, or if he did not know he ought to have known, that the Congress alone is authorized to dispose of territory of the United States, or in an instance the President and the Senate, perhaps.

Mr. WELLINGTON. I knew, or thought I knew that, though the events which have transpired since then have changed my opinion. But the fact remains, nevertheless, that American territory has been alienated—that American citizens have been given up to the tender mercies of the British constabulary up in that part of territory which had never been claimed by England until it came into the possession of the United States of America.

Mr. SPOONER. The Senator knows that it has not been alienated; that it was absolutely impossible by any such method to alienate it; and he knows further that the President of the United States has no power to alienate territory of the United States, and that a promise that he would, or that he would control a policy as to the alienation of territory, would be usurpatory and the outgrowth of mere ignorance.

Mr. WELLINGTON. Will the Senator allow me? Unquestionably that is the law, but the events which have occurred since the beginning of the Spanish war have brought about an entire reversal of the policy which existed previous to that time, and the Executive to-day seems to rule not only the Executive Department, but whatever be the opinions of the House of Representatives, by some influence, when the time comes, they reverse themselves, and it has been done in the Senate also; so there remains nothing in the United States of America concerning any question of this kind, except the will of the Executive.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. Will the Senator from Wisconsin allow me for a moment?

Mr. SPOONER. Certainly.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. I wish to state that I am somewhat familiar with the subject to which the Senator from Maryland refers, and that the Senator from Wisconsin is absolutely correct in his statement. There was a zone of disputed territory in the district of Alaska, and in order to avoid conflict between American miners and British miners a temporary line between the two countries was agreed upon. It was but temporary. There was no suggestion or thought that it should be permanent.

Mr. WELLINGTON. Mr. President——

Mr. SPOONER. I hope the Senator from Maryland will allow me to proceed. That is a collateral matter anyway.

Mr. WELLINGTON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Wisconsin declines to yield.

Mr. WELLINGTON. Do I understand that the Senator from Wisconsin declines to yield?

Mr. SPOONER. If the Senator wishes——

Mr. WELLINGTON. I wish to ask the Senator from Indiana a question.

Mr. SPOONER. Very well.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Wisconsin yields to the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. WELLINGTON. I do not wish to do anything that is discourteous——

Mr. SPOONER. I know that.

Mr. WELLINGTON. Especially not so far as concerns the Senator from Wisconsin. But I desire to ask the Senator from Indiana whether or not it is true that the boundary line in dispute came into dispute after the United States of America became possessed of Alaska by the purchase from Russia, and whether the stones marking the line had not been set there and been there for almost a century, and England had not made any claim of sovereignty whatever, but that by this modus vivendi, by this secret transaction, we, the American people, by our Administration, surrendered the right, gave up those lines of demarcation as they were set by the stones for a century, and surrendered our people to the British constabulary?

Mr. SPOONER. If this were a court, I should move to strike that out as being irrelevant.

Mr. WELLINGTON. I desire to say to the Senator from Wisconsin that he would have to move to strike out half of the proceedings of the Senate if the rule as to irrelevancy prevailed here.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. Just a word. The Senator from Maryland is utterly and absolutely mistaken as to the situation in Alaska. There never have been any stone monuments erected, recently or remotely. There has been a popular report to the effect that stone monuments have been erected, but the boundary line never has been surveyed and no monuments have ever been erected. If the Senator from Maryland is as much in error as to the Philippines as he is with respect to the condition in Alaska, he is far away from the truth.

Mr. SPOONER. I think he is.

Mr. WELLINGTON. Mr. President——

Mr. SPOONER. If the Senator will allow me to proceed, I want to get through——

Mr. WELLINGTON. I will allow the Senator to proceed in one moment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Wisconsin declines to yield.

Mr. WELLINGTON. I will have an opportunity at some time to vindicate my position.

Mr. SPOONER. Certainly. Now, Mr. President——

Mr. WELLINGTON. I can not be shut off in that way.

Mr. SPOONER. When this treaty was sent to the Senate the question was presented whether we would accept a cession of the Philippine Archipelago or reject it. It was entirely in the power of the United States Senate to do either the one or the other. And when we voted upon the treaty, let it be not forgotten, that our troops were involved in battle with the troops of Aguinaldo, and with the Senate put upon notice that war was involved possibly out of this transaction, the Senate voted upon the treaty. It was carried by a single vote; but, Mr. President, the truth of history is that it could not have been carried without Democratic votes, and that the distinguished leader of the Democracy of that day, if not of this, came here and labored with those of his faith to vote for the treaty, to vote to take that responsibility upon the country, and I believe it will be admitted that but for his interposition that treaty would not have been ratified in the form in which it was ratified.

Upon the consideration of that treaty every phase of this question which has since been mooted, except possibly one, was presented to the Senate and voted upon. There were Senators in this body who thought that we should amend the treaty so as to deal with the Philippines as under the treaty we were to deal with Cuba. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST], a veteran in the public service, one of the most brilliant men I have ever known, offered an amendment to the treaty to strike out in the article ceding the Philippine Archipelago the words "cedes to the United States" and insert in lieu thereof "relinquishes all claim of sovereignty over and title to the Philippine Archipelago," and to amend further as follows:

Add at the end of Article III the following:

"The United States, desiring that the people of the archipelago shall be enabled to establish a form of free government suitable to their condition, and securing the rights of life, liberty, and property, and the preservation of order and equal rights therein, assumes for the time being and to the end aforesaid the control of the archipelago so far as such control shall be needful for the purposes above stated, and will provide that the privileges accorded to Spain by Article IV and V of this treaty shall be enjoyed."

In line 2 of Article VIII, after the word "Cuba," insert the words "and in the Philippine Archipelago."

In line 3 of the same article, after the word "Indies," insert "and."

In lines 3 and 4 of the same article strike out the words "and in the Philippine Archipelago."

In Article IX strike out lines 171, 172, 173.

In line 2 of Article XIII, after the word "Cuba," insert the words "the Philippines."

In line 3 of the same article strike out the words "the Philippines."

How many times have we heard, Mr. President, from the Democratic rostrum since that day a demand that the Philippines should be treated as we agreed to treat Cuba? A vote was taken upon that precise question, upon the amendments offered by the Senator from Missouri—yeas 30, nays 53, as follows:

The proposed amendments were considered together; and

Those who voted in the affirmative are:

Messrs. Bacon, Bate, Berry, Caffrey, Chilton, Clay, Cockrell, Daniel, Gorman, Hale, Heitfeld, Hoar, Jones of Arkansas, Jones of Nevada, Kenney, McLaurin, Martin, Mills, Mitchell, Money, Murphy, Pasco, Pettigrew, Rawlins, Roach, Smith, Tillman, Turley, Turner, and Vest.

Those who voted in the negative are:

Messrs. Aldrich, Allen, Allison, Baker, Burrows, Butler, Carter, Chandler, Clark, Cullom, Davis, Deboe, Elkins, Fairbanks, Faulkner, Foraker, Frye, Gallinger, Gear, Gray, Hanna, Hansbrough, Harris, Hawley, Kyle, Lindsay, Lodge, McBride, McEnery, McMillan, Mantle, Mason, Morgan, Nelson, Penrose, Perkins, Pettus, Platt of Connecticut, Platt of New York, Pritchard, Quay, Ross, Sewell, Shoup, Simon, Spooner, Stewart, Sullivan, Teller, Thurston, Warren, Wellington, and Wolcott.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. SPOONER. Certainly.

Mr. TELLER. I did vote against it, Mr. President. I had stated at least twice in open Senate and repeatedly in executive session that I was for applying the same rule to the Philippine Islands that we were to apply to Cuba. I did not then think it was necessary to put any pledges in that treaty. I knew to do so would continue technically the state of war for several months, and I was assured by the Senator from Wisconsin and all of his associates that we would certainly do the just and righteous thing by those people when the treaty was ratified. I am waiting, Mr. President, to see them keep that pledge and make it good.

Mr. SPOONER. Did the Senator vote against the Vest amendment upon any promise of mine as to what the future policy of the Government would be in the Philippines?

Mr. TELLER. Oh, no, Mr. President; I voted against the Vest amendment on the ground that it was not good law, and I say now it was not good law.

Mr. SPOONER. I think I have heard the Senator say since that we ought to treat the Philippines as we treated Cuba.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, if the Senator will allow me——

Mr. SPOONER. Certainly.

Mr. TELLER. I still insist that both our interest and our duty require us to do that.

Mr. SPOONER. The Senator had views upon this question before the treaty was sent to the Senate. A gentleman has sent me a copy of a speech made by the Senator before the Silver Republican State convention at Colorado Springs September 8, 1898, in which he took occasion to deal with this subject. Whether it is accurate or not of course I do not know.

Mr. TELLER. The Senator can read it, and I can tell him.

Mr. SPOONER. Of course I do not undertake to say that it is accurate, but it was in harmony with the views which I understood the Senator to entertain when we voted upon the treaty. The Senator in that speech said:

The greater question is, What shall we do with the Asiatic Islands? We did not contemplate that when the war began. I have found that there had been a worse condition for two hundred years in the Philippine Islands than there had been in Cuba; that there had been the wickedest government that ever afflicted the human race.

Now, you can not return the islands to Spain. I said in the Senate that any party that proposed that would go out of power and remain out for a generation. It is too cowardly. It is too wicked. You can not do it.

Then, what are we going to do with them? Are we going to peddle them out? Are we going to say to the countries of the world: "We are incapable of maintaining colonies; we doubt our ability to maintain good government there. Will you take them and see what you can do with them?" Do you think we will ever say that? They are on our hands.

Mr. TELLER. Did the Senator say "peddle them out?"

Mr. SPOONER. "Peddle them out." It appears here as I read it.

Mr. TELLER. I have not any doubt but that it is accurate. It is practically what I said in the Senate. The Senator can find in my speeches in the Senate almost verbatim what I said there.

Mr. SPOONER. Yes.

There is an obligation upon us. That obligation is to see that those people have a good government, and if they are capable of participating in it to take them in and give them the rights that we enjoyed here when we were denied some of the rights of American citizenship. Make Territories out of them. We need not make States of them. If they should ever become affiliated with us and so assimilated with us that we can make States of them, we will make States of them.

You can depend upon the American people to do the right thing at the right time. You need not be afraid that we will take them in before they are ready or that we will keep them out after they are ready to come in.

I believe, myself, that we have reached the point in American history when the American Union is to take its place among the great nations of the world, and I do not believe that, as a nation, we can escape the responsibility that God puts upon us as a great nation any more than I can escape the responsibility that is put upon me as a man. We are to be as a great family of the nations of the world.

These islands are in the line of the great commerce of the world. They are worth millions to us.

I never thought of that. In dealing with the Philippine question I never thought of trade. I was surprised when I read this speech, remembering the speech which the Senator delivered here a few days ago, that the value of those islands to us in dollars had ever entered into his consideration, and that we could hold them without any disadvantage to us.

Mr. TELLER. I will just enter a denial of that. I did not say in my speech that that never had entered into my calculations.

Mr. SPOONER. No; I did not say that you did.

Mr. TELLER. You say that I said so there?

Mr. SPOONER. Oh, no. Do you say that this was not in your speech?

Mr. TELLER. No. Did you say that I said the other day in my speech the idea of the commercial value of the islands had never entered into my mind?

Mr. SPOONER. No; because you said they would never be of commercial value.

Mr. TELLER. I said under the conditions now existing, with their hostility, they never could be of any value.

Mr. SPOONER. Of course they could not be of any value if they are to always be in insurrection.

Mr. TELLER. When the Senator finishes the reading, I will tell him if there are any errors in there.

Mr. SPOONER. I would not do the Senator any injustice. This is in harmony with what I thought was the Senator's position at the time.

Mr. TELLER. Go on with the reading.

Mr. SPOONER (reading)— and we can hold them without any disadvantage to us. We can hold them so they will be a glory to us and a glory to the people over whom we extend our flag and our republican institutions. I am one of those who believe that a republic is better than a monarchy. I believe the voice of 100,000,000 of men is better than the voice of one, and I have faith in the American people, in their intelligence, in their integrity, in their ability, and I am willing to trust these great problems to them—

The Senator has changed. He was willing then to trust these great problems to the American people. To-day he seems not to be—and I say we shall make no mistake if we say to them, "We have put our flag here, we have buried our dead, and by the Eternal the flag shall stay while the Union lives."

That is all.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, if the Senator had taken the pains to read the speech that I made on the 20th day of December, 1898, he would have found that I repeated practically that in the Senate.

Now, the Senator says that I am not willing to trust the American people. I am willing to trust them. I am not willing to trust them as represented by the present organization of political parties. I have never changed my views on this question. I voted for the treaty. In executive session and in open session I declared that we could trust the American people to deal righteously with those people. They were then asking us to grant a protectorate over them.

I said, and I repeated it, and I am not afraid now to say it, there is no trouble, legally or otherwise, in my judgment, in the American people maintaining a colony. The question is, How shall you maintain it? What shall be the rights of the colonists? If you had given to them, as I said there, what they had given us—a Territorial government—and, Mr. President, if you had done that in 1898, we would not have had any war.

If the Senator desires to question my attitude now, he had better turn to the RECORD, and he had better turn to his own record when he encouraged us, who were told by his associates on the other side of the Chamber that you could trust the Republican party to do justice. We said you could. Mr. President, I thought you could. I believe eventually you will yet. I believe the American people will eventually see that justice is done to those people.

I do not say, Mr. President, that any injustice would have been done to them by maintaining our flag there if they wanted it there, which they did want and which they professed to want when I made those speeches, and which they would want now if we would give them such a government as we ought to give them.

Mr. SPOONER. It is a strange thing, but it is a fact almost universally true, that the moment a man leaves a political party with which he has long been associated he discovers that it is utterly bad.

Mr. CARMACK. After he discovers it is utterly bad, then he leaves it.

Mr. SPOONER. Well, if he remains in it until it is utterly bad he is as bad as it, and would not save himself by leaving it. I do not mean to apply this to the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER].

Mr. TELLER. I ask the Senator to allow me to interrupt him long enough to say that I will not enter into any discussion of the propriety of my leaving the Republican party. I left it because I differed with its members on great economic questions. Up to that time I had no reason to suppose that upon great questions affecting the rights of mankind, and affecting the interests of all the American people and 10,000,000 of other people, I should be divergent from their views.

Mr. SPOONER. I understand that the Senator left the party because of his difference in regard to the money question, and I was very sorry to have him leave, for one, for I have always had great admiration for his ability and great friendship for him personally, as I always expect to have.

Mr. President, I have shown that there was a vote in limine in the Senate, participated in by my friend from Colorado, against amending this treaty so that the United States should sustain the same relation to the Philippines that we sustained by the treaty to Cuba. The vote to ratify the treaty without amendment was 57 to 27, as follows:

Those who voted in the affirmative are:
Messrs. Aldrich, Allen, Allison, Baker, Burrows, Butler, Carter, Chandler, Clark, Clay, Cullom, Davis, Deboe, Elkins, Fairbanks, Faulkner, Foraker, Frye, Gallinger, Gear, Gray, Hanna, Hansbrough, Harris, Hawley, Jones of Nevada, Kenney, Kyle, Lindsay, Lodge, McBride, McEnery, McLaurin, McMillan, Mantle, Mason, Morgan, Nelson, Penrose, Perkins, Pettus, Platt of Connecticut, Platt of New York, Pritchard, Quay, Ross, Sewell, Shoup, Simon, Spooner, Stewart, Sullivan, Teller, Thurston, Warren, Wellington, and Wolcott.

Those who voted in the negative are:
Messrs. Bacon, Bate, Berry, Caffery, Chilton, Cockrell, Daniel, Gorman, Hale, Heitfeld, Hoar, Jones of Arkansas, Mallory, Martin, Mills, Mitchell, Money, Murphy, Pasco, Pettigrew, Rawlins, Roach, Smith, Tillman, Turley, Turner, and Vest.

The pairs were as follows:
Mr. Cannon and Mr. Proctor with Mr. White.
Mr. Wetmore and Mr. Wilson with Mr. Turpie.

And at that time, Mr. President, those people, if they ever have been, were protesting, not orally simply, but with guns in their hands and by attack upon our troops against American sovereignty in those islands.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, may I interrupt the Senator again?

Mr. SPOONER. Certainly.

Mr. TELLER. It is true the telegraph had brought us a statement of some trouble. We did not know what that trouble was, and naturally, I think, it aroused the American spirit. I do not myself think that there was any inconsistency in a man who wanted to apply the principles which I had declared I wanted to apply to the Philippines in voting for the treaty. I wanted to take them away from Spain. I wanted them where the American nation could deal with them of right, which it could do; and I had every right to suppose, not only from the past history of this country, but from the pledges made here that there would be no trouble at all such as we have since found.

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President, that is not all of the record. The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. MCENERY] introduced the following resolution:

That by the ratification of the treaty of peace with Spain it is not intended to incorporate the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands into citizenship of the United States, nor is it intended to permanently annex said islands as an integral part of the territory of the United States; but it is the intention of the United States to establish on said islands a government suitable to the wants and conditions of the inhabitants of said islands to prepare them for local self-government, and in due time to make such disposition of said islands as will best promote the interests of the citizens of the United States and the inhabitants of said islands.

To that the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR], who has been consistent, offered this amendment:

On motion by Mr. HOAR to amend the resolution by inserting after the word "islands," where it appears the third time, the words "with the consent of the people thereof."

And that was voted upon; a proposition to declare then the policy of the United States, the treaty having been ratified, as to the future of the Philippine Archipelago.

Mr. ALDRICH moved to lay that amendment upon the table. This was the 6th of February. The votes in favor of laying it upon the table were 45; those against 34, as follows:

Those who voted in the affirmative are:
Messrs. Aldrich, Allison, Baker, Burrows, Carter, Chandler, Clark, Cullom, Davis, Deboe, Elkins, Fairbanks, Foraker, Frye, Gallinger, Gear, Gray, Hanna, Hansbrough, Hawley, Kenney, Lindsay, Lodge, McBride, McEnery, McMillan, Mantle, Morgan, Nelson, Penrose, Pettus, Platt of Connecticut, Platt of New York, Pritchard, Quay, Ross, Sewell, Shoup, Simon, Spooner, Stewart, Teller, Thurston, Warren, Wolcott.

Those who voted in the negative are:
Messrs. Allen, Bacon, Bate, Berry, Butler, Caffery, Chilton, Clay, Cockrell, Daniel, Gorman, Hale, Harris, Heitfeld, Hoar, Jones of Arkansas, Jones of Nevada, McLaurin, Martin, Mason, Mills, Mitchell, Money, Murphy, Perkins, Pettigrew, Rawlins, Roach, Smith, Tillman, Turley, Turner, Vest, Wellington.

So the amendment was laid on the table.

There was the precise proposition proposed by the Senator from Massachusetts, whether we should say by declaration, hostilities just having begun, that it was our purpose to establish in said islands, "with the consent of the people thereof," a government, and there is the vote. That amendment was laid on the table. That is not all, either.

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] offered another amendment, which was to insert, after the words "United States" where they appear the second time, the words "or to force a government on them against their will." The country will see that all this was presented to the Senate in that hour, and here is the vote upon it. Although some of the Senators who voted upon it have changed, the record has not changed, nor can it change, and the responsibility for all that has occurred, Mr. President, as it will appear, is easily located, and out of that, I think, grows a duty.

Mr. ALDRICH moved to lay that amendment on the table, and it was laid on the table—yeas 46, nays 30. The vote was as follows:

Those who voted in the affirmative are:
Messrs. Aldrich, Allen, Allison, Baker, Burrows, Butler, Carter, Chandler, Clark, Cullom, Davis, Deboe, Elkins, Fairbanks, Foraker, Frye, Gallinger, Gear, Gray, Hanna, Hansbrough, Hawley, Kenney, Lindsay, Lodge, McBride, McEnery, McMillan, Mantle, Morgan, Nelson, Penrose, Pettus, Platt of Connecticut, Platt of New York, Pritchard, Quay, Ross, Sewell, Simon, Spooner, Stewart, Teller, Thurston, Warren, Wolcott.

Those who voted in the negative are:
Messrs. Bacon, Bate, Berry, Caffery, Clay, Cockrell, Gorman, Hale, Harris, Heitfeld, Hoar, Jones of Arkansas, Jones of Nevada, McLaurin, Martin, Mason, Mills, Mitchell, Money, Murphy, Perkins, Pettigrew, Rawlins, Roach, Smith, Tillman, Turley, Turner, Vest, Wellington.

So the amendment was laid on the table.

If there ever was a time, Mr. President, when that declaration would have brought peace and made peace in the Philippines, it was then, before even an exchange of ratifications. But it could not have done it, in my opinion.

That was not all, either. The Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON], with whom as to this matter I do not entirely agree, but whose attitude from the beginning in this Chamber upon it has been different, in my judgment, from that of some members of his party, offered this amendment to the McEnery resolution:

Resolved further, That the United States hereby disclaim any disposition or intention to exercise permanent sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over said islands, and assert their determination, when a stable and independent government shall have been erected therein entitled, in the judgment of the Government of the United States, to recognition as such, to transfer to said government, upon terms which shall be reasonable and just, all rights secured under the cession by Spain, and to thereupon leave the government and control of the islands to their people.

The Senate upon that was evenly divided.

Mr. BACON. What was the vote?

Mr. SPOONER. The vote was 29 to 29, as follows:

Those who voted in the affirmative are:
Messrs. Bacon, Bate, Berry, Caffery, Chilton, Clay, Cockrell, Faulkner, Gorman, Gray, Hale, Harris, Heitfeld, Hoar, Jones of Arkansas, Jones of Nevada, Lindsay, McLaurin, Martin, Money, Murphy, Perkins, Pettigrew, Pettus, Quay, Rawlins, Smith, Tillman, Turner.

Those who voted in the negative are:
Messrs. Allison, Burrows, Carter, Chandler, Deboe, Fairbanks, Frye, Gear, Hanna, Hawley, Kyle, Lodge, McBride, McEnery, McMillan, Mantle, Morgan, Nelson, Penrose, Platt of Connecticut, Platt of New York, Pritchard, Ross, Shoup, Simon, Stewart, Teller, Warren, Wolcott.

The Senate being evenly divided,
The Vice-President voted in the negative.
So the amendment was not agreed to.

Mr. LODGE. It was lost.

Mr. SPOONER. It was lost, I mean, by the casting vote of the Vice-President.

Mr. LODGE. It was lost any way.

Mr. SPOONER. Yes; it was lost.

Mr. HOAR. Will the Senator pardon me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. SPOONER. Certainly.

Mr. HOAR. I do not want to interrupt the Senator on some mere trifle, but nothing is ever lost in the Senate by the casting vote of the Vice-President.

Mr. SPOONER. That is true.

Mr. HOAR. It was lost because it had not the majority.

Mr. SPOONER. It was lost without his vote, and a little more lost with it.

The resolution proposed by Mr. MCENERY then passed by a vote of 26 to 22, as follows:

Those who voted in the affirmative are,
Messrs. Allison, Burrows, Chandler, Deboe, Fairbanks, Faulkner, Frye, Gear, Gray, Hale, Hanna, Harris, Kyle, Lodge, McEnery, McLaurin, McMillan, Mantle, Mason, Nelson, Perkins, Pettus, Platt of New York, Quay, Sullivan, Teller.

Those who voted in the negative are,
Messrs. Bacon, Bate, Caffery, Carter, Clay, Cockrell, Hawley, Hoar, Lindsay, McBride, Martin, Money, Morgan, Murphy, Pettigrew, Platt of Connecticut, Rawlins, Ross, Simon, Smith, Stewart, Warren.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. SPOONER. I will yield, but I hope the Senator will not interrupt me long, for I am anxious to get through.

Mr. PATTERSON. It is not with anything that I will say. While the Senator from Wisconsin is arraying records, I want to call his attention to a statement made by himself on the 2d day of February, 1899, about four days before the ratification of the treaty, if the Senator will permit me to call attention to it.

Mr. SPOONER. Certainly.

Mr. PATTERSON. The Senator from Wisconsin then said:

I am a commercial expansionist. I believe in building up the trade of the United States. I am in favor of an interoceanic canal, not only for the purposes of national defense, but for its benefit to the trade of the future. I am in favor of acquiring naval stations all over the world where the interests of this Government would be subserved thereby—resting places for our commerce. I am in favor of lines of cable connection in every conceivable direction where they would promote the interests of the United States.

* * * * * * *

But, Mr. President, I shrink from the notion that the interests of this country will be subserved by making permanently a part of our land territory thousands of miles away, inhabited by peoples alien to us, not of our blood, not of our way of thinking, foreign to all our associations, living in a tropical climate, where the white man can not work under labor conditions of necessity which we would not permit to exist in the United States.

Mr. SPOONER. Is the Senator going to read the whole speech?

Mr. PATTERSON. It will not do justice to the Senator unless I finish this important part of it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin decline to yield further?

Mr. SPOONER. Oh, no; I like that.

Mr. PATTERSON. The Senator from Wisconsin continued:

Every argument which has been made in support of this doctrine of territorial expansion—and by "territorial expansion" I mean permanent territorial expansion—seems to me to be superficial, some of them sentimental, and some of them fantastic.

The jingle of words which we read every day about "hauling down the flag" does not in the least either thrill me or impress me. Our flag has been hauled down before, Mr. President. It will be hauled down again. Where we raise it we will permit no other power on earth to haul it down, but with us it may be as honorable to haul it down as it was to raise it. It was hauled down in Mexico when hostilities ended there. If we had sent our fleet across the sea to the peninsula of Spain and captured Barcelona, raising our flag above it, it would not have been there to stay; we would have hauled it down. To-day it floats in Cuba; the Spanish flag has gone forever, but our flag is not there to stay. It floats there in sight of the poor, wrecked Maine at Habana, but there will come a day, Mr. President—and I hope it will not be long—when we will take down our flag, raised there in the cause of liberty, and leave behind it liberty and an independent government, won and established under its folds. I hope that, too, about the Philippines, and that is not at all inconsistent in my view with the ratification of the pending treaty.

It is insisted that we must have permanent territorial expansion in order to extend our trade. Mr. President, I do not think so. I have been strongly inclined to think that in the long run, with all the embarrassments and complications and dangers it will bring upon our people, it will retard rather than develop the foreign trade of the United States. We have been growing rapidly in our trade without territorial expansion. To acquire distant, nonassimilable peoples in order, through permanent dominion, to force our trade upon them seems to me to be the poorest imaginable national policy. How far will that be carried? We want the trade of the world.

Mr. SPOONER. I know the Senator likes that, and so do I.

Mr. PATTERSON. I will read further from the Senator's speech. He continued as follows:

And we intend to have our share of it. Are we, therefore, to obtain it by carrying this doctrine of expansion to the uttermost parts of the earth? If territorial expansion means national trade, if it be necessary to national trade, where are we to stop?

I think, Mr. President, the trade of the world will go where its interest leads it in the long run, and the best avant courier of civilization is a merchant ship, carrying the products of civilization and teaching the wants of civilization.

Permanent domain over the Philippines by the United States as a part of this country means to me an endless and vast burden upon the industries of our people.

Mr. SPOONER. The Senator from Colorado——

Mr. PATTERSON. I just thought this might go into the RECORD at this time.

Mr. SPOONER. Of course it will go into the RECORD. The Senator from Colorado has not been here long, but he has been here long enough to acquire the very worst habit we have here.

Mr. President, I uttered here what the Senator has read, and more in the same line, which the Senator has not read.

Mr. PATTERSON. That is true.

Mr. SPOONER. And I have never changed in any way my attitude upon that subject. I stated in that speech that I was reluctant to vote for the ratification of the treaty for the reasons read by the Senator from Colorado and for other reasons; that if the ratification of the treaty involved permanent dominion over the Philippines by the United States, I should vote against it; but I undertook to show—and it was in good faith, and I am of the same opinion now—looking at the various alternatives which presented themselves to the President, that, in honor and humanity, there was none other than to take the cession of the Philippine Archipelago. I attempted to controvert the proposition that we could sustain the same relations to the Philippines in which the treaty left us as to Cuba. I pointed out that the situation was so utterly different, that we were near to Cuba, that it was a small island, with only about a million and a half inhabitants, that when Spain left Cuba she delivered to us the possession of Cuba; but that the Philippine Islands were 7,000 miles away, that the possession of the Philippines by our troops was limited to Manila, and that we could not contract with Spain to occupy that territory without having the title and the sovereignty, a proposition which, in my judgment, no man can successfully challenge. From that day to this I have not changed.

I have united with Senators on the Democratic side here in meeting every duty as the hour made it clear. When Dewey called for troops to occupy the city of Manila, no voice in this Chamber was heard in protest against it, although every Senator here knew Dewey needed no troops to defend his ships; that he had Manila under his guns; but, Mr. President, they knew that he wanted soldiers to occupy Manila.

Mr. TELLER. May I make a suggestion to the Senator?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. SPOONER. Yes, sir.

Mr. TELLER. I wish to suggest to the Senator that we were at flagrant war with Spain when we voted those supplies.

Mr. SPOONER. That is true. I agree with the Senator from Washington [Mr. TURNER] that our occupation of Manila was in violation of the protocol, although the officers were not aware of its existence, and that in fact we held Manila in trust for Spain, to abide the result of negotiations and to protect life, liberty, and property in Manila; but, Mr. President——

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. SPOONER. Yes, sir.

Mr. TELLER. I do not want to break into the thread of the Senator's argument.

Mr. SPOONER. I am breaking into it myself.

Mr. TELLER. The Senator from Wisconsin has read the votes here, particularly the votes against the amendment offered by the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] and the vote on the resolution in the form of an amendment offered by the Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON]. That is done, Mr. President, to make it appear that we are inconsistent; that we did not believe in the principles of the BACON resolution.

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President——

Mr. TELLER. If the Senator will allow me for but a moment longer; it is not of much consequence whether I have changed my views or not, but at that time I took the explicit pains to say that I was in favor of the principles of the resolution of the Senator from Georgia but was not willing to complicate things by putting it on the treaty. I think the Senator ought to allow me to make that statement at least. I can read it if there is any question regarding it. At the same time and on the same day I explicitly declared that under no conditions did I want to annex those people or have any permanent dominion over them; that I agreed with the Senator, that my judgment was the same as his, that the way to get control of the matter, so that we might do justice to ourselves and justice to the Philippine people, was to ratify that treaty. I could not see how we could deal with them unless we did ratify the treaty, and then, of course, the whole subject would have been under our command.

I wish merely to read a few words from what I then said. I shall read but a sentence. I had suggested that I should vote against some other amendments that might be proposed, which I understood were to be offered, but I was told that there were no amendments to be made except those pending.

I was about to state that I should probably vote against some amendments which might express my views very largely. What I rose to say is that I shall vote for the joint resolution. I do not mean by that to be committed absolutely to any policy if conditions, when we come to act on this question, as we must act in the course of a year or so, should be very different from what they are now or very different from what I hope they may be. I shall be governed, as I have a right to be, by the conditions and circumstances then presented. I shall regret very much if we can not carry out the principle of the joint resolution—

That is, the Cuban resolution—

And I declare for that, as I hope we may be able to do, and yet I shall not consider that I am inconsistent with that if conditions should require me to vote for a different plan of government or a different condition.

Mr. President, I spoke at some length on that occasion, but I have only read a few words of what I then said. I do not know but that it may be, and I suppose it is, a fair argument for the Senator to indulge in and charge us with inconsistency because we voted for the treaty which he voted for, and now, simply because we do not approve of the policy the Government has instituted since then, when it had no such policy at that time, and no man living had any reason to suppose that it would have.

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President, what policy does the Senator refer to? What policy has been enforced except by the consent of the Congress, and where has there been a party division in Congress? The President of the United States repeatedly notified Congress that, until Congress adopted some different policy as to the Philippines, he should consider it his sworn duty to employ the troops there to enforce the sovereignty and obedience to the authority of the United States, and to bring about peace.

Mr. President, twice we voted troops without party division. What for? To enable the President to send additional forces to the Philippines until, all in all, we had there at one time 71,000 men. What for? Did Congress act upon those bills in ignorance of the policy of the President as to the utilization of those troops? There was fighting in the Philippines; there was an inadequacy of the American military forces there, and the Congress of the United States—not upon a party division either—furnished the troops by one bill up to 100,000 men—65,000 regular troops and 35,000 volunteers—and they were furnished for use in the Philippines.

What did Senators who voted for the Army bill do it for? They knew the troops were to be sent to the Philippines. Did they suppose they were going upon a pleasure trip? Did they suppose they were going for a sea voyage? Did they suppose they were going simply to look over the beauty and the richness of the Philippines? Every man who voted to place those soldiers at the command of the President knew what they were for and knew they were to be sent to the Philippines to fight. To fight whom? The Spaniards? No. To fight the Filipinos; to fight the insurrectionists, and they were employed for that purpose. How can any man who voted to give the President troops to be used in the Philippines complain of their use in legitimate ways? If they have committed outrages; if they have sullied the flag; if they have been turned into a band of bashi bazouks, that is open to criticism; but no man who thus voted has a right to impeach the Republican party or to launch tirades upon the President for using troops in the Philippines and carrying on the war in the Philippines to the bitter end, not to subjugate an independent people but to enforce the sovereignty and authority of the United States in territory acquired by the United States by a treaty negotiated by the President and ratified by the Senate and completed by the payment of money—$20,000,000—voted by both Houses of Congress.

Mr. TELLER. Will the Senator permit me to say a word?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. SPOONER. Yes, sir.

Mr. TELLER. I voted for that appropriation and I am going to vote for the next appropriation, and I stated the other day why I should vote for it. The party that is intrusted by the American people with the administration of public affairs have asked that, and in such a case I bow to the will of the American people so far that I will vote for what the Administration asks.

Mr. SPOONER. Ah, Mr. President, I think when the Senator voted to send troops to the Philippines to protect an inadequate force there, and to enforce the sovereignty of the United States in the Philippines, he did "bow to the will of the American people;" but no Senator who votes to send troops there can with any great consistency denounce the Government for using them. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR], who was opposed to the treaty, who was opposed to this whole business, differing from us, as he had a right to do, when that Army bill was before the Senate stated briefly the reasons why he could not on his conscience support it; but I know if the Senator had voted to send troops there to maintain our sovereignty, to enforce our authority there, if the troops had been properly employed—and they were sent there to fight—he would not have criticised either the Republican party or the Administration for using them for that purpose.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. SPOONER. Well, yes.

Mr. TELLER. Does the Senator think, entertaining the views that we do, that we ought to have voted against the appropriation of money?

Mr. SPOONER. I do not say that.

Mr. TELLER. Then why does the Senator bring the accusation against us?

Mr. SPOONER. I do not say that, but I do say this, that if I had voted as a matter of patriotism, or because I believed the people demanded it, to give troops to the President to be sent to fight in the Philippines I never would complain because they were sent there, and I would not charge upon an Administration or upon a party bloodthirstiness, cruelty, conquest, for doing with the troops I had voted to raise what I knew would be done.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, will the Senator allow me to make a suggestion?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. SPOONER. Certainly.

Mr. TELLER. We were in this condition: There was war; our troops were there; they went there rightfully; they went there when there was a state of war between the United States and Spain. The Administration asked us for an appropriation to maintain them. To have failed to have so voted—that is, if we had had the power to refuse the appropriation—the Army would have been left without food or supplies. I trust the Senator from Wisconsin can see the difference between failing to vote and simply reserving the right of criticism of the conduct of the Administration in a future time.

Mr. SPOONER. Oh, Mr. President, I admit the right of every man here, whether he voted for the troops or not, to criticise the conduct of the troops. All I say is this: I may be obtuse, but I can not see how a man who votes to send troops over there can complain because they fight after they reach there.

Mr. CARMACK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. SPOONER. I have been interrupted a great deal, but I do not want to deny the Senator.

Mr. CARMACK. I merely want to ask the Senator this question: If this country over his protest had entered into a war which he believed was an unjust and an unrighteous war, having entered into it, and the question came up of voting supplies for that war, would or would not the Senator vote to supply the troops who were in the field, although they were waging a war he believed to be an unjust and an unrighteous war?

Mr. SPOONER. I would say what I had to say when war was declared; but after the troops had taken the field, after a majority of the Congress, disagreeing with me, had voted for war, I would be for the war and for the Army to the end. I would not hover around the flank to carp and criticise and find fault and make false issues or aid in any way the men against whom the American soldiers were fighting.

Mr. CARMACK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin has the floor. Does he yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. SPOONER. I yield.

Mr. CARMACK. One of my questions was this: If the Senator believed and conceived such a condition existing, that the war was unjust and unrighteous, and that it was to the interest and to the honor of the United States that the war should be suspended, still, if the majority against him were for continuing the war, would he vote for supplies for that war so long as it continued, still reserving to himself the right to demand, to urge, and to insist that the United States ought to discontinue the war as soon as it could?

Mr. SPOONER. Are you urging that the war should stop now?

Mr. CARMACK. I am.

Mr. SPOONER. That is, if troops were in the field fighting our troops, that our troops should be withdrawn?

Mr. CARMACK. I think we should do the thing that would put an end to the war instantly. That is what I think; and we are criticising the Government because it does not do that thing.

Mr. SPOONER. Yes.

Mr. CARMACK. We do not ask that the troops be withdrawn.

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President——

Mr. HOAR. Will the Senator allow me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. SPOONER. I yield.

Mr. HOAR. As the Senator from Wisconsin has done me the honor to allude to me, I wish he would allow me to state my position, which he has undertaken to state. It will take only a minute or two.

Mr. SPOONER. Very well.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I do not believe and never did believe there was a war in the Philippines. You can not have a war in this country that is not declared by an act of Congress. What is being done, and has been done, is the use of the troops of the United States by Executive authority to keep order in what is claimed to be a part of our lawful territory.

When long after this treaty was ratified and had gone into effect, this Army bill came up for consideration, and there was a proposition to give the President the power of making the Army flexible, between sixty-five or seventy-five thousand men and a hundred thousand, to increase it or diminish it at his pleasure; thereupon the Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON], representing, I suppose, his party, in the hearing of a full Senate, without any dissent from any quarter on his side, notified the Senate that they would support any measure providing for troops for that emergency, however long it might last. He asked my colleague [Mr. LODGE], who had in charge—or, at any rate, who was one of the leading advocates of the bill—whether he thought it would take one year, three years, or five years; and thereupon gave notice that they would accept his answer and would give the President troops for that length of time. The same question was put to the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER], I think, though I am not quite sure, or to some other Senator who had the floor on the Republican side, and to some Senator on the Appropriations Committee or the Military Committee. Three times that notice was given.

When we undertook to use the troops to suppress tumults in Louisiana and South Carolina, under the Chamberlain and Packard governments, the Democratic party refused to vote for the Army bill, and we did not have one, but at the next session——

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

Mr. HOAR. I am going to make this statement before I yield to anybody.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. HOAR. No; I am in the time of the Senator from Wisconsin, and I wish to complete this statement.

But when the next Congress came they put into the Army bill (and it was part of the condition) that the troops should not be used for what they regarded as an improper putting down of certain risings of those people. I do not say whether they were right or wrong.

They meant business then and they accomplished their business, and Packard and Chamberlain went out of power. I did not think they meant business when they said they would give troops to put down the resistance of the Philippine people under precisely similar circumstances. It was not war. It was putting down resistance, that is all, among a people subject, as they claim, to our sovereignty, and it was in regard to that that I did not mean to have my position misunderstood. I declared then, and I stand by that declaration now, that I would not vote for troops to put down the resistance of a people contending, and rightfully, for a republic they had established, though I was perfectly willing, as a peace measure, to give the President of the United States the power to make the Army flexible.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. TILLMAN. I do not want to disturb the Senator from Wisconsin, because I have sedulously avoided interrupting him to-day, and I expect to follow it. But I merely wish to correct the usually infallible Senator from Massachusetts. I mean infallible as far as his recollection of facts goes. The troops were used in South Carolina to uphold the Chamberlain government——

Mr. HOAR. That is what I say.

Mr. TILLMAN. There was a regiment of troops; but the Senator was in error in declaring that the Democrats in Congress prohibited that before they had been used. They were used there, and the use of troops at elections was such a crying evil that the Democratic majority, which came into the House with Mr. Hayes, put an amendment on the Army bill declaring that none of those troops should be used at elections.

Mr. HOAR. Yes; that they should not be used to sustain those governments.

Mr. TILLMAN. Those governments had tumbled to the ground and disappeared when that amendment was put on the Army bill.

Mr. HOAR. One point——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield the floor?

Mr. HOAR. I have but a sentence of four words. Before that amendment was put on the Army bill the Democratic party in the previous Congress, having the House, had refused to pass any Army bill at all. That is my point.

Mr. SPOONER. I have been almost from the beginning diverted from the line of argument which I intended to pursue, and I am anxious to be permitted to proceed with my speech, although I am ready to answer questions.

I intend to speak later and in a more appropriate place upon the responsibility of the minority for what has happened over there in relation to the Army. I have been drawn into inopportune comment upon that by interruptions. One thing is certain, if anything is certain, that we have a perfect title to the Philippine Archipelago. Spain ceded it to us, and, rightly or wrongly, we have reduced it to possession, so that we have the sovereignty and we have the title. There is, in my opinion, Mr. President, no taint of perfidy or invalidity in that title. I know Senators on the other side and, one or two perhaps upon this side, differ from me about that.

It has been said—and I will spend only a moment upon it—that Aguinaldo had prior to that treaty established an independent government over the Philippines. It has been said that we promised him, when he came to Manila to cooperate with Admiral Dewey, independence. The Senator from Washington [Mr. TURNER] claimed the former. The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN] and others claimed the latter. I do not intend to go into the evidence, but I do proclaim, without fear of successful contradiction, that there never were more baseless allegations.

It was charged that Consul Pratt promised him independence. Consul Pratt denied it in a cablegram to the Department. Afterwards it was published in Mr. Foreman's book that he had promised independence, and he filed a bill in the court at Hongkong or Singapore to restrain the publication of that book, swearing in his bill that it was false and a libel upon him as an official. The injunction was granted, and in every subsequent edition of the book the correction was made by a fly-leaf at the beginning of the book. It was charged that Wildman promised Aguinaldo independence. Wildman denied it. It was charged that Dewey promised Aguinaldo independence. Dewey denied it.

On a former occasion I put before the Senate a captured document showing the proceedings of the junta at Hongkong, signed by Aguinaldo and all of his compatriots—if they were such—which clearly established the fact not only that no such promise was made, but that he did not go to Manila with the understanding that he was to have, or any government he might form there, was to have independence. I will refer to the document for only a moment. They had a meeting to determine whether Aguinaldo should go. This was after he had seen the consul. He did not want to, and these were the proceedings, and it never ought to be forgotten by the American people.

Mr. TILLMAN. What is the date of it?

Mr. SPOONER. I can not give the date at this moment, but it was before he went to Manila.

Notwithstanding the previous remarks, the president (Aguinaldo) insists that he considers it dangerous for him to go to the Philippines without a previous written agreement with the Admiral, since it may happen that if he places himself at his orders he may make him sign or seal a document containing proposals highly prejudicial to the interests of the fatherland, from which may arise the following grave disadvantages:

First. * * *

Second. * * * These are the means, he thinks, which should be first employed to find out certainly what are the intentions of the United States in regard to that country. * * *

They were there talking among themselves. If he had received any promise of independence from Admiral Dewey or from officials of the United States, I think he would have stated it to his confreres on that occasion. After other speeches this was said by Sandico:

The authority to treat, which the president thinks of giving to the other chiefs, without reflecting at all upon their personal deserts, they do not believe can be as effective as his personal attention to the matter, to such serious affairs as those which are the subject of discussion. There will be no better occasion than the present for the expeditionary forces to land on those islands and to arm themselves at the expense of the Americans and assure the attainment of our legitimate aspirations against those very people.

The Filipino people, unprovided with arms, will be the victim of the demands and exactions of the United States, but provided with arms will be able to oppose themselves to them and struggle for their independence, in which consists the true happiness of the Philippines.

After referring to the "prestige which he (Aguinaldo) acquired in the last rebellion," it proceeds:

Once the president in the Philippines, with his prestige he will be able to arouse those masses to combat the demands of the United States if they colonize that country, and will drive them, the Filipinos, if circumstances render it necessary, to a Titanic struggle for their independence, even if later they should succumb to the weight of the yoke of a new oppressor.

The minutes of that meeting—and they were all printed long ago by the Senate—are signed by Aguinaldo and every one of the junta in Hongkong, including Sandico and others who accompanied Aguinaldo to Manila. It is perfectly apparent from this statement that he went there without any pledge, at least he communicated none to his associates, and that the scheme was to obtain arms from Admiral Dewey, and then to use those arms against the United States if occasion required it. Under date 4th January, 1899, Mabini, president of the cabinet and chief adviser of Aguinaldo, wrote:

The chief of the Philippine people has not made any agreement with the Government of the United States, but inspired by the same idea of destroying the sovereignty of Spain in these islands they have mutually assisted each other.

That is not all, Mr. President. He reached Manila on the 20th of May. I read in the Senate, at the time I made the speech from which I read, a cipher letter from Aguinaldo—at least I contended it was from Aguinaldo—which the Senator from Washington attempts to sneer out of the RECORD.

General Anderson has stated, and you will find it in the records, that in July, shortly after he reached there, he suspected Aguinaldo of being in treaty with the Spaniards in Manila. I read—and I stop to call attention to it only for the purpose of making a single comment—a letter dated October 25, found among the captured records; and there are a great many papers among the captured records which throw a strong light on this and other phases of the Philippine insurrection. It is addressed to General Rios, in which Aguinaldo, if he wrote this letter, refers to a letter he had written a few days after he reached Manila to General Augustin, in command of Manila, making a proposition to him to surrender Manila to him. I have no doubt it is the same proposition that was made in this letter to General Rios, in command of Iloilo, in which he calls upon him to surrender his troops to Aguinaldo instead of to us, in order that they might be combined to be used against the forces of the United States. This letter was signed "1-1-9-6-1-M." It is marked "private;" headed "Revolutional government of the Filipines, office of the president." The army officers certify that it is written on the paper then in use in that office, and that "M" is the cipher for "Miong," which means Emilio.

The Senator from Washington discredits it. He asks why should he have written it in cipher? They greatly employ cipher. That is a characteristic of the Oriental. It is very patent among the papers which have been captured from them. Moreover, some one wrote it from his office, wrote it to an officer of the Spaniards, from whom he, Aguinaldo, above all other things just then, desired a surrender of Iloilo to him and not to us. The paper itself expresses the obvious desire of Aguinaldo. It is impossible to suppose that some clerk in the office wrote it. It is impossible to suppose that anyone other than Aguinaldo wrote it, and there is at the end of it this language, which strongly indicates that he wrote it; and all the army officers believe he wrote it:

This is all that I can say to you at present, and I hope that you will tell me that you agree with me, and then I shall be able to present this to my government and obtain from it an agreement to what I have written as a private individual.

This purports to have been written by a public official as an unofficial act to be followed, if agreed to, by official action.

Mr. President, it is perfectly evident that for a long time before the ratification of the treaty Aguinaldo contemplated an attack upon our Army. As far back as August 17, 1898, Mabini wrote a letter to Buencamino, in which, referring to us, he said:

The conflict is coming sooner or later and we will gain nothing by asking favors of them which in reality are our rights, but shall maintain them as long as we are able to, confiding in justice and Providence.

Moreover, I have among these papers a cablegram from London, from the head of the junta there, dated the 3d of February, in which he advises that probably the treaty will be ratified and suggests an attack upon the American troops "the moment the treaty is ratified." In addition to that, he suggests the purchase of some effective torpedoes, "which would serve to repeat in the Bay of Manila the scene in that of Habana, which would serve to give a fortunate termination to our struggle." Not only that, but I have here the order of Aguinaldo, signed on the 9th day of January, issued to the people of Manila on the same day on which he was writing to General Otis, sending commissioners to treat for some arrangement to avert hostilities, expressing himself as deeming peace a necessity. He wrote this order. I will not take the time to read it, because interruptions have caused me to consume already too much time, but it will be very interesting reading to the American people, and it shows beyond cavil that the hostilities which preceded immediately the ratification of the treaty were predetermined by Aguinaldo. For what purpose it is easy to imagine. But I can not go into all that. (See Appendix A.)

The Senator from Washington [Mr. TURNER] says that an insurrection was in progress when Aguinaldo left Hongkong. He had stated that he had surrendered all the rifles under the terms of the treaty of Biaknabato. He wrote to General Anderson that he came from Hongkong to prevent his people from joining the Spaniards and attacking the Americans. He was very depressed after he issued his proclamation declaring himself dictator, because so few of his people rallied around him. When they did in larger degree he moved along through the country taking Tagalog provinces. There is evidence, and abundance of it, that there was a strong sentiment in certain portions of the island against Aguinaldo's attempt to form a government and in favor of recognizing the sovereignty of the United States. A private letter from A. Sandico, found open in the papers of the insurgent government, says:

When the Americans came I was actuated by the love of the country to form clubs and committees to combat the annexation sentiment in Manila. At the given moment, moved by the desire of independence of the country, I do the same thing to stem the current of desire for autonomy which comes from Manila.

It is certain, that in a proclamation issued by Aguinaldo August 6, 1898, to foreign governments, he said:

The said revolution now rules in the provinces of Cavite, Batangas, Mindoro, Tayabas, Laguna, Morong, Bulacan, Bataan, Pampanga, Nueva Ecija, Tarlac, Pangasinan, Union, Infanta, Zambales, and it holds besieged the capital of Manila.

Professor Worcester says of this statement:

In other words, he claimed to control the Tagalog provinces, and practically nothing more.

The consolidated cash book of the insurgent government, showing the sums received as contributions of war and as war taxes from various districts and provinces for the period from May 31, 1898, to February 28, 1899, shows that his tax collections and contributions were limited to provinces containing about three million and a half people out of the eight or ten million who inhabit the archipelago. His government evidently did not maintain law and order even where he was in control. Moreover, it has a double aspect. The external aspect was one thing, the internal another. He made a particular effort from the beginning to prevent outrages upon foreigners, and to give the inference from that of a well-ordered domestic sway. Cooperating with him were certainly some very able and skillful men, both at home and abroad. Under date Paris, June 23, 1899, Agoncillo cabled to the Hongkong junta:

* * * Observe strictly international law as applying to public and to private rights, including its precepts covering persons and property of neutral foreigners, avoiding the slightest cause for complaint on their part, in order to avoid destroying the favorable aspect in which we are fortunately now regarded by them. I think it important that our government should constantly send to all our commanders circulars charging them to treat with respect the persons and property of foreigners (not Yankees), and ordering the most rigid observance of the laws of war, publishing such circulars in the vicinity and sending them to all the consuls in Manila, and to use for publication in the press everywhere.

And this admonition was literally and liberally obeyed.

I have among these papers a report to him from an Army officer as to three towns, in which he says "these towns must be reconquered. It can only be done by taking five lives in each town." That meant by assassinating five prominent men in each town.

Mr. HOAR. Will the Senator from Wisconsin pardon me?

Mr. SPOONER. Certainly.

Mr. HOAR. I hold in my hand General Anderson's statement on that precise subject, in which he says:

We held Manila and Cavite. The rest of the island was held not by the Spaniards, but by the Filipinos. On the other island the Spaniards were confined to two or three fortified towns.

That is General Anderson's statement, and he was the military commander of our troops.

Mr. SPOONER. That was General Anderson's opinion.

Mr. HOAR. He was commander in chief.

Mr. SPOONER. Most of the Spanish troops were then drawn into Manila.

Mr. HOAR. Yes.

Mr. SPOONER. And Aguinaldo, of course, with men who were armed, could take control of Luzon. But there never was a time, so far as I can ascertain, when the Ilocanos, some of the people in North Luzon, the Moros, the Igorrotes, and a large number of people of those islands, and part of the Visayans, ever acknowledged the jurisdiction of Aguinaldo.

Mr. HOAR. If the Senator was speaking about the distribution of power, I suppose when General Anderson says "held by the Filipinos" he means the inhabitants in general. He is not speaking of any particular authority. I should not have interrupted the Senator if I had understood that to be his meaning.

Mr. SPOONER. The truth is, and this paper shows it, that among the Ilocanos, in the north of Luzon, he collected $1.50 a head. He did it by force. He did it against their protest, as is evidenced by the fact that in Cavite Province, in those provinces of Luzon where his retainers gathered around him, he collected but 5 cents a head. He did not have a government which at any time could preserve law and order or which did.

But the treatment by Aguinaldo's government of the people over whom by force in large part he maintained sway was very different, as I will show in a few moments. To say that there was a government in fact, in the sense of law, established by Aguinaldo in the few months intervening between our capture of Manila and the ratification of this treaty is absurd, in my judgment.

Yet on the 12th of June, 1898, he proclaimed the independence of the inhabitants of the Philippine Archipelago. Aguinaldo ought to know better than anyone else the extent of his alleged control August 6, 1898. He never proclaimed the independence of Luzon, nor did he ever assume to establish the Republic of Luzon. He always embraced the full archipelago.

It has been said, and I want to refer to it for a moment, that we had no power to acquire that sovereignty which we have acquired, and which the Supreme Court, in the opinion of Chief Justice Fuller, said we have acquired. He says:

We must decline to assume that the Government wishes thus to disparage the title of the United States or to place itself in the position of waging a war of conquest.

That was in answer to the contention that the situation in the Philippines in its legal relation to us differed from that of Porto Rico. The court say, and five judges concur in this opinion:

The sovereignty of Spain over the Philippines and possession under claim of title had existed for a long series of years prior to the war with the United States. The fact that there were insurrections against her or that uncivilized tribes may have defied her will did not affect the validity of her title. She granted the islands to the United States, and the grantee, in accepting them, took nothing less than the whole grant.

If those in insurrection against Spain continued in insurrection against the United States the legal title and possession of the latter remained unaffected.

From the time the protocol was signed there was peace, or the suspension of hostilities, between us and the Government of Spain. We were in honor bound to employ no military force against the Spaniards or the subjects of Spain in the Philippines.

Aguinaldo was not our ally in the legal or moral sense of the word, because there was no Philippine political entity which could be an ally. He and his associates perhaps had been auxiliaries of ours. If he had been an ally of ours, he would have been bound by the protocol to abstain during that interregnum from operations against the Spanish Government.

After the treaty was entered into, the Spanish Government permitted the withdrawal of her troops from Iloilo, and Aguinaldo, with no one to oppose him, neither Spaniard nor American, for we were confined to Manila, sent armed men into the different provinces, took possession of the various towns, and attempted to bring them under his exactions. That that constituted the erection of an independent government which in law or in morals we ought to have recognized is as empty a contention as anything to which I have ever listened in my life.

Senators say that the Government of the United States, in accepting this sovereignty and this title, violated the Declaration of Independence. I deny it. To say that we could not take as indemnity at the end of war inhabited territory is to impeach the action of this Government hitherto when the Democratic party had control of it. We took California from Mexico. We did not consult the inhabitants. By purchase we took Louisiana. We did not consult the inhabitants. We took Hawaii. We did not consult the inhabitants. By a coup d'état a government had been formed there called a republic. It had adopted a constitution. That constitution prescribed the qualification and the oath. No native Hawaiian was permitted under that constitution to vote on its adoption unless he took the oath of allegiance to that Republic. That constitution contained a provision for ceding Hawaii to the United States. When the time came, a protest of native Hawaiians was filed here against that annexation, unless coupled with statehood.

When the resolution under which we annexed Hawaii was pending here, the Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON], going behind the mere technical status and dealing with what he claimed to be the inalienable moral right, offered an amendment to provide a plebiscite which would give the natives there—the men who were born there, the people who loved that island, whose home it had been—a right to vote upon the question of annexation. That was voted down in the Senate and, without consultation with them, without any compliance with the condition which they sought to ingraft upon the proposition, they were annexed.

That is not all, Mr. President. I mentioned once before long ago in the Senate, in connection with this contention that we violated the Declaration of Independence, which we all love and venerate, that we by this same treaty took, without protest upon the part of anybody here, then or now, a million people who inhabit Porto Rico. We did not ask their consent. It is true they did not antagonize us with arms; but if there is anything at all in this doctrine it involves that they should not be taken without their consent being asked and obtained.

But, Mr. President, while it is true as an abstract proposition, true as a basis for revolution, that government derives its just powers from the consent of the governed, it has never been applied to the acquisition, so far as I remember, of inhabited territory at the end of a successful war. It has never found any place in the international law of the world, and the moment it does that moment (and for that reason it never has and never will, probably) the power of a government at the end of a successful war to demand and accept inhabited territory is gone. At the time the Declaration of Independence was adopted this was true, that never since the dawn of civilization had independent governments engaged in war consulted the people of the territory which they conquered or of territory which they demanded as indemnity for the expense of the war, any more than we did in the case of California. It is no answer to say that these populations were small. Fifty thousand people are entitled as much to protection in the enjoyment of rights conferred by the Almighty as 5,000,000.

Mr. President, it never was intended by the men who framed the Declaration of Independence that the Government of the United States should not possess all of the faculties which appertain to the independent governments of the earth. In their Declaration they said this:

We, therefore, the Representatives of the United States of America in general Congress assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the name and by authority of the good people of these colonies, solemnly publish and declare, that these united colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved; and that as free and independent States they have full power to levy war, conclude peace, contract alliances, establish commerce, and to do all other acts and things which independent states may of right do.

That is, may lawfully do. They intended to create a government the equal in governmental powers, not only at home, but in international relation, of any government that ever existed. It will be an unhappy day, I think, Mr. President, if this doctrine that a government at the end of a successful war can take no inhabited territory without the consent of the inhabitants shall be adopted.

One of the restraints which has operated upon governments against engaging in war was the fear of losing portions of their domain, and if it once be established in the world that no government can take territory as indemnity, if inhabited, unless the inhabitants consent to it, that moral restriction upon war will be eliminated.

I do not believe, Mr. President, that the people of the United States are willing to agree that this Government, when engaged in war, shall be less vigorous in power than the other governments of the earth. I have never feared war with Great Britain. It would be an unspeakable calamity for every reason. We want war with no country. We are wedded to the arts of peace and averse to war. But I have always thought, Mr. President, that a hostage for all the future for peace between us and Great Britain, whatever might come of disagreement, is the great domain over which Great Britain has sovereignty, extending from ocean to ocean. Do you think that the people of the United States would be willing to enter into an agreement that, if by any unhappy chance there should, some time in the distant future, come war between Great Britain and the United States, the end of that war would leave the British Possessions and Canada still the property of Great Britain? Is it to be supposed that the people of the United States would be willing to have it understood that in such an untoward event she would hold herself and her Government disabled by the Declaration of Independence to occupy and to keep the territory to the northward of us? I think not.

Now, Mr. President, Senators taunt us with the duration of hostilities in the Philippine Archipelago and infer from it that we can never bring pacification to those islands, and that the people there will never accept the sovereignty of the United States and enable us to establish a government there. The war, or I might better say, the hostilities, have lasted in the Philippines very much longer than any of us at the outset expected. All of us have regretted them. I never shall cease to regret that Aguinaldo did not heed the letter of General Otis, informing him that he had instructions not to attack his army, and appealing to him to wait until the treaty was ratified and until the Congress, which has the power under the Constitution, could define the policy which was to be pursued toward the Philippine Archipelago. But he would not wait, and the war—because it was war in the end, not in the technical sense—came upon us.

It does not lie, I think, in the mouths of Democratic Senators here to charge upon the Republican party responsibility for the duration of hostilities in the Philippines. I stand here to say, Mr. President—I say it regretfully, I say it with no spirit of unkindness in my heart—that in the main, in my judgment, the responsibility for the duration of this struggle in the Philippine Archipelago is upon the minority party in this country.

There never was, in my judgment, a wickeder thing than the prostitution of that situation to party purposes. Right or wrong, we had acquired the Philippine Archipelago. We had furnished an Army to the President. He had informed us that he would employ that Army to enforce the sovereignty of the United States and obedience to its authority in that archipelago. Then there was projected for party purposes a false and malign political issue in the United States, which did not fail and could not fail to prolong the insurrection at a great cost to the people of the United States not only in dollars, but in lives.

Had there been any proposition made in Congress which rendered it a necessity to make that issue? Had there been any proposition made in Congress leading to what was called imperialism? That matter had been held open, as it is open to-day. No action had been proposed which was to tie the hands of the American Congress and shackle the American people.

And yet Mr. Bryan, an extraordinarily brilliant man, of wonderful personal magnetism, the leader of his party, proceeded, with his associates, to make the political issue of "imperialism," assuming that the Republican party, its Administration, led by President McKinley, would, unless prevented by this issue, commit this Government to colonialism or imperialism.

I say it was a fictitious issue.

From that time out, Mr. President, we heard about the American Government buying people at so much a head; of purchasing mere sovereignty. The United States acquired by that treaty 73,000,000 acres of land in the Philippine Archipelago, 5,000,000 acres only in private ownership, 68,000,000 acres the title to which was in Spain, and passed to us by the cession.

We heard everywhere of our attempted enslavement of the Filipinos, of our violation of the Declaration of Independence, of our attempt to adopt the tyranny and oppression of monarchical governments of the Old World. The changes were rung upon it from one end of the country to the other, from the beginning to the end.

There could be but one effect of it. It was the same, I have always thought, as the effect of the opposition to President Lincoln in his effort to maintain the integrity of the Federal Union. It tended to raise false hopes in those who struggled against the Federal forces. It encouraged a prolongation of insurrection. It made them think that a prolongation of their struggle, followed by the election of Mr. Bryan, meant independence. I can not tell, no one can tell, how long ago but for that the Philippines might have been pacified. We can not know how many millions of dollars and how many lives this unfortunate attitude cost the country, but that it cost many millions and many lives is certainly true.

That was not only the natural effect, Mr. President; it was the actual effect, and there is abundant evidence of it. I have some captured documents from there.

Here is a letter, dated Paris, June 23, 1899, from Agoncillo, the Filipino who was at the Arlington Hotel in this city as the representative of Aguinaldo when hostilities broke out—that is, he was there the day before—but when we learned of the hostilities he had learned before they occurred and betaken himself to Canada. This gentleman says:

> Foment the actions of the Democratic party in the United States, which defends our independence. I am doing this in every way it seems fitting to me.

Here is the translation of a cablegram, sent in cipher, received from Paris on August 31, 1899. I read but a line of it:

> Triumph of Bryan for the Presidency is triumph of our cause.

Mr. ALLISON. Where was that sent?

Mr. SPOONER. That was sent out to the junta at Hongkong. I have here an extract from a letter of Aguinaldo, on the 2d of August, 1900, to Isidoro Torres, an insurgent general:

> Can you perchance tolerate the sale of our liberty and independence for thirty cheap pieces of silver, which is what is offered by the famous and deceitful amnesty of General MacArthur. [Note.—This undoubtedly relates to the money paid for arms, paid and turned over by the insurgents.] And do you know, perchance, what is the true motive of that publication, when it is nothing but the desire of McKinley's Government to stop this war until October next and to be able to show to the whole world, especially to the honorable people of the United States, that we are already pacified or subjugated, and thus to insure the reelection of President McKinley? Understand it well that the end of October is the time allowed the present government by those honorable people of North America to finish this war, and if it does not accomplish it the said Government or imperialistic party will be defeated and then will come the recognition of our independence.

Here is a copy of a letter or order from Aguinaldo to Lieutenant-Colonel Bubb, June 27, 1900:

> Filippine republic—Filipino army—General campaign—No. 202.
>
> As I have in previous letters directed that all commanders of guerrillas are free to attack any detachment or post of the enemy and continually molest the same, I reiterate the order the more strongly because its fulfillment just now is very necessary—> for the advantage of the cause of independence of the Philippines in the approaching Presidential election in the United States of America, which takes place in the early part of the coming month of September of the present year, on account of which it is imperative that before that day comes—that is to say, during the months of June, July, and August—we give such hard knocks to the Americans that they will resound in our favor in all parts and set in motion the fall of the imperialist party, which is trying to enslave us.

Just now—

General Mascardo issued a proclamation to his comrades in arms and fellow-patriots, in which, after referring to the war in China, and to the refusal of Congress to appropriate money needed to continue the war in the Philippines, and of the people to give new volunteers, he said:

> McKinley falls by the wayside. The people abandon him and incline to the political party of Mr. Bryan, whose fundamental teachings is the recognition of our independence. In view of this critical situation of McKinley, he has sent here a Commission with the infamous purpose of deceiving us with false offerings, solely to get out of us the greatest possible advantages, as a trader does to obtain the greatest returns. If we accept these offerings and peace is declared in the archipelago, McKinley will triumph—will be reelected—and his reelection will be the hour of our undoing and terrible misfortune. If, then, we desire our independence, let us for a little while longer put forth heroic deeds of arms, etc.

They had been told from so many rostrums that we were trying to enslave them, to syndicate their islands, and to perpetrate every conceivable outrage upon them that they were ready perhaps to believe it. At any rate, they were led to believe that if they would only hold out until October Mr. Bryan could be elected and they would receive their independence—the strongest possible motive to induce them to continue. It is no wonder that Aguinaldo told his men to redouble their hostilities, to shoot down more American soldiers, to ambush more of our boys over there.

That was not intended, of course, and I have never charged that upon any of our friends here at home, although there were men here who sent letters over there encouraging the Filipinos and denouncing our attempt to bring about peace as piracy; but it was the blind greed for political power which made good men forget for the nonce the safety of the Army and the interest of the people; for, Mr. President, this thing is true: That when our soldiers are at the front facing a foe, no matter where or who, they are there not because they choose, but they are there under orders, and every patriotic impulse of good citizenship demands, I think that people and parties shall withhold a course of action which subjects them to added danger, and which brings distress to them in proportion as it gives encouragement to the enemy. This question of imperialism was not here then; it is not here now, and it is not to be here, Mr. President, I think.

It has been said by the Senator from Colorado that 95 per cent of the Filipinos are hostile to the United States.

Mr. TELLER. And I am afraid that is true.

Mr. SPOONER. I know the Senator was sincere in what he said, but I am not afraid it is true, I do not believe it is true. I know this to be a fact from the records which I have here: That in the beginning there was a large element among the Tagalos in favor of accepting the sovereignty of the United States, and the congress of the first government of Aguinaldo—such as it was, although they were appointed by him and not chosen by the people whom they claimed to represent—declared in favor of accepting the autonomy offered by the Schurman Commission. They were overruled by what was called the war party; but I find—and there is overwhelming evidence of it—that, as military operations proceeded there were in different parts of the islands strong declarations in favor of accepting American sovereignty. Aguinaldo, when the Taft Commission went there, sent by the President, felt obliged to issue an appeal urging the people of the archipelago not to accept the proffers of self-government made by the Taft Commission, and that alone was not adequate to hold his forces together. Other officials did the same. Why these appeals if there was no sentiment for peace and American sovereignty? Appeals were not sufficient, and then came orders of the harshest kind, involving deeds of cruelty and a system of terrorism.

Mr. CARMACK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. SPOONER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CARMACK. I should like to ask the Senator from Wisconsin what he says to the statement of General MacArthur that the opposition of the people of the Philippine Islands to the United States was practically unanimous, and could not be accounted for on the ground of terrorism; and what does the Senator further say in reply to the statement of the three native members of the Philippine Commission, that the whole people were practically unanimous in their hostility to the American Government, and that they continued to be so after their armies were dispersed and when all hope of success in battle had been abandoned?

Mr. SPOONER. Well, Mr. President, I find among my papers a letter from Teodoro Sandico, saying that it was impossible for him to hold certain military organizations together and to prevent them from accepting the sovereignty of the United States. I have here some papers from which I will read this order, which was issued in September, 1900:

> [Center of central Luzon, general order of September, 1900.]
>
> In conformity with my general order of last July, in which all were declared to be traitors who should favor or accept positions from the pretended American civil government, and taking into account the fact that to be a voter or to be elected it is required that the oath of allegiance to the United States be taken, by doing which everyone makes himself an American subject de facto; and considering that the laws of war allow the confiscation of the property of traitors and that the precedent has been established by the army of occupation to confiscate for its own use the goods of some Filipino subjects, even though they may not have taken up arms against them,
>
> Using the powers conferred upon me, I order and command:
>
> First. Whosoever holding an official position or may have contributed materially to the establishment of the pretended American civil government in the territory of my command upon being caught shall be punished either by a fine of not less than $100 or by death, according to circumstances, after summary trial, such crime being the more aggravated when committed by the intelligent. * * *

Why was that order issued if there was not a sentiment there among the people in favor of accepting the sovereignty and the government proffered by the Taft Commission?

Mr. CARMACK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. SPOONER. Yes.

Mr. CARMACK. General MacArthur in his report says that, to some extent, that sentiment might be accounted for by terrorism, but that it was perfectly evident—I give the substance of the statement only—it was perfectly evident that the whole people, or a large majority of them, were in sympathy with the insurrection.

He said, furthermore, that in towns which were absolutely in possession of the American forces, absolutely controlled by the American troops, towns which had been under the control of the American authorities, the people continued to give aid to the insurrection just as much as they did in other towns that were not in possession of the American forces.

Mr. SPOONER. When was that statement made?

Mr. CARMACK. It was made in General MacArthur's report.

Mr. TILLMAN. On the 4th of July last.

Mr. SPOONER. General MacArthur made that statement, but that is not all the statement that General MacArthur made. There is part of General MacArthur's statement which indicates a different opinion. The Senator calls attention to what he quoted from the statement of the native commissioners. The Senator read this:

In view of the greatly disturbed condition of the country after the 4th day of February, 1899, it was not easy to foresee when a political party could be formed, and it appeared impossible to arrange a peace proposition which would induce the Filipinos to acknowledge American sovereignty. A policy of government based principally upon the most absurd intolerance which had obtained in the Philippines for more than three centuries, until the arrival of the Americans, has established in the minds of the Filipinos the deep-rooted conviction that an alien sovereignty could come with no other object in view than an iniquitous exploitation and that it could be maintained by no other means than a selfish and absorbing government founded upon civil intolerance, religious mediævalism, and inexorable military power—the triple alliance which the previous government relied on.

The successes of the Union Army in the war convinced the Filipinos that there was a superior force which would annihilate them; but these successes could not prevent the people—bleeding and without strength—from tenaciously continuing a suicidal struggle to escape the new slavery which they so greatly feared, even though it were at the cost of death.

That is what the Senator from Tennessee read from this Appendix A. That was a clear case, I think, with due deference to the Senator, of the suppressio veri. It is a fair illustration, if it goes out by itself, of the old adage that there is no falsehood so dangerous as a truth half told. Here is what they say:

It was necessary, in order to secure peace, to patiently and confidently await the time when facts would prove to the Filipinos the error of their judgment. The lesson taught by experience was long and, unfortunately, at the cost of the ruin of the country and the loss of a large number of human lives.

Certain abuses committed by men representing authority among the Filipinos and the unsettled conditions and injustice that prevailed in their territory showed the impossibility of the organization of an independent government. The triumph of the American arms made them realize that the accusation of cowardice brought against the Americans and generally disseminated throughout the country during Spanish rule was an absurd slander, and, finally, the conduct of the Americans after their victories showed them that their acts did not reveal cruel and wicked men, as had been affirmed by the Spanish military, civil, and ecclesiastical authorities in official documents.

Of the principal civil chieftains of the insurrection some voluntarily surrendered—

The Senator did not read that—while others were captured by the forces of the Union. Some of the generals were already in Manila and had acknowledged the sovereignty of the United States. This circumstance favored the work done with the purpose of convincing the people that peace was an absolute necessity and that it would be the origin and beginning of a period of justice during which the cause of liberty would attain those rights which it would be impossible ever to acquire by the force of arms.

That is from the same document, but the Senator did not read that.

The people in arms received the advice which was sent them by their friends in the city with the most profound contempt, supposing it to have been dictated and inspired by fear, under the threats of the authorities. The civil and military commanders who surrendered or sought the protection of American sovereignty had, upon their arrival in Manila, an opportunity of communicating directly with the members of the Commission and of observing in person that the state of affairs was actually far different from what they had supposed when in the field. They themselves wrote to those who persisted in their hostile attitude, informing them of the true situation. Little by little they so convinced their friends and comrades that they, too, began to return to the towns, and there was spread throughout the country, if not an absolute confidence in, at least a more favorable idea of, the Americans and less mistrust of their policy.

* * * * * * *

The first demonstration of material importance made by the party was held when the Civil Commission made a trip through the provinces of Pampanga, Tarlac, and Pangasinan, where, due to the unity of purpose of the party, a large group of persons, representing the most distinguished elements of those provinces, for the first time made a public expression of their sympathy, confidence, and adherence to the sovereignty of the United States. Such demonstrations were of great value, for, besides revealing in the Philippines a new sentiment, they served to convince the rest of the Filipinos that it was already possible, without endangering life, to express allegiance to the new sovereignty. Terror had reigned in those very provinces until a short time prior hereto, because natives who had shown they were partisans of the Americans and who expressed their ideas in public were cruelly assassinated in their own homes or kidnapped with their families, to be sacrificed in a manner as cruel as it was barbarous.

Mr. CARMACK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. SPOONER. For a moment only.

Mr. CARMACK. Well, Mr. President, if I can not have time enough to defend myself from the attack which the Senator has made, I prefer not to interrupt him at all.

Mr. SPOONER. If the Senator thinks that I made an attack, he can take the time.

Mr. CARMACK. Mr. President, the Senator charged that I made a very partial and incomplete statement, and coupled that with the assertion that no falsehood was so dangerous——

Mr. SPOONER. I did not impute falsehood to the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. CARMACK. I do not understand what the Senator could have meant, unless he did mean that.

Mr. SPOONER. What I meant was that reading a part of a report and not the rest of it did not convey the truth to the people. I did not charge the Senator with falsehood, and could not do so.

Mr. CARMACK. Very well; I accept the Senator's disclaimer. But what I want to say is that in my remarks, in which I quoted that particular point, I was first answering the argument which had been made that we were not attempting from the beginning to force upon the people of the Philippine Islands a government without their consent; and I quoted that from the report of the Philippine Commission as showing, from their own evidence, that the whole people of the Philippine Islands were against the establishment of American rule at the time we began to force our Government upon them. I did not allude in my remarks to what the Senator has subsequently read, but I alluded to something which he did not read, and that was as to the manner and the method by which the people of the Philippine Islands, or a certain portion of them, had been induced to accept American rule; that was by holding out to them through the Federal party, organized by three members of the Philippine Commission, with the sanction and consent of the whole Commission, the hope of admission to statehood in the American Union.

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President, I will comment on that in a few moments. I find before me the paper to which I referred a little while ago, tending to show that in 1900 there were towns there which Aguinaldo could not control. Here is that paper:

MY RESPECTED CHIEF AND DEAR BROTHER: I have received your respected order regarding the organization of the "comite"—

That means committee—

in the towns of Zaragosa, Aliaga, and Licab. From the movements and actions of these towns I don't believe it possible to organize immediately. Before we can it will be necessary that four or five lives be taken in each town. I believe that what ought to be done to those towns is to make a new conquest of them, especially the town of San Juan de Guimba. It is difficult there to set straight the Tagalos and Ilocanos of importance, as they are badly inclined and they care to do nothing but pervert our soldiers.

This is what I am able to inform you in fulfillment of the respected order of the chief.

God guard you many years.

San Cristobal, August 3, 1900.

C. GONZALES.

Oh, Mr. President, it is a long story. There is no question at all about the effect of the attitude of the Democracy in this country upon this subject in the past and now in obstructing the United States in the pacification of those islands and in bringing to that people the benefits and blessings which you and we most earnestly pray they shall be permitted to receive. I read here an extract, sir, a year ago, of a letter from General Lawton, which was challenged; the authenticity of it was denied. I had no power then to establish its authenticity, but I have the original letter now, Mr. President, in my hand. He sleeps over in Arlington. Dead, he yet speaks to us in a solemn way this day:

[Personal.]

HEADQUARTERS FIRST DIVISION, EIGHTH ARMY CORPS,
Manila, P. I., October 6, 1899.

Hon. JOHN BARRETT,
Ex-Minister to Siam, Review of Reviews, New York City.

MY DEAR SIR: Your letter, with proofs of your able article for the Review of Reviews, duly reached me. I thank you for them. I handed them to some of the officers to read, and they have not yet returned them, or I have mislaid them, so that I am not quite sure of your address. Think your letter was headed "The Waldorf," but will send this care of the Review of Reviews. As I may be leaving Manila any day and am very busy, will answer without further delay. I appreciate the importance of your suggestions and questions and regret I have not time to discuss them more fully.

This article is like your others—the best matter that is being published in America on the Philippines and Asia. Your errors were a few minor ones of dates, names, and places. Things were a little slow at first, but words were put into my mouth which I never said. I agree with you that mistakes have been made here—but I would to God that the whole truth of this whole Philippine situation could be known by everyone in America. I wish our people could know it as I know it and as you know it, for I regard you as the best informed and most impartial authority on all these Asiatic questions, and I think the President made a mistake in not naming you a member of the Philippine Commission.

That is undoubtedly true. That is incidental to all military operations on a large scale—

I agree that if the real facts in connection with the history, inspiration, and conditions of this insurrection, and the hostile influences, local and external, such as the Catipunan and juntas, that now encourage the enemy, as well as the actual possibilities of these Philippine Islands and peoples and their relations to this great East—which you have set forth so ably—could be understood at home in America, we would hear no more political talk of unjust "shooting of government" into the Filipinos or unwise threats of hauling down our flag in the Philippines.

You are right. Some of us have modified our views since we first came; and if these so-called antiimperialists of Boston would honestly ascertain the truth on the ground here and not in distant America, they, whom I dislike to believe to be other than honest men misinformed, would be convinced of the error of their exaggerated statements and conclusions and of the cruel and unfortunate effect of their publications here.

It is kind of you to caution me about exposure under fire, but if I am shot by a Filipino bullet it might as well come from one of my own men. These are strong words; and yet I say them because I know from my own observations, confirmed by stories of captured Filipino prisoners, that the continuance of fighting is chiefly due to reports that are sent out from America and circulated among these ignorant natives by the leaders, who know better.

This letter, which, of course, is strictly personal, does not answer all your questions, but it is a long one for me, as I want to encourage you in your labors to make the truth known. Hope I shall see you out here soon in some high civil position. We soldiers need practical men like you to help us. Thanking you again for your kind words in praise of my humble efforts, I am,

Yours, very truly, H. W. LAWTON.

The complimentary words to Mr. Barrett contained in this letter made him very reluctant to publish the whole letter, so he used the extract which contains the expression of General Lawton upon the particular subject at a New England banquet, but it has been challenged, and I want to set at rest the authenticity of this letter, and therefore I produce it.

Mr. TILLMAN. Is that the original?

Mr. SPOONER. Yes, sir. With it is this postscript:

P. S.—Will try to find and inclose copies of the orders and list you spoke of.
H. W. L.

Appended to it, Mr. President, is this indorsement:

LOUISVILLE, KY., February 17, 1902.

Having carefully read and examined the foregoing letter (comprising its three original typewritten pages), signed and addressed by my husband, Gen. H. W. Lawton, United States Army, at Manila, P. I., October 6, 1899, to Hon. John Barrett, New York City, I unhesitatingly pronounce the sentiments and signature thereof absolutely genuine and authentic in every respect.
MARY C. LAWTON.

Witness:
THEODORE Z. HARDEE.

It was acknowledged before a notary public.

General Lawton knew of what he wrote. He was at the front, as he was always at the front when duty called. There never was a finer leader of men than Henry W. Lawton.

I want it remembered that neither this bill, if passed, nor any bill that has been proposed hitherto by the majority, if passed, would tie the hands of the American people, morally or otherwise, at all as to the policy ultimately to be pursued, in accordance with their will, upon the subjects of the Philippines. In the years to come the path is open. No retreat has been cut off by legislation. None is proposed. And that intensified to my mind the cruelty that for political purposes, while the soldiers were fighting under the flag, under the orders of their officers, this issue, or alleged issue, should be made and debated for party purposes, as it was before the American people. Lawton knew whereof he spoke. I will show before I finish—and I ought to be through—that the proposition of the minority is a continuation, in practical effect, of the obstruction which has wrought so much harm and done absolutely no good hitherto.

I was speaking of the influences which have rendered it difficult for the Taft Commission and the army of occupation to bring about pacification and acceptance of American sovereignty, in addition to the prolongation of the insurrection, by attitudes to which I have referred. Here is an order issued by Tinio, March 26, 1900.

ORDERS FORBIDDING FILIPINOS TO SERVE UNDER UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT.

In accordance with the circular of the general commanding the center of Luzon, which was referred to me by the colonel in charge of the civil government of this province, I utterly prohibit any Filipinos from receiving employment or filling any offices in the town governments for the Americans, because he who accepts such voluntarily recognizes the sovereignty of the enemy, since he who fills such offices will be used as an example and others will use him as an excuse for accepting them.

I inform you of this so that you can communicate it to your subordinates, especially to your local presidents and principales (heads of barrios), for their information.

God keep you many years.

Headquarters of the Second Zone, March 26, 1900. The lieutenant-colonel.
CASIMIRO TINIO.

Here is a general order of the provisional government of the Philippines.

Mr. TILLMAN. What is the date?

Mr. SPOONER. It is without date.

GENERAL ORDER OF THE PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT OF THE PHILIPPINES.

Order the municipal captains in every town to move out and capture the detachments of the enemy, each man as he thinks best.

Capture all the friars and Spaniards and their goods and property; see that they do not escape me. The Filipinos who take the side of the enemy and who do not aid us to defend the cause of the people, seize them and their goods.

* * * * * * *

They will preserve carefully, as agent, all orders and documents of the towns.

If there is a town which does not comply with these orders, the others which have complied with them must regard them as enemies, using all means to capture such enemies and hold them prisoners. Capture the municipal captain, and if he resists shoot him.

Whoever struggles and works for the independence of the country will be authorized to shoot whoever resists or refuses to recognize the holy cause or who favors the enemy.

If the enemy attack a town, all others must aid it without fear. If a town does not aid another attacked by the enemy, the chiefs of such town will be immediately deprived of their offices, and the laws of this government for such a case will be immediately applied to them.

* * * * * * *

Here is one of August 1, 1900:

[Translation from letter found when General Cailles's headquarters were destroyed by Colonel Cheatham, August 1, 1900.]

As soon as you receive this communication you will inform all people of your district that, by order of the commanding general of this province (General Cailles), there will be captured and shot those regular soldiers, policemen, and volunteers, or other citizens who present themselves to the Americans and who surrender their rifles for money.

All the military chiefs and presidentes locales will be held responsible if anyone of their jurisdiction present themselves to the Americans, and therefore it is ordered that if anyone has the intention of presenting himself to the Americans, he will be captured immediately and sent to the headquarters in accordance with the orders of our general.

Central camp, Lumban, July 15, 1900.

PEDRO CABALLES, Major.

I read from letter-sent book, secretary of war, No. 147, June 2, 1899, showing the fear of acceptance of full autonomy even:

Letter from office of the secretary of war to Arcadio Magsilong, military commander of Cebu, this date, directing him to oppose to his utmost the full autonomy offered by the Americans to that island, and in order to do so he must impose severe punishments upon such persons as proclaim the advantages offered by those people, and this without any consideration for the office occupied by such persons, civil or ecclesiastical, if they are of autonomist tendency, and if the president and his council incline toward the Americans, yielding to their desires, arrange at once and in proper fashion for hostilities to break out with the enemy, because we can not permit any flag except the Filipino one on that island.

Here is one dated March 4, 1899:

[Circular from Polo, March 4, 1899—9.31 a. m.]

Antonio Luna, general commanding military operations against Manila, to military chiefs, officials of the provinces and towns:

In order to prevent any act opposed to the military plans of these headquarters and consequently to the ideals of the Filipino Republic, I order and command (only one article): From this day any person or individual whatever who either directly or indirectly refuses to give aid to these headquarters in the prosecution of any military plan, or who in any manner whatever interferes with the execution of orders dictated for that purpose by the general in chief commanding operations upon Manila, will be immediately shot without trial. Communicate and publish this order.

Then they had over there the Katipunan. Here is their oath. There are two different oaths:

OATHS AND FORM OF INITIATION OF THE SOCIETY CALLED "KATIPUNAN" OR "K. K. K."

Who is this who has never been initiated who wants to take part in the works of the temple?

One who wants light and who wants to be a son of the people. Profane man, think well whether you are able to fulfill all of these obligations.

If at this very hour the society demands your life and your body, are you able to give them?

The sound of bells which you have just heard, what does it mean?

It means that you are quitting your former life as the man in the last agony is quitting his, and your anguish is the sign of your separation from your past life; at the same time it is the sign of your entrance into the society where you will see the true light.

Upon your entrance into this society it is necessary that a mark be placed upon your body to prove that you are a true brother; at the proper time you will be marked with red hot iron; can you stand it?

Consider well! Do you not wish to draw back?

Remember, my dear brother, that from this hour not you, but the society, is master of your body; it is the sole master of your life and powers.

Now that you have received all the signs of this society which is called "Katipunan" or complete union, you must place yourself upon your knees before the crucifix to swear to obey absolutely its commands, and to say nothing of them to anyone, neither to your mother, nor to your father, nor your friends, for if you do it will take vengeance upon you by your death and that of your family.

Do you know, my brother, what these arms mean? They are the arms with which the society will punish your brothers who become traitors and he who speaks of the secrets of the society.

Now receive our embrace as a mark of our eternal brotherhood.

OATH.

In the name of the one true God and on my honor I swear to be faithful to the society called Katipunan or Complete Union, to defend it to the last drop of my blood, to implicitly obey its orders, and to keep its secrets from any and all persons not members of the society. And if I fail in its orders to execute its justice may God punish my soul, and may my brothers trample upon my body. In testimony of which I sign with my own blood.

I certify that I believe this translation to be correct.
CAPTAIN, FOURTEENTH INFANTRY,
In Charge of Insurgent Records.

MANILA, P. I., July 7, 1900.

Here is another. An order was issued putting all Filipinos into the Katipunan and holding them bound by the oath and subject to the penalty.

[Translation of document captured by Lieut. J. R. Thomas, Seventeenth Infantry, near Pita de Infanta, Zambales Province, August, 1900. Forwarded through headquarters third district, department of Northern Luzon. Received October 24, 1900.]

INSTRUCTIONS.

First. From to-day you will be a brother of the Katipunan. You will understand your obligation to regard with esteem the true brother of the Katipunan, because we were born in one and the same country, of one and the same people, and descendants of one and the same blood and color—that is to say, sons of one common mother.

He who desires to become a brother will be asked the following questions:

First. Do you swear before our Lord Jesus that you will never do injury to the Filipinos?

Second. Do you swear before our Lord Jesus that you will help the Filipino people in their aspirations?

Third. Do you swear before our Lord Jesus that you will always esteem our brothers of the Katipunan?

Fourth. Do you swear before our Lord Jesus that you will be able to assassinate your parents, brothers, wife, sons, relatives, friends, fellow-townsmen, or Katipunan brothers should they forsake or betray our cause?

Fifth. Do you swear before our Lord Jesus that you will shed your last drop of blood in defense of our mother country?

Sixth. Do you swear before our Lord Jesus that you will sacrifice your life and goods when there is the slightest possibility of our brothers being in need of help?

For all of this that we, your brothers in the Katipunan, may have evidence of all you have sworn you will allow us to extract a drop of your blood with which to write your name, so that we, your brothers of the Katipunan, may know that you will never betray our cause.

This being done and the blood being drawn, his name will be written in his own blood, which although but a little drop, he will never, up to the last hour of his life, cease to remember to be upon his guard as a true brother, for it is blood drawn from his own body.

March 4, 1900.

MOISES ABUEG.

They attempted to bind men to this, enlarged and extended its scope by order, because it was apparent that the people had tired of being harried, tired of tyranny, tired of exactions, tired of assassination, bloodshed, and devastation, and welcomed peace and American sovereignty. It is an odd thing that the cabalistic symbol of this oath-bound association in the interests of human liberty is "K K K" (ku-klux-klan?). Which was the mother of the other I can not say, but their purposes for liberty are very much the same.

I hold in my hand a list, which I can not take the time to read, signed by American officers, in answer to an inquiry dated December 3, 1900, which shows 314 natives assassinated, 419 natives assaulted, 73 municipal officers assassinated, and 44 municipal officers assaulted, simply for sympathy with the Americans and an acceptance of local office under the Taft Commission. The findings of the military commissions show a vast number, many having been buried alive. It is perfectly apparent that extreme measures were resorted to, in a systematic way, to prevent the acceptance of American sovereignty. If there could be a stronger recognition of the desire for it among the people, and the fear of it by the Tagalog chieftains, I can not imagine what it would be.

The reports show that in order to terrorize the people—and I can not take the time to present them to the Senate—assassination was the order of the day; that men and children were stoned to death, and that every conceivable act of violence which could strike terror to the human heart was resorted to and systematically employed in order to prevent the acceptance of American sovereignty within those islands.

How could this have occurred if Senators are right in their assumption that all but 5 per cent of the people were heart and soul supporters of Philippine independence as administered by the Tagalogs and opposed to American sovereignty?

What has the army done over there? It has pacified those provinces. At this time all of the provinces are pacified, I think, and Governor Taft thinks and General MacArthur thinks, except three.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. The Federal party say two.

Mr. SPOONER. The Federal party say two. At one time there were 71,000 men there. In March, 1900, there were 293 stations of troops in the Philippine Islands, which was increased up to December 1, 1901, to 472. Since December 1, 1901, 134 stations have been abandoned and 39 established, making a decrease since December 1, 1901, of 95, leaving a total at this date of 377, and 200 of those are simply there for the purpose of affording shelter and covering for the troops, and if there were a fort with adequate barracks they would be withdrawn.

I have here a letter from Secretary Root, which I will put in the RECORD:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, February 13, 1902.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I inclose herewith a memorandum showing the number of United States troops in the Philippines and the progressive reduction of that force since the 1st of January, 1901.

Very truly, yours,

ELIHU ROOT.

Hon. JOHN C. SPOONER,
United States Senate.

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington, ——— ——.

January 1, 1901, there were in the Philippines, according to the corrected field returns received by mail for December 31, 65,758 enlisted men and 2,662 officers, making an aggregate of 69,420 American troops. The reduction of the American force has proceeded continuously since that time.

The time required for communication between headquarters at Manila and the outlying posts in the distant islands, and between Manila and the War Department, is so great that only approximate figures can ever be given showing the present numbers of the organizations. The last full return, which reached the War Department on the 12th of February, 1902, was the return showing conditions on the 31st of August, 1901. There were then included in the organizations stationed in the island 1,469 officers and 45,715 enlisted men, making an aggregate of 47,184 (present and absent).

The last informal return by letter from headquarters at Manila, received at the War Department from the Philippines February 3, 1902, gives the numbers for November 30, 1901, as 1,417 officers and 44,432 enlisted men, making an aggregate of 45,849 (present and absent).

The present estimated strength of the organizations in the Philippines, based on telegraphic reports of the movements of troops, is 40,870.

When the movement of troops now under specific orders for stations in the United States has been accomplished, the numbers in the Philippines will be reduced to 1,360 officers and 33,522 enlisted men.

When the general directions already given for the return of troops whose stations in the United States have not yet been designated have been carried out, the number of troops in the Philippines will be reduced to 1,125 officers and 23,234 enlisted men.

None of the foregoing figures include Philippine scouts, who on the 1st of January, 1901, numbered between two and three thousand, and now number about 5,000.

That speaks a volume, and the other day General Chaffee cabled the War Department that he did not need a battalion of the Tenth Infantry which he had been advised had been ordered to report to him in the Philippine Archipelago. Is there no pacification in the opinion of the military officers in the Philippines? Have they accomplished nothing there by arms and with the aid of the Taft Commission, when they can reduce the army in spite of obstruction from 71,000 men to 26,000 men? The army has done a great work over there. It has not been waging a war of conquest; it has been obeying the orders of the Commander in Chief, to enforce the authority and sovereignty of the United States in the Philippine Archipelago. Of course there has been bloodshed; of course there has been cruelty. All war is cruel. It is savage. General Sherman defined it well when he remarked, "War is hell." But there never has been an army—and I think the records will show it—which has fought with greater bravery, which has endured hardships of a novel kind with greater patience, or which has treated an enemy with so much forbearance. Prisoners up to a comparatively short time ago were discharged.

Of course there have been cases of individual cruelty. Sometimes a soldier, walking along the pathway, has found lying dead, stabbed in the back, his bunk mate, horribly mutilated. More than once it happened. Knit together by those strong ties which bind men who face danger and endure hardships side by side, the next Filipino he met with a knife or a gun he killed. I am sorry, but that is the human nature of it, and in the last analysis it is the anger which comes from outraged love and comradeship.

Mr. President, even in this country of civilization, war was horrible. Who ever will forget the horrible memories of Libby prison, Andersonville, and Salisbury and Belle Isle? We never charged that on the Southern people. Those are incidents of war, and you will find them everywhere.

I have here charges that have been placed in the RECORD against our army in the Philippines by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER], who disclaimed a purpose to make an attack upon the army, but filled the RECORD with letters, some of them, as I remember, unsigned. I will not stop to read this letter, but I want to read a part of General Funston's letter, in which he replies to a charge incorporated in the RECORD by the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. TELLER. Will the Senator from Wisconsin allow me to correct him? I have seen General Funston's denial. What I read was an extract from a newspaper.

Mr. SPOONER. I know. I did not say the Senator from Colorado made the charge. On the other hand, the Senator did not understand me, but I did state that the Senator from Colorado at the time he inserted these letters in the RECORD disclaimed himself making any attack upon the Army.

Mr. TELLER. I did not insert anything that had not been in the public press.

Mr. SPOONER. I understand that. This is an answer to what was in the public press.

Mr. TELLER. I have read the answer and was very glad to see it.

Mr. SPOONER. This is an answer to what was in the public press and is now in the RECORD. I want the country to get it. Under date of February 2, 1902, General Funston says:

In this extract it is alleged that a soldier who claims to have been with me in the Philippines made the statement that he had helped to administer the "water cure" to 160 natives, all but 26 of whom died. This statement I wish to brand as an atrocious lie, without the slightest foundation in fact. During my service of three years in the Philippines I never had personal knowledge of the so-called "water cure" being administered to a native or any other form of torture being used to extract information from them.

Statements of this kind made by returned soldiers are simply braggadocio and a desire to attract attention to themselves. It is my belief that the "water cure" was very rarely, if ever, administered by American soldiers. It was a matter of common knowledge that occasionally the Macabebe Scouts, when not under the direct control of some officer, would resort to this means of obtaining information as to the whereabouts of concealed arms and ammunition.

Some soldiers have resorted to the "water cure," and some have been tried for it and convicted.

Mr. TELLER. May I say one word?

Mr. SPOONER. Certainly.

Mr. TELLER. At the time I presented these allegations I stated that the people ought to know the charges and the Government ought to take steps to prove their untruth, if they were untrue. I was not aware that they had taken any steps, and this report has come in since.

Mr. SPOONER. Every charge, and the letter of the Secretary of War shows it, which has been made in the newspapers of outrages alleged to have been committed by our soldiers in the Philippines, or which has been brought to the attention of the Secretary of War by letter, has been promptly investigated or is in process of investigation.

Mr. TELLER. That was not known to the public, I think, when those allegations were presented.

Mr. SPOONER. That is true, so far as I know, but they were presented. They have gone to the country, and it is only fair that alongside in the RECORD should be put the statement of the Secretary of War. I did not believe these charges, because if true they would constitute a violation of the standing instructions adopted in 1861, now in force, to govern the conduct of soldiers and armies in the field; not only that, but a violation of general and special orders; and not only that, but are absolutely inconsistent with the nature of American soldiers, who are brave, but not cruel, and who are commanded by as gallant and chivalrous officers as ever wore a uniform. Here is a letter from Matthew A. Batson, who commands the Macabebe Scouts. I can not stop to read his letter, but in two sentences he says:

From time to time charges similar to that made by Mr. Kennan in the article referred to have been made against my scouts. These charges have invariably been thoroughly investigated, and have nearly always been found to be without foundation.

And so on; a statement which I think will satisfy Senators either that these charges have been investigated and exploded or are being investigated. I print the communication of the Secretary of War and the letters of General Funston and Captain Batson in the appendix.

Mr. TELLER. Will the Senator allow me to read a brief extract from the proceedings of the committee of which he is a member, and with which he is no doubt familiar?

Mr. SPOONER. What committee?

Mr. TELLER. The Committee on the Philippines.

Mr. SPOONER. I am not a member of the committee.

Mr. TELLER. I beg pardon; I thought the Senator was a member of it.

Senator PATTERSON. I do not think the charge of inflicting the water cure has been made against American soldiers as much as against the native troops who have been enlisted in the American Army, or as an appurtenance to the American Army. For instance, the Macabebes. Many letters have been published making statements of this kind—that Macabebes would be sent out for the purpose of securing the surrender of guns, and the persons would deny that they had any guns. Then the Macabebes would throw them upon the ground, one soldier on one hand and another on the other, secure their feet, pry open their mouths with a stick, and then pour buckets of water down their throats till they swelled up to an abnormal size, and then jump upon their stomachs. It has been stated that invariably under that treatment guns were produced where there were no guns before; this with the knowledge of American officers, the Army getting the advantage of it in securing arms from natives, which they were seeking, without any serious reproof.

This is what Governor Taft says——

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President——

Mr. TELLER. I want to read the Governor's answer. I could not read one without the other, because otherwise the answer would not be intelligent. Governor Taft says:

I have no doubt there were such instances—of course a great many more than there ought to have been—but, if the Senator will excuse me, dependence upon private letters from private individuals as to what occurred is dependence on a very broken reed.

Then the governor goes on to say that he did not realize that himself until this investigation was made.

Mr. SPOONER. That does not conflict at all with General Funston's statement. He says there have been cases——

Mr. TELLER. That is what I understand.

Mr. SPOONER. And there undoubtedly would be. It would be impossible that the Army could go among that people——

Mr. TELLER. I stated a year ago, and I stated when I made my speech the other day, that that was undoubtedly the work mainly of the Macabebes.

Mr. SPOONER. Now, Mr. President, one thing can not fail to attract the notice of the public. We have done a great deal in the Philippines. The Army has done a great deal, not only in the way of putting forth successfully military power, but it has done a great deal in the way of amelioration. It did a great deal in the way of forming civil governments, which it is true did not prove to be successful because of the means employed by the insurrectionists to defeat them; but, after all, the Army did a great deal in the interest of education, in the interest of peace, and in the interest of promoting good feeling among that people toward us.

In the one hand they carried the musket and in the other the schoolbook. I do not know in all history a parallel, taken all in all, to the operations which have been conducted in the Philippines in this respect; and I believe it to be true that if we could all have been united, if we could all have moved forward to the accomplishment of the great purpose of pacification—not subjugation, but pacification and upbuilding—vastly greater results would have been obtained.

There was nothing of tyranny in our attitude; there was no purpose of cruelty except as war is cruel. There could be none in the heart, as there had been none in the life, of the Commander in Chief. There was not an order issued by him that did not breathe the spirit not only of civilization, but of kindliness and concern for that people which had been brought by the fortunes of war and the actions of all of us under the sovereignty and into the responsibility of this people.

If he failed to do anything, Mr. President, which a liberty-loving man should have done, I do not know what it was. He has been, not now but once, sneered at because he thought Providence had some agency in all that has happened to us and because he now and then used the word "destiny." I indulge in no casuistry. Every man will think for himself on these abstruse things. But believing that there is a God, omnipotent, just, generous, all-wise and all-seeing, one can hardly escape the belief that He has some superintending care over men and over nations.

The Senator from Colorado, in the speech which I read from this morning, recognized that. The man who has this belief in his heart, Mr. President, whether it be well founded or ill founded, can not be a tyrant. He will not run from any duty which arises from any environment and which a manly and generous man ought to discharge.

I remember in the early days how, more than once, touched by an unfair fling and taunt, calm and patient as he was, I have seen the pale face of President McKinley contract with pain. I remember in the debate on Cuba, when many cruel things were said, I had occasion to remark that he might take comfort to himself in the remembrance that the same things were uttered of Abraham Lincoln; that the day would come when the world would wonder and we would wonder how anyone ever could have thought, much less uttered, such imputations.

Behind this Army was President McKinley. A tenderer heart, Mr. President, never throbbed in a human breast—never; a kindlier or more considerate man, in my judgment, never lived; a man who had a stronger, nobler love of country and of the flag, not as an emblem of power alone or chiefly, but as an emblem of liberty and justice and civilization, we have not known.

When the time came for him to die—aye, Mr. President, when, as he stood in the presence of the people and shrank back with the first shock of that dreadful assault upon him—the first word, almost, that leaped to his lips was a considerate word for the nameless stranger who, without personal malice, had shot him down. And from that hour until the last, in the presence of all the world, he bore himself with an intrepidity of soul, a thoughtfulness of others, a steadfastness of faith in the God whom he loved and worshiped, a Christian resignation and patience which lifted him to the highest possible standard of human conduct. And at the last, when the world was fading away from him, when he was bidding farewell to her who had been the chief object of his love and tender care for all the years, he said, "It is God's way. His will be done."

HE WAS BEHIND THE ARMY.

Is it not almost impossible to believe that that man ever could have been referred to as "McKinley the First?" Can anybody believe that administration in the Philippines in his hands was intended for enslavement? No; he wanted to go forward, as it was his duty to do, with firmness but with kindness, and he did.

There is no State paper written in any time finer or loftier than the instructions which he issued to the Taft Commission when it went to the Philippines, to cooperate with the Army on the civil side in building up government and ameliorating the harshness of war. And what has been done? They have established civil government in all the provinces, I believe, except two.

Mr. PATTERSON. Fourteen.

Mr. SPOONER. Fourteen? I thought in all except two. I remember; the Senator is right.

Mr. LODGE. War exists in four.

Mr. SPOONER. War, or what is called war, exists in only four, but the Senator from Colorado is right.

Mr. PATTERSON. That is Governor Taft's statement.

Mr. SPOONER. They have established civil governments in all provinces in the archipelago except fourteen. Now, nobody with open mind could fail to be gratified by Governor Taft's testimony as to their progress among the people and through the islands, the manner in which they were met, met by the more intelligent as well as the less intelligent; and there the intelligent have a great influence, greater perhaps than generally, over those who are less intelligent. It produced day after day, without the aid of the army, surrenders. Over 28,000 arms have been surrendered; the army of insurrection there has disappeared; and to-day, if Governor Taft is correct, and if his associates are correct, in those provinces there is not only pacification, but there is an improved feeling and a genuine feeling rapidly extending toward American sovereignty and civil government under our auspices.

It is a plant of slow growth, I grant you. It is a difficult and delicate problem. It can be worked out, Governor Taft says. The Malay he finds like other men; he appreciates kindness and is grateful for it.

There has been no real progress in the Philippines, Senators say! "We have the testimony of the military and you have the testimony of the civil officers." Which knows the better? The last report of General Chaffee closes with this remark: "Nevertheless they exhibit evident signs of educational possibilities and gradually an attainment to the higher plane of our civilization may be hoped for." There was under the guerrilla system a period of elaborate treachery. It was a method of warfare. The report of General MacArthur is even very much stronger than that of General Chaffee. But who naturally should know better? The soldier who goes with his musket in his hand, who shoots on sight, is not apt to see the best or the kindly characteristics of an enemy. He is distrusted; he is feared. But when civil officers go there, and go there without military escort, take their wives with them, mingle with the people, consult their prejudices, invite their advice, I submit that they are more likely to be received with sincerity and would have a better view of the heart than the military officers.

Nearly all the civil governors, as shown by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT], make glowing reports of the condition of the provinces. We may be deceived about it. There may be, and probably is, more or less insincerity; but after all that, thus far they have done great things there. And who on the other side of the Chamber, except the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER], in all this debate has uttered one word of commendation of the army or found one praiseworthy or beneficent act upon the part of the United States in the Philippines? Not one. We have organized courts there. We have changed the code of procedure. We have done away with the Spanish mañana, mañana, mañana (to-morrow, to-morrow, to-morrow). Nothing is said about that. We have established the habeas corpus—not a writ of favor, but a writ of right. It was done in the first instance by the order of President McKinley. Now it is a part of the law there. Not a word has been said in commendation of that, although Governor Taft testified that it was in constant operation, and that an old man came to him whose son or a relative had been confined for months, was it, or years——

Mr. LODGE. Six years.

Mr. SPOONER. For six years in a prison in Manila, without knowing for what, and asked him to discharge him. Governor Taft himself wrote the petition for the writ of habeas corpus, and he was discharged, and there followed by the same writs the discharge of a large number of men who had been held there under the Spanish régime. Senators have found no commendation for that. The American authority over there in those islands abolished the infamous Spanish incommunicado, which was so horrible in Cuba, which immured a man and shut him off from the world before even arraignment, away from counsel and friends and hope. It is gone, and gone forever. There is not a word of commendation for that.

We have abolished the ecclesiastical courts which had jurisdiction of every offense committed by a friar. He was tried by his own associates of the church, and out of it came appalling injustice. That has been abolished, and every man over there now, of every tribe, of every religion, has an equal position before the law. Senators have failed to commend that.

They passed many great civil acts, the central-government act, the provincial-government act, the municipal code (local self-government act), the educational act, the act creating courts of justice, a code of civil procedure, the constabulary act, a civil-service act, the board of health act.

Let me refer for a moment to what has been done in the matter of education. Senators find nothing in that to commend; nothing except to criticise: Total number of pupils enrolled in the public day schools, 177,325; average daily attendance, 108,000; enrollment in night schools, 20,000; a grand total of 197,000; grand total average attendance of 114,000. Total expenditures for 1901, $800,000. Pay roll for December, $100,000.

The insular government pays the salaries of the American teachers and officers and provides school supplies and books free for all pupils. Senators in the opposition find nothing worthy of commendation in that.

The municipalities provide school buildings and furniture and pay the native teachers. There are 825 American teachers distributed over the archipelago—men and women.

Cruelty, tyranny! The Senator from Colorado [Mr. PATTERSON] yesterday afternoon condemned that.

Mr. PATTERSON. No.

Mr. SPOONER. Qualifiedly, as an evidence of tyranny, which sent our teachers over there to destroy the Philippine language.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President——

Mr. SPOONER. Am I wrong?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Mr. SPOONER. In what respect?

Mr. PATTERSON. What I did condemn was laying claim to great merit for establishing a common-school system which the Filipinos were forced to pay for by the taxes taken from them, and they were not even consulted as to what should be taught. They are not even permitted under this system to be taught their own language. Instead, they must be taught a language totally foreign to them.

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President——

Mr. PATTERSON. They have a language with a literature——

Mr. SPOONER. I do not yield for an argument.

Mr. PATTERSON. And a language of 4,000,000 people.

Mr. SPOONER. I do not yield for an argument.

Mr. PATTERSON. Well, you asked me.

Mr. SPOONER. I want to be just to the Senator.

Mr. PATTERSON. Oh, no; I am not finding fault with the Senator.

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President, they have no common language. There is no Filipino language. There are 8,000,000 or 10,000,000 people. The Commission think there are about 8,000,000. There are a great many different tribes and a great many different dialects. The language of the law is Spanish. Comparatively few speak Spanish. What is the number—6 per cent?

Mr. LODGE. Between 5 and 10.

Mr. SPOONER. Between 5 and 10 per cent speak Spanish. We go over there with our government. We go over there with no purpose on earth except to subserve the interests of that people and to build them up and confer blessings upon them. We have left the Spanish language, the language of the courts. That was a necessity. The Filipinos of the various tribes do not have to be taught their own language.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. SPOONER. Yes.

Mr. PATTERSON. I want to ask the Senator what he thinks of either the wisdom or humanity of granting a suffrage——

Mr. SPOONER. I am not discussing that.

Mr. PATTERSON. One moment; of granting a suffrage only to those people who write the Spanish language, comprising in the neighborhood of 5 per cent, with a few additions, and excluding from the suffrage, however intelligent the natives may be, those who speak and write their own language, the language of the nation?

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President, there is no language of the nation except the Spanish language. That is the law language. It is the language of the courts. We want a language of the people, a language of the nation. They never will be a nation until they have a common language in one way or another, in one degree or another. In Aguinaldo's first draft of a constitution, made by Mabini, they provided that English should be the legal language of the country, and in his last one they did not settle it, but left it for the law to prescribe. However, for years to come they knew it would have to be the Spanish language. Would we go there, Mr. President, and open schools with American school-teachers to teach the Tagalos language, to teach the language of the Ilocano, the Igorrote, and Pangasinan, and all that——

Mr. PATTERSON. Let me ask the Senator a question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. SPOONER. I prefer not.

Mr. PATTERSON. Just for a question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator declines to yield.

Mr. PATTERSON. Just for a question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator declines to yield.

Mr. SPOONER. I yield for a question.

Mr. PATTERSON. The question is whether or not those who are compelled to pay for teachers should not be consulted as to what will be taught.

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President, if the Filipino fathers and mothers like to send their children to an American school to be taught the English language, to be taught to read it and to write it and to spell it, the Senator from Colorado ought to be content. [Laughter.]

Mr. PATTERSON. If the people of the Philippines are content I am content, but the people of the Philippines are given no choice. It is simply crammed upon them and forced upon them. It is all that they have.

Mr. SPOONER. Now, we have government without 'consent and education without consent. [Laughter.] What next? Mr. President, the people there or anywhere else know what they want, but evidently they do not know what the Senator from Colorado wants them to want. [Laughter.] They send their children to school and they do it with the utmost avidity. The schools are crowded with intelligent children, children eager to learn, and a friend of mine told me that he attended one of the schools and the aisles were filled with mature people, anxious to learn to read and to understand the English language. The Senator, without any complaint from them, of his own motion, proceeds to point out to them what they evidently have not learned, and will not until they read his speech—and I hope it will not get there [laughter]—that they are being outraged and tyrannized over by being taught the English language.

There are 3,300 Filipino public school teachers, the majority of whom receive one hour's English instruction daily. Have they complained to the Senator? There is no compulsory education over there. Those come who want to come, and if there is anything in liberty, the child who wants to go to school and learn English ought to have a chance.

There are 200 American soldiers detailed to teach in sections where the army is operating.

What tyranny!

Free public schools are established in every island of the archipelago.

During the Spanish régime there was one teacher for every 3,500 of the civilized population.

This year there is one teacher for every 1,551 of the civilized population.

The natives generally welcome—they may not hereafter, but they do now—welcome the teachers and seem anxious to learn English.

The Normal School was opened September 1, in Manila. It has an enrollment of 250.

The Nautical School was established in Manila August 7, 1900.

The constabulary force at present numbers about 2,500 men. All of the enlisted men are natives. Twenty-five per cent of the inspectors are natives. The records show only two desertions prior to December 24, 1901. The cost of one constable is $250 per year, as against $1,000 per year in the United States—the cost of an American soldier. The constabulary supplies to its force through its supply store the necessaries of life which can not be bought in the provinces. The estimated appropriation for maintaining for one year a constabulary force of 183 chief officers, 543 petty officers, and 4,480 privates is $1,250,000 as against $5,000,000, the cost of maintaining a military force of equal size in the United States.

During the four months since the organization of the constabulary its forces have taken part in 230 expeditions, killed 20 outlaws, wounded 20, and captured 374; captured 114 rifles, 17 shotguns, 44 revolvers, 79 bolos, and 1 cannon; recovered 125 carabaos and 13 ponies; received the surrender of 57 rifles, 5 revolvers, 1,052 rounds of rifle ammunition; executed 79 warrants, made 179 arrests (exclusive of outlaws), furnished descriptive lists of 4,500 agitators and turbulent characters.

The chief of constabulary, Maj. Henry T. Allen, estimates that in one year from January 1, 1902, 15,000 American soldiers, with the aid of native troops and constabulary, will suffice to garrison and maintain order in the Philippine Islands.

Yes, in spite of appeals and terrorism and obstructions, we have made great progress in the Philippines.

Now, what is proposed here, Mr. President? What is the substitute presented by the minority?

That, subject to the provisions hereinafter set forth, the United States of America hereby relinquish all claim of sovereignty over and title to the archipelago known as the Philippine Islands.

If this is passed, that is the end of it—no protectorate, no reserve power over foreign relations, no power reserved at all that would be in the slightest degree efficient.

That from and after the passage of this act said archipelago shall be foreign territory, and all goods entering the United States therefrom shall be subject to the same duties, customs, and imposts as are now, or may hereafter be, prescribed by law for goods entered from other foreign countries: Provided, That during the temporary occupation of said islands, as hereinafter provided, all trade between the same and the United States shall be free.

That the United States shall continue to occupy and govern said archipelago until the people thereof have established a stable government, and until sufficient guaranties have been obtained for the performance of our treaty obligations with Spain for the safety of those inhabitants who have adhered to the United States and for the maintenance and protection of all rights which have accrued under their authority.

Then we are to go away and "leave the government control and sovereignty thereof to the inhabitants of the same." I think that is the most mischievous project in the present situation that could be devised by the wit of man. It is the discredited issue of imperialism projected again.

What would be the effect of this substitute? What is the hypothesis, Senators, on which you propose to enact this proposition? Either one of two—either that the American people can not safely be trusted to settle this Philippine proposition in their own way and in their own good time, or that it is necessary to the pacification of those islands. Is either true? The Senator from Colorado, in the speech from which I read an extract a little while ago, announced—and I knew he had—implicit faith in the American people. By what warrant do you press legislation impeaching the integrity and the loyalty of the American people to American ideals?

The Senator from Tennessee seemed to think in his speech the other day that if we do not scuttle the ship, if we do not retreat at once, if we do not, like cowards, run from duty partially done the American people will become blind with the passion of greed, and that retreat will be cut off.

I estimate the American people in no such way. I have abiding faith, Mr. President, in their purposes, in their generosity, in their justice. The ideals of the American people have been made by them, they belong to them, they are dear to them, and they will preserve and maintain them.

When has the American people voted to shunt this sovereignty, this title, and this possession which they have acquired by treaty, ratified by appropriations, consummated by military force, and upon which they are now engaged in working out righteously and splendidly the great problem upon which they entered? Why now? Why just as the Taft Commission is winning the confidence of the people there, overcoming the prejudices which in so many ways, assiduously and by terrorism and otherwise, have been engendered against us? Why again project into this situation this doctrine of independence? What will be the result? You set the cabal at work; you inaugurate intrigue; you project into the future an issue of fact about which there must be and will be differences of opinion.

It has been proclaimed on this floor that long ago they had a republic devoted to liberty and fit for international recognition, protecting life, liberty, and property. Who is to say when a stable government has been formed over there—the Filipinos or we? They will say "We have it." We may be compelled to say "No; you have it not." Then comes the hot charge of bad faith; then our own witnesses cited to sustain the charge of perfidy and bad faith. We lose the vantage ground for doing good which the title gave us, as contradistinguished from the mere relinquishment of sovereignty.

That is not all. You would stop at once adherence to American authority and cooperation in American upbuilding. How? I spoke at one time with a gentleman who was vice-president in Aguinaldo's cabinet, and who is an able man. He told me that a large majority of the Filipinos desired to acquiesce in American sovereignty; that they believed we would do what was generous and right, but they were afraid. I said, "Why afraid?" He said, "Congress has not acted; the division in your country is such that we are afraid some day the American flag will be taken down in the Philippines, your troops will sail away, and then, if in the meantime we shall have manifested sympathy for the American Government and a willingness to acquiesce in it, we shall be confiscated, assassinated, and destroyed."

Now, Mr. President, instead of leaving that people to meet the advances of the Taft Commission, to cooperate with them in developing the industries and increasing the prosperity of the islands, in extending the system of free education, in eliminating, as we will, the title of the friars to lands there, what would these Senators do? They would pass a bill giving away the sovereignty, leaving us there as tenants at will or by sufferance. If this substitute were passed, not one man in the Philippine Archipelago would dare to give his adhesion to American sovereignty or evidence his sympathy with the work of this Government for their future betterment. They would remember the outlawries, the confiscations, and the terrorism of the recent past.

It is a bill to raise hell in the Philippine Archipelago. It is a bill that has no merit whatever in it. It is a proposition which we are not ready for and which the Filipinos are not ready for. It is an experiment that they dare not try. Our obligations over there have grown day by day. Every Filipino who has accepted office, every Filipino who has evidenced in the smallest degree sympathy for the United States or a willingness to acquiesce in American sovereignty, has taken a bond from us, if there is any honor in us, to stay there long enough to safeguard his life when a change does come.

You will go away when a stable government is formed, "exacting guaranties that those who have adhered to the United States shall be protected!" What guaranty? Who shall guarantee the guarantor? How long will it take to erect a stable government in the Philippine Islands? God only knows. You do not know. I do not know. Had we not better move along with the sovereignty and title, the strong, firm, safe foundation for upbuilding, and leave to the future the questions of the future?

Who asks for this surrender of sovereignty? The memorial of the Federal party, admittedly comprising about 150,000 of the most intelligent and influential people of the islands, petitioning for ultimate statehood, adjure us against colonialism and independence. They say:

> To make of the Philippines a colony of the United States or to grant independence to the Philippines would be to hand the islands over to disorder and to anarchy, to destruction and to chaos.

Their argument against colonialism is largely based, naturally, on the abuses and injustices with which the "Philippines were surfeited under the Spanish Government." They add, as to independence:

> Philippine independence, with or without a protectorate, means the holding of power by all the terrible elements of the sect which predominate, and would predominate still for some years, until the anger of Filipinos toward Filipinos shall have been completely calmed, education become more general, and the fanaticism we have inherited from Spain exiled.

These men should know whether the people there are fit for independence, or can soon be fitted for independence, better than we can know it. Because we can not pledge to them what they wish—statehood—must we give them what they do not wish and say they can not sustain—independence?

I stand, Mr. President, where I have always stood from the first upon this subject. I dreaded the assumption of the burden. I did not believe, nor do I now, in permanent dominion of the United States in the Philippine Archipelago. At the same time, I never expect the flag of the United States to depart from that archipelago.

I feel a little differently as to the relation of the United States to the Philippine Archipelago from what I once did. I have less of fear and more of hope. I firmly believe, as we all fervently hope that if we move forward, solving as best we can the problems which appear from time to time, doing right, spreading education, promoting justice, ameliorating conditions in the Philippines, building roads, increasing facilities, bringing prosperity, quieting the titles of the native inhabitants to land which they and their ancestors have occupied, so that for the first time, standing in front of their houses, each could truthfully say, "This is my home; I own it"—never before could they say that—that it will inevitably attach that people to us and win their confidence. This would be a vain hope if the minority proposition here were adopted.

It is our duty to find fault only where fault can fairly be found. The problem is difficult and filled with complication. It requires patience, tact, and united effort.

This debate has been, after all, a high tribute to the work of the Commission. Senators have criticised the treason act, and I agree with the criticism in part. They have found fault with the sedition act. There is much, I think, to be said in favor of that act, its phraseology in one or two particulars being changed. They have criticised the franchise, but it must be remembered that it is but a beginning. Self-government is a faculty. It must be developed, and it can not be developed without use. We can not adopt there at once the standards which are dear to us here. We require the Commission to report to us every act in order that we may examine it, and if it does not meet our approval we may change it.

I wish we might all move along together. Let us encourage the Commission. Let us improve as rapidly as possible government over there, and enlarge the participation of the people in it, and when the day comes that that people can maintain an autonomous government let us give it to them. They might be able to do that, and doubtless will be able to do that, long before they could maintain independence, but, having the sovereignty, we could maintain a protectorate over them with safety, thus giving them opportunity in safety to work out with our aid their destiny. Leave there, and then what?

Mr. HOAR. May I ask my honorable friend a question?

Mr. SPOONER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HOAR. Is the Senator willing to put into a resolve of the Senate such a declaration of the purposes of the American people as he has just stated?

Mr. SPOONER. I am not willing to make any declaration in this situation. I am willing to trust the American people, Mr. President. Suppose you adopt this proposition, and suppose you come away from the Philippines, they having erected a stable government, in your opinion, and it turns out not to be a stable government?

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, if I may interrupt the Senator again, this is a proposition of immense importance, to my humble apprehension. It is a proposition in which the very essence of civil liberty and righteousness is involved; and if I am indiscreet in interrupting the Senator in his eloquent remarks I beg his pardon. But I want to ask him, as he claims we are the trustee of 10,000,000 people, whether, when many persons in the Senate and out of it are declaring that we have the right to hold those people for our advantage and that the American flag shall never go down there under any circumstances or under any conditions—whether, when he declares what he himself thinks righteousness and justice demand, he refuses to let the American Senate, to let the trustee, tell those people that we have no purpose of turning them to our own gain?

I do not ask the Senator to determine any political policy in any sense by saying exactly what we are going to do, but I ask him now, does he refuse to tell that people that in the future we mean, if they are fit for it, to leave them to govern themselves in freedom and in independence, or does he mean that they shall be contented with the vague declarations of irresponsible individuals?

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President, I mean just this: If I have not made the Senator from Massachusetts understand that I regard it as the height of unwisdom to project into the future any promises upon that subject, I have failed utterly in making myself understood.

Mr. HOAR. But the Senator——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. SPOONER. I yield.

Mr. HOAR. I ask the Senator when it is debated here in the Senate, and out of it, whether we are the rightful owners of that people for all time, he thinks it is projecting into the future a problem that is to be settled then to simply disclaim that intention?

Mr. SPOONER. I think we are the owner of the Philippine Archipelago——

Mr. HOAR. People and all?

Mr. SPOONER. People and all? I think if we own a country——

Mr. HOAR. You own the people.

Mr. SPOONER. I did not say that.

Mr. HOAR. I beg your pardon.

Mr. SPOONER. I did not say that.

Mr. HOAR. No; I understand you did not. I beg the Senator's pardon.

Mr. SPOONER. We bought the Territory of Louisiana, but we did not own the people. We bought the Territory of Alaska, but we did not own the people. But when we acquire territory which is inhabited we certainly have the sovereignty and right to govern it incidental to the ownership.

Mr. HOAR. But did we not assure Louisiana and Alaska both that we intended ultimately to admit them into the Union as equals?

Mr. GALLINGER. I think not as to Alaska.

Mr. SPOONER. Not Alaska.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. Sumner again and again in that great speech made that affirmation and disclaimed the notion of governing without the consent of the governed.

Mr. LODGE. It was never done by law or treaty.

Mr. SPOONER. It is not what Mr. Sumner declared, but what was in the treaty.

Mr. HOAR. I am speaking of what the great leader of the Senate then read and commending it to the imitation of the leader of the Senate now.

Mr. SPOONER. I was saying when interrupted, "leave there, and then what?" Leave your stable government to a people who never up to this time for an hour participated in government. What would follow? Civil war and anarchy, and the Philippine Archipelago would have passed beyond any relief from us. We should have relinquished our sovereignty by act, if this substitute were adopted, and abandoned it in fact. It is a dangerous experiment to try. Other nations would intervene, and seize and occupy. We could not complain, for we should have abandoned our sovereignty to a people which could not hold it.

Of course we can not penetrate the future.

When Congress adjourned not long ago none of us thought, except perhaps the Senator from Colorado, of any conflagration in China. To me it came like a clap of thunder from a cloudless sky. When our legations were attacked in China, and when the missionaries over there—men and women laboring in His service, self-sacrificing, devoted—were suddenly confronted with death and unspeakable outrage and implored our protection, it seemed rather "providential" that we were in the Philippines and able to send quickly two regiments of soldiers and a battery from the archipelago, only 600 miles away, to their relief. It had great moral effect. Other governments had to send troops from far away. They gave up their legations and their legationers as lost. President McKinley would not and did not.

And so in all the great strife for commerce in the Orient which is to come in the future, which will grow more and more intense, I think a foothold, naval and military, in that archipelago, not incompatible even with ultimate independence to the Philippine people, will be of infinite use to the people of the United States.

No, Mr. President, I am opposed, in this sensitive and difficult situation, to promises, indefinite as to time of redemption, not now absolutely certain as to possibility of literal redemption. The true policy is to proceed with the work of pacification and construction, as President McKinley did, and as President Roosevelt announces his purpose to do. He is a man of high ideals. He is a lover of liberty. He dared more for liberty in the Spanish-American war than any of us. He offered his life and all that is dear to a man for the liberty of Cuba. The people trust him. We will obey their will if we stand by him and uphold him. We have traveled far and done good work since the outbreak of the Spanish-American war.

By our aid the republic of Cuba is soon to enter the family of nations, with a flag of her own. We have brought happiness and prosperity to Porto Rico, and we have well begun the great task which we assumed in the Pacific, to bring together the Philippine people into one people, and to educate them for self-government or independence, and to give it to them when the time comes. That is a result well worth working for and well worth waiting for. It can be wrought out by going forward, but not by a retreat, and I venture to prophesy that it will not be long before the Filipino people would look upon the departure of our flag from their midst, with its guaranty of protection, of liberty, of law, and of order, as an irreparable calamity.

APPENDIXES.

APPENDIX A.

AGUINALDO'S ORDER OF JANUARY 9, 1899.

MALOLOS, January 9, 1899.

INSTRUCTIONS TO THE BRAVE SOLDIERS OF SANDATAHAN OF MANILA.

ARTICLE 1. All Filipinos should observe our fellow-countrymen in order to see whether they are American sympathizers. They shall take care to work with them in order to inspire them with confidence of the strength of the holy cause of their country.

Whenever they are assured of the loyalty of the convert they shall instruct them to continue in the character of an American sympathizer, in order that they may receive good pay, but without prejudicing the cause of our country. In this way they can serve themselves and at the same time serve the public by communicating to the committee of chiefs and officials of our army whatever news of importance they may have.

ART. 2. All of the chiefs and Filipino brothers should be ready and courageous for the combat, and should take advantage of the opportunity to study well the situation of the American outposts and headquarters, observing especially secret places where they can approach and surprise the enemy.

ART. 3. The chief and those who go to attack the barracks should send in first four men with a good present for the American commander. Immediately after will follow four others, who will make a pretense of looking for the same officer for some reason, and a larger group shall be concealed in the corners of houses in order to aid the other groups at the first signal. This wherever it is possible at the moment of attack.

ART. 4. They should not, prior to the attack, look at the Americans in a threatening manner. To the contrary, the attack on the barracks by the Sandatahan should be a complete surprise and with decision and courage. One should go alone in advance in order to kill the sentinel. In order to deceive the sentinel the one should dress as a woman and must take great care that the sentinel is not able to discharge his piece, thus calling the attention of those in the barracks. This will enable his companions who are approaching to assist in the general attack.

ART. 5. At the moment of the attack the Sandatahan should not attempt to secure rifles from their dead enemies, but shall pursue, slashing right and left with bolos, until the Americans surrender, and after there remains no enemy who can injure them they may take the rifles in one hand and the ammunition in the other.

ART. 6. The officers shall take care that on the top of the houses along the streets where the American forces shall pass there will be placed four to six men, who shall be prepared with stones, timbers, red-hot iron, heavy furniture, as well as boiling water, oil, and molasses, rags soaked in coal oil ready to be lighted and thrown down, and any other hard and heavy objects that they can throw on the passing American troops. At the same time in the lower parts of the houses will be concealed the Sandatahan, who will attack immediately. Great care should be taken not to throw glass in the streets, as the greater part of our soldiers go barefooted. On these houses there will, if possible, be arranged, in addition to the objects to be thrown down, a number of the Sandatahan, in order to cover a retreat or to follow up a route of the enemy's column, so that we may be sure of the destruction of all the opposing forces.

ART. 7. All Filipinos, real defenders of their country, should live on the alert to assist simultaneously the inside attack at the very moment that they note the first movement in whatever barrio or suburb, having assurance that all the troops that surround Manila will proceed without delay to force the enemy's line and unite themselves with their brothers in the city. With such a general movement, so firm and decided against the Americans, the combat is sure to be a short one, and I charge and order that the persons and goods of all foreigners shall be respected and that the American prisoners shall be treated well.

ART. 8. All of our chiefs in the suburbs should prepare groups of the Sandatahan, who will attack with ferocity and decision the Americans within their lines, attempting to surround each group of Americans or to break through their lines. This must be done if the nature of the ground occupied by the Americans will permit and if the Sandatahan have the proper amount of courage and resolution, and the more courage and intelligence that they show in the moment of the attack the surer will be the result and the fewer will be their own losses.

ART. 9. In addition to the instructions given in paragraph 6, there shall be in the houses vessels filled with boiling water, tallow, molasses, and other liquids, which shall be thrown as bombs on the Americans who pass in front of their houses, or they can make use of syringes or tubes of bamboo. In these houses shall be the Sandatahan, who shall hurl the liquids that shall be passed to them by the women and children.

ART. 10. In place of bolos or daggers, if they do not possess the same, the Sandatahan can provide themselves with lances and arrows with long, sharp heads, and these should be shot with great force in order that they may penetrate well into the bodies of the enemy. And these should be so made that in withdrawal from the body the head will remain in the flesh.

ART. 11. It can be taken for granted that if the above instructions are observed the enemy will not be able to use their firearms because of the confusion in his ranks, as they would shoot one another. For this reason I have always thought the rifles useless in this kind of combat, for experience has taught me, my dear brothers, that when the Sandatahan make their attack with courage and decision, taking advantage of the confusion in the ranks of the enemy, the victory is sure, and in that case the triumph is ours.

ART. 12. At last, if, as I expect, the result shall favor us in the taking of Manila and the conquering of the enemy, the chiefs are charged with seeing that the officers and soldiers respect the consulates, the banks and commercial houses, and even the Spanish banks and commercial houses, taking that they be not seduced by the hope of plunder; as, if God sees this, He will reward us, and the foreign nations will note the order and justice of our conduct. I charge that in the moment of combat the officers, soldiers, and whatever patriots take part in the struggle will not forget our noble, sacred, and holy ideals, liberty and independence. Neither will you forget your sacred oath and immaculate banner; nor will you forget the promises made by me to the civilized nations, whom I have assured that we Filipinos are not savages, nor thieves, nor assassins, nor are we cruel, but on the contrary that we are men of culture and patriotism, honorable and very humane.

Above all I expect that you will respect the persons and goods of private persons of all nationalities, including the Chinese; that you will treat well the prisoners and grant life to those of the enemy who surrender. And that you be on the sharp lookout for those traitors and enemies who, by robbery, will seek to mar our victory.

EMILIO AGUINALDO.

APPENDIX B.

[Senate Document No. 205, part 1, Fifty-seventh Congress, first session.]

CHARGES OF CRUELTY, ETC., TO THE NATIVES OF THE PHILIPPINES.

Letter from the Secretary of War relative to the reports and charges in the public press of cruelty and oppression exercised by our soldiers toward natives of the Philippines. February 19, 1902.—Ordered to be printed as a document.

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington, February 17, 1902.

DEAR SIR: In reply to your letter of Saturday, the 15th instant, received yesterday, asking information regarding the reports and charges in the public press of cruelty and oppression exercised by our soldiers toward natives of the Philippines, I send you a number of documents which I think will furnish the information you wish. Every report or charge of this description which has at any time been brought to the notice of the War Department has been made the subject of prompt investigation; and among the inclosed papers you will find the records of thirteen such inquiries in which the results have been reported. You will perceive that in substantially every case the report has proved to be either unfounded or grossly exaggerated. The particular report which was called to the attention of the Senate last week, viz, that the "water cure" is the favorite torture of the American, and especially of the Macabebe scouts, to force the natives to give information, and that a soldier who was with General Funston had stated that he had helped to administer the "water cure" to 160 natives, all but 26 of whom died, was already under investigation, which is still in progress.

I inclose a copy of a letter received from General Funston, dated February 2, 1902, in which he declares the statement to be an "atrocious lie without the slightest foundation in fact;" and a letter from Lieutenant Batson, the commander of the Macabebe Scouts, to the same effect.

As to orders governing our soldiers in the Philippines, I send you a copy of the instructions for the government of armies of the United States, promulgated under President Lincoln by General Orders, No. 100, of 1863. These rules have been republished from time to time in separate form and furnished to every commissioned officer of the Army, both Regulars and Volunteers, and are to-day, as they have been at all times since 1863, the practical and effective guide and rule of conduct to which every officer understands that he must conform. Among these rules you will find the following:

"RULE 16. Military necessity does not admit of cruelty—that is, the infliction of suffering for the sake of suffering or for revenge, nor of maiming or wounding except in fight, nor of torture to extort confessions. * * *

"RULE 44. All wanton violence committed against persons in the invaded country, all destruction of property not commanded by the authorized officer, all robery, all pillage or sacking, even after taking a place by main force; all rape, wounding, maiming, or killing of such inhabitants are prohibited under the penalty of death, or such other severe punishment as may seem adequate for the gravity of the offense. * * *

"RULE 56. A prisoner of war is subject to no punishment for being a public enemy, nor is any revenge wreaked upon him by the intentional infliction of any suffering or disgrace by cruel imprisonment, want of food, by mutilation, death, or any other barbarity.

"RULE 75. Prisoners of war are subject to confinement or imprisonment such as may be deemed necesssry on account of safety, but they are to be subjected to no other intentional suffering or indignity. * * *

"RULE 80. Honorable men, when captured, will abstain from giving to the enemy information concerning their own army, and the modern law of war permits no longer use of any violence against prisoners in order to extort the desired information or to punish them for having given false information."

I send you also copies of eighteen orders, issued at different times and under different commands in the Philippines, for the observance and enforcement of these humane rules, calling particular attention to the order of the Department of Southern Luzon, dated June 5, 1900; in the Department of the Visayas, dated June 26, 1900, and in the Department of Northern Luzon, dated July 14, 1900.

I send you a memorandum of 44 officers, soldiers, and camp followers who have been tried, and 39 of them convicted, for violation of such orders as are above described.

The war on the part of the Filipinos has been conducted with the barbarous cruelty common among uncivilized races, and with general disregard of the rules of civilized warfare. They deliberately adopted the policy of killing all natives, however peaceful, who were friendly to our Government, and in literally thousands of instances these poor creatures, dependent upon our soldiers for protection, have been assassinated.

The Filipino troops have frequently fired upon our men from under protection of flags of truce, tortured to death American prisoners who have fallen into their hands, buried alive both Americans and friendly natives, and horribly mutilated the bodies of the American dead. That the soldiers fighting against such an enemy, and with their own eyes witnessing such deeds, should occasionally be regardless of their orders and retaliate by unjustifiable severities is not incredible. Such things happen in every war, even between two civilized nations, and they always will happen while war lasts. That such occurrences have been sanctioned or permitted is not true. A constant and effective pressure of prohibition, precept, and discipline has been maintained against them. That there has been any such practice is not true. The cases have been few and far between, scattered infrequently over a great area of country along the course of three years of active conflict, through thousands of engagements, and among many thousands of troops.

That these occasional cases have characterized our Army or its conduct is not true, any more than the deeds of lawless violence which constantly occur in every large city characterize the people of the city. The war in the Philippines has been conducted by the American Army with scrupulous regard for the rules of civilized warfare, with careful and genuine consideration for the prisoner and the noncombatant, with self-restraint, and with humanity never surpassed, if ever equaled, in any conflict, worthy only of praise, and reflecting credit upon the American people.

I send you a number of extracts from reports and court-martial proceedings, illustrating the character of insurrectionist warfare.

Very truly, yours,

ELIHU ROOT, Secretary of War.

Hon. HENRY CABOT LODGE,
Chairman Committee on the Philippines,
United States Senate.

EXHIBIT A.

KANSAS CITY, MO., February 2, 1902.

SIR: My attention having been called to an extract from an article published in the City and State, of Philadelphia, January 2, 1902, I wish to make the following comment:

In this extract it is alleged that a soldier who claims to have been with me in the Philippines made the statement that he had helped to administer the "water cure" to 160 natives, all but 26 of whom died. This statement I wish to brand as an atrocious lie, without the slightest foundation in fact. During my service of three years in the Philippines I never had personal knowledge of the so-called "water cure" being administered to a native, or any other form of torture being used to extract information from them.

Statements of this kind made by returned soldiers are simply braggadocio, and a desire to attract attention to themselves. It is my belief that the "water cure" was very rarely, if ever, administered by American soldiers. It was a matter of common knowledge that occasionally the Macabebe Scouts, when not under the direct control of some officer, would resort to this means of obtaining information as to the whereabouts of concealed arms and ammunition. They did this, however, on their own responsibility and without orders from their superiors. It was utterly impossible to prevent a few offenses of this kind by the Macabebes, as they were merely repaying the insurgents for worse treatment received by them in the past.

The so-called "water cure," as it has been described to me by Macabebe soldiers, was by no means so severe an ordeal as would be indicated in the extract mentioned. The method was merely to throw a native on his back, hold his nose with one hand, and pour water down his throat from a canteen or other vessel. It occasioned nothing more than a few moments of strangling, and never resulted fatally.

I never heard of its having been administered to a native by a white man.

Very respectfully,

FREDERICK FUNSTON,
Brigadier-General, United States Army.

The ADJUTANT-GENERAL,
Washington, D. C.

EXHIBIT B.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 29, 1902.

SIR: Referring to an article published in the City and State, Philadelphia, January 2, 1902, alleging the use of the "water torture" as a means of extorting information from the natives in the Philippines by our troops, and especially Macabebe Scouts, I desire to make the following comments:

The first company of Macabebe Scouts was organized by me in September, 1899. This force was subsequently increased until I had under my command five companies, numbering 640 men. I was in command of these scouts until the latter part of November, 1899, being relieved on account of a wound received at Aringay. These men were in May, 1900, reorganized and officially designated Squadron Philippine Cavalry, though they were generally known as "Macabebe Scouts." Upon the reorganization I was again placed in command of them, and remained in command until these men were finally discharged from the service in July, 1901.

At this time there were other bodies of scouts known as Macabebe Scouts, about the discipline and conduct of which I know nothing, as I never came in contact with them.

During the time that I was in command of these native troops the practice of torturing natives to obtain information was neither sanctioned nor practiced. On the contrary, it was prohibited under pain of severe punishment. I not only did not "knowingly allow it," but from the time I organized the first company of natives until my command was discharged, in July, 1901, my officers and men were strictly prohibited from mistreating prisoners or "piasanos" in any way.

From time to time charges similar to that made by Mr. Kennan in the article referred to have been made against my scouts. These charges have invariably been thoroughly investigated, and have nearly always been found to be without foundation. As a rule, these charges have not been made to me as commanding officer of the scouts, but have been sent direct to the division commander, and in a great many cases special inspectors have been sent out to investigate. These inspectors have always been given every assistance by myself and officers to get at the truth, and the natives encouraged in every way to make known any cruelty practiced against them. It has generally been found that the natives have been scared into making these charges, first, by insurgent officials, who sought that method of arousing the natives by telling them of the barbarous treatment that they would have at the hands of the Macabebes, and, second, by American officers, who tried to intimidate the natives by threats of Macabebe vengeance.

I am glad to be able to say, however, that those charges have almost invariably gone before my command, and not followed it. In proof of this I would call attention to the petitions which have been in a number of cases—but notably at Abando and at Montalbon—submitted, in which the natives have appealed to the department commander not to remove my command from their towns, as we had always afforded them absolute protection against "ladronism" and outrages of all sorts, and that my men, as they expressed it, treated them like brothers. I request that the Adjutant-General also compare the records of courts-martial of men in my command with those of the Army in general, both in the United States and in the Philippines.

I have heard a great deal about the "water torture," or "water cure," as it is generally called, and I do not doubt that it has been applied in a few cases. Outrages will be committed in any army in the world. They have been committed against our own citizens in our own country by our own soldiers. But I know that such methods were not sanctioned, as alleged in the article referred to, by the military authorities in the Philippines, and that when proof could be obtained that such methods had been practiced the offenders were promptly brought to justice.

Indeed, after nearly three years' service in the Philippines, I can conscientiously say that I believe the treatment which the natives received at the hands of the military has been exceedingly humane and tolerant.

Very respectfully,

MATTHEW A. BATSON,
Captain, Fifteenth U. S. Cavalry.

The ADJUTANT-GENERAL U. S. ARMY,
Washington, D. C.

APPENDIX C.

INSTRUCTIONS OF THE PRESIDENT TO THE PHILIPPINE COMMISSION, APRIL 7, 1900.

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington, April 7, 1900.

SIR: I transmit to you herewith the instructions of the President for the guidance of yourself and your associates as Commissioners to the Philippine Islands.

Very respectfully,

ELIHU ROOT,
Secretary of War.

Hon. WILLIAM H. TAFT,
President Board of Commissioners to the Philippine Islands.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, April 7, 1900.

The SECRETARY OF WAR,
Washington.

SIR: In the message transmitted to the Congress on the 5th of December, 1899, I said, speaking of the Philippine Islands: "As long as the insurrection continues the military arm must necessarily be supreme. But there is no reason why steps should not be taken from time to time to inaugurate governments essentially popular in their form as fast as territory is held and controlled by our troops. To this end I am considering the advisability of the return of the Commission, or such of the members thereof as can be secured, to aid the existing authorities and facilitate this work throughout the islands."

To give effect to the intention thus expressed I have appointed Hon. William H. Taft, of Ohio; Prof. Dean C. Worcester, of Michigan; Hon. Luke I. Wright, of Tennessee; Hon. Henry C. Ide, of Vermont, and Prof. Bernard Moses, of California, commissioners to the Philippine Islands to continue and perfect the work of organizing and establishing civil government already commenced by the military authorities, subject in all respects to any laws which Congress may hereafter enact.

The commissioners named will meet and act as a board, and the Hon. William H. Taft is designated as president of the board. It is probable that the transfer of authority from military commanders to civil officers will be gradual and will occupy a considerable period. Its successful accomplishment and the maintenance of peace and order in the meantime will require the most perfect cooperation between the civil and military authorities in the island, and both should be directed during the transition period by the same executive department. The Commission will therefore report to the Secretary of War, and all their action will be subject to your approval and control.

You will instruct the Commission to proceed to the city of Manila, where they will make their principal office, and to communicate with the military governor of the Philippine Islands, whom you will at the same time direct to render to them every assistance within his power in the performance of their duties. Without hampering them by too specific instructions, they should in general be enjoined, after making themselves familiar with the conditions and needs of the country, to devote their attention in the first instance to the establishment of municipal governments, in which the natives of the islands, both in the cities and in the rural communities, shall be afforded the opportunity to manage their own local affairs to the fullest extent of which they are capable, and subject to the least degree of supervision and control which a careful study of their capacities and observation of the workings of native control show to be consistent with the maintenance of law, order, and loyalty.

The next subject in order of importance should be the organization of government in the larger administrative divisions corresponding to counties, departments, or provinces, in which the common interests of many or several municipalities falling within the same tribal lines, or the same natural geographical limits, may best be subserved by a common administration. Whenever the Commission is of the opinion that the condition of affairs in the islands is such that the central administration may safely be transferred from military to civil control, they will report that conclusion to you, with their recommendations as to the form of central government to be established for the purpose of taking over the control.

Beginning with the 1st day of September, 1900, the authority to exercise, subject to my approval, through the Secretary of War, that part of the power of government in the Philippine Islands which is of a legislative nature is to be transferred from the military governor of the islands to this Commission, to be thereafter exercised by them in the place and stead of the military governor, under such rules and regulations as you shall prescribe, until the establishment of the civil central government for the islands contemplated in the last foregoing paragraph, or until Congress shall otherwise provide. Exercise of this legislative authority will include the making of rules and orders, having the effect of law, for the raising of revenue by taxes, customs, duties, and imposts; the appropriation and expenditure of public funds of the islands; the establishment of an educational system throughout the islands; the establishment of a system to secure an efficient civil service; the organization and establishment of courts; the organization and establishment of municipal and departmental governments, and all other matters of a civil nature for which the military governor is now competent to provide by rules or orders of a legislative character.

The Commission will also have power during the same period to appoint to office such officers under the judicial, educational, and civil-service systems and in the municipal and departmental governments as shall be provided for. Until the complete transfer of control the military governor will remain the chief executive head of the government of the islands, and will exercise the executive authority now possessed by him and not herein expressly assigned to the Commission, subject, however, to the rules and orders enacted by the Commission in the exercise of the legislative powers conferred upon them. In the meantime the municipal and departmental governments will continue to report to the military governor and be subject to his administrative supervision and control, under your direction, but that supervision and control will be confined within the narrowest limits consistent with the requirement that the powers of government in the municipalities and departments shall be honestly and effectively exercised and that law and order and individual freedom shall be maintained

All legislative rules and orders, establishments of government, and appointments to office by the Commission will take effect immediately, or at such times as they shall designate, subject to your approval and action upon the coming in of the Commission's reports, which are to be made from time to time as their action is taken. Wherever civil governments are constituted under the direction of the Commission, such military posts, garrisons, and forces will be continued for the suppression of insurrection and brigandage, and the maintenance of law and order, as the military commander shall deem requisite, and the military forces shall be at all times subject, under his orders, to the call of the civil authorities for the maintenance of law and order and the enforcement of their authority.

In the establishment of municipal governments the Commission will take as the basis of their work the governments established by the military governor under his order of August 8, 1899, and under the report of the board constituted by the military governor by his order of January 29, 1900, to formulate and report a plan of municipal government, of which his honor Cayetano Arellano, president of the audiencia, was chairman, and they will give to the conclusions of that board the weight and consideration which the high character and distinguished abilities of its members justify.

In the constitution of departmental or provincial governments they will give especial attention to the existing government of the island of Negros, constituted, with the approval of the people of that island, under the order of the military governor of July 22, 1899, and after verifying, so far as may be practicable, the reports of the successful working of that government, they will be guided by the experience thus acquired, so far as it may be applicable to the condition existing in other portions of the Philippines. They will avail themselves, to the fullest degree practicable, of the conclusions reached by the previous Commission to the Philippines.

In the distribution of powers among the governments organized by the Commission the presumption is always to be in favor of the smaller subdivision, so that all the powers which can properly be exercised by the municipal government shall be vested in that government, and all the powers of a more general character which can be exercised by the departmental government shall be vested in that government, and so that in the governmental system, which is the result of the process, the central government of the islands, following the example of the distribution of the powers between the States and the National Government of the United States, shall have no direct administration except of matters of purely general concern, and shall have only such supervision and control over local governments as may be necessary to secure and enforce faithful and efficient administration by local officers.

The many different degrees of civilization and varieties of custom and capacity among the people of the different islands preclude very definite instruction as to the part which the people shall take in the selection of their own officers; but these general rules are to be observed: That in all cases the municipal officers, who administer the local affairs of the people, are to be selected by the people, and that wherever officers of more extended jurisdiction are to be selected in any way, natives of the islands are to be preferred, and if they can be found competent and willing to perform the duties they are to receive the offices in preference to any others.

It will be necessary to fill some offices for the present with Americans which after a time may well be filled by natives of the islands. As soon as practicable a system for ascertaining the merit and fitness of candidates for civil office should be put in force. An indispensable qualification for all offices and positions of trust and authority in the islands must be absolute and unconditional loyalty to the United States, and absolute and unhampered authority and power to remove and punish any officer deviating from that standard must at all times be retained in the hands of the central authority of the islands.

In all the forms of government and administrative provisions which they are authorized to prescribe the Commission should bear in mind that the government which they are establishing is designed not for our satisfaction, or for the expression of our theoretical views, but for the happiness, peace, and prosperity of the people of the Philippine Islands, and the measures adopted should be made to conform to their customs, their habits, and even their prejudices, to the fullest extent consistent with the accomplishment of the indispensable requisites of just and effective government.

At the same time the Commission should bear in mind, and the people of the islands should be made plainly to understand, that there are certain great principles of government which have been made the basis of our governmental system which we deem essential to the rule of law and the maintenance of individual freedom, and of which they have, unfortunately, been denied the experience possessed by us; that there are also certain practical rules of government which we have found to be essential to the preservation of these great principles of liberty and law, and that these principles and these rules of government must be established and maintained in their islands for the sake of their liberty and happiness, however much they may conflict with the customs or laws of procedure with which they are familiar.

It is evident that the most enlightened thought of the Philippine Islands fully appreciates the importance of these principles and rules, and they will inevitably within a short time command universal assent. Upon every division and branch of the government of the Philippines, therefore, must be imposed these inviolable rules:

That no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law; that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation; that in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation, to be confronted with the witnesses against him, to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense; that excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishment inflicted; that no person shall be put twice in jeopardy for the same offense, or be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself; that the right to be secure against unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated; that neither slavery nor involuntary servitude shall exist except as a punishment for crime; that no bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be passed; that no law shall be passed abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the rights of the people to peaceably assemble and petition the Government for a redress of grievances; that no law shall be made respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, and that the free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship without discrimination or preference shall forever be allowed.

It will be the duty of the Commission to make a thorough investigation into the titles to the large tracts of land held or claimed by individuals or by religious orders; into the justice of the claims and complaints made against such landholders by the people of the island or any part of the people, and to seek by wise and peaceable measures a just settlement of the controversies and redress of wrongs which have caused strife and bloodshed in the past. In the performance of this duty the Commission is enjoined to see that no injustice is done; to have regard for substantial rights and equity, disregarding technicalities so far as substantial right permits, and to observe the following rules:

That the provision of the treaty of Paris pledging the United States to the protection of all rights of property in the islands, and as well the principle of our own Government which prohibits the taking of private property without due process of law, shall not be violated; that the welfare of the people of the islands, which should be a paramount consideration, shall be attained consistently with this rule of property right; that if it becomes necessary for the public interest of the people of the islands to dispose of claims to property which the Commission finds to be not lawfully acquired and held, disposition shall be made thereof by due legal procedure, in which there shall be full opportunity for fair and impartial hearing and judgment; that if the same public interests require the extinguishment of property rights lawfully acquired and held, due compensation shall be made out of the public treasury therefor; that no form of religion and no minister of religion shall be forced upon any community or upon any citizen of the islands; that upon the other hand no minister of religion shall be interfered with or molested in following his calling, and that the separation between state and church shall be real, entire, and absolute.

It will be the duty of the Commission to promote and extend, and, as they find occasion, to improve, the system of education already inaugurated by the military authorities. In doing this they should regard as of first importance the extension of a system of primary education which shall be free to all, and which shall tend to fit the people for the duties of citizenship and for the ordinary avocations of a civilized community. This instruction should be given in the first instance in every part of the islands in the language of the people. In view of the great number of languages spoken by the different tribes, it is especially important to the prosperity of the islands that a common medium of communication may be established, and it is obviously desirable that this medium should be the English language. Especial attention should be at once given to affording full opportunity to all the people of the islands to acquire the use of the English language.

It may be well that the main changes which should be made in the system of taxation and in the body of laws under which the people are governed, except such changes as have already been made by the military government, should be relegated to the civil government which is to be established under the auspices of the Commission. It will, however, be the duty of the Commission to inquire diligently as to whether there are any further changes which ought not to be delayed; and, if so, they are authorized to make such changes, subject to your approval. In doing so they are to bear in mind that taxes which tend to penalize or repress industry and enterprise are to be avoided; that provisions for taxation should be simple, so that they may be understood by the people; that they should affect the fewest practicable subjects of taxation which will serve for the general distribution of the burden.

The main body of the laws which regulate the rights and obligations of the people should be maintained with as little interference as possible. Changes made should be mainly in procedure, and in the criminal laws to secure speedy and impartial trials, and at the same time effective administration and respect for individual rights.

In dealing with the uncivilized tribes of the islands the commission should adopt the same course followed by Congress in permitting the tribes of our North American Indians to maintain their tribal organization and government, and under which many of those tribes are now living in peace and contentment, surrounded by a civilization to which they are unable or unwilling to conform. Such tribal governments should, however, be subjected to wise and firm regulation; and, without undue or petty interference, constant and active effort should be exercised to prevent barbarous practices and introduce civilized customs.

Upon all officers and employees of the United States, both civil and military, should be impressed a sense of the duty to observe not merely the material but the personal and social rights of the people of the islands, and to treat them with the same courtesy and respect for their personal dignity which the people of the United States are accustomed to require from each other.

The articles of capitulation of the city of Manila on the 13th of August, 1898, concluded with these words:

"This city, its inhabitants, its churches and religious worship, its educational establishments, and its private property of all descriptions, are placed under the special safeguard of the faith and honor of the American Army."

I believe that this pledge has been faithfully kept. As high and sacred an obligation rests upon the Government of the United States to give protection for property and life, civil and religious freedom, and wise, firm, and unselfish guidance in the paths of peace and prosperity to all the people of the Philippine Islands. I charge this Commission to labor for the full performance of this obligation, which concerns the honor and conscience of their country, in the firm hope that through their labors all the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands may come to look back with gratitude to the day when God gave victory to American arms at Manila and set their land under the sovereignty and the protection of the people of the United States.

WILLIAM McKINLEY.

Mr. TILLMAN obtained the floor.

Mr. LODGE. Will the Senator from South Carolina allow me to make a motion about the hour of meeting?

Mr. TILLMAN. Certainly.

Mr. LODGE. I move that when the Senate adjourns to-night it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, after four hours of speaking by one of the most eloquent and best equipped men in America, a man of profound learning, a lawyer without a superior, a special pleader without a peer, I feel that in attempting to follow him at this late hour I labor under such disadvantages that I can not hope to do more than to call attention to some of his sophistries.

Mr. PETTUS. I understand the Senator from South Carolina will have the floor on this question whenever it comes up again, and if so I wish to submit a motion.

Mr. TILLMAN. I am perfectly willing to yield, as I am quite unwell. We have had five hours, and that is about as long as we usually are willing to work at this kind of business. We are, of course, engaged on committees and in other ways, in correspondence and one thing or another, for ten or twelve hours a day, some of us fifteen.

Mr. FRYE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PRITCHARD in the chair). Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from Maine?

Mr. TILLMAN. Certainly.

Mr. FRYE. Enough Senators have indicated to me a desire to speak to occupy all of the time if we stay here until 6 o'clock at night and meet here to-morrow at 11 o'clock, and I think it is more prudent decidedly to stay, because some will be disappointed if we do not.

Mr. TELLER. If the Senator from South Carolina does not feel like going on, I understand there are Senators here who will go on to-night, and if so, I think we ought to stay here and give these Senators an opportunity.

Mr. TILLMAN. If an arrangement of that kind is made, I do not want to surrender my right to a hearing in the morning. In other words, I am not willing to be cut off from saying something in reply to the speech of the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. TELLER. I suggest, then, that the Senator from South Carolina yield to some Senator, if nobody objects, and let him hold his place.

Mr. TILLMAN. Will the Chair recognize any such private arrangement? Has he the right to do it?

Mr. FRYE. I do not suppose in the United States Senate there is any such thing as retaining the floor or parceling out the time.

Mr. TELLER. I agree to that, but if the Senator from South Carolina should say that he would yield to a Senator for a certain time, and then would resume the floor, I suppose nobody would object to it.

Mr. FORAKER. If the Senator will allow me, I am one of those who have given notice that they desire to speak. I do not know whether or not I will get an opportunity, but I suppose my name is somewhere on the list of those who are noted for a desire to address the Senate on this subject. I do not know just where I come in, but if it will be any accommodation to the Senator from South Carolina I will exchange places with him if I may be allowed to do so.

Mr. TILLMAN. I shall be very glad to yield to the Senator from Ohio, provided I can be assured that he has a place in the picture. [Laughter.]

Mr. FORAKER. I made the suggestion because I understood the Senator to say that he is feeling somewhat indisposed.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, will you please look on the list there, if you have it, or will the President pro tempore, who is standing at the desk, and please notify us just where I am at in this business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair informs the Senator from South Carolina that he has the floor.

Mr. TELLER. I am going to object to any list whatever. Senators must take their chances of getting the floor, according to the custom of the Senate for a hundred years. I object to a list. The Chair has no right to make a list. If a Senator wants to speak, he always has the opportunity of asking the Senate to let him speak.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. TILLMAN. I desire to find out what he wants.

Mr. FORAKER. I wish to say that I understood it was the Senator from South Carolina who wanted something, and I thought I might be in a position now to give him something that he wanted.

Mr. TILLMAN. And yet the Senator from Colorado, who has been so much longer in this body than both of us, who could double us in service if he had both of our terms, says he will not permit any private arrangement, and therefore you see our little agreement will be knocked into pie before we even form the coalition.

Mr. TELLER. I did not say that. I did not say that under the circumstances the Senator might not, if the Senate agreed to it, yield to the Senator from Ohio and then to the Senator from Mississippi. What I said I object to is to the Chair making a list and recognizing Senators according to that list. I am going to object to that.

Mr. FORAKER. I wish to say, in answer to the suggestion, that I fully agree with the Senator from Colorado about it; but nevertheless when we have a debate of this kind and as we near the end of it Senators who desire to speak somehow or other fall into an arrangement among themselves as to the order in which they will take the floor. That is all that has been done here. It has been done in a spirit of accommodation, as I understand.

Mr. TILLMAN. As I have been guilty of putting my name down on the list, I am going to stand by the gentleman who put it there.

Mr. FORAKER. In view of that, I withdraw the suggestion I made a moment ago, and will listen with pleasure to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. FRYE. In relation to the remark made by the Senator from Colorado, I will state that on Monday the time is to be equally divided between the two sides, fifteen minutes to each speaker. Now, it seems to me that it would be a great deal better if each side would make up a list for the Chair practically to be governed by under such circumstances. It is very embarrassing to the Presiding Officer, when two or three Senators rise to speak, to compel him to recognize one or the other. The rule, of course, I understand perfectly well.

Mr. TELLER. Under the rule the Senator who presides would recognize probably first one on the other side and then one on this side, and let us take our chances. That has been the custom always. I have never known a list to be made, except surreptitiously and without the consent of the Senate. I think the Senator from South Carolina will find no difficulty about it. We will agree on this side as to who is to speak, and Senators on the other side will agree as to their side who will take the floor. I do not object to that. What I object to is that Senators shall go to the Chair and put down their names, and then when a Senator rises and addresses the Chair, the Chair ignores him and looks at the list. That never has been the rule, and it never will be the rule in the Senate while I am here if I can prevent it.

Mr. HOAR. Will the Senator from South Carolina yield to me for a moment?

Mr. TILLMAN. With pleasure. I have been yielding to everybody. I am ready to yield the floor if I can get it to-morrow.

Mr. HOAR. I should like to state that my understanding of the practical rule of the Senate differs from that of the Senator from Colorado. I understand, of course, what is the parliamentary law both in this and the other House. It is that the Chair recognizes the gentleman who first rises. But in all parliamentary bodies, where more than one person wishes to speak, several are apt to rise at the same time; and it has been, ever since I have known this Capitol, now more than thirty years, the custom for the Chair to make up beforehand a list of those who apply to him, and then, when gentlemen rise at the same time, he recognizes them, dealing fairly with two sides of the question in the order in which they have previously applied to him.

I have a hundred times gone to the Chair, when some Senator made an address to which I wished to reply, or somebody in the other House did, and asked the Chair if he would recognize me when the speaker got through, and he has invariably done it, unless somebody else had applied first. That is certainly the only fair way to conduct our debates, and I can not see that that is any more a violation of the rule than it is for the two sides of the Chamber to agree in advance as to who shall speak, as the Senator from Colorado proposes.

I do not recognize the power of this side of the Chamber or of the other side of the Chamber to determine whether any particular Senator on it shall speak. Indeed, sometimes a person may not agree with his own side of the Chamber, and he would not get a chance to speak at all. I have no doubt the Chair, unless I am indiscreet, and he will correct me if I am wrong, has a list of names on the table before him now. I do not believe there has been a debate of this sort, where the time was limited, that the Chair has not had one before him, and somehow or other it always happens that the Senators are recognized in the order in which their names are borne on the list.

I think the Senator from South Carolina will be absolutely safe, if he lets the Senator from Ohio speak now, in relying upon being recognized if it happens, as the Senator from Ohio understands, that there is a list of names on the desk which bears the name of Senator FORAKER. If the Senator from Ohio is on the list I do not think the Senator from South Carolina need have the least apprehension.

Mr. TELLER. Will the Senator from South Carolina allow me for a moment?

Mr. TILLMAN. Certainly.

Mr. TELLER. I want to make a suggestion to the Senator from Massachusetts. I did not complain of what the Senator from Massachusetts says has been usual—for a Senator to go up to the Chair and say, "Recognize me if you can," and the Chair always looks his way; but if somebody gets up before, he recognizes him. I say it has not been the custom, though it sometimes has been done, to have a list; but as a rule we have not had a list. I do not object to what the Senator suggests. With a list, one side of this body might enter their names and the other side be entirely cut out. People advocating a single side of a case might take the whole time, although they might not be the first to address the Chair. I do not think there is any trouble about this.

Mr. COCKRELL. Not one particle of trouble. There never has been.

Mr. TELLER. If the Senator from South Carolina does not want to go ahead, it seems to me that some one might now proproceed, and the Senator, by universal consent, might be heard in the morning. We ought to give Senators a chance to speak to-night.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Several Senators are ready to go on to-night.

Mr. MONEY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. TILLMAN. Do I understand the Chair to mean by that that I can give the Senator from Mississippi an opportunity to make a set speech, and then resume the floor when he gets through? I do not yield the floor to any man, because I intend to speak on this subject——

Mr. COCKRELL. Then the Senator had better go ahead.

Mr. FORAKER. The Senator had better speak.

Mr. TILLMAN. Unless I can get assurances that I can have the floor in the morning. I have about three hours' talk in me from my present feelings.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, we are discussing or pretending to discuss the bill (H. R. 5833) temporarily to provide revenue for the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes. The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] used as an argument in favor of the passage of this bill the necessity of raising funds with which to carry on the government in those islands. We had the fact brought out the other day, and nobody disputed it then and nobody dares to attempt to dispute it now, that the so-called Philippine government, the Taft Commission, which is the government and the whole of it, has a surplus of some four or five million dollars in the insular treasury. There is absolutely no immediate use or need for any new revenue or additional revenue.

This whole scheme involves a fundamental change of our national policy for a hundred and twenty-five years. It means a subversion and destruction of those principles which have been the guiding stars of the American people since we have had a Government. Therefore, any pretense that this bill or any bill of a similar import is necessary is a mere subterfuge and humbug, and every man here knows it.

We had a similar bill with regard to Porto Rico, and the purpose of it was to lay the foundation, to establish a precedent for this very piece of iniquity. If we had not had the Philippines on our hands at the time the Porto Rican tariff bill was introduced, no such bill would ever have come into Congress. The purpose was, as I said, to establish a precedent, and if the Supreme Court had not sustained that unhappy precedent, if our court of last resort had not declared that it is in the power of Congress to levy a tariff duty between two sections or two portions of our country if one is a Territory, all of this would have fallen to the ground, and the condition then confronting us of having to admit Philippine products and manufactures, if they should develop, and other articles into the American market upon the same terms that you admit goods from California or Arizona or New Mexico, would have caused us to get out of the Philippines upon any possible condition which would let us loose, or enable us to let them loose, and everybody here knows it. So I believe in clearing the atmosphere a little by stating my opinion—only my opinion, of course—as to the hypocrisy involved in this whole programme.

The Constitution, which is somewhat outworn and more or less obsolete, having become simply a time-honored document to which men appeal occasionally, but which they never observe when they have a majority, unless they want to—this Constitution of ours provides, in section 8 of article 1:

> The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises, to pay the debts and provide for the common defence and general welfare of the United States; but all duties, imposts and excises, shall be uniform throughout the United States.

The question which I, as an American whose fathers in the Revolutionary struggle helped to found this Republic, want decided here—and it is the only question involved—is whether the Philippine Islands are in the United States or not. The Supreme Court says they are territory appurtenant to the United States. They have not been incorporated into the United States, so to speak, although we hold them by cession, and the Senator from Wisconsin and others claim that our title is as perfect as any title can possibly be.

But those islands occupy an anomalous position. They are in a condition in which the Army and the Navy and the Congress are taking possession and acting as though they were a part of this country; treating them absolutaly as a part of the United States; and then, on the other hand, we find this same Congress first authorizing the President to govern them absolutely, all power, legislative, executive, and judicial, being lodged in the President, and he, in his turn, lodging it in five commissioners. We find this Congress ratifying an act of the Taft Commission—the Philippine government, so called—which levies duties on imports from the United States into the Philippines; and the Congress, in addition, levies duties on imports out of the Philippines into the United States.

Now, why do we not levy a duty on imports between Arizona and Nevada? Arizona has three times as many people in it as Nevada.

Mr. STEWART. Oh, no.

Mr. TILLMAN. Well, twice as many. New Mexico certainly has more. The Indian Territory and Oklahoma together have 1,000,000 white people begging for admission into the Union as States. They are denied admission. They are refused the rights of citizens; and yet here we are discussing and here we are legislating about the rights and property and interests of these 9,000,000 wards of ours, or chattels, or whatever other thing they may be. I do not know what they are.

The only power vested in Congress to deal with Territories arises from the section of the Constitution which provides that "The Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States."

Well, we bought those islands; so we say. We bought the title to the land, so these lawyers tell us; and we do not count the people on the land or their rights as in any wise affecting our action.

Then we stand before the world occupying the attitude of a country which had its origin in declaring that colonies governed from abroad arbitrarily is tyranny, and we have returned like a dog to its vomit to the policy of England which our fathers overthrew at Yorktown.

While King George, recognizing no rights in the American colonies of that day and time which he was bound to respect—through his Parliament, through orders of the ministry—levied a tax on tea and went forward to levy stamp duties, the men descended from those who resented that tax; the men here from Massachusetts, with one exception at this end of the Capitol and one or two at the other end, stand here clamoring and announcing their belief that we as a people have the right to do the very same thing that England did to Massachusetts in 1776.

Not only that, but we spit upon the organic law which our fathers framed, declaring that there should be uniformity in excise duties and in taxes, and we set up the damnable doctrine that we can not only hold those people without regard to their political, or civil, or other rights, but that we can govern them, not from within, but by sending a lot of appointees, men who go there to take possession of that country, backed by the Army, and to levy taxes by the millions and to spend those taxes under the enactment "Be it enacted by the Philippine Commission, by the authority of the President of the United States," that such and such taxes shall be levied, and such and such disposition shall be made of them. And we call ourselves liberty-loving Americans. We stand here and boast of our proud heritage, and of the great things we are doing for humanity and the world, and what we propose to do.

I have here some ancient history. I have been delving into history of late in regard to the Revolutionary war, and I brought out some facts in regard to the part my State took in that war. It is a good thing if we can go back to the origin of things, especially of our Government, and get some of the facts bearing upon the revolt of the colonies against England, and the procedure which was followed in that day and time in opposition to this new Republican doctrine that might makes right. Might, and might only, because we are a powerful nation, gives us the authority to buy those people from Spain, and claim that we have a title because we have the power to enforce that title; and having crushed out all organized opposition, standing confronted by only a few guerrillas here and there, we proclaim that we have pacified all of the provinces except fourteen, I believe it is.

Mr. LODGE. Will the Senator allow me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PRITCHARD in the chair). Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. TILLMAN. With pleasure. I am allowing anyone to interrupt me who wants to interrupt me.

Mr. LODGE. The Senator, I know, does not mean to make a misstatement in regard to the provinces. There is insurrection in four—Batangas, Laguna, Tayabas, and Samar.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

Mr. LODGE. If the Senator will excuse me a moment, the rest of the fourteen provinces are two Filipino provinces which are not in insurrection, but, being very remote and sparsely populated, they have not organized governments, and Moro provinces and wild tribes.

Mr. TILLMAN. What has been the course of this philanthropic and humanitarian and civilizing power over there with regard to the Moros? You have not dared go to them with any show of force. You have bootlicked around and even subsidized them by giving to those datos and to the Sultan of Sulu a salary from our Treasury to keep the peace and let us pretend to own them. You leave the Mohammedan fighters severely alone and seize upon the fair provinces of Luzon where there is an opening for your carpetbagger to get in his fine work. You provide the machinery, backed by the bayonet, by which these poor wretches (negroes, you call them) are to be placed where when you squeeze any money out of them you can arrange to distribute it according to your own sweet will. But it is not in your policy to invade the dominion of the Sultan of the Sulus, because you would be met in every bush by a man who would throw a bolo or a bullet into you, and therefore you leave that problem to settle itself hereafter.

You stick to the part of the archipelago which will afford means of robbery—an opportunity to steal. Having had a little experience in Cuba with your carpetbag vermin the country knows what to expect, and having had eight years' experience in South Carolina with carpetbag vermin, from 1868 to 1876, I know whereof I speak, and that is when political influence sends into any conquered country outsiders to govern it the first thing they do is to stick their hands into the pockets of the prostrate people and steal all in sight.

Governor Taft himself admits that we are going to be confronted by the danger of having improper officers sent there. He realizes it already, and if he would be open and frank I expect he has already caught some of those scoundrels, but it would not be a good thing, you know, to ventilate it in the United States just now.

But let me get back to my point as to arbitrary government by outsiders. I hold here an old, time-honored book of 1775. It contains the following:

By the King: A proclamation for suppressing rebellion and sedition.
GEORGE REX.

Now listen. Here is one of your proclamations to Filipinos by our beneficent authority over there, or something in the same line. This is the process of "benevolent assimilation," except that George did not assimilate. We put some blue pellets into his soup that made the old creature sick.

Whereas many of our subjects in divers parts of our colonies and plantations in North America, misled by dangerous and ill-designing men, and forgetting the allegiance which they owe to the power that has protected and sustained them, after various disorderly acts committed in disturbance of the public peace, to the obstruction of lawful commerce, and to the oppression of our loyal subjects carrying on the same, have at length proceeded to an open and avowed rebellion by arraying themselves in hostile manner to withstand the execution of the law and traitorously preparing, ordering, and levying war against us; and

Whereas there is reason to apprehend that such rebellion hath been much promoted and encouraged by the traitorous correspondence, councils, and comfort of divers wicked and desperate persons within this realm:

To the end, therefore, that none of our subjects may neglect or violate their duty through ignorance thereof, or through any doubt of the protection which the law will afford to their loyalty and zeal, we have thought fit, by and with the advice of our privy council, to issue this our royal proclamation, hereby declaring that not only all our officers, civil and military, are obliged to exert their utmost endeavors to suppress such rebellion and to bring the traitors to justice, but that all our subjects of this realm and the dominions thereunto belonging are bound by law to be aiding and assisting in the suppression of such rebellion, and to disclose and make known all traitorous conspiracies and attempts against us, our crown and dignity; and we do accordingly strictly charge and command all our officers, as well civil as military, and all other our obedient and loyal subjects to use their utmost endeavors to withstand and suppress such rebellion and to disclose and make known all treasons and traitorous conspiracies which they shall know to be against us, our crown and dignity, and for that purpose that they transmit to one of our principal secretaries of state or other proper officer due and full information of all persons who shall be found carrying on correspondence with or in any manner or degree aiding or abetting the persons now in open arms and rebellion against our Government within any of our colonies and plantations in North America, in order to bring to condign punishment the authors, perpetrators, and abettors of such traitorous designs.

Given at our court at St. James's the 23d of August, 1775, in the fifteenth year of our reign.

God save the King!

Here we have the direct source or fountain from whence the sedition laws which we have had discussed were drawn. But listen again. Here is another interesting historical document:

By His Excellency the Hon. Thomas Gage, esq., governor and commander in chief in and over His Majesty's province of Massachusetts Bay and vice-admiral of the same.

Now, I know my distinguished friend, the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR], knows this almost by heart, and I want him to listen to me very closely while I read the following paragraph from this time-honored document:

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas the infatuated multitudes who have long suffered themselves to be conducted by certain well-known incendiaries and traitors in a fatal progression of crimes against the constitutional authority of the State have at length proceeded to avowed rebellion, and the good effects which were expected to arise from the patience and lenity of the King's Government have been often frustrated and are now rendered hopeless by the influence of the same evil councils, it only remains for those who are intrusted with supreme rule, as well for the punishment of the guilty as the protection of the well affected, to prove they do not bear the sword in vain.

I will skip and then jump to this place:

The authors of the present unnatural revolt, never daring to trust their cause or their actions to the judgment of an impartial public, or even to the dispassionate reflection of their followers, have uniformly placed their chief confidence in the suppression of truth, and while indefatigable and shameless pains have been taken to obstruct every appeal to the real interest of the people of America, the grossest forgeries, calumnies, and absurdities that ever insulted human understanding have been imposed upon their credulity.

Listen to this, now:

In this exigency of complicated calamities I avail myself of the last effort within the bounds of my duty to spare the effusion of blood, to offer, and I do hereby in His Majesty's name offer and promise, his most gracious pardon to all persons who shall forthwith lay down their arms and return to the duties of peaceable subjects—excepting only from the benefit of such pardon Samuel Adams and John Hancock, whose offenses are of too flagitious a nature to admit of any other consideration than that of condign punishment.

And this—

I was called a "traitor" here the other day because I boldly avowed my sympathy with the Filipinos. The senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] was not called a traitor, but the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER], not now in his seat, said that under the act of the Taft Commission if they had caught the Senator from Massachusetts in the Philippine Islands they would have hanged him long ago. So, I presume, if I may rise or claim to participate in this unpleasant eminence or infamy or treachery or treason, that soon we shall have some notice from somewhere that the senior Senator from Massachusetts and the senior Senator from South Carolina will be excepted from some proclamation of pardon for our treasonable acts and designs.

Mr. President, if I believed we had any title to the Philippines, I would be the last man to sympathize with people who are said to be in rebellion; but I no more believe that the Filipinos are in rebellion against the United States than that the Confederate soldiers were in rebellion. I believe those Confederate soldiers who marched to battle in support of their construction of the Constitution, and for four long years poured out their blood in torrents in testimony of that belief, proved by offering up their lives that they were honest and patriotic, and that the contention that they were rebels will fall to the ground in the pages of the impartial historian of the future, by reason of the fact that they simply went to war with their Northern brethren to settle a question of constitutional construction.

The Filipinos, while they may be subjugated off of the face of the earth, as they are being done to-day, or pacified off the face of the earth, if you choose, in the eye of an honest historian who may write down the facts as they exist both in the official documents which have been sent to the Senate and in reports of our officers, of our generals, in spite of what the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] said to-day, will be able to make a case in history which will lead any impartial and honest man who will write it to declare that the Filipinos, having gone into insurrection against Spain before we went to war for Cuba, having, after the battle of Manila, been furnished arms by Dewey and treated as allies, having participated in the siege of Manila alongside of the men of the American Army when the city was surrendered, in August, and from then until the following February having stood there with arms in their hands, after having organized a government and having had peace and order restored throughout the archipelago—those Filipinos can make a case which in the eyes of an impartial historian will entitle them to be considered as struggling patriots, instead of rebels fighting against authorized and lawful authority.

It is no use, by simply asserting or reiterating disproven facts, to undertake to show that those people were not fighting before we went there, and afterwards fought with our help until they had captured every Spanish soldier outside of Manila and Iloilo, at the time we pretended to buy them from Spain. We had full and fair notice from Aguinaldo and others that if we undertook to buy the sovereignty of those islands and give the Filipinos no guaranty as to what should be their political status—in other words, give them nothing in the shape of promises as to liberty—they would fight us; and it is on record from our own officers, writing to the War Department, and showing that the Government here and that this Senate, before it ratified the treaty, had absolute proof that those people regarded us as allies, that they had been promised liberty, and had been assisted to win it, and that they did not recognize our right to buy them from Spain, and would not submit to such a purchase without fighting.

Those facts being indisputable, it can not be maintained honestly or fairly or legally that our title is clean. We may make our title good by force; we may lie those people out of all semblance of claim; we may publish from the War Department documents here, captured orders showing conspiracies and every other kind of thing, such as have been read here to-day, and undertake to blacken their record, to sneer them out of court; but the fact remains that they were fighting for liberty when we went there, that we helped them to expel the Spainards, and then we turned around and have fought them, and for three long, dismal years we have been engaged in a war of subjugation, pure and simple, and nothing but subjugation.

The pacification of which we hear is the kind of pacification that obtained in Poland; the pacification that obtains in Armenia; the pacification that obtains on our Western plains, where we have exterminated the Indians who originally owned the land.

Mr. TELLER. Does the Senator desire to conclude his remarks this evening?

Mr. TILLMAN. No; I can not get through to-night. That is sure.

Mr. TELLER. Will the Senator yield to me for a motion?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PRITCHARD in the chair). Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. TILLMAN. I do.

Mr. TELLER. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 24 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Saturday, February 22, 1902, at 11 o'clock a. m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, February 21, 1902.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL MONDAY.

Mr. PAYNE. I move that when the House adjourn to-day it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

The motion was agreed to.

MARTHA R. OSBORN.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following resolution from the Senate; which was read:

Resolved, That the Secretary be directed to request the House of Representatives to return to the Senate the bill (S. 282) granting a pension to Martha R. Osborn.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, this request will be complied with. The Chair hears none; and it is ordered accordingly.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. CUSHMAN, by unanimous consent, obtained leave of absence till next Tuesday, on account of important business.

CUBAN REAL ESTATE PURCHASES BY NONRESIDENTS.

Mr. TAWNEY. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, requested to furnish the House of Representatives such information concerning the number of acres of land in Cuba purchased by nonresidents of the island since the date of American occupation as is shown by the reports to and the records of his Department and by the records of the military government of the island of Cuba, giving the consideration, the names and places of residence of purchasers, as shown by the recorded instruments of conveyance, and also the number of acres contained in each tract so conveyed; also the total acreage of cultivated sugar land in the island of Cuba now owned by citizens of the United States and by citizens of other countries foreign to Cuba.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this resolution?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I wish to ask whether the resolution has been considered by any committee?

Mr. TAWNEY. It has not. It is simply a resolution of inquiry.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. This is a question which, it seems to me, the Ways and Means Committee ought to consider.

Mr. TAWNEY. It is simply a resolution of inquiry for the purpose of aiding the committee in the consideration of a subject now under examination by the committee.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I do not see the chairman of the committee in his seat at this moment. I will ask whether the resolution does not recite on its face that the facts inquired about are already contained in the report of the Secretary of War?

Mr. TAWNEY. Not necessarily so.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I so understood from the reading of the resolution.

Mr. TAWNEY. I understand that the information is in his possession.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I understood the resolution to recite that the facts inquired about are already included in the report of the Secretary of War.

Mr. TAWNEY. Of course the information would be contained in the records of the War Department; but we have not access to those records—not to all of them. I understand the information can be readily obtained.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Then this proposes to obtain simply a collation of facts shown by the records of the Department?

Mr. TAWNEY. That is the purpose.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I have not seen the resolution before, but I think matters of this kind should receive some kind of consideration before their adoption.

Mr. PAYNE. I do not like to see adopted here the precedent of a resolution of inquiry coming in here and being adopted by the House without any consideration by a committee. I shall have to object. Let the resolution go to a committee.

Mr. TAWNEY. I submit to the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] that this request is not unprecedented. It is a very common or ordinary thing to have resolutions of inquiry addressed to a department offered in this way and to ask for their adoption by unanimous consent.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. It is not my understanding that we have been in the habit of adopting resolutions of this kind without a reference.

Mr. TAWNEY. Such resolutions have frequently been adopted in this way since I have been a member of the House. I did not suppose there would be any objection to our obtaining information so material to the inquiry as to who would enjoy any benefit resulting from any concession we might make to sugar coming from Cuba.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of this resolution?

Mr. PAYNE. Yes, sir; I object. I desire that the resolution shall go to a committee.

The SPEAKER. Objection being made to the immediate consideration of the resolution, it will be referred to the Committee on Insular Affairs.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. SHERMAN. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union to resume the consideration of the Indian appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union (Mr. MONDELL in the chair), and resumed the consideration of House bill 11353, the Indian appropriation bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment offered yesterday by the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] is pending.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, when the Committee of the Whole rose last night we were discussing the question of immorality alleged to have existed at the Shoshone school in 1900. After the gentleman from New York had spoken for a moment or two—simply long enough for me to catch the trend of his remarks—I went to the telephone, called up the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and asked him what this matter was. I understood him to say over the phone that there was nothing in it; that he did not know anything about the document from which the gentleman from New York was reading—that he had never seen it.

I supposed that the document from which he was reading was a report from the Department, and stated that the Commissioner had never had such report. Investigation this morning discloses the fact that in that statement I was in error to this extent: The report was made to the Department in 1900, containing these allegations that are repeated in the Senate document from which the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] read; that after the reception of that report by the Secretary of the Interior it was referred to the Indian Bureau, and that Bureau sent another inspector or called upon the agent to examine into the subject and make a report thereon, and that examination was made and report made, after the examination, to the Department.

It was stated that they could find that report and send it to me before the House met at 12 o'clock, but I have not yet received it, from which I conclude it has not been found. The report exonerated from blame Mr. Nardin, the then superintendent of that school. It is proper to state in this connection that the inspector who made the first report has since been—I was going to say, dismissed from the service, but that is not so; he has been separated from the service. I do not care to discredit that inspector, because I do not now, from the information before me, challenge the fact that immorality existed at this school at the time; and I do that purely upon hearsay now, because I have not yet received the report to which I refer.

The then superintendent, who is now the superintendent at the Michigan school, Mount Pleasant, it is claimed was in no wise blamable for the condition that then existed; that as soon as he was aware of the condition he corrected it. Now, Mr. Chairman, inasmuch as we have not this subsequent report, and that this is a matter, it seems to me, of the most serious consequence, and inasmuch as the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York would not dismiss from the service this superintendent, even should he be censurable for his conduct——

Mr. FITZGERALD. Will the gentleman permit an inquiry at this point?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Do you believe that if this amendment were adopted that the Department would dare to transfer this superintendent to some other school?

Mr. SHERMAN. I prefer not to answer that question directly. It is not a question of dare. I think it is not the desire of the head of the Interior Department or any other department to do any act which he believes or knows to be antagonistic to the wish of the legislative branch of the Government. I was about to suggest, if the gentleman would withdraw his amendment, that later, at the proper place in the bill, I would offer an amendment to cover the subject. I do not offer it now, because it would not be germane at this point in the bill. The amendment I would offer is as follows:

That the Indian Committee of the House, through a subcommittee thereof, investigate the entire subject of the conduct of Superintendent Nardin while in charge of the Shoshone school, and any of his subordinates; the conditions then and now existing at said school, and the conduct of students then and now there; and for that purpose they are authorized to send for persons, papers, etc., the expenses thereof to be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

If the gentleman from New York is satisfied with that and will withdraw his amendment, I will offer that later on in the bill, and I think in that way we can, in the near future, probe this matter to the bottom; and if, in the opinion of the subcommittee, this superintendent is censurable, there is no shadow of doubt in my mind that he will be promptly dismissed from the service. I would like to know if that suggestion meets the approval of my colleague from New York?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Before answering the gentleman's question I would like to make a statement in connection with the pending amendment and with what happened yesterday.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of debate is exhausted.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I ask unanimous consent to be permitted to make a statement in connection with the statement of my colleague in this matter.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to make a statement. Is there objection?

Mr. SHERMAN. How much time does the gentleman from New York wish, more than five minutes?

Mr. FITZGERALD I do not know. I do not want to abuse the patience of the committee.

Mr. SHERMAN. Will ten minutes do?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Ten or fifteen minutes.

Mr. SHERMAN. Then I ask, Mr. Chairman, unanimous consent that the gentleman be allowed to proceed for fifteen minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Now, Mr. Chairman, I trust that I may be permitted to discuss this matter without interruption. When I read from Senate Document No. 201 yesterday, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LACEY] said this. I read from the RECORD of yesterday:

Read the balance of it, to show that it is purely and absolutely a blank charge that is here.

No name appeared in the document which I had then in my hand. Further on in the debate he stated:

It is a blank charge, and the affidavits are not sworn to. He ought to be able, in making a charge of this kind against Superintendent Nardin, of whom I never heard—but he ought to be able to name the party from whom he gets the information.

I now submit official reports from the Department of the Interior which substantiate what I said yesterday.

Mr. Chairman, I have in my hands the official report of W. J. McConnell, then an inspector in the Indian service. It is dated June 4, 1900. It is addressed to the Secretary of the Interior, and a copy of it is in Senate Document 201, from which I read yesterday. It has indorsed upon it:

JUNE 21, 1900.

Respectfully referred to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs for consideration of the recommendation of the inspector and prompt report of action taken thereon.

THOS. RYAN, First Assistant Secretary.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
OFFICE OF INDIAN AFFAIRS,
October 4, 1900.

Respectfully returned to the Department, with the statement that the contents of the within report have been carefully noted.

W. A. JONES, Commissioner.

That, Mr. Chairman, is sufficient justification that this was not an idle report nor an idle charge. That report appears in to-day's RECORD. In that report Mr. McConnell said:

Thinking that you should know the condition which existed here under Mr. Nardin, I transmit herewith the statements taken at an investigation recently made at the school by United States Indian Agent Nickerson, together with the affidavits of the employees who assisted him.

I have here a letter dated Shoshone Agency, June 4, 1900, to Hon. W. J. McConnell, United States Indian inspector, Shoshone Agency. It is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
UNITED STATES INDIAN SERVICE,
Shoshone Agency, Wyo., June 4, 1900.

Hon. W. J. MCCONNELL,
United States Indian Inspector, Shoshone Agency, Wyo.

SIR: In handing you the statements hereunto attached, taken at the Wind River boarding school, on April 28, 1900, by Mr. Duclos and Mr. Cochrane, school employees, in my presence, and by them reduced to writing, I desire to state that having cause to suspect that the boys and girls at this school were having improper relations, I gave instructions to the school employees soon after Mr. Nardin, the late superintendent, left, to keep close watch on the boys and girls, and assisted in the watch myself. It took but a few days to trap them. They were questioned separately, and corroborated each other's statements in regard to their more recent escapades; also stated that they had been getting together frequently during the year last past. As soon as their manner of getting together was discovered, I took immediate steps to prevent its repetition.

The statement of the girls, together with the certificate of Mr. Duclos and Mr. Cochrane, is herewith submitted.

Very respectfully,

H. G. NICKERSON,
United States Indian Agent.

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs informs me this morning that Indian Agent Nickerson is still in the Indian Service. His report, at least, must have been accepted as reliable.

I hold in my hand the affidavits of the two employees of the schools who were present when this investigation was made. Both of them are still in the service; and I have also the statements that were taken at the time from different girls in this examination:

WIND RIVER BOARDING SCHOOL,
Shoshone Agency, Wyo., April 28, 1900.

I hereby certify that I am employed as manual-training teacher at the Wind River Boarding School, and that on April 27 my attention and that of other employees was called to the fact that boys and girls were talking by signs through dormitory windows, evidently planning to get out of their dormitories that night.

They were watched, with the result that three boys were caught out of their dormitory at 11 o'clo ‹ that night. The boys are locked in their dormitories during the night, and these three boys got out by tying sheets together and sliding down to the ground through a window.

The boys confessed that their object in climbing out was to get with the girls, and gave the names of the parties implicated, together with times and places where they had heretofore met.

The agent ordered an investigation, at which he was present. The statements of several girls were taken, all of which corroborated what had been told by the boys whom we had captured. At this investigation I proposed the questions and Mr. Cochran, carpenter, reduced the same with the answers to writing, all of which is hereto attached. I have frequently called the attention of Superintendent Nardin to the boys leaving their dormitories at night and being so sleepy that they could not work next day. This matter of boys getting out was frequently discussed at the mess tables in the presence of Superintendent Nardin. The assistant matron, Miss Clare Jessup, at several times in his presence stated that the boys built a fire in the basement during the night and nearly smoked her out of her room above. Superintendent Nardin invariably claimed that she must be mistaken.

The investigation held to-day revealed that they had been out with the girls.

A. F. DUCLOS.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 4th day of June, 1900, at Shoshone Agency, Wyo.

W. J. MCCONNELL,
United States Indian Inspector.

Mr. Duclos is in the service to-day. Another affidavit says:

WIND RIVER BOARDING SCHOOL,
Shoshone Agency, Wyo., April 28, 1900.

I hereby certify that I am employed at the Wind River Boarding School as carpenter and acting engineer and assisted other employees in capturing these boys on the night of the 27th, who tied sheets together and slid from a second-story window; through them others were found to be implicated in outbreaks of long standing, and admitted their relations with the girls, whose testimony we append. The witnesses were examined singly and not allowed to confer with anyone during the investigation.

Supt. E. C. Nardin has been repeatedly informed by the assistant matron, in the presence of the employees in the mess dining room, of nightly outbreaks and great disturbance, breaking in doors and windows to get access to the basement during the night. Having the repair work to do, I repeatedly called the attention of the superintendent to the damages done, and in one case, where a window sash and four window lights had been broken, I took the trouble to find the culprit, but no action was taken and the abuse went on. I found it necessary in one week to repair thirteen lights which had been broken out and replace the panels of one door.

WESTON W. COCKRANE.

Subscribed and sworn to before me at Shoshone Agency, Wyo., this 4th day of June, 1900.

W. J. MCCONNELL,
United States Indian Inspector.

These reports, Mr. Chairman, were filed in the Indian Office. I got them there this morning. I was informed by the Commissioner that this Indian inspector is no longer connected with the Indian service. I do not know that I am free to state why, but the Commissioner claims, practically, that he was an unfit man for the service. He stated that further investigations in this matter were made; that he thought reports were in his office, and that he would try and find them, but they have not been yet produced. The reports I have here were easily found. The reports exonerating Nardin and condemning O'Connell have not been produced. I doubt if they exist. Nickerson, Duclose, and Cochrane are still in the service. McConnell, who had the courage to make these reports, is not.

McConnell, in his report, stated in effect that Superintendent Nardin and his wife, who at this time was the assistant matron, were incompetent for their places. Superintendent Nardin's wife is not now connected with the service. Superintendent Nardin, charged with the responsibility for these acts, is not only now in the service, but he has been promoted to a place in a school of a higher degree and receives a higher salary.

Let me read from an earlier report made from Inspector McConnell about Superintendent Nardin. It was made in October, 1899. It is quite lengthy, and I do not wish to encumber the RECORD with it. Any gentleman who wishes to see it can do so, and if he thinks he is justified he can place it in the RECORD.

First, as to who Nickerson is; this is from the report made to the Indian Bureau October 1, 1899, from Idaho.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that I may continue for five minutes longer.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that he may continue for five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FITZGERALD (reading):

Nickerson was appointed and took his position April 1, 1898, at a salary of $1,500. He is an old Grand Army man of unblemished character, but whether he possesses the ability to control the Indians on his reservation is a very doubtful proposition. In fact, I fear he does not.

From the same report:

This division is headed Wind River School. E. C. Nardin is superintendent of this school. He is 45 years old, and receives a salary of $1,400 per annum. He entered the service March, 1894. Mr. Nardin is a former student of the Ypsilanti Normal School, in Michigan. He may be a good teacher, but he is totally unfit for the position of superintendent of any Indian school. The place has the appearance of decay. Its fences are down and everything seems to be going to wreck.

Mr. Nardin does not have the ability to secure the attendance of pupils, and after they are placed in the school by the agent and the police, he does not seem to be able to hold them there, many escapes being made by pupils while I was there; I think in all 40 girls and boys ran away. It does not seem as though it should be necessary for a representative of the Department to be obliged to go there and tell him that the children are not properly clothed. In a communication I sent you a few days ago, inclosing a copy of an order to the agent to transfer the matron, I explained to you the way they were clothed. Lengthy comments are not necessary. If this school is to be brought to any reasonable degree of success the management must be changed. I think likely Nardin could successfully fill a position of principal teacher, but he has not the executive and business ability to fill the office of superintendent.

Mr. Chairman, in the face of a report of that character this man was advanced in the service. If there are on file in the Indian Office any reports which exonerate this superintendent they certainly could have been found as readily as these reports. I would like to adopt the suggestion of my colleague, but I believe that, in the face of these reports, this House should take the responsibility now of saying whether this man shall remain in the service or whether he shall not. If there is any official document to exonerate him from responsibility for the acts charged here it should be produced here, and in the absence of it we are justified in assuming that it does not exist. While I regret that I can not adopt the suggestion of my colleague at this time, because such an investigation could not be had until this bill would be enacted into law, I propose to ask this House to vote upon the amendment and to assume the responsibility for this man remaining in the service.

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Chairman, I confess to considerable surprise at the last statement of my colleague on the committee [Mr. FITZGERALD], who has just taken his seat, insisting, in the face of the proposition made by the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs for a fair investigation of this matter, that this Committee of the Whole, in the hubbub of this debate—not one in a dozen members having listened to the gentleman; not one in a dozen having heard a word of what he said; not one in a dozen having the remotest idea of what he was talking about—should pass a proposition blackening the character of Mr. Narden, condemning him in the name of the American Congress. I say it does not comport with the usual fairness and candor and generosity of the gentleman.

Mr. Chairman, I am not here to defend Mr. Narden. I know nothing about the truth of any of these charges; but I know as much about the matter as the gentleman who has just taken his seat. We know that W. J. McConnell, who was an Indian inspector, has made these charges against this particular school superintendent. It further appears from the statement of the gentleman that Mr. McConnell is no longer in the Indian Service and that Mr. Narden still remains there. Now, with these two facts——

Mr. FITZGERALD. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. LACEY. Certainly, any question.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Allow me to say it also appears from the statement of the Commissioner that three other employees whose affidavits and statements I read are still in the service.

Mr. LACEY. No doubt.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Does not the gentleman think that if there were reports exonerating this superintendent they could have been found by this time in the Department?

Mr. LACEY. Could have been found! The gentleman sprung upon the House yesterday an anonymous document—a document that was——

Mr. FITZGERALD. An official document.

Mr. LACEY. A document that was laid upon his desk by some unknown person; and he permitted himself to be used as the mouthpiece to discharge in this House this anonymous accusation against a public officer.

Mr. GREEN of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman allow me a moment?

Mr. LACEY. I can not yield now. I am answering the gentleman from New York.

The gentleman having made that charge, and his attention having been called to the fact that it was an unsigned document, the matter was laid over by unanimous consent until this morning. The Indian Commissioner was called upon. He promised to send the papers here at quarter before 12 o'clock to-day. He did so. At twenty minutes before 1 o'clock the gentleman from New York, without any examination, without awaiting the examination proposed by the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, asks this House ex parte, without a hearing, and when the House is in Committee of the Whole—in a capacity utterly unfitted for judicial consideration of anything—that it should pass upon and blacken the character of a man whom he does not know, of whom he never heard until yesterday, when this document was laid upon his desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. LACEY. I ask unanimous consent to occupy five minutes longer.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. LACEY. Now, Mr. Chairman, the proposition made by the chairman of the committee [Mr. SHERMAN] is a just one. Here are grave charges. They are charges which can not be lightly thrown aside. They are charges that this House is in no condition in this hurried way to act upon. Let this matter go to the committee for an investigation. In that way both sides can be heard. In that way we can learn why it is that McConnell went out of the service and Narden stayed in. We may find that these charges are fictitious, that they are false, that they are unfounded. I do not say that they are. But the fact that the Department dropped from the service the man who made them and retained in the service the man against whom the charges are made is at least worthy of consideration until we have had full information.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Will the gentleman allow me a moment?

Mr. LACEY. Certainly.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I have taken no part in this debate. I have had nothing to do with this matter. I have not investigated it. But in view of the charges made here yesterday afternoon, all of which have been printed in the RECORD this morning, could not the Commissioner of Indian Affairs have told us what the real facts are and why these men are in the service? Why do we need an investigating committee to find out those facts?

Mr. LACEY. I will explain to the gentleman. Inspectors are not agents of the Indian Commissioner; they do not report to him; they are the right-hand men of the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Why has he not been heard from?

Mr. LACEY. He has not been called upon; he has made no report. The Commissioner of Indian Affairs has been called upon.

Now, I am quite sure my friend from Tennessee is too just a man to want to vote upon a proposition of this kind in this hurried way. Would the gentleman, in the face of this slight testimony which has been furnished on one side only—strong, perhaps, as a statement on one side, but which has evidently been explained upon the other to the satisfaction of the Interior Department—be willing to have this House act in this way upon it?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The point I was making was that if the Secretary of the Interior was familiar with the facts he has had twelve, fifteen, twenty hours now to have given us those facts.

Mr. LACEY. The Secretary of the Interior had no notice of this matter. His attention was called to it this forenoon.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Why is it that he did not pay attention to the debate in this House yesterday?

Mr. LACEY. There are many things in the debates of this House that the great American people never hear of.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Did the gentleman from New York [Mr. SHERMAN] not state that he had been telephoning to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, an officer of this Interior Department? He certainly had knowledge of what was going on.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Will the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LACEY] permit a question?

Mr. LACEY. Yes.

Mr. FITZGERALD. The gentleman called at the Interior Department this morning, did he not?

Mr. LACEY. I did.

Mr. FITZGERALD. You were shown these reports which I have?

Mr. LACEY. I was.

Mr. FITZGERALD, They were produced?

Mr. LACEY. They were.

Mr. FITZGERALD. They were not able to produce any other reports?

Mr. LACEY. I did not ask for any. The Secretary informed me that the matter had been investigated and that Mr. McConnell had not been reappointed. I was on my way to a committee meeting, and I only stopped for a moment.

Mr. GREEN of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. LACEY. I am not ready to convict a man on five minutes'

notice. I am more charitable than my friend from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD]. I do not want to blacken the character of any man on the floor of this House without a hearing. I am not here to defend him, but I say that he is entitled to a fair hearing, and that it is an outrage on decency and justice for anyone on the floor of this House to read, in the nature of an indictment, an unsigned document containing a charge made by a discharged official, and then ask this House upon that, without a hearing, during the discussion of this appropriation bill, to withdraw the appropriation for a great Indian school because this man has not been discharged.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. I would ask the gentleman how this matter can be examined?

Mr. LACEY. By the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. What assurance have we that that will ever be done?

Mr. LACEY. What assurance do we need any further than that Congress directs it to be done?

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. How can we get Congress to do that?

Mr. LACEY. The gentleman offers a proposition appointing a committee to do it.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. Might not that go into a pigeonhole, like other things brought up in the House?

Mr. LACEY. I take that inquiry of the gentleman for what it is worth.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. The gentleman knows that that is what has been done with all of the requests for investigation that have been introduced into this House in this Congress; they are in a pigeonhole to-day.

Mr. LACEY. The gentleman's remedy, then, is, if anyone is charged with a crime for the House of Representatives to convict him without a hearing.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. What is your suggestion for a remedy?

Mr. LACEY. My suggestion is to have this investigated, to have the records on both sides investigated.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. But it will not be done.

Mr. LACEY. When the gentleman says that, he simply does not do himself or his colleagues on the floor of the House sufficient credit.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. I happen to know of others asking for investigation in the various things that occur in this Government, and they are simply thrust into the pigeonholes of the desk in some committee, and the gentleman from Iowa knows it.

Mr. LACEY. I know nothing of the sort.

Mr. GREEN of Pennsylvania. The gentleman expressed great surprise that there was only one of these pamphlets, while orders were given to the document room to suppress that document.

Mr. LACEY. The document ought never to have been published in that form. No unsigned document attacking the character of an individual ought to disgrace the records of the Congress of the United States.

Mr. GREEN of Pennsylvania. I would like to ask who has the right in this House to suppress documents?

Mr. LACEY. It was an outrage to print that document without the signature of Mr. McConnell, and to lay it upon the desk of a member of this House.

Mr. GREEN of Pennsylvania. I think that has been going on before.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SHERMAN. The charges here presented and about which we have been talking for an hour or two are most serious. Nobody who is fair-minded, it seems to me, can deny that fact. Upon their face they reflect upon the Indian Service. There is no denying that fact, but from everything that we have before us now it is ex parte. There are few questions that have ever come under my observation that have not two sides.

I do not know what the other side of this question is, and I want to know it. The amendment offered by my colleague from New York will cure no defects. It simply provides that the pay of a superintendent at a particular school be withheld while the present superintendent is there, and this law does not go into effect until the 1st of next July. If there is in the service a superintendent who is knowingly, or even carelessly, permitting debauchery to occur at his school, he ought not to be in the service until the 1st of July.

If my colleague will agree with me, I would say to him that I will offer as a separate resolution in the House, as soon as this bill is disposed of, the proposition which a while ago I suggested to him I would offer as an amendment to the bill. I shall offer it broadened in its scope, so that the committee can have the power to inquire what knowledge any Government official had of these transactions or kindred ones, and what action they took thereon, and how and why this superintendent was transferred to the other school.

Mr. LITTLE. Will the gentleman yield for a moment?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes.

Mr. LITTLE. I should like the investigation to be broad enough to ascertain why Superintendent McConnell is now out of the service.

Mr. SHERMAN. I am entirely willing that the resolution should cover that ground also.

Mr. LITTLE. If he made a report which was justified by the facts he had in his possession, and was withdrawn from the service on that account, it is a greater outrage than the other.

Mr. SHERMAN. The gentleman from Arkansas, of course, is correct. My understanding is that Mr. McConnell was not dismissed from the service, but that his term expired.

Mr. LITTLE. I know nothing about that.

Mr. SHERMAN. But I agree with the gentleman. It would appear here now from what we have before us that the man against whom the charges were made had been promoted and the official making the charges is no longer in the service. That is a peculiar condition of affairs. There must be some explanation of it, and that explanation I desire to get.

Mr. CANNON. Will the gentleman allow me?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes.

Mr. CANNON. For the first time I have seen and glanced through the document that the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] has quoted here. As I glanced over it I did so with surprise, because, if it be a document that affects the character of somebody in the public service, it is so vague, so contradictory that it seems to me, whatever the facts may be, a man ought to have paused long before he put it in the shape of a document, after full investigation, and longer before he brings it before the House as fact, as something that is reliable. I trust that the gentleman from New York [Mr. SHERMAN] will offer his resolution.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Will the gentleman permit me?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. SHERMAN] has expired.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I should like to ask the gentleman from Illinois a question.

Mr. CANNON. I have not the floor.

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask unanimous consent that my time may be extended five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that his time be extended five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SHERMAN. Now, I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Does the gentleman from Illinois refer to these official reports that are on file now in the Department or does he refer to the Senate document?

Mr. CANNON. I refer to the Senate document upon its face; contradictory, loose in structure, with scandalous matters in it, and if it had been presented to me to affect my judgment, let alone to use in the House, I should have said, "It is not satisfactory;" and upon the face of it, contradictory as it is, I would not make a scandal, I would not even in my own mind condemn a dog upon it without investigation and knowledge. [Applause.]

Mr. FITZGERALD. Does the gentleman know that on file with that report were the affidavits of three employees of the service sustaining it, which employees are to-day in the Indian service.

Mr. CANNON. I am speaking of what is on the face of the document.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I have produced here what is on file in the Department to substantiate it.

Mr. CANNON. Oh!

Mr. FITZGERALD. And nothing has been produced from the Department which disproves the truth of the allegation.

Mr. CANNON. I am speaking of the document. Whatever the facts may be, the statements upon that document ought not, in my judgment, without further inquiry, to have been spread upon the official records of Congress. That is all I desire to say.

Mr. SHERMAN. May I ask my colleague from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] if, in view of my statement that I will offer this resolution of inquiry, he desires to press his amendment?

Mr. FITZGERALD. In view of the fact that this resolution will be offered in the House providing for an immediate investigation, I will withdraw the pending amendment.

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask the Clerk to read.

Mr. SIMS. I should like to ask the gentleman if that will not be subject to a point of order?

Mr. SHERMAN. I am sure that the gentlaman is familiar with the rule as to resolutions of inquiry offered in the House; but I propose to ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

Mr. KLEBERG. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to address the committee for five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to address the committee for five minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. KLEBERG. Mr. Chairman, I do not rise to make a defense of the Germans, either on this side or the other side of the Atlantic, or in any other part of the habitable globe. They need no defense, as history has assigned them the most prominent part in modern civilization. A race which, like the Greeks and the Romans in ancient times, has in mediæval and modern times contributed more to civilization than any other; a race which has adorned history with a Charlemagne, a Frederick the Great, a Blucher, a Moltke and a Bismarck, a Lessing, Goethe, Schiller, and Heine, a Humboldt, Kant, Hegel, and Haeckel, a Mozart, Mendelssohn, and Wagner, and has won high if not first honors both in war and peace, and has laid the foundation to personal, civil, and religious liberty, needs no defense at the hands of anyone, as that would be a work of supererogation.

But I want to emphasize the fact that this is not a time to haggle and quibble about trifles in the reception of the accredited representative of Germany. He will soon reach our shores, and whatever may have been done and said which should have been left undone or unsaid, it now behooves this great nation to extend to him and the great nation which he represents a hearty welcome and a true American hospitality. Let us not attempt at this time at least to make a political question of this historic event, but let us, as one people, in the light of our free institutions, and mindful of the friendly polity due by one great nation to another, cement the good relations which exist and, I trust, may continue to exist between Germany and the United States. [Applause.]

The Clerk read as follows:

For support and education of 300 pupils at the Indian school, Riverside, Cal., $50,100; for additional compensation for superintendent of Perris school, performing duties as superintendent of this school, $300; for new buildings, to increase the efficiency of the plant, $25,800; for industrial-farm buildings, $15,000; for general repairs and minor improvements, $5,000; in all, $96,200.

Mr. DARRAGH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

I desire to say, Mr. Chairman, that I was surprised, and I believe the House was surprised, at the charges made by the gentleman from New York against Superintendent Nardin of the Mount Pleasant, Mich., Indian school, an official of the United States Government who is serving in the eleventh district of Michigan, which district I have the honor to represent on the floor of this House. I am not specially interested in the gentleman against whom this attack has been made. I am only interested in him as I would be in any man whom I believe to be unjustly charged with neglect of duty, charged with criminal negligence upon the ex parte evidence of a discharged and discredited man, a man who seeks thus to get even with the Secretary of the Interior, who seeks revenge for the loss of his official position.

I am, however, interested in the welfare and in the good name of the school over which Superintendent Nardin presides. I am also interested to the extent that I visited this morning the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to inquire why a man charged as Mr. Nardin, the superintendent of the Indian school at Mount Pleasant, was charged yesterday by the gentleman from New York with incompetency, with fostering immorality, was sent into my district, into a community of educated and cultivated people, to preside over that school, if there was any just foundation for the charges brought against him. I was also interested in a general way in the efficient service of the Indian Department.

I was informed by the Commissioner, or rather by the gentleman to whom he referred me for the information, that Mr. Nardin, prior to the report of Mr. McConnell, had never had an adverse report made against him. I was also informed that Mr. Nardin, during his present service at Mount Pleasant, had a most excellent record with the Department. I have twice visited Mr. Nardin and his school, and investigated the school myself. The people of that town are thoroughly satisfied that it is a well-managed school; that Mr. Nardin himself is a creditable superintendent, a scholarly man, and a Christian gentleman; that much is admitted by Mr. McConnell, whose report the gentleman from New York purported to have read. This man should not, without a hearing, be branded as a disreputable character. He does not shrink from a thorough investigation of the charge against him. In this connection I beg to read and make a part of my remarks a telegram received by me in response to one sent him, as follows:

MOUNT PLEASANT, MICH., February 20, 1902.

A. D. DARRAGH,
Representative, Washington, D. C.:

I was in charge of the Wind River School as superintendent under Captain Nickerson, agent of Shoshone Reservation. I challenge full investigation of my conduct there, and no attempts at immorality here. Precautions ample.

That there is no immorality in the Mount Pleasant Indian School I know from the consensus of opinion of the entire city in which the school is located; I know it from the general repute, and I know it from personal investigation, and no whisper of the character represented in the reports which have been read here was ever heard in that entire community relative to the school at Mount Pleasant. Reading further his telegram, he says:

No Indian girl at Shoshone will charge me with improper conduct or toleration of such on their part.

E. C. NARDIN.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I make these remarks because I believe this gentleman has been unjustly charged. If he has been negligent, criminally negligent—if he is either, I am not here to defend him. I will protect no man who is guilty of charges such as are brought against this man; but I do claim that he ought not to be condemned without a hearing, and a hearing should be accorded to him since such is his desire. [Loud applause.]

The Clerk read as follows:

For support and education of 550 pupils at the Indian school, Salem, Oreg., $91,830; for pay of superintendent at said school, $1,800; for improvements to sewerage, $6,000; for general repairs and improvements, $5,000; in all, $104,850.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to correct the computation.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 54, line 25, strike out "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof "fifty;" on page 55, line 4, strike out "eight" and insert in lieu thereof "six."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For support and education of 150 pupils at the Indian school at Truxton Canyon, Ariz., $25,050; pay of superintendent, $1,500; general improvements, $4,000; in all, $30,550.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

After line 24, page 56, insert:
"For support and education of 250 pupils in the Puyallup Indian School, at Tacoma, Wash., $25,050; for new buildings and improvements, $20,000; for repairs, $2,000; in all, $47,550."

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I raise the point of order against that amendment.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I hope the gentlemen will reserve his point of order.

Mr. SHERMAN. I will reserve the point of order to give the gentleman from Washington an opportunity to explain the amendment.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I realize that this amendment is subject to a point of order, as far as that is concerned. I believe that there is one other provision in the bill relating to the establishment of these schools that is also subject to a point of order, but I have not seen fit to make it, for I do not think it ought to be made.

I believe the circumstances connected with this school fully warrant and justify an appropriation of this character in the interests of the Government. There are in the State of Washington, according to the statistics furnished by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, over 13,000 Indians. The school at Tacoma is located so that it is probably more easily reached from all points of the State than any other point we have. A great many of these Indians live on the west side of the mountain, and communication by rail and water is of the very best. Connection with all eastern points is also direct. We ask nothing in this appropriation for this school in the way of paying the expenses of the transportation of the Indian pupils to this school. This is a great saving to the Government, as will be seen by referring to the appropriations in this bill for such purposes.

I listened with a great deal of interest yesterday to the debate in relation to the education of Indians in these Indian schools, especially in those of the East, and its effect upon the Indians when they go back to their tribes after having spent three or four years surrounded by the blessings of civilization which they have in the schools in the East.

I sympathize very much with the objection made to this manner of educating these pupils, but these objections would not apply to this school, if established. Upon the Puyallup Reservation the pupils would be surrounded by their own people, as well as by the influences of civilization. They would be educated and grow up under the influence of refinement and culture, just as in the East, tempered and strengthened by the home life of the Indians themselves. This school is located within about two miles of the city of Tacoma; materials and everything necessary in building up a fine school can be secured by the Government at the very lowest possible expense.

Buildings can be constructed and repaired by the Government at the very lowest cost. All classes of supplies can be secured there at the very lowest cost to the Government and the Indians, and it seems to me it is for the interest of the Government itself that the children of the 13,000 Indians of the State of Washington should have a school among their own people, as well as to be surrounded by the civilization of our people, so that when they get through the school and go back to their homes their surroundings will not be of so different a character from what they have been used to as to discourage them and almost force them into the old walks of life.

I can sympathize, gentlemen, with the pupil who has spent three or four years in the civilization of our Eastern schools and then goes back to his tribe and lives in a tepee, and in the squalor and the dirt with which he is likely to be surrounded. It can not result in anything else except degradation and the loss of four years that he has spent in civilization among people of refinement. He is likely to sink lower than he would if he had not attended the school. You need not fear the surroundings. The refinement and culture of the people of Tacoma are inferior to none in the East. They have the further advantage that they know the Indian. They know how to treat him and they are in most hearty sympathy with all practical attempts to advance him.

If you should establish this school there, we have the Indian farms, we have the Indian community, we have Indians who are to-day generally educated and have adopted the habits of civilized people, have adopted the dress of civilized people, and the influences that surround these Indian pupils will not leave them when they leave the schools, but continue with them and tend to purify, elevate, and make them citizens in fact and spirit as well as in name. Instead of retrograding, they will advance. They will rise and not fall, and in their rising they will bring their associates with them.

It seems to me that, considering all the circumstances there, considering all the conveniences, considering the cheapness of material, the cheapness and facility of transportation, it is for the interest of the Government and the solid advancement of the Indians that we should have this school established in the State of Washington. I sincerely hope that the chairman of this committee will allow this appropriation to go in. Another school is provided for in the bill, subject to a point of order. I do not believe the point of order ought to be made. I believe the provision should be adopted, and I trust most sincerely that the chairman of this committee will allow this amendment to go in and not insist on his point of order.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, there are about 12,000 Indians in the State of Washington. They now have 22 schools. Six are boarding schools. I think the facilities are ample for all the school children. Certainly I can not consistently, I think, with my duties as chairman of the committee, withdraw the point of order in this case. The gentleman should have presented his proposition before the committee. He says there are other provisions in the bill subject to a point of order. He is right; I called attention to many of them when I first presented the bill, but all of these provisions were considered by the committee and inserted in the bill. This proposition is a provision never considered by the Committee on Indian Affairs, and I must insist on the point of order.

Mr. JONES of Washington. If the gentleman will permit me. He says that this should have been brought before the committee. That is probably correct. I assumed that this had been done until the statement of the chairman was made.

Mr. SHERMAN. I insist on my point of order, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained.

The Clerk read as follows:

That all expenditure of money appropriated for school purposes in this act shall be at all times under the supervision and direction of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and in all respects in conformity with such conditions, rules, and regulations as to the conduct and methods of instruction and expenditure of money as may be from time to time prescribed by him, subject to the supervision of the Secretary of the Interior; and his action in these respects shall be conclusive and not subject to review by any other executive officer: Provided, That not more than $167 shall be expended for the annual support and education of any one pupil in any school herein specifically provided for, except when, by reason of epidemic, accident, or other sufficient cause, the attendance is so reduced that a larger expenditure is absolutely necessary for the efficient operation of the school affected, when the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, may allow a larger per capita expenditure, such expenditure to continue only so long as the said necessity therefor shall exist: Provided further, That the total amount appropriated for the support of such school shall not be exceeded: Provided further, That the number of pupils in any school entitled to the per capita allowance hereby provided for shall be determined by taking the average enrollment for the entire fiscal year and not any fractional part thereof.

Mr. CANNON. I raise a point of order on the following provision following "Secretary of the Interior," in line 17 of the paragraph just read:

And his action in these respects shall be conclusive and not subject to review by any other executive officer.

I make the point that this provision changes existing law. The law is that all expenditures of public money made everywhere shall be settled by the auditing offices of the Treasury Department. There has been only one exception to this rule, so far as I know, in the public service, and that has had relation to the House of Representatives and the Senate of the United States. In the urgent deficiency bill, recently passed, Congress showed its exceeding good sense in changing the law as regards this exception, and bringing the lawmakers of the Republic under the same rules which apply to other officials. The change of law proposed in the words I have just read would render unnecessary, improper, impossible, the auditing of these accounts by the Treasury Department. I therefore make the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair regards the point of order as well taken, and it is therefore sustained.

The Clerk read as follows;

SEC. 7. That the adult heirs of any deceased Indian to whom a trust or other patent containing restrictions upon alienation has been or shall be issued for lands allotted to him may sell and convey the lands inherited from such decedent, and if there be both adult and minor heirs, then the minor heirs may join in such sale and conveyance by a guardian duly appointed by the proper court upon the order of such court, made upon petition filed by the guardian, but all such conveyances shall be subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, and when so approved shall convey a full title to the purchaser, the same as if a final patent without restriction upon the alienation had been issued to the allottee. And when, pursuant to any treaty or agreement with an Indian tribe, or pursuant to any act of Congress relating to Indian allotments, land has been or shall be allotted to a white person without Indian blood who is a citizen of the United States, final patent shall be issued to such white allottee without awaiting the expiration of the usual trust period, and he shall thereupon be authorized to sell or dispose of the land so allotted without restriction. All allotted land so alienated by the heirs of an Indian allottee and all land so patented to a white allottee shall thereupon be subject to taxation under the laws of the State or Territory where the same is situate.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I raise a point of order on this section. A part of the section I have no objection to—that part providing "that the adult heirs of any deceased Indian to whom a trust or other patent containing restrictions upon alienation has been or shall be issued," etc., down to the conclusion of the first sentence. I have no objection to this first sentence of the section, but the second sentence I do object to.

Mr. SHERMAN. If the gentleman has no objection to a part of the section, might he not raise his point of order against simply that part to which he objects and which he desires to strike out, as to which I am ready to concede the point of order?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Will the gentleman concede the point of order as to the sentence following what I have just read?

Mr. SHERMAN. Certainly.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Then I raise a point of order against that part of the section, being after the word "allottee," in line 24, down to the word "restriction," at the end of the sentence.

Mr. SHERMAN. I concede that the point of order is well taken. There is no question about that.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. LITTLE. Before we pass this section there is one point about which I would like to have some information. The matter to which I refer is the sale of the allotments or inheritances provided for here. I do think if they constitute the home of a family they ought not to be sold during the widowhood of the mother or the minority of any child or children. I do not know the conditions affecting these particular tribes. I suppose, however, that if there is a family the home would be upon the homestead of the father.

Mr. CURTIS. The father or the mother; it might be either.

Mr. LITTLE. I presume there would be but one family home. Now, I very much doubt the propriety of selling the home——

Mr. CURTIS. If the gentleman desires to offer an amendment that this provision shall not apply to a homestead, I have no objection.

Mr. LITTLE. I think it would be safe to insert such a provision. I have not the amendment prepared, but I ask the Clerk to take it down and read it.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, That the sale herein provided for shall not apply to the family homestead during the life of the father or the mother or the minority of any child or children.

Mr. CURTIS. I see no objection to that amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ROBINSON of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, I do not desire to make any opposition to this section, but I would like to be heard in regard to another matter, in view of the fact that the Indian Committee has decided to make a partial examination concerning certain Indian affairs.

Mr. SHERMAN. I am going to insist on the rules being observed, so far as this matter is concerned. When we have reached the end of the bill, if the gentleman desires to talk about another subject I shall not object.

Mr. ROBINSON of Nebraska. All right.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 8. That the judge for the Indian Territory, appointed under the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, and for other purposes," shall reside at Muscogee, and hold terms of court at all places of holding court within the boundaries of the Creek country and the Seminole country, and court shall be held at the places now provided by law in the northern district of the Indian Territory and at the towns of Okmulgee, in the Creek country, and the town of Salisaw, in the Cherokee country.

Mr. LITTLE. I desire to offer an amendment correcting the spelling of the word Sallisaw. In the bill it is spelled with only one "l;" it should be S-a-l-l-i-s-a-w.

Without objection the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 9. That rations shall not be withheld from any Indians, where provided by treaty, by reason only of attendance at any Government school.

Mr. SHERMAN. I offer an amendment, which I ask the Clerk to read. The amendment places the section in the words that it should have been printed in. It was an error as printed.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "any," in line 25, page 62, insert "other than a."

Mr. HENRY C. SMITH. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order against that section.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman reserve a point of order against the amendment?

Mr. SHERMAN. I think the gentleman means against the section after it is amended.

Mr. CANNON. The gentleman will have to reserve his point of order. I want to say, whatever his point of order may be, it must be made before the section is amended, unless the amendment is to correct the text and by unanimous consent stands as the committee intended to have it.

Mr. SHERMAN. It is to correct the text. It was erroneously printed. I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be agreed to, and then the gentleman [Mr. HENRY C. SMITH] has the floor to raise his point of order, if he desires.

Mr. HENRY C. SMITH. Reserving the point of order, I should like to inquire what the purpose of the amendment is.

Mr. SHERMAN. The provision without the amendment is existing law, and the purpose of the amendment is to make it possible to give the ration to children at schools other than Government schools. Under existing law you can not give the ration to children in a Government school, any school.

Mr. HENRY C. SMITH. Then the amendment will change existing law?

Mr. SHERMAN. There is no question about that.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the formal amendment will be agreed to.

There was no objection.

Mr. HENRY C. SMITH. Now, I make the point of order against the section that it is in violation of existing law, and I desire to be heard upon that.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman desire to be heard upon the point of order?

Mr. LACEY. The gentleman from New York [Mr. SHERMAN] concedes that it changes existing law.

Mr. HENRY C. SMITH. Unless it is admitted to be well taken.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order. It is well taken.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I wish to ask the gentleman [Mr. HENRY C. SMITH] if he understands that this provision was put in here because a construction is placed upon the law which was never intended to affect these rations? The Commissioner of Indian Affairs came before the committee and expressed the hope that some such provision would be put in. These schools not controlled by the Government are doing a great work in the education of these Indians. Somebody in the Department has construed a law preventing the appropriation of money for schools not controlled by the Government to apply to rations provided for by treaty. This amendment only provides that where an Indian is entitled under a treaty to rations that the Department shall not withhold those rations because he attends some school that is not controlled by the Government.

Mr. HENRY C. SMITH. I understand that in the Fifty-fourth Congress, and in the treaty itself, the status of the schools and the status of the Indians were fixed, and the policy of this Government was twice declared by Congress upon that proposition, and it ought not to be departed from unless we know what the situation is.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair wishes to call the attention of the gentlemen to the fact that the debate is entirely informal.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may make his statement.

Mr. HENRY C. SMITH. Do I understand that the point of order is sustained?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Will the gentleman permit me to make a statement?

Mr. HENRY C. SMITH. No, sir; I decline to yield.

Mr. ROBINSON of Nebraska. I ask unanimous consent to be permitted to be heard for five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska asks unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes. Is there any objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The gentleman may proceed.

Mr. ROBINSON of Nebraska. I want to speak, Mr. Chairman, at this time upon the matter of the Winnebago Indian lands at the Winnebago Agency in the State of Nebraska, as to how that agency is being carried on and conducted. Twenty years ago it was the object of the law to assign to these Indians their lands to be held by them in severalty, with a view that after twenty-five years of holding the land they would then be able to conduct their own affairs and manage their own business. Pending these twenty years the Winnebago Indians, together with the Omaha tribe, have been given the right to vote and in every other respect have been given all the political rights of a citizen.

After twenty years, Mr. Chairman, with only five years remaining within which time the Indians of that tribe will be given full control of their land, with the right to sell, dispose of, and manage the same, there has grown up a system which is a disgrace to this Government and its manner of carrying on its affairs with the Indians. The Indian is sent off to school, is educated at the expense of the Government, brought back to his tribe, and yet, under the system in force in the Omaha and Winnebago Agency, he can not lease one acre of his own land, with all his education.

The system which has grown up requiring what are known as middlemen to stand between the rights of the Indians and this Government has resulted as follows: These middlemen form together and arrange to lease the Indians' lands in tracts of from 1,000 to 15,000 acres. The Indian can not bring a white man to rent his land, and take him to the agent and say: "I desire this man as my renter." He can do business in no particular at all, although he is allowed the full right to vote. These middlemen rent this land in the first instance and give security for the payment of the rent, paying from 50 cents to a dollar per acre, and during the past year much of this land realized to them $5 per acre. The land I speak of is as good land as any in the whole State of Nebraska. It lies within 15 miles of Sioux City, Iowa, on the Missouri bottoms, and there is no fairer land for agricultural purposes.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Who rents this land?

Mr. ROBINSON of Nebraska. Every lease must be approved by the Indian agent. The Indian agent declines to approve any lease offered by the Indian himself, claiming that the number of leases is so large that he can not possibly take up his time in doing that. Therefore he insists that the land shall be leased in large tracts or bodies, so that the Indian is unable to do any business, so far as his own land is concerned, and he is approaching the end of the twenty-five years without anything saved from his land. That land is worth $50 an acre, and will bring from $3 to $5 per acre per year in the way of rents; yet the Indian gets the poor pittance of 50 cents to $1 per acre per year, while the middleman who leases them in large tracts obtains the balance of the benefits.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Has this land been allotted to the Indians?

Mr. ROBINSON of Nebraska. This land has been allotted to the Indians.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Are these Indians citizens of the State?

Mr. ROBINSON of Nebraska. They are citizens of the State.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Then why is it that they can not control their own individual allotments of land?

Mr. ROBINSON of Nebraska. They are not allowed that right under the existing law.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Under the existing law?

Mr. ROBINSON of Nebraska. They can not sell their own lands yet. They are the same as wards of the Government, and they will be in that condition until the end of the twenty-five years. They can not lease or sell their lands except as approved by the Indian agent who is stationed at that place.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. And I understand you to state that the Indian agent refuses to rent it for what it will bring, but instead of renting it for $2.50 an acre or more, he puts it down to 50 cents.

Mr. ROBINSON of Nebraska. He refuses to allow the Indian to select his own tenant. He insists that the land shall be rented only through these middlemen, in large tracts, and he can use any kind of favoritism that he desires in regard to the approval of the lease; so that the business is put into the hands of men who can handle large tracts of land and who have a stand-in with the agent. They lease this land at a low price, and then they sublease it to the white men. The Indian himself can not select the man to whom he shall rent the land, even if he himself does not desire to occupy it, which he does not. He can not select a man, make a bargain with him, bring him to the agent, and say: "I desire to make a lease of my land to this man."

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. That is only in harmony with the other actions of the Interior Department with reference to Indian affairs.

Mr. SMITH of Kentucky. It is an outrageous condition.

Mr. ROBINSON of Nebraska. I submit that the Winnebago Indians and the Omaha Indians deserve something better at the hands of the Government than this treatment in the way of training them to conduct their own affairs and manage their own business. I say that it should be the duty of the Indian Department to ascertain which of these Indians are able to do business among those that we have educated, and drilled, and had experience with, and take them out from under the control of the agent.

I make no accusation against the Indian Commissioner in this case; but I say it is his duty to allow such of the Indians as are able to take care of their own lands and to make their own arrangements with reference to them to do so. I am not saying but what there are some Indians who would occasionally happen upon a bad man to whom to lease their land. We are not always lucky ourselves, so far as that is concerned, in our business dealings; but I do say, if you are going to develop their business capacity at all, now is the time to say which of them are able to do business for themselves, and allow them to go ahead and transact their own business.

Careful investigation would show any Indians of these two tribes who, on account of the lack of education, experience, or training, may still be unable to transact their own business affairs. In such case a system should be inaugurated which would protect their rights and give them the full rental value of their lands, and not leave them, as they are now, the victims of a system of robbery which is degrading to them and is piling up wealth in the hands of the men who control this system, and who, by pulling with the Indian agent at that place, can keep the Indian owner of the valuable land a pauper while they grow wealthy from this systematic practice of oppression and robbery.

Mr. SHERMAN. I move that the committee do now rise and report the bill with the amendments to the House with the recommendation that it do pass as amended.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. MONDELL, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 11353, the Indian appropriation bill, and had directed him to report the same back to the House with sundry amendments, and with the recommendation that as amended the bill do pass.

The SPEAKER. Is a separate vote demanded upon any amendment? If not, the Chair will submit the amendments to the House in gross.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. SHERMAN, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

COMMITTEE OF INVESTIGATION.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Indian Committee of the House, through a subcommittee thereof, investigate the entire subject of the conduct of Superintendent Nardin while in charge of the Shoshone school and any of his subordinates, the condition then and now existing there, and the conduct of students then and now there; what knowledge any Government official had of the alleged immorality there, what action they took thereon, and how and why Superintendent Nardin was transferred, and when and why former Inspector McConnell was separated from the service; and for that purpose they are authorized to send for persons and papers and to administer oaths, and the expenses thereof shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. LACEY. I would like to inquire of my colleague whether he thinks the resolution ought to be broad enough to inquire into what this man is doing now, because it is a question of retaining an unfit, bad man in the service? That is the gravamen of the charge.

Mr. SHERMAN. That perhaps is right.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The question was taken, and the resolution was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. GRAFF. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House for the consideration of bills on the Private Calendar.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois, chairman of the Committee on Claims, moves that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House for the consideration of bills on the Private Calendar, in pursuance of the order made in respect thereto.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House, Mr. OLMSTED in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole House for the consideration of bills upon the Private Calendar in pursuance of the rule, and the Clerk will report the first bill.

DANIEL CHERRY.

The first business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 621) for the relief of Daniel Cherry.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Solicitor of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to convey, in the name of the United States, to Daniel Cherry, of Henry County, Ala., all right, title, and interest that the United States has in or to the property formerly belonging to said Daniel Cherry, described as follows: One house and lot situated in the town of Dothan, Ala., and bounded on the north by Washington street, on the east by H. V. Lee's lot, on the south by lot owned by Dave Walden, and on the west by lot owned by B. M. Stripling, containing 1¼ acres, more or less, being fractional part of the northeast quarter of the southeast quarter of section 24, township 3, and range 26, in the county of Henry, State of Alabama, the said property being the same that was levied on, sold, and conveyed to the United States in satisfaction of a certain judgment recovered by the United States in the United States circuit court for the middle district of Alabama in a suit on the forfeited bail bond of said Daniel Cherry, the said Cherry having afterwards appeared and was tried and acquitted on the charge made in the case in which said bail bond was given: Provided, That before such deed is delivered by the Solicitor of the Treasury the sum of $50.30 shall be paid over to the Secretary of the Treasury to cover the cost of such forfeiture proceedings in the United States circuit court for the middle district of Alabama.

Mr. GRAFF. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. OTEY] who reported the bill.

Mr. OTEY. Mr. Chairman, I just ask to have the report read. I think that is all I will say with reference to the matter for the present.

The report (by Mr. OTEY) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Claims have had under consideration House bill 8934, and beg leave to recommend that it do pass.

This bill was unanimously reported at the last session of Congress. It was referred to the Department of Justice by Hon. H. S. BOUTELL, the chairman of the subcommittee to which it had been previously referred, which letter is appended, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
OFFICE OF THE SOLICITOR OF THE TREASURY,
Washington, D. C., May 4, 1900.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of 30th ultimo, transmitting a copy of a bill (H. R. 8934) authorizing and directing the Solicitor of the Treasury to convey to one Daniel Cherry certain property in the town of Dothan, Ala., which was levied on, sold, and conveyed to the United States in satisfaction of a judgment recovered by the United States in a suit on forfeited recognizance of said Cherry.

In anticipation of this call for information I wrote to the United States attorney at Montgomery, Ala., for a statement of the facts in the case, and under date of February 23 last that officer reported as follows:

"On November 23, 1892, a judgment was taken against one Daniel Cherry on a forfeited recognizance in case No. 5458 in the circuit court of the United States sitting at Montgomery, Ala.; that on May 9, 1893, the original case against him was continued; that May 19, 1893, the judgment on the forfeiture was made final against said Cherry, and that on November 9, 1894, said Cherry was acquitted."

The United States attorney further stated that the cost amounted to $50.30, or $5 more than the amount of costs as stated in the bill.

If, as appears from the United States attorney's report, Daniel Cherry was subsequently tried and acquitted of the charge against him, I can see no reason why he should not be granted the relief contemplated by the bill to which you call my attention. I think, however, that the true amount of the costs incurred in the case ($50.30) should be inserted in the bill; and I also note that the name "Walding" in line 11, page 1, of the bill is probably erroneous. According to the deed to the United States the name should be Walden.

Very respectfully,

F. A. REEVE, Acting Solicitor.

Hon. H. S. BOUTELL, M. C.,
Chairman Subcommittee on Claims,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Mr. OTEY. Mr. Chairman, the original bill of the House has this amendment of $50.30, and, being recommended by the Department, the committee bring in a unanimous report. I move that the bill be now laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. One question. This bill, as I understand, authorizes the transfer of the property on the payment of $50.30 in accordance with the letter of the Secretary?

Mr. OTEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CLAYTON. Mr. Chairman, this bill is necessary, because under the rules which obtain in the Alabama courts, State and Federal, after an adjournment of the court it was not within the power of the court to set aside its judgment, and this is the only possible relief. And it is refreshing, perhaps, to the membership of this House to know that this bill proposes to put money into the Treasury rather than take money out.

Mr. GRAFF. I move, Mr. Chairman, that the bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

MARY CHAMBERS.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 7020) for the relief of Mary Chambers, widow of Thomas Chambers.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Mary Chambers, widow of Thomas Chambers, deceased, of Mackinac, Mich., the sum of $3,654.56, in full compensation for the additional expenses incurred by him, the said Thomas Chambers, deceased, in carrying the Canada mails, as contractor on route No. 24413, from Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.,

to Mackinac, Mich., from July 1, 1875, to June 30, 1879, inclusive, he having contracted to carry United States mails only.

Mr. GRAFF. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WEEKS] who reported the bill.

Mr. WEEKS. Mr. Chairman, this bill was introduced by my colleague [Mr. SHELDEN] and referred to the subcommittee of which I was chairman, and therefore I investigated this case and made the report. The bill is for the relief of Mary Chambers, who is the widow of Thomas Chambers, in whose behalf the bill was originally introduced in a previous Congress. It appears in this case that Thomas Chambers took a contract to carry the mail from Mackinac to Sault Ste. Marie for four years, the time expiring in 1879.

In response to an invitation of the Post-Office Department, made in October, 1874, for bids for carrying the mail on this route, Thomas Chambers filed his proposal in conformity with the Department instructions, and his bid of $1,675 was accepted. Now, without stopping to read the report in full, it appears that afterwards, by some change in the mail service, a large quantity of mail from Canada was precipitated upon his route, never contemplated nor dreamed of at the time the contract was made, and it enlarged the burden and required more carriage capacity, and during the winter season, in the deep snows, it was a very difficult matter to get through with the enormous amount of mail which was unexpectedly precipitated upon this contractor, and this is fully set forth in the report.

Now, I do not know that I need to go through the facts any further than this. The point made by the Department was that they needed celerity, certainty, and security, and therefore such means as were necessary to transport the whole of this mail, whatever might be its contents or weight or increase during the term of the contractor. Now, this proposition was met by the contractor and the mail was carried at great exposure, at great danger, and it was a very hard and laborious piece of work. It was faithfully carried out to the end.

Afterwards, having used his practical experience in this matter and accomplished his contract, this claim is presented for carrying the mail. After going all through the facts the opinion of this committee was that "the case does not involve a mere question of technicality. It is one of equity and justice. Even by the terms of the contract the Department did not hold an advantage whereby it could demand this extra service for which there was no adequate compensation." The man was required by the Department to perform a very large amount of labor not contemplated by the original contract.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Will the gentleman allow me a question?

Mr. WEEKS. Certainly.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. It appears from this report that the man Chambers made a valid contract with the Government to carry the mail for a stipulated sum, and it seems from the statement copied into the report made by the committee in the Senate that the mail was larger than he anticipated, but was all within the terms of the contract.

Mr. WEEKS. No; I would hardly concede that.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. How did he come to carry it if it was not within the terms of his contract?

Mr. WEEKS. When the contract was made this extra mail was not brought from Canada and precipitated on that route. That was something done afterwards by some new mail arrangements of the Department. He never contracted to carry that mail.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Does the Post-Office Department recognize any claim, legal or otherwise, in regard to the matter?

Mr. WEEKS. Oh, many times such bills have been passed by the House.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I am asking in reference to this claim. Does the Post-Office Department furnish any statement in regard to it?

Mr. WEEKS. No.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Then the Post-Office Department does not admit any liability, legal or equitable?

Mr. GRAFF. If the gentleman from Indiana will look at the report he will find this:

> Again, the Department refers to certain stipulations contained in the contract as to "celerity, certainty, and security, using therefor such means as may be necessary to transport the whole of said mail, whatever may be its size, weight, or increase during the term of the contract." These, again, are the usual and formal stipulations, but in enumerating them the Department concedes that the contract contained no clause relative to carrying foreign mail; that it was not until 1883 that such clauses were inserted in contracts. Plainly no such extra service was contemplated by either party to this contract, and especially by the party of the second part.
>
> This man made his bid in good faith. His practical experience convinced him that he could fulfill his obligation without loss to himself or injury to his bondsmen. His estimate was based upon the cost of employing 1 man and 1 horse to carry 1 pouch. He knew that there could be no local increase. It came, but not by reason of any circumstance that he could have foreseen. It came in the form of foreign mail, not contemplated by the terms of the contract, as the Post-Office Department admits; and it tripled his service, his expenses, his responsibility.

The point in the case is that while the claimant has no legal claim, yet it was a small contract and the claimant did not contemplate nor would he be expected to contemplate this unusually large amount of mail which was thrown upon him. This large amount of mail was precipitated upon him, making him carry it at a tremendous amount of work, when he had a right to anticipate that he was bidding upon the usual and customary amount of mail which was being transported at the time he made his bid.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. His claim is based upon the fact that the amount of mail increased?

Mr. GRAFF. Yes; but it was not an increase that could be fairly anticipated. It was an unusual increase.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I assume from the statement of the the Department that the work done was within the intent of the terms of the contract.

Mr. GRAFF. It was within the terms of the contract.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. He makes the claim that only one pouch was being carried, and suddenly there was a large and unexpected increase.

Mr. GRAFF. Yes; brought about by a change by the Department in the transportation of the mail.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. As a matter of law, that would be within the contemplation of the contract.

Mr. GRAFF. Undoubtedly; if he had been called upon to transmit or transport three or four carloads of mail every day I suppose it would be within the contract from a legal standpoint, and he would have no legal remedy in the premises.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. If this claim is to be allowed, why would not every mail contractor losing money on his contract on account of the increased work that is put upon him by virtue of the increase of business have a claim against the Government, and why ought he not to be paid for losses?

Mr. GRAFF. That same argument might be used in dealing with any equitable question that does not come within the strict provisions of law. In this case it was fairly expected from the circumstances that this party supposed he was then entering only upon a small contract. He had nothing to base his bid upon except the reasonable expectation of the amount of work to be done. The only thing he could base his calculation upon was the amount of mail that had been transmitted. If it had been only the natural increase, there would have been no remedy and no claim here, but here was an unexpected source, an unusual amount of work suddenly precipitated upon him.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I am glad the gentleman has made that statement. I have no disposition to oppose the passage of the bill. If it was only the ordinary increase in the amount of mail, it would be a dangerous precedent to establish here.

Mr. GRAFF. I think so myself.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. In view of the fact that here was an extraordinary increase coming from a source that could not have been in actual contemplation of the party at the time he made the contract, I think there is no reasonable objection to the passage of the bill.

Mr. GRAFF. I desire to make this statement. There is pending in the House Senate bill 219, which I now hold in my hand, and which corresponds in its provisions to this bill. I am authorized by the Committee on Claims to move that the bill under consideration be laid aside with a recommendation that it be laid on the table and that Senate bill 219 be substituted therefor with a favorable recommendation from this Committee of the Whole.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will inquire of the gentleman whether the Senate bill to which he refers is before the Committee of the Whole and on to-day's Calendar?

Mr. GRAFF. It is not upon the Calendar, but I am authorized by the committee to make this motion.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Illinois that the bill under consideration can be laid aside with the recommendation that the gentleman suggests, but the Chair is of opinion that the Senate bill, not being upon the Calendar, is not before this Committee of the Whole, and that the motion which the gentleman desires to make with reference to that bill will have to be made in the House.

Mr. GRAFF. I suppose, then, the proper course for me to pursue will be to move that the House bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation, and then in the House to ask unanimous consent for the substitution of the Senate bill. I therefore move that the pending bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

CHARLES HURRLE.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 7035) for the relief of Charles Hurrle.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay Charles Hurrle, late of Troop E, Sixth United States Cavalry, for extra duty as post interpreter at Fort Apache, Ariz., from October 29, 1879, to May 4, 1881, inclusive, at the rate of 50 cents per day, and from May 5, 1881, to June 30, 1881, inclusive, at the rate of $75 per month.

Mr. GRAFF. I ask that the report in this case be read.

The Clerk read the report, as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7035) for the relief of Charles Hurrle, beg leave to submit the following report and recommend that said bill do pass without amendment:

This is a bill enacting—

"That the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay Charles Hurrle, late of Troop E, Sixth United States Cavalry, for extra duty as post interpreter at Fort Apache, Ariz., from October 29, 1879, to May 4, 1881, inclusive, at the rate of 50 cents per day, and from May 5, 1881, to June 30, 1881, inclusive, at the rate of $75 per month."

The bill proposes to pay Charles Hurrle for services rendered as interpreter at Fort Apache, Ariz., from May 4 to June 30, 1881, inclusive, at the rate of $75 per month.

There is no question as to the services rendered by the claimant, as appears by the testimony of Thomas Cruse, first lieutenant and regimental quartermaster, Sixth Cavalry, and commanding Company A, Indian Scouts, at the date above mentioned, May 4 to June 30, 1881. John Martin, sergeant, Troop E, Sixth Cavalry, and —— ——, Troop E, Sixth Cavalry, all certify to the service rendered and corroborate the claim made by Hurrle.

Peter Rennie and John Halleghan also made affidavits in due form as to the rendition of the services, under date of July 23 and 24, 1894, respectively.

The service is also admitted by the Third Auditor of the Treasury under date of December 26, 1893, in a communication in which, among other things, he says:

"The records show that the claimant, Hurrle, was on daily duty as post interpreter at Fort Apache, Ariz. * * * But as this duty did not constitute regular day labor, he is not entitled to extra pay therefor."

The Third Auditor, in the same communication, says:

"The money accounts of Lieuts. H. P. Perrine, W. H. Carter, and F. G. Hodgson, Sixth Cavalry, and acting assistant quartermasters at Fort Apache, Ariz., show payments to claimant as interpreter from July 1, 1881, to September 23, 1881, at $75 per month, and from September 24 to December 2, 1881, at $100 per month, and from December 3, 1881, to September 25, 1882, at $75 per month."

The service of claimant is fully established, and the official records and accounts show that the claimant was paid even a higher rate for similar services than is fixed by the pending bill, and in all equity we think he is clearly entitled to the relief he seeks and which the bill aims to provide.

Mr. GRAFF. I move that this bill be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

CHARLES H. ROBINSON.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 949) for the relief of Charles H. Robinson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the sum of $720 be allowed to Charles H. Robinson, former pension agent at Des Moines, Iowa, being the sum deposited by him to cover a deficiency arising in his office, caused by the negligence of a clerk, and without blame or fault on the part of said Charles H. Robinson, and that the aforesaid sum is hereby appropriated out of any moneys not otherwise appropriated.

Mr. GRAFF. Mr. Chairman, the facts in this case may be very briefly stated. Charles H. Robinson was the United States pension agent at Des Moines, Iowa, from the 1st day of September, 1894, to the 1st day of September, 1898. A soldier had been drawing a pension under what is commonly known as "the old law," and that pensioner had been dropped on the theory that his pension had been allowed upon a fraudulent representation. Afterwards he was allowed a pension under the act of June 27, 1890, but, according to the practice of the Pension Bureau, the money which he had drawn previously under the old law was treated as a credit upon the second pension.

At the time of the granting of his pension under the act of June 27, 1890, he was allowed quite a considerable sum of arrears. So the Commissioner of Pensions notified the United States pension agent at Des Moines, Iowa, to deduct from the allowance made under the act of June 27, 1890, the amount which the pensioner had drawn fraudulently previous to that time, according to the findings of the Pension Bureau. This was the advice given to the pension agent at Des Moines, Iowa, but the disbursing clerk, or record clerk, whose duty it was to carry out the instructions of the Commissioner of Pensions and to withhold from the pensioner and cover back into the Treasury of the United States an amount corresponding to that which he had drawn previously under the old law, violated or overlooked his instructions.

That record clerk was not an appointee of the United States pension agent, Mr. Robinson, the claimant in this case. The latter had no knowledge of the facts, and he had no way of protecting himself against this negligence or error of the clerk who was working under him. He could in no way have protected himself from the consequences of that error; yet he was compelled to pay this amount back to the United States. It seems to me he was not to blame. There was nothing which he could have done that would have prevented this error by the clerk, and it is very inequitable that he should be held responsible for this amount.

Mr. SPIGHT. Has it been shown that the money was not fraudulently drawn out?

Mr. GRAFF. The question as to whether the soldier was entitled to his pension under the old law was determined by the Pension Bureau. Of course that is a matter over which Mr. Robinson had no control and with which we have no reason to deal. I know myself that such is the practice of the Bureau.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. How much is this claim?

Mr. GRAFF. The amount of the claim is $720.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. And I understand that that amount was improperly deducted?

Mr. GRAFF. It was not withheld when it should have been. It should have been withheld from the soldier, but instead of that the clerk paid out the sum which was allowed to the soldier under the last allowance, under the act of June 27, 1890, without deducting the amount which he had previously drawn under the old pension certificate.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Do you know whether the Department is withholding this pension from the soldier in order to make good the balance of the debt that he owes the Government on account of the fraudulent pension?

Mr. GRAFF. I do not know whether the Pension Department is withholding that sum yet, but I do know that the Pension Department may, if it desires to do so. I want to say to the gentleman from Indiana that it would, of course, take several years, if the soldier were drawing a pension under the act of June 27, 1890, before he would be entitled to enough pension to amount in the aggregate to $720.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. This bill is based upon the theory that the Government and not the pension agent should be responsible for the mistakes of the pension agent's clerks?

Mr. GRAFF. It is based upon the theory——

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That is the theory of it, is it not?

Mr. GRAFF. It is based on this theory: Not that the Government especially ought to be responsible for the acts of an inferior employee under a United States pension agent, but that the United States pension agent himself ought not to be held responsible for the mistakes of a man who was not employed by him, and over whose appointment he had no control, and who was there by the act of the Government and not by the act of the agent.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The agent, I assume, had control of his services, general direction, and control of his work in the agency?

Mr. GRAFF. I suppose he had.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. And this takes the liability from the pension agent, where it exists under present conditions, and locates it upon the Government, where it does not rest at present.

Mr. GRAFF. In my judgment, as a matter of law, if the United States Government had been compelled to sue this man Robinson to recover that amount on account of a mistake made by an employee in his office, he could not legally be held responsible for that; but of course the pay of the United States pension agent was in the hands of the Government, and he did not have very much to say about what the Government should do in the premises.

They simply charged it against him. This occurred between the years 1894 and 1898; and, as is shown by the report, his duties included the payment of quarterly pensions to all the pensioners of the district composed of Iowa and Nebraska, and during the term of his office he paid out to pensioners something over $33,560,000; so it is quite apparent that no one contemplates that that United States pension agent shall personally supervise all of the payments that are made in his office.

Mr. WARNOCK. I should like to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. SOUTHARD. What was the soldier's pension under the law of 1890?

Mr. GRAFF. From my experience I should presume it was $6 a month.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Was it not twelve?

Mr. GRAFF. The report states the facts, which are that after the cancellation of Mr. Bailey's pension certificate he made application to the Pension Department under the act of June 27, 1890, and on the 23d day of October, 1897, a pension certificate, No. 57793, was issued to him under that act, and received at the Des Moines office, allowing him a pension at the rate of $10 per month.

But at the same time direction was received at the Des Moines office for the recovery by the Government of the said sum of $1,900.67 out of the pension last granted, as it became due, being the amount paid under the former certificate which was held to be fraudulent, and said certificate was turned over to said Mae Griffis for proper entry on the rolls in the office as a "recovery claim." But the said Mae Griffis, clerk, failed and neglected to enter upon the rolls or books of the office the proper memoranda indicating that the claim was one for recovery, and in consequence of such failure and neglect a check for the amount of the first payment under said certificate, amounting to $660, was issued and made payable to said Bailey and mailed to him in the regular course of business, instead of being made payable to the assistant treasurer of the United States, as directed in the order above referred to; and that thereafter checks for the quarterly payments of January and April, 1898, amounting to $60, were also sent to and made payable to said pensioner.

When these checks were received and examined by the Auditor of the Treasury for the Interior Department of the United States, the mistake was discovered and the claimant was charged up with these amounts, aggregating $720, which he made good by paying the same.

Thereafter the claimant immediately endeavored to secure himself from loss by negotiations with Mr. Bailey; but it was found that he was absolutely insolvent, and nothing could be made by proceedings against him.

During the term of office of Mr. Robinson one F. M. Carrell was chief clerk of such agency, and as such chief clerk it was his duty to classify and assign the work of the several clerks in the said office, and that in the performance of his duties he assigned the said Mae Griffis to act as record clerk. and the said Carrell and the other clerks in said office, among whom was the said Mae Griffis, were in the classified service and under such service were assigned to the several duties which they respectively performed, and the complainant, Mr. Robinson, had no control over the assignment of said Mae Griffis to duty as record clerk, but she was generally considered as efficient and competent in the performance of her duties as such clerk.

Mr. SOUTHARD. I have read this report; but the suggestion I want to make is that if the soldier lives long enough the Government will have a chance to reimburse itself.

Mr. GRAFF. Yes; at $10 a month.

Mr. WARNOCK. It was found that Mr. Bailey was insolvent?

Mr. GRAFF. Yes.

Mr. WARNOCK. Was the clerk who made the mistake also insolvent?

Mr. GRAFF. I presume so. I think that is quite apparent.

Mr. WARNOCK. The clerk would have been liable.

Mr. PADGETT. I wanted to inquire of the gentleman if the bill provides for a retention of this pension as it accrues for the benefit of the Government?

Mr. GRAFF. That is being done by the Pension Bureau at the present time.

Mr. PADGETT. I simply wanted to know if that was the fact.

Mr. GRAFF. Yes.

The bill was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

ALBION M. CHRISTIE.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 2641) for the relief of Albion M. Christie.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to pay to Albion M. Christie, assignee of Luke Christie, deceased, local inspector, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $268.80, said sum being the proceeds of Treasury warrant No. 2049, dated February 1, 1861, and drawn in favor of Luke Christie, local inspector, for said amount, in payment for work and labor performed by him as inspector of hulls at Savannah, Ga., the payment of which said Treasury warrant has been withheld under and by virtue of the provisions of section 3480 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, upon the presentation and surrender of said Treasury warrant to the Treasury Department.

Mr. GRAFF. I ask that the report be read.

The CHAIRMAN. The report will be read in the time of the gentleman from Illinois.

The report (by Mr. GRAFF) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2641) for the relief of Albion M. Christie, have carefully examined the same and report it favorably, with a recommendation that it do pass.

This bill provides for the payment of $268.80 to Albion M. Christie, assignee of Luke Christie, deceased, upon the presentation and surrender of Treasury warrant No. 2049, dated February 1, 1861, and drawn in favor of Luke Christie, for work and labor performed by him as inspector of hulls at Savannah, Ga., prior to this date.

At the date of the issuance of this warrant Luke Christie was in the employ of the Government of the United States as local inspector of hulls at Savannah, Ga. His salary became due, and Treasury warrant No. 2049, dated February 1, 1861, and drawn on John Boston, United States depositary at Savannah, Ga., was regularly issued in payment of the same. Before warrant was cashed payment was withheld on behalf of the United States at Savannah, Ga., on account of the outbreak of hostilities. The warrant was subsequently assigned by Luke Christie to Albion M. Christie, who now holds it by virtue of such assignment, and also as his sole legal representative and heir, Luke Christie being now deceased.

Mr. GRAFF. I move that the bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

W. C. TAYLOR.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 5550) for the relief of W. C. Taylor.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to W. C. Taylor, of Mobile, Ala., the sum of $2,000, as compensation for the loss of the steel barge Ora, while in service of the Government during the late war with Spain, on a voyage between Mobile, Ala., and Santiago de Cuba, said loss having been caused by defective and insufficient towlines and the absence of any crew on board the barge to look after her safety, all of which occurred without any fault on the part of the owner of said barge, the said W. C. Taylor, of Mobile, Ala.

Mr. GRAFF. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. OTEY].

Mr. OTEY. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. TAYLOR].

Mr. TAYLOR of Alabama. Mr. Chairman, this bill provides payment to a citizen of Mobile for the loss of a barge which he allowed the Government to use in June, 1898. Just prior to the battle of Santiago de Cuba the Government required the immediate use of barges to transfer supplies to General Shafter. They needed light-draft barges. Mr. Taylor was called upon, and immediately consented to the use of his barge. It was taken by the Government and lost in three days on the trip to Cuba. The facts are in the report, and I ask that the report be read.

Mr. GRAFF. I want to suggest to the gentleman that the report is extremely lengthy and contains all the correspondence.

Mr. TAYLOR of Alabama. I was going to say, the report without the exhibits to it. The report states the facts; the exhibits are merely the proof of the facts stated in the report. I think the report will be sufficient and I ask to have it read.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. A question that may elicit the proposition. Has the War Department investigated the claim?

Mr. TAYLOR of Alabama. Yes, sir; the War Department has investigated the claim—and reports that the appropriations of the Quartermaster's Department are not applicable to payment for value of the lost barge, and that the claim can not, therefore, be favorably considered by this office, and that Congress alone can grant relief in such cases.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Do the records of the War Department show that the Government had taken possession of this barge and was in possession of it at the time of its loss?

Mr. TAYLOR of Alabama. The records show that, and the report of the committee shows that.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Do the records of the War Department show the value of the barge?

Mr. TAYLOR of Alabama. That is shown by the testimony of the Government officers, and no other testimony is before Congress that it was worth $2,000 at the time of the loss.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. And that is the amount of the bill?

Mr. TAYLOR of Alabama. That is the amount of the bill.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. And the War Department can not pay because they were not authorized by any law to do so?

Mr. TAYLOR of Alabama. Out of appropriations for the War Department.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Do they make a recommendation that the bill be paid?

Mr. TAYLOR of Alabama. None; except that it is a matter to be brought before Congress. They do not say one way or the other in regard to the payment.

Mr. GRAFF. I move that the bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

WILLIAM C. MARR.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 3830) for the relief of William C. Marr.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to William C. Marr, of Popham Beach, Sagadahoc County, Me., out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $25 for his services as first assistant keeper of Seguin Island light, Maine, during the month of July, A. D. 1866.

Mr. GRAFF. I ask that the report may be read in my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The report will be read in the time of the gentleman from Illinois.

The report (by Mr. WEEKS) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Claims has considered the bill (H. R. 3830) for the relief of William C. Marr, and report the same back with the recommendation that it do pass.

This report is based on the recommendations of the Light-House Board and the Secretary of the Treasury hereto annexed.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, February 9, 1901.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 30th ultimo, inclosing H. R. 9792, "for the relief of William C. Man."

You request an opinion as to the merits of the claim.

In reply, find herewith copy of report of the Light-House Board, from which it will appear that the board ordered $25 paid to Mr. Marr, as appeared to be his due.

Respectfully,

L. J. GAGE,
Secretary.

Hon. H. S. BOUTELL, M. C.,
House of Representatives.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE LIGHT-HOUSE BOARD,
Washington, February 7, 1901.

SIR: The board has the honor to acknowledge the reference to this office by the Department of a letter from Hon H. S. Boutell, M. C., dated January 30, 1901, inclosing H. R. 9792, for the relief of William C. Man, and asking the opinion of the Department as to the merits of these claims and the advisability of a favorable recommendation on them by the Committee on Claims.

In reply, the board begs leave to state that it appears that the board ordered $25 paid to Mr. Marr, after some discussion, as it appeared to be his due, and it does not know why it was not paid.

The board therefore recommends the passage of the bill after it has been amended as to the spelling of the name, which is Marr and not Man.

The letter of Mr. BOUTELL is herewith returned, as requested.

Respectfully,

R. L. HOXIE,

Major, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., Engineer Secretary.

The SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

Mr. GRAFF. I move that the bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

J. V. DAVIS.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 1381) for the relief of J. V. Davis.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to J. V. Davis, superintendent of the Alexandria (Va.) National Cemetery, the sum of $950, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to reimburse him for personal property destroyed by fire, which loss was incurred in his efforts to save the property of the United States.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the words "nine hundred and fifty" and insert in lieu thereof "five hundred."

Mr. GRAFF. Mr. Chairman, I move that the bill as amended be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I think there ought to be some statement of the facts in regard to this claim. It seems to be one of a rather unusual character.

Mr. GRAFF. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. RIXEY].

Mr. RIXEY. Mr. Chairman, this claim is one of J. V. Davis, who is superintendent of the national cemetery at Alexandria, Va. It seems that some years ago while he was superintendent of the cemetery a fire occurred which destroyed the buildings. The assistance which came to him during the fire would have saved his property, but he told them that he desired the property of the Government first saved. The property of the Government was saved, and all of his personal property was destroyed. The claim by Captain Davis for reimbursement was referred to the War Department, and the Secretary of War recommended that the claim should be paid.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The property probably was not insured.

Mr. RIXEY. No; it was not insured.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. And I understand that the owner was in the service of the Government at the time.

Mr. RIXEY. He was and still is.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. He resided in the house located in the cemetery grounds?

Mr. RIXEY. Yes, sir; that is right.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That fire came, and he sacrificed his own property to save the property of the Government?

Mr. RIXEY. That is right.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Then this bill is in the nature of a bounty or gratuity for his fidelity to the Government?

Mr. RIXEY. To that extent, possibly. It is for the loss of his own property, which he could have saved if he had not been engaged in saving the property of the Government.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. There is no legal or equitable liability on the part of the Government?

Mr. RIXEY. I think there is an equitable liability. I was on the Committee on Claims for several Congresses when this matter was considered, and the proofs showed that his property could have been saved and would have been saved except that he told parties who came to his assistance that he desired the property of the Government be saved first. The matter has the recommendation of the War Department.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I shall not oppose the bill. It seems to be a reward for the man's fidelity.

Mr. GRAFF. The Secretary of War recommends it on that ground.

Mr. RIXEY. Mr. Chairman, while I was on the committee, during the past Congresses, it was shown that the amount of this man's loss was $950, and that amount was recommended by the Secretary of War to be paid him. While I was on the Claims Committee, after the committee acted, cutting the amount down to $500, I did not like to come into the House and ask that Mr. Davis should be paid $950.

The committee, without any reason, so far as I was able to observe, cut the claim from $950 to $500. The testimony was clear that the man had lost property to the amount of $950, and I think it ought to be paid him. The bill passed the House last year for $500 and went to the President. It failed to become a law because it reached him too late.

I am not now on the committee, and I think it is legitimate for me to ask that the amendment proposed by the committee be voted down, and that Mr. Davis be paid the sum of $950. I ask this in justice to Mr. Davis. He is not a native of Alexandria; he is a stranger there, but is an Army officer, having charge of the cemetery, and it seems to me this money is due him and ought to be paid to him. I ask the House to vote down the amendment offered by the Claims Committee and let Mr. Davis have the $950 due him.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Will the gentleman state, if he knows, the value of the Government property rescued or saved at the time of the sacrifice of the gentleman's own interests?

Mr. RIXEY. That matter was thoroughly investigated by the Claims Committee, and we had the statement from Mr. Davis and others, and those written statements are on file with the committee. I have not them here. The Claims Committee was perfectly satisfied in regard to it.

Mr. GRAFF. If the gentleman from Virginia will permit me, I think he had better not urge that increase above the $500. The fact is the committee found themselves somewhat at a loss to definitely fix the amount of the value of this property, and they were compelled to have the subcommittee procure an affidavit at its last hearing itemizing the value of these goods. We considered the matter very carefully, and felt that there ought not to be any question about the safety of the amount which we fix. It is somewhat of an unusual form of a claim at any rate, and I think the claimant ought to be satisfied with the amount recommended by the committee.

Mr. RIXEY. I know that this itemized statement was called for this year. It was also furnished the committee on a former occasion. It is furnished again this year, and was delivered by me to the subcommittee.

Mr. GRAFF. The gentleman must remember that this case was not investigated, except by means of an ex parte affidavit, and we simply permitted the claimant to fix his own value of the goods. We inspected the items and concluded that $950 might be too large, and inasmuch as this is a gratuity simply based on the theory that the Government should recognize the faithfulness of this man in endeavoring to rescue the building of the Government in preference to saving his own property, the committee have recommended this bill.

Mr. RIXEY. I think Captain Davis is entitled to the whole amount. I leave it to a vote of the House.

Mr. GRAFF. I renew my motion, Mr. Chairman, that the bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The committee amendment was considered and agreed to.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

JULIUS E. MUGGE.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 1748) for the relief of Julius E. Mugge.

The Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the claim of Julius E. Mugge for damages sustained by reason of the cancellation of contracts for army supplies awarded June 4, 1891, to him by the chief quartermaster of the Department of Texas, be, and the same is hereby, referred to the Court of Claims, to ascertain whether any damages were suffered by said Julius E. Mugge on account of said award and the subsequent disapproval of said contract; and if so, to find the amount of said damages and report the same to Congress.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, the report, No. 267, on this bill very clearly sets forth the nature of the claim and the reason for sending it to the Court of Claims. I will say there is printed in that report a letter from the present Quartermaster-General, written the 1st of March, 1900, in which he recommends that the claim be sent there, as it is typical of a large number of claims they have to consider, and they want a decision of the court on that class of claims. If any further particulars are desired with reference to the bill, I shall be pleased to give them.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I understand that this claim is for damages for loss of profits on a contract.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I will detail the circumstances of the case if the gentleman so desires.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I should like to know the circumstances in detail.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I have here a letter from General Stanley, who was commanding officer of the Department of Texas when this case arose, which explains it fully.

GOVERNOR'S OFFICE, UNITED STATES SOLDIERS' HOME,
Washington, D. C., January 26, 1898.

DEAR SIR: In reply to your note of the 25th instant, I will state Julius E. Muegge had been a contractor for grain supply for the Department of Texas several years while I commanded that department. The time for awarding these grain contracts was April or May, and before the crops for the year had matured. In 1890 Mr. Mugge had large contracts, and, owing to the drought, lost heavily on his contract, which he filled faithfully.

I will say to the gentleman that, as a matter of fact, in that unfortunate year Mr. Mugge filled his contract entirely to the satisfaction of the commanding officer and the quartermaster-general, Department of Texas, and he lost about $14,000 on his contract.

In 1891 Mr. Mugge was again awarded contracts for grain. These contracts were completed, bonds were duly given, and all forwarded to Washington to the Quartermaster-General, who, in July, disapproved of all contracts in Texas.

As the year had turned out a propitious one, and all grain had fallen in price in Texas, as department commander I opposed this innovation as hard on a faithful contractor and unfair upon the side of the Government's officers. Colonel Meeks, chief quartermaster of the department, now Quartermaster-General, also opposed this ruling of the Quartermaster-General.

I will say to the gentleman from Indiana that I called upon this Quartermaster-General, General Meeks, and he confirmed this letter in every respect.

Mr. Mugge, who was entitled to the advantage resulting from a good crop, was a heavy loser in the transaction.

This I give from memory, but the correspondence will verify my statements, I am sure.

Now, the Quartermaster-General, General Ludington, makes this report on the facts of the case:

WAR DEPARTMENT, QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, March 1, 1900.

Respectfully submitted to the honorable the Secretary of War for such action as he may deem proper, having in view circular from his office dated December 4, 1899.

Mr. EDWARD ROBB, member of the House Committee on Claims, incloses H. R. 3274, and requests information as to the merits of the said bill, and asks whether, in the opinion of your Department, the circumstances do not warrant the reference of the same to the Court of Claims.

The facts in the case are as follows:

In 1891 the chief quartermaster, Department of Texas, advertised for and received proposals for forage for the several posts in that department. Among the awards made on these proposals by the chief quartermaster was one to Julius E. Mugge for 840,000 pounds of oats at San Antonio, Tex., at the rate of $2.05 per 100 pounds.

The circular of instructions to bidders issued in connection with the advertisement in this case provided that "deliveries, if required, to commence on July 1, 1891, if the contract be approved by the Quartermaster-General of the Army, otherwise not until such approval was obtained, unless notified by competent authority." Award was made by the chief quartermaster before the bids were received by this office. Upon receipt of the proposals here it was ascertained that the price at which the award was made was very much in excess of the market rate ($1.25 per 100 pounds, as reported by the San Antonio Board of Trade), and for that reason the Quartermaster-General refused to approve the contract. New proposals were invited, and contract was subsequently made at the rate of $1.65 per 100 pounds.

Between June 4, the date of the award to Mugge by the chief quartermaster, and June 26, when negative action was taken by this office, the said Mugge delivered, upon the order of the depot quartermaster, San Antonio, 29,066 pounds of oats.

Mr. Mugge was notified that his bid had been accepted He executed his bond, and it was sent on here for approval. The awards were made at the time of the year at which it had been the custom of the Department officers to make such awards—in the spring of the year, before the crops had matured and before any merchant could tell what the crops were going to be.

In the previous year, as is shown by the record, Mr. Mugge had faithfully filled his contract, which entailed on him a loss of a large amount of money. General Stanley himself gave me this information, and he was commanding officer of the department at the time. In this particular year, after being informed that his bid had been accepted, Mr. Mugge was called upon to make a partial delivery upon that contract. That was before the papers which had been referred to Washington had been returned.

Mr. GRAFF. As this bill provides simply for a finding by the Court of Claims and a report to Congress, I suggest to the gentleman from Texas that he allow us to vote upon it, so we may proceed to other business.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Well, I am answering the question of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CRUMPACKER].

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I am not ready for a vote yet. I think this matter ought to be further discussed. I may want to submit a few observations myself.

Mr. GRAFF. This bill simply provides that the Court of Claims shall—

Ascertain whether any damages were suffered by said Julius E. Mugge on account of said award and the subsequent approval of said contract; and if so, the amount of said damages, and report the same to Congress.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I wish to say something in opposition to the claim and the bill.

Mr. SLAYDEN. It looks to me like an unfair piece of business for the Government to let a contract in the spring of the year, before the crops have matured and before any merchants can form a reasonably correct idea as to what prices are going to be, and then to compel the contractor to live up to all the obligations of that contract, thus entailing upon him a heavy loss, while it does not take any such risks itself.

Mr. Mugge unquestionably lost a large sum of money by a faithful compliance with the terms of his contract in 1890. In the year 1891, when he might have had an opportunity to recoup himself for these losses, the Government rejected his bid two or three months after the contract had been made, and notified him that new bids would be taken. He was thus denied the right to carry out a contract which, according to notice served on him, had been accepted. He was denied the privilege of making a reasonable profit on his transaction, though the year before he had lost a large amount of money upon an exactly similar contract.

There ought to be perfect fairness as between the Government and the contractor. If risk is to be taken, as it was in this case, it should be mutual. In my opinion it was unfair and unjust, although technically legal, for the Quartermaster-General to delay his decision upon those contracts until late in the summer, and, after these contractors had undergone a loss in the previous year, deny them the opportunity to make themselves even in the following year.

I think that in common fairness this House should have made a direct appropriation to compensate this man for the loss; but the committee, headed by the chairman, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAFF], have seen fit to refer it to the Court of Claims, and in that reference they have the written approval of the Quartermaster-General of the United States.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. Do I understand that the contract was actually entered into?

Mr. SLAYDEN. Yes. I will say to the gentleman from Massachusetts that the custom was to advertise for bids in April, and the bids were usually opened along between the 1st and the 15th of May, and the lowest bidder was advised that his bid had been accepted and to make his bond.

This gentleman had been an occasional contractor for the Government for a number of years. He put in his bids that year and was notified that they were accepted; but in every advertisement under the law there is a notice that no contract is final or binding until approved by the Quartermaster-General. Now, this bid was opened in April and the contract awarded in May and forwarded to the Quartermaster-General for approval. Meantime the Army post in the Department of Texas had gotten out of supplies, and the firm with which Mr. Muegge was connected was notified to supply a certain quantity of grain.

Mr. GRAFF. Under that contract?

Mr. SLAYDEN. Under that contract, and he did supply it; and when his contract was rejected Mr. Mugge felt so outraged about it, felt that he had been so harshly and unjustly treated, particularly in view of the fact that in the faithful performance of his contract of the year before he had lost a large sum of money, that he refused at first to accept the check which was sent him in payment for the grain that had been purchased.

General Stanley, now a retired major-general of the United States Army, residing in the city of Washington, told Mr. Mugge to take the check. He said:

While it is an outrage, while in my judgment there is no moral right in denying you this contract, the Quartermaster-General has a technical right to reject it, and if you do not accept this check which they now tender you in payment for produce already supplied to the Army of the United States, the Lord knows when the Congress of the United States will see fit to pay you.

So upon that advice from Major-General Stanley, a resident of the city of Washington, he accepted that check in payment for produce delivered upon this particular contract, which it is now sought to refer to the Court of Claims. That answers the question of the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. I do not yet understand that any contract was actually entered into.

Mr. GRAFF. From a legal standpoint the contract was not complete.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I told the gentleman that in the advertising there was a provision that the contract should not be final or binding until approved by the Quartermaster-General.

Mr. OTEY. He did approve it, did he not?

Mr. SLAYDEN. No; the Quartermaster-General never did.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I would like a few minutes on this proposition, if the gentleman has finished what he has to say.

Mr. Chairman, as I understand this bill, it proposes to refer to the Court of Claims the claim of Mr. Mugge, for the purpose of ascertaining the amount of damages he sustained on account of the failure of the War Department to take the grain that he proposed to furnish under a bid that he had submitted to the Quartermaster-General for the year in question. The Court of Claims is not given power to determine whether there is any liability on the part of the Government, according to the principles that govern contracts and their violations between citizens.

Mr. GRAFF. Will the gentleman from Indiana allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I will.

Mr. GRAFF. It has occurred to me while this debate was going on that so far as I am personally concerned the bill might be amended. The bill as it is simply asks the Court of Claims to make a finding of facts as to the damages which the claimant suffered. It is true, as stated by the gentleman from Indiana, that the court is not asked to pass upon the legality of the transaction or any other of the facts.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Or the validity of the contract.

Mr. GRAFF. Now, I think it will be a good idea to amend the bill by adding after the word "contract," in the tenth line, the words "and to make findings of the facts, including all of the circumstances arising out of said transaction."

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That might improve the bill somewhat, but——

Mr. GRAFF. As a matter of practice here in Congress, if after this bill had been passed the Court of Claims should make this finding, it would not be such a finding as is customary for the Committee on Appropriations to recognize. It would simply come back to the Committee on Claims for their further consideration. In view of that fact it seems to me that there is something in the proposition of the gentleman from Indiana—that the bill might be amended so as to have findings of fact and law, too, for that matter, on the question.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That is one objection, but the bill seems to be based entirely on a claim of prospective profits upon a contract that the claimant hoped the Government would accept, but which, as a matter of fact, the Government never did accept. In the month of April he submitted a bid to furnish grain to the quartermaster in charge of the Department of Texas, with the full knowledge that no contract that any officer in charge of that department could make would be valid or binding against the Government until it had been approved by the Quartermaster-General.

Mr. GRAFF. But it is claimed that it had been the custom of the War Department to treat this transaction as a contract and to act under it before it was ratified at Washington, and if it is true, as it is contended by the claimant in this case, that the Government did seek to get the benefits of the contract, and did get the benefits of the contract so long as they were getting the grain at a low price compared with the market price of the article, there is some equity in the contention that if they desire to get the benefits of a contract, the claimant himself should be entitled to whatever benefits might accrue to him from its terms.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Now, I understand that the War Department conducts its business not in accordance with local custom, but upon the plain letter of the law. I do not understand that contracts are let under the law with the understanding that their terms shall be violated as a matter of custom. Here is the situation in relation to this case. Bids were submitted in April. The grain was to be supplied by the 1st of July, upon condition that the Quartermaster-General approved the contract. The Quartermaster-General never approved the contract, but the officer in charge of that department, it appears, became short of forage, and he took some 20,000 or 30,000 pounds of oats from this claimant to meet a temporary necessity.

Mr. GRAFF. Under the terms of the contract.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Under the terms of the contract, at $2.05 a hundred pounds, and paid him the money, when, as a matter of fact, oats were only then worth $1.65 a hundred pounds. The claimant has received this under the terms of a contract that the Government never was bound by and was not responsible under. He has already had a profit of 40 cents a hundred on some 26,000 or 27,000 pounds of oats.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Does the gentleman take into consideration the fact that the Government got the benefit of oats the year before at a very reduced price?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That is another proposition—that this bill is for the purpose of covering a loss the claimant sustained upon a contract the year before. I assert that when this bill is analyzed it has no foundation whatever in law or equity,

Mr. SLAYDEN. Has it not equity? Only a few days ago this House passed a bill to pay for a building in Buffalo which was blown down while being erected under a contract for the Government. It was blown down before completion, and we not only paid for it, but we paid for the damage done by the destruction of the building.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Admitting that the Government paid such a claim as that, the conditions were peculiar——

Mr. SLAYDEN. It was at Buffalo.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The contractor could not procure insurance to protect himself, and I do not know what all. But if the Government paid that kind of a claim a few days ago, it does not justify the Government now in recognizing a liability of this character. I want to impress upon the committee this fundamental proposition: There was no contract here. The bid was submitted with the understanding that there was to be no contract until the proposition had been approved by the Quartermaster-General at Washington.

The Quartermaster-General refused to approve the bid, because he said the price fixed was exorbitant. It fixed the price of oats at $2.05 a hundred pounds, and the quartermaster subsequently made a contract for all the oats needed in that department at $1.65 a hundred pounds. Therefore the claimant had no right to expect any profit upon his proposal until it had been completed, until the Quartermaster-General had accepted it. He refused it, and in the meantime the claimant got the benefit of the contract price, amounting to 40 cents a hundred pounds profit on about 29,000 pounds of oats that he sold to meet an exigency.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Will the gentleman permit me to interrupt him there?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Certainly.

Mr. SLAYDEN. The price was not exorbitant when the bids were made and submitted by this firm, which is a responsible firm, with which the Government had directly contracted and had contracted under conditions under which it seems they suffered a severe loss on forage.

There were also many other contractors who bid; the prices were not exorbitant at the time. Then the rains came and the crops thrived and the price of oats did go down; but the year before, at the time this price was named, the Government entered into contracts with this contractor, who accepted the price, but the rains did not come and the crops withered, and the price went up and there was considerable loss, but these parties filled their contract faithfully.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That can not affect the legal or equitable character of this measure in the least.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I do not deny that the Quartermaster-General had the right to reject the bid.

Mr. CRUMPACKER (continuing). And the bill is urged for the purpose of recovering profits upon a contract that never was entered into by the Government, and that is all there is of it. The claimant has been paid a munificent price for every pound of oats that he furnished the Government.

Mr. SLAYDEN. It was not a fair or a good price for the year before.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. This proposition does not involve the price that year.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I think it does, in equity.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. He got a profit of 40 cents on every hundred pounds of oats furnished, and he makes no claim for forage furnished to the Government that is unpaid for; but if the Quartermaster-General had approved the contract, and he had supplied the oats under it, he would have made a large profit. The effect of this bill is to assess a judgment for damages against the Government because the Quartermaster-General would not approve the contract.

In my opinion no claim has ever been brought before the House that had less merit in it than this. This claimant had no contract, no claim upon the Government; he knew he was to have no contract or claim until the Quartermaster-General approved his proposal. Therefore he has no claim against the Government for speculative profits. He supplied some oats and was paid for them in full. That is a full statement of the whole question.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Never before in the history of contractors with the Government down there had there been any doubts about there being a contract after the bids were advertised if, upon opening, one man was notified that his price had been accepted and he had made his bond. Now, then, taking the custom of the Government with contractors in previous years, the fact that the acceptance of these bids had always been the equivalent of a proclamation that there was a contract, and in view of the fact that this man had done faithful service to the Government in previous years, in view of the fact that his record was good and had been satisfactory, and in view of the further fact that the commanding officer had called upon him for a partial completion of his contract, I would like to ask the gentleman if he does not think that the man had a right to think that he had a contract?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. In the first place, if the price of grain had gone above the contract price, will anyone claim that he could not have entirely exonerated himself from the performance of his bid on the ground that the Quartermaster-General had not approved it? And it would not have involved any moral delinquency on his part, either, to make that defense.

I can not accept the statement of the gentleman, although I know him to be a truthful man, that it has been the custom in Texas for the Government to regard as a contract a bid submitted in pursuance of an advertisement until the proposal has been accepted by proper authority. I can not accept as binding upon this House, or upon any court or any department of the Government, the assertion that the claimant had the right to presume that the Quartermaster-General would approve the bid because he had approved bids theretofore.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I hope the gentleman will not misunderstand me.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. In this case it does not appear that the claimant bought any grain or invested any money on the strength of that alleged custom, or put himself to any disadvantage whatever. There is nothing to show that, and therefore it is simply a bill proposing that the Government shall pay him the profits on a contract he may have had reason to hope would be made out, which in fact never was made.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I will say that Mr. Mugge tells me he did make contracts in Kansas that year.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. There is nothing in the record and nothing before the House to show it.

Mr. SLAYDEN. That is why we want it sent to the Court of Claims.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I think it better be recommitted to the committee to further investigate the facts. This is a dangerous precedent to establish here.

Mr. GRAFF. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment which I think would not be objectionable to the other side. The bill calls for the finding of a single fact, and it would do no harm to either party to have all the facts submitted, together with the law, and I have prepared an amendment which I shall offer, as follows:

Amend the bill by inserting after the word "contract," in line 10 of said bill, the following words: "and to make such findings of fact and law as may be pertinent in said transaction."

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Well, that is so general it will do little good, and I do not think the bill ought to be passed at all. I do not think it is necessary to go to the Court of Claims to find out that there is no basis for this claim. We do not need to send it there. I do not think the amendment is specific enough, anyhow. If it is submitted to the Court of Claims at all, it ought to be submitted on the question as to whether there is any liability on the part of the Government under the principles of law that regulate the liability of parties in alleged breaches of contract.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. And let them return a judgment without coming back to Congress?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Yes; and let them render judgment. The form in which the bill is limits the power of the Court of Claims to determine whether or not any damage has accrued on account of the failure of the Quartermaster-General to approve the contract. The bill ought to be recommitted.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I have no objection to the amendment offered by the chairman of the committee.

Mr. SOUTHARD. If the gentleman from Texas will pardon me, this contract seems to be for 840,000 pounds of oats. The bid was $2.05 per 100 pounds. There is nothing in the report to indicate whether that was a fair and reasonable price or not.

Mr. SLAYDEN. It was the lowest bid.

Mr. SOUTHARD. It may have been the lowest bid, but all the bids were made with the understanding that they were to be submitted to the Quartermaster-General for his approval. When they got to the Quartermaster-General he found that the price of oats upon the market where these bids were made was $1.25 per 100 pounds.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Oh, no.

Mr. SOUTHARD. The market rate, it appears, was $1.25 per 100 pounds.

Mr. SLAYDEN. That was in June or July, afterwards.

Mr. SOUTHARD. The report states—

That the price at which the award was made was very much in excess of the market rate ($1.25 per 100 pounds).

Mr. SLAYDEN. That was when the Quartermaster-General made his inquiry; but that is disproved in the next line.

Mr. SOUTHARD. I understand; I am coming to the next line. He found the market price to be $1.25 per 100 pounds afterwards. Now, the report states that all contracts awarded in Texas at that time were disapproved. It does not state the reason for such action; but there was evidently some reason. I know that afterwards proposals were made and contracts concluded for oats at $1.65 per 100 pounds. That may have been in excess of the market price. We have no evidence on that point, and the report contains no statement as to that.

Now, there is one other point to which I want to call the attention of the gentleman. It is possible, and presumably it is true, that this man was paid for 30,000 pounds of oats furnished by him at the rate of $2.05 per 100 pounds. Now, is it not presumably true that he received all he was entitled to in equity?

Mr. SLAYDEN. I think not. In the first place, I do not know at what price the 29,000 pounds were settled for—possibly at the contract rate.

Mr. SOUTHARD. At the contract rate, which was greatly in excess of the market price.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Not greatly in excess of the market price at the time the bids were made. Anyone who has had any experience in the business of bidding on contracts knows that when there are a number of competitors contracts are sometimes taken on a narrow margin.

Mr. SOUTHARD. The report gives no information on that subject.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I want to say to the gentleman that he is entirely mistaken if he thinks I have tried at any time in my remarks to cover up the fact that the Quartermaster-General had authority in law to reject any and all contracts. That is the general provision of the statute.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I did not intend to convey such an impression. The gentleman's remarks did not impress me in that way. His statements were altogether fair and proper in all respects.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I do believe that this contractor has been treated unfairly by the Government. I do not believe that the Government ought to hold him to a hard contract under a secure bond and then deny him the privilege of getting some compensation when the markets happened to come his way. I sincerely hope that the House will pass the bill brought in by the Committee on Claims, even with the amendments suggested by the chairman of the committee, to which I make no objection.

Mr. GRAFF. I move to amend by inserting after the word "contract," in line 10, the following words:

To make such findings of fact and law as may be pertinent in said transaction.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I move now that the enacting clause of the bill be struck out.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I hope the Committee of the Whole will vote down that motion.

The question being taken, the motion of Mr. CRUMPACKER was rejected; there being on a division—ayes 9, noes 24.

Mr. GRAFF. I now move that the bill as amended be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

T. B. STACKHOUSE.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 9295) for the relief of T. B. Stackhouse, a deputy collector of internal revenue for the district of South Carolina during the fiscal year 1894–95.

The bill was read, as follows:

Whereas T. B. Stackhouse, a deputy collector of internal revenue for the district of South Carolina during the fiscal year 1894–95, failed to receive balance due him on account of traveling expenses for that year, his claim for such having miscarried between the offices of the collector of internal revenue, Columbia, S. C., and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington, D. C., for which no blame could attach to him; and

Whereas while said claim is justly due and owing said T. B. Stackhouse, it is now barred by the statute of limitations: Therefore,

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to T. B. Stackhouse the sum of $72.32, being the balance due for necessary traveling expenses as deputy collector of internal revenue for the district of South Carolina for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1895.

Mr. GRAFF. Mr. Chairman, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, in a letter dated January 18, 1902, which is incorporated in the report, says:

There is no reason known to this office why a bill of relief in this case should not be granted.

I move therefore that the bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

EDWARD R. STACKABLE.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 966) for the relief of Edward R. Stackable, collector of customs for the district of Hawaii.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to issue to Edward R. Stackable, collector of customs for the district of Hawaii, duplicates in lieu of three United States gold certificates issued under the act of March 14, 1900, series of 1900, numbered, respectively, 675, 677, and 678, for $10,000 each, issued by the assistant treasurer of the United States at San Francisco, Cal., on January 31, 1901, payable to the order of the Bank of Hawaii, Limited, Honolulu, H. I., and transferred by said Bank of Hawaii to said Edward R. Stackable as collector of customs in payment of custom duties, said certificates having been lost on the Pacific mail steamer Rio de Janeiro, which was wrecked in or near the harbor of San Francisco, Cal., on the 22d day of February, 1901: Provided, That the said Edward R. Stackable shall first file in the Treasury a bond of indemnity in double the amount of the principal of said certificates with good and sufficient sureties, to be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, with condition to indemnify and save harmless the United States from any claim because of the lost certificates hereinbefore described.

Mr. GRAFF. Mr. Chairman, the facts in this case are set forth in a letter of the Secretary of the Treasury dated January 20, 1902, which letter is contained in the report. I ask the Clerk to read that letter in my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the letter in the time of the gentleman from Illinois.

The Clerk read as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, January 20, 1902.

SIR: I have the honor to state, in reply to your letter of the 17th instant, that the bill (H. R. 966) for the relief of Edward R. Stackable, collector of customs for the district of Hawaii, is, in the opinion of this Department, a meritorious measure. Mr. Stackable, collector of customs, had received the gold certificates amounting to $30,000, more particularly described in the bill, in part payment for certain duties due the United States, and in the regular course of business transmitted them to the assistant treasurer at San Francisco for collection and deposit of the proceeds to his credit as collector of customs, on account of duties on imports.

His action in this matter was in accordance with the usage sanctioned by the Department, and the subsequent loss of the certificates through the sinking of the steamer by which they were being transported to San Francisco has created an apparent shortage in his accounts for which he is in no wise responsible.

A caveat has been entered against the redemption of the certificates in question, both at this Department and at the office of the assistant treasurer at San Francisco, and, as the certificates are payable to order, there is no probability of their becoming a liability against the United States in the hands of innocent parties.

The bill in question is correctly drawn, and I recommend that it receive the favorable report of your committee without amendment.

Respectfully, yours,

L. J. GAGE, Secretary.

Hon. JOSEPH V. GRAFF,
Chairman Committee on Claims, House of Representatives.

Mr. GRAFF. Mr. Chairman, I notice that the letters "dred," the last syllable of the word "hundred," are omitted from the bill in line 8 on page 1, and I therefore move to amend the bill by inserting the letters "dred."

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would suggest that in the official copy the bill is all right.

Mr. GRAFF. Then I move that the bill be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

SOL BEAR & CO.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 303) for the relief of Sol Bear & Co.

The bill was read, as follows:

Whereas Sol Bear & Co., of Wilmington, N. C., paid to the Government of the United States the sum of $156.64 on the 17th of October, 1900, for internal-revenue stamps for three barrels of whisky, and before the arrival of the said stamps and the affixing of the same to said packages they were accidentally destroyed by fire in a Government warehouse; and

Whereas the collector of internal revenue for the eastern district of North Carolina has recommended to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue that the said sum of $156.64 be refunded, but under the present provision of law, being section 3221 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, the same can not be refunded without special legislative relief: Therefore,

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States be, and he is hereby, empowered and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $156.64 to said Sol Bear & Co., of Wilmington, N. C., upon said Sol Bear & Co. first surrendering to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue the original stamps issued for said sum of money.

The amendment recommended by the committee and set forth in the report was read.

Mr. GRAFF. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the Clerk read the report in my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the report in the gentleman's time.

The report (by Mr. FOSTER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 303) for the relief of Sol Bear & Co., beg leave to submit the following report, and recommend that said bill do pass with an amendment:

Sol Bear & Co., of Wilmington, N. C., paid to the Government of the United States the sum of $156.64 on the 17th of October, 1900, for internal-revenue stamps for 3 barrels of whisky, and before the arrival of the stamps and the affixing of the same to the said packages they were accidentally destroyed by fire in a Government warehouse. The collector of internal revenue for the eastern district of North Carolina has recommended to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue that the said sum of $156.64 be refunded, but under the present law, being section 3221 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, the same can not be refunded without legislative action.

This bill provides for the refunding to Sol Bear & Co. the said sum of $156.64 upon the surrender of the original stamps to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

The committee recommend that the third line of the bill be amended so as to read as follows: "That the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States be, and he is hereby."

Mr. GRAFF. Mr. Chairman, is it in order for me to move to strike out the preamble to the bill?

The CHAIRMAN. The first question will be upon the committee amendment.

Mr. GRAFF. I move the adoption of the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GRAFF. Now I move to strike out the preamble.

The motion was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The Clerk began the reading of the bill (H. R. 9991) for the relief of F. E. Coyne, which was No. 215 on the Private Calendar.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry. I want to know why Calendar No. 213 was passed over?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that it is passed over because it is a bill reported from the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I should like to call the attention of the Chair to the ruling made by the honorable Speaker of this House on the 8th of this month. I refer the Chair to the RECORD, page 1482, in which the Speaker held that this bill could come up on either Friday; and, as I understand, held that private claims had preference over war claims on one Friday, and that on the next Friday war claims had preference over private claims, but that that did not displace other bills that were on this Calendar.

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman state again the bill to which he refers?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. The bill H. R. 610, which is Calendar No. 213. I would say to the Chair that I have the RECORD here, if he would like to see it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is of opinion that the next bill in order is the bill H. R. 280, which is No. 211 on the Calendar. After that, Calendar No. 213 will be in order.

JAMES M. STRADLING.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 280) for the relief of James M. Stradling.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That James M. Stradling shall be held and considered to have been mustered into the service of the United States as a second lieutenant of the First Regiment of New Jersey Cavalry Volunteers on the 19th day of July, 1864, and that the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to issue to him a certificate of discharge as a second lieutenant of said regiment, to date from the 16th day of September, 1864: Provided, That no pay, bounty, or other emoluments shall become due or payable by virtue of the passage of this act.

The bill was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

JOHN F. ANTLITZ.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 610) to correct the military record of John F. Antlitz.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to correct the military record of John F. Antlitz, of Company H, First Regiment South Dakota Volunteer Infantry, so that it will show that he was discharged in consequence of physical disability contracted subsequent to his enlistment, and grant him an honorable discharge of date June 22, 1898, and that he be allowed travel pay and allowances.

The bill was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

F. E. COYNE.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 9991) for the relief of F. E. Coyne.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Postmaster-General be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to allow on the accounts of F. E. Coyne, postmaster at Chicago, Ill., a credit of $74,610 for postage stamps stolen from said post-office by burglars, October 19-20, 1901.

Mr. GRAFF. Mr. Chairman, I yield to my colleague from Illinois [Mr. BOUTELL], who will make a brief statement of the case.

Mr. BOUTELL. Mr. Chairman, this bill provides for the relief of Mr. F. E. Coyne, postmaster at Chicago, by allowing him a credit on his account for $74,610, for which he is technically liable, on account of a robbery of the vaults at the Chicago post-office some time between October 19 and October 21 last. The facts in connection with the case are these: When the clerk of the wholesale stamp vault, Mr. F. O. Spaulding, left the office at half past 12 in the afternoon of Saturday, the 19th of October, he left in the vaults $76,068 worth of stamps. When the vault was opened at 20 minutes to 8 on Monday morning, the 21st of October, he found in the vault only $1,458 worth of stamps, and that $74,610 worth of stamps had been stolen, the largest and most daring burglary in the history of the post-office establishment.

It appeared, so far as the circumstances surrounding the case go, that the burglary was not only a very daring one, but one that had been planned long beforehand, and carried out through a long series of days and even, possibly, weeks and months. The building now occupied by the Chicago post-office is a temporary brick structure on the lake front, facing west on Michigan avenue and running south from Randolph street to a point south of Washington street. At the south there is an open space, and at the east there is an open space between the building and the high stone wall of the Illinois Central Railroad tracks. The building is built on a brick foundation, with piers under the building. The floor goes very near to the ground. On the east side of the building there is a platform about 3 feet high, for the delivery and reception of the mail. For greater security this platform has been boarded in.

In 1900 it became necessary to strengthen the foundations of the building, and for that purpose the wall was broken in and ditches dug under the building, and the foundations were strengthened and the wall was built up again. When this burglary was discovered and a search was made, it appeared that the burglars had entered the space under the platform on the east of the building, had cut through a small opening or temporary door which gave access to the space underneath the platform for the purpose of getting to the steam pipes. Once under the platform they were entirely concealed, and could carry on their work without detection, especially in the night. It was found that after entering the space under the platform at the south end they moved north some sixty feet, and at this point they moved down the east wall of the building. This giving them access to the space under the building they found these ditches, and by following them along were able to locate the space directly under the vaults.

These vaults are three in number. One is a rectangular vault, about twice as long as it is wide, and back of this are two smaller vaults half the size of the other vault. One of these smaller vaults was used by the wholesale stamp clerk, who was the only man in the department who had access to it or had a key to the vault. In this vault there was a wooden cabinet standing, not on rollers, but flush with the floor, weighing several hundred pounds, and about 30 inches in width. Having located the wholesale stamp vault, it appears that with drills and with the aid of dry electric batteries to furnish them light they had drilled contiguous holes for an opening of about 18 inches square.

These holes were completed on three sides and partially completed on the fourth side, with a strip of iron at the bottom eventually pulled off this cabinet, which stood so that this work could not be discovered while the work was going on. It was moved aside and access was obtained to the vault, the stamps removed, and under the cover of night the burglars escaped without attracting attention. It appears from the nature of the borings that the work must have been going on for several weeks, perhaps a month, and the boring was done under this cabinet, so that it did not attract attention. As soon as the burglary was discovered, on the morning of the 21st of October, it was immediately reported to the post-office inspector, who reported it to the city police; and the post-office inspectors, the city police, and the Pinkerton Detective Agency have since been endeavoring to find some trace of the burglars, but up to the present time no clues have been found, and the authorities are unable to locate in any way the persons responsible for this daring robbery of these stamps. The Postmaster-General gives all the facts in his report.

Mr. BUTLER. He recommends this relief.

Mr. BOUTELL. And he recommends the relief.

Mr. GRAFF. I move that the bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. COWHERD. Mr. Chairman, I desire to ask the gentleman a question.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is, Shall the bill be laid aside?

Mr. COWHERD. I addressed the Chair, and asked the privilege of asking the gentleman a question.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair did not understand.

Mr. COWHERD. I would like to ask the gentleman from Illinois when this robbery occurred?

Mr. BOUTELL. It occurred between the afternoon of the 19th of October last, which was Saturday, and the morning of October 21, which was Monday.

Mr. COWHERD. And no trace has been found of that large number of stamps, as to where they were disposed of?

Mr. BOUTELL. I understand that no trustworthy trace has been found of them, although large sales of stamps in the hands of private owners have been scrutinized by the inspectors of the Department.

Mr. COWHERD. Were these stamps in the place where they should be kept, as provided by law?

Mr. BOUTELL. They were, and the provision was very careful. There were three large vaults at that time in the Chicago post-office, in which there were over $800,000 worth of stamps. These stamps which were stolen were in the smaller vault, known as the wholesale stamp vault, in which there were $78,068 worth of stamps.

Mr. COWHERD. Is there not a law which permits the Post-Office Department to give credit to a postmaster where stamps are stolen from the safe provided by law?

Mr. BOUTELL. I think that relates only to small offices and to small amounts, perhaps $10,000 or $15,000.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

JAMES M. MILLER AND OTHERS.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (S. 1573) to authorize Commander James M. Miller, United States Navy; Surg. Oliver D. Norton, United States Navy, and Mr. Edwin V. Morgan, formerly secretary of the Samoan Commission and now secretary of the legation of the United States at Seoul, Korea, to accept presents tendered to them by His Majesty the Emperor of Germany.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is of the opinion that the gentleman is entitled to call up that bill. It seems that certain bills were omitted or passed over by the Clerk in reading, this one among others, as coming from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and presumably not in order to-day. The Chair is of the opinion that under the resolution of March 14, 1900, which was readopted December 2, 1901, for this Congress, the bill is in order at this time. That resolution or order simply determines the question of priority or precedence as between bills from the Committee on Claims and bills from the Committee on War Claims, but does not displace bills from any other committee which would otherwise be in order.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Commander James M. Miller, United States Navy; Surg. Oliver D. Norton, United States Navy, and Mr. Edwin V. Morgan, formerly secretary of the Samoan Commission and now secretary of the legation of the United States at Seoul, Korea, be, and they are hereby, authorized to accept, respectively, a gold watch and chain, a marine glass, and a silver writing table, tendered to them through the Department of State of the United States by His Majesty the Emperor of Germany, King of Prussia; and the Department of State is hereby authorized to deliver the testimonials mentioned to them.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

LOUIS WEBER.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 1375) for the relief of Louis Weber.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Louis Weber, of Fauquier Springs, Va., be, and he is hereby declared to be, entitled to the benefits of the acts of August 4 and 5, 1854, as to reenlistment pay during his last service, from August 25, 1864, to July 9, 1867, in the United States Marine Corps.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

EDWARD KERSHNER.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 5224) for the relief of Edward Kershner.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered to appoint Edward Kershner as medical director in the Navy on the retired list.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

JEROME E. MORSE.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 720) for the relief of Lieut. Jerome E. Morse.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered to transfer Lieut. Jerome E. Morse, of the retired list of the United States Navy, from the half-pay list to the 75 per cent pay list of retired officers, under section 1588 of the Revised Statutes of the United States; and the said transfer shall take effect as of the passage of this act.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

LIEUT. COMMANDER R. M. G. BROWN.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 4748) authorizing the President of the United States to nominate Lieut. Commander R. M. G. Brown, now on the retired list, to be a commander on the retired list.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Whereas Capt. N. H. Farquhar, United States Navy, in his report in regard to the disaster at Apia, Samoa, March, 1889, made the following report, which was forwarded by Rear-Admiral Kimberly to the Navy Department:

"Lieut. R. M. G. Brown, the navigator, was by my side the whole time, and to his excellent judgment, one time at least, the ship was cleared of a reef. Had we struck it I fear few of the 450 people on board of the Trenton would be alive to-day."

The Navy Department, in its reply to Rear-Admiral Kimberly, said:

"The flagship, now without steam or rudder, her anchors dragging, drifted almost at the mercy of the gale along the edges of the eastern reef, at times not more than 20 feet from total destruction. Every endeavor was made to control her movements, and her commanding officer states in his report that upon at least one occasion it was through the excellent judgment of Lieut. R. M. G. Brown, the navigating officer, that the ship cleared the reef and the 450 lives on board were saved. The Department notes with satisfaction your commendation of Lieutenant Brown, and also of Lieut. Commander Henry W. Lyon, the executive officer, for their efforts to save the ship;" and

Whereas the State of West Virginia presented a suitably inscribed sword to Lieutenant Brown, the act of the legislature reading as follows:

* * * * * * *

"Whereas Capt. N. H. Farquhar, United States Navy, recognized in his official report of that great disaster that at one time, at least, owing to the excellent judgment of Lieutenant Brown, the ship was kept off the reef and the lives of 450 people saved; and the State of West Virginia, in recognition of his excellent seamanship and hitherto unknown and ingenious order, in putting the crew of 400 seamen in the rigging and thereby forming 'a living sail,' and thus guiding the ship to harbor when sails could not resist the storm."

* * * * * * *

Therefore,

Be it enacted, etc., That the President is hereby authorized to nominate to the Senate Lieut. Commander R. M. G. Brown, now on the retired list, to be a commander on the retired list.

Mr. DAYTON. Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of the amendment proposed by the Committee on Naval Affairs, to strike out the preamble of the bill, and that the bill as amended be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman offer an amendment?

Mr. DAYTON. I move to strike out the preamble.

The question was taken and the amendment was agreed to.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. GROSVENOR having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message from the Senate, by Mr. PARKINSON, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bill of the following title; in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 3107. An act to authorize the construction of a bridge over Missouri River at or near Kansas City, Mo.

ROBERT J. SPOTTSWOOD AND OTHERS.

The committee resumed its session.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 7018) for the relief of Robert J. Spottswood and the heirs of William C. McClellan, deceased.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Robert J. Spottswood and the heirs of William C. McClellan, deceased, of Colorado, $15,731, as additional compensation for transporting the United States mail from Morrison to Fairplay, and from Fairplay to Leadville, in the State of Colorado, by the said Spottswood and McClellan, from the 1st day of September, 1878, to the 10th day of September, 1879.

The amendment reported by the Committee on Claims was read, as follows:

In line 7 strike out "$15,731" and insert "$10,000."

Mr. GRAFF. I ask for the reading of the report in my time.

The report (by Mr. SCHIRM) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7018) for the relief of Robert J. Spottswood and the heirs of William C. McClellan, beg leave to submit the following report and recommend that said bill do pass.

It appears from the records of the Post-Office Department that route No. 38122, Morrison to Fairplay, Colo., 81 miles, was awarded to McClellan & Spottswood March 15, 1878, for service six times a week, from July 1, 1878, to June 30, 1882, at the rate of $3,973 per annum. In consequence of railroad service having been ordered from Denver to Deer Valley (now Slaghts), service on route 38122 was curtailed to begin at Deer Valley, decreasing the distance 34 miles and deducting $1,667.68 from annual pay of contractors from July 1, 1878.

From October 1, 1878, the service from Deer Valley to Fairplay was increased to seven times a week, for which the contractors were allowed $384.22 additional pay per annum. From February 1, 1879, the service was curtailed to begin at Grant, reducing the distance 12 miles and the pay $686.68; from February 10, 1879, to begin at Webster, reducing the distance 4 miles and pay $235.63, and from June 22, 1879, to begin at Como, reducing distance 20 miles and pay $1,178.15. (See Acting Second Assistant Postmaster-General's letter to Senator Sawyer, May 13, 1884.)

This claim is for carrying a very much larger amount of mail over said route 38122, and also over the route from Fairplay to Leadville, than was expected to be carried or could have reasonably been foretold at the time they contracted to perform the service. This increase of mail was due to the unprecedented growth of the city of Leadville, Colo., in a few months, from a small mining camp of 200 inhabitants to a community of 15,000 persons, most of whom were men sending and receiving mail daily.

The time during which this increased service was performed was from September 9, 1878, to September 10, 1879. The Department reports that no records have been kept showing the weight of the mails, but from the affidavits of the claimants and their agents, the postmasters at Fairplay and Leadville, the special agent of the Post-Office Department, and the statement of the postmaster at Denver, it seems not to have exceeded 150 pounds daily at the time the contract was taken and to have suddenly increased to about 2,000 pounds daily, at which amount it remained during the entire time covered by the claim.

An itemized statement of the increased expense and loss to the contractors as to route No. 38122 is stated by them, as follows:

Deer Valley to Fairplay, 53 miles, 142 days, $53.50 per day	$7,600
Grant to Fairplay, 43 miles, 10 days, $43 per day	430
Webster to Fairplay, 39 miles, 110 days, $39 per day	4,300
Jefferson to Fairplay, 27 miles, 23 days, $27 per day	621
Como to Fairplay, 10 miles, 78 days, $10 per day	780
Repairing, shoeing, and tolls, $100 per month	1,200
Thirty-two head of horses, $25 each, average depreciation in value	800
Total	15,731

It also appears that Messrs. Spottswood & McClellan carried this same mail from Fairplay to Leadville during this same period of time. The distance of this route was 45 miles, being by the Weston Pass, over the range.

To carry the increased mail required an addition of 7 men and 28 horses on this route from Fairplay to Leadville. The men were paid from $50 to $65 per month each, and the cost of maintaining horses was about $1 per day for each.

The enormous increase in the population of Leadville made a great increase in travel, which created such a demand for horses, vehicles, hay, grain, and provisions that the prices of horses increased from $75 to $150 per head and the price of hay from $15 to $80 per ton. As relays of horses had to be used at frequent intervals, it can be readily seen that it was exceedingly costly to maintain a service such as that given by claimants.

Under the direction of Gen. Charles Adams, special agent of the Post-Office Department for Colorado, Messrs. Spottswood & McClellan, on the route from Fairplay to Leadville, were required during July and August, 1879, to carry the lock mail, consisting of letters and valuable packages, over a shorter but more difficult and dangerous route, known as Mosquito Pass route, while the balance of the mail was taken by the longer route over Weston Pass. Thus, in order to get the letters into Leadville a few hours earlier, they were required to establish and maintain an additional route, compelling the employment of an extra force of 4 men and 20 horses.

The estimated loss by reason of the increased mail from Fairplay to Leadville and the additional route was, by Mr. Spottswood, placed at $12,539.

The Senate in the Fifty-fifth Congress passed the bill for $28,260, but in the Fifty-sixth Congress cut the amount to $15,731, which amount was recommended in the Fifty-sixth Congress by this committee.

We therefore recommend that in satisfaction of all claims for losses upon both routes that there be paid the sum of $10,000.

If the increase in pay were in proportion to the increase in weight, it would amount to over $46,000 on the route from Morrison to Fairplay alone. The price charged at that time for hauling express matter from Morrison to Leadville was 7½ cents per pound. The affidavit of Mr. Griffith shows that Messrs. McClellan & Spottswood, on account of the room taken by this increased mail, were compelled to turn over to others a daily average of about 2,000 pounds of express matter which had been consigned to them.

If the mail paid the same charges as express matter, the additional expense would have been $50,366.

Your committee think the amount recommended herein is a favorable compromise for the Government.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. I wish to ask the gentleman from Illinois whether this matter has ever been submitted to the Post-Office Department and whether there has ever been any report upon it.

Mr. GRAFF. Yes, sir. This matter has been before Congress, as I understand, for a great many years. The bill passed the Senate at least three times. The matter has been considered in the Committee on Claims of the House since I have been a member of it during three sessions of Congress, and in each case there has been a favorable report from our committee. In addition to that the bill has been reported from the Senate Committee on Claims in almost every session of Congress for the last fifteen years.

Mr. SHAFROTH. The amount of the bill as passed by the Senate was $28,400.

Mr. GRAFF. I do not remember the amount at which the bill passed the Senate; I think it was $15,000.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Once at $28,000, and another time at $15,000.

Mr. GRAFF. The only difficulty about the bill in the Committee on Claims was to ascertain what would be a conservative amount to allow. It seemed to us a case which stood by itself—a case of peculiar hardship—which would not be likely to occur except on rare occasions.

As stated in the report, Leadville sprang in a very short time from a village community to a great city. There was a great population there, and the amount of mail to be handled was tremendous. At the time the bid was made it was contemplated that the mail would be hauled in a single wagon, and the carrier of the mail contemplated recompensing himself by carrying freight in his wagon in addition to carrying the mail.

Suddenly the discovery of gold at Leadville caused this little village, as I have said, to expand into a city. With that expansion came the increase of the mail matter from a few pounds, comparatively, to tons. The problem which met this contractor was not the same which would meet one carrying the mail in an ordinary flat country. He had to contend with difficulties which are to be met in the transportation of mail over a mountainous country and in all seasons of the year.

The committee cut the original amount of the bill—$15,000—down to $10,000. I personally know that the subcommittee spent a number of days hearing testimony and examining papers in regard to this bill. They inquired into every item and all the circumstances.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. I understand that when this contract was first let it was for about four years?

Mr. GRAFF. Yes, sir.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. Apparently the contract was modified by subsequent action of the Post-Office Department, decreasing the distance over which mail was to be carried, and deducting a certain amount from the annual pay.

Mr. GRAFF. Yes, sir. But that matter cuts no figure in this case—is not an element in its consideration—except to show the actual amount that the contractor received for transporting this mail over a reduced distance.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. Was it not in the power of the Department to modify or cancel this contract and issue a more equitable one?

Mr. GRAFF. I hardly think the Department would have any authority to issue a new contract under the circumstances. I doubt very much whether they would be warranted in taking that course.

Mr. SHAFROTH. And the Department declines to do anything. I will state to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOODY] that these parties made an application for relief to the Department at the time the mail was increasing, and the Department said it was beyond their power; that the only relief that could be given was through Congress.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. Then I understand that the declination was not based upon a denial of the equity of the claim.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I think not.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. But upon a denial of the power to act.

Mr. SHAFROTH. They said they had no power to change the contract.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. I should like to know whether this matter has ever been reported upon by the Post-Office Department. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAFF] did not quite answer my question.

Mr. SHAFROTH. There have been letters from the Department, and they have simply said that they have never kept the weights of the mails; that it was impossible for them to do so: that it was a matter exclusively for Congress to determine what should be done in the case.

Mr. GRAFF. The Department does not express any opinion, either favorable or adverse, upon the bill, and, as is stated in the report, the Department reports that no records have been kept showing the weight of the mails. That is the substance of everything that has been contained in every response which the committee has received from the Post-Office Department.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. I think everyone will agree that this is an exceedingly dangerous precedent. At the same time the hardship to the contractor in this case seems to be a very marked one.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Let me call the attention of the gentleman from Massachusetts to this fact, that in the great rush to Leadville the population increased from 200 to 30,000. The facts are not stated as strongly in the report as they should have been. Leadville increased to a population temporarily of 30,000 instead of 15,000; and you can readily see that from a mining camp of 200 to a population of 30,000 an immense lot of mail would come and go to and from Leadville.

There was express matter in large quantities to be sent to Leadville, and McClelland & Spottswood expected to take the express matter, for which they would have received 7½ cents a pound. If they had carried the amount of express matter instead of the increased weight of mail, it would have made them over $50,000. They had to consign that express matter to other parties.

They have been before this Congress, they have had a favorable report in the Senate, and their bill passed the Senate at one time appropriating $28,000, I think, and at another time $15,000, and a favorable report was made by this committee to the House at the last session of Congress for $15,000.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. I should like to ask the gentleman if this special case has been thoroughly investigated by the present committee?

Mr. GRAFF. It has.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. And is it a unanimous report?

Mr. GRAFF. It is.

Mr. MOODY of Massachusetts. I suppose the gentleman would agree with me that this bill should not be treated as a precedent for any other action of this kind.

Mr. GRAFF. I desire to state to the gentleman from Massachusetts that when the bill came to our committee I was inclined to be opposed to it, and it was only because of the exceptional case and the merits of it that I was forced to the conclusion that it was an equitable case and a very exceptional one.

The report shows that the amount of mail to be transported increased from 150 pounds daily to 2,000 pounds daily, at which amount it remained during the entire time covered by the claim.

Mr. BUTLER. What price was paid for express matter?

Mr. SHAFROTH. Seven and a half cents a pound.

Mr. GRAFF. The report also shows that at that time the prices of horses and all other articles in that vicinity rose very greatly.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. We have already established one precedent for this to-day, have we not? This is precisely in line with the bill we had awhile ago to pay for the increased Canadian mail, was it not?

Mr. GRAFF. I think it is a very much stronger case than the one to which you refer.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

HUGH C. PRESTON.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 9280) for the relief of Hugh C. Preston.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the accounting officers of the Treasury are hereby authorized and directed, in the settlement of the accounts of Hugh C. Preston, late first lieutenant, Thirty-first Infantry, United States Volunteers, to allow him credit for $737.03, the same being the amount of funds of the United States stolen from his tent at Zamboanga, in the island of Mindanao, P. I., on or about December 31, 1900, while he was acting as commissary of subsistence, in accordance with the finding of the board of survey.

Mr. GRAFF. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. OTEY].

Mr. OTEY. Mr. Chairman, this is simply the case of Lieutenant Preston, who was in the Philippine Islands, and who had $737 stolen from him. A board of survey was appointed, and the board of survey exonerated him. He simply wishes to have this amount passed to his credit, which is now stopped. The Secretary of War recommends it, and so does the Commissary-General.

Mr. GRAFF. I move that the bill be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

P. A. M'CLAIN.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 8209) for the relief of P. A. McClain.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to pay to P. A. McClain, collector of internal revenue at Philadelphia, Pa., out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $366, the amount deposited in the Treasury of the United States by said P. A. McClain in payment for adhesive revenue stamps issued to him in the months of June and July, 1898, by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and not received, sold, or accounted for by him.

The bill was ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

LAURA A. WILLETT.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 3510) for the relief of Laura A. Willett, widow of James P. Willett, deceased, late postmaster of the District of Columbia.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Laura A. Willett, widow of James P. Willett, deceased, late postmaster of the District of Columbia, who lost his life through an open shaft in the new city post-office building on September 30, 1899, the sum of $30,000.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 4 strike out the words "Laura A. Willett" and insert in lieu thereof the words "the executors."

Add at the end of the bill the words "to be distributed as provided by the laws of the District of Columbia in cases of recovery of damages for death by negligence."

Mr. GRAFF. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the report be read, but not the exhibits which are attached.

The CHAIRMAN. The report will be read in the time of the gentleman from Illinois.

The report (by Mr. GRAFF) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3510) for the relief of Laura A. Willett, widow of James P. Willett, deceased, late postmaster of the District of Columbia, beg leave to submit the following report:

It appears from the testimony taken at the coroner's inquest and written and oral statements made before your committee that at about 9 o'clock on the morning of the 30th of September, 1899, the late James P. Willett entered the new city post-office building and went directly to the passenger elevator on the east side, in charge of James E. Dubois, telling him to take him to the fifth floor; but, changing his mind, he got off at the fourth floor and went to the office of Mr. Beaver, chief of the salary and allowance division, who not being in, he then ascended to the fifth floor, where he first intended to land, to visit the Postmaster-General or his First Assistant, with whom he had business.

Neither of these gentlemen being at their desks, he returned to the elevator to regain the first floor, soon after which his body was seen to fall through the shaft of the freight elevator down to the first floor, a distance of about 90 feet, where it struck upon the iron beam of the elevator, fracturing both arms and hips, and causing instant death. It also appears from the testimony taken at said inquest that the gates of the freight elevator had been taken off to admit the furniture which was being moved into the new building, and after their removal were laid athwart the opening at each floor, but, in the opinion of your committee, such a barricade was not a safe protection.

A copy of the proceedings at the coroner's inquest and of letters from the Hon. Charles Emory Smith, Postmaster-General, and the Hon. Perry S. Heath, First Assistant Postmaster-General, are herewith appended and made a part of this report.

Your committee therefore recommends the passage of the said bill, with the following amendments:

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "five."

In line 4 strike out the words "Laura A. Willett, widow," and insert in lieu thereof the words "the executors."

At the conclusion of line 8 add the following: "to be distributed as provided by the laws of the District of Columbia in cases of recovery of damages for death by negligence."

Amend the title by striking out the words "Laura A. Willett, widow," and insert in lieu thereof the words "the executors."

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I would like to ask the gentleman a question or two about this matter.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois yield to the gentleman from Indiana?

Mr. GRAFF. I do.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Has the gentleman personally investigated the facts in connection with the claim?

Mr. GRAFF. I will state that during the last session of Congress, when the bill was before the committee at that time and was referred to the subcommittee of which the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SOUTHARD] and myself were members, we had before us the full proceedings of the coroner's inquest and other affidavits, testimony, and letters, most of which are attached to the report in this case. The question arose as to whether there was negligence, and one of the questions connected with the facts was as to the width of the doors which were taken off the freight elevator and placed lengthwise across the front of the elevator.

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SOUTHARD] went to the Post-Office Department and measured the width of the doors. It was shown to be something like 2½ feet, apparently a height calculated more to increase danger than to serve as a means of protection. There was no one present at the time when Mr. Willett fell through the elevator. Therefore the facts surrounding his falling in and the immediate cause of it was left to be established by circumstantial evidence.

There is testimony going to show that Mr. Willett at the time was in his usual good health and spirits, and that it must have been accidental. There was nothing about the circumstances to show otherwise. There was a report current that Mr. Willett stepped aside for a young lady who was standing immediately in front of this elevator. It was attempted by the coroner's inquest to procure that young lady and have her testimony, but there was no proof regarding that, and it was a mere rumor.

But the circumstances all showed that it was due to the negligence of the employees of the Government in leaving that open elevator there. The gentleman from Indiana will remember there are three elevators in a row on entering the Post-Office Department. The elevators on either side of the middle one are used as passenger elevators; the one in the center is used as a freight elevator. These doors were taken off the middle elevator so as to facilitate the moving of furniture in the building.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Did this accident occur in daytime?

Mr. GRAFF. The accident occurred in the daytime, and——

Mr. DAYTON. The coroner's inquest showed it was due to the negligence of the employees.

Mr. GRAFF. And the coroner's inquest shows that there was negligence.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Does the gentleman believe there is a fair case made against the Government on the facts submitted to his committee?

Mr. GRAFF. I do. I believe there was no contributory negligence on the part of Mr. Willett, and the circumstances make it quite clear there was negligence on the part of the employees of the Government in putting that little narrow door lengthwise across an open elevator so near the entrance to the passenger elevators on either side in a public building, where people were coming and going out and where people are invited to come and go.

Mr. MANN. How much does this bill carry?

Mr. GRAFF. Five thousand dollars. We looked at the statutes of the District of Columbia and found that $10,000 was the limit for recovery for death by negligence. We amended the bill so that the fund would be distributed according to the statutes of the District of Columbia in cases of recovery for negligence. So we cut the maximum amount liable under the statute in two, and made it $5,000.

Mr. MANN. May I ask whether there are any precedents for the Government paying these claims.

Mr. GRAFF. The Ford Theater disaster is a precedent very much like this. All of the death claims there were paid, and all claims for personal injuries were paid.

Mr. MANN. I should say that the Ford's Theater disaster was a different case from this. This is an ordinary case.

Mr. GRAFF. Yes; there have been numerous cases like this passed Congress.

The amendments recommended by the committee were adopted.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

WILLIAM C. DODGE.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 299) for the relief of William C. Dodge.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to William C. Dodge, of Washington, D. C., the sum of $10,000, for a cartridge-loading machine furnished by him to the United States upon an order from the Ordnance Department, and for the use of his invention of the same, and of the patent therefor, dated July 17, 1866, and for his improvement in cartridges, patented July 4, 1865, and for the infringement of his said patents by the United States; which said sum of $10,000 shall be in full satisfaction of all claims for such use and infringements and for the relinquishment of all right to claim any further compensation for the use of the same by the United States.

Mr. GRAFF. I ask for the reading of the report in my time.

The Clerk read the report, as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 299) for the relief of William C. Dodge, beg leave to submit the following report, and recommend that said bill do pass with one amendment.

Bills for compensation to Mr. Dodge for the claim covered by the bill under consideration have passed the Senate six times, and have been favorably reported eight times by committees of the House, but each time failed to be reached for final action.

The facts on which this report is based are set forth in previous reports, and are plainly stated in a report made to the first session of the Fifty-sixth Congress and are here restated and made a part of this report, as follows:

"It appears from the testimony that the operation of filling cartridge cases with powder had always been performed by hand down to 1864, and that it was a very dangerous work, explosions frequently occurring, destroying life and property, despite the utmost precautions.

"June 17, 1864, an explosion occurred in the cartridge-filling shops at the arsenal in Washington, D. C., where 150 operatives were employed, which killed 21 persons and seriously injured many others, who were buried among the burning ruins.

"That in consequence of this disaster the petitioner conceived the idea that this work might be done by a machine, and after a consultation with the officers in charge, who expressed doubts as to the feasibility of his plan, but encouraged him to try, he devised a machine, had a small one made, and submitted it to the Department for trial. Colonel Benton, then in charge of the arsenal, in his official report, under date of December 27, 1864, after describing the machine and the tests to which he had submitted it, concludes with this statement:

"'The principle of this machine is a good one, and a machine properly constructed on it would, I think, give greater uniformity of weight to the charges, and work could be turned out more uniformly, rapidly, and safely than at present done by the hand process.'

"The result was so satisfactory that four days thereafter the Department gave petitioner an order to furnish a full-sized machine which should fill 100 cartridges at a time.

"After much trouble and expense the machine was delivered August 18, 1865. It was officially tested and approved, and in his report, dated February 15, 1866, Colonel Benton says:

"'It can be worked at the rate of six slides-full per minute, or about 360,000 per day, so that one such machine would fill as many cartridges as could be made by any one establishment. If a greater number, however, were required to be filled, the capacity of the machine could be easily increased by increasing the number of holes in the slides and drawers.

"'For cartridges like those of Sharp's and those with copper cases (now used), the use of this machine affords a considerable saving of time, as one machine can do the work of many hands.'

"The great merit of the invention, however, consists in providing means for insuring uniformity of charge, which the present Chief of Ordnance, in a letter to the committee, says is 'a very important matter,' and that he 'knows of no machine prior to that invented by the petitioner that provided any means for that purpose.'

"He also says: 'Mr. Dodge's invention seems to antedate anything of the kind in this country.'

"The invention has been embodied in all machines since built and used by the Government, the present machines being so modified as to also put the bullets into the metallic shells, and then crimp the shells on the bullets to unite them and render the cartridge water-tight. Prior to this invention all cartridges made by the Government had been filled by hand. Since this invention they have all been filled by machines operating on this principle, and doubtless always will be, not only because of the saving in time and expense, but also because of the greater uniformity with which they can be filled, and which General Dyer, then Chief of Ordnance, said was of more value to the Government than the proposed saving of life and property.

"The benefits of this invention to the Government are many. The saving in the cost of filling the cartridge made since its adoption has been from $20,000 to $30,000. It has greatly reduced the risk to both life and property, has enabled the Department to concentrate its business at a single arsenal, thereby enabling the Government to dispense with a large number it formerly had located at various points and the expense of keeping them up, and enables the work to be performed with immensely greater rapidity in cases of emergency and far more perfectly.

"From the nature of the invention it is one that is of value to the Government only, as it is a thing that can not be sold to or used by the public at large.

"It is further shown that when the Government first undertook to manufacture metallic cartridges they proved a failure; so much so that the then Chief of Ordnance, General Dyer, in 1865, declared that the Government would never adopt them.

"After consultation with the Chief of Ordnance, Mr. Dodge invented and patented an improvement which completely remedied the difficulties; and when the Government subsequently concluded to adopt metallic cartridges and began their manufacture they used Mr. Dodge's patented improvement for three years, and until they adopted the outside primer, which rendered its further use unnecessary.

"The petitioner has never been paid a cent, either for the machine furnished on the order of the Department or for the use of his inventions. The Chief of Ordnance says that "he is entitled to remuneration," and the Secretary of War also says he ought to be paid.

"The committee are unanimously of the opinion that the petitioner is justly entitled to remuneration, both for the machine furnished and for the use of his invention, and therefore report back the bill with the recommendation that it be passed."

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. GRAFF. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise and report the several bills and the amendments to the House with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. OLMSTED, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House, reported that that committee had had under consideration bills upon the Private Calendar, and had directed him to report the same back, some with amendments and some without amendments, with the recommendation that those without amendments pass, and that those with amendments, the amendments be adopted, and, as amended, the bills pass.

PRIVATE BILLS PASSED.

The following House bills reported from the Committee of the Whole without amendment were severally considered, ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, read the third time, and passed:

A bill (H. R. 621) for the relief of Daniel Cherry;

A bill (H. R. 7035) for the relief of Charles Hurrle;

A bill (H. R. 949) for the relief of Charles H. Robinson;

A bill (H. R. 2641) for the relief of Albion M. Christie;

A bill (H. R. 5550) for the relief of W. C. Taylor;

A bill (H. R. 3830) for the relief of William C. Marr;

A bill (H. R. 9295) for the relief of T. B. Stackhouse, a deputy collector of internal revenue for the district of South Carolina during the fiscal year 1894 and 1895;

A bill (H. R. 966) for the relief of Edward R. Stackable, collector of customs for the district of Hawaii;

A bill (H. R. 280) for the relief of James M. Stradling;

A bill (H. R. 610) to correct the military record of John F. Antlitz;

A bill (H. R. 9991) for the relief of F. E. Coyne;
A bill (H. R. 1375) for the relief of Louis Weber;
A bill (H. R. 5224) for the relief of Edward Kershner;
A bill (H. R. 720) for the relief of Lieut. Jerome E. Morse;
A bill (H. R. 9280) for the relief of Hugh C. Preston;
A bill (H. R. 299) for the relief of William C. Dodge; and
A bill (H. R. 8209) for the relief of P. A. McClain.

House bills of the following titles, reported with amendments from the Committee of the Whole House, were severally taken up, the amendments agreed to, the bills as amended ordered to be engrossed, and read a third time; and they were accordingly read the third time, and passed:

A bill (H. R. 1381) for the relief of J. V. Davis;
A bill (H. R. 1748) for the relief of Julius E. Mugge;
A bill (H. R. 4748) authorizing the President of the United States to nominate Lieut. Commander R. M. C. Brown, now on the retired list, to be a commander on the retired list;
A bill (H. R. 303) for the relief of Sol Bear & Co.;
A bill (H. R. 7018) for the relief of Robert J. Spottswood and the heirs of William C. McClellan, deceased; and
A bill (H. R. 3510) for the relief of Laura A. Willett, widow of James P. Willett, deceased, late postmaster of the District of Columbia.

A Senate bill of the following title, reported from the Committee of the Whole House without amendment, was taken up, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed:

S. 1573. An act to authorize Commander James M. Miller, United States Navy; Surg. Oliver D. Norton, United States Navy, and Mr. Edwin V. Morgan, formerly secretary of the Samoan Commission, and now secretary of the legation of the United States at Seoul, Korea, to accept presents tendered them by His Majesty the Emperor of Germany.

MARY CHAMBERS.

The bill (H. R. 7020) for the relief of Mary Chambers, widow of Thomas Chambers, was read by its title.

Mr. GRAFF. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate bill which is now on the desk may be substituted for the House bill, and that the House bill lie on the table, and that the Senate bill be put upon its passage.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to substitute the bill S. 219 for the bill just read, and that the Committee on Claims be discharged, and that the House bill lie on the table. Without objection, this order will be made.

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time; and being read the third time, was passed.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. WACHTER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bill of the following title; when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 3104. An act to grant the right of way through the Oklahoma Territory and the Indian Territory to the Enid and Anadarko Railway Company, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

Mr. WACHTER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had presented this day to the President of the United States for his approval bills of the following titles:

H. R. 1200. An act granting an increase of pension to Oliver P. Goodwin;
H. R. 6453. An act granting an increase of pension to Ida R. Siegfried;
H. R. 8652. An act granting an increase of pension to Virginia Terrill;
H. R. 1484. An act granting an increase of pension to Robert M. Scott;
H. R. 7343. An act granting an increase of pension to Martha V. Keenan;
H. R. 3266. An act granting an increase of pension to James Smith;
H. R. 1324. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles N. Lee;
H. R. 11470. An act making an appropriation for clearing the Potomac River of ice;
H. R. 3229. An act granting a pension to Katherine R. A. Ogden;
H. R. 2620. An act granting a pension to Jennie A. McKinley;
H. Res. 88. Joint resolution authorizing the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to return bank checks, drafts, certificates of deposit, and orders for the payment of money, having imprinted stamps thereon, to the owners thereof, and for other purposes; and
H. Res. 131. Joint resolution authorizing the transfer to the Library of Congress of the library of State reports, etc.

SENATE BILL REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate bill of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and referred to its appropriate committee, as indicated below:

S. 3518. An act granting a pension to Nadine A. Turchin—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

By unanimous consent, the Committee on Pensions was discharged from the further consideration of bills of the following titles; and the same were referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions:

S. 1942. An act granting a pension to Kate H. Clements;
S. 3064. An act granting an increase of pension to Emma Sophia Harper Cilley; and
S. 3097. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph A. Nunez.

DEATH OF HON. ROUSSEAU O. CRUMP.

Mr. APLIN. Mr. Speaker, a sad duty requires me to announce to this House the death of my predecessor, the Hon. ROUSSEAU O. CRUMP, late a Representative from the Tenth Congressional district of the State of Michigan. He died at his home, in West Bay City, Mich., on the 1st day of May last, and is mourned by all the people, not only of the district which had honored him by four elections to the House of Representatives, but of the whole State.

I will ask the House at some later day to lay aside its regular work, that tribute may be paid to the memory of my departed friend. For the present I offer the resolutions which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the House of Representatives has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. ROUSSEAU O. CRUMP, late a Representative from the State of Michigan.

Resolved, That as a mark of respect to his memory the House do now adjourn.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted.

The SPEAKER (at 4 o'clock and 35 minutes p. m.). In pursuance of the order of the House heretofore made, and of the resolution just adopted, the House stands adjourned until 12 o'clock noon, on Monday next.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting the result of investigations into the condition of reservation Indians—to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Secretary of the Navy submitting supplemental estimates of appropriations for hospital at Mare Island, California—to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several Calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. DAVIS of Florida, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 9964) to legalize and maintain a new steel bridge erected in place of the old wooden structure across the Little Tennessee River, at Niles Ferry, Tennessee, by the Atlanta, Knoxville and Northern Railroad, reported the same with amendments, accompanied by a report (No. 575); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. JENKINS, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 11474) for the acknowledgment of deeds and other instruments in the Philippine Islands and Porto Rico affecting land situate in the District of Columbia or any Territory of the United States, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 576); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. LANHAM, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 11611) to divide the State of Texas into four judicial districts, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 577); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. DAVEY of Louisiana, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 9332) to authorize the Dothan, Hartford and Florida Railway Company to construct a bridge across East St. Andrews

Bay, navigable water, at a point about 1 mile east of Farmdale, in the State of Florida, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 579); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. KAHN, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 715) to provide for two additional associate justices of the supreme court of the Territory of Oklahoma, and for other purposes, reported the same with amendments, accompanied by a report (No. 580); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

Mr. JETT, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 3278) to correct the military record of C. R. Dickson, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 578); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

ADVERSE REPORTS.

Under clause 2, Rule XIII, adverse reports were delivered to the Clerk, and laid on the table, as follows:

At the request of Mr. SLAYDEN, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 619) to authorize the President to revoke the order dismissing William T. Godwin, late first lieutenant, Tenth Infantry, United States Army, and to place the said William T. Godwin on the retired list with the rank of first lieutenant, reported February 18 adversely (Report No. 563), said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar pursuant to clause 2 of Rule XIII.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of the following bills; which were referred as follows:

A bill (H. R. 11477) for improving Fort street between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets NE., and for other purposes—Committee on the District of Columbia discharged, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

PUBLIC BILLS, MEMORIALS, AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. OTEY (by request): A bill (H. R. 11651) to abolish estates of curtesy and dower in the District of Columbia, to provide for the custody of the persons of children under 14 years of age, to regulate the descent and distribution of the estates of intestates, and for other purposes—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. JENKINS: A bill (H. R. 11652) to amend section 2 of chapter 438 of volume 26, United States Statutes at Large, "An act to authorize the President of the United States to cause certain lands heretofore withdrawn from market for reservoir purposes to be restored to the public domain, subject to entry under the homestead law with certain restrictions," so that any isolated or disconnected tract or parcel thereof may be ordered into market and sold for not less than $1.25 per acre—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. BOWERSOCK: A bill (H. R. 11653) granting the right of way for an irrigating canal, its adits, its laterals, to William G. Holt, of Kansas City, Kans., his successors, heirs, and assigns, through the Yuma Indian Reservation, and for other purposes—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. DICK, by instruction of the Committee on Militia: A bill (H. R. 11654) to promote the efficiency of the militia, and for other purposes—to the Committee on Militia.

By Mr. MARSHALL: A bill (H. R. 11655) granting to the State of North Dakota 640 acres of land, embracing the White Stone Hills battlefield and burial ground of soldiers killed in that engagement—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. DICK: A bill (H. R. 11656) to incorporate the Society of the Army of Santiago de Cuba—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. PERKINS: A bill (H. R. 11657) allowing the construction of a dam across the St. Lawrence River—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. EDWARDS: A bill (H. R. 11658) to ratify an agreement with the Indians of the Crow Reservation in Montana, and making appropriations to carry the same into effect—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. McCLELLAN: A bill (H. R. 11659) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to grant by deed to the city of New York a permanent right of way for an underground railroad under property of the United States situated on Mail street and Park Row in said city—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. DALZELL: A bill (H. R. 11719) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the Pittsburg and Mansfield Railroad Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Monongahela River"—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. RIXEY: A joint resolution (H. J. Res. 156) asking for estimates for the improvement of Quantico Creek, in Prince William County, Va.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. NEWLANDS: A joint resolution (H. J. Res. 157) to credit the State of Nevada with certain military supplies belonging to the United States Government and distributed by the governor thereof without proper vouchers to volunteers in the late war with Spain—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SOUTHWICK: A concurrent resolution (H. C. Res. 35) directing the Joint Committee on Printing to investigate and determine whether the Supreme Court Reports should be printed at the Government Printing Office or by private contract—to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. TAWNEY: A resolution (H. Res. 139) that the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, requested to furnish the House of Representatives information concerning land in Cuba purchased by nonresidents of the island since the date of the American occupation—to the Committee on Insular Affairs.

By Mr. McCALL: Petition relative to an amendment of the Constitution of the United States enabling Congress to enact laws regulating hours of labor—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills of the following titles were presented and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ACHESON: A bill (H. R. 11660) granting a pension to Perry B. Wilson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ADAMSON: A bill (H. R. 11661) for the relief of H. T. Cunningham—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. ALLEN of Maine: A bill (H. R. 11662) granting an increase of pension to Albion P. Stiles—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BOUTELL: A bill (H. R. 11663) granting an increase of pension to James J. Briggs—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BURKETT (by request): A bill (H. R. 11664) for the relief of Patrick I. Grant—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CLAYTON: A bill (H. R. 11665) granting an increase of pension to Caleb C. Briggs—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11666) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Samuel J. Maund—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11667) granting a pension to Nancy Caroline Pickard—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11668) granting a pension to W. R. Snellgrove—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. COWHERD: A bill (H. R. 11669) to correct the record of James Clingen—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DE ARMOND: A bill (H. R. 11670) to correct the military record of Bryant W. Schoonover and grant him an honorable discharge—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DRAPER: A bill (H. R. 11671) granting an increase of pension to Henry Wheeler—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HALL: A bill (H. R. 11672) granting an increase of pension to Joseph S. Lee—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11673) granting an increase of pension to Jacob Laird—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11674) granting an increase of pension to Jacob Wenner, of Knox, Pa.—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. JACKSON of Kansas: A bill (H. R. 11675) granting a pension to Nettie C. Constant, of Kansas—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11676) granting a pension to Mrs. N. E. Bridges—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. JACKSON of Maryland: A bill (H. R. 11677) for the relief of William T. Sterling and 57 other enlisted men of Company K, First Eastern Shore Maryland Volunteers—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11678) granting a pension to Thomas J. Young—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11679) granting a pension to James Bramble—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11680) granting a pension to George Wood—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11681) granting a pension to Leonard Parsons—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11682) granting a pension to Mary E. Winterbottom—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11683) granting a pension to Alexander Seymour—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11684) granting a pension to Josiah B. Ross—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11685) granting an increase of pension to William E. Tarr—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11686) granting a pension to Elenore F. Adams—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11687) granting a pension to Robert H. Busteed—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11688) granting a pension to Joseph E. Scott—to the Committee on Invalid Pension.

By Mr. JENKINS: A bill (H. R. 11689) to authorize the private sale of lot 1, otherwise described as the fractional northwest quarter of northwest quarter of section 24, township 40 north, range 3 east, in Price County, Wis., containing 20 acres, at the Wausau, Wis., local United States land office—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. KEHOE: A bill (H. R. 11690) granting a pension to Lilburn E. Taber—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11691) for the relief of Martin Lunsford—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. LLOYD: A bill (H. R. 11692) granting an increase of pension to William H. Ensign, of Kirksville, Mo.—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MARTIN: A bill (H. R. 11693) granting an increase of pension to George W. McGoff—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11694) granting an increase of pension to Dennis F. Andre—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MUDD: A bill (H. R. 11695) granting an increase of pension to George W. Hatton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PEARRE: A bill (H. R. 11696) to quitclaim all interest of the United States of America in and to lot 4, square 1113, in the city of Washington, D. C., to William H. Dix—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. RICHARDSON of Alabama: A bill (H. R. 11697) for the relief of the executor or administrator of the estate of C. C. Spiller, deceased—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. RIXEY: A bill (H. R. 11698) granting a pension to Thomas O'Connor—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RUMPLE: A bill (H. R. 11699) granting a pension to Mary E. Morgan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HENRY C. SMITH: A bill (H. R. 11700) granting an increase of pension to Edward C. Jeffries, Monroe, Mich.—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. VAN VOORHIS: A bill (H. R. 11701) granting an increase of pension to John C. Wright—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. YOUNG: A bill (H. R. 11702) to reimburse Capt. Martin Hammer—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11703) granting a pension to Isabella Brockway (or St. John)—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ZENOR: A bill (H. R. 11704) granting a pension to Lafayette B. Jacobs—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11705) granting an increase of pension to Anna E. Luke—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LACEY: A bill (H. R. 11706) granting a pension to Effie Sullivan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LITTLE: A bill (H. R. 11707) granting a pension to Mary Harvy, widow—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. NEWLANDS: A bill (H. R. 11708) to reimburse Ynez Shorb White for expenses incurred by her in the removal of the remains of the late Dr. Stephen Stuart White, passed assistant surgeon, United States Navy, from Juneau, Alaska, to his home in the State of Maryland—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WOOTEN: A bill (H. R. 11709) to grant a pension to Elizabeth Bartee, widow of Ferdinand Bartee, a soldier in the Mexican war of 1846—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11710) for the relief of James Palmer—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11711) granting an increase of pension to Isaac Gibson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WILLIAMS of Illinois: A bill (H. R. 11712) granting a pension to Mary Sheppard—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GIBSON: A bill (H. R. 11713) for the relief of estate of A. K. Foster, deceased, late of Knox County, Tenn.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WILLIAMS of Illinois: A bill (H. R. 11714) granting an increase of pension to James Tomlinson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11715) granting an increase of pension to David H. Utley—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WACHTER: A bill (H. R. 11716) granting an increase of pension to Samuel De Haven—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11717) granting a pension to William Bieber—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11718) granting an increase of pension to William J. Stewart—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MOON: A bill (H. R. 11720) for the relief of E. A. Best, administrator of the estate of Adaline D. Turner, deceased, of Tullahoma, Tenn.—to the Committee on War Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. ACHESON: Petition of United Mine Workers' Union No. 548, of Buenavista, Pa., favoring the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, papers to accompany House bill No. 10926, for the relief of J. J. Graham—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BATES: Petition of Maj. J. W. Patton Post, No. 346, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Pennsylvania, for investigation of the administration of the Bureau of Pensions—to the Committee on Rules.

Also, petition of railway postal clerks in the Twenty-sixth Congressional district of Pennsylvania, for the passage of the bill to reclassify the Railway Mail Service—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, resolutions of Machinists Union No. 327, of Meadville, Pa., relative to the construction of vessels in Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolution of Machinists' Union No. 327; Cigar Makers' Union No. 82, of Meadville, Pa., and Scoopers' Union No. 116, of Erie, Pa., favoring the reenactment of Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. BELL: Petition of North Fork Post, No. 86, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Colorado and Wyoming, for investigation of the administration of the Bureau of Pensions—to the Committee on Rules.

Also, resolutions of Order of Railroad Telegraphers, Swallows, Colo., favoring exclusion of undesirable immigrants—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. BURKETT: Petition of Champion Division, No. 227, Order of Railway Conductors, Lincoln, Nebr., favoring a further restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of citizens of Brownville, Nebr., to accompany House bill No. 4527, granting a pension to Alfred Opelt—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BURKE of South Dakota: Petition of Huron Division, No. 213, Brotherhood Locomotive Engineers, praying for the further restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolutions of McLean Post 162, of Latcher, S. Dak., Grand Army of the Republic, favoring the building of war vessels in the navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. BULL: Resolutions of Newport Typographical Union, No. 295; Painters, Decorators, and Paper Hangers' Union No. 534, of Newport, R. I., and National Electrical Workers' Union No. 99, of Providence, R. I., in favor of the reenactment of Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of Farragut Post, No. 8, of East Providence, R. I., Grand Army of the Republic, favoring the building of vessels in the United States navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolution of Typographical Union No. 295, of Newport, R. I., for the passage of laws which will prevent the immigration of persons who can not read—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. BURTON: Resolution of Steam Engineers' Union No. 81, of Cleveland, Ohio, in favor of the exclusion of Chinese laborers—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. CAPRON: Resolution of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, Division No. 6, of Woonsocket, R. I., asking mediation by the United States in favor of the patriots of the South African Republics—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of Journeymen Barbers' Union No. 361, Pawtucket, R. I., favoring the continuation of the exclusion law against Chinese laborers—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of Farragut Post, No. 8, of East Providence, R. I., Grand Army of the Republic, favoring the construction of naval vessels at Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolutions of Cigar Makers' Union No. 94, of Pawtucket, R. I., for an educational test in the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin: Resolutions of Trades and Labor Council of Racine, Wis., favoring the exclusion of Chinese—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of Iron Molders' Union, No. 310, of Racine, Wis., favoring an educational test in the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of board of supervisors of Mohave County, Ariz., requesting Congress to fix a tax valuation on the property of the Santa Fe Railway Company throughout Arizona—to the Committee on Pacific Railroads.

Also, petition of Young People's Union of Racine, Wis., favoring the exclusion of intoxicants from all countries inhabited chiefly by native races—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. CORLISS: Resolutions of Detroit Street Railway Employees and Carpenters' Union of Detroit, Mich., favoring a further restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. DALZELL: Resolution of International Association of Machinists, of Verona, Pa., in favor of the reenactment of Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of Tile Layers' Union No. 4, of Pittsburg, Pa., for the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolution of Glass Bottle Blowers' Union No. 76, of Sharpsburg, Pa., and Union No. 165, of Pittsburg, Pa., Carpenters and Joiners, urging that the navy-yards be utilized for the construction of war vessels—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. DE ARMOND: Paper to accompany House bill for the relief of Bryant W. Schoonover—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DRAPER: Petition of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, in relation to the right of suffrage for women—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. FITZGERALD: Memorial of the American Hawaiian Steamship Company, protesting against the passage of Senate bill 1970 and House bill 965, granting an American register to the foreign-built barkentine Hawaii—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition of National American Woman Suffrage Association, urging legislation to permit women to vote for members of Congress and Presidential electors—to the Committee on Election of President, Vice-President, and Representatives in Congress.

Also, memorial of International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, No. 3, protesting against Senate bills 2054 and 1466, which create a department of electricity in the District of Columbia and provide for the licensing of electrical wirers—the to Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. FOSS: Petition of Packing Trades Council, of Chicago, Ill., favoring the continuation of the exclusion law against Chinese laborers—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. GIBSON: Petition for special act increasing the pension of William S. Thurman—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, petition of Stanton Division, No. 139, Order of Railroad Conductors, Knoxville, Tenn., favoring an educational test in the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolution of Federal Labor Union, of Knoxville, Tenn., in favor of Chinese exclusion—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. GREEN of Pennsylvania: Petition of Metal Polishers, Buffers, Platers, Brass Molders, and Brass Workers' Union No. 46, of Reading, Pa., relative to the exclusion of Chinese—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of E. B. Young Post, No. 87, Grand Army of the Republic, of Allentown, Pa., relative to the construction of vessels in Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, petition of citizens of Reading, Pa., for an amendment to the National Constitution defining legal marriage to be monogamic—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts: Petition of General W. T. Sherman Post No. 208, Grand Army of the Republic, Wareham, Mass., advocating the construction of war vessels in United States navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. GROSVENOR: Resolution of Federal Labor Union No. 6876, Chillicothe, Ohio, favoring the construction of naval vessels at Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolution of Federal Labor Union No. 6876, Chillicothe, Ohio, and citizens of Antiquity, Ohio, favoring exclusion of Chinese laborers—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. HALL: Papers to accompany House bill 11673, for the relief of Jacob Laird—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, papers to accompany House bill 11674, granting an increase of pension to Jacob Wenner—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HENRY of Connecticut: Petition of Carpenters and Joiners' Union No. 97, New Britain, Conn., urging that the navy-yards be utilized for the construction of war vessels—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. HILL: Resolution of C. L. Russell Post, No. 68, Grand Army of the Republic, of Thomaston, Conn., favoring the construction of war vessels in Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. HITT: Resolution of Molders' Union No. 195, Freeport, Ill., for an educational test in the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. HOWELL: Petition of Metuchen Council, Junior Order United American Mechanics, of Metuchen, N. J., advocating the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of Typographical Union No. 307, of New Brunswick, N. J., advocating the building of war vessels in the navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. JACK: Resolution of Brotherhood of Operative Potters' Union No. 52, of Ford City, Pa., in favor of the exclusion of Chinese laborers—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of Union No. 52, Ford City, Pa., praying for the further restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. JACKSON of Kansas: Petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Wichita, Kans., in favor of commercial reciprocity with Cuba—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolutions of Team Drivers' Union No. 86, of Stippville, Kans., favoring an educational test in the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolution of Team Drivers' Union No. 86, of Stippville, Kans., favoring the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. KETCHAM: Petition of Garment Workers' Union No. 84, Wappingers Falls, N. Y., favoring the construction of war vessels in Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, petition of Garment Workers' Union No. 84, Wappingers Falls, N. Y., in favor of the exclusion of Chinese laborers—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of Garment Workers' Union No. 84, Wappingers Falls, N. Y., for the repeal of the desert-land act and the commutation clause of the homestead act, against donations of public lands to the States, and for an appropriation of $250,000 for irrigation surveys—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. LACEY: Resolution of city council of Council Bluffs, Iowa, relating to the Missouri River bridge at Council Bluffs—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of officers of the Iowa National Guard, favoring House bill 9972, increasing the efficiency of the militia—to the Committee on Militia.

By Mr. LLOYD: Petition of 189 citizens of Hannibal, Mo., for an amendment to the National Constitution defining legal marriage to be monogamic—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, resolutions of Menke Post. No. 166, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Missouri, for the building of war vessels in the United States navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, petition of citizens of Kirksville, Mo., to accompany House bill 11692, granting an increase of pension to Warren H. Ensign—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McANDREWS: Petition of Woodlawn Lodge, No. 45, of Chicago, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, for the repeal of the desert-land act and the commutatian clause of the homestead act, against donations of public lands to the States, and for an appropriation of $250,000 for irrigation surveys—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. McCLELLAN: Petition of the Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners for the City of New York, in reference to the necessity for legislation to further the construction of additional rapid-transit facilities in the city of New York—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. MERCER: Papers to accompany House bill 11237, granting increase of pension to Catharine A. Carroll—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, papers to accompany Senate bill 1289, for the relief of Julius W. Clark—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, papers to accompany House bill 11505, for the relief of David Dunker—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. OTJEN: Petition of Typographical Union No. 23, Milwaukee, Wis., favoring irrigation of arid lands—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

By Mr. PUGSLEY: Resolutions of the New York Retail Grocers' Union and United Retail Grocers' Association, of Brooklyn,

N. Y., in relation to the removal of the duty on teas—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolution of the National Building Trades Council of America, favoring the national irrigation of arid lands, etc.—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

Also, resolution of National Building Trades Council, favoring the continuation of the exclusion law against Chinese laborers—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. ROBB: Petition of Granite Workers', of Graniteville, Mo., for restriction of immigration, etc.—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana: Petition of George W. Palmer, of Coles Corners, Ind., in support of an amendment to the Constitution for the election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people—to the Committee on Election of President, Vice-President, and Representatives in Congress.

Also, resolution of Journeymen Horseshoers' Union No. 81, Fort Wayne, Ind., advocating the construction of war vessels in United States navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolutions of Team Drivers' Union No. 78, Fort Wayne, Ind., favoring restriction of undesirable immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolution of the C. F. Wilcox Division, No. 376, Order of Railway Conductors, of Ashley, Ind., in favor of the exclusion of Chinese laborers—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of S. C. Aldrich Post, No. 138, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Indiana, for investigation of the administration of the Bureau of Pensions—to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. RUMPLE: Petition of Amalgamated Wood Workers' Union No. 92, Clinton, Iowa, asking for the repeal of the desert-land act and the commutation clause of the homestead act, and urging appropriation for Government surveys and construction of reservoirs—to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

By Mr. RUPPERT: Petition of Carpenters and Joiners' Union No. 476, for an educational test in the restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. RYAN: Resolution of Journeymen Barbers' Union No. 141, Buffalo, N. Y., favoring the construction of naval vessels at Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolution of Typographical Union No. 9, of Buffalo, N. Y., in favor of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of Lake Seamen's Union of Tonawanda, N. Y., for an amendment to the immigration laws—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolutions of United Trades Council of Buffalo, N. Y., protesting against the passage of House bill 9685—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. STEELE: Resolution of Carpenters' Union No. 365, of Marion, Ind., for the passage of laws which will prevent the immigration of persons who can not read—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolution of American Flint Glass Workers' Unions Nos. 101 and 35, of Marion, Ind., favoring the enactment of a law excluding the Chinese without limitation from this country—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. STEWART of New York: Resolutions of Central Labor Union of Amsterdam, N. Y., in favor of the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. SKILES: Petitions of Iron Molders' Union of Mount Vernon, Cigar Makers' Union of Mansfield, and Locomotive Engineers, Division No. 822, of Chicago Junction, Ohio, favoring a further restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, resolutions of Electrical Workers' Union No. 97, of Mount Vernon, and Cigar Makers' Union No. 86, of Mansfield, Ohio, in favor of the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion act—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of Retail Clerks' Union No. 500, of Lorain, Ohio, favoring the construction of naval vessels at the Government navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. SNOOK: Petition of Thomas Allen Post, No. 578, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Ohio, for investigation of the administration of the Bureau of Pensions—to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. TAWNEY: Papers to accompany House bill granting an increase of pension to William J. Stewart—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. THAYER: Resolutions of Piano and Organ Workers' Union No. 28, in regard to immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. VAN VOORHIS: Papers to accompany House bill 11701, granting a pension to John C. Wright—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WANGER: Resolutions of George Smith Post, No. 79, of Conshohocken, Pa., concerning the construction of Government vessels in navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. WEEKS: Resolutions of Merchants and Manufacturers' Exchange, of Detroit, Mich., in relation to reduction of tariff on raw sugar, etc.—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WILLIAMS of Illinois: Papers to accompany House bill 5709 for the relief of Sarah Tanquary—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, papers to accompany House bill 10777, for the relief of Mary Sheppard—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany House bill 11715, for the relief of David H. Utley—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany House bill ——, granting a pension to James Tomlinson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WOOTEN: Papers to accompany House bill 11709, granting a pension to Mrs. Elizabeth Bartee—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, papers to accompany bill 11710, for the relief of James Palmer—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. YOUNG: Petition of Engineers' Club of Philadelphia, Pa., favoring a national park reservation in the Appalachian Mountains—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, petition of Enoch Lewis, of Philadelphia, in relation to certain immoral practices in the Philippines—to the Committee on Insular Affairs.

Also, petition of R. A. Benedict, of New York City, in relation to general legislation—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Hopkins & Hopkins, Washington, D. C., in relation to foreign-built vessels in competition with American vessels—to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, resolution of the Merchants' Exchange of San Francisco, Cal., for the admission of the mercantile class of Chinese—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of the National American Women Suffrage Association relating to the right of suffrage for women—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. ZENOR: Petition of John Ridlen Post, No. 275, Scottsburg, Ind., favoring the building of vessels in the United States navy-yards—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

SENATE.

SATURDAY, February 22, 1902.

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when, on request of Mr. BERRY, and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the Journal will stand approved.

READING OF WASHINGTON'S FAREWELL ADDRESS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Michigan [Mr. BURROWS], under the order of the Senate, will now read Washington's Farewell Address.

Mr. BURROWS (at the Secretary's desk) read the address, as follows:

To the people of the United States:

FRIENDS AND FELLOW-CITIZENS: The period for a new election of a citizen to administer the executive government of the United States being not far distant, and the time actually arrived when your thoughts must be employed in designating the person who is to be clothed with that important trust, it appears to me proper, especially as it may conduce to a more distinct expression of the public voice, that I should now apprise you of the resolution I have formed to decline being considered among the number of those out of whom a choice is to be made.

I beg you at the same time to do me the justice to be assured that this resolution has not been taken without a strict regard to all the considerations appertaining to the relation which binds a dutiful citizen to his country; and that in withdrawing the tender of service, which silence in my situation might imply, I am influenced by no diminution of zeal for your future interest, no deficiency of grateful respect for your past kindness, but am supported by a full conviction that the step is compatible with both.

The acceptance of and continuance hitherto in the office to which your suffrages have twice called me have been a uniform sacrifice of inclination to the opinion of duty and to a deference for what appeared to be your desire. I constantly hoped that it would have been much earlier in my power, consistently with motives which I was not at liberty to disregard, to return to that retirement from which I had been reluctantly drawn. The strength of my inclination to do this previous to the last election had even led to the preparation of an address to declare it to you; but mature reflection on the then perplexed and critical posture of our affairs with foreign nations and the unanimous advice of persons entitled to my confidence impelled me to abandon the idea. I rejoice that the state of your concerns, external as well as internal, no longer renders the pursuit of inclination incompatible with the sentiment of duty or propriety, and am persuaded, whatever partiality may be retained for my services, that in the present circumstances of our country you will not disapprove my determination to retire.

The impressions with which I first undertook the arduous trust were explained on the proper occasion. In the discharge of this trust I will only say that I have, with good intentions, contributed toward the organization and administration of the Government the best exertions of which a very fallible judgment was capable. Not unconscious in the outset of the inferiority of my qualifications, experience in my own eyes, perhaps still more in the eyes of others, has strengthened the motives to diffidence of myself; and every day the increasing weight of years admonishes me more and more that the shade of retirement is as necessary to me as it will be welcome. Satisfied that if any circumstances have given peculiar value to my services they were temporary, I have the consolation to believe that, while choice and prudence invite me to quit the political scene, patriotism does not forbid it.

In looking forward to the moment which is intended to terminate the career of my political life my feelings do not permit me to suspend the deep acknowledgment of that debt of gratitude which I owe to my beloved country for the many honors it has conferred upon me; still more for the steadfast confidence with which it has supported me, and for the opportunities I have thence enjoyed of manifesting my inviolable attachment by services faithful and persevering, though in usefulness unequal to my zeal. If benefits have resulted to our country from these services, let it always be remembered to your praise and as an instructive example in our annals that under circumstances in which the passions, agitated in every direction, were liable to mislead; amidst appearances sometimes dubious; vicissitudes of fortune often discouraging; in situations in which not unfrequently want of success has countenanced the spirit of criticism, the constancy of your support was the essential prop of the efforts and a guaranty of the plans by which they were effected. Profoundly penetrated with this idea, I shall carry it with me to my grave as a strong incitement to unceasing vows that Heaven may continue to you the choicest tokens of its beneficence; that your union and brotherly affection may be perpetual; that the free Constitution which is the work of your hands may be sacredly maintained; that its administration in every department may be stamped with wisdom and virtue; that, in fine, the happiness of the people of these States, under the auspices of liberty, may be made complete by so careful a preservation and so prudent a use of this blessing as will acquire to them the glory of recommending it to the applause, the affection, and adoption of every nation which is yet a stranger to it.

Here, perhaps, I ought to stop. But a solicitude for your welfare which can not end but with my life, and the apprehension of danger natural to that solicitude, urge me on an occasion like the present to offer to your solemn contemplation and to recommend to your frequent review some sentiments which are the result of much reflection, of no inconsiderable observation, and which appear to me all-important to the permanency of your felicity as a people. These will be offered to you with the more freedom as you can only see in them the disinterested warnings of a parting friend, who can possibly have no personal motive to bias his counsel. Nor can I forget as an encouragement to it your indulgent reception of my sentiments on a former and not dissimilar occasion.

Interwoven as is the love of liberty with every ligament of your hearts, no recommendation of mine is necessary to fortify or confirm the attachment.

The unity of government which constitutes you one people is also now dear to you. It is justly so, for it is a main pillar in the edifice of your real independence, the support of your tranquillity at home, your peace abroad, of your safety, of your prosperity, of that very liberty which you so highly prize. But as it is easy to foresee that from different causes and from different quarters much pains will be taken, many artifices employed, to weaken in your minds the conviction of this truth, as this is the point in your political fortress against which the batteries of internal and external enemies will be most constantly and actively (though often covertly and insidiously) directed, it is of infinite moment that you should properly estimate the immense value of your national union to your collective and individual happiness; that you should cherish a cordial, habitual, and immovable attachment to it, accustoming yourselves to think and speak of it as of the palladium of your political safety and prosperity; watching for its preservation with jealous anxiety; discountenancing whatever may suggest even a suspicion that it can in any event be abandoned, and indignantly frowning upon the first dawning of every attempt to alienate any portion of our country from the rest or to enfeeble the sacred ties which now link together the various parts.

For this you have every inducement of sympathy and interest. Citizens by birth or choice of a common country, that country has a right to concentrate your affections. The name of American, which belongs to you in your national capacity, must always exalt the just pride of patriotism more than any appellation derived from local discriminations. With slight shades of difference, you have the same religion, manners, habits, and political principles. You have in a common cause fought and triumphed together. The independence and liberty you possess are the work of joint counsels and joint efforts, of common dangers, sufferings, and successes.

But these considerations, however powerfully they address themselves to your sensibility, are greatly outweighed by those which apply more immediately to your interest. Here every portion of our country finds the most commanding motives for carefully guarding and preserving the union of the whole.

The North, in an unrestrained intercourse with the South, protected by the equal laws of a common government, finds in the productions of the latter great additional resources of maritime and commercial enterprise and precious materials of manufacturing industry. The South, in the same intercourse, benefiting by the same agency of the North, sees its agriculture grow and its commerce expand. Turning partly into its own channels the seamen of the North, it finds its particular navigation invigorated; and while it contributes in different ways to nourish and increase the general mass of the national navigation, it looks forward to the protection of a maritime strength to which itself is unequally adapted. The East, in a like intercourse with the West, already finds, and in the progressive improvements of interior communications by land and water will more and more find, a valuable vent for the commodities which it brings from abroad or manufactures at home. The West derives from the East supplies requisite to its growth and comfort, and what is perhaps of still greater consequence, it must of necessity owe the secure enjoyment of indispensable outlets for its own productions to the weight, influence, and the future maritime strength of the Atlantic side of the Union, directed by an indissoluble community of interest as one nation. Any other tenure by which the West can hold this essential advantage, whether derived from its own separate strength or from an apostate and unnatural connection with any foreign power, must be intrinsically precarious.

While, then, every part of our country thus feels an immediate and particular interest in union, all the parts combined can not fail to find in the united mass of means and efforts greater strength, greater resource, proportionably greater security from external danger, a less frequent interruption of their peace by foreign nations, and what is of inestimable value, they must derive from union an exemption from those broils and wars between themselves which so frequently afflict neighboring countries not tied together by the same governments, which their own rivalships alone would be sufficient to produce, but which opposite foreign alliances, attachments, and intrigues would stimulate and embitter. Hence, likewise, they will avoid the necessity of those overgrown military establishments which, under any form of government, are inauspicious to liberty, and which are to be regarded as particularly hostile to republican liberty. In this sense it is that your union ought to be considered as a main prop of your liberty, and that the love of the one ought to endear to you the preservation of the other.

These considerations speak a persuasive language to every reflecting and virtuous mind, and exhibit the continuance of the Union as a primary object of patriotic desire. Is there a doubt whether a common government can embrace so large a sphere? Let experience solve it. To listen to mere speculation in such a case were criminal. We are authorized to hope that a proper organization of the whole, with the auxiliary agency of governments for the respective subdivisions, will afford a happy issue to the experiment. It is well worth a fair and full experiment. With such powerful and obvious motives to union affecting all parts of our country, while experience shall not have demonstrated its impracticability, there will always be reason to distrust the patriotism of those who in any quarter may endeavor to weaken its bands.

In contemplating the causes which may disturb our union, it occurs as matter of serious concern that any ground should have been furnished for characterizing parties by geographical discriminations—Northern and Southern, Atlantic and Western—whence designing men may endeavor to excite a belief that there is a real difference of local interests and views. One of the expedients of party to acquire influence within particular districts is to misrepresent the opinions and aims of other districts. You can not shield yourselves too much against the jealousies and heartburnings which spring from these misrepresentations; they tend to render alien to each other those who ought to be bound together by fraternal affection. The inhabitants of our Western country have lately had a useful lesson on this head. They have seen in the negotiation by the Executive and in the unanimous ratification by the Senate of the treaty with Spain, and in the universal satisfaction at that event throughout the United States, a decisive proof how unfounded were the suspicions propagated among them of a policy in the General Government and in the Atlantic States unfriendly to their interests in regard to the Mississippi. They have been witnesses to the formation of two treaties—that with Great Britain and that with Spain—which secure to them everything they could desire in respect to our foreign relations toward confirming their prosperity. Will it not be their wisdom to rely for the preservation of these advantages on the union by which they were procured? Will they not henceforth be deaf to those advisers, if such there are, who would sever them from their brethren and connect them with aliens?

To the efficacy and permanency of your union a government for the whole is indispensable. No alliances, however strict, between the parts can be an adequate substitute. They must inevitably experience the infractions and interruptions which all alliances in all times have experienced. Sensible of this momentous truth, you have improved upon your first essay by the adoption of a constitution of government better calculated than your former for an intimate union and for the efficacious management of your common concerts. This government, the offspring of our own choice, uninfluenced and unawed, adopted upon full investigation and mature deliberation, completely free in its principles, in the distribution of its powers, uniting security with energy, and containing within itself a provision for its own amendment, has a just claim to your confidence and your support. Respect for its authority, compliance with its laws, acquiescence in its measures, are duties enjoined by the fundamental maxims of true liberty. The basis of our political systems is the right of the people to make and to alter their constitutions of government. But the constitution which at any time exists, till changed by an explicit and authentic act of the whole people, is sacredly obligatory upon all. The very idea of the power and the right of the people to establish government presupposes the duty of every individual to obey the established government.

All obstructions to the execution of the laws, all combinations and associations, under whatever plausible character, with the real design to direct, control, counteract, or awe the regular deliberation and action of the constituted authorities, are destructive of this fundamental principle and of fatal tendency. They serve to organize faction; to give it an artificial and extraordinary force; to put in the place of the delegated will of the nation the will of a party, often a small but artful and enterprising minority of the community, and, according to the alternate triumphs of different parties, to make the public administration the mirror of the ill-concerted and incongruous projects of faction rather than the organ of consistent and wholesome plans, digested by common counsels and modified by mutual interests.

However combinations or associations of the above description may now and then answer popular ends, they are likely in the course of time and things to become potent engines by which cunning, ambitious, and unprincipled men will be enabled to subvert the power of the people, and to usurp for themselves the reins of government, destroying afterwards the very engines which have lifted them to unjust dominion.

Toward the preservation of your Government and the permanency of your present happy state it is requisite not only that you steadily discountenance irregular oppositions to its acknowledged authority, but also that you resist with care the spirit of innovation upon its principles, however specious the pretexts. One method of assault may be to effect in the forms of the Constitution alterations which may impair the energy of the system, and thus to undermine what can not be directly overthrown. In all the changes to which you may be invited remember that time and habit are at least as necessary to fix the true character of governments as other human institutions; that experience is the surest standard by which to test the real tendency of the existing constitution of a country; that facility in changes upon the credit of mere hypothesis and opinion exposes to perpetual change, from the endless variety of hypothesis and opinion; and remember especially that for the efficient management of your common interests in a country so extensive as ours a goverment of as much vigor as is consistent with the perfect security of liberty is indispensable. Liberty itself will find in such a government, with powers properly distributed and adjusted, its surest guardian. It is, indeed, little else than a name where the government is too feeble to withstand the enterprises of faction, to confine each member of the society within the limits prescribed by the laws, and to maintain all in the secure and tranquil enjoyment of the rights of person and property.

I have already intimated to you the danger of parties in the state, with particular reference to the founding of them on geographical discriminations. Let me now take a more comprehensive view, and warn you in the most solemn manner against the baneful effects of the spirit of party generally.

The spirit, unfortunately, is inseparable from our nature, having its root in the strongest passions of the human mind. It exists under different shapes in all governments, more or less stifled, controlled, or repressed; but in those of the popular form it is seen in its greatest rankness and is truly their worst enemy.

The alternate domination of one faction over another, sharpened by the spirit of revenge natural to party dissension, which in different ages and countries has perpetrated the most horrid enormities, is itself a frightful despotism. But this leads at length to a more formal and permanent despotism. The disorders and miseries which result gradually incline the minds of men to seek security and repose in the absolute power of an individual, and sooner or later the chief of some prevailing faction, more able or more fortunate than his competitors, turns this disposition to the purposes of his own elevation on the ruins of public liberty.

Without looking forward to an extremity of this kind (which nevertheless ought not to be entirely out of sight), the common and continual mischiefs of the spirit of party are sufficient to make it the interest and duty of a wise people to discourage and restrain it.

It serves always to distract the public councils and enfeeble the public administration. It agitates the community with ill-founded jealousies and false alarms; kindles the animosity of one part against another; foments occasionally riot and insurrection. It opens the door to foreign influence and corruption, which find a facilitated access to the Government itself through the channels of party passion. Thus the policy and the will of one country are subjected to the policy and will of another.

There is an opinion that parties in free countries are useful checks upon the administration of the government and serve to keep alive the spirit of liberty. This within certain limits is probably true, and in governments of a monarchical cast patriotism may look with indulgence, if not with favor, upon the spirit of party. But in those of the popular character, in governments purely elective, it is a spirit not to be encouraged. From their natural tendency it is certain there will always be enough of that spirit for every salutary purpose, and there being constant danger of excess, the effort ought to be by force of public opinion to mitigate and assuage it. A fire not to be quenched, it demands a uniform vigilance to prevent its bursting into a flame, lest instead of warming it should consume.

It is important, likewise, that the habits of thinking in a free country should inspire caution in those intrusted with its administration to confine themselves within their respective constitutional spheres, avoiding in the exercise of the powers of one department to encroach upon another. The spirit of encroachment tends to consolidate the powers of all the departments in one, and thus to create, whatever the form of government, a real despotism. A just estimate of that love of power and proneness to abuse it which predominates in the human heart is sufficient to satisfy us of the truth of this position. The necessity of reciprocal checks in the exercise of political power, by dividing and distributing it into different depositories, and constituting each the guardian of the public weal against invasions by the others, has been evinced by experiments, ancient and modern, some of them in our country and under our own eyes. To preserve them must be as necessary as to institute them. If in the opinion of the people the distribution or modification of the constitutional powers be in any particular wrong, let it be corrected by an amendment in the way which the Constitution designates. But let there be no change by usurpation; for though this in one instance may be the instrument of good, it is the customary weapon by which free governments are destroyed. The precedent must always greatly overbalance in permanent evil any partial or transient benefit which the use can at any time yield.

Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports. In vain would that man claim the tribute of patriotism who should labor to subvert these great pillars of human happiness, these firmest props of the duties of men and citizens. The mere politician, equally with the pious man, ought to respect and to cherish them. A volume could not trace all their connections with private and public felicity. Let it simply be asked, Where is the security for property, for reputation, for life, if the sense of religious obligation desert the oaths which are the instruments of investigation in courts of justice? And let us with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religion. Whatever may be conceded to the influence of refined education on minds of peculiar structure, reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle.

It is substantially true that virtue or morality is a necessary spring of popular government. The rule, indeed, extends with more or less force to every species of free government. Who that is a sincere friend to it can look with indifference upon attempts to shake the foundation of the fabric? Promote, then, as an object of primary importance, institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge. In proportion as the structure of a government gives force to public opinion, it is essential that public opinion should be enlightened.

As a very important source of strength and security, cherish public credit. One method of preserving it is to use it as sparingly as possible, avoiding occasions of expense by cultivating peace, but remembering also that timely disbursements to prepare for danger frequently prevent much greater disbursement to repel it; avoiding likewise the accumulation of debt, not only by shunning occasions of expense, but by vigorous exertions in time of peace to discharge the debts which unavoidable wars have occasioned, not ungenerously throwing upon posterity the burthen which we ourselves ought to bear. The execution of these maxims belongs to your representatives; but it is necessary that public opinion should cooperate. To facilitate to them the performance of their duty it is essential that you should practically bear in mind that toward the payment of debts there must be revenue; that to have revenue there must be taxes; that no taxes can be devised which are not more or less inconvenient and unpleasant; that the intrinsic embarrassment inseparable from the selection of the proper objects (which is always a choice of difficulties) ought to be a decisive motive for a candid construction of the conduct of the Government in making it, and for a spirit of acquiescence in the measures for obtaining revenue which the public exigencies may at any time dictate.

Observe good faith and justice toward all nations. Cultivate peace and harmony with all. Religion and morality enjoin this conduct. And can it be that good policy does not equally enjoin it? It will be worthy of a free, enlightened, and at no distant period a great nation to give to mankind the magnanimous and too novel example of a people always guided by an exalted justice and benevolence. Who can doubt that in the course of time and things the fruits of such a plan would richly repay any temporary advantages which might be lost by a steady adherence to it? Can it be that Providence has not connected the permanent felicity of a nation with its virtue? The experiment, at least, is recommended by every sentiment which ennobles human nature. Alas! is it rendered impossible by its vices?

In the execution of such a plan nothing is more essential than that permanent, inveterate antipathies against particular nations and passionate attachments for others should be excluded, and that in place of them just and amicable feelings toward all should be cultivated. The nation which indulges toward another an habitual hatred or an habitual fondness is in some degree a slave. It is a slave to its animosity or to its affection, either of which is sufficient to lead it astray from its duty and its interest. Antipathy in one nation against another disposes each more readily to offer insult and injury, to lay hold of slight causes of umbrage, and to be haughty and intractable when accidental or trifling occasions of dispute occur.

Hence frequent collisions, obstinate, envenomed, and bloody contests. The nation prompted by ill will and resentment sometimes impels to war the government contrary to the best calculations of policy. The government sometimes participates in the national propensity, and adopts through passion what reason would reject. At other times it makes the animosity of the nation subservient to projects of hostility, instigated by pride, ambition, and other sinister and pernicious motives. The peace often, sometimes perhaps the liberty, of nations has been the victim.

So, likewise, a passionate attachment of one nation for another produces a variety of evils. Sympathy for the favorite nation, facilitating the illusion of an imaginary common interest in cases where no real common interest exists, and infusing into one the enmities of the other, betrays the former into a participation in the quarrels and wars of the latter without adequate inducement or justification. It leads also to concessions to the favorite nation of privileges denied to others, which is apt doubly to injure the nation making the concessions by unnecessarily parting with what ought to have been retained, and by exciting jealousy, ill will, and a disposition to retaliate in the parties from whom equal privileges are withheld; and it gives to ambitious, corrupted, or deluded citizens (who devote themselves to the favorite nation) facility to betray or sacrifice the interests of their own country without odium, sometimes even with popularity, gilding with the appearances of a virtuous sense of obligation a commendable deference for public opinion or a laudable zeal for public good the base or foolish compliances of ambition, corruption, or infatuation.

As avenues to foreign influence in innumerable ways, such attachments are particularly alarming to the truly enlightened and independent patriot. How many opportunities do they afford to tamper with domestic factions, to practice the arts of seduction, to mislead public opinion, to influence or awe the public councils! Such an attachment of a small or weak toward a great and powerful nation dooms the former to be the satellite of the latter. Against the insidious wiles of foreign influence (I conjure you to believe me, fellow-citizens) the jealousy of a free people ought to be constantly awake, since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of republican government. But that jealousy, to be useful, must be impartial, else it becomes the instrument of the very influence to be avoided, instead of a defense against it. Excessive partiality for one foreign nation and excessive dislike of another cause those whom they actuate to see danger only on one side, and serve to veil and even second the arts of influence on the other. Real patriots who may resist the intrigues of the favorite are liable to become suspected and odious, while its tools and dupes usurp the applause and confidence of the people to surrender their interests.

The great rule of conduct for us in regard to foreign nations is, in extending our commercial relations, to have with them as little political connection as possible. So far as we have already formed engagements, let them be fulfilled with perfect good faith. Here let us stop.

Europe has a set of primary interests which to us have none or a very remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence, therefore, it must be unwise in us to implicate ourselves by artificial ties in the ordinary vicissitudes of her politics or the ordinary combinations and collisions of her friendships or enmities.

Our detached and distant situation invites and enables us to pursue a different course. If we remain one people, under an efficient government, the period is not far off when we may defy material injury from external annoyance; when we may take such an attitude as will cause the neutrality we may at any time resolve upon to be scrupulously respected; when belligerent nations, under the impossibility of making acquisitions upon us, will not legally hazard the giving us provocation; when we may choose peace or war, as our interests, guided by justice, shall counsel.

Why forego the advantages of so peculiar a situation? Why quit our own to stand upon foreign ground? Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalship, interest, humor, or caprice?

It is our true policy to steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world, so far, I mean, as we are now at liberty to do it; for let me not be understood as capable of patronizing infidelity to existing engagements. I hold the maxim no less applicable to public than to private affairs that honesty is always the best policy. I repeat, therefore, let those engagements be observed in their genuine sense. But in my opinion it is unnecessary and would be unwise to extend them.

Taking care always to keep ourselves by suitable establishments on a respectable defensive posture, we may safely trust to temporary alliances for extraordinary emergencies.

Harmony, liberal intercourse with all nations are recommended by policy, humanity, and interest. But even our commercial policy should hold an equal and impartial hand, neither seeking nor granting exclusive favors or preferences; consulting the natural course of things; diffusing and diversifying by gentle means the streams of commerce, but forcing nothing; establishing with powers so disposed, in order to give trade a stable course, to define the rights of our merchants, and to enable the Government to support them, conventional rules of intercourse, the best that present circumstances and mutual opinion will permit, but temporary and liable to be from time to time abandoned or varied as experience and circumstances shall dictate; constantly keeping in view that it is folly in one nation to look for disinterested favors from another; that it must pay with a portion of its independence for whatever it may accept under that character; that by such acceptance it may place itself in the condition of having given equivalents for nominal favors, and yet of being reproached with ingratitude for not giving more. There can be no greater error than to expect or calculate upon real favors from nation to nation. It is an illusion which experience must cure, which a just pride ought to discard.

In offering to you, my countrymen, these counsels of an old and affectionate friend I dare not hope they will make the strong and lasting impression I could wish—that they will control the usual current of the passions or prevent our nation from running the course which has hitherto marked the destiny of nations. But if I may even flatter myself that they may be productive of some partial benefit, some occasional good—that they may now and then recur to moderate the fury of party spirit, to warn against the mischiefs of foreign intrigue, to guard against the impostures of pretended patriotism—this hope will be a full recompense for the solicitude for your welfare by which they have been dictated.

How far in the discharge of my official duties I have been guided by the principles which have been delineated the public records and other evidences of my conduct must witness to you and to the world. To myself, the assurance of my own conscience is that I have at least believed myself to be guided by them.

In relation to the still subsisting war in Europe my proclamation of the 22d of April, 1793, is the index to my plan. Sanctioned by your approving voice, and by that of your representatives in both Houses of Congress, the spirit of that measure has continually governed me, uninfluenced by any attempts to deter or divert me from it.

After deliberate examination, with the aid of the best lights I could obtain, I was well satisfied that our country, under all the circumstances of the case, had a right to take and was bound in duty and interest to take a neutral position. Having taken it, I determined, as far as should depend upon me, to maintain it with moderation, perseverance, and firmness.

The considerations which respect the right to hold this conduct it is not necessary on this occasion to detail. I will only observe that, according to my understanding of the matter, that right, so far from being denied by any of the belligerent powers, has been virtually admitted by all.

The duty of holding a neutral conduct may be inferred, without anything more, from the obligation which justice and humanity impose on every nation, in cases in which it is free to act, to maintain inviolate the relations of peace and amity toward other nations.

The inducements of interest for observing that conduct will best be referred to your own reflections and experience. With me a predominant motive has been to endeavor to gain time to our country to settle and mature its yet recent institutions, and to progress without interruption to that degree of strength and consistency which is necessary to give it, humanly speaking, the command of its own fortunes.

Though in reviewing the incidents of my Administration I am unconscious of intentional error, I am, nevertheless, too sensible of my defects not to think it probable that I may have committed many errors. Whatever they may be, I fervently beseech the Almighty to avert or mitigate the evils to which they may tend. I shall also carry with me the hope that my country will never cease to view them with indulgence, and that, after forty-five years of my life dedicated to its service with an upright zeal, the faults of incompetent abilities will be consigned to oblivion, as myself must soon be to the mansions of rest.

Relying on its kindness in this as in other things, and actuated by that fervent love toward it which is so natural to a man who views in it the native soil of himself and his progenitors for several generations, I anticipate with pleasing expectation that retreat in which I promise myself to realize without alloy the sweet enjoyment of partaking in the midst of my fellow-citizens the benign influence of good laws under a free government—the ever-favorite object of my heart, and the happy reward, as I trust, of our mutual cares, labors, and dangers.

GO: WASHINGTON.

UNITED STATES, September 19, 1796.

INDIAN RESERVATIONS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Interior transmitting, pursuant to a provision contained in the Indian appropriation act for the current fiscal year, copies of certain investigations relative to the condition of Indians upon certain reservations, their degree of civilization, and the advisability of reducing the size of their reservations, etc.; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

SCHOONER SALLY.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting the conclusions of fact and of law filed under the act of March 20, 1885, in the French spoliation claims, set out in the findings by the court relative to the vessel schooner Sally, Jacob Osgood, master; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. LODGE. I present resolutions adopted by the legislature of Massachusetts relative to an amendment of the Constitution enabling Congress to enact laws regulating hours of labor. I ask that the resolutions be read and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

There being no objection, the resolutions were read, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, as follows:

Commonwealth of Massachusetts. In the year 1902. Resolutions relative to an amendment of the Constitution of the United States enabling Congress to enact laws regulating hours of labor.

Resolved, That in the opinion of the general court of Massachusetts it is desirable that the Constitution of the United States should be so amended as to place it clearly within the power of Congress to enact laws regulating the hours of labor in the several States according to some uniform system; and the Senators and Representatives of this Commonwealth in Congress are hereby requested to use their influence to procure the adoption of the resolution now pending which proposes such an amendment to the Constitution.

Resolved, That properly attested copies of these resolutions be forwarded by the secretary of the Commonwealth to the presiding officers of both branches of Congress, and also to the Senators and Representatives in Congress from this Commonwealth.

In the house of representatives, adopted February 6, 1902.

In senate, adopted, in concurrence, February 11, 1902.

A true copy. Attest:

WM. M. OLIN,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Mr. LODGE presented a petition of the faculty of the University of Minnesota, praying that an appropriation be made for the erection of a monument in the city of Washington to the memory of the late Prof. Spencer F. Baird; which was referred to the Committee on the Library.

Mr. McCUMBER presented a petition of Company L, First Regiment of Infantry, National Guard of the State of North Dakota, of Hillsboro, N. Dak., praying for the enactment of legislation to increase the efficiency of the militia; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Hillsboro and Granville, in the State of North Dakota, praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. BARD presented a memorial of the Chamber of Commerce of Los Angeles, Cal., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation tending to injure or discourage the American beet-sugar industry; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. GALLINGER presented a petition of Lovell Grange, No. 5, Patrons of Husbandry, of Washington, N. H., praying for the establishment of reciprocal trade relations with Cuba; which was referred to the Committee on Relations with Cuba.

He also presented a petition of Brewery Workmen's Union No. 127, American Federation of Labor, of Portsmouth, N. H., praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented petitions of the Woman's Christian Temperance unions of Seabrook, Contoocook, Claremont, Alton, and Newport, all in the State of New Hampshire, praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of Waddington, Oswego Falls, and Brooklyn, all in the State of New York, and of sundry citizens of Pittsfield, Mass., and Bridgeport, Conn., praying for the enactment of legislation to increase the efficiency and also providing for a change in the name of the United States Marine-Hospital Service; which were referred to the Committee on Public Health and National Quarantine.

He also presented a petition of the Federal suffrage committee of the National American Woman's Suffrage Association of Richmond, Ky., praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution granting the right of suffrage to women; which was referred to the Select Committee on Woman Suffrage.

Mr. PROCTOR presented a petition of the Granite Cutters' National Union, American Federation of Labor, of Barre, Vt., praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a petition of A. E. Leavenworth Post, No. 108, Department of Vermont, Grand Army of the Republic, of Castleton, Vt., and a petition of Watertown Post, No. 45, Department of Vermont, Grand Army of the Republic, of Chelsea, Vt., praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. GAMBLE presented a petition of the Jobbers and Manufacturers' Association, of Sioux Falls, S. Dak., praying for the passage of the so-called pure-food bill and for the enactment of a penny-postage law; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented a petition of McLean Post, No. 162, Department of South Dakota, Grand Army of the Republic, of Letcher, S. Dak., praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented a petition of the executive committee of the Interstate Commerce Law Convention of St. Louis, Mo., praying for the adoption of certain amendments to the interstate-commerce law; which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented a petition of the National Live Stock Exchange, of Chicago, Ill., praying for the passage of the so-called Grout bill to regulate the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. MITCHELL presented a petition of the Chamber of Commerce of Portland, Oreg., and a petition of Printing Pressmen's Local Union No. 43, of Portland, Oreg., praying for the enactment of legislation restricting the immigration of illiterate persons; which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a petition of Sumner Post, No. 12, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Oregon, of Portland; of

W. H. Harrison Post, No. 67, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Oregon, of Central Point; of A. G. Ellett Post, No. 65, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Oregon, of Yoncalla, and of John A. Norris Post, No. 22, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Oregon, of Code, all in the State of Oregon, praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. HANSBROUGH presented a petition of members of Company L, First Regiment Infantry, North Dakota National Guard, and a petition of members of Company A, First Regiment Infantry, North Dakota National Guard, praying for the enactment of legislation to increase the efficiency of the militia; which were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. HOAR presented a petition of Lodge No. 507, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, of Boston, Mass., and a petition of the Trades and Labor Assembly of Denver, Colo., praying for the enactment of the so-called Hoar anti-injunction bill to limit the meaning of the word "conspiracy" and the use of "restraining orders and injunctions" in certain cases; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented the petition of James Barr Ames and sundry other professors of the Harvard Law School and of Francis G. Peabody and sundry other citizens of Massachusetts, praying that such statistics be collected relating to marriage and divorce as will bring the report of the Department of Labor down to the latest practicable date; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented petitions of Team Drivers' Local Union No. 118, American Federation of Labor, of North Adams; of Brewery Workers' Local Union No. 136, American Federation of Labor, of Worcester, and of General William T. Sherman Post, No. 208, Department of Massachusetts, Grand Army of the Republic, of Wareham, all in the State of Massachusetts, praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented petitions of the Carpenters' District Council of Springfield; of Boot and Shoe Workers' Local Union No. 48, of Rockland; of the Building Trades Council of North Adams, and of Boot and Shoe Workers' Union No. 252, of Brookfield, all of the American Federation of Labor, in the State of Massachusetts, and of the National Building Trades Council of America, American Federation of Labor, of St. Louis, Mo., praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. FAIRBANKS presented petitions of Local Union No. 54, Brotherhood of Boiler Makers and Iron Ship Builders, of Summit City; of Local Union No. 5, Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers, of Terre Haute; of Enterprise Union, No. 1, Tin Plate Workers' International Protective Association, of Elwood; of Kokomo Lodge, No. 463, International Association of Machinists, of Kokomo; of Cigar Makers' Local Union No. 134, of La Porte, and of Local Union No. 28, International Association of Car Workers, of Terre Haute, all in the State of Indiana, praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a memorial of Cigar Makers' Local Union No. 214, of Bluffton, Ind., remonstrating against the removal of the duties on cigars, tobacco, fruits, etc., imported from Cuba and the Philippines; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented petitions of Reed Post, No. 139, of Folsomville; of Reed Post, No. 206, of Fulton; of Warrick Post, No. 262, of Newburg; of Rich Mountain Post, No. 42, of Lebanon; of Lookout Post, No. 133, of Noblesville, all of the Department of Indiana, Grand Army of the Republic; of Kokomo Lodge, No. 463, International Association of Machinists, of Kokomo, and of Local Union No. 5, National Brotherhood of Operative Potters, of Evansville, all in the State of Indiana, praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. McCOMAS presented a petition of Fraternity Lodge, No. 124, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, of Baltimore, Md., praying for the passage of the so-called Hoar anti-injunction bill to limit the meaning of the word "conspiracy" and the use of "restraining orders and injunctions" in certain cases; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of Wood Makers' Local Union No. 6, American Federation of Labor, of Baltimore, Md., and a petition of Clothing Cutters' Local Union No. 6, American Federation of Labor, of Baltimore, Md., praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Baltimore, Md., remonstrating against the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. BURROWS presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Adrian, Mich., praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors, firearms, and opium to the inhabitants of the Pacific islands, for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy, to prohibit the transmission of race gambling bets and fraud devices by telegraph, etc.; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented the petition of E. A. Griggs, of Battle Creek, Mich., and a petition of Typographical Union No. 72, of Lansing, Mich., praying for the repeal of the so-called desert-land law, for the commutation of the homestead law, and for the construction of reservoirs for irrigating purposes, etc.; which were referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

He also presented a petition of Central City Lodge, No. 121, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, of Jackson, Mich., praying for the passage of the so-called Hoar anti-injunction bill to limit the meaning of the word "conspiracy" and the use of "restraining orders and injunctions" in certain cases, and also for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented petitions of Cigar Makers' Local Union No. 186, of Flint; of Shingle Weavers' Local Union No. 7099, of Menominee; of Coopers' Local Union No. 4, of West Bay; of Tobacco Workers' Local Union No. 13, of Detroit; of the Trades and Labor Council, of Detroit; of Journeymen Tailors' Local Union No. 302, of Houghton; of Broom Makers' Local Union No. 49, of Flint; of Typographical Union No. 429, of Battle Creek; of Carpenters and Joiners' Local Union No. 643, of Flint; of the Trades and Labor Council, of Grand Rapids; of Coopers' Local Union No. 142, of Albion; of Machinists' Local Union No. 117, of Port Huron; of Federal Labor Union No. 9368, of Lansing; of Journeymen Tailors' Local Union No. 121, of Kalamazoo, and of Cigar Makers' Local Union No. 19, of Sault Ste. Marie, all of the American Federation of Labor, and of Mine Workers' Local Union No. 7, United Mine Workers of America, of National Mine, all in the State of Michigan, praying for the reenactment of the Chinese-exclusion law; which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented petitions of Phil Sheridan Post, No. 4, of Reading; of T. B. Myers Post, No. 357, of Gagetown; of V. O. Bretz Post, No. 382, of Lake Odessa; of O. D. Jackson Post, No. 326, of Potterville; of Caldwell Post, No. 365, of Lake City; of Henry M. Liddle Post, No. 131, of Colon; of Col. E. H. Liscum Post, No. 343, of Sault Ste. Marie, and of Charles E. Wendell Post, No. 316, of Grant, all of the Department of Michigan, Grand Army of the Republic, and of Carpenters Local Union No. 609, of Onaway; of Journeymen Tailors' Union No. 302, of Houghton; of Tobacco Workers' International Union No. 13, of Detroit; of Typographical Union No. 168, of Muskegon, and of International Longshoremen's Association No. 53, of Traverse City, all of the American Federation of Labor, in the State of Michigan, praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the construction of war vessels in the navy-yards of the country; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. MITCHELL, from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, to whom was referred the bill (S. 277) for the relief of Mathias A. Young, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PROCTOR, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3240) to prevent a false branding or marking of food and dairy products as to the State or Territory in which they are made or produced, asked to be discharged from its further consideration, and that it be referred to the Committee on Manufactures; which was agreed to.

Mr. GAMBLE, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3990) authorizing the use, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, of certain moneys in the Treasury to the credit of the Sioux Indians of the Crow Creek Reservation in South Dakota, under the act of March 2, 1895, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. HAWLEY, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3848) granting a deed of quitclaim and release to Lorillard Spencer, his heirs and assigns, of all the right, title, and interest in and to certain land in the city of Newport, R. I., reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was recommitted the bill (S. 3704) granting an increase of pension to Frederick E. Rogers, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. BERRY, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3231) to legalize and maintain a new steel bridge in lieu of the present wooden structure across the Little Tennessee River at Niles Ferry, Tenn., by the Atlanta, Knoxville and Northern Railroad, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3513) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at or near Parkville, Mo., reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. MONEY introduced a bill (S. 4080) to correct the naval record of Daniel W. Blake, United States Marine Corps; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. MARTIN introduced a bill (S. 4081) for the relief of Louis Ellison; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4082) for the relief of M. Louise Breedin, Frances K. Breedin, Anna S. Coleman, and Alfred H. Breedin; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4083) for the relief of Surg. John F. Bransford, United States Navy; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. BERRY introduced a bill (S. 4084) to correct the military record of James Marley; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. HOAR introduced a bill (S. 4085) granting an increase of pension to Samuel E. Chamberlain; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. LODGE introduced a bill (S. 4086) granting a pension to Charles W. Foster; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PATTERSON introduced a bill (S. 4087) granting a pension to Lemuel Kingsbury; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4088) granting an increase of pension to Henry Jennings; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. MITCHELL introduced a bill (S. 4089) for the relief of Francis M. Tompkins; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4090) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to ascertain, allow, and pay the claims of certain States for all moneys by them advanced and actually paid or assumed to aid the General Government in maintaining the national defense when carrying on the war of the rebellion; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4091) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Lagrande, in the State of Oregon; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4092) granting an increase of pension to John R. Evans; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4093) granting an increase of pension to William Barrett; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4094) to reimburse S. R. Green, postmaster at Oregon City, Oreg., for moneys lost by burglary; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. GALLINGER introduced a bill (S. 4095) granting an increase of pension to Charles C. Dudley; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. McCOMAS introduced a bill (S. 4096) to provide for a site for a depot for the Revenue-Cutter Service; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4097) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Thomas; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4098) for the relief of William C. Carson and Nathaniel R. Carson; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4099) to provide for a macadamized roadway from the town of Sharpsburg, Md., to the Connecticut monument on the battlefield of Antietam; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4100) granting a pension to Clara V. Pyle; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. CARMACK introduced a bill (S. 4101) for the relief of J. M. Carney; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. BURROWS introduced a bill (S. 4102) granting a pension to Nancy M. Richmond; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. FRYE introduced a bill (S. 4103) granting an increase of pension to Alphonzo L. Chandler; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. WELLINGTON introduced a bill (S. 4104) for the relief of the legal representatives of Jeremiah Simonson, deceased; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. TELLER introduced a bill (S. 4105) to validate certain certificates of soldiers' additional homestead right; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

AMENDMENTS TO BILLS.

Mr. MILLARD submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $10,000 for the construction and repair of bridges and approaches thereto on the Omaha and Winnebago agencies, in the State of Nebraska, intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. HANSBROUGH submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $50,000 for improving the Missouri River at Bismarck, N. Dak., intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

EMPLOYMENT OF STENOGRAPHER.

Mr. ALLISON submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Appropriations be, and is hereby, authorized to employ a stenographer from time to time as may be necessary to report such testimony as may be taken by the committee or its subcommittees in connection with appropriation bills, and to have the same printed for its use, and that such stenographer be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

LEASING OF INDIAN LANDS.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I ask that an order be made to have printed as a document the hearings held before the Committee on Indian Affairs on the resolution submitted by the Senator from Utah [Mr. RAWLINS] proposing an inquiry relative to leases of Indian lands.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Connecticut asks to have printed as a document certain hearings held before the Committee on Indian Affairs. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

MARTHA R. OSBOURN.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the bill (S. 2802) granting a pension to Martha R. Osbourn, which had been returned from the House of Representatives in compliance with the request of the Senate.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I entered a motion to reconsider the votes whereby that bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading and passed. I should like to have the bill go upon the Calendar, instead of being referred to the Committee on Pensions.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. In the absence of objection, that order will be made.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills:

A bill (S. 219) for the relief of Mary Chambers, widow of Thomas Chambers; and

A bill (S. 1573) to authorize Commander James M. Miller, United States Navy; Surg. Oliver D. Norton, United States Navy, and Mr. Edwin V. Morgan, formerly secretary of the Samoan Commission and now secretary of the legation of the United States at Seoul, Korea, to accept presents tendered to them by His Majesty the Emperor of Germany.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 280) for the relief of James M. Stradling;

A bill (H. R. 299) for the relief of William C. Dodge;

A bill (H. R. 303) for the relief of Sol Bear & Co.;

A bill (H. R. 610) to correct the military record of John F. Antlitz;

A bill (H. R. 621) for the relief of Daniel Cherry;

A bill (H. R. 720) for the relief of Lieut. Jerome E. Morse;
A bill (H. R. 949) for the relief of Charles H. Robinson;
A bill (H. R. 966) for the relief of Edward R. Stackable, collector of customs for the district of Hawaii;
A bill (H. R. 1375) for the relief of Louis Webber;
A bill (H. R. 1381) for the relief of J. V. Davis;
A bill (H. R. 1748) for the relief of Julius E. Mugge;
A bill (H. R. 2641) for the relief of Albion M. Christie;
A bill (H. R. 3510) for the relief of the executors of James P. Willett, deceased, late postmaster of the District of Columbia;
A bill (H. R. 3830) for the relief of William C. Marr;
A bill (H. R. 4748) authorizing the President of the United States to nominate Lieut. Commander R. M. G. Brown, now on the retired list, to be a commander on the retired list;
A bill (H. R. 5224) for the relief of Edward Kershner;
A bill (H. R. 5550) for the relief of W. C. Taylor;
A bill (H. R. 7018) for the relief of Robert J. Spottswood and the heirs of William C. McClellan, deceased;
A bill (H. R. 7035) for the relief of Charles Hurrle;
A bill (H. R. 8209) for the relief of P. A. McClain;
A bill (H. R. 9280) for the relief of Hugh C. Preston;
A bill (H. R. 9295) for the relief of T. B. Stackhouse, a deputy collector of internal revenue for the district of South Carolina during the fiscal year 1894 and 1895;
A bill (H. R. 9991) for the relief of F. E. Coyne; and
A bill (H. R. 11353) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, and for other purposes.

The message further communicated to the Senate the intelligence of the death of Hon. ROUSSEAU O. CRUMP, late a Representative from the State of Michigan, and transmitted resolutions of the House thereon.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (H. R. 3104) to grant the right of way through the Oklahoma Territory and the Indian Territory to the Enid and Anadarko Railway Company, and for other purposes.

PHILIPPINE TARIFF BILL.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The morning business is closed; and the Chair lays before the Senate the regular order.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5833) temporarily to provide revenue for the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, yesterday afternoon, after a session of six hours, during the greater part of which almost every Senator had had his attention concentrated and his mind, we might say, almost drawn out of his body listening to the eloquence of my friend, the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER], I was compelled, as it was the apparent wish of the Senate, to assume the floor and to begin, not specifically a reply, but a discussion of the same subject from a different standpoint. In order that I may myself get the trend of my argument and also to inform Senators who necessarily felt unwilling to remain and withdrew and therefore heard nothing of what I said yesterday, I will give a brief outline of that portion of the speech which has already been spoken, or rather I will revert briefly to some of the points which I presented.

Mr. President, we have just listened to the reading of a document which is familiar to every student of American history, and which has been looked upon as a kind of guide for our nation in its onward march. This 22d of February, a national holiday, made so by reason of the fact that the world was made nobler and human happiness increased because on that day a man was born who afterwards became known as the Father of his Country—this day is peculiarly appropriate for a recurrence to the events of that time and to the principles which actuated our forefathers. We read this document every year just as we read the Sermon on the Mount in our churches; but I am afraid, Mr. President, that the significance of the one and its influence upon human action is about as weak as that of the other.

"Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them" is the noblest thought that ever man, or God in man's shape, has enunciated as a rule of conduct; and in a secular sense Washington's words of warning and of wisdom are equally cogent, and ought to be equally potent. But we have drifted far from both; and when we desecrate the memory of the Father of his Country by reading his words while we are boldly and in cold blood proceeding to spit upon his counsels and ignore them, it is a pitiable commentary upon the demoralization which has come upon us as a people.

Among other things to which I alluded yesterday I called attention, first, to the fact that this bill to raise temporary revenue for the Philippine Islands, which has been pressed here with so much eagerness, which has been pushed to the front to the exclusion of other vital legislation affecting our welfare as a nation, is in itself a sham and a humbug. It is known of all Senators, because the report from the Taft Commission furnishes us with the information, that there is no need of more money for the insular government; that they have a surplus of several million dollars; and, moreover, that the imports and exports to and from the United States are so small that the revenue derived from that source on the merchandise brought into those islands and sent out to other countries afford ample means to carry on all decent and honest enterprises there.

The purpose, then, of this bill is not to give funds to that government; it is not urged and pushed forward for any such purpose. Its sole object is to consummate the scheme which first seized upon the imaginations of Senators on the other side after the annexation of Porto Rico and the Philippines—that those islands should be exploited; that they furnished a rich field and afforded a golden opportunity for the few to go there and reap immense wealth under the protection of our flag. Therefore, when we came to deal with Porto Rico, for the first time in our history a proposition was advanced that the Congress of the United States had the right to levy a tariff between two parts of the United States. It was claimed in the case of Porto Rico that it was necessary, in order to afford the means of defraying the expenses of that insular government, which was unable to bear other taxation because of the devastation of a cyclone. A humanitarian pretext was advanced that the people were pauperized and starving, that they could not stand any additional burdens, and therefore it was necessary that imports into the island should be taxed for the benefit of the insular government.

It was a pretense and a false one, the sole purpose being to establish a precedent and to temporize in regard to the Philippines until the Supreme Court had decided whether or not the Constitution and the flag went together, and whether territory which belonged to us by cession, to which our title is undisputed, could be taxed in that way.

No Senator on the other side will deny that if the decision of the court had been adverse, and if it had decided that the flag and the Constitution both extended over the Philippines, we would have been in haste to make some arrangement by which to get rid of them. If the Filipinos were to-day citizens in the full sense, with all the rights of the people of the other Territories, Arizona and New Mexico, what Republican or what Democrat would dare advocate incorporating those 9,000,000 Malays and mixed breeds into our citizenship? Not one.

Therefore this pretense of a necessity for revenue in the Philippines is merely carrying out the policy resolved upon as soon as we had bought the Philippine Islands, that they should become colonies, not endowed with the rights and the privileges of other American Territories, but colonies appurtenant to the United States, an appendix, a vermiform appendix, so to speak, that is and must continue to be diseased.

I want to go back to the colonial days—to the days when our forefathers of Massachusetts began their struggle against the English King. The title of England to the American colonies was certainly undisputed and lawful. But when the action of the English Government became oppressive, and unjust taxation was resorted to and other measures of tyranny, those people, professing their loyalty to and love for the English Government, finally resorted to arms, and after protesting for three or four years against the tax on tea, and the stamp tax, and the Boston Port Bill, the English King issued his proclamation, which I had read. I will not read it again, but it is very, very much like the proclamations now emanating from our authorities in the Philippines, and the same pretense of humanity and the good of the subjects of His Royal Majesty are set forth as the reasons why such things must be done.

I read further the proclamation of General Gage, the governor of Massachusetts Bay, in which, after offering amnesty and pardon to those who would submit, he goes on to make two notable exceptions of men who had been guilty of such monstrous crimes in the eyes of the English Government that pardon was not for them and that their punishment must be condign. Who were those two exceptions to the gracious offer of pardon? They are names which every American reverences—John Hancock and Samuel Adams. They were excepted out of the grace which was to be given to the rest of the Massachusetts people if they would cease to resist and fall down on their knees and obey His Most Gracious Majesty.

Mr. President, we were told yesterday by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] that the secret societies which have been organized in the Philippine Islands since our occupation, and perhaps before—and some of the documents which they sent forth were quoted by that Senator and read here—were most reprehensible; that they were, in effect, treasonable associations of irreconcilables, who were bent upon the continuance of their efforts to resist our lawful authority.

Mr. President, have we not got it as a matter of record in our history that the men who went on board the British ship in Boston harbor were disguised as Indians, and that they adjourned from a secret meeting in Faneuil Hall, which they had attended, under orders from their chiefs—and John Hancock and Samuel Adams, I suppose, were there—to go on board this vessel and tumble that tea into the water? Is it not a matter of history that the Masonic fraternity were instrumental in bringing on the French revolution? Even in the settlement of our frontiers, of our new States, in the earlier days, when a mixed and promiscuous population had emigrated there, composed largely of adventurers and men of wild character and of wild deeds, it has been the history of everyone of those communities, especially in California, that the good and true men of the country had to band themselves together and form a body of vigilantes—a secret society—to preserve law and order and to make the country inhabitable to decent people.

It is a matter of record that in South Carolina, in 1780, after the British had overrun that province and had it absolutely at their mercy, Marion, with only six men, resolved to continue the fight, and he swore that so long as a Briton was on the soil of his State he would never quit, and he formed an association and they took a mutual oath, with Colonels Peter Horry, Hugh Horry, James Postill, and Irvin, Majors Baxter and Swinton and three or four other men, that they would band themselves together and die before they would surrender to the British King, and that, too, when the country was helpless and almost hopeless by reason of the condition—much more hopeless than the Philippines to-day, except that we are such a powerful people and have such an excess of men and money that we can continue to pour millions over there and send men in any number necessary to preserve the title of which we boast.

It is not worth while to repeat, although the Senator from Wisconsin yesterday repeated his claims as to why the title of the United States is perfectly legal. He has his views as a lawyer. I have my views as a man. I hold that the title of the United States is not good in any court of equity, and that we only maintain it because we have the power. We have come to acknowledge no law except that of might. We declare that right and justice no longer govern us, and that, having bought these people after we had assisted them to obtain their freedom from Spain, they must submit to us abjectly and without guaranty; and we are exterminating them off the face of the earth in order to obtain that pacification for which the Senator pleaded so eloquently yesterday.

We have seen recently the reports from Batangas province where General Bell had given orders to go through that country with fire and sword, and I suspect if any impartial correspondent were brave enough to venture himself there and see the results he would find no homes, no houses, nothing to mark the habitation of those poor creatures, and he might find, if the buzzards had not finished the feast, innumerable carcasses of men done to death for defending their homes—all in the name of liberty and humanity.

Mr. President, when I look back to the time when the Senate, without a solitary dissenting vote, passed the bill appropriating $50,000,000 to put the country in a state of defense and prepare for the war with Spain which we saw coming; when I consider with what heart throbs and what pulsations each bosom here beat in behalf of human liberty, and then see to what a pitiable fiasco and miserable abortion we have brought it, I feel, like the Senator from Maryland [Mr. WELLINGTON], that I would give ten years of my life if I could recall my vote for the declaration of war.

An effort was made by the Senator from Wisconsin to cast imputations upon the party to which I belong as injecting into this debate issues which do not belong here, as endeavoring to make partisan advantage of it, to secure the benefits before the peôple in the next election of whatever sentiment we can manufacture. Mr. President, is the Republican party guiltless of attempting to make partisan advantage of, or take partisan credit for, the war with Spain? Look at the spectacle in the House of Representatives when Mr. GROSVENOR got up and proclaimed that the Republican party were entitled to the glory and the honor of having freed Cuba, before a Democrat anywhere had opened his mouth in any claim other than that we as Americans had joined together as patriots and lovers of our kind to drive the she-wolf Spain from the American continent and free the poor Cubans from her tyranny.

It is no use to deny that there would have been no war if it had not been for the united Democratic vote in this Chamber, and while the proof is not obtainable, it is almost in sight, that no demand was ever made upon Spain which would give Cuba any autonomy or reasonable liberty until the declaration of war forced the President to act. And then, when I consider that in this Hall we solemnly and in the sight of Christendom and of God and of our own countrymen proclaimed that it was not a war of aggrandizement, that we had no ulterior purpose to reach out and obtain more territory, and then see what a miserable abortion, as I said, we have caused, what a—oh, pshaw! my contempt, sir, for the treachery and indecency and dishonesty and injustice which have charactized our course is of such amount that I have not language in which to express it.

We have denied the Cubans that liberty and autonomy which we pledged them. We have denied it in the face of a solemn promise to do it, and now every mail brings to me from three to a half dozen circulars or special pleas or arguments from somewhere in behalf of Cuban reciprocity or of "granting relief to Cuba." We deny the Cubans the liberty for which they went to war and have struggled, and now propose—it is proposed; I do not know whether the party in power can afford it or not; I am waiting to see—to give them concessions and a modicum of free trade, the object being, I presume, to repeat what we did in the Hawaiian Islands. In an archipelago annexed, as the Senator said yesterday, and in the way repeated here, by a coup d'état, we have remitted sugar duties to the amount of $65,000,000 or more to the sugar trust and Claus Spreckles and a half a dozen other capitalistic concerns, which own all of the sugar plantations there; and the sole purpose of annexing the Hawaiian Islands was to put under the protection of our flag the sugar plantations of these capitalists and enable them to bring their sugar in free, while protecting the few white people there against the natives and other colored races.

Now we propose to repeat the hypocritical process of giving the Cubans consideration and helping to avert anarchy in the island. We are going to let their sugar in free, or at such a low duty that the people who produce the sugar cane will get the benefit of it. No. The purpose is to put into the pockets of the capitalists who have bought the sugar plantations or who have bought the present crop of sugar the millions of dollars involved in the reduction of the tariff. So here we are dealing with one island at our doors in a canting, hypocritical way. They ask for bread and we offer them a stone. They wanted liberty. We deny that, but instead we propose to give the sugar planters a reduction of the tariff, for the sugar planters are largely Americans.

Now, the scheme in the Philippines, after we have spent $400,000,000 to subjugate them and have not completed the dirty and dismal job, after we have poured out blood, several thousand of our brave soldiers having offered up their lives there in the discharge of duty, we stand here and cant and whine and call God to witness the goodness and purity of our hearts and of our intentions; and yet we proceed immediately to pass a tariff bill to discriminate and cut them off and hedge them about; not admit their products as if they came from a part of the United States; not to allow their rice, tobacco, or sugar to compete with ours; wait until the sugar plantations over there are gobbled up; until the Taft Commission or Congress or some other instrumentality has put it within the power of somebody to give title to the land, and then we will see a repetition of the programme which we have had twice before, and the American people, the poor asses, do not seem to understand yet that all this scheme is one of exploitation and in behalf of a few wealthy people, five or ten or twenty or fifty thousand, who will go there and expect to build railroads and obtain franchises and seize the mines and the forests and the other means of getting wealth, and after the vested interests of Americans have become sufficiently great and potent in this body and the other end of the Capitol, then these people will be given the same free trade of which Porto Rico now boasts.

This pretense of protecting! What is the tariff for? The pretense now is that you want to raise revenue for the Philippine government. But after that government shall, as I said, have made it possible for American capital to go there and become invested, the cry will go up: "You are taxing our people. These are Americans against whom you are discriminating. We must have free trade between the Philippines and the United States." Will that be your game? Is that why you wait? Is that why you will not do anything positive? Is that why you drift? Judged by the past in the Sandwich Islands and in Porto Rico, and your present policy in Cuba, it is. I may not be right. I am just waiting to see. There may not be enough sugar plantations in the possession of men in this country to make it desirable; but as sure as the sun shines to-day, there will come a time when the trade between this country and Cuba will be free and Cuba will be annexed or will be admitted as a State. The proposition now is to annex it as a colony.

And so, on Washington's birthday, after having listened to his farewell address, we present these questions to each other, and sit here and look wise and statesmanlike, and God save the mark, we claim to be honest!

The Senator from Wisconsin had a great deal to say yesterday about Aguinaldo, and it appeared to me that his utterances and his use of testimony were very much in the line of a lawyer who had a criminal case in court, where a man was being tried for murder, and the man being tried was the Republican party, that the American people were the jury, and that the Republican party had selected its ablest advocate and most eloquent speaker to defend its case. And so we had Aguinaldo indicted as an assassin, as the man who had conspired against this Government, and who was low and contemptible and unworthy the admiration of anybody.

Mr. President, Aguinaldo is a very small part in this proceeding. With his capture, in the way in which it was accomplished, and of which I shall not speak except to say that I blush for it, he has passed from the stage, and yet it was claimed that if Aguinaldo were not held up as a George Washington in the Philippine Islands by Americans here and in Boston and elsewhere, the war would have ceased long, long ago; and our blood was almost curdled by the eloquent picture of the Senator from Wisconsin in speaking of the death of the heroic Lawton and reading the letter which he wrote, by the thought that possibly we might be in some way instrumental in bringing death to our brethren in the Philippines.

Let me say here that if there is any man who believes more strongly in the honor and integrity of American officers in the Philippines than I do I do not know him. With very few exceptions they are gentlemen of the very highest type; and of the American soldiers I will say that they are brave and patriotic and are doing their dirty duty and doing it as soldiers always obey orders. But the letters which come to us of the horrors which they are called upon to perpetrate, which they have seen perpetrated, are enough to make any man blush. I lament the sacrifice which is being offered there in the name of liberty of the brave men whose lives have been offered up. I lament the continued outpouring of blood which is likely to last indefinitely; and it is to bring about some condition of pacification that would be reasonable and just for which we on this side labor with you and ask you in God's name why you will not declare your purpose. Why do you continue to say, "We trust the American people. The time is not ripe." Is there a time when the love of liberty ever ripens? Is there a time when the love of liberty ever rots? If so, it appears to me we have reached that time. We pretend to love liberty, and we ignore every tradition of the liberty-loving people of the earth from the days when a few hundred Greeks faced millions of Persians on down the corridors of history to our own struggle.

Mr. President, I recall that when the treaty of peace was under discussion here there were utterances by men in this Chamber very forceful and eloquent, which were undoubtedly honest; and some of them were read yesterday—the utterances of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER]. I have here some quotations from the Senator's speech of February 2, four days before the ratification of that treaty, which I will read. I am sorry the Senator is not present, because if he felt inclined he could interpret this language possibly differently from my interpretation of the English language:

> Mr. President, some gentlemen waltz up to this proposition of territorial expansion as gaily as "the troubadour touched his guitar." I can not do it. I have not been able to persuade myself that the best interests of this country in the long run—and we ought to study its interests for the long run—are to be subserved by a policy of territorial expansion, permanent dominion over far distant lands and peoples.

Then later in the same speech he said:

> But I think I can see a valid distinction between the acquisition of territory contiguous to our own country, in our own climate, land to which we can march our troops, land into which we can build our railroads, land into which we can send our newspapers, land to which our people can emigrate and in which they can live and thrive, land easily reached by our public opinion, and territory and peoples of another race, alien to our associations and our blood, living under a tropical sky, and laboring under different conditions. I can not say, in view of the history of the country, that time may not change my views, but I must say that, as I now feel, if the ratification of this treaty involved permanent dominion by the United States over the archipelago and its people as a Territory of the United States, irrevocably committed us to the policy of territorial expansion, I could not give it my vote.

Again he said:

> Again, Mr. President, the whole matter will be within our own hands. If we find we can not get on with the Filipinos; if, after studying the conditions over there, our people find we can not without strife and intolerable burdens do them any good, we can then cede the sovereignty to them and sail away. We will not be then running away from a responsibility at first sight. We will not subject ourselves to possibly the just charge of cowardice by other nations. We will have left them then after having made every honest effort in our power, upon the solid foundation of Spain's sovereignty and title, to help them to benefits which they would not have. We will have attempted to shower upon them blessings which long-continued tyranny has deprived them of the power to appreciate.

Mr. President, have we reached that period? Recollect that in June, 1900, it was proclaimed broadcast over this country that the war was at an end; that the insurrection was suppressed; and the President issued his proclamation of that year offering peace and amnesty, and a bonus, I think, of $20 for every musket surrendered. The election was then five months away. It was desirable to have the American people understand that the Filipinos had submitted; that they were no longer battling for their liberties; that the struggle which had been so one-sided had resulted as all such struggles must, in the suppression of any attempts to continue resistance.

We were told yesterday that only four provinces are still fighting, or that there is fighting in only four provinces. I pointed out that in Mindanao and in the other islands inhabited by the Mohammedans we had not only gone there without any effort to exercise authority, but that we had even subsidized the datos and the Sultan of Jolo by paying money out of our Treasury to have them acknowledge that they were our subjects sand belonged to us. Every writer on the Philippines and every officer of ours who has mentioned those islands at all has pointed out that it would be a very bloody and dangerous thing to undertake to go there and occupy them and exploit them or do anything in the nature of active authority or control.

General MacArthur, who succeeded General Otis, in his report to the War Department—the only report he has made—dated July 4, 1901, has this to say about the conditions in the Philippines last summer:

> The disbandment of the insurgent field armies was followed by a considerable period of comparative inactivity. At the time this was regarded as a favorable indication, and further encouraged the hope that the war might be terminated by general acceptance of American supremacy. These apparently favorable conditions, however, represented the time necessary to redistribute and adjust the insurgent forces to the new method of warfare. During this period, also, evidence came to hand which suggested that some of the Filipino leaders were willing to submit the issue to the judgment of the American people, which was soon to be expressed at the polls, and to abide by the result of the Presidential election of November, 1900. This view obtained with considerable force within the American lines; but subsequent events demonstrated that the hope of ending the war without further effusion of blood was not well founded and that as a matter of fact the Filipinos were organizing for further desperate resistance by means of a general banding of the people in support of the guerrillas in the field.

The Democratic party having been charged with being responsible for the continuance of this war by its attitude at Kansas City, when we announced imperialism as the paramount issue, it may have been possible that the insurgents were urged to resistance up to November. But with the triumph of the Republican party in November, 1900, to be followed by four years certainly of the policy of "benevolent assimilation," any accusation that we are at all responsible now for the continued resistance immediately following that election up to this time falls to the ground, because it is too silly to be considered by any honest mind.

General MacArthur goes on:

> To this end the leaders announced a primal and inflexible principle, to the effect that every native, without any exception, residing within the limits of the archipelago, owed active individual allegiance to the insurgent cause. This jurisdiction was enjoined under severe penalties, which were systematically enforced not only within insurgent territory, but also within the limits of American garrisons. By means of secret committees residing in or sent to the towns, contributions of all kinds were collected and sent to the field, and punishments, including capital executions, were administered without resistance on the part of the victims.

Now, listen here as to the present feeling of the Filipino people toward us:

> By reason of a strange combination of loyalty, apathy, ignorance, and timidity, this policy was generally accepted; and as a consequence the military leaders enjoyed a very extensive cooperation of the whole mass of the Filipino people in support of their movements. This joint action was very effective in respect of all matters touching intelligence and supply and also in the innumerable little details connected with the daily service of troops in campaign, and with regard to which a good understanding with the inhabitants gives such an enormous advantage.

Listen again:

> The cohesion of Filipino society in behalf of insurgent interests is most emphatically illustrated by the fact that assassination, which was extensively employed, was generally accepted as a legitimate expression of insurgent governmental authority. The individuals marked for death would not appeal to American protection, although condemned exclusively on account of supposed pro-Americanism, or give information calculated to insure their own safety, even when such procedure could easily be accomplished by means of conference with American commanders, who in many instances were stationed within the barrios where the victims resided.

When the Tories were in full possession of South Carolina in 1780, they were guilty of the indignities and outrages, the inhumanities, and the murders and the robberies of which I spoke the other day; and we had, indeed, there civil war, war to the knife, between native Carolinians. Is there a similarity of conditions here? Not at all, because these Filipino Tories, if I may use that expression, or those who are charged by their compatriots with being traitors to the Filipino cause, even submit to death and do not complain to the Americans, who could save their lives. What stronger proof do you need that that whole people are saturated with hatred of us and that they are there passive slaves because of the power and might which our soldiers have shown that the American people possess?

What sort of a solution does this offer to your pretended scheme of building up and Christianizing and humanizing and elevating and educating those people? "Can ye gather figs from thistles, or grapes from thorns?" Do you expect your mere pretense of love for those people and love of liberty to change the whole current of human thought and transform human nature?

Suppose that we had demanded of Spain the cession of Porto Rico, that she should disclaim ownership of Cuba, and that we, to quiet title, had demanded and obtained and purchased for $20,000,000 the ownership of the Philippines. Suppose we had gone forward as a people in pursuance of our pledge and had given the inhabitants what we promised them—actual autonomy and independence. Suppose then we had gone to Aguinaldo, who, as our ally, had created a government—an autocracy, if you please. Let it have been a military despotism, if you want, but still it was a government that was recognized by all Filipinos. He was in possession of his country, and that can not be disputed. Suppose we had said to him, "We have entered into obligations with Spain which make it necessary for us to protect the rights and property of all Europeans in your country. We want in this part of the world a naval station. It may be two or three. We want to extend our commerce. Now, you went to war with Spain before we went to war with her about Cuba. You are non-assimilable with us. You are Asiatics. You are aliens in blood, in religion, and in everything else. We can not admit you as citizens. We do not want you in that way."

But, having purchased Spain's legal title to the islands I will say, if the mere deed conveys legality instead of the actual possession and ability to deliver, suppose we had said to them, "We want two naval stations; we want your commerce; we want a guaranty, and we will enforce it if necessary, that you shall observe our treaty obligations and protect the property and lives of all white persons here and of the citizens of all other nations who are here. In all other respects we recognize your right to govern yourselves in your own way, with our assistance and protection; and we propose to give notice to all Europe that they must hands off; that you are our wards in chancery, so to speak, and we do not propose to add to our perplexities by incorporating you or undertaking to do more than lend you our help and protection while you are working out your own destiny in your own way."

Then what glory would have come to us as a people, the inheritors of the traditions which were handed down by Jefferson and Washington and Madison and John Adams and all the other fathers of the Republic, and what blessings would have come in the way of actual dollars and cents? We would have had the love and gratitude of those 9,000,000 people instead of their undying and perpetual hate. We would have had the respect of all mankind as having been the first of nations to set an example of disinterestness and of love of the principles upon which our Government was founded.

But, oh, no, such a glorious consummation as that was too much for the commercialism, for the greed, for the pitiful dollar-loving American people of this day. It had leaked out, or some one had read somewhere that the islands were very, very rich. I point you to the language of the Senator from Indiana [Mr. BEVERIDGE], who went over there and returned here with a pæan, or a kind of joyful song, as to the glorious possibilities of exploitation.

Look on the one picture I have painted and look at the present one. Cuba would have been under our wing. The Monroe doctrine protected her. She could not have been alienated, nor would she have been inclined in any form or fashion to give us a cold shoulder or to form alliances with Europe, and if she had all we had to do was to step forward, as we did in Venezuela, and notify all transgressors to hands of. The same doctrine could not obtain in the Philippines, because we could not claim it by justice and by right. But nobody would have dared to dispute that the Philippines had fallen to us as an act of Providence, as the result of the war with Spain, and that we were but fulfilling our pledges to Cuba and to the world in dealing with the Philippines as we had promised to deal with Cuba, which promise we have broken.

And now we have come to the pitiful pass where we have overturned Aguinaldo's government; having dispersed or murdered or shot to death his army; having ravaged his country with fire and sword from one end to the other, except that end where there would be real fighting, where the Jolo Sultan and his Mohammedans live. We have taken under our baleful control the Christian Catholics, and we have exemplified our love for Christianity and our regard for its obligations to do unto others as we would have them do unto us in a way to give great satisfaction to some people, it appears, for the policy continues without any solitary appearance of change. There is no purpose apparent anywhere of any intention to alter the course of the ship. It goes straight forward and onward, a juggernaut car labeled "freedom," crushing down the aspirations of 9,000,000 people who had been struggling against their former owner; and yet we stand up in the eyes of God and of ourselves, we hug our bosoms, and claim that we are better than other men.

And we manufacture all manner of excuses and pretenses. We could settle this thing now if we would only declare to those people our purpose. They have been sufficiently chastised, if they deserved any chastisement, for having dared resistance. I do not know how many thousands of them have been killed. I note here, though, that General MacArthur gives a list of casualties embracing the period between May 5, 1900, and June 30, 1901:

Killed of American, 245; wounded, 490; captured, 180; missing, 20.

Insurgent casualties: Killed, 3,854; wounded, 1,193; captured, 6,572; surrendered, 23,095.

Now, mark the difference between the dead and the wounded in the Philippine casualities. What normal condition of warfare ever produced such results as that? Every man who has read history knows that the wounded always are from two to three times as many as the killed in battle, although the deaths afterwards may bring it up to half; but here our own officer states that the killed among the Filipinos have been 3,854, while the wounded have been 1,193—only 1 man wounded to nearly 4 who have been shot to death. What does that mean except that the stories which have come to us about the cruelties that have been perpetrated by our Army in shooting negroes, as they call them, have been true, and that they have in cold blood murdered the Filipinos that were writhing on the ground, unable to run away?

The very picture presented by our own general convicts our Army of having shot those wounded men. When I read, as I will later on, the reports as to how this war is being conducted, I shall not do it with any effort to cast any reflections upon the honor and the escutcheon of the American troops, but I do it for the purpose of bringing to the attention of the Philippine Committee these accusations against brave men and demanding, in behalf of that Army, that a thorough investigation shall be made here.

The chairman of the Committee on the Philippines is not in his seat, but he shall not escape the responsibility, for I shall put it into the RECORD and call his attention to the names and date of infamies that have been practiced by our troops and under the orders of our officers. If they are untrue, and God grant it may be proven that they are, then it is incumbent upon this Senate and upon the House of Representatives to investigate thoroughly and impartially and searchingly into these charges and disprove them. I read a moment ago some extracts from General MacArthur's report. Here is one other, in which the probable conditions in the islands in the future are set forth:

It is respectfully submitted that the very gratifying conditions herein briefly recapitulated have not been brought about entirely by the hand of Providence. Neither must the attitude of the people who have declared for peace, or even that of the leaders of the Federal party, be attributed entirely to unreserved pro-Americanism. It would therefore be unsafe to assume these conservative forces as constant factors, the friendly operation of which can be relied upon irrespective of external influences. In due time, and beyond any question, if beneficent republican institutions are permitted to operate with full force, the Filipino people will become warmly attached to the United States by a sense of self-interest and gratitude. In the meantime the molding force in the islands must be a well-organized army and navy. Anything in the immediate future calculated to impede the activity or reduce the efficiency of these instruments will not only be a menace to the present, but put in jeopardy the entire future of American possibilities in the archipelago.

After three years of war of subjugation the claim is that pacification has gone to the extent that resistance is now only in four provinces. Suppose you had done as I outlined a while ago, at the conclusion of the war with Spain, and that the $400,000,000 which we have poured out had been used at home, the taxes of the American people spent in behalf of Americans in America, what would it have done for my part of the country? What would it have done for the West, where they are clamoring for some system of irrigation which will enable them to have their land settled, because then they may be able to offer farms and homes to people who are hunting homes, and relieve the plethora—the congestion—in our cities, where our politics have grown so corrupt and our boasted American principles and our American system have been put to a test and nearly broken down? Take the $400,000,000 which you have spent, and suppose you had put it out, as I said, in works of internal improvement here at home. Contrast the glory and the honor that would have been ours under the one scheme alongside of the ignominy, the infamy, and the disgrace attaching to us now.

You say we are not disgraced; that we drove Spain off the continent. Yes; but we have taken Spain's place. You say we gave liberty to the Filipinos. Yes; and we have taken Spain's place there. What liberty did we give them? The liberty of the bayonet, the liberty to get down on their knees and bellies and crawl around like worms while we trample them to death and ignore all their honest and reasonable expectations.

We had some statements yesterday in regard to our schools over there. The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] read a list of the schools we had established and the number of pupils. I have not got the data, because the Senator's speech does not appear in the RECORD, and therefore I can not quote it; but here is a document entitled: Proceedings of the twenty-seventh annual convention of the Catholic Young Men's Union, held at Philadelphia, Pa., September 24 and 25, 1901, and in it I see this statement made:

According to the Spanish statistical dictionary, quoted in the report of the Commissioner of Education (1897-98), there were in the archipelago in 1890 1,698 schools, with an attendance of 177,113 pupils; in 1897, as was stated to the Taft Commission, there were 2,167 public schools, or an increase of 559 in seven years, which is an average of 80 new schools a year. Still the Taft Commission informs us that "The masses of the people are densely ignorant," while President Schurman, who was head of the first Commission, tells us that they are a "Catholic educated population."

I have already expressed my opinion as to the justice and decency of going into a country, levying taxes at the point of the bayonet, and bringing in foreign teachers who do not understand the language of the country, to be paid large salaries to teach liberty to those children who do not understand the teachers. I will ask the Senator from Iowa [Mr. DOLLIVER]—I see him watching me very closely, and I am obliged for the attention he is paying—if anyone should go into Iowa—if the Canadians, for instance, by some miracle should subjugate Iowa, and the French portion of them, the people of Quebec, should go down there—it is a little far to march to Iowa, and I had better make the illustration closer, say to Maine, or we will take it in Iowa or in Maine—that there was a subjugation of Maine by Canadians, and the entry as the governing force of the French-Canadians, and that they should levy taxes upon that people in the name of liberty and humanity and Christianity and civilization, and should import some French teachers and Canadian teachers who spoke only French and put them into the Yankee schools where the children only understood English; I want to ask the Senator from Iowa what would be his opinion as to that kind of Christianity and civilization and humanity? That is exactly what we have done, and that is exactly what we are doing. There are 9,000,000 of these people. Take out 1,000,000 of the Mohammedans—whom we dare not attack or bother with, because they fight like the Zulus and like the Boers—the other 8,000,000, we will say, have 2,000,000 children of school age, according to our rules of statistics.

Mr. DOLLIVER. Mr. President——

Mr. TILLMAN. Let me get through with my statement, and then you can answer.

That is, 2,000,000 Filipino children belonging to the various tribes and nationalities, or whatever you call them over there, and we have got 100,000 in these schools, and there are 1,900,000 out in the cold.

Mr. DOLLIVER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TALIAFERRO in the chair). Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. TILLMAN. Yes.

Mr. DOLLIVER. The Senator has called my attention to what he is attacking there. I was very much more interested in his attack on the Army. I understood him to make a very beautiful eulogy both of the officers and men of the Army, and then to follow it with an accusation which, if it be true, would render both infamous throughout the world.

Mr. TILLMAN. Yes.

Mr. DOLLIVER. I think the Senator had better confine himself to the horrors of our military rule, rather than to the horrors of the educational system we have there.

Mr. TILLMAN. I will confine myself to the horrors of the military rule when I get to that, but I am now portraying the beneficence, the Praise-God Barebones hypocrisy of your educational system, the tyranny of taking money from a people who are helpless and spending it to pay teachers who do not understand the language of the children they are sent to teach. Try that on in any country under the sun, and what has resulted? Look at the Canadians. It is one hundred and fifty years since Quebec fell after Wolfe's victory on the Plains of Abraham, yet the Canadians of Quebec speak the French language to-day almost without exception, and England has not been able by any instrumentality which she dared attempt to put into execution to get those people to desert their mother tongue or to learn English.

Here is what was said by Professor Schurman, a very broad-minded, liberal-hearted, Christian gentleman, who was on the first Philippine Commission, who lent himself to President McKinley's benevolent-assimilation doctrine, although he protested that he did not believe in it, and went there as a duty to his country to see if he could accomplish anything toward the pacification and organization of those islands. Here is what Professor Schurman has to say about the education and the franchise—I mean the voting proposition which has been submitted by the Taft Commission:

> For my own part I should like to see the amount of property and taxation which now qualify for municipal suffrage reduced. And as acquaintance with a foreign language is only one test of knowledge and intelligence, and as it is a test which it is unfair to apply to a whole race who have little or no need to use foreign languages, I trust that some more equitable and adequate educational standard may hereafter be devised. Why not a successful examination in arithmetic, geography, and history, the examination to be conducted in the vernacular of the native? How many Americans, I wonder, would enjoy the suffrage if the condition of admittance were a reading, writing, and speaking knowledge of Spanish, or even of French or German? Why should we expect more of the Filipinos than we ourselves could fulfill? And, in any case, is Spanish better for them than Tagalog or Visayan or Ilocano or Vicol, which they acquire with their mothers' milk? As to English, which will be indispensable for the politicians at Manila and the traders there and elsewhere, does any reasonable man suppose that the Philippine peoples in general can be induced to forget their own vernacular (which come, as it were, by nature) and laboriously and painfully acquire English, which the masses will never have occasion to employ? Such an illusion defies not only the psychology of language, but the lessons of history. Why, English experience in Quebec and Spanish experience in the Philippines, to go no farther afield, should dispel such a fancy. All history teaches that no race or people ever abandons its vernacular.

A Senator called attention the other day to the struggle now going on in the Austrian Empire between the German part of it and the composite nationalities which constitute it, and the efforts to make the Bohemians speak German and have their laws published in German. Those efforts have brought those two nationalities to seize each other by the throat in the Austrian parliament and almost create riot and bloodshed, and yet here we are, with our benevolent assimilation, going over and taxing those poor wretches, and collecting those taxes by the Army to educate them in this way.

To show the hopelessness of this attempt to create among those people American ideas and to bring to bear those instrumentalities which go for self-government here; to prove, if the utterances of a man high in authority have any weight, that such an effort is a mere waste of time, I will read you an extract from a recent book published some years ago entitled "American Ideas and Other Essays." Now, listen:

> At best, the inhabitants of a colony are in a cramped and unnatural state. At the worst, the establishment of a colony prevents any healthy, popular growth. Sometime in the dim future it may be that all the English-speaking peoples will be able to unite in some kind of confederacy. However desirable this would be, it is, under existing circumstances, only a dream. At present the only hope for a colony that wishes to attain full moral and mental growth is to become an independent state, or part of an independent state. No English colony now stands on a footing of genuine equality with the parent state. As long as the Canadian remains a colonist he remains in a position which is distinctly inferior to that of his cousins, both in England and in the United States. The Englishman looks down on the Canadian, as he does on any one who admits his inferiority, and quite properly, too. Under the best of circumstances, therefore, a colony is in a false position, but if the colony is in a region where the colonizing race has to do its work by means of other inferior races, the condition is much worse.

That, I take it, is our condition in the Philippines.

> From the standpoint of the race, little or nothing has been gained by the English conquest and colonization of Jamaica. Jamaica has merely been turned into a negro island, with a future, seemingly, much like that of San Domingo; and British Guiana, however well administered, is nothing but a colony where a few hundred or a few thousand white men hold the superior positions, while the bulk of the population is composed of Indians, negroes, and Asiatics. Looked at through the vista of the centuries, such a colony contains less promise of true growth than does a State like Venezuela or Ecuador. The history of most of the South American Republics has been both mean and bloody; but there is at least a chance that they may develop, after infinite tribulations and sufferings, into a civilization quite as high and stable as that of such a European power as Portugal. But there is no such chance for any tropical American colony owned by a northern European race.

Who wrote it? Theodore Roosevelt. But now, in his message, he tells us that it is our purpose to make those people in the Tropics attain to a higher position than any tropical people have ever reached before. Theodore Roosevelt, the author, had one set of ideas and Theodore Roosevelt, the politician, reverses himself. Having proclaimed the facts that the history and present condition of affairs in those colonies he had mentioned have proven, he comes forward remorselessly now with this proposition, this propaganda, this proposal of benevolent assimilation. We are to accomplish miracles; we have not got enough colored people in our own borders who speak the English language to experiment with, but we must reach out and take 9,000,000 more in the Pacific islands in order to give scope and opportunity for Northern philanthrophy to get a chance to show its facility of accomplishing miracles. Why did you not spend your $400,000,000 helping to do something to relieve the Southern States of the incubus of negro domination by colonizing some of them away from here? Ah, these are conundrums that are too much for me. Nobody on the other side wants to answer or dares try. The President contradicts himself.

Mr. DOLLIVER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. TILLMAN. With pleasure.

Mr. DOLLIVER. The Senator quoted Dr. Schurman with such words of warm indorsement that I venture to call his attention to Dr. Schurman's very distinct tribute to our educational work now going on in the Philippines, in which he says:

> Not less than 150,000 children are enrolled in the free primary schools. The number of native adults receiving English instruction in evening schools conducted by American teachers were 10,000 in October, but at the rate of increase then exhibited, there are probably 20,000 or even 30,000 at the present time. There is a wide and enthusiastic demand for instruction in English in all parts of the archipelago, and next to that is the demand for instruction in manual training and the mechanic arts.

I call the Senator's attention also to the fact that between 3,000 and 4,000 native Filipino teachers are being employed under the auspices of our Government; and in view of the Senator's tribute to Dr. Schurman, I should like to put that in the RECORD in connection with his remarks.

Mr. TILLMAN. I am perfectly willing to have you do so if you will go on and hunt up the proposition of Dr. Schurman that these people deserve freedom and put that alongside of the other and let us quote the witness clear through. That is what we are contending for.

Mr. DOLLIVER. We shall act when we are ready to do so.

Mr. TILLMAN. Yes; but the Senator never gets ready. To-morrow—he has learned that Spanish word, mañana, mañana. To-morrow, to-morrow, is your song. Why not now? "Wait; we can trust the American people." What is it the American people trusts us with? The responsibility of this question. We did not ask the American people whether we should annex those islands by purchase or not. We simply took the responsibility. Why do we not take the responsibility of dealing with our own questions? If it had not been for our cowardice there would have gone forth long ago the same declaration in regard to the Philippines as we made in regard to Cuba. It is a cowardly subterfuge that we are not ready now to tell those people that we do not intend to annex them permanently.

The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] yesterday quoted, and I am glad he has got back——

Mr. SPOONER. I hope the Senator did not suppose I remained away because he was speaking.

Mr. TILLMAN. I understand that. I have not cast the slightest stone at the Senator while he was away——

Mr. SPOONER. That is right.

Mr. TILLMAN. And I do not propose to throw any rocks at him now. I am merely discussing his sophistries and other stuff in the best possible spirit. [Laughter.] I trust my friend will look up the utterances of Dr. Schurman in regard to what we ought to finally do.

Mr. SPOONER. Which friend is the Senator referring to now?

Mr. TILLMAN. This is my friend [pointing to Mr. DOLLIVER]. I have a great many friends on the Republican side, because personally you are a nice lot of clever, clean-hearted gentlemen, but in politics you are the most infamous cowards and hypocrites I have ever had any dealings with. [Laughter.]

The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] yesterday quoted the vote on the ratification of the treaty, with a view of putting the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER] and others in a false position by charging them with inconsistency. I have already shown the Senator's own inconsistency, just as the junior Senator from Colorado [Mr. PATTERSON], in quoting from his speech, shows that he had veered clear around and gotten away from his position in 1899.

But I want to direct attention to the McEnery resolution. On the day we voted on the treaty in the Senate the following joint resolution was introduced by Mr. MCENERY:

Resolved, etc., That by the ratification of the treaty of peace with Spain it is not intended to incorporate the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands into citizenship of the United States, nor is it intended to permanently annex said islands as an integral part of the territory of the United States; but it is the intention of the United States to establish on said islands a government suitable to the wants and conditions of the inhabitants of said islands to prepare them for local self-government, and in due time to make such disposition of said islands as will best promote the interests of the citizens of the United States and the inhabitants of said islands.

That was a joint resolution. The Senate passed it. What effect in law did it have? Will the Senator from Wisconsin tell me?

Mr. SPOONER. Yes; I will tell you. A joint resolution——

Mr. TILLMAN. Passing one body and not going to the other and not signed by the President.

Mr. SPOONER. Does the Senator need any advice about that?

Mr. TILLMAN. I just simply wanted to ask the Senator, if I could get him to acknowledge it, whether it was not a gold brick——

Mr. SPOONER. No; it was not a gold brick.

Mr. TILLMAN. That you sold to somebody to get votes?

Mr. SPOONER. No; it was not a gold brick. It was nothing——

Mr. TILLMAN. That is all right.

Mr. SPOONER. It had no legal effect whatever.

Mr. TILLMAN. It had no legal effect whatever; it was a piece of sheet lightning, gas, or something of that kind.

Mr. SPOONER. I am not an expert in electricity, so I can not tell the Senator.

Mr. TILLMAN. Judging by the amount the Senator pumped out yesterday, giving me the headache by his eloquence, I think he is somewhat of an expert on electricity or certainly an expert on magnetism. [Laughter.]

Mr. SPOONER. I am glad I had some effect on the Senator. [Laughter.]

Mr. TILLMAN. The statement was made later by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. MASON] that a vote had been promised. That resolution was not voted on that day. We adjourned. We did not even carry out the pledge that had been made. I will read here from our jolly friend from Illinois. He said:

Mr. MASON. Mr. President, I desire to give notice that I intend to make some remarks upon the pending resolution, unless it is disposed of, and I do not consider the appropriation bills of so great importance as the pending resolution. I intend to be very respectful to the budget of annual appropriation bills; but there has been an agreement running now for weeks, and finally upon the last vote an agreement was made by many of the Senators, that we were to have a vote upon the joint resolution yesterday immediately after the adoption of the treaty. I do not say that we were all taken into the agreement. I say that that agreement was made, and upon that agreement the treaty was ratified.

The votes were obtained to ratify it. Somebody got a gold brick if they gave a vote for that. Maybe it was just simply a pretense. They wanted an excuse and were very easily satisfied. The situation is simply this: We have gotten into a condition which, from my point of view, is entirely dishonest and dishonorable. We have seized these people by so-called purchase, and when they resisted, having notified us before we bought them that they would not submit—our generals say so—having clamored for months for some declaration of our intentions as to the course we intended to pursue toward them, and received nothing, we have gotten to that point where, having felt constrained to go on in the enforcement of our title or right by subjugating those people to order and law and making them submit to our rule, as we claimed we had a right to do—we have gotten where we do not appear to be able to let go with honor or with the maintenance of our prestige as a nation. We can not hold the islands and continue indefinitely to shoot and murder those people and govern them by carpetbaggers with no declaration of final purpose. It is more dishonorable to do nothing than it would be to let loose. It is simply infamous for Congress to continue to dodge this issue.

When the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] cornered the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] yesterday with a proposition whether he was willing to translate his generous words into an act of Congress, "Oh, no," says the Senator from Wisconsin. He gets up here and proclaims opinions and feelings and hopes and purposes that every patriot will subscribe to and that every American who has any regard for the national honor and ideals wants to see carried out. But when are we going to begin to carry them out? We have got, I believe, 67,000,000 acres of land over there, including the lands which the Sultan of Jolo holds and will continue to hold; there are mines already staked out and the papers made out for the signature of Governor Taft and his Insular Commission, I do not doubt, in 100 or 200 or 500 places in those islands. They propose to issue bonds to build railroads for the people. When we here—well, I was half a Populist myself once, and I have right smart of that doctrine in me yet—when we had a proposition for the Government ownership of railroads so as to relieve the people from the intolerable burden of consolidation in the hands of a few people, and charging all that traffic will bear, our trust-loving friends, our monopoly-loving friends, say that such a policy as that is ridiculous and not to be thought of. Yet here your Taft Commission proposes to tax the Filipinos to build railroads in the Philippine Islands as a Government enterprise, I believe.

Mr. Schurman protests strenuously against any such proposition as that. While acknowledging the desirability of railroads and of dirt roads and of other means of communication between those parts of the islands which are most desirable, he points out that it is unjust for us to defer the time when these people shall have any voice in their local affairs to 1904 and in the meantime grant Taft and his crowd the right to occupy the whole field and grant franchises which will become vested interests, and therefore everything that is worth having will have been gobbled up by some shrewd fellow who has been on the ground floor and has his agents over there watching for the chances. And you will only leave the husks and the crumbs that the carpetbaggers have not eaten to the Filipinos when you give them the semblance of self-government by your so-called territorial assembly.

I called attention a moment ago to the absurdity, to the pretense, to the hypocrisy, if you please, of the Senate in passing the McEnery resolution, knowing that the House would pay no attention to it and that President McKinley would not sign it if it did. It was not expected that it would ever go any farther than the Clerk's desk. No doubt promises were made that it should go clean through, but we can not prove those things. You can not prove a good many other things we know about the ratification of that treaty which are not honorable.

But the Senator from Wisconsin yesterday took occasion to make a special plea of indictment and accusation against Mr. Bryan, the leader of the Democratic party in its last two national contests, because he had aided, and possibly influenced enough votes to obtain the ratification of the treaty. I have already pointed out what might have happened after the ratification, which would have been entirely honorable and so high and noble and pure in comparison with what we have done that anyone who voted for that treaty, even my friend, the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER], who for a time was pretty badly tainted with imperialism and who has now got well and is sound and sane and in his right mind [laughter]——

Mr. TELLER rose.

Mr. TILLMAN. I hope the Senator will not take my little pleasantry as anything more than an attempt to relieve him of the accusation of my friend, yesterday, who convicted him of inconsistency.